The President's Report

by Howard T. Greene, '15

Retiring President of the Association

AS I TURN the duties of president over to my successor, Mr. A. J. Goedjen, '07, of Green Bay, I should like to supplement the brief report which I made a year ago under the heading "Four Years of Progress".

In that report I quoted President Dykstra's statement in which he pointed out that "the Wisconsin Alumni Association has become increasingly effective as the strong right arm of the University" during the last four years. I listed twelve features of our program of activities which indicated clearly that your Association is growing more and more helpful to our University. These features also make membership more and more valuable to you and your fellow alumni.

All these features have been continued during the past year. Wherever possible, they have been extended and amplified in a sincere effort to strengthen our service program. In our placement work, for example, more time and effort was devoted to informal conferences with individual seniors or small groups of seniors in helping them to develop job opportunities. Over two thousand copies of the fifth edition of "The College Senior Seeks A Job" were sent to members of this year's senior class.

Each member of the Association has received seventeen publications since last September to keep him or her in touch with Campus developments: four issues of the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS; four issues of the BADGER QUARTERLY; eight issues of Stuhldreher's FOOTBALL LETTER; one issue of Foster's BASKETBALL LETTER.

Never before in the history of our University have its alumni received such complete news service.

Two new auxiliary organizations have also been developed during the past year: the Wisconsin X Club and the Half Century Club. The Wisconsin X Club consists of former officers and directors of the Wisconsin Alumni Association. From their experiences as officers and directors they know the importance of the Association's work and the manifold opportunities of serving our University. These loyal alumni are eager to continue working for Wisconsin and this new X Club is the medium through which their program of activities will be carried on. Under the dynamic leadership of its first president, Harry Bullis, this new organization has already demonstrated its willingness and ability to do effective work.

The Half Century Club also got under way in fine shape on Alumni Day. This Club consists of all Badger alumni who have been graduates for fifty years or more. Objectives: to promote fellowship among veteran alumni of the University, to make the reunions of these alumni increasingly enjoyable and to function as an auxiliary organization of the Wisconsin Alumni Association in promoting the best interests of the University of Wisconsin. There are no membership dues. It was my good fortune to attend the first meeting of these veteran Badgers and I can assure you that half a century as graduates has not weakened their loyalty one iota. In fact, some of us might well be innoculated with the same brand of loyalty which characterizes these members of the Half Century Club.

Howard T. Greene who retired this year after 2 years service as Association president

Loyalty and service should be the watchwords of all of us who are fortunate enough to be alumni of the University of Wisconsin. Our University needs the organized support of its alumni. We need to remind ourselves again and again that the primary objective of our Association is to promote, by organized effort, the best interests of the University of Wisconsin. This organized effort is best effected through your membership in the Association. Your influence is then combined with that of thousands of fellow alumni all working together for the best interest of our Alma Mater.

THE Wisconsin Alumni Association is our service organization. There are still some of us, no doubt, who look upon the Association as primarily an organization to publish the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS and Stuhldreher's FOOTBALL LETTERS. Important as these publications are, they constitute only a part of the services rendered by your Association. More than a score of other significant services are included in the Association's program of activities. Some are tangible and others are not; all combine to make an effective service organization.

Significant among these services is the public relations work of the Association. A complete organization of district chairmen and sub-committees was established over the entire state. These channels were used for dissemination of facts which help to develop a citizenry adequately and correctly informed regarding University affairs. The Association also sponsored scholarships and loan funds; cooperated with alumni clubs in establishing scholarship funds as a club activity. Recognizing the need of strong alumni clubs, the Association has furnished club officers with comprehensive outlines of suitable club activities. Since class organizations are essential to supplement club activities, the Association cooperates with class officers by providing class directories, addressing service, multigraphing letters and the numerous other activities that are necessary to maintain organized effort. Since September first more than half a million pieces of mail have been handled at Association headquarters.

This brief mention of just a few Association services should prove that the Wisconsin Alumni Association is first and foremost a service organization. Fortunately, too, these services are expanding. This is as it should be for as these services expand and multiply the Association becomes increasingly valuable to the University and to its alumni. These services are made possible by your membership dues. Your support makes it possible to develop and maintain a well-rounded service program.

It is this program of activities which makes our Association the strong right arm of the University. Our Association acts as the connecting link between the alumni, the University, the Board of Regents and the State. Through this Association you get definite, tangible membership benefits. This

DDOUBLE careers are unusual even in a progressive modern world, and when these careers involve geographical hops from Florida to California, all of them leaving a successful restaurant behind, there is a real success story. It belongs to two members of the class of 1904, Henrietta Findeisen and Hudson (Happy) Werder. They have been classmates, sweethearts, husband and wife, business partners. Double careers indeed!

There was a five-year interim however between college and the partnership. Henrietta had wanted to teach modern languages. She studied in Europe for more than a year after being graduated from Wisconsin and then took a job with the University of Chattanooga. In 1909 she was married to Hudson B. Werder.

They settled in a Chicago suburb, in a Frank Lloyd Wright house, the kitchen of which boasted the first double enamel sink ever built. This sink was Henrietta's own idea, and she is very proud of it. Unfortunately she did not patent it so has had to win other laurels for the family exchequer and fame.

The next move came in four years. Henrietta and Hudson joined her father, a retired Chicago manufacturer, and her sister, Oak Park artist, in the purchase of 20,000 acres of rolling land in northeast Colorado. On this property was a little settlement, a straggly group of unpainted frontier shacks known on the maps as Hereford. The Werders turned their artistic talents to work at once and replaced the shanties with modern commercial structures, attractive homes, beautiful school, and a large community house for the cultural and recreational activities of the countryside.

The outstanding feature of this community, the institution which brought it fame, was Hereford Inn. Set down in the midst of a country traversed by muddy prairie trails, this inn was modern and charming, dispensing western hospitality and choice food. Its reputation started the Werders in their double career as hosts to the hungry.

In the beginning the Werders employed a manager, but Henrietta soon discovered that the role of hostess to the public requires more than mere ownership. She had had no personal experience in cooking, but she started getting it fast. Hudson for his part busied himself with the management of the ranch and the community. At night he played host at the inn. Double shift in the double career!

After the Colorado project was well under way, the Warders happened to make a trip to Florida. While there they were induced to assume operation of the dining room at the Granada apartments, next door to Flagler's Royal Palms hotel. The Florida boom was on, and they enjoyed story-book success until the bubble burst. They returned north. Denver caught their fancy.

