UNION BOARD TO DISTRIBUTE ESSAY

To Publish Pamphlet by Burrus on Intercollegiate Athletics

An essay on the place of intercollegiate athletics in the modern educational program written by Jefferson D. Burrus, Jr., will be published in pamphlet form and distributed among the faculties and student bodies of all the Big Ten universities by Union board, according to Lowell E. Frautschi '27, president, following a meeting of the board yesterday noon.

"The essay presents Burrus' opinions on the place of athletics in the university educational scheme," Frautschi explained, "as well as the principal existant evils and suggestions for improvement."

The pamphlet will not only be dispersed in middle western university circles but also among newspapers and high schools.

"It is Burrus' special work sponsored and published as such by Union Board," Frautschi said. The date of publication has not been set.

Langdon hall, the newly acquired annex to the old Union building, will be occupied by the Lit and the Issue sometime this week, according to announcement from Ewart Merica '27, member of the board. It is also likely that another organization will take up offices in Langdon hall in the near future.

Day By Day With The News

By G. H. T.

Admiral C. S. Williams, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, yesterday notified the Navy department that a number of American civilians had been killed or wounded in an attack on Standard Oil hill, Nanking, by Cantonese southern troops. The exact number of dead was unknown, but was reported to be large. Forces from the American gunboats Noa, and Preston, and the English cruiser Emerald were landed to rescue the survivors.

Grape Juice Held Intoxicating

The possession of cider or wine for home consumption, whose alcoholic content is in excess to that allowed in the Volstead act, was held illegal in federal court by Judge Augustus N. Hand when he granted an order confiscating ten barrels of grape juice which chemists said contained 13 per cent of alcohol. In making his decision, Judge Hand said:

"I can hardly regard grape juice containing 13 per cent of alcohol as non-intoxicating. Possession of grape juice for home use which was non-intoxicating when manufactured by the possessor, becomes unlawful under the Volstead act whenever the liquor becomes intoxicating, whether through natural causes or otherwise."

An International Marriage Tangle

A petition for the annulment of a marriage filed in Washington, D. C. reveals an interesting phase of our laws on international relations. Gustavo de Medina, connected with the Spanish embassy, married two American girls within ninety days. Neither wife No. 1, nor wife No. 2 knew of the existence of the other, nor did either of them know that Senor de Medina had a wife and child in Spain. Now Senor de Medina has returned to Spain and, since all members of a foreign legation are protected from civil action while in this country, both wife No. 1 and wife No. 2 will have to content themselves with annulment proceedings.

"College Students Good As Ever"

"College students are just as moral as they were in my day, though they don't want us to think so. They pretend. It's the obsession of youth now to want to seem wise. They tell tales of wild parties and sometimes they may even believe they are true. They only want to seem sophisticated. The college student is better trained and more purposeful than ever before." These are the ideas expressed by Tommy Arkle Clark, dean of men at the University of Illinois, before the students of Lawrence college. We agree with you "Tommy" and appreciate your insight.

Gold Rush At Transvaal

Prospectors from every part of the world have been pouring into Transvaal, South Africa, at the rate of 1,000,000 a month following the discovery of large diamond fields. It is estimated that 4,000,000 persons have swept into the district; millionaires and paupers, clerks and civil servants, cripples and athletes, all working together.

Iowa Farm Boy Writes Troubles To House Mother

(Editor's note — The following letter was received recently by Mrs. K. M. Burrus, house mother of the Sigma Chi fraternity from a farm boy in Iowa. We offer it without comment to readers of the Daily Cardinal believing it to be of more than usual interest.)

Mrs. K. M. Burrus.

Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mother,

as I shed a many tears since I seen your Picture in a daily Paper and the article where you wish to help the boys by good advice. I may not be classed amongst the college boys as I never had the opportunity at going to School, but I wish to learn and get to know that there still is a chance for any young man. I am just a poor Farm boy hat never has a chance at life. for last ten years I've been waiting for better times as I can have what other have today I am about where I started and my health is giving away, those long years I've been almost silent. I never quarrel with my folks, and I'd rather be broke than to ask them for money as they couldn't give me any as they didn't have it. I couldn't keep Friends as I didn't have money to entertain them, I was in Love with a girl few years ago I took her home from a dance one night as I had but an old car with the top full of holes going home we got into rain storm we was both wet as I thought the world of this girl I gave her my coat not to get wet as I was soaked as this was the first time I ever took a girl home I didn't mind getting wet and cold then back of us came a big car enclosed and stoped us and asked us to go with them or the girl to be taken from the rain, there I stayed alone (Continued on Page Five)

Issues Challenge

Oliver M. Zendt, graduate student in sociology, has challenged the Rev. H. C. Hengell, of the St. Paul's University Catholic chapel, to a public debate, off the university grounds, on the subject, "Is the Birth Control Movement a Menace to Society?" The challenge comes as a result of a controversy held in the columns of the Daily Cardinal earlier in the week between Zendt and the Rev. Hengell on the problem of birth control.

