BURNING AUTO SAVED BY SHOT OF LEMONADE

Traffic was stopped for a few minutes at the east corner of the capitol square yesterday when someone discovered that flames were spouting from underneath a passing automobile.

Two tourists hastily extricated themselves from the piles of baggage, tents and picnic supplies in the back seat, while the driver peered frantically under the chassis.

When a hook and ladder company of the Madison fire department clanged up to the scene of the disaster, the fire was out. Some genius had used a thermos-bottle full of lemonade to quench the flames!

STUDENT SAVES TRAVELER FROM DEATH IN LAKE

Edward E. Johnson, Chautauqua worker, was saved from drowning at the Y. M. C. A. pier at 9 o'clock last night by Ray Soliday, Eureka college, Illinois, student, enrolled here for the summer session.

Johnson and two friends went to the Y. M. C. A. pier to take a swim. He slipped while attempting to dive and landed on his stomach. The impact knocked him unconscious and he remained under the water for several minutes before his friends realized what had happened.

Ray Soliday, who was standing near the lake shore at that moment, was attracted to the scene and soon dragged Johnson out of the water. Johnson regained consciousness after 10 minutes. He spent the night at the University Y. M. C. A. and left early this morning for Baraboo.

FINE STUDENTS FOR SPEEDING

McCormick, Baker, Carnahan and Manchester Arrested

Four students who were arrested Thursday night for speeding in the university district were fined in superior court today.

The students were C. D. McCormick, F. S. Baker, William Carnahan and Morgan Manchester. They pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Hopmann and fought their cases with Lawrence Hall and Charles Dunn as attorneys. They all claimed not to be going more than 15 miles per hour.

Morgan Manchester and F. S. Baker paid fines of $10 and costs and C. D. McCormick was let off with costs.

William Carnahan was freed.

VARSITY RIFLE TEAM FIRST IN NATIONAL MEET

First place has been won by the rifle team of the student cadet corps of the University of Wisconsin in the senior division of the National Intercollegiate gallery match.

This decision, made by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, has just been announced by Major General Harry C. Hale, U. S. army, in a letter to Pres. Birge.

Members of the winning team are:

L. P. Drake, C. J. Ludwig, F. P. Price, W. J. Kilpatrick, H. J. Sporer, T. Ziegler, M. A. Schwarting, K. V. Powers, Ray Jackson, L. O. Long, G. H. Ross, B. D. Tolman, J. H. Fielton and E. P. Von Rohr.

GILLEN READS PLAYS OF HENRY DRUMMOND

Prof. C. F. Gillen of the French department read selections from the poetry of Henry Drummond, Thursday afternoon in the Law building, characterizing the same type of people as did Louis Hemon in his "Maria Chapdelaine." The poems were read in the well known genial fashion of Professor Gillen's which has contributed so largely in making him one of the popular men in the French department. Many pronounced it the best thing which has been given during the summer session.

Student Directories To Be Distributed Next Week

Student directories will probably be ready for distribution early next week. It was announced this afternoon by the Registrar's office.

13 Brings Bats To Deet Office As Port Leaves

Bats on Friday, the 13th! What could be worse? Does one bad luck omen cancel the other, or do two and two make four?

All of which means that while summer session celebrities were knocking on wood, avoiding black cats and the last piece of bread on the plate and removing the thirteenth chair from the table, scribes exasperated, screaming or murderous (depending on the sex), were energetically chasing bats around the Cardinal office at the very moment the "daily deed" should have gone to press.

But bats, Friday the 13th, and such little omens are not the only cause for the batty edition you are now reading, for the "Power That Be," the magazine editor, took the noon train for parts unknown.

HOUSE-BREAKER IS STILL FREE; WARNING GIVEN

No clue as to the identity of the man who entered the house of Miss Fannie Elsworth, 248 Langdon street, Monday night and secured $25 has been found. This makes the second robbery within a week.

"We have warned the university district time and time again to watch out for the open condition of fraternities, sororities, and rooming houses," said Chief of Police Thomas Shaughnessy yesterday. "Ordinary precautions must be observed if this petty thievery is to be stopped."

