WISCONSIN DAIRY STATISTICS FOR THE YEARS 1927 AND 1929

The enclosed list shows that there are 517 Butter Factories, 2244 Cheese Factories, 103 Condenseries, 98 Milk Powder Plants, 735 Receiving Stations and 222 Plants Manufacturing Casein in Wisconsin. When it is remembered that the first cheese made in Wisconsin as far as is known was made in 1837, ninety-three years ago, and that until the late seventies or early eighties that all the butter made in the state was made on the farm, and when we think that the condensing, and powder industries have grown up in very recent years, the statistics of Wisconsin's Dairy Industry makes a very imposing showing. The credit for the marvelous development of Wisconsin's Dairy Industry cannot be claimed by any one man any ten men, or any hundred men, but by the united persistent efforts of the leaders of the industry, supported by a loyal organization of dairymen, cheese makers, creamery operators, and others interested in the business. It is almost dangerous to talk about the first thing in any industry for fear that due credit will not be given some of those who were instrumental in starting the industry. As early as 1841, Mrs. Pickett of Jefferson County, with her fourteen year old son, made cheese in their farm kitchen from their own and several neighbors' herds. Credit is given Chester Hazen of Ladoga, Wisconsin, for starting the first American Cheese Factory at Ladoga in 1864. Certain it is that between 1841 and 1864 there had been a gradual growth in the industry, and somewhere along that line, there probably had been built buildings for the manufacture of cheese that would closely approach something which could be called a cheese factory.

At least it is known that Mr. Robbins of Burke, Dane County, made cheese on his farm from 120 cows, and in 1859 made and showed a cheese at the Wisconsin State Fair that weighed 1,650 pounds, and that means real dairy equipment somewhere. In 1862 Mr. Kuenzi, living on a farm near Watertown, built a small building especially for a cheese factory, and had a tin milk container of 500 pounds capacity; he took in some of his neighbors' milk to mix with his own for the manufacture of Swiss Cheese.

The growth of the industry in the last 60 years from the time when we were making two and one half million pounds to the time when we were making as we have the last two years, of three hundred million pounds in a year, shows a growth that has scarcely ever been equalled by any other industry. While butter was probably made on the farms as early as was the first cheese made, still there was very little creamery business until the days when the farm separator came into use in the eighties. Wisconsin now leads all states in the production of cheese making more than seventy per cent of the nation's total; is third in the production of butter; is first in the production of condensed milk; is first in the production of dried milk, and at the same time each year shows an increasing amount of milk and cream shipped out of the state in fluid state. The present indication seems to be toward larger factories, but whether this will prove to be the most economical method or not, remains yet to be seen. It may be before another list of milk manufacturing plants is published, that the number may be greatly reduced, but whether this is true or not it can be predicted almost with a certainty that the total dairy production will increase. This list of factories has been compiled with the greatest care possible, and its preparation necessitated not only from one to six letters, to some of those who were a bit backward about responding, but finally necessitated an actual trip of some one to the factories to make sure that the material is correct. The department hopes that the material will prove to be of value to the dairy industry.
