Dedication

To the Wisconsin Spirit

Wot wel all peple that thys booke withal
It be yet writ with what we wot of stile,
Standes now to witnes bear whate'er befall,
Can it but speeke true words, ne naught of gyle,
Of howe we wrought, the which it dide comple
Ne for oure fame, ne to ourseln elate,
Syne in oure heartes a sperit dwelt the while
In whose own servisse, to thys sperit grate,
Ne else, thys booke in humblenes we dedicate.

JOHN EUGENE DAVIES

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN EUGENE DAVIES was born in South Wales, Europe, on the 23d of April, 1839, and died January 23d, 1900. When two years of age his parents moved to the city of New York, where he was sent to the public schools until twelve years of age, and then entered the Free Academy, now the University of the City of New York. In 1855 he came with his parents to Wisconsin, studying as best he could, while teaching winters and doing farm work in summers. He entered the sophomore class of Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wisconsin, in 1859, and graduated three years later with honors in pure and applied mathematics. After receiving his baccalaureate degree, he entered upon the study of medicine, thus keeping in touch with the sciences, of which he was so fond. When President Lincoln called for more troops he enlisted as a private in the twenty-first regiment Wisconsin volunteer infantry. His record as a soldier was varied, interesting and highly creditable. He was put on duty by Major-General Buell in one of the hospitals of Louisville; was afterwards appointed sergeant-major of his regiment; served six months on picket duty on the top of Lookout Mountain, Tennessee; marched to Atlanta, Georgia, and back to Chattanooga, and afterwards saw Atlanta burned. He was recommended for promotion, but his commission as first lieutenant did not reach him until after the battle of Bentonville. He finally accompanied Sherman on his famous "March to the Sea," and returned home with his regiment, having served three years without a day's furlough and with a war record without a blemish. He received the degree of doctor of medicine in the spring of 1868 at the Chicago Medical College. In August of the same year he came to Madison to enter upon his duties as Professor of Natural History and Chemistry in the University of Wisconsin, having already occupied a professorship in Chicago Medical College for a year. In 1874 the title of his chair was changed to that of Astronomy and Physics, and in 1891 was changed to that of Electricity and Magnetism and Mathematical Physics, which chair he held at the time of his death.

Dr. Davies was a charter member of the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts, and Letters, and was for many years its general secretary. He was also active and efficient upon the United States coast survey and on the general geodetic survey of Wisconsin. It was through his intercession that a magnetic observatory was established upon the grounds of the University under the professor's general supervision.

He was married in March, 1866, to Miss Anna Burt, of Chicago, who died a number of years ago leaving him no children. He was married again, March 31, 1891, to Miss Olive M. Thayer, of Madison. The widow and a son still survive.

Professor Parkinson says of him: "Dr. Davies was a man of kindly nature, of deep sincerity, and of warm and generous impulses. He was a man domestic in his life and habits, as gentle as a child, and as true as steel to the demands of honor and the claims of friendship. Coming to the University in his early manhood, he gave his maturer life—his very best years—to its service."

JOHN EUGENE DAVIES, LL.D.

New Members of the Faculty.

CALEB NOTBOHM HARRISON, Ph. D.

CALEB NOTBOHM HARRISON, Acting Professor of Machine Design, was born in Milwaukee in 1862. In 1879 he entered the University of Wisconsin from the University of Michigan and graduated in 1882 with the degree of B. C. E. Since graduation he has taught in the West Side High School, Milwaukee, and also engaged in Engineering practice for about six years. In 1898 he received the degree of Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University. He was appointed to his present position in 1899.

Professor Harrison has published several papers on the wave lengths of different metals, these researches being carried on with Professor Rolands of Johns Hopkins University. The accuracy of their results has recently received acknowledgement from the European societies, and especially from Professor Hasselberg of Sweden, who pronounces the results even more accurate than his own.

ROBERT WILLIAMS WOOD, A.B.

ROBERT WILLIAMS WOOD was born at Concord, Massachusetts, May 2, 1868. He entered Harvard in 1887 and graduated in 1891 with the degree of A.B. He then spent a year at Johns Hopkins, and the following two years as Honorary Fellow at the University of Chicago. 1895 and 1896 were spent at Berlin University, and from there he came to the University of Wisconsin as Instructor in Physics in 1897. He was promoted to an Assistant Professorship in Physics in April, 1899.

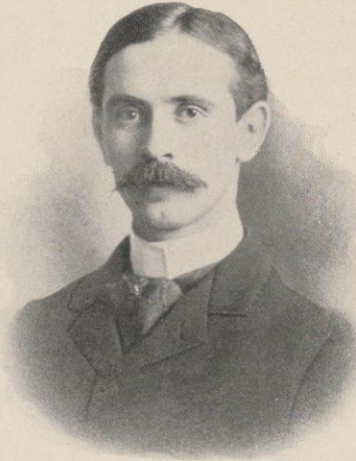

Professor Wood is making a special study of light, and several of his papers on this subject have been published in philosophic magazines. His method of colored photography has attracted marked attention, and he recently lectured on this subject in London, before the Society of Arts, the Royal Photographic Society, the Physical Society, the London Camera Club, and also before the Royal Society, on the photographing of sound waves.

Professor Wood is a Fellow of the London Physical Society, and a member of the the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Physical Society, and the Astronomical and Astrophysical Society.

PAUL SAMUEL REINSCH, Ph.D.

PAUL SAMUEL REINSCH, Assistant Professor of Political Science, was born in Milwaukee in 1869. He attended Concordia College, which he left in 1886, then taught for two years, and in 1888 entered the University of Wisconsin, where he graduated in 1892 with the degree of B. A. He completed the law course in the university in 1894, after spending a short time in Washington in the study of law. After a year's practice in Milwaukee he was elected instructor in the university, and was also appointed extension lecturer in History and Political Science. He was granted his degree of Ph.D. in 1898, and was promoted to the Assistant Professorship of Political Science in 1899. The summers of 1890, 1894 and 1898 were spent in study at the University of Berlin and in the libraries of Rome, Florence and Paris.

Professor Reinsch is author of "Common Law in the American Colonies," and "World Politics at the End of the Nineteenth Century," and has also written many articles for the current magazines.

BALTHASAR HENRY MEYER, Ph. D.

BALTHASAR HENRY MEYER was born May 28, 1866, at Mequon, Ozaukee County, Wisconsin. In 1893 he graduated from the Oshkosh Normal, having previously taught in the Public Schools of Fredonia and Port Washington. In the meantime he attended the summer school of the University of Wisconsin, graduating in 1894 with the degree of B. L. He then studied for a year in the University of Berlin; in 1895 was made honorary fellow and extension lecturer in the University of Wisconsin. The following year he was made a fellow, and in 1897 received his degree of Ph. D. The next year he was appointed secretary of the extension department and Instructor in Sociology, and is at present Secretary of the committee on accredited schools, and Assistant Professor in Sociology. He has published several books on railway legislation and administration, and has two works now in press. At present he is investigating for the Committee of Fifty the social functions performed by fraternal and benevolent societies in the United States.

JAMES FRANCIS AUGUSTINE PYRE, Ph.D.

JAMES FRANCIS AUGUSTINE PYRE was born in Rock County, Wis., December 20, 1871. He prepared for college at Albion Academy and entered the University of Wisconsin in 1888, graduating four years later with the degree of B. L.

While in the University as a student he was very active in athletics, rowing on the 'Varsity crew for three seasons, and playing tackle on the foot ball team for four seasons. He was also a member of Hesperia, and as Wisconsin's representative won second place in the Western Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Contest in 1892.

Upon graduation he was made a Fellow in English Literature, and was promoted to an instructorship the following year. In 1897 he received his degree of Ph. D. and in 1899 was promoted to the Assistant Professorship of English Literature.

ANDREW ROBINSON WHITSON, B. S.

ANDREW ROBINSON WHITSON was born in Minnesota in 1870. His preparatory work, before entering the University of Wisconsin in 1890, was in Carlton College, Northfield, Minnesota. In 1892 he went to Chicago University, where he received the degree of B. S. in 1894. He continued at Chicago for a year longer, taking graduate works and was then appointed principal of the Beloit High School. He held this position until 1899, when he returned to the University of Chicago for work in Chemistry. It was while still in Chicago

University that he received his present appointment, in April, 1900, an Assistant Professor of Agricultural Physics in the University of Wisconsin.

Alma Mater

---

HE storm rages wild without, the winds blow cold;

Beauteous Spring brings gladness in her train,

Summer with garlands wreaths the forest old

And envious Autumn ends fair Summer's reign.

The seasons die and ever live again

And always all, with wondrous beauties rare,

To our beloved college home proclaim

Prosperity, for our alma mater fair.

Fair Hills, the home of our college, our queen---

Earth's most beauteous spot is ever thy throne;

In Winter's mantle, or in Summer's green,

Thy wonders excel, thy beauties are known.

Long may'st thou reign, and may thy sons e'er be

Loyal and true, fair Wisconsin, to thee.

Four of The 10,000

I GLANCED around as three girls in golf capes, and one in a coat, settled themselves on the top board of the bleachers as comfortably as possible. Three of them pulled the hoods of their capes up over their heads, and the fourth turned up her coat-collar, and tried vainly to make it reach her hat behind. It had begun to rain, and there was an hour to wait before the game should begin. For a time, they said very little, as they watched the slowly filling bleachers, or frowned over the wet and slippery field.