THEY purchased the Blue Parrot Inn in the "Queen City of the Plains," at 1718 Broadway, within a block of the city's three leading hotels. They quickly made it the city's distinctive dining spot. This restaurant is today as popular with the Denver public as it was in its beginning.

Again Mrs. Werder's family took a hand in shaping the double careers. Henrietta's sister, Mrs. Frank Pebbles of Oak Park, suggested that they join forces in opening a restaurant in the Chicago area. Mrs. Pebbles had hitherto been interested chiefly in art and philanthropy. In the early '20's she had founded Chicago's highly successful Vocational Society for Shut-ins, which was among the first organizations to give handicapped individuals an opportunity to learn useful and remunerative crafts and to become self-supporting.

It was in 1932 that Mrs. Pebbles and Mrs. Werder opened the Blue Parrot Patio at 1120 Westgate in Oak Park, in the section of the suburb known as the English village. Not content with the instantaneous success of this tearoom, they acquired Le Petit Gourmet at 619 N. Michigan avenue in Chicago's near north side. This famous restaurant attracts a clientele from all over the United States. It is on the "must" list for visitors to Chicago along with Marshall Field's and the Planetarium.

The delightful Italian courtyard of

Le Petit Gourmet is one of the several enterprises housed in the Italian courtyard, which brings to busy Michigan avenue an old world charm and peace. Some of Chicago's smartest parties are held in its private dining rooms. In one of these is a beautiful old Italian marble fireplace from the world renowned Potter Palmer mansion.

In the course of their double careers the Werders acquired a son, Frederick. By 1934 he was old enough for a business of his own and a wife. Both he and his wife, the former Laura Sparks of Youngstown, Ohio, were graduates of the University of Wisconsin, like his parents. The senior Werders decided to open a restaurant for him. He chose to learn the food business in the family restaurant in Denver, the Blue Parrot. By 1939 the Werder family was ready with its newest enterprise, this time in Hollywood.

Frederick named it Gourmet Hollywood. It is located at 6534 Sunset boulevard and like Le Petit Gourmet in Chicago it is built around a courtyard or patio, to use the California term. There is a quaint wishing well under an olive tree to add a special quality to the setting. Restaurant mortality is said to be high in Hollywood, but already Gourmet Hollywood is the mecca of epicureans among the film stars and their friends.

Another outcome of the double career of the Senior Werders is the pair of tiny granddaughters, Sandra and Wendee. The latter was born on the day that the Hollywood restaurant was opened. The parents and grandparents confidently expect these two to enroll at Wisconsin in the future and lay a wreath or two on the double crowns of the family.

Henrietta and Hudson B. Werder have since their graduation in 1904 carved careers which offer double inspiration to college grads of today, the personal qualities making for ambition and success and the choice of so universal a business as food. Good food is in demand everywhere, and smart are the hosts who can serve it with the delicate flavors and the distinctive settings which the public appreciate.

She Once Didn't Have Enough to Do, But . . .

"I OWE all this to my mother" is the favorite phrase of great men. Not often has history recorded the same tribute to a mother from a daughter. In the case of Helen M. Zepp, '27, however, the saying is not only true but oft expressed. Helen regales her friends in Chicago frequently with the tales of her start in the life insurance business.

She begins with something like this: "Did you ever say 'That is the last thing in the world I will ever do' and then have to eat your words—and like it?"

That's what happened to her within two years after graduation from Wisconsin. She had held a secretarial position for two years and was complaining about getting into a rut because she wasn't as busy as she had been while a student at the University. Her mother, like the mothers of the last century who wanted one son in the ministry, wanted one member of the family in the life insurance business. She had worked unsuccessfully with her son and then turned to Helen. The answer was always "no."

The moment complaints appeared, however, Mrs. Zepp renewed her campaign. She persuaded Helen to quit her job and get another with a life insurance company. As Helen puts it gaily, "Before I knew how it happened, I stood shivering with a rate book in one hand and a contract in the other to sell life insurance in the city of Chicago.

"I knew nothing about life insurance except that my family had always believed in it. I know less about selling, and I was actually scared to death. I didn't sleep for the first three months, my nights were spent worrying about how scared I was. My days and evenings were crowded full with calling on people to tell the wonders of life insurance and studying the intricacies of the business."

No wonder Helen was a little nervous over the outcome of this shift in occupation. She made the change in October, 1929, a date still significant to adults even though other world-shaking dates have been moved into place beside it in the years since. The stock market crashed the same week her new career was started. In her state of mind she hardly noticed the crash. She was too busy.

Busy she has been ever since. Now she moans, "To think I once complained I didn't have enough to do."

HELEN has enlarged her scope of activities in numerous ways. She has been a speaker on many insurance programs in her own company, the Equitable Life Assurance society of New York, at company conventions and National Life association conventions, educational forums, vocational guidance programs and C.L.U. programs. The last means chartered life underwriter. Helen won her initials, C.L.U., in 1938. The qualifications are based on successful completion of certain rigid examinations plus production and years of service requirements.

She has become a life member of the Quarter Million Dollar Round Table of the National Association of Life Underwriters. Membership in this group of women producers only is based on the production of new life insurance amounting to at least $250,000 annually for three successive years.

Another side of her life is active participation in the affairs of the University of Wisconsin Alumnae club of Chicago. She served first as treasurer, then as vice president, and next as president from 1938 to 1940. At present she is finance chairman of the club. When she was president, her board meetings were a joy to all who attended. They were businesslike in timing, fruitful in accomplishment.

It was during Helens' term as president that the Alumnae club shifted its loan fund

Helen Zepp's mother was largely responsible for her success

for needy students at the University to a scholarship fund, in accordance with the advice of Secretary M. E. McCaffrey of the board of regents. The fund-raising record of the club during her regime was most impressive and unparalleled in the history of the group. The map sale, the scholarship fund, the establishment of a memorial fund for Jessie M. Shepherd, an early president of the club, and like efforts enabled the club to send about $600 to the University in one year. Ordinarily the club, which has about 35-40 active members, sends $100 to $150. Helen's leadership was also directly responsible for the bringing in of a local paid-up membership of 93, the largest number in any club year.

Not only is Helen a good local member, she is an enthusiastic member of the Wisconsin Alumni association. Nearly every year she fills her car with friends to make the trip back for the Alumni institute and reunion festivities.

Other groups which claim a part of her interest are her sorority, Delta Zeta, the Y. W. C. A., and Pan-Hellenic of Park Ridge, Ill., where Helen lives with her family.