Not only do most fraternities leave all entrances to the houses wide open all night but also they leave silver cups, money, watches, and other valuables within easy reach of any one who cares to step in and take them. One could completely furnish a whole house within a few hours of the early morning.

MADISON SEES TOURING CURIOS

Ex-Soldiers Traversing World Stop in Town on Way South

America's "Only Traveling Curiosity" shop, owned and operated by two ex-service men, who started in December, 1919, from New York city to tour the world, parked on Main street of Madison Wednesday night and was the center of an interested crowd of spectators.

The wooden house built on a Ford chassis is known as the house of a thousand wonders. It is decorated inside and out with thousands of strange relics, curios, and oddities from almost every known land, which have been collected in the course of its long journey. It has traveled over 235,000 miles by land, railroad and steamship while making a tour of the world.

The car landed in San Francisco direct from China just seven weeks ago, and is en route to New Orleans, where the travelers expect to ship for South America. "After that we have just two more countries, Russia and Turkey, to visit and we will have completed our world tour," was a statement made by one of the men.

When it was first begun the object of the tour was a search for health, but as it has continued, the collection of curios and taking of motion pictures has proved profitable. The pictures have been shown in many foreign countries and the car has been viewed as a curiosity by many millions.

DORMITORY FOR MEN CERTAIN AS BILL IS SIGNED

$500,000 Is Available For Start

The building of university dormitories for men students was assured today when Gov. John J. Blaine signed a bill authorizing the board of regents to employ private capital in the undertaking.

Funds for the first building, which may accommodate 500 students, reach the $500,000 mark. Under the terms of the bill it will be possible for the regents to lease land to private non-profit corporation, which has been organized for the building of the university dormitories.

With the completion of the first building rentals will be used to cover the university debt. Additional dormitories will be erected as funds become available.

The attorney general's department has sanctioned the plan of the university building program.

Another bill signed at the same time authorizes the use of $185,000 for building additional units at the psychiatric institute, Mendota, in charge of Dr. William F. Lorenz.

Wisconsin will have one of the most complete psychopathic institutes in the United States when the new units are added, according to Dr. Lorenz. At the present time 240 patients are being cared for and with the additional money the bed capacity will be increased to 275.

NATIONAL HOLIDAY OF FRANCE OBSERVED

Bastille day, the French national holiday, was observed at 4 o'clock this afternoon behind Bascom hall in the amphitheater by the members of Cercle Francais.

Professor Guerard of the French department spoke and a pageant, the "Mule du Pape," was presented by the students in addition to a number of French songs and folk dances. Singing the Marseillaise concluded the program.

Prof. Julius Olson to Speak At Sons of Norway Picnic

A picnic will be held at Blue Mounds Sunday under the auspices of the Sons of Norway lodges of Madison and Mt. Horeb. The main speaker will be Professor Julius E. Olson of the University of Wisconsin. R. N. Quallie will give a talk in Norwegian explaining the object of the "Sons of Norway." Community singing, folk dances, and drill by a ladies drill team will conclude the program.

SCIENCE OF POLITICS SUBJECT OF CONCLAVE

To discuss methods of investigation in political science, a National Conference of the Science of Politics will be held at the University of Wisconsin, Sept. 3-8. This conference, which is authorized by the American Political Science Association, will be held for the first time this year and will probably be held annually thereafter.

"The purpose of the conference is to investigate the possibility of more scientific methods for testing the tentative theories and hypotheses of current political science. The discussions will therefore be devoted almost entirely to problems of technique and methodology," declared Prof. Pitman B. Potter, of the Wisconsin Department of political science, in his article on the conference prepared for the American Political Science Review. "It is hoped that at the end of the conference some tentative conclusions may be formulated."

EDUCATOR TO LECTURE HERE

Helen Parkhurst, Originator of Dalton Play Will Talk Monday

Miss Helen Parkhurst, head of the University school, New York city, and originator of the Dalton plan in education, will lecture here on the Dalton plan for five days, beginning Monday at 3:30 o'clock, each afternoon in the auditorium of the Biology building. Conferences with Miss Parkhurst for discussion of any problems relating to the plan, have been arranged to follow the lectures of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 4:30 o'clock.