The girl in the coat was trying to tuck her skirts around her feet to keep them warm. "You have so much less of feet to get cold than I have," she said plaintively to the girl in the blue cape. "'Tis glorious to suffer for one's country," murmured the girl in the brown one, as she tried to get a little farther under the umbrella. "I only hate to see my ribbons rained on," said the first speaker, looking down anxiously at her cardinal streamer. "I'm so afraid it will look like maroon when it's wet." The girl in the green cape tooted her horn cheerfully, and the girl in blue remarked in a hoarse voice, "I wish I hadn't yelled when those Chicago people went by—my voice would have lasted so much longer." "I'm sorry for those poor creatures," said the girl in the coat, pityingly, looking down on some people wearing maroon ribbon, who were wading through the mud below her. "Here they've come all the way from Chicago in the rain, to see their team defeated." "I'm shivering from excitement," announced the girl in green as she wound her cape more tightly about her. "Look, girls—quick—there's the Chicago team," cried the girl in blue, and they all turned to stare at the little band of red-sweated men, each with a big white "C" on his chest. "But how—how enormous they are!" faltered the girl in brown, and there was silence for a moment. "Girls," said the girl in green solemnly, "Wisconsin must win." Then the four of them began to sing "Varsity," softly, under their breath. "Hark, there's the band," one of them suddenly announced, and in an instant they were on their feet waving their colors wildly, until the men had marched around the gridiron. Then our team came on the field, and I forgot the girls.

Once, during the game, I glanced at them. The girl in blue was trying to cry, "Hold 'em, Wisconsin!" as she leaned forward, and nearly tipped over the girl in the coat, who was watching the play with wide eyes, and lips growing closer with every yard Chicago gained. The girl in brown had forgotten everything, and was giving "U—rah—rah," with all her might, while the girl in green half sobbed a hoarse little defiant "Wisconsin!" as the "Chicago—go" rose above the other noises from the grand-stand.

I saw them once after the game. A couple of Chicago men were near me, and were taunting the crowd around them. "Where are any Wisconsin people now, anyhow?" one of them shouted, when suddenly a couple of horns were blown deafeningly, close behind his ear. I turned as he turned, and saw the four girls standing there, with their eyes blazing, and their cardinal streaming in the wind. The Chicago man laughed, a little shame-facedly, lifted his hat, and then the crowd closed in around them, and they disappeared.

PROF. SLAUGHTER:—"You often hear the eyes called the doors of the soul."

MISS FOLEY:—"But they generally say windows of the soul, don't they?"

PROF. SLAUGHTER:—"O, I suppose they do; I can't contradict a personal testimony like that."

There was an instructor named Brauer
 Who never was known to look sauer,
 He flunked the front bench
 And spoke fluent French
 Reciting ten-thousand an hauer.

There was a professor named Slaughter,
 (He has a small two-year-old daughter),
 He once lost his feet
 And fell in the street
 Exactly the place he ought naughter.

His hat and his books lay besuyed him
 And woe to the person who guyed him!
 "My! what a fine slighed!"
 He said as he sighed,
 But no one the pleasure denyed him.

“Here’s to the Girls!”

“Say, Hal, Miss Arlington’s a peach.”

“Glad you like it;—as the girls say when they get a new gown. But I thought you were bucking Analytics, Tommy.”

“I was, but the eccentricity of this ellipse made me think of Miss Arlington. Jove! she can talk a man’s head off; she doesn’t give a fellow a chance to get a word in edgewise.”

“Oh, she’s all right for parties, but Alice Maine is more my style of a girl.”

“Oh, don’t you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?” hummed the third young gentleman, who was smoking with his head buried in pillows, and his feet in the air.

“Dry up, Dick. If you knew her, you’d agree with me that she’s an all-right little girl. She isn’t run after by the men, because she doesn’t jolly them. I agree with the chap who said,—“If you want the best sort of a woman, take a woman’s woman.” And I never met a girl yet who wasn’t ready to say something nice about Alice. They say she’s downright unselfish.”

“Sweet Alice, with eye-es so brow-wn.” Hummed Dick sweetly.

“Oh, I say, let up. Why don’t you put us on to the girl you like, Dick?”

“There is a girl—” began Dick solemnly, taking his pipe from his mouth.

“You don’t say so?”

“Who’d a-thought it?”

“What are you giving us, old man?”

“Since when, Dick?”

“You don’t mean to say you know one?”

Dick put back his pipe, and went on smoking while the other men only chuckled a little.

“By-the-way, did you know that Nan Burton was putting her way through the Varsity? I just found it out the other night, Hal. There’s an out-of-sight girl. She has more common-sense to the square inch than any other girl here, and she’s a jolly good fellow, too. She puts up an awfully good game of tennis or golf, and skates like a fairy.”

Hal shrugged his shoulders. “She’s too much of a commander-in-chief to suit me. And then, the way she talks about carving up pussy-cats, and hating babies is too much for me.” And Hal went back to his Latin.

Dick twisted his head around to look at them. “There is a girl,”—he said gently; and Tom’s rather disgusted, and Hal’s rather scornful air, changed to a laugh.

“Is it the same one, Dickie?”

Dick nodded slowly and settled back on the cushions again, while Hal and Tom went back to work. There was a moments silence. Then—

“Speaking of girls, Hal, isn’t that Blanche Stevens a good-looker, though? She looks just as stunning on the Hill as at the Hops, don’t you think?”

“It’s mostly her get-up.” Hal remarked sententiously. “She has got good eyes, though, and knows how to use them. But she flunks systematically in classes, and for real prettiness she isn’t in it with Miss Moore.”

“Oh, stuff, Miss Moore is a regular putty-face.”

“There is a girl,—” said Dick hastily.

“Then, for the love of Mike, tell us about her, or keep still,” and Hal fired a pillow at him, with unnecessary vigor.

Dick dodged the pillow, took down his feet, knocked the ashes from his pipe, and going over to the fire-place, leaned on the mantel and gazed around him. "Are you sure you're all through?" he enquired.

"Yes, spiel away," and the other two leaned back to listen. Dick could be a clown, or a poet, or an orator, at will, and it might be something good.

Dick gazed reflectively into the fire, and began slowly. "There is a girl" he said, "who is liked by the men and the women, the old people and the children. Her father depends on her, her brothers and sisters swear by her, the children worship her, the women love her, her grandmother approves of her, and the men like to take her to parties, or anywhere else." Dick paused a moment, and then went on. "More than this,—the dressmaker and the maids and the servants and the grocers and the bakers and the butchers and the candle-stick-makers and the dry-goods clerks and the men that give her their seats in street-cars,—all like her. She can talk well, without neglecting to listen,—she is sympathetic, but not sentimental,—earnest, but not solemn,—sensible, but not uninteresting,—a good student, but not conceited,—energetic, but not boisterous. She can dance well, study well, sew well, dress well, and can see a joke quickly. Above all, she has tact, she is at home everywhere, and she is always happy." Dick went on more slowly. "Her mind is strong, her heart is great, and,—" then he stopped altogether, and stood looking into the fire. "That isn't all about her," he said.

Hal and Tom laughed a little. "Hal, how long since Dick had it so bad!" Tom enquired.

"I'm not in love." Dick was still quite sober.

"Well, then you're a fool, because you ought to be. Just give me a chance with that lady. But I wouldn't have any show," and Hal laughed a little ruefully.

"No, I'm not in love yet." Then suddenly Dick faced around, with a broad smile. "You see, boys," he said, "I never met her."

Advice—To a Sophomore

Let all thy thoughts be noble,
Let all thy words be wise,
Let all thy hopes be fixed upon
A mansion in the skies.
Beware of Tommy's crackers,
Look out for Hausman's cheese,
Abhor good cheer which includes beer
And don't catch cold or sneeze.

This constant grinding day by day
Is polishing our minds
To shining mirrors, where we may
Behold the varied kinds
Of things that men have done and do,
And gaze our greedy fill;
But I don't think of this, do you,
While climbing up the Hill.

I always think the Hill is steep
And much too long as well,
On mornings when I oversleep,
For then the tower-bell
Booms slowly forth the hour of eight
In tones that bode me ill;
I can't see why it doesn't wait
Till I get up the Hill.

Again, sometimes when I have spent
Long, midnight hours in toil,
(Oft while my head in slumber bent
The lamp burned out the oil),
I'm sure I'll reel my lesson off
With pugilistic skill,
So pity fills me for the "Prof."
While climbing up the Hill.

I like to guess the thoughts behind
The faces of the crowd,
For some are cruel, and some are kind
Some, too, are meek, some proud,
Some smile always, some wear a frown;
Seek what e'er sort I will,
The whole world meets me coming down
When I go up the Hill.

On Summer mornings through the trees
The classic pillars gleam;
Mendota murmurs with the breeze
The music of a dream;
The saucy squirrels beg for nuts;
All nature teases, till
A fellow slips away, and "cuts,"
While climbing up the Hill.

* * * * *

In other days, the days gone by,
They climbed the grassy slope,
Their present fraught with do and try,
Their future bright with hope.
In other days, the days to be,
When you and I are still,
Shall others do the same as we,
While climbing up the Hill.

“The Old Year and the New.”

Peggy sat looking out the window frowningly. On her lap lay a tablet of paper, which bore the inscription “The Old Year and the New.” She was biting a pencil, which had been newly sharpened, and, now and then, she poised it above the paper as if to write, but then went back again to biting it and gazing out the window. At last she drew a fierce little sigh and wrote hastily, below the title, “The good old year is dead.” She looked at this statement for a moment, and then scratched it out even more fiercely, threw down paper and pencil, and jumped up restlessly. “There simply isn't anything to say about it,” she said emphatically as she marched up and down the room. “Imagine the insipidity of a theme written on that. Everything that's worth saying about it has been said a million times. After all the artists have drawn pictures of the old year, and pictures of the new, and after all the authors have written stories and poems and dissertations on the subject, and after all the ordinary people in the world have thought about their blessings and their sins and made good resolutions, I'd like to know what I am expected to say. I danced the old year out,—I didn't have any wise and deep thoughts about it. Of course, a good deal has happened, but that doesn't help me a bit in writing about it. Oh dear!”