Any observer can judge from these details about Helen M. Zepp that she likes people and knows how to elicit the best brand of cooperation from them in any mutual enterprise. It is not self-evident however from the record that she is also an ardent horsewoman. She rides regularly several times a week in suburban forest preserves, winter and summer.

The '41 Reunions

Goedjen named Association head; capacity crowds jam all events

The Alumni Association's newly elected president, A. J. Goedjen, '07

EVERYWHERE one went on the weekend of June 20-21-22, there was complete unanimity regarding the tremendous success of the 1941 reunions. The Alumni Institute and the Glenn Frank dinner on Friday were exceptionally well attended. The Saturday night dinner on the Union Terrace turned out to be the highlight of the weekend. The Sunday morning breakfasts on the Terrace will long be remembered by those who whiled away hours over a cup of coffee in this delightful setting. But more about that later.

Albert J. Goedjen, '07, vice-president of the Association for the past two years, was named president to succeed Howard T. Greene, '15. Mr. Goedjen is vice-president of the Wisconsin Public Service corporation and maintains his home and offices in Green Bay.

To assist Mr. Goedjen in managing the affairs of the Association during the coming year, the directors named Clayton F. Van Pelt, '22, Fond du Lac Circuit court judge, to the 1st vice-president's post; Philip H. Falk, '21, Madison's superintendent of schools, to the 2nd vice-presidency; Mrs. Hugo Kuechenmeister, '13, recently elected national president of Alpha Xi Delta sorority, secretary; and Frank O. Holt, '07, dean of the University Extension Div., treasurer.

Newly elected directors of the Association were announced at the same time. The mail ballots disclosed the following were elected to directorships:

Two year term: Harry W. Adams, Walter Alexander, Richard S. Brazeau, Dr. James P. Dean, Mrs. Lucy Rogers Hawkins, Joseph W. Jackson, Mrs. Hugo Kuechenmeister, Mrs. V. W. Meloche, Herbert Terwilliger, and Clayton Van Pelt.

Three year term: Mrs. L. D. Barney, Dr. Sam Boyer, H. E. Broadfoot, Mrs. O. E. Burns, Jerry Donohue, William D. Hoard, Jr., F. F. Martin, William N. Smith, Guy M. Sundt, and Arthur E. Timm.

At the directors' meeting on Saturday, Mrs. Carl Johnson, '94, was re-elected to the University board of visitors as an alumni Association representative.

DR. ROBIN C. BUERKI, '15, superintendent at the Wisconsin General Hospital for the past 18 years, was the honored guest

A small part of the overflow crowd at the Half Century club luncheon. Howard Greene can be seen in the background handing out the Golden Jubilee awards and principal speaker at the Institute luncheon on Friday noon. Before Dr. Buerki spoke, Philip Falk, chairman of the Association's Institute committee, presented Dr. Buerki with an etching of the Wisconsin General hospital as a token of appreciation from the Alumni Association. The luncheon meeting was under the joint sponsorship of the Association and the Madison Alumni club. Miss Ruth Kentzler, '17, club president, presided.

Dr. Buerki spoke on "Your Health and the Hospital." He described some of the findings of his two year study of graduate medical education, during which time he visited all the major hospitals in the United States.

"The hospital stands with the church and the school as one of the three great social institutions in the community," he said. "It's your hospital you should know more about, too. You could live without education, but I doubt that you could live without your health."

Following the luncheon, the Institute members adjourned to the Union theater where a panel discussion had been arranged on research work being done on the University campus. Dean E. B. Fred of the Graduate school was chairman of the meeting. He discussed briefly the broader aspects of the general research program and told of the work being sponsored by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation.

Prof. Olaf A. Hougen of the chemical engineering department, speaking on his department's research, called attention to the disappointment of all concerned at the failure of the legislature to provide adequate facilities.

"Here is something of great importance to national defense," he said, "of importance to our national resources and our new industries, of importance in making new discoveries and reducing their costs to possible common usage. Certainly a new chemical engineering building would not have been an educational luxury. It would have been good business sense, to say the least."

Also on the program were Dr. Elmer Sevringhaus, '16, of the Medical school, and Prof. Conrad A. Elvehjem, '23, of the biochemistry department.

Dr. Sevringhaus' discussion of endocrinology brought out two main new developments of the Wisconsin School of Medicine—the verified importance of inland residents using iodized salt as an easy method of acquiring enough iodine in the body, and the increased explanations medical men here have found for obesity. With Dr. Arnold Jackson, '16, he has been making a study of the efficiency of iodized salt. With Dr. William S. Middleton of the Medical school Sevringhaus has been studying the use of insulin in diabetic patients.

Prof. Elvehjem described the new era in nutrition, in which, incidently, he is a national authority. He pointed to new procedures which have enabled scientists to "do away with experiments on animals and rely more upon chemical tests" in vitamin and nutritional work. He predicted that the

"hysteria among the public over synthetic vitamins will pass rapidly," and asked the public to "educate itself on how to get vitamins from natural foods except in cases of specific deficiencies", thus eliminating self-medication.

THE late Dr. Glenn Frank was memorialized as "the perfect liberal" at a dinner in the Memorial Union attended by more than 500 alumni and others and sponsored by the Wisconsin X Club.

Characterizing Dr. Frank, who died with his son, Glenn, Jr., in an automobile crash near Green Bay last Sept. 15, as "the perfect liberal," Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins college at Winter Park, Fla., declared that "his whole life bears this out."

"The record of Glenn Frank's life is a record not unparalleled in the America of today or yesterday," Dr. Holt said. "It is the glory of our way of life that when such a man is born he is sure to rise."

Gov. Heil, delivering "Wisconsin tribute to a fine citizen," said that "the individuals who saw fit to relinquish this man's services are no longer in control."

Dean James A. James, who was the dean of the college when Glenn Frank attended Northwestern University, spoke of his work as a student and later as a member of the faculty at the Evanston school.

"As one looks over the years, he certainly realizes that Glenn Frank belonged to a select company of men to whom the word "genius" might honestly apply."

John S. Lord, past Association president and vice-president of the X Club, read some of the hundreds of telegrams which came to the Association offices in a steady stream from the nationally famous men and women who were unable to attend the memorial dinner.

The Rev. Ermel B. Frye of the First Methodist church of Madison spoke glowingly of Glenn Frank, Jr. "He showed the stuff out of which all true Americans are made. The kind of stuff which early entered into the warp and woof of his illustrious father's character."

