INTRODUCTION

The Frances Ellis Collection of North American German Textbooks constitutes the largest special collection on its specific subject in any North American university library. It is named for the assembler of its historic core of some 440 volumes, Professor Frances H. Ellis of the University of Indiana-Bloomington, a University of Wisconsin Ph.D. who died in 1981. After Professor Ellis' death, Professor Valters Nollendorfs of the German Department of the now University of Wisconsin-Madison brought the collection to Madison and worked tirelessly to expand it. The Ellis Collection now numbers over 1100 cataloged items and is housed in the Special Collections Department of the university's Memorial Library. Whereas a few of these are transfers from this library's circulating collections, the vast majority have been gifts. Further donations are welcome. Indeed, it is hoped that the existence of this preliminary catalogue may serve as a stimulus for important new accessions. These in turn would increase the collection's already substantial utility, not only for students of the teaching of German and/or of the history of American textbook publishing but also for those whose primary interest lies in the varied perceptions of Germany and Germanic phenomena mediated through these unassuming volumes to generations of North American students.

This catalogue is "preliminary" in several respects. First, the Ellis Collection continues to grow, as new candidates for inclusion are received and those already on hand are evaluated and processed; listed here are items cataloged through March of 1997. Second, though it is not subject to any formal restriction by year of publication, the collection has thus far focused on North American imprints prior to 1970 (including a few of British origin whose imprint as given on the title-page is solely North American and a few others deriving from the U.S. military presence in Germany after World War II). More recent textbooks donated for the Ellis Collection are retained but remain as yet uncataloged. Again, the collection contains, and will continue to attract, variant states of the same edition. Useful as these may be in different respects, it has not been possible to identify them in this catalogue as fully as one might like. Consequently, the notations here of multiple copies should suggest avenues for further bibliographic investigation within the collection itself. Finally, there is now no satisfactory general bibliography for nineteenth- and twentieth-century German textbooks of North American provenience. Whereas this catalogue could not possibly fill that gap, it may in some small way be thought preliminary to such an accomplishment.

A few words on mechanics. The entries are in alphabetical order by author or, in the case of readers and similar collections, by editor. Within this single alphabetical sequence, works of single authorship or editorship precede collaborations. Different editions of the same title are listed chronologically. In accordance with computer-age cataloging practice, titles beginning with a possessive form of a person's name are considered distinct from those not so marked. Thus under "Schiller", books whose title-page announces, e.g., Maria Stuart are filed as "M"s while those whose title-page announces Schillers Maria Stuart are filed as "S"s. The adoption of this convention will facilitate comparison of individual entries with those in such now standard electronic databases as national and regional union catalogues and the on-line catalogues of individual institutional libraries. On the other hand, title statements and statements of responsibility are given in much fuller form than is currently standard for ordinary monographs: the intent here is both to make available the stylistic choices of editors and publishers and to not suppress the sometimes substantial additional information conveyed by these elements of the title-page. Collations follow ordinary Anglo-American cataloging practice, as do also (though sometimes in slightly fuller form) edition and imprint statements.

Located at the upper right of each entry is the item's unique Ellis Collection number. The Ellis Collection number of other copies or states is noted at the end of the entry. Also routinely noted are the presence of Fraktur (whose early absence from certain books, e.g., those of scientific content, may be thought significant), of various teaching and study aids (a list of abbreviations used for these is given below), of publisher's advertisements, and of substantial marginalia, underlining, and other reader's markings. Also recorded are signatures of previous owners and, when known, the name of the donor (in this context, "Friends" refers to the Friends of the University of Wisconsin-Madison Libraries and "Max Kade Institute" refers to the institute of that name located on the campus of the University of Wisconsin-Madison). The volume concludes with a separate Index of Publishers (publishers in boldface).

It is a pleasure to record the assistance of many who have helped in the course of this effort. Professor Valters Nollendorfs began work on the catalogue in his own office and oversaw the early versions of the database out of which the present volume has grown. Thea Lindquist edited entries under Professor Nollendorfs' supervision, handled the transfer of the database to its current Memorial Library environment, and continued to work on the project here. After a brief interim she was succeeded by Barbara Leary Hinrichsen, who toiled extensively to verify entries, convert descriptions to library form for ready compatibility with other catalogues, complete the annotations, and perform other editorial labors. Other students who contributed along the way include Jillian Warmund, John Cornelius, and Lisa Stallbaumer. The entire staff of the Department of Special Collections generously and repeatedly gave of its time and labor to facilitate this work. Jim O'Neill's contribution to the production aspects of the volume was extraordinary. Special acknowledgment is due to Louis Pitschmann, Associate Director of Libraries for Collection Management and Preservation, for his patient and unflinching support of this project at every turn. Major funding for printing was provided by the Humanistic Foundation of the University of Wisconsin-Madison through a grant from the German Department of the University. To these and to all others who have had any share in this undertaking I am deeply grateful.