She flung herself disconsolately into the big armchair, and gazed into the fire. “A funny thing, isn't it?” she mused, “to draw a line through Time and Eternity and say,—‘Here is the end and here is the beginning of something,—pause and consider.’ It is just like the audacity of little human beings. If they only knew how, I wager they would put up some kind of a circus hoop for the Earth to go through when it turned around the three hundred and sixty-fifth time, so that it would feel the bump, too. But it goes on turning just the same, and never knows such an important thing has happened as the end of a Year. It would amuse it immensely if it should realize how solemnly people are taking it.” She laughed softly, and then frowned again. “Well, this isn't writing my theme. Suppose I write a conversation between the old dying year and the little new one. The old fellow could say,—‘Well, I've done my best to help the world along, and it doesn't seem to me to have changed much. I give it up,—maybe you can do better.’ And the little one would say,—‘But think how many people have wished each other a ‘Happy New Year’ and look at the good resolutions that have been made already. I am sure to get along well.’ And then the old year could smile grimly, and—oh nonsense,—that won't do at all.”

Peggy got up and took another turn up and down the room, and then sat down again. “I tell you what I'll do,” she said energetically: “I'll really think over what has happened to me, and perhaps it will suggest something to write about,” and she settled down into the chair more comfortably. The silence fell, and Peggy's face, with the firelight upon it, changed and changed, as the memories touched it. Now she smiled or laughed softly,—now her face grew dreamy, and she leaned her chin on her hands, and watched the flames with wide eyes,—now she frowned and sighed, and shook her head impatiently,—and at last, her face melted into sadness, and the tears welled up unbidden. The fire burned low, and the shadows deepened about her, and, at last, with a little start, she roused herself. She glanced over at the tablet as it lay on the table, and shook her head, smiling a little. “It is too late to write now. But it is just as well. No,” she said slowly,—“I could never tell them all those things,—no one else can ever know them: the memories, the happiness, the problems, the despairs, the efforts, the hopes, the beginnings, and the ends. It is my year, and I could not give it to anyone else if I would. I wonder if the new year,—” and then she forgot the tablet and the pencil again. But the “theme” was never written.

Fables Retold in Badger Terms.

H! I long to recline in the depths of the sea on a beautiful oyster bed,
To draw up the cool sheets of water o'er me and to rest my weary head
On the cool soft down in the depths of the deep,
Where you don't feel bad though you cannot sleep,
Because when you're there, you are dead.

A viper once addressed a file (of the Sphinx) and requested a meal. "You are crazy," replied the file, "to expect anything from one whose nature it is only to take from others."

"So the hours of Johnny Fisher as graduate manager are numbered," said B in a solemn impressive tone.

"What??? The hours of John Lincoln Fisher the Great, numbered??? He who arose in mass meeting assembled and said 'I thank you for the enthusiasm you have shown me'???? The hours of that man numbered??? How can that be?? asked S, looking with awe on the man before him who even dared to venture such a statement.

"Yea, verily I say unto you—truly they are numbered—from one to twelve there being sixty minutes—" but this was too much and the book thrown at the retreating figure wasted its energy against the closing door.

A certain university had a team which got stuck in a slough. The university got down on its knees and prayed to the gods to aid the team in pulling out. "Go on," said the gods, "get down and root with all your might and the team will come out through the ditch you make."

In his haste King David said,
"All men are liars!!" Had he read
The Cardinal, as we sometimes (?) do,
He'd swear that what he said was true.

rip em up Norwega!"

"Say, the queerest thing happened to me last night. You see, I was down to the boathouse to see two fellows row over to Maple Bluff after eleven o'clock." "Did they get it?" "It was on a wager, you know, and—" "How do you row a wager? Pair oars or singles?" "And I fell in with a friend—" "What? That's bad. Did you get very wet?" "And he soaked me for a cartwheel." "You poor fellow, tired you, didn't it?" "Well, I'm done if you're going to josh—" and he slammed the door as he went out.

"These be piping times," was the song of the men,
As they worked in the dust and the heat,
In laying, relaying, and laying again,
The water mains on State street.

A Cold Fact

This story is going the rounds as having taken place between a salesman in a city store and the wife of a newly married member of the faculty.

"What have you in water coolers?" asked the w. o. a n. m. m. o. t. f.

"Ice! water you looking for?" snapped out the salesman and the air was frosty.

"I wonder why I don't get the Aegis every month. It does not come regularly at all, only now and then a number."

"So much the better."

"How is that?"

"There's luck in odd numbers."

And the visiting Irishman soliloquizes: "Thru f'r ye, me la-ad, and it's meself as is thihkin' that with Perfessor Moike Malachy's patint blackin' f'r his hid, and the same perfessor's 'patint blackin' f'r his fate, it be th' right idee that 'man himself' begins to dye at the extrimities."

A queer change of color I heard

“What are you taking this year?”
 “Oh, I have the course in fatherly advice, constitutional rest, and a cemetery in Greek.”
 “Why do you call it a cemetery in Greek.”
 “Greek is a dead language, isn't it?”

Professor in Sociology—“Where do we find the strongest advocate of Sunday opening of saloons, Mr. Clark.”
 Clark (waking up):—“Here!”

We have been able to collect a few nicknames of students and professors, which may prove of interest to the students. The addition of the origin of the names adds greatly to the value:

- Revenge—Miss Elinor Merrill—because she is sweet
- Ignorance of the law—Dr. Birge—because he excuses nobody.
- Delay—Miss Remington—she is dangerous.
- Care—Dr. Miller—because care will kill a cat.
- Fact—Miss Jackman—she is a stubborn thing.
- Art—Glenn Williams—because art is long.
- Experience—Professor Haskins—he is a dear teacher.
- Necessity—Jack Fox—he knows no law.

WILLIE SAMMIE KIES

L'enfant terrible of the exhibition was little Willie Sammie Kies, a very incorrigible youth of four years. He hails from Boston, but tries to reign in Madison all the time. Visitors will notice the very studious look and the glasses on his face. It is said that he knows more Bostonese than any other baby prodigy ever exhibited anywhere. We are somewhat inclined to this belief ourselves as witness the following dialogue between the baby in the next booth and this little darling. The room had been sadly overheated in their part of the world and after a prolonged silence, imposed by rule number four, the "kid next door," as Willie called him, said, "Hully gee dis heat makes me sweat. How's it with you Bill." Willie with a pained expression on his face managed to remark. "This heat causes me to feel that a superabundance of internal caloric has, by its characteristic expansibility, forced through the serpentine cutaneous cylindrical labyrinths, superfluous aquatic salinity sufficient to generate globular accumulations perceptible to the human vision on the exterior of the epidermis." Then he fainted from exhaustion and it was several hours before he was again ready for business.

Willie is so learned that he has written a charming little brochure on "Glee Clubs; their Use and Abuse" with a special chapter on telegrams.

That is the way Willie's application will, in a way, explain his present condition.

OXFORD MUFFLER CO.

MENNEN'S FOOD CO.

DEAR SIRS:

Some few months ago our little son
Willie showed signs of having a brain.
After using two bottles of your wonderful remedy both signs and brain disappeared and he has been troubled with neither since. We can heartily recommend your panacea to any one suffering with a brain.

Yours gratefully,
MR. ROBERTSON.

BABY JOSEPH LOEB

INCLOSURE

You will notice the noble brow, the very earthworks of an overpowering brain. This, by the way, is the same that the Food Company used. Notice the prominent features. Gaze at those nose, that ears, this eyes, these mouth,—how powerful! How like unto those of the modern Mongolese or Chinian—a most extraordinary child indeed. We predict for this prodigy a long and happy future unruffled by cares of state.

It gives me great pleasure, ladies and gentlemen, to introduce to you Katie Didn't Swain. This "wee cow'ring timorous" girlie is afraid of all animals; Trojan horses and Anglo-Saxon ponies being especially detestable to her, and man is the only animal upon which she looks favorably. Little Katie, as you yourselves see, ladies and gentlemen, unlike the other representatives of the wonderful "Big Four" tribe from Milwaukee, is very beautiful. Notice the shell-pink ears; they arn't a sign of stinginess, ladies and gentlemen, but denote a delicate musical disposition. Like the lute her soul is stirred by the sounds about her. Stop that kid's crying! Hush up Baby! Ladies and gentlemen, talk only in whispers while in the presence of this personification of music.

BABY GRACE ANDREWS

BABY KATAHRINE SWAIN

This little Pouter is Gracious Andrews, ladies and gentlemen. She hails from Lodi, "Loveliest Village of the Plains." Stop your wiggling Gracie; no, you can't have any of Baby Ernie Calkins' candy. I know the attraction is great, but never mind, you can't have him or the candy. Gracie has been raised according to the theories set forth by the renowned Professor O'Shea in his Babyology class.

Her wild animal spirits
 Have had full play
 And, ladies and gentlemen, she does to-day
 Do ample credit to the teachings of M. V. O'Shea.

One would as soon think of stopping the Gulf Stream as to think of stopping Gracie when she has once made up her mind to do anything. She is an embryonic new woman, and like Belva Lockwood is ambitious and desires one day to be president. Ladies and gentlemen, while there is an opportunity, pay particular attention to the future president(ess) (of the Y. W. association)?

CHARLIE VILAS

We have been unable to ascertain the exact date of the birth of this little cherub, as his application and identification blanks were lost in the mails, but judging from his actions we would place his birthday about April 1, 1894. He is a perfectly lovable child and attracted a great deal of attention at the show. This is the charming little fellow who cried if every lady did not kiss him. And to see the way the femininity fought to get at him reminded one of a Department Store bargain day when a silk dress and 20 yards of old lace are given away free with every purchase of 4 yards of organdie. During a lull in the strife it was noticed that Charlie was rubbing his mouth after each kiss. No one thought anything of it for a while, but he persisted in his actions till his nurse said, "What are you doing, Charlie? Rubbing off that kiss?" "Oh, no nurse, I am only rubbing it in" said the little incorrigible. It is unnecessary to say that this caused a murmur of admiration to come from the ladies. This was soon followed by a longer and more rapturous murmur and cries of "Oh! the little dear," when the official Sorceress and Fortune Teller prophesied that, when grown up, Charlie would take the place held by the late Prof. Jamie Francis Adonis Pyre whom all the ladies worshipped as a god.