In her lectures, Miss Parkhurst will describe her own plan and give a good deal of concrete material showing the results of the experimental work which has been carried on in this type of education.

The Dalton plan is attracting widespread attention in both this country and Europe. Several hundred schools have been established on the Dalton plan in England.

Miss Parkhurst was originally a teacher in the state normal school at Stevens Point. She left that position to go to Rome to study Dr. Montessori's system of education. Dr. Montessori became so interested in her work, and had so much confidence in her ability and leadership that he appointed her head of the Montessori work in America.

As director of the Montessori schools in New York city and elsewhere, she conceived the idea of modifying certain of the principles of the Montessori work and applying them to the American educational system.

She established the University school in New York for the purpose of testing the laboratory plan as applied to the teaching of all subjects, in all grades and in the high school. In the high school at her home in Dalton, Mass., Miss Parkhurst's methods for application to the high school were perfected. Her system is consequently known as the Dalton plan in education.

Miss Parkhurst is lecturing this summer in several universities, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Virginia, Michigan and Wisconsin.

EDUCATION OF THE DAY

Pertinent News and Discussions of Modern Educational Tendencies and Problems By Summer Session Instructors and Visiting Teachers

MINIMUM AND MAXIMUM ESSENTIALS

Class room reactions arising in Prof. H. L. Miller's class in "Directing Study."

Winnafred Shepard, teacher of science, Proviso Township high school, Maywood, Ill.—

"When we demand a minimum essential it seems to me that we are putting the emphasis on the course and not the individual student. The course is for the individual, not the individual for the course. Let him get everything he can out of it—whether much or little. Each one will then have the incentive of a challenge and the class will not be going on as a mere dead level affair."

F. R. Watson, supervising principal of public schools, Hollandale—

"Perhaps children can not think because the teacher does not furnish the mind with material with which to think. I believe, however, that teachers are furnishing data but at the same time doing the thinking for the children."

"Since teaching begins only at the point of difficulty and the teacher has removed that difficulty, the students have no opportunity to think because the material given them is already the so-called 'baked dough.'

"If teachers were trained to develop the facts and from these facts let the children develop into thinkers, we would have our procedure working out in its ideal condition."

Hanna G. Hoejke, teacher of New Testament and journalism, Holland, Mich.

"How much faith have we in what we attempt in teaching?

When some teachers have tried a new suggestion and found it unsatisfactory, they say, "We knew it would be a failure."

"But the ones enthusiastic to try the plan are usually, in some degree, successful."

"The class must get its interest by arousing 'pep', as our students say, in the subject itself. Then they will, each one of them, do their best to master the principle."

R. B. Thiel, supervising principal, Algoma—

"The minimum essential idea, as carried out in many courses of study, is a parcelling out of subject content, this much this week, etc. Under such conditions it is no wonder that the pupil loses all connection between what he learns today and what he learned yesterday. The course is like hash to him."

"Under this procedure the pupil finds himself on a dreary, tortuous road with no choice, no forks, no particular interests, so he moves on in a subconscious way at about 40 per cent efficiently. He drags along, if he is a capable individual, and if he isn't, he is pulled along so that the mean velocity (in its worse sense) may be maintained."

"Contrast" with this the conception of teaching that enables the pupil to sense his real problem, which he is encouraged to solve at his own rate, and to realize that he has hold of something approximating a "man-size" problem which he is beginning to grasp."

Verla R. Hook, Norborne, Mo.—

"An individual becomes educated to the extent to which he responds to his environment by sharing in associated activities. By doing his share he appreciates the purposes learns the methods, acquires the skill and becomes imbued with the spirit of the environment.

"The school represents a selected environment, the function of which is to supply stimuli to stir up direct activities. This environment is the proper kind when it creates a desire for continued growth and supplies the means for meeting the desire."

George F. Brooks, principal of the senior high school, Hutchinson, Kan.—

"There is no such thing as a minimum. We must always go on and on. There is no limit to the amount that must be done either as a minimum or maximum."

"The real question is always can the student solve the problem today or ten years hence when he needs to know the bit of information he is supposed to learn now."

Sheboygan county has been represented at the university this year by a total of 142 students, including 99 men and 43 women.