Harry A. Bullis, the moving force behind the memorial dinner, president of the X Club and largely responsible for the raising of the funds with which the portrait was purchased, presented the picture to the University. In so doing he spoke glowingly of Glenn Frank as the president of the University, stating that he "made the University more truly Wisconsin, serving the people of the entire state, not just the student body."

"Only because of men like Glenn Frank will there be a University—forever."

Little Celeste Smith, a niece of Mrs. Glenn Frank, unveiled the portrait as President Dykstra arose to accept it.

President Dykstra paid tribute to Frank's ability and intellect.

"Tonight this group pays tribute to the tenth president of the University, Glenn Frank. Just at the time when Wisconsin needed distinguished service, this man took on the responsibility and fulfilled it magnificently."

A portion of the large crowd which attended the Glenn Frank memorial dinner on Friday night

MEETING just prior to the general Association meeting on Saturday, the Association board of directors took several steps which will be of interest to all readers. On motion of Mr. Goedjen the by-laws were changed so that the term of office of the officers and members of the executive committee will be for a one year period, starting on July 1 immediately succeeding their selection, instead of on September 1.

A motion to include nominations to the Union council and the board of visitors as duties of the regular Association nominating committee was accepted. Also accepted was a motion that the officers confer with the board of regents to determine whether or not the Association could appoint members of the Athletic Board instead of only making nominations.

An accepted motion introduced by Myron T. Harshaw, '12, was that Association appointees to the athletic board, the board of visitors and the Union council be limited to two successive terms.

THE Play Circle theater of the Union was crowded when Howard Greene called the annual Association meeting to order on the morning of June 21. Members had come to hear reports on the state of the Association, and heard some highly pleasing discussions.

Treasurer William Haight reported that dues collections to date were approximately $1,000 more this year than during the same period a year ago. The turbulent international conditions had caused a slight decrease in the return on the investment account.

More than 700 reuners crammed the spacious Union Terrace for the Saturday night dinner

Secretary A. John Berge presented his brief report, telling of the progress made in the membership campaigns conducted from the Association offices and by alumni clubs. He paid compliment to West Bend, Detroit and Milwaukee for their membership work. He later discussed the work of the Wisconsin X club, the expanded and improved placement work, the accomplishments of the legislative workers, the organization of the Half Century club, and the publication of the University history in the ALUMNUS.

Frank Birch of Milwaukee, chairman of the Association's resolutions committee presented resolutions praising the board of regents for its excellent and effective administration of University affairs, thanking Gov. Heil for his fine support of the University during the last legislative session, complimenting the X club in general and Harry Bullis in particular for the work they had accomplished in their first year, thanking General Mills, Inc., and the Heil Company for their assistance in the publication of the Stuhldreher Football letters, and finally a resolution endorsing the University's proposed building program and urging all alumni to take part in an active program to secure legislative approval for this sorely needed program of construction. All resolutions were adopted by unanimous vote.

The following resolution was then presented to the members and was adopted by unanimous vote:

As Joseph E. Davies broadcast his appeal for an awakened America

"The Alumni of the University represented in this annual meeting hope that the University will be permitted to continue as one of the leading universities of our country and that the future sons and daughters of our state will be assured educational opportunities at least the equal of those of any other young people in the country. Education in Wisconsin should go forward in accordance with the courageous motto of our state. We therefore pledge ourselves to the task of promoting specific gifts and bequests to the University to the end that a general endowment fund may be created for the University. We know that such gifts will come to our University in increasing numbers and amounts when friends of the youth of Wisconsin appreciate the good that can be accomplished through such gifts."

ONE hundred and thirty veteran graduates of the University—alumni who could look back at least 50 years to the time when they received their diplomas—met at the University club on June 21 and organized the Half Century club. They were guests of the University.

Dr. Harry L. Russell, '88, former dean of the College of Agriculture, was elected president; Dr. Edward H. Ochsner, '91, of Chicago, was named vice president, and Mrs. Sophia M. Briggs, '88, of Madison, secretary.

The group adopted a constitution which provided that the purpose of the organization shall be "to promote fellowship among veteran alumni of the University; and to function as an auxiliary organization of the Alumni Association in handling reunion activities. All alumni who are graduates of the University for fifty years or more are eligible for membership. The club will meet annually on Alumni Day as guests of the University.

Following the election of officers, President Russell inducted the members of the Class of 1891 into membership. Howard T. Greene presented each member of '91 with one of the Association's Golden Jubilee certificates.

A feature of this first meeting was the music of the Continentals, a quartet of instrumentalists and songsters, sent up from Chicago for the special entertainment of the Half Century club by generous George J. Haight, '99, of Chicago.

THE first annual meeting of the Wisconsin X club was held on Saturday afternoon. The report of the nominating committee presented by Judge C. B. Rogers, '93, was accepted and the following officers were elected: Harry A. Bullis, president; John S. Lord, vice-president; and John Berge, secretary-treasurer.

committee of the Association and the board of regents and the plans for obtaining gifts and bequests. He recommended that a committee of the X Club meet with the officers of the Association to formulate plans for assisting in this project.

PROBABLY the most enjoyable feature of the entire reunion weekend was the Senior-Alumni dinner on the lakeshore terrace of the Memorial Union on Saturday night. More than 700 alumni and their families gathered on the flagstone terrace to enjoy a delicious meal in a most unique setting. Threatening rain clouds thoughtfully held off until the next day. Music was furnished by the University concert band under the direction of Prof. Ray Dvorak and by a quartet, the Continentals, especially dispatched from Chicago by George I. Haight for the specific enjoyment of the Half Century club members, but "loaned" to other classes and to this dinner. Earl Brown, '21, led the group in singing some of the old favorites.

After the dinner the entire group filled the main theatre of the Union to near capacity to witness the presentation of special awards and to hear the Hon. Joseph E. Davies and President C. A. Dykstra give two interesting and pertinent talks.

John Berge presented three students with special awards. Quarterback Tom Farris was given the $100 Walter Alexander award, and Carla Waller and Robert Lampman were given the Alumni Association's outstanding junior awards, each amounting to $100.

Howard Greene then called Mrs. Carl Johnson, Benjamin A. Kiekhofer, and William S. Kies to the rostrum to receive special certificates of appreciation for the fine services they have rendered during the past years.

Warning that the "lies and deceits of Nazi strategy" are being used against the United States now, Joseph E. Davies warned the audience that "war is at our doorstep now".

"The American people must not be misled. We are not making this 'all out' effort just to aid Britain. We are struggling now for our own defense."