Time will tell.

BABY SABBY ALBRECHT

THE ALLEN TWINS

Side Show

SEBASTIAN CABOT ALBRECHT.

This little baby comes from Milwaukee. From earliest infancy he showed signs and cosines of a wonderful liking for pounding tables into his head and swallowing roots. When he was two years old he fell on his milk (?) bottle and injured his crying organs. He has howled and yelled ever since so that his people have been driven to say, "Sufficient unto the day is one baby." When he heard that there was going to be a "baby show" and that Baby Katie Swain and Baby Eddie Hook were to be there, he screamed so that his parents were almost driven to distraction. "The kid couldn't get in on his beauty." However, Sabby had to be gotten in or they would have to spend the rest of their days in sleepless nights. So they bribed the managers of the how, and here he is. "Judge for yourself, ladies and gentlemen."

THE ALLEN TWINS.

These guileless little twinlets first turned the X-Ray beams from their bland, inquiring countenances upon the unsuspecting Madisonians at a tender age. Even at that period a certain Sphinx-like, unfathomable expression made its appearance upon the placid features of Charlie. For a baby he has a great propensity for athletics, indulging to excess in such sports as political rows, roasting parties, etc. Of late he has taken to long walks and picnics. It is reported that on these occasions he can subsist from rosy dawn till dewy eve on a wafer and half a ginger ale bottle or half a bottle of ginger ale as the case may be. Little Flossie also inclines to diversion of an out-door nature and promises to become a disciple of the gentle Isaac Newton, having especial experience with sharks and whales, showing that even as a kid there is nothing fresh about this precocious youngster. Thus, hand in hand with an innocent, yearning look upon their baby faces, these two start upon life, their lips always framed to utter little Oliver Twist's cry for "More, please," and their toddling feet, sometimes tracking and sometimes not, treading life's devious pathways.

MARY B. FRIES.

This angelic looking child is really a turbulent spirit at heart. Her name is not at all appropriate, for she is truly one of the "warmest babies in the bunch." Her home is in the center of a rich land and she has often made her parents' hearts freeze with terror on account of her wild pranks. When three weeks old she sustained a severe shock from Burns' and the only means by which her parents could soothe her was by reading her selections from "Hamilton's Wizard Oil," and "Scott's Emulsion." Mayce has several times set fire to the house and her parents predict that she is destined to some day fire the world. Ladies and gentlemen, pay particular attention to the infant incendiary.

BABY MARY B. FRIES.

This little chap, EDDIE HOOK, has a very lean and hungry look. The child has always been hungry. He would swallow physics and currents in a shocking manner; but what almost broke his mother's heart was when he swallowed his vortex rings.—She did so want Eddie's picture in a Mellin's Food advertisement, but as he was not plump and peachy looking and as he was always playing hooky she resolved to put him into a dime museum. The managers of the Baby Show heard of the little Freak and have taken a great deal of pains to secure him.

This contestant for infantile honors, Baby ANDREW ANDERSON, is a happy-go-lucky little chap, who seldom cries. He first breathed Wisconsin air four years ago and much of this time has been spent in the country—the only place to bring up children, they all say. Andy is a sturdy little fellow and will grow up to be an honest and law-abiding citizen. He will doubtless have his troubles in the struggle for existence and is inclined to be a little obstinate and insists upon his royal rights. If these are threatened he immediately rolls upon his broad little back, puts his cunning little "tootsie wootsies" in the air and sets up a lusty howl, a procedure much more likely to gain the desired rights than any plan proposed by our worthy grand-sires in their struggle for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It was with the greatest difficulty that baby Andy could be persuaded to remain on exhibition at our show. He is inclined to be a little bashful and much prefers the chirping of the little birdies in the woods and the lowing of the bossie cows in the pasture lot back of his papa's house to the society of the other little masters and mistresses, in whose company he now finds himself. Still he is growing more contented with his present position and on the whole is a pretty specimen of "Young America."

BABY EDDIE HOOK.

BABY ANDREW ANDERSON.

No, this is not an Imbecile. It is only a Student laughing at one of Sunny's jokes

The Faculty Jokers' Club

The present Badger Board, believing, in spite of the contrary evidence of previous Badgers, that the various members of the faculty sometimes, however rarely, really made jokes, spent much time and money in collecting the following pearls of wit fresh from the makers. They have been cold-stored until now.

"What?" exclaimed President Adams, "Our team beat Beloit 36 to 0? Good, Angell's can do no more."

---

"By the way," Prof. Turner said to his companion, "I had something in the Atlantic last summer." "What? an article?" "No, a bath."

---

"I tell you," said Charles Noble, "the West is a pious country. Why! in many places even the railroads cross themselves."

---

"You don't have to go to the Yellowstone Park to see wonders," said Prof. Frankenburger. "Just come down to Library Hall and hear Macartney. He's a guy, sir, and he's always spouting."

---

The following occurred on a railroad near Madison, where the wagon road ran parallel to the railroad track. For some reason the train was running slowly and as the conductor came along, a man who was chatting with Prof. Haskins, asked, "Conductor, why doesn't this train get up some speed? Can't you get ahead of that old farmer with his mules?" Quick as a flash from Prof. Haskins, "Why, the law forbids him to pass anybody."

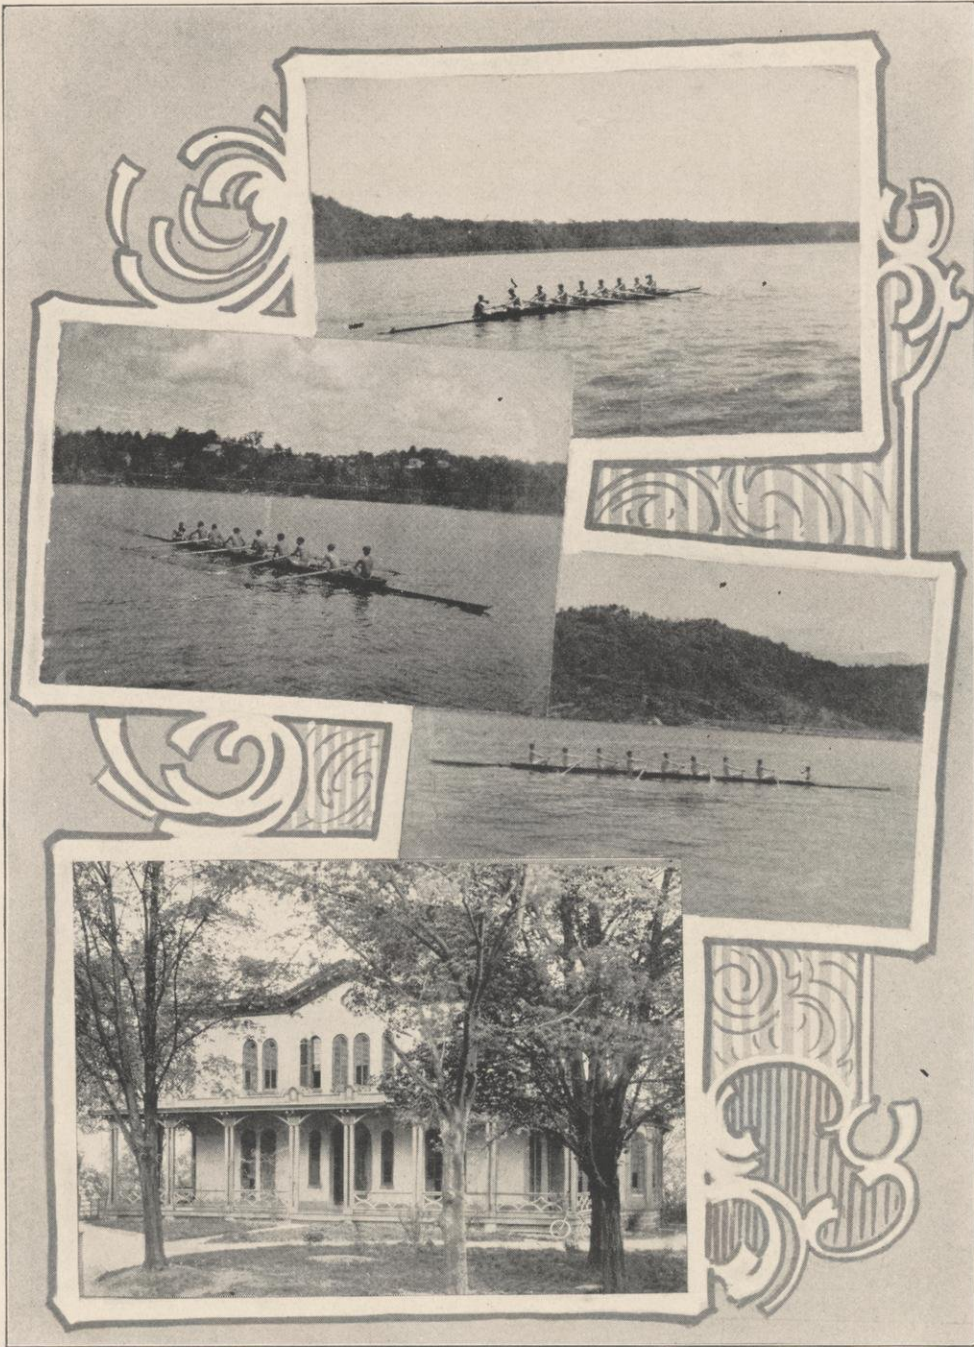

---

"Why, Mr. Pyre," said Mr. Wright, "I got $10 for a poem last week." "You got off cheap, who was the judge."