DOES LIFE ON PLANETS EXIST

Prof. Winchell Disagrees With Conclusions of Harvard Man

Conclusions drawn from tests on meteorites by Professor Baxter of the Harvard university laboratories to the effect that all the heavenly bodies are like the earth in structure and support life, and even people, was dubbed far-fetched and unproven by Prof. A. N. Winchell, of the geology department.

Professor Baxter finds that the chemical natures of stones from the sky and stones from the earth are identical. The most striking proof of all was that the isotopes (twin elements) of the metals were found there too, like they are in minerals here.

"There is nothing in these statements to take issue with," says Prof. Winchell, "but they do not establish as a fact that there are people living on other planets just like the people living on the earth and such a conclusion is unwarranted."

"If the isotopes are the same as those found on the earth, one may go still further and compare the groups of these atoms in the form of minerals and he would find again that the same minerals are found in the meteorite as in the earth."

"It was even shown by Doctor Farrington of the Field museum, Chicago, that the proportion of elements and minerals found in the meteorite is identical with the proportion in the earth."

"There are two main classes of meteorites. The iron meteorite and the stone meteorite. The iron meteorite, according to this view would correspond to the interior of the earth and the stone meteorite in proportions as found in the common beach rock to the earth's exterior."

TEXT BOOKS OF 20 PUBLISHERS ARE DISPLAYED

Text books from 20 different publishers are now on display in the lobby of the Biology auditorium. Nearly one-half of these publishers have sent their displays and agents since the exhibit was assembled about a week ago.

"Making books for all uses in schools available for teachers to examine is the purpose of the display. Classes which are evaluating and comparing text books have made use of the exhibit in their work, and visitors from 30 states have looked over our books," H. H. Wood, state representative for Ginn and company, who has general charge of the displays, said yesterday.

The publishers having book exhibits here are:

University of Chicago press; Ginn and company; Harcourt Brace and company; Atlantic Monthly press; J. B. Lippincott; Lyons and Carnahan; Denoyer-Gippert Map company; Allyn and Bacon; University Publishing company; Prang company; Leidlaw Brothers; Rand McNally and company; Henry Holt and company; Laurel Book company; Silver Burdett and company; Scott Foresman and company; Grolier society; John C. ## PERSONALITY GREAT ASSET

Teachers Must Cultivate Good Will Of Students Douglas Declares

"Personality is the biggest single item in every teacher's stock and trade," according to Harl R. Douglass, recently of the University of Oregon, who is lecturing in the department of education during the summer session.

"Many teachers have wonderful minds and wear the Phi Beta Kappa key, yet they do not realize one hundred per cent on their ability because they either have no personality or have not developed the one which they have. Then, they wonder why a superintendent is so anxious to recommend them for another position the next year," Mr. Douglass said.

"Teachers who have not a pleasing personality don't succeed because teaching is largely a matter of influencing people. Scholarship and professional training, which are both absolutely necessary for successful teaching, are not made to count as they should unless the students feel the influence of the teachers personality."

"Teachers should be particularly careful of their personal appearance, and, as a matter of fact, they are not, declares Mr. Douglass.

Too many teachers are ultra-conservatives. They wear clothes so antiquated that they are ridiculous. Young people do not admire the teacher with clothes of a past decade, and consequently the influence of this teacher, no matter how desirable it really may be, is lost on the students because they count her queer and uninteresting.

"The desirable teacher has a sense of humor and enjoys life," says Mr. Douglass. "I find too many teachers who are 'Joy-killers.' They have too much dignity. They challenge their students instead of getting their good will."

"Every man and woman who goes into the profession of teaching ought to have a variety of interests."

"Cultivate hobbies, other than going to school some more, enjoy athletics and have a good time," Mr. Douglass advises.

FRIDAY, THE 13th

Suppose:

You, a bather, go down to the lake by the university gymnasium today, as you often do to cool off, and while plowing around near shore jab your foot on a jagged piece of broken bottle, or on a rusty nail in an old barrel stave, or into a big sharp stone that gashes your leg and develops an infection that lays you up for a few weeks and maybe kills you completely, who would you, or your relatives, blame?

Friday, the thirteenth, perhaps.