Zendt is an ardent champion of birth control, while the Rev. Hengell has been opposing it vigorously. In his challenge, made public to this paper last night, Zendt stated that the time and place would be left to the choice of the Rev. Hengell.

Cardinal Not to be Taken Seriously — Nardin

"The Daily Cardinal is not to be taken seriously this year. Its writers make absurd assertions and predictions in the hope of shocking someone, and their opinions do not merit comment," is the statement made by Dean F. Louise Nardin when asked her opinion of the prediction made in the Cardinal yesterday morning on the question of women's smoking.

The editorial in discussion predicted that the time was not far distant when women students will smoke cigarettes on their way to classes and join the men students in smoking between classes.

Dean Scott H. Goodnight refused to consider the possibility. "I have nothing to say about such a prediction," was his comment.

Russell's Lecture Arouses Protest

Orientals Object to Statements Made by Ag Dean

Violent protests by Oriental students were the result of the lecture given Wednesday by Dean H. L. Russell, of the College of Agriculture on "The Far East Today."

Various statements made by the speaker on the basis of his visit to the Orient last year as a member of the International Educational board aroused heated discussion among several Chinese students who gained the floor to voice their objections.

The ultimatum which appears in the next column is also an effort on the part of the Chinese students to make their position and that of the Nationalist party clear.

Dean Russell began his talk by cutting back to 1912, when China threw off the yoke of the Manchu dynasty and set up a republic under Dr. Sun Yat Sen. This fell in 1913, and was followed by eight presidents and 42 cabinets in the course of a decade. The people, 90 per cent of whom are illiterate, were unready for the principles of democracy he said.

Hurriedly bringing his story up to date, the speaker contended that the present state of affairs in China is due to a rising tide of nationalism being developed in all countries, and which is now more evident in China than ever before.

"The Nationalist forces which now hold all of southern China, and which so recently captured Shanghai, have set up three main aims for themselves. They intend to unify China, to modernize governmental procedure, and to wipe out unequal treaties," the dean said.

"The first is, of course, the aim of every party which springs up in China," said the Dean. "Each regards itself as the savior of the country."

Says Graft Rife

The second aim is the one most needed, according to Dean Russell. Graft is rife in governmental circles, and works greatly to the detriment of the nation. Tammany at its worst was purity itself compared to China even today, he added.

On the question of unequal treaties, Dean Russell became quite fluent. He said that when China wanted to develop, it was necessary to import foreign capital. China had (Continued on Page Seven)

ISSUE MANIFESTO CONDEMNING U. S. GUNBOAT POLICY

Latest Shanghai Developments Reported; Ultimatum is Served on Cantonese

(Copyright 1927 by the Chicago Tribune.)

SHANGHAI, March 24, (Special to the Daily Cardinal)—The authorities of the great powers in Peking and Shanghai tonight are listening anxiously for the echoes throughout China to the roar of the big guns in the Yangtze river at Nanking today in defense of American and British nationals attacked with machine guns by Bolshevik Chinese mobs.

An ultimatum has been served on the Cantonese commander in chief at Nanking. His presence is demanded on the British warship Emerald by 11 o'clock tonight or the warship will bombard the city, at their option, and land forces. A last report states that Cantonese army officers already had appeared on the British warship.

Clarence Gauss, American consul, said tonight he had received no report of any American being killed at Nanking, although British wireless reports state that a number of Americans were killed. Leonard F. Smith, British port doctor, was killed and the British consul, Bertrand Giles, was seriously wounded. One Japanese marine was reported slain. Many foreigners are still in Nanking. Many were rescued by American and British gunboats.

OPPOSE INTERFERENCE

Condemning the ruling class in the United States for pursuing its present "gunboat" policy in the East, 33 Chinese students here at the university have issued the following manifesto regarding the state of affairs in China:

We, the Chinese students at the University of Wisconsin, in view of the repeated misrepresentations of our home situation, and in order that our own attitude may not be misconstrued, have thought it fit (Continued on Page Two)

TO DEBATE LIFE AT JOINT MEETING

Athenae and Philomathia to Combine for Discussion Tonight

"Resolved, That life is not worth living," will be the subject of a debate at a joint meeting of Athenae and Philomathia literary societies at 7:30 o'clock tonight in 112 Bascom hall. Richard Ludwig, president of Philomathia, will uphold the affirmative, and Simon Sax, vice president of Athenae, will defend life.