Tired

Need you a lullabye,
Is it so hard to lie,
Restless, when I am nigh?
Sleep, and forget.

Sleep, dear, and rest thy head
Not on thy weary bed,
Here on my heart, instead,
Sleep, and forget.

Forget that the task is long,
Seek not the right and wrong,
Rest makes to-morrow strong,
Sleep, and forget.

Is duty hard, thy lot?
Must my love be forgot?
Nay—seek decision not,
Sleep, and forget.

Here find affinity,
Hope not divinity,
Here, in my sympathy,
Sleep, and forget.

Does not the rustling night
Put all thy doubts to flight?
Whispers the fading light,
Sleep, and forget.

Hear thou the tardy bee
Crooning his song to thee
Night heals it all, for we
Sleep, and forget.

Excelsior

A senior maiden, coy and demure,
And her youthful instructor in Literature
Sat side by side in Room Number Two,
He quite at a loss as to what to do.
Over and over again he scanned
The paper he held in his trembling hand,
Striving to utter a fatal "no,"
But, nestling closer, she whispered low,
"Higher."

He gave her an "Ex." and a 92,
She indicated that that would do
By a brilliant flash of her beautiful eyes,
And he felt his ecstatic spirits rise
"Higher."

One manly arm was fondly placed
Around that gentle maiden's waist,
While the other messenger quickly sped
To raise that beautiful golden head—
"Higher."

Her slender hand on his shoulder lay,
Filling his soul with ecstasy;
He gave her a look of glad surprise,
But only one word could he read in her eyes,
"Higher."

Unto her soul his spirit went
And blissfully revelled in sweet content;
But still her spirit seemed to say,
Repeating the word eternally,
"Higher."

He strove to kiss her, but, aiming low,
Just missed her lips by an inch or so;
But, while he blushed a blush of shame,
A soft, reassuring whisper came,
"Higher."

Election Returns

The election which occurred on January 18 and 19, 1900, was a surprise to every one. The Commissioners were busy for several minutes and not a few seconds laboring with the thousands of ballots cast trying to ascertain the result. Their labors show the following:

OFFICE	CANDIDATE
1 Handsomest Man - - -	GEORGE CHALLONER
2 Most Popular Man - - -	JOHN HICKEY
3 Most Versatile Man - - -	A. J. WYSSMAN
4 Most Fascinating Man - - -	HANK CASE
5 Biggest Sport - - -	C. V. HIBBARD
6 Biggest Dude - - -	JOHN SMITH
7 Biggest Flirt - - -	GEORGE MOSHER
8 Champion Bluffer - - -	A. E. SCHWITLAY
9 Champion Lady-Killer - - -	ALBERT ALEXANDER
10 Champion Josher - - -	A. E. KUNDERT
11 Champion Billiard Shark - - -	PAUL WRIGHT
12 Best Grind - - -	M. B. STONE
13 Most Ladylike Man - - -	G. A. SHIELDS
14 Handsomest Woman - - -	MARCIA JACKMAN?
15 Most Popular Woman - - -	BLANCHE JAMES
16 Most Versatile Woman - - -	BESSIE KING
17 Most Fascinating Woman - - -	P. MARIE BINZEL

The story of the election in detail is an interesting one. The two days that the polls were open were filled with strife and bitter personal attacks. More than one poor fellow went home with his head in blinders, after a day of hard labor in the political penitentiary. The number of candidates in the field was large and it is surprising that there were not more broken heads and arrests than there were. The hill was literally soaked in spirits. Spirits in liquid form came in bottles and kegs. Spirits in solid form came in speeches. Even the grass imbibed so much firewater that it cannot grow upright, but must sway from side to side in its vain endeavors to seek the light. The Hon. Richard Jag Strauss, that Napoleonic advocate of temperance, was observed crossing the street six times while going from Lake to Park streets. It was not ascertained whether this crossing and recrossing was caused by liquor or girls, but his friends have their opinions as have also his enemies.

If ever there was wire pulling and bribery it was during this election. The bribes offered ranged from 50 cents for "foreigners" to $5,000 for the vote of such men as Willoughby Magruder and Benjamin McLarenson. Talk about "mud slinging"!! Why there was so much mud slung that when some fellows got home and were dried out, it was found that they had "dust" enough to pay for from six to ten months board.

A rather amusing incident during the campaign occurred when one of the candidates arose and declared. "My friends, my character is spotless, it is pure white." "Why don't you use it for a shirt?" called a voice in the audience.

The reverse side of a card used by one of the candidates was as follows:

TO MY FRIENDS:

I desire to announce my nomination on an independent ticket for the office of Champion Bluffer. I have lived among you and on you for many years and am well qualified to discharge in a very deficient way all the duties of this office. I sincerely hope that you will elect me and thus exonerate me from the charge of faithfulness which has been put upon me.

Your friend,

HARRISON MCGUIRE.

This is a fair sample of the argument used upon the voter. Another argument was the one popularly known as a "2 fer." One Dollar for 200 in a box. The Young Men's Sewing Circle of the Young Men's Christian Association was out in full force distributing tracts for their candidates. The employees of the Rubber Plant were active in all the different wards.

The faculty even had their candidates. There was, however, one faction in the faculty which had no candidates, which did not believe in the election, and which went so far as to protest against the election. This faction was composed of the following instructors: Professors Pyre, Running, Olin, Tingle, Emery, Sharp, Thurber. Strangely enough there are just seven of them and their initials taken in the order given above spell the word PROTEST.

Taking everything into consideration the election was a very equitable one, and the winning ticket is to be congratulated upon its success.

I guess I'll have to telegraph my papa,
I need some money bad, indeed I do.
My girl is fond of flowers, fruit and candy,
And so I'll have to touch him for a few.
I take her to all foot ball games and dances,
But I mustn't tell my papa where we roam.
If he knew 'twere not for board and hooks,
And street car fare and picture books,
He'd say, "Young man, you come straight home."

Card Systems—By a Senior

BY a most careful study of the card systems of the different professors, I have gained information to which I owe most of my success here, said the Senior. Nearly every professor has his own pet scheme for doing his work in such a way that he will call upon each in his turn and yet keep the rest of the class in doubt as to when their turn will come. A knowledge of the system of any professor, together with a close watch for the first five minutes of each recitation to see if the deck has been cut, will save one from many flunks. If one watches carefully, he can almost always tell when his turn is coming, and load accordingly. Now take Jones. If you wish to be called upon, all you have to do is to come in late or cut. Then the next time you come to class you will be first man and you can hurl your little speech at him with good results. Then it takes him a good while to get around to you again, as there are about three absentees each time and not more than six or eight are called upon. Prof. Giese gets around the class quite rapidly, but he never shuffles the cards. One day he begins at one end and the next at the other, and one can soon prepare his own roll call. Pyre's system is almost the reverse of Jones. If you wish to duck you have to cut or come in late. You have plenty of chances to volunteer, though. Reinsch is like Giese, but he sometimes cuts the deck and he is a harder man to handle. Slichter is a bad one. If you come in late you get the toughest in the lot before you get to your seat. He knows all the tricks of the trade. Scott is almost as bad. You can't tell when your turn will come. His Industrial History course is best because there are so many in the class that he doesn't get around very often.

Why We Came to the University of Wisconsin

The 1901 Badger Board has gone to a great deal of trouble in securing letters from the following representative people of the university, telling why they came to the university.

(1) BLANCHE J—.

"I wouldn't have come if I hadn't fully expected to increase my circle of gentlemen friends." [You are to be congratulated on having met with such marked success. ED.]

(2) PHIL SPOONER :

"I entered the university here because I live here and stay at home with papa and mamma while I am going to school, and when I get into scrapes they can help me out, and take me on long trips for the benefit of my health." [That's right, Phil; just stay by papa and mamma, until you arrive at years of discretion. ED.]

(3) WINNIE SALISBURY :

"I came to the University in the hope of becoming intimately acquainted with the Delta Gammas." [You are to be congratulated, Winnie, on your success, for they regard you as indispensable. You make an excellent messenger, and your ability to perform experiments in the laboratory is phenomenal. ED.]

(4) EDITH TRUAX :

"To be a good, studious little girl, to give all my thoughts to books and never to think of dress or the boys. This was my end and aim in coming from Chicago to Madison." [How you have succeeded(?) ED.]

(5) BILLY VROMAN :

"I was sent here to study; but then, there are a lot of things to be learned outside of books, and I'm learning them to beat the band. I learned how to smoke and do lots of other things, too, since I've been here. Maybe I won't make Phi Beta Kappa, but what if I don't? I know more along certain lines than a lot of those people do, anyway."

(6) SIDNEY BALL :

"My chief object was to stimulate vocal culture at the university and, incidentally, to play base ball. Believing that our constitutions should be inured to our rigorous climate, I am endeavoring to dispense with the wearing of overcoats, and substituting, for purposes of warmth, my smile, which is calculated to cheer, but not inebriate."

(7) RAE NATE :

"To be an advertiser of Chicago styles and, incidentally, to do a little studying." [A word to the wise is sufficient; better reverse the order of things." ED.]

(8) CHAUNCEY BLAKE :

"At first my parents thought of sending me to the Ladies' Seminary in Rockford, so that I could be near them, but I teased awfully hard for a long time and finally told them how nice the girls were up here in Madison, so then they let me come. I play with the fellows a little and the rest of the time I study, "What Katy-Did."

(9) ROBERT KNOFF :

"Whereas, it is fitting, in so far as it is in any way possible for the youth of America to receive a higher education at one of our temples of learning, I, fully conscious of my extraordinary brilliancy and unprecedented fluency, came to this university to impart to others, in so far as in me lay, some few of my many gems of thought. I specialize in circumlocution and imposition and in these, my chosen lines of work, I have attained to no small degree of deficiency."