President Dykstra, in reviewing the school year, commented that this year he had heard so much less of the freedom we want and so much more of the responsibilities students now have.

"If you have any idea that the student body won't uphold the American way," he said, "assure yourselves that we have on the campus as fine, as high grade, as sterling a bunch of boys and girls as we have ever had in the history of the University."

"All the virtue of Wisconsin didn't pass out with the Class of 1891," he added and the crowd chuckled.

TWO thousand bachelor's, master's and doctor's degrees were conferred on Wisconsin seniors and graduate students at the 88th annual Commencement exercises on June 23. In addition, honorary degrees were granted to Joseph E. Davies, '98, Dr. Herbert Gasser, '10, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lunt.

Gov. Julius Heil, greeting the graduates for the state, told them, "You have had an opportunity granted only in a land of freedom."

Economist, teacher, author, and fearless champion of the rights of man

RICHARD T. ELY was brought up at Fredonia, New York, under the harsh discipline of farm life. He began his life-long fight against dogmatism at Dartmouth College where he resisted dogmatic treatment to the point of suspension. After winning the Columbia Fellowship in Letters he went to Germany to study philosophy in the hope that he would find absolute truth. He soon gave this up and turned his attention to the study of economics. He became imbued with the idea that the "beginning and end of all is man" and has probably done more than any other economist to infuse this idea into American economics.

As a teacher at four great universities he trained some of the most important men of our time. Woodrow Wilson, Albert Shaw, John Finley, John R. Commons, Newton D. Baker and others were his students. He made famous the "look and see" method and made "life" and "growth" the magic words of university life. As a writer he sought to interpret the fundamental principles which guide the economic destinies of man.

Through his teaching, writing and lecturing at Chautauqua and elsewhere he brought about a remarkable revival of popular interest in economics—and all because he found the neglected but obvious truth that economics deals with man. Before him economics had been called the dismal science; he made it the science of human happiness.

Prof. Ely came to the University of Wisconsin from his post at Johns-Hopkins University in 1892, at the request of Pres. Thomas C.

Chamberlin. He brought with him the refreshing idea of round table discussions for his advanced students, then more familiar in the East than in the mid-Western schools. It was early in his career as chairman of the department of economics at the University that he was subjected to the severe attacks by the State superintendent of education, which are described on the succeeding pages.

Having weathered the political outburst which attempted to discredit him, Dr. Ely continued to enjoy many years of association with the University. He left in 1925 to assume the directorship of the Institute for Economic Research at Northwestern University. After five years at Evanston, Ely moved to New York. With him went the Institute, now named the Ely Economic Foundation. He was named Honorary Associate in Economics at Columbia University and was designated honorary professor of economics at Northwestern and Wisconsin.

It was through Prof. Ely's influence that the American Economic Association was established and the Journal of Land and Public Utility Economics first published.

His most outstanding and popular writing is, without doubt, his "Outline of Economics," probably more universally used for student text study than any other single volume. "Property and Contract" is probably his second most important volume.

His hundreds of former students will welcome this chapter on Pres. Charles K. Adams, under whom he served.

Chapter VIII

Charles Kendall Adams

by Richard T. Ely

IN THE history of nations, dissensions, hatreds and wars occupy most of the time. Occasionally there come periods when old disturbances seem to melt away, and mutual relationships of a friendly sort prevail. At times such as these, history takes an optimistic tone. Men begin to look forward to continuous progress to which no limit is set. Such a period in the history of the United States occurred during the presidency of James Monroe. It has been called "the era of good feeling", for the feuds between the followers of Hamilton and those of Jefferson had subsided. In 1826 Jefferson and John Adams died almost at the same time, and on the lips of each was an expression of good will toward the other.

In the history of the University of Wisconsin the presidency of Charles Kendall Adams stands out as an era of good feeling. He was elected president without opposition and he accomplished the difficult feat of remaining on good terms with the regents, the legislature and the faculty during his entire activity as president. On this account President Adams is unique in the history of the University.

Going back to Bascom we find that strife and struggle were outstanding in his presidency. Bascom was a striking personality whose influence has been felt throughout the history of the state and the University. But it is probably true that no man who has been president of the University has had less tact than Bascom. He was the sort of man who was more concerned with an adequate statement of the truth than with the amenities of an occasion. He regarded the board of regents in the light of an annoyance and was not afraid to let them know it. He was not afraid to rebuke to his face a regent whose dealings with the University seemed corrupt. The University of Wisconsin was only a college in Bascom's day, but a college with men of distinction who served it with zeal because they believed in its future. He was a power always working for better things in the state and the University. Bascom's particular enemy was Boss Elisha W. Keyes, a leader of the Republicans. Naturally Keyes wanted to get rid of Bascom, and Bascom became increasingly restive in this hostile political atmosphere. Finally he told Keyes that if he could have a year of peace as president of the University he would resign and go back to Williams College whence he had come.

This agreement was kept and Bascom was followed by Thomas Crowder Chamberlin, who remained five years. That he accomplished great things at the University, all agree, but his work, too, was carried on with perpetual struggle. I spoke to Chamberlain just before he left Wisconsin, and he said, "I came to Wisconsin a young man of forty-four, and now I leave Wisconsin at forty-nine, an old man." He had done his work and was glad to leave for Chicago where he had years of peace.<sup>1</sup>

Chamberlin was followed by Charles Kendall Adams, whose choice met with the unanimous approval of regents, faculty and legislature. And he was able to retain their support throughout his whole career as president. Of course, there were differences of opinion that sprang up from time to time, but they never grew to substantial proportions, and they never interfered with the feeling of good will. When, after ten years, Adams resigned on account of his failing health, he was rewarded with expressions of praise and appreciation which must have warmed his heart. At the last he and his devoted wife were buried together in Madison, near the University to which they had given so much.

Adams was followed by Charles R. Van Hise, whose choice was far from meeting with unanimous approval. His entire term of presidency was disturbed by dissension and charges of disgraceful conduct. I often used to wonder how he could endure the attacks made upon him. His wife once told my wife that he took it as part of the day's work, and that at night he would lie down and sleep like a child. I new there was no other president who could have taken it in this way. Van Hise was followed by Glenn Frank whose retirement was forced. This brief history reveals that the only president of Wisconsin, since it has come into prominence as an educational institution, whose administration was characterized by peace, was Adams.

Adams was 58 years old when he became President of the University of Wisconsin. His whole career, all his experiences, had been the best kind of preparation for his task and under his presidency the University went ahead, not in a spectacular way, but in a way of steady progress and expansion.