The number of student suicides recently has occasioned the discussion. "The higher the development of the race, the more suicides we will have," Ludwig claims. "No animals take their own lives."

Sax expects to show that great hope for adjustment and betterment lies in the evolution of the race, as proved by the past. The elimination of disease, over-population, and similar personal and social problems will be discussed.

Besides the debate, Joseph Pessin will give a talk on "Is Democracy a Failure." William Harding will give a reading. The meeting is open to the public.

to issue this manifesto. We solemnly publish and declare that our Nationalist revolution is animated by the principle of liberty, freedom and independence;

That its ideal is, in its international aspect, "China for the Chinese;" and, in its domestic aspect, "government by the consent of the governed;"

That the attainment of this ideal has hitherto been obstructed by two major forces; internally by a gang of treacherous militarists in the persons of Generals Chang Tso-lin Chang Tsung-chang, Sun Chiang-fang, Wu Pei-fu and their retainers who rest their authority on sheer brutal force, who act as puppets of foreign powers and who rule the country merely to swell their private fortunes and to please their foreign masters; externally by a number of foreign powers, led by Great Britain, which, taking every advantage of the unequal treaties extorted from China by force, perpetuate our civil wars, slaughter our brethren, control and dictate our economic and political life in the interest of their merchant princes and financial giants;

That our Nationalist revolution is, therefore, directed against these two principal enemies; namely, foreign capitalists and Chinese militarists;

That our struggle will not cease until the militarists are ousted and the unequal treaties are abrogated;

That out of the present feudal and semi-colonial state our revolutionary statesmen are being busily engaged in building up a new China in which political and economic democracy shall be the prevalent order;

That our Nationalist revolution, though started in southern China, is in every sense a nation-wide movement, meeting success and welcome everywhere;

That the ruling class in the United States, in pursuing its present gunboat-policy in China, unmistakably ranges itself with the enemies of liberty and freedom; and, as such deserves the condemnation of the good peoples of both China and the United States;

And that in pursuance of our convictions as well as the afore-mentioned facts, we, the Chinese students of the University of Wisconsin, 33 in all, in general meeting assembled, do hereby declare, by unanimous consent, despite the fact that we come from different sections of China, that WE PLEDGE OUR UNDIVIDED ALLEGIANCE TO THE NATIONALIST GOVERNMENT AND FORMALLY RECOGNIZE THE SAME AS THE GOVERNMENT OF CHINA AND OF THE CHINESE PEOPLE.

We deeply regret that, being absent from our home land, we are unable to participate in the revolution and fight shoulder to shoulder with our brethren who valiantly give up their lives that their countrymen may live. But to the new China that is being built upon the fallen bodies of our national heroes we shall give, as we go back, our life, property and everything that is dear to us.

Done in the city of Madison, Wis., the nineteenth day of March, nineteen hundred and twenty-seven, in the sixteenth year of the Republic of China.

The field of contestants for the 1927 Wisconsin high school championship was narrowed yesterday to four pre-tournament favorites, Eau Claire, Kenosha, La Crosse and Madison Central.

All of these teams came through their championship games with ease and passed into the semi-finals of the tournament. Eau Claire meets Kenosha at 8 o'clock tonight and Madison Central plays La Crosse at 9. Both games are expected to be crammed with the fastest basketball yet seen in the tourney, for these four teams have exhibited manifest superiority over all their opponents in the early rounds.

Consolation Starts

Consolation play was also started yesterday, Menasha, New Richmond, Watertown and Wisconsin High breezing through their games to go into the consolation semi-finals.

Kenosha Puts
Platteville Out

Kenosha, playing a beautiful game during the first half and remaining practically stationary during the last, had little trouble in defeating Platteville, 20-9. The Platteville squad presented a stubborn defense in the last half. Facetti showed well for Kenosha. The winners flashed excellent teamwork throughout the game.

Before Eau Claire

Eau Claire, clearly having an off day, defeated Ashland, 15-9, largely on the strength of Engebretson's fine work. The game was the roughest played during the tourney and 13 fouls called on Eau Claire. Carpenter, midget forward, starred for Ashland.

LA CROSSE IS IT

KENOSHA SHOWS UP

CENTRAL NOT TOO GOOD

Well, La Crosse is still in. But so are Eau Claire, Kenosha, and Madison Central. The plot, as Shakespeare never said, thickens.