But more appropriately the blame could be carried to the door of certain university authorities who could, if they cared to, supervise that part of the university grounds which extends under Lake Mendota for a hundred feet.

The lake bottom near the shore in front of the university boat house is literally crowded with trash, big rocks, tin cans, and drift rubbish. The discomforting and dangerous debris makes it impossible for a person who cannot swim to enjoy himself wading about near the shore. And the university shores adjoining the boathouse furnish virtually the only access hundreds of university people have to the lake and in these warm days to the comfort of a cooling dip.

This pestiferous lot of rubbish has not come into existence only this year to worry and disconcert bathers. Old-timers here now report that the rocks, and cans, and old boat bottoms frustrated any attempts to bathe near the boathouse ten years ago in the same manner that they do now. The condition seems to have been chronic and permanent. It is high time that an effort be made to rid us of our scourge.

The university superintendent of grounds intimates that eventually the portion of the lake referred to will be filled in and beautified. A fine program. But that doesn't satisfy the needs of our bathers here now, this summer, this week, today.

Certainly the only thing that could justify delay in cleaning up the lake bottom is a lack of funds. The university is hard-pressed financially and we would be strongly averse to advocating expenditures now that would be unreasonable under the existing financial status. The much-needed public bath house near the lake and a breakwater to protect water craft must be foregone for a time.

But there seems to be no strong reason why some of the many men employed to trim lawns, and bushes, and trees, and pick up paper on the campus could not be transferred without extra cost to the lake shore for a few hours and do the entire job to the utter satisfaction and extreme joy of the hundreds of would-be bathers who are no wimpy complainers.

Until the dangerous mess is removed, every day for the bathers who brave the jags and glass might well be Friday, the thirteenth.

A SUMMER MELTING POT

A university summer session in many ways takes on the aspects of a melting pot, that characteristic so aptly attributed to all America.

We have in our midst those who are taking work over; we have those who are taking our "pipe" courses and who make a playground out of the university; we have a small percentage of flappers and Greek gods; and we have too those people who, tempered with age and experience, are taking summer school work in order to better fit themselves for their profession.

In this last group there are people quite foreign to the undergraduate. They are different. They do not wear college clothes. They do not in a majority of instances have bobbed hair. But as a group they are fairly representative of the American people. They are to be respected for the service they have rendered in our schools and even as our undergraduates have learned from them in the past so may they still learn while they are beside them in the same classes.

There is no reason why there should not be a certain unity of thought and of interest among our summer school students. It is true that there are barriers between many of us, but to permit those barriers to destroy the campus spirit which could be present would surely be a mistake.

We have in summer school as at no other time of year a chance to exchange and gather new viewpoints. In the widely varying mass of people who are here this summer, one could search for and find every shade of finely differentiated thought, philosophy, and stupidity.

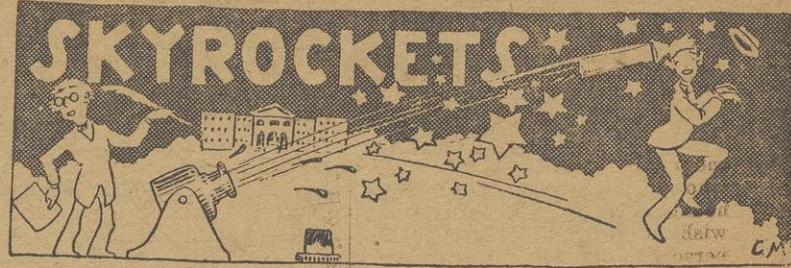

They blend like the changing colors of a spectrum. They are knit together into a student body like the elements of a new product as they are fused and finely tempered in the melting pot.

SUMMER STUDENT WILL TEACH IN TOKIO SCHOOL

That there is a scarcity of teachers in Japan is the statement of Harriett Rawls, a summer session student, who expects to teach in a Tokio high school next year.

According to word received from the principal of the government school in which Miss Rawls will teach there are several vacancies on the teaching staff.

Miss Rawls left Madison today preparatory to taking passage on the "Empress of Asia" from Vancouver, August 5. She is a graduate of Earlham college and has taught for two years in the high school in her home at Carthage, Indiana.