He was born in Derby, Vermont, a small township, of parents stemming from English ancestry, and spent his boyhood working on the farm with his father. When he was twenty-one he moved with his parents to Iowa. C. F. Smith, in his sketch of Adams' life, relates the story of how the young Adams would sometimes, as he ploughed the farm with his father, have a book before him on the plough stock. He began preparation for college after he was twenty-one and succeeded in crowding it into one year. He entered the University of Michigan when he was nearly twenty-three and from all accounts of those years had a tough struggle to get through. When he came to Wisconsin in 1894 he told the students about his college days: "I worked my way through college," he said in his opening address to new students in 1894, "and was poorer than any of you can be; but in my freshman year I saved money enough to buy a dozen good books in general literature, and I read them. There is nothing in my whole career I am prouder of than that."

AT MICHIGAN he fortunately came under the influence of one of the most inspiring teachers of history the country has known. The fact that White appealed to him more than any other professor is contained in the dedication of his book on Democracy and Monarchy in France.

To Andrew D. White, LL. D.

"My dear Friend: I have long regarded it as the most fortunate circumstance of my collegiate life that, during the five years of your active service as Professor of History in the University of Michigan, I was in the same institution, pursuing either undergraduate or postgraduate studies. To the inspiration of your lectures and your course, more than to any other course, I owe my fondness for historical study."

Adams, in turn, attracted White's attention and when White left Michigan, Adams was appointed instructor in history on his recommendation.

During the first four years of teaching he was granted a leave of absence to study at French and German universities. He heard lectures at Leipzig, Munich, Heidelberg, Berlin and Paris, observing closely the teaching methods used abroad, as well as studying history. At the end of four years he was made full professor. His introduction of the seminar method for advanced students was probably one of the most successful of his innovations at Michigan. He was a believer in and felt admiration for the University, and during his last three or four years there wielded a great deal of influence on the University's development.

The charming Mrs. Adams whose graciousness and social attributes did much to aid the University

IN 1881 he started giving lectures at Cornell University, where Andrew D. White was President. White's choice for a man to succeed him was Charles K. Adams, and at a meeting of the board held on July 13, 1885, Adams received the votes of twelve out of fifteen trustees present at the meeting. The seven years during which Adams served as President of Cornell were years of "toil and trouble" for him. The difficulties he experienced there were severe enough to make him and his wife unhappy. His unhappiness was expressed in a letter he wrote to Andrew D. White three years after his resignation. He said, "I have no desire again to breathe the atmosphere of the place". In spite of this there is no record of his friction with the trustees in either the minutes of the board on accepting his resignation or in his final report to the board.<sup>1</sup>

At the time of Adams' resignation from Cornell he had no intention of accepting another presidency. But again Andrew D. White's strong endorsement led to his acceptance of the post of successor to President Chamberlin of Wisconsin. He was admirably suited to the post for he had had extensive experience in a state university and in addition had never lived in Wisconsin and therefore had no entangling alliances of any sort.

My own experiences when I received my call to Wisconsin from Chamberlin showed me how fortunate it was for Adams to have had his preparation. I had never attended a state university and as a boy I was inclined to look down upon the University of Michigan which was attended by a number of my classmates at the Normal School in Fredonia, New York. I felt sorry for them that they could not go to Dartmouth or to any of the other private foundations. When I was at the Johns Hopkins my president, Daniel Coit Gilman, whose ideas were far from democratic, dominated the entire institution. Therefore, when I came to Wisconsin I was unfamiliar with democratic processes and was inclined to be impatient with them. The long faculty meetings we had at Wisconsin were a bore to me at first because of my past, but Adams had never known anything else and adjusted himself well.

Adams' visit to Madison induced him to accept the job. He wrote to Moses Coit Tyler "I did not think there was one chance in ten of my taking the place. But the regents, the professors and the people made love to me with such persuasiveness and energy that all my determinations gradually melted away."

President Adams began his work in September, 1892. In his inaugural address he expressed his hopes and ambitions for the growth of the University.

"In this favored domain these relations are peculiarly intimate. Nowhere else are the university and the preparatory schools bound together in a firmer or more helpful alliance. In no other state has the modern method of reaching the people by the means known as university extension been so general or so successful. Nowhere else have the masses of the people received so much direct assistance from the teaching force at the university; and nowhere else have the people in their turn shown a higher appreciation and esteem for the university which bears the name of the commonwealth.

"Meanwhile our working income, while slightly increased, has fallen behind our real necessities. This statement may be a matter of surprise to those who recall the generous provisions of the legislature two years ago; but that surprise will vanish when it is remembered that the legislation referred to was for the erection of buildings. The fruit of this will be three noble structures in every way creditable to the University and the state. The Dairy Building, the Armory, and the Law Building were called for by absolute necessity. . . . Other buildings are loudly called for. The large accessions to the College of Engineering demand an immediate increase of accommodations in the shops, classrooms and laboratories. The chemical laboratory can hardly satisfy the necessities of the University another year. Ladies' Hall, crowded to its utmost capacity, greatly needs an addition of a dining-room, a gymnasium and enlarged accommodations for the department of music. It must be extended if it is to be continued."

THE first time I met Adams was at the summer school at Martha's Vineyard, where we both gave instruction. At Michigan he had been nicknamed "Farmer Adams" and my first glimpse of him showed me the reason for this. His appearance was rather ungainly and awkward and he was not what one might call meticulous about his dress. But when I met him again at Wisconsin a great transformation had taken place. In his own home and wherever he appeared he was well dressed and well groomed. As I think of him sitting before the open fireplace in the living room of his University residence, I recall that he reminded me somehow of an English lord of the manor. Certainly one would never have thought of calling him "Farmer Adams" now. What had happened was that he had married, as his second wife, the Mrs. Adams we knew at Wisconsin. She was the widow of the publisher Barnes and she brought with her to the University fine works of art, furniture and laces. She always appeared as one equal to the situation. Their home was elegant, if not luxurious and she rendered a great service in putting the University of Wisconsin in a position of social leadership. As soon as the Adams' came, a struggle for social supremacy began between the old families of Madison and the University people. The struggle was plainly in evidence, and before long Mrs. Adams put the University on the top. Adams, himself would not have done this but his good wife took the initiative and with her help he was equal to the situation.