On the basis of what they did yesterday, Kenosha appeared the most dangerous of all the championship challengers. Like every other team in the tournament, the Kenoshans attempt to play the short-pass game; so far they have succeeded admirably and there is no limit to what they might do, given enough rope.

Madison Central looked a bit groggy in its contest with Wausau last night. The Centralites handle the ball well but they bungle short shots a little too frequently for their own health. Central vs. La Crosse tonight shouldn't be a thing but one long, hard battle.

For lightning speed and aggressiveness, few teams can match this red-clad La Crosse five. Peters, veteran forward, is a whiplike passer and an accurate shot, while Gantenbein, guard, is the kick behind every La Crosse rally. When these two lads can't drum up a little scoring business, someone must have taken the baskets down.

Eau Claire took a rest yesterday, scarcely waking up to wallop Ashland, 15-9. As a favorite the Eau Claire five looked good for fourth place, but who can tell what may happen when it meets Kenosha tonight.

Wisconsin High, hot on the trail of the consolation trophy, nearly got trimmed by Laona last night. Only a strong rally saved the Badger preps' hide in the last half.

Will Hold Final
Boxing Bouts in Gym Tomorrow

Seven boxing bouts, at weights ranging from 118 pounds to 185 pounds, have been scheduled as the grand finale of the all-university boxing tourney which is to be held in the Armory at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow.

Important among the bouts is the one between 'Dynamite' Mansfield, and Mike Zingale, runner-up in the A. A. U. tourney in 1924, at 185 pounds. Mansfield has yet to meet his match in the university, while Zingale, though he has not been active recently, is considered one of the best mitt-swingers to be found in this district.

What promises to be another fast match will take place between S. Sweet and A. Curreri at 128 pounds. Both men are extremely clever boxers. R. Morse, the only last year's champion to defend his title, will meet a dangerous opponent in W. Goodsett. This match is to be fought at 118 pounds.

BERG PLANS GREEK
RELAYS FOR APRIL 2

The winter intramural sports season nearly over, George Berg, director of athletics, is now planning the last big event of the indoor season, the interfraternity and sorority relays, to be held on Saturday, April 2.

All men, including varsity letter men, are privileged to enter the relays and an exceptionally large turn-out is expected this year.

Sororities are expected to select the captain of their teams today or tomorrow and to have their names in Mr. Berg's office. The captains will then select their running mates on the team.

TANK TEAM GOES TO URBANA FOR CONFERENCE MEET

Capt. Ratcliffe, Herschberger, Kratz Have Good Chances

With most of Wisconsin's athletic teams inactive, the Badger swimming squad left for Urbana yesterday morning at 3:30 to uphold their prestige in the water. The meet, starting today, will continue the remainder of the week until Saturday night when the finals will be held.

The Badger team with a successful season of 4 victories and 2 defeats, expects to be the dark horse of the meet. Although defeated twice this year, the squad feels that in the final reckoning they can counter more points than most of their rivals.

Joe Steinauer, swimming coach, was last seen leaving for Urbana with a broad smile on his lips, and the words, "We'll show 'em." In order to accomplish this, Steinauer took the following men to compete in these events:

200 yard relay—Ratcliffe, Pederson, Clark, Herschberger.

Back Stroke—Kratz, Bardeen.

50 yard dash—Herschberger, and Clark.

Dives—Hattleberg, Ratcliffe.

Medley Relay—Pederson, Kratz, Herschberger.

Senior, Junior
Women's Teams
Win First Tilts

The first round of the women's intramural basketball tournament was played off at Lathrop gymnasium Tuesday night.

The highest individual score of 33 points was made by Mabel Butler, forward on the senior team. The seniors won from the sophomores, 43 to 23 in a one-sided game, the second half of which was marked by fast playing.

The junior-freshman teams were more evenly matched and the game resulted in a final score of 21 to 10 in favor of the juniors. The contest was hotly contested throughout, and neither team had a margin until the fourth quarter. The enthusiasm displayed in both games was evidenced by the fact that a total of 29 fouls were called, including technical as well as personal fouls.

The line-ups follow:

Sophomores (23) Seniors (43)
Meyer f. Butler
Flint f. Marion
Fuller c. Thomas
Boyer c. Fritz
Ringe g. Kruenzi
Blegen g. Will
Field goals, Seniors, Butler, 14; Marion, 5. Sophomores, Meyer, 2; Flint, 7.

We Need More Athletic Facilities

A long string of freshman and sophomore men are walking glumly down State street between the chemistry building and the red castle which is called a gymnasium and armory.

It is 11 o'clock in the morning.

Like a chain gang they walk. Their steps are slow and dragging. They seem to have lost all their pep and enthusiasm. For during the next hour they must take their required "gym."