Book Corner

BY W. A. F.

Whirlpools of movement with the telegraph editor and the city editor at the vortex of each, boys rushing to and fro with copy to be slammed before the copy readers, telephones ringing, fingers scribbling, the rumbling turmoil of the great presses below, the vague excitement and dissimilarity of each day's work in spite of its monotonous routine—all these impressions are intimately and affectionately portrayed in "Headlines," the best of all the books in the recent school of journalistic things.

Henry Justin Smith, the author of the book, is a journalist himself and a member of the staff of the Chicago Daily News, and it is the rather delightful informality of this old news office with its traditions, joys, and sorrows that he perhaps unconsciously describes. One can imagine that the very characters of the book, although evidently slightly overdrawn for emphasis, and carefully concealed under pseudonyms, are nevertheless some very live persons whose idiosyncrasies and personalities have made up the unique and interesting columns of the best of home and fireside journals.

Quaint, amusing, and tragic are these stories, disconnected but yet so intimately related with chronological portrayal and consistent development of character. The pen of a journalist is clearly noted—a journalist who must have been a super cub-reporter in his infancy and a better star in his maturity. Each episode shows the true newspaper man's great love for people and human nature. In a human interest story fashion, with a regard for the finer shadings of language which in a less conscientious writer would easily lead to "shop talk," Smith makes the news room a real place with a romance of its own and a spot far from the cold-hearted place of the world's imagination.

The story of the meetings in the tobacco shop, the description of the Old Man with his stern dictates but brusque kindness,—the tale of the socialized copy boy who had to be fed milk every day to keep him over the minimum weight for working children,—the pitiful experiences of the Drunkard and the human attitude of the gang,—the actual workings of the "cave of tongues,"—these and more are titles of the many interesting chapters of this book.

The reading is light. It is interesting and valuable.

STICKFULS. By Irvin S. Cobb. George H. Doran Co. $2.00. By W. A. F.

A more recent journalistic book is Cobb's autobiographical "Stickfuls." About the only instance of the great humorist's flashing style in this volume is in the choice of the title which is both intriguing and apropos.

Although the scintillating gleam is absent here (perhaps due to the excess of copy which the author is turning out while his name's popularity lasts), there is much in the book which is vivid portrayal of newspaper work and conditions and there is also an incomplete but anecdotal history of the journalist Cobb's career.

Before becoming a humorist, Cobb was a famous reporter. In Park Row he is especially noted for his famous running story on the Harry K. Thaw case. This is a new Cobb to many and his memoirs of the balmy days of "the game" warrant the active reception of the book.

To summarize a good book for the ambitious cub to investigate but not emulate—an excellent group of autobiographical narratives of Cobb's life for those whose literary hobby centers in Irvin—not a bad summer book for everybody but someone with literary colic.

TENNIS TOURNEY LAGGING. HAGAN

Laziness and Inability Slowing Up Series

The summer tennis tourney has been considerably slowed up by laziness, or inability, of some of the contestants to play off their matches.

It had been planned to have all games played except the semi-finals and the finals, by the end of this week.

"Since we will have to finish the singles, and play off the doubles before the end of the season, it is very disappointing to see things going this way," said George Hagan.

However, notice has been served on the lagards. By Monday the second round much be played and by Wednesday the third round over. Those who are not thru then will forfeit their position in the tournament.

Those who still have to play off their second round are Bennett vs. Lydia Kayser, Barwig vs. Carter, Henica vs. Henican, Bowman vs. Emerson.

Johnson and Hocking have as yet to play the first round. Their match must be decided and the winner play Miss Florence Umbert for the second round, before Monday.

Contestants can still register in the doubles by handing in their names to George Hagan at his office in the men's Gym.

1925 YEAR BOOK NOW GATHERING EARLY MATERIAL

Never before in the history of Wisconsin's Year Book, the Badger, has so early a start been made in gathering materials for the book. Already a goodly number of pictures have been made not only of summer school events but also of last spring's happenings.

The 1924 Badger closed its forms about May 1, making it impossible for any events after that date to be included. Ellis Fulton, editor-in-chief, and Wm. Sullivan, business manager of the 1925 Badger, sensing the void that would occur between last year's book and the one of the coming year, determined to get an early start and "nail things down" while it was possible. Thus many excellent pictures were made of the baseball games, field meets, girl dancers, water events, alumni activities, commencement exercises, and others to numerous to mention.