Mrs. Adams always had the support of my wife, a Virginia girl belonging to one of the best families in that state. Soon after the

Military training was compulsory under the terms of the Morrill act in the '90s

Adams' came to Wisconsin we gave a dinner party in their honor. A rather distinguished gathering assembled. General Fairchild, who had been a general in the Civil War and who had been governor of the State, was one of the guests. He had a charming personality and could always be relied upon to be the life of a party. At the dinner table tales were told, some of which were a bit risqué, and they became more so as the dinner proceeded. General Fairchild, after every story of this kind, would say, "I have a good story, too. You must work up to it." As a matter of fact he never got around to telling any of them. But my wife and I were a little disturbed over how Mrs.

Adams would take these stories. She looked so diffident and so mild. Then she told this story which relieved our anxiety: "Aunt Martha, a pious Catholic, was lying on her death bed. A priest was called in to administer the last rites of the Church and to console her. 'Mother,' he began, 'I know, I know, Father,' Aunt Martha interrupted, 'I will soon be in the bosom of Beelzebub.' 'Mother, Mother, you mean the bosom of Abraham,' the priest said. 'Father, when you have been a lone, lorn widow for forty years, it doesn't much matter whose bosom.' Then Martha passed away.—" This reassured all of us.<sup>1</sup>

HOSPITALITY may be used to exert a great deal of influence, and a president's wife may help immeasurably in winning friends and support for the university. Mrs. Adams certainly did her part in rendering a great service to Wisconsin in the way of developing the social amenities. President Adams, too, was interested in the social activities of the University, and this interest served a good purpose for it had been rather lacking in Bascom and Chamberlin. Adams encouraged the growth of fraternities and the participation in athletics. Intercollegiate sports flourished in his administration and Wisconsin gained the first place among the institutions in the West. Adam's belief that the prowess of athletic teams is an important factor in the drawing power of a university, proved to be sound. Although the first five years of his administration showed the effects of the general business depression, the years 1898-1900 saw a substantial rise in attendance.

Adams had planned new libraries at Michigan and Cornell, and Wisconsin benefited from his experience. A prominent place in his inaugural address was devoted to the discussion of Wisconsin's need for a new library. "A college may be eminently successful with a comparatively small library. But to a university a large and constantly increasing collection of books is as necessary as fuel to the fire." Fired by the ambition to provide a beautiful library for Wisconsin, Adams executed the plans and secured the appropriations for a building to house both the libraries of the University and the State Historical Society. The beautiful building was completed and occupied in the summer of 1900. The cost had been about $750,000, and as C. F. Smith reports, it is no wonder that Adams remarked at the time of its dedication. "At last we have done something worthy of the State. For the new library, with its stately exterior, its marble floors, and staircases, and rich yet pure decoration, its spacious reading-rooms, its separate suites for periodicals and maps and manuscripts, documents, newspaper files, departmental seminars, its cataloguing and administrative offices in either wing, its museum

Our present Music Hall was the library during Adams' term until the present building was opened floor, and its ample, clean shelved, well-lighted stacks — to those acquainted with the former quarters of either collection — seemed to represent a fifty years' leap of civilization." But the physical appearance of the building was not of as great importance as the fact that when Adams came to Wisconsin in 1892 there were only 29,000 books and 8,000 pamphlets in the University. When he left in 1902 there were 250,000 books and 135,000 pamphlets.

President Adams was able to bring to fruition all his plans for new constructions set forth in his inaugural address. Ladies Hall, University Hall, the Machine Shops, a new engineering building, saw the light of day under his guidance.

The expansion in the number of buildings was accompanied by a proportionate increase in the faculty. Adams was always wide awake to the talents of the younger members of the faculty and he exercised a great deal of care in making appointments. He felt it was his duty to look out for young men of ability and to give them a chance. He took an especial delight in appointing such men. When he was negotiating with a new man he called it "making love to" him, and it is a generally accepted opinion that he selected young men of fine character and scholarship "to make love to". It is said that he kept a card catalogue of promising scholars, and that he followed the same practice in making appointments as did Andrew D. White at Cornell. White described this method in the following way:

"The faculty . . . was elected by the trustees upon my recommendation. In deciding upon candidates I put no trust in mere paper testimonials, no matter from what source, but always saw candidates themselves, talked with them, and then secured confidential communications concerning them from those who knew them best." At the time when Adams came the number of members on the faculty totaled 99. When he left the total was 167, consisting of 92 professors and 75 instructors and assistants.

Adams was particularly interested in encouraging the study of the classics and he hit upon an effective way of achieving his purpose. He arranged for public lectures by eminent scholars with a view toward making the topics treated subjects for general discussion. Within two or three years the number of university students in Greek had more than doubled. Perhaps the best proof of his interest lies in the fact that in bequeathing his personal fortune he made provision for fifteen fellowships, five in Greek, five in English literature, and five in modern history.

THE importance of giving impetus to the University extension movement which had begun in President Chamberlin's last year appealed to Adams. He said:

"The wants of the people are not satisfied with the instruction that is given in the University. Within the past few years the feeling has grown to be one of the most notable features in modern education, that the University should not limit its instruction to those who are able to be in actual attendance. There are thousands, yea, tens of thousands, who desire to avail themselves of such instruction, but cannot leave their homes to go to the University. Cannot the University be taken to them? The modern university extension movement is the effort to answer this question. . . . The growth of the movement has been perhaps even more rapid in the West than in the East. The impulse early took definite form in Wisconsin. Last year more than a hundred calls for courses of extension lectures came to the University; more than forty were given. This year the demands thus far have been greater than they were at the corresponding date last year. It has been the policy of the University to respond to these calls as often as can be done without great injustice to students and the University itself. But the demands are more than we can supply."

President Adams usually had remarkable success in dealing with the State legislature. The tone of his relations with the legislators was set in the following words in his inaugural address:

"You are fortunate in having the means of supply in large abundance. Visit the University. Examine it in its minutest details. All its interests are yours, as the representatives of the people. Consider its usefulness and its possibilities. Make yourselves familiar with it; and then I have no doubt you will decide wisely and generously what provisions you will make for the improvement of the sons and daughters of Wisconsin. As I recall the history of what has already been accomplished; as I contemplate the resources of this great and noble state; as I survey the enormous possibilities and opportunities, I cannot doubt that the legislature and the people will be content with nothing short of making it worthy of the state; and this means the peer of any other university in the land."<sup>1</sup>

THE Democratic legislature had been very generous, and the story is repeated that Governor Peck once remarked that he had never gone through the University but that the University had gone through him for a million dollars. When the Republicans came in 1896 they did even better. They voted the largest appropriation which had ever been made up to that time, and continued their generosity as long as President Adams remained at the University. Pyre says that, "all told about a million and a half was expended for buildings in the ten years between 1893 and 1902." The remarkable thing is that this money was raised without the ruffling of anyone's feelings. The reason probably lies mainly in Adams' extraordinary preparation for his job and in his abundant capacity for friendship. It certainly did no harm to the University when he invited the members of the legislature to use the bowling alleys and swimming pool. The physical activity which Adams thus encouraged had its effects on the health and spirits of the legislators and probably put them in a receptive mood in which to listen to suggestions of handsome appropriations.