This institution of varied learning requires among other things that all freshmen and sophomore men take gym three hours a week. The purpose of these three hours according to the red "Introductory Bulletin" which is handed to all incoming freshmen, is as follows:

To promote the physical development of the students, by contributing to their health, organic vigor and good physical habits; by providing an incentive and an opportunity for every student to secure at least one hour of physical activity daily as a balance to the sedentary demands of university life; and by conserving the social and moral values of games and sports and securing to every student the fullest opportunity for their practice.

Does it accomplish this end?

Ask any freshman who is taking general gym. He will probably look at you for a moment and then turn away with a grunt of despair at your ignorance.

The general gym class lasts thirty minutes. During this time the class ranging in number from 60 to 100 first goes through a series of setting-up exercises. This is followed by a game, usually a relay of some kind, customarily meaningless and senseless. After this come the famous efficiency tests. Each member of the class tries to climb a rope or chin himself or risks his neck on a forward dive and roll. The efficiency tests concluded for the day, the class is marched about the room like a bunch of wooden soldiers. Then they are dismissed.

Some exercise! Some development of physical vigor! Some blah, blah!

The department of physical education functions like the rest of our modern educational system—with a firm belief in the theory of compulsion. Instead of permitting us to tend to our own physical well-being, and allowing us to choose the games we want to play, the department of physical education is making physical development a drudgery instead of a pleasure.

The construction of 50 to 100 new tennis courts, a few golf courses, a couple of bathing beaches, and baseball diamonds would do more to better the physical standards of Wisconsin students than all of the gym instructors in the world.

A youth left to his own devices usually manages to take care of himself physically. There is always a crowd waiting to get a chance to play tennis. Police of Madison are kept busy arresting young men who want to play ball—and who do so in the streets, there being no other place for them to play.

Instead of allowing modern students to take their exercise when they have time for it and desire it—our department of physical education crams it down the throats of the freshmen and sophomores—all to no effect.

Age will not admit that youth once in a while uses his head for other things than to top a hat on. But, strangely, youth does!

Provide the facilities, and unorganized physical exercises will prove a greater benefit to the majority of Wisconsin students than the best the gym department has to offer. It certainly will not cost any more than the maintenance of a costly staff of physical education experts.

Give us more tennis courts, some golf courses, a few baseball diamonds, and a couple good bathing beaches. Allow us to play when we want and where we wish and the University of Wisconsin men will average higher physically and mentally than any other university.

This is not a criticism of the athletic department. George Little and his assistants are doing the best they can with the facilities they have at hand. They need the state behind them if the athletic program of the university is to go through.

We Can't Get Along Without Them

The editors of this paper are grieved to see how the work of the church and the minister is being discredited. The favorite national sport seems to be discrediting the clergy. So many persons are doing it. Sinclair Lewis and Aimee McPherson are doing their bits.

We hope that we may be preserved from those forces which are attempting to discredit the minister, because we are convinced that the minister, or his equivalent, is here to stay.

Narrow-minded fundamentalists are doing their share in discrediting the minister. The profits of religion, the shallow emotion of religion, the greed and worldliness of religion, the fanatical ignorance of religion, the hypocrisy of religion, and the flood of books which seek to make Jesus the ideal salesman! Would that we could be rid of all these things!

We need the minister, the priest, or whatever you wish to call him. If we were deprived of his services, we would have to invent an office to succeed him—a Curator of Souls, perhaps.

Humanity cannot live without outside help. The strongest must have props to lean on sometimes. Some of us could not live without the anodyne of a religious belief. It isn't important what kind. The creed is not important, neither is the conception of God the believer may have. The mortal mind reaches out and hopes at least that there is a permanent world, a world where truth is truth, the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow.

The outsider, one who can say and do things that the family cannot do for itself, must come in. The physician administers to the body, and someone must administer to the soul. Someone must do the latter. If the minister doesn't do it some one else must.

We rejoice in the fact that for every orator of the Billy Sunday type, there are a hundred obscure, faithful, little men visiting the sick and burying the dead, without the fees and without the glory.

Watson, the Needle

The room was dark. In the center reared a bulking, foreign shadow—the dimly revealed figure of a man standing at the foot of Myra's bed. Instantly her hand reached out for the button. The lights blinked into brilliance. Then she recoiled—startled—mortified. For there stood—

This, my friends, is a picture of college life—true college life—according to the True Story Magazine. The above quoted sentences come from a book entitled "The Truth About a College Girl" which is being offered to university students in an attempt to get them to subscribe to the True Story Magazine.