This year's summer school will be played up by the Badger much more than any previous session. Pictures, pictures, pictures—of everything possible to show the scenery, the life, the activities of summer school at Wisconsin will be depicted. Efforts are now being made to arrange a picture of the whole summer school body in one group, which, if consummated, will be the first time in the school's history that such a picture has been made. Another innovation will be the showing of groups of the people living at the various houses. Only representative houses with fairly large attendance of summer students will be made. This work is already under way and it is the hope of the Badger editor that each house will co-operate to the utmost in having a full representation of its people on the picture when it is made.

The Badger photowork is again being done by The Photoart House, who have five photographers on instant call to the editor at all times. M. J. Meuer, president of the company, is a Wisconsin graduate and

GILMAN TEAM TIES LOWMAN'S

Pickford and Ritchie Pitch Well and Coaches Fail To Win

The West Gilman street baseballers held the Lowman team to a 3 to 3 tie in a fast five inning game played on the lower campus yesterday afternoon.

The tie will be played off in the near future, and fans look for a five frame thriller when the two teams face each other to decide the tilt.

Peterson went the route for the Lowman team, pitching winning ball in all frames except the first when the Gilman streeters hopped on him for two runs.

Jerry Pickford demonstrated that he was an all-round player when takes particular pride in the pictorial features of the Badger. The last two Badgers were also illustrated by the Photoart House, but Mr. Meuer states that with the aggressiveness and foresightedness of this year's staff there can be no doubt of the excellence of next year's book and this year's summer school will hold the key position.

he played three positions during the five innings. Pitching for the first two innings, he allowed only one hit and no runs. At first he would have been all right could he have found the first sack oftener when the ball was thrown to him. He starred in the center garden, making a nice catch of the only fly that came his way.

The Gilman streeters started the ball rolling in the first inning and brought in two scores before the Lowman outfit knew just what it was all about. The third saw the Lowman team cut loose with three runs to put them in a one run lead. Gilman street retaliated with one in their half of the fourth to tie up the score and the fifth went scoreless.

PRIMITIVE MAN ILLUSTRATED

Ape-Like Men and Wooly Rhinocerous Shown

Sabre-toothed tigers, the wooly rhinocerous and the reconstructed Neanderthal man were among the pictures exhibited by James Alonzo Pond at his illustrated lecture on "Prehistoric Remains in Southern France," Wednesday afternoon at Lathrop hall.

"Those familiar with the archaeological differences between Europe and America will know that while the pre-historic Indian remains of mounds and villages are found in widely scattered areas in America, in France the remains are concentrated in caves or rock shelters," Mr. Pond said.

"The remains I have studied are entirely of the Old Stone or Paleolithic age. These remains show that the Ape-like men had come up a little on the scale that finally developed into the Neolithic race."

Many of the remains of which Mr. Pond showed the pictures are 10,000 years older than the remains of any European civilization. He showed many pictures of the reconstructed Heidelberg man, the first of the ape-like men, and of the Mousterian culture of the Neanderthal race. There were also pictures of the Cro-Magnon man, of who the present race of man is the direct descendant.

Over 20,000 years is the minimum age of a bas relief of two buffalo, who were found on the floor of a cave in southern France. The animals are remarkably well executed showing that the Cro-Magnon men were of high intelligence and had a remarkably well developed artistic sense. The cave in which the sculpture was found is reached through a tortuous series of caves and galleries which excludes most of the outside air, so that the clay of which the relief is fashioned is still damp and retains the finger prints of visitors mingled with those of the pre-historic artisans.

Mr. Pond who is a graduate of Beloit college has just returned from fourteen months of study in France on the first scholarship awarded by the Society for the Study of Pre-historic Remains in France. This society which was organized by Dr. Peabody of Harvard assisted by M. Henri-Martin of Paris, is supported by the universities and colleges of America. The society carries on research in the caves of southern France in which are found the remains of prehistoric men as well as the pictographs left by them on the walls of the caves.