(10) ALLAN NEILSON :

"Once there was a boy from my town who went away to school and when he came home he was so lionized by the girls that I decided to run an opposition to his monopoly, so I came here. I'm getting all the experience I possibly can in my dealings with the fair sex. The fellows are green with envy, for they all tell me that the girls like me just awfully well. I can hardly wait until June comes to get home and see what excitement my arrival in town will cause." [Out of the kindness of his heart, the editor has sent a note of condolence to the young ladies in Mr. Nielson's town—Ed.]

(11) LETA SHERMAN :

"You know Gertrude, my sister, came here before I did, and from what she said I thought Madison must be a terribly nice place, so I came, too, and I haven't been disappointed, either. It is the best place for stabbing and pulling I ever struck. Molasses candy isn't in it with the Profs. when I get to pulling, and then any girl who half-way tries can be awfully popular with the men here. Anyway, I have a good time and my chief regret is that I have only one year more at the university."

Rooms in Ladies' Hall

Love's Labor Lost

A man he was with crosséd eyes,
Nor bright nor dim,
Who from his heart could heave such sighs
As sure must win.
And Jenny thought he sighed for her,
Nor did she very much demur,
But rather hoped to say "Yes sir",
Ere long, to him.

At church she saw him Sunday morn,
So fresh and gay!
It seemed that life would be forlorn
With him away.
She thought of him throughout the pray'r;
She almost wished they were not there;
She knew of shady nooks so fair
For such a day.

At eve again to church she went
Amid the throng;
Her mind on other things intent,
Oh, was it wrong?
Tho' not a word the preacher said
Had chance to enter Jenny's head,
Her voice was heard as forth it led
In sacred song.

And now the services were o'er
A sigh she gave!
The throng moved toward the outer door
In order grave.
Right there before her, in the hall,
She saw him standing, straight and tall,
Did her heart sink? No, not at all,
She would be brave.

And as she neared the charmed place
At which he stood,
A blush o'erspread her pretty face.
[Of course it would.]
And now she felt the time had come,
When he would ask to see her home,
And they would be all, all alone.
Just as they should.

Her little heart went pit-a-pat,
I wonder why.
She saw him fumble with his hat.
He, too, was shy.
And then he looked into her face,
As if he there would find some trace
By which to judge his lady's grace,
Ere he should try.

Oh cruel, crushing, cross-eyed man!
Alack-a-day!
He stepped so boldly up to Ann;
They walked away.
His eyes deceived poor Jenny so,
They were the cause of all her woe,
They've made her pretty head hang low.
And what's to pay?

"O Fons Bandusiae"

HORACE, ODES, III, 13.

PRIZE TRANSLATION—CARLOTTA BEATTY

O Spring Bandusian, crystal bright,
Worthy sweet wine and flowers,
A kid to-morrow is thy right:
The brow foretells its powers,

In its first horns, for love and strife.
In vain; thy waters cold
A ruby stain shall have—its life,
Child of the wanton fold.

Thee Sirius with his burning heat
Knows not to touch; thy cool
To oxen from the plough is sweet;
To herds, a pleasant pool.

Of far-famed fountains thou shalt be,
I singing the oak tall
Above the hollow rocks, whence free
Thy chattering waters fall.

Soliloquy by Burke

Or the Modern Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

BURKE JEKYLL—"Why are you studying astronomy?"

BURKE HYDE—"To be a star student, of course."

BURKE J.—"That man is all right. He has no bills against him."

BURKE H.—"He must belong to the nobility."

BURKE J.—(seeing the Co-op empty) "I suppose the book trade is affected by the general depression. I wonder what kind of books it affects most?"

BURKE H.—"Pocket books."

BURKE J.—"How does Prexy hatch out all those schemes?"

BURKE H.—"He probably sets his mind on them."

BURKE J.—"What is the best cure for the candy habit?"

BURKE H.—"The Keeley cure at the Pal."

BURKE J.—"Dry up, Plumb."

BURKE H.—"Dried plums, of course."

BURKE J.—"When does an Englishman become more of a tea fiend than ever?"

BURKE H.—"When he takes up golf; because then he spends more time than ever on the teeing ground."

BURKE J.—"Why do electric cars have conductors?"

BURKE H.—"To collect the charge."

BURKE J.—"When is a conductor a non-conductor?"

BURKE H.—"When he's a motorman?"

BURKE J.—"Wonder if a Madison boarding-house keeper could board a train?"

BURKE H.—"She might charge the conductor."

BURKE J.—"What if he was a di-electric?"

BURKE H.—"She would probably die intestate."

BURKE J.—"When is a man like a wheel?"

BURKE H.—"When he's tired."

BURKE J.—"What did Smith do when burglars got into his house the other night?"

BURKE H.—"Why the clock struck one and he struck the other."

BURKE J.—"Why is a gun sociable?"

BURKE H.—"Because it rarely goes off alone."

BURKE J.—"What do they call a man in a hail storm?"

BURKE H.—"Hail fellow, well met, of course."

BURKE J.—"How would you describe a duel?"

BURKE H.—"As a very pointed affair."

BURKE J.—"I am tired of poems to Lake Mendota."

BURKE H.—"It's certainly not a dry subject."

BURKE J.—"What happened to the man who went away for a rest and a change?"

BURKE H.—"The bell-boy got the change and the hotel keeper the rest."

BURKE H.—"Dr. Jekyll advises that I seek a permanent Hyde."

The above wrote the following letter to Congressman S. S. Barney.

Dear Sir,—I am a short course student at the University of Wis. I want the diseases of horses and cattle, you are my Congressman and I hear that you have them.

The Esterly Trial.

(With apologies to the author of the Dryfuss Trial.)

"Mr. Finessey," says Mr. Hooley, "they're havin a thrile up at Wisconsin that much rasimble the Dthryfuss trial. Wan Napolyun Isterly has bin accused iv breaking the laws iv propriety on the windies iv Ladies Hall, and he is now bein thried be six Perfessers and another wan named Slichter. Wan iv the Coads has tistified that she see Mr. Isterly wid some clothes."

"Shure and what of that?"

"Ye do not see the pint," says Mr. Hooley, "twas some one else's clothes he had. The definse howiver claims that the witness is biased. To which the prosecution rayplies that it was the clothes that was biased. The thrile begun to-day with wan Birge prasidin. 'Call the prisoner,' says he, and in walks Isterly in chains. 'Are yez guilty?' says Birge. 'I am not,' says Isterly. 'Yure a liar,' cries Slichter frum behind the dure. 'You're right,' says Birge. 'I think he is; the tistimony clearly shows that he is,' he says; 'phwat shall we do with him?' 'He shall saw me wood this winter,' cries Slichter. 'He will not,' says Birge, 'fur he shall do the same fur me,' he says. 'Ye will begin t'morrow,' says he to Isterly. Then he cries in a loud vice, 'Bring in the witnesses fur the definse,' and in comes Pardee on a crutch and with a noomber foorteen patch on his left oi. 'Phwat do ye know iv this case?' says Birge. 'Nawthin,' says Pardee, 'but Oi think—' 'Yure a liar,' says Slichter, 'Oi was yure instrooter in algebray,' says he."

"Shure and what is that?" says Finessey.

"Finessey, yure an ignorant man," says Hooley, "or ye wouldn't ask it."

"But what is it?" says Finessey.

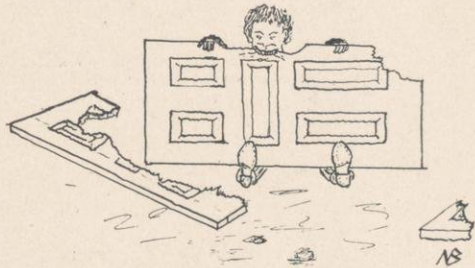

"Niver moind phwat it is, it has nawthin to do with the thrile anyway. 'Was ye at the Hall?' says Birge. 'Many the time,' says Pardee. 'He's guilty,' says Slichter, 'and it is himself that says it. He will shovel me walk this winter,' says he. 'Tis too good fur him,' says Birge, 'he'll take fifteen fifths under Perfesser Sharpe,' says he, 'next witness,' says he, and in comes wan Mosher. 'Mr. Mosher,' says wan Haskins, another jidge, 'when was Fredrick Barberosser born?' 'I dinnaw,' says Mosher. 'Right ye are,' says Slichter."

"And who was this Fredrick Barberosser?" says Mr. Finessey.

"Well Oi am not shure," says Mr. Hooley, "but Oi think he were the janitor iv the Hall. 'He is not qualified fur a witness,' says Haskins. 'Right ye are,' answered Birge, 'call the next witness.'"

Mother Abigail Mayhew

Assisted by Aunt Sally

Will give a childrens' party in the gym. to-night 7-9 p. m. The Senior nurses will bring the baby Freshmen. The little Sophomore boys (gym. suits) will escort the Junior little girls. Grandmother Emery will be there too.

They came right after dinner
These little girls and boys
And nurses trim and babies
Who made such awful noise.
The Mother and the Auntie,
In sweetest smiles and curls,
Gave kisses at the doorway
To the babies and the girls.
The babies chewed at rubber rings,
And hung on nursie's arm—
Nurse Fletcher kept sweet Maudie Luce
From danger and from harm.
John Cady and young Esterly,
Each was a naughty lad
Who pulled girls' hair and kissed their cheeks
And made them awful mad.
Young Master Crape and Master Wright
Were Nursie Sheldon's bane;
They teased her charge full half as much
As that of Nursie Swain.
The little girls were very sweet,
Small Lila and Marie,
Still scarce came up in cunningness
To Baby Anna D—
They played at "ring a rosy"
At "Froggy can't get out;"
Once loud above their merriment
There rose an awful shout.
'Twas the Bascom youth and Tommy Hecht
Who were fighting hard and handy
Because the former stole away
The latter's striped candy.
The Baby Mihills cried salt tears
Because her knickknack lost its head;
She had not meant to bite it off
And have the little rooster dead.
So on they played till bed-time came
The babes all sleepy were
And let the nurses lead them off
Without too much demur.
Up stairs they met the Merrill girls
And little Mary C—
Who pouted sadly in their rooms;
Because they could not be
That same night at another place
Where dancers had the hall,
Because the "Boycott" then was on Likewise the Poor Folks' Ball.