The True Story Magazine, if your education has been so severely neglected that you have never heard of it, is a McFadden publication which is said to have been acclaimed by thousands of clergymen as a power for good, and according to its advertising department aims to spread the truth about life and teach the younger generation to understand the facts of life and thus avoid its pitfalls. It can also be found on a majority of the study tables of our women students.

Undoubtedly some of our university women drink and smoke and do other things which our moralists preach against. But just how the True Story Magazine—which is written by hack writers living in New York at $40 a story—tends to better the moral standing of modern youth is more than a hard-working editorial writer can figure out.

NOW BEGINNING THE FIRST OF THE PETER RABBIT TOURS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES!

Peter Rabbit In The Alps

"Dear dear," said Peter Rabbit as he mopped his brow, "This Alp climbing is very tiresome."

"A little," admitted the guide as he looked around him, "Say d'ya know where we are?"

"Is this a game?" asked Peter curiously. "We're in the Alps."

The guide blushed ever so little, "Of course," he said, softly, "But, do you realize that we are near the place where they make the world's greatest echoes?"

"Not really," said Peter, "Let's see you echo."

The guide threw out his chest so Peter, always helpful, ran over and assisted him to get it back. Then the guide began to echo.

"Olly-olly-yoo-hoo!"

"F'veven's sakes," said Peter, "Now where does the echo come in?"

And sure enough, they were. Peter could hear the echoes bouncing back and forth over the mountains. Suddenly something hit Peter in the back of the neck.

"Say," he yelled, "Why don'tcha holler 'fore'?"

The guide began to giggle, "Oh that was just one of the echoes coming back."

Now, as Peter had just yelled 'fore' they sat down to wait for the echo to come back.

They waited and waited, and finally the echo did return. But, Peter had yelled so loud, the echo had gone so far, and it had hit such rough spots that very little came back.

"Three ninety-eight!" came back very faintly.

NEXT WEEK—Peter in Scotland or how he nearly starved to death.

Lil' Bobby pulled the cutest thing the other day, he says. "Do you know what's good for falling hair?"

"No," we answers real snappy like that, "What is?"

"A cigar box," answers this victim of cokes.

Comprenez-vous? Non? Well, you see, it's like this—he means that you put the falling hair in the cigar box or something like that. C'mon now, laff.

of the economics involved.

Birth control is not solely a moral issue. It involves pertinent social and economic questions which cannot be disregarded by anyone who looks at the question in a fair light. How foolish it seems to us today that the taking of interest on money was once considered a moral question. Perhaps the present bigoted and blind opposition to a sane treatment of sex and birth control will appear equally ridiculous in the future—if it does not already appear so to men with their eyes and minds open.

M. A. L.

ST. AUGUSTINE WRITES AGAIN Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

Perhaps nothing illustrates so beautifully the appalling difference between the thinking of Father Hengell and that of the intelligent well-informed student of today than the statement he made recently to this effect: That if sexual relations were directed to the express purpose of procreating children, they would be nothing more than cases of mutual masturbation. You see, the good man lives in an entirely different world of reality and assumptions.

I should like to ask Father Hengell what else sexual relations can be. He probably thinks that young people get married for the same reason that certain people dig ditches: for an end in no way related to the means. This local savior of ours knows theology much better than psychology, it appears. At all events, he conceals what knowledge he may have of psychology most effectively. There is no question but that there must be children, if we must satisfy our insistent longing that our own kind shall continue through the future; but all things exist in degrees.

Readers' Say-So

(Continued on page 4) about things (Anglo-Saxons have a weakness for kidding themselves, anyway); a thing is a fact, or it isn't. And if modern psychology is sure of anything at all, it is this: that the sexual instinct as such comes first, and the parental instinct follows as a necessary consequence in most cases. There is no use rationalizing.

But I cannot bring myself to think that Father Hengell is as naive as all that. I am rather inclined to think that the implicit assumption behind all of his arguments is that we should have more children so that there will be more souls to glorify the goodness of God.

ST. AUGUSTINE

WANTS TO MEET THE SISTER ST. AUGUSTIN

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

The recent letter published in the Cardinal and signed by St. Augustin will, no doubt, excite unprecedented comment and criticism. Those representing that Christian and church-going element which seems to be fast disappearing on the campus, might consider it in the light of extreme sacrilegiousness. I, who lay no claim to the fastidious sophistry professed by the composer, regard his composition, of all those previously published in this column as the paramount example of that asinity which he so deeply deplores.