"Suspended till Christmas."

ANSWERS made by members of the 1901 Badger Board to inquiries made by students as to "when the Badger would be out."

HARRY E. BRADLEY, Chairman—"I wish I could tell. You know more about it than I do."

CLARENCE E. ABBOTT, Business Manager—*

MISS ADAH G. GRANDY—"I don't believe it is ever coming out. I am so tired waiting."

RALPH G. PLUMB—"I have reasons to believe that the Badger will not be out till next fall. Have looked up statutes and find that I cannot be held liable."

LAURANCE C. BURKE, alias "Scrappy"—"From what I know about contracts, this delay will endanger my property. The Badger cannot be out till next fall."

C. HARRY WATSON, alias "Weary Hotson"—"I do not know when the Badger will be out. I never had anything to do with it."

PAUL F. CHAMBERLAIN—"The Badger will not be out till I come back. I have fixed it so that it cannot be out sooner."

MISS LEONORE A. MEINHARDT—"I have talked it over with Ernest and he thinks it will be out by commencement at the latest."

MISS MARY E. BRAHANY—"Every body tells me that the Badger will not be out till commencement and I am getting scared."

FRED C. MCGOWAN—"Burke and I have declared a truce so I am convinced that the Badger will be out."

How Miss Leta Sherman Worked a Ride in Professor Wood's Automobile.

It was this way. Professor Wood was invited by the Betas to chaperone their party and during the course of the event, he was introduced to Miss Sherman, who evidently did not understand his name. Thereupon the following conversation ensued.

MISS S.: "What course do you take or are you a P.G.?"

PROF. W.: "I am neither. I am an instructor in the Physics Department."

MISS S.: "Oh, are you, then you know Professor Wood?"

PROF. W.: "Yes, I know him slightly."

MISS S.: "Well, I have always regretted that I didn't take the course in Physics so that I could have been in his class and worked him for a ride in his automobile. Have you ever ridden in it?"

PROF. W.: "Yes, I have once or twice."

MISS S.: "Oh, you must have a big pull with him. How I wish I might meet him! I would work him in some way for I am just wild for a ride in it."

PROF. W.: "He is here tonight, perhaps I can introduce you."

Just then Miss Sherman's sister appeared, and being told by the Professor of her sister's request, she said, "Why, Leta, this is Professor Wood."

Senior Quotations

The following gems of thought were submitted by well known Seniors in compliance with the request of the Badger Board that each Senior furnish his own quotation. It will be noticed how truthful and modest the Seniors were. Notice the uniform fitness of the quotations for the persons to whom they belong.

HENRY M. ESTERLY:—"Napoleon looked like me."

ENOCH W. UNDERWOOD:—"Never say die."

SARAH I. RAMSAY:—"SIR ! ! ! !."

THE SMITHS:—"Few and far between."

"HERMY" TAYLOR:—"Wise from the top of my head up."

EUNICE WELSH:—"The Original Gibson Girl, only better."

CARL HENSEL:—"Big pitchers (?) have little ears."

PAUL R. WRIGHT:—"This Wright hath many a wheel stored away in the upper story of his shop."

DICKEY STRAUSS:—"Poor Richard is himself again."

MIRIAM K. REED:—"None knew me but to love me."

A. E. BLEEKMAN:—"As idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean."

MARCIA JACKMAN:—"A shady place doth turn to sunshine upon my approach."

FRED. VAN HORN:—"My frame is a boy's. My brain, a man's."

BENNY COEN:—"All Coens look alike to me."

HARRY HOBBS:—"An honor to the class of 1903."

"JOE" KOFFEND:—"For every coat and every gown
I set the fashion for the town."

DENNIS SCANLAN:—"A man's a man for a' that."

MARIE SPRAGUE:—"A flower of meekness on a stem of grace"

"BILLY" CLARK:—"There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmie
And the worst, he was our little Billy."

DUTEE WHELAN:—"Our dutee has been done."

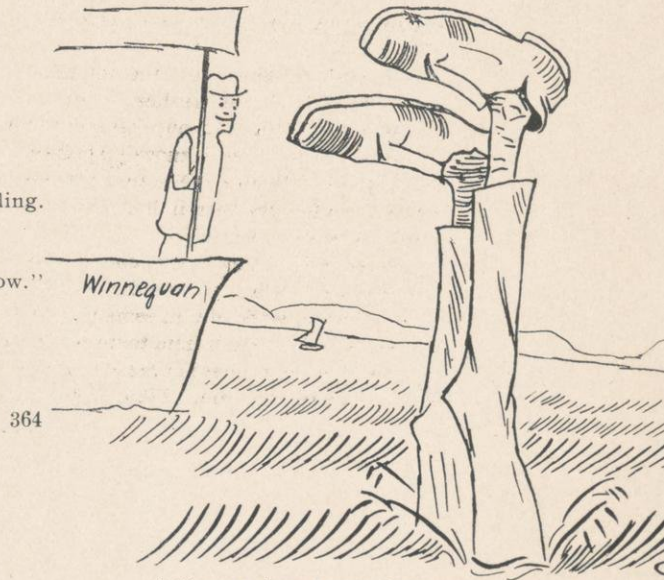

GEORGE W. MOSHER:—"Time was when a man lost his brains he died."

TOMMY LYLE:—"I hear a hollow sound; who rapped my skull?"

A. J. MCCARTNEY:—"And every word I spake 'twas made of gold."

ERNST GREVERUS:—"Give me a cent, I want to be tough."

MILTON ORCHARD:—
"You will forget—
The tender leaves of Spring,
Forget the branch whereon they cling.
You will forget—
Ah well, 'tis better so—
I cannot marry all the girls I know."

I would that like the lark I might awake,

 To song my dearest hopes, my direst fears,
 My life to song, and sing away the years.

Sonnet

We pass away. The sun from out the east
 Will rise some distant day and find us sped;
 The world dismisses us from life's long feast,
 And we depart to banquet with the dead.
 Green grows the grass however low we lie,
 Glad sing the birds upon the unchanged bough,
 Soft floating cloudships cross the summer sky
 To sunset havens, silently as now.
 Oftimes the stars their darkened vigil keep,
 With solemn steps night's empty hours steal by,
 Yet know we endless or awakening sleep
 'Tis just the same, at last beneath the sky
 Of us is but the echo of a name,
 And if we love or hate 'tis just the same.

Question Box

INSTITUTED JANUARY 18, 1900, BY THE TURNER SOCIETY

Answers to Questions Asked by American History Class

Paul Binzel—You were wrong in thinking it proper to collect "Pal" checks from your frat mates to buy Miss N—a box of candy. It was unwise to let her find it out.

Joe Davies—Your desire to be a census is very a laudable one. As you know, a census embraces 25,000,000 women and is never correct.

Prof. Turner—We do not blame you for wanting to move your residence. Any sensible man would move with a Slaughter House next door.

Willie—(1.) Yes, it was very easy to treat a friend coolly on Jan. 5. (2.) The best things for a swell dinner are dried apples and water.

Miss Fortune—We are unable to say what degree of sharpness is required to make a pointed remark.

Photographer—In mounting stairs use a paste made of quick, self-rising flour.

Harry M.—Mr. Johnson was absent on Tuesday last because his room-mate was sick—sick of Johnson.

Sophomore—We do not know the name of Freshman who stopped a sprinkler on Langdon street and told the man his wagon was leaking.

Math—The problem you refer to is, "Prove that angle KEG + angle JUG = angle JAG. It is proved by axiom that things equal to same thing are equal to each other.

Burke—The coupons on Vaga bonds are not worth clipping. Vaga bonds are not government security.

Legal term—"A case in dispute."

MISS EASTMAN—"Of course you know which is the most important part of the solar system?"

LITTLE BOY WALKER—"The Solar Plexus"

DEAN JOHNSON—(collecting class cards) "Pass in your checks, please."

Scenes in University Grounds and Along Lake Mendota.

The Hair Store up town advertised an article called a "fluid wig." The board could not come to a decision on what was meant by a fluid wig.

Three members of the business committee declared that a fluid wig was made of canal locks.

The "Ahtests" were unanimous in their opinion that it was made of wavy hair.

"Our Leading Lady (L. M.)" said she knew a fluid wig was manufactured out of flowing tresses.

Burke with his usual ability to make a vile pun said a fluid wig would brook trouble for the wearer.

The Frat men on the board affirmed that a fluid wig would make your head swim.

One of the girls dumfounded us by remarking that if we wore a fluid wig we would have water on the brain.

This was too much and the board was split on whether to adjourn or order some light refreshments.

Motion to adjourn was carried.

A Spiritual Seance

---

One night with ceaseless toil,
While shuffling this mortal coil,
I bucked by the midnight oil,
My eight-o'-clock;
As I traced Amoeba's crawl,
A spook oozed through the wall,
And gave what I should call,
A beastly shock.

He wunk a wicked wink,
A ghastly, sizzling blink,
That blanched a quart of ink,
And said, Oh, hear it—
'I am a king full blown,
The bleachers are my throne,
My voice,—the megaphone;
I—college spirit!'

"When in the fierce-fought game,
Some championship to claim,
The time to root has come
I lead the yell.
When comes October still,
Then in Mendota chill,
Much freshmen do I spill
Pell-mell

"When in the gloom I see
Dark forms in robes-de-nuit
In fearful jamboree,
Swiping some laundry,
By higher mathematics
And eloquent didactics,
I help them with such tactics
Out of their quandry."