The W. C. T. U. is, at least earnest, and vigorous in its endeavors to realize the success of its enterprise. It has worked untiringly for years to realize prohibition, and though I do not approve of prohibition in the form it now exists, I can at least recognize the value of the work which the members of this organization have carried on. They have sought earnestly to construct, they have sacrificed their time and thrown themselves open to ridicule, merely that they might realize, what they thought, greater morality, and greater happiness in their country.

It is much easier to disparage and destroy the work of others, than to construct. And was not the self-avowed purpose of the writer to harm more than he benefited? Ah, we have in our midst a veritable Lucifer—a Beelzebub for the ages. Damn the W. C. T. U. Why, may I ask, should he desire to condemn forever to infernal depths an organization founded upon far more proper laws of morality and conduct than his own appear to be? We have here a deplorable situation.

Give me the opportunity of meeting the case-hardened and sinister St. Augustin who has drank of life to the bitter, bitter dregs.

POOR RICHARD

ASK QUESTION OF REV. HENGELL

Editor, the Daily Cardinal: In connection with the report of the very able sermon of the Rev. Doctor Hengell, I think his work would be much more effective if we could have information upon the following points.

1. Does the Church hold to an "absolute" doctrine of right and wrong which needs no intellectual defense?

2. It is commonly said that the Protestant churches get their members by the vulgar process of evangelism; the Church of Rome through the process of breeding and then training the youth. Is the position taken upon birth control governed in any way by the population policy of the Church?

3. Does the Church expect to persuade people to abandon the practice of birth control or does it merely wish to impress upon their consciences that it is a great moral wrong? Some members of the Catholic Faith who practice birth control admit that it is wrong but state they find it necessary to do many things they consider evil. Can such a person consistently remain within the Church?

4. Does the Rev. Hengell agree with the position of Mr. H. L. Mencken that birth control is undesirable because it is advisable to have a vast horde of ignorant people so as to provide an abundance of cheap labor for American industry?

5. Does the Rev. Hengell have any reputable evidence to show whether birth control is practiced more by unintelligent than by intelligent members of his or any other faith?

These questions are asked not in a spirit of fault-finding, but in a sincere desire, by one uninitiated in theology, to come to a basis of understanding with his fellow citizens.

R. F. G.

URGES DISCUSSION OF BOTH SIDES

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

Father Hengell is preaching to a thinking university audience, and not to ignorant serfs herded into church during the middle ages. This is a time when people outside of the clergy possess elements of learning, and when the dictates of the church are not being accepted as all together divine and immutable. The absurd statement that there is only one side to the question of birth control may have passed for truth many hundreds of years ago, but the world wags on, and changing times call for changing doctrines.

The commandments delivered in the thunder and lightning of Sinai, of course, remain essentially true today and always will, but others are no longer thoroughly applicable and the attempts to preserve them only call for a sacrifice of common sense at the shrine of an outworn orthodoxy.

When the world was young and land was plentiful, when the nomadic instinct could find limitless satisfaction, when tribes were in constant conflict, and when their strength depended on their numbers, then women could and were expected to bear as many children as there were grapes on a vine. But the world of today is small. Overpopulated sections cannot solve their problem by sending out vast waves of humanity, as did the Tartars, the Slavs, and the Goths. Sixty million Japanese are confined in an area the size of the state of California. Is there here, Father Hengell, only one side to the birth control question?

A common laboring man has two children. He can hardly provide for them the necessities of life, let alone the other things that make life worth while. The whole family lives in pitiful sordidness, and yet you would tell them to bring up more children, or else forego the pleasure of sexual relationship. Here is another woman who has given birth to one child, and is told by the doctor that another one would kill her. You tell the same to her.

Here is another woman who is deathly afraid of child birth. It killed her mother, and the cries of a travailing woman heard in youth left an indelible impression on her. Your doctrine would deny this person the pleasure attached to marriage, or would force her into nine months of fear and agony, and end it with possible death.

There is something cruel, extremely cruel and selfish, in a doctrine which, irrespective of modern times and individual conditions, will coldly and uncompromisingly demand the greatest sacrifice a woman can make.

We are not, however, advocating birth control. We are merely showing that there is more than one side to this question. Birth control may be harmful to those who practice it. It may lead to illicit love when the barrier of fear of consequences is removed.

It may lead to marriages which will be nothing more than legal prostitutions, and a rifling of the pleasures of life without regard to its responsibilities. This is a two-sided affair, Father Hengell, and when you warned your listeners not to attend lectures stressing a viewpoint opposite your own, you admitted it. When you have fears that a doctrine instilled through years and years of teaching might be destroyed by a two-hour talk, you admit that there is some unsoundness about it. Anything positively true could stand such a test.

Russell's Statements

Arouse Violent

Protest

(Continued from Page One) little of its own. Lenders in this country demand some kind of assurance for their money, and hence it was only natural that investors in China should ask security for their loan. China granted a mortgage on its import duties.

"These 5 per cent duties are insufficient to make any inroads into the principal of the loan, and China is not averse to making definite statements about the cancellation of debts," said Dean Russell.

The speaker went on to talk of the transport duties which are levied on goods within the country, and gave the impression that China is dealing unfairly with its creditors in not making available the funds obtained from this source.

Jumps To Feet

At this point one of the Chinese students jumped to his feet and called, "Dean Russell," but the speaker either did not hear or declined to recognize the interruption.

Dean Russell admitted that the western world unquestionably exploited China in the early days. He agreed, too, that it must be humiliating to China to have the foreign concessions on its land, but he added that the foreign nations are willing to give them up when China is able to take care of them.

One of the last points made by the speaker was that someone somewhere is fanning the smouldering flames of distrust.

"Indubitable evidence that it comes from Russia is available," he said. "Russian soviet military chiefs are in the Chinese academies, and the Sun Yat Sen university was organized at Moscow primarily to teach the principles of communism to the Chinese."

"The dean then pointed out that Chinese philosophy is not prone to accept communism. The Chinese unit is the family, he said, and not the individual.

Bloodless Warfare.

In concluding, Dean Russell said that the reason we read of little bloodshed in China is that the conflicts are generally bloodless, and that activities take place only when victory is certain or when inactivity means political death. Most of the fighting, he said, is done by telegraph.

This statement and the final fling of frivolity was all that was necessary to bring the Chinese students to their feet in a storm of protest.

"Dean Russell started well," said one of them after the lecture, "but he drifted far."

All persons entering the hall to hear the talk were presented with a copy of a manifesto drawn up by the 33 Chinese students in attendance at the university. The paper states their attitude in regard to the state of affairs in China today, and contains a pledge of allegiance to the Nationalist government.

Dr. Schafer Will Show Gold Rush Sketches

Dr. Joseph Schafer, in his lecture to be given at the Historical library Thursday, March 31, at 3:30 p. m. will show slides of 50 original sketches of scenes and incidents on the California trail in the year of the gold rush, 1849. The drawings are unsigned, and Dr. Schafer has had an exciting inquiry as to who the artist may have been. The lecturer will discuss the evidence which points to a certain individual as the one to whom we are probably indebted for these interesting memorials of the California trail.

Set 457 Tons of Steel as Ex-Frosh Tosses Hot Rivets

ous platform of planks down from the fourth floor.

But Ed and his buddies on the riveting crew can't quite catch up with the steel gang; next week there will be two groups of riveters pounding away on the steel skeleton, and Ed will be sending twice as many scorching rivets whizzing half the length of the building.

Two days past, when Ed was laying down a particularly furious barrage for the crew, one of the rivets went caroming off its course. Down it sailed like a smoking hot message from the nether-world squarely through the window in J. M. Bruce's office in the university. Y. M. C. A. Mr. Bruce says he wasn't in the room at the time.

Although there have been several kegs of rivets delivered to the building site, another rush order for an additional 1,200 was sent yesterday. Some connections require as many as 28 rivets, and the two eight-and-a-half ton beams which support the roof of Alumni hall each have 76 rivets holding them in place.

Gene, Ray, and Harvey McCoy, three half-breed Indian brothers from up north are the cause of the rush order for rivets and the summoning of reinforcements to the riveting crew. Gene, Ray and Harvey are working on the structural steel gang, and they have been hoisting and bolting beams into place so rapidly that one riveting crew can't match their pace.

The three Indian brothers, who are the main cog in the steel crew, have placed 457 tons of structural steel since they began to work this winter. They are past masters at suspending the beams so that they will be at exactly the right angle when the crane holds them aloft.

When the crane has run a girder up to the correct level and guy-ropes have swayed it into the right niche, two of the brothers scramble up the vertical beams to bolt the new one into place for the riveters. By clamping their knees to the inside of the I-beams and twisting their feet outside of the flange, they manage to scale up the five floors to the roof supports which are now being placed.

Although it will be at least another three weeks before the McCoys and their helpers are through with steel work, the stone masons have already pushed their work to the first floor level on the Commons unit. Exactly 18 carloads of assorted building stone, 100,000 common backing brick, and 10,000 partition tile are either on the ground or actually in the building now.

Several engineering students, according to the men in the construction office, have been examining the building with a view to gathering material for their theses. The steel work has attracted particular attention thus far.

The sub titles in "McFadden's Flats" add much to the humor of the picture. They are funny without being crude and without descending to the pun.