His face with kindness beamed,
But I with horror screamed,
Because his grammar seemed Quite punk.
Just then my 'larm clock rang,
I softly said, "Oh, dang—"
Went up the hill slam-bang.
To flunk.

Never Mind the Weather

'Twas a beautiful Sunday in autumn,
The trees in their beauty yet green,
And Edwin and Josie, together,
Out driving, as usual, were seen.

'Twas a cold, raw day in December;
The streets were deserted and lone—
Except for Josie and Edwin,
They did not heed the wind's moan.

'Twas a day when the blasts were icy,
And the snow lay deep on the ground,
But the weather made no difference,
Edwin and Josie strolled 'round.

'Twas a day when the March winds were blowing
All sensible ones stayed at home;
Yet a glance from your window would show you
That Edwin and Josie still roamed.

'Twas a day—but what matter the weather?
What matter the cold or the rain?
For is there not always bright sunshine
Above those who are bound by love's chain?

Who Was It?

Yes, they had a "case." Not one of those flimsy, make-believe "spring cases," but their's had lasted for several years - a genuine college case.

They walked to and from college, talked together on the bench by the lake; they went to the Military Hops and the Junior Prom; they worked in the chemical lab. together and recited side by side. In fact, they did everything on the co-operative plan.

No one blamed him for being in love, for she was certainly a daisy. Usually, they were left blissfully alone, but now that genial class officer of the upper classmen of the scientific course, Prof. Daniells, took advantage of the circumstances and applied it to his own use.

Naturally, Professor Daniells thought that since these two students had so many interests in common and since their laboratory books were so similar, he might just as well correct only one book, thereby saving time and trouble. So at the bottom of his book he appended the following remark: "For corrections, see Miss D's book."

[Out of sympathy, we positively refuse to divulge the names.]

A Mathematical Episode

Teddy's class in Algebra, had, for some unaccountable reason, come early to recitation room No. 28. Two minutes after nine and Teddy not there. The theory of probabilities was that there would be at least one minute more before his arrival, and according to the theory of limits he might approach the limiting value 9:05 and still not reach it.

While the class was standing around in arrangements and groups, suddenly a special product of 1901 suggested that a stereoptican lecture would be in order.

By a rapid method the dark shades were pulled down, effectually eliminating the light from the room. A sign was then placed upon the door with the suggestive notice "This room is occupied."

The doors were closed simultaneously, the audience seated, and the lecturer after successive trials exceeded the greatest mathematical expectations of his hearers.

Nine-four and Teddy arrived and boldly opened the door. There was an insertion and removal, for the indeterminate forms and the elimination of light in the room were a deception. With due politeness he retired excusing himself for the intrusion.

The lecturer collapsed. Rythms of laughter increased in geometrical progression throughout the room. In some cases special expedients had to be used in order to prevent an outburst of uproarious laughter. At length all was quiet, and symbolic expressions of anxiety took the place of innocent glee; for Teddy's reception of the joke and his operations on ab(surd)ities was an undetermined coefficient.

Soon he reappeared and all unsuspectingly said, "I am sorry to interrupt this lecture but I must have this room for my Algebra recitation."

It was beyond the power of any number of students to hold out longer and everybody roared including Teddy. "Well, that was neatly done," said he, "most neatly done," and he laughed heartily. "But please notify me when you have another," said he. He thought it was a legitimate transformation of the room and very good by way of variation. Good will was reciprocated on every hand and the class continued their work in harmonical progressions.

The joy of the perpetrators was incommensurable at the outcome. However they did not get another chance to continue their divergent series of lectures. But this interesting departure from affected quadratics, surds, etc., was appreciated by all, and I am sure that in the history of this class an (ex) was not an unknown quantity.

A Newspaper Yarn

The Senior Girl had been telling her story to an admiring circle of Loving Sisters. But the Loving Sisters all knew her. "No, you can't fool us," they said. And the Senior Girl wiped some fountain-pen ink off her shapely finger-tips with a lace handkerchief and gently murmured, "Yes, it's true, honest Injun."

Now, it so happened that there was among her listeners a Guileless Sophomore who did not know the Senior Girl so well as did some of the Loving Sisters. The Guileless Sophomore's father was a newspaper man, and like most newspaper men he was in constant search of news. So when the Guileless Sophomore confided to him the information she had received, he knew that now indeed he had a scoop.

As a result, upon the following morning, there appeared in the "society columns" of the Democrat an item somewhat like the following:

"Miss Senior Girl is spending a few days at her home in Limburgerville, where she has gone to attend the wedding of her sister, Miss Ambolena, to Mr. J. Z. Small, a prominent cattle buyer and social favorite of Limestone Gulch, Missouri.

* * *

There was consternation and dismay when the Senior Girl returned. The Loving Sisters moved about with a solemn, mournful look, which, when the Senior Girl left the room, gave place instantly to giggles. The Guileless Sophomore found her winter wraps too light when she approached the neighborhood of the offended maiden. Late that afternoon the 'phone rang.

"Hello," said a hoarse voice, "has Miss Senior Girl returned from the wedding yet?"

"O, no," sweetly said the particular Loving Sister who was answering the call. "That was a mistake. She didn't go to the wedding. She went down to Chicago to have an operation performed for appendicitis."

But even the Democrat wouldn't publish that story.

Ah, to be lost in the depths of the wilderness,
Far from the worries and frets of mankind,
Far from "Slick's" joshes, and Danny's dull lectures
Far from the whole of this horrible grind.
Not in the wastes or the deserts of Africa,
There we might find the remains of a SPHINX,
Shriveled and wrinkled, but kept by its dryness,
Dryness unquenchable, unwetted by drinks.
Rather we'll go to the limitless prairie,
Far from the woods where the CARDINAL dwells,
Go to the prairies, fair home of the BADGER,
Animal matchless, whose fame ever swells.

What's in a Name?

He stands six foot in his stocking feet,
His length of limb is hard to beat,
His shoes are number nine or ten,
In fact, he's largest 'mongst our men.
The truth I tell, nor swerve one tittle;—
And yet he's known as Mr. Little.

WRIGHT: "Wish I didn't have this bloomin' 8 o'clock. Beastly bore, don't you know. This is such a fine day, reminds me of my stay in Lunnon. Wish I could go walking on this delightful morning."

VAN HORN: "Fine day but rather raw."

WRIGHT: "Of course its raw, dear boy, why shouldn't it be, its not half done yet."

German poetry's a problem,
That gives the rheumatism.
That's right I know for I have found,
It is a kind of Lager-rythm.

"Why is Jones like a worn-out horse,
Who of aches and pains is full?"
The answer you all know, of course,
"Because he's lost his pull."

Chess Problem

TO MATE IN TWO MOVES.

John moves his arm around Julia's neck,
She moves one square and whispers check,
He, nothing daunted, moves right straight
His lips to hers and calls out "mate."

SOLUTION.

Poor Julia yields to loves restraints
Sighs, blushes, palpitates and faints.

"Strauss you must stop getting drunk. Do you know where people go who get drunk?"

"Yes, to Tommy's."

AT THE HOP.

"May I dance with you to-night?"

"You may try."

"Give me liberty or give me breath" as a Hall girl had occasion to remark not long ago to a certain young man, as they sat on the stone seat near the lake.

"Father," said Walton Pyre to his paternal ancestor, "I have long desired to go on the stage and I have come to ask your consent to do so."

"My son," dryly responded Papa Pyre, "all the world's a stage. Now you go down stairs, get the lawn-mower and cut the grass on that part of the world known as our front yard."

The engagement lasted two days but it was not a continuous performance.

"Poker" Niles wanted some stamps, so he started for the Post-Office. On the way he became involved in a mental game of poker. Arrived at the stamp window he planked down a dime and went on with his game. "Well, what is it?" asked the clerk. "Three trays and an ace," muttered Niles still in the game.

The clerk looked up, saw who it was, betook a look of pity unto himself and handed over three 3-cent and one 1-cent stamps.

We are a stock company organized and controlled by the students and professors of the University.

Our object is to furnish supplies and accommodations to the students.

Goods are sold at moderate prices which does away with the bookseller's exorbitant prices of the past.

Some of the things we did last year :

Gave to the shareholders a dividend of eight hundred dollars.

Gave two hundred dollars to college publications for advertising.

Subscribed twenty-five dollars to the crew-fund.

Secured sixty-three positions for deserving students enabling them to gain support.

Every student should lend us his or her support.

THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

Situation of the University

THE University extends along the north Shore of Lake Mendota more than a mile. In point of beauty the site is unsurpassed, if not unequaled. The campus contains 240 acres, besides an athletic field known as Camp Randall, of 42 acres. On the lower campus are the Gymnasium and the Historical Library building.

Organization

The College of Letters and Science	- - -	79	Professors and Instructors

The School of Music	- - -	11	Professors and Instructors
The School of Education	- - -	7	Professors and Instructors

*Library and Laboratory
Facilities*

THE completion of the new Historical Library building on University grounds, in which will be placed the University library, will afford unsurpassed accommodations for the use of students. The number of volumes contained in the libraries here collected will be about 250,000.

*Facilities
for Physical Training*

THE Gymnasium, 200 feet long, 100 feet wide, and three stories high, affords probably the best accommodations to be found in the country. Besides offices, locker-rooms, lecture rooms, shower and tub baths, bowling alleys, and rooms for other special gymnastic work, it contains a swimming tank 80 feet long by 28 feet wide, a running-track of eleven laps to the mile, a ball cage, and a general gymnasium 165 feet long by 96 feet wide.

Conditions of Admission

STUDENTS are admitted either by certificate of graduation from an accredited high school, or upon examination. For detailed information address the Deans of the respective colleges, or W. D. Hiestand, Registrar of the University.