One of the most important events of Adams' administration centered about charges of heresy which were made against me. The story of my "trial for heresy" gives an indication of the intricate and close relations which existed between the University and the state. To maintain good will, as Adams did, in a situation which was loaded with dynamite was no mean accomplishment.

Although I came to Wisconsin at the same time that President Adams took office, it was President Chamberlin who had offered me the post at Wisconsin. To do this required rare courage, for during the five years previous to my appointment I had been attacked continually as a dangerous radical. The three social science departments, History, Political Science, and Economics, were grouped together in a School of Political Studies, of which I was made Director at what was regarded a very high salary of $3500. I was given a free hand by President Adams and I approached my job of encouraging graduate work and research work with great vigor and enthusiasm. I worked unsparingly but happily in an atmosphere of approval and encouragement. I was aware, however, that outside the University my writings on Marxian socialism and my attacks on corporate abuses were not kindly received. The Nation had been attacking me for years and on July 2, 1894, they published a letter which was designed to bring to the attention of all that I was a radical and a dangerous man.

"To the Editor of the Nation

Sir: Your statement in the last Nation, to the effect that there is a sort of moral justification for attacks upon life and property based upon a theory which comes from the colleges, libraries, and lecture rooms, and latterly from the churches, is supported by the teaching and the practice of the University of Wisconsin.

Professor Ely, director of the School of Economics, believes in strikes and boycotts, justifying and encouraging the one while practicing the other. Somewhat more than a year ago a strike occurred in the office of the Democrat Printing Company, the state printers. An agitator or walking delegate came from Kansas City to counsel and assist the strikers. He was entertained at Professor Ely's house and was in constant consultation with him. A little later a strike occurred in another printing office in this city, in which Professor Ely was also an abettor and counsellor. He also demanded of the proprietors that their office should be made into a union office, threatening to take his printing away if they did not comply. (They were publishing a paper for him as secretary of some organization or association.) Upon the refusal of his repeated demands, Professor Ely withdrew his printing, informing them that he had always been in the habit of dealing with union offices. In conversation with one of the proprietors he asserted that where a skilled workman was needed a dirty, dissipated, unmarried, unreliable, and unskilled man should be employed in preference to an industrious, skillful, trustworthy, non-union man who is the head of a family. He also stated that the latter would have no ground of complaint, as he could easily remove the objections to him by joining the union, and that conscientious scruples against joining the union would prove the individual to be a crank.

"Such is Ely the citizen and businessman — an individual who can say to citizens and taxpayers, 'Stand and deliver, or down goes your business,' and to the laboring men, 'Join the union or starve with your families.' Professor Ely, director of the School of Economics, differs from Ely, the socialist, only in the adroit and covert method of his advocacy. A careful reading of his books will discover essentially the same principles, but masked by glittering generalities and mystical and metaphysical statements susceptible of various interpretations according as a too liberal interpretation might seem for the time likely to work discomfort or loss to the writer. His books are having a considerable sale, being recommended and advertised by the University and pushed by publisher and dealers. Except where studiously indefinite and ambiguous, they have the merit of such simplicity of statements as makes them easily read by the uneducated. They abound in sanctimonious and pious cant, pander to the prohibitionist, and ostentatiously sympathize with all who are in distress. So manifest an appeal to the religious, the moral, and the unfortunate, with promise of help to all insures at the outset a large public. Only the careful student will discover their utopian, impracticable and pernicious doctrines, but their general acceptance would furnish a seeming moral justification of attack on life and property such as the country has already become too familiar with.

Very truly yours,
OLIVER E. WELLS"

The great Pat O'Dea, '98, was probably Wisconsin's most famous athlete of all times

Who was Oliver E. Wells? I was surprised and bewildered. I had never heard of him. He had never been a student of mine. What an underhanded method of bringing such serious charges! Why had he not given me an opportunity to discuss them. To my alarm the letter received more and more publicity as time went on. The accusations were serious, and the accuser turned out to be the state superintendent of education in Wisconsin, which made the matter even more serious. But investigation revealed the comforting fact that the "author was well known as a breeder of dour suspicions, a narrow and unfair critic of the University, whose position on the board was accidental and anomalous." Investigation of Mr. Wells' background revealed that he held office only as the result of an upset in the election of 1892. He had formerly been an unknown teacher in a public school, and was nominated at the last minute because the Democrats, who never expected to win, forgot to nominate some one for the post of superintendent of public instruction. He, himself, probably never expected to get beyond the stage of nomination. But the Republicans had offended the Catholics and the Lutherans with the Bennet law which put parochial schools under state supervision. Therefore the Democrats won, and Wells' unexpected authority, coupled with his suspicious nature, found an outlet in many accusations such as that made against me. I am sure that a great many charges made by him were just as unfounded in fact; but of course the public had no way of knowing about the validity of his charges. My feeling, of course, was one of intense indignation. I wrote a letter to the editor of the Wisconsin State Journal in which I said "Mr. Wells' letter contains nothing but lies. He may have heard them from others and may believe them, but nevertheless they are lies, and nothing but lies — not facts twisted and distorted, but lies, without even the semblance of truth."

President Adams, and my friends stood by me in a way, the thought of which even now, warms my heart. The Regents were determined to unearth the truth. A committee was appointed consisting of H. W. Chynoweth, John Johnston, and H. B. Dale, and the date for a formal trial was set. My friends among whom were Professor Frederick Turner and David Kinley, employed Burr W. Jones, one of the ablest attorneys in Madison, to conduct my case.

While the case was being prepared my friends set about finding the origin of the strange stories told by Wells. Kinley thought the most serious charge was that I had encouraged a strike. When he had been a student in my seminar he recalled that the employees of one of the newspapers called a strike. He set about finding the agitator of this particular strike. He succeeded in his search and finally determined that this man had attended Ely's seminar, which was held on the third floor of the Madison Opera House, and said he had a long talk with a man he supposed to be Dr. Ely. From his description of this man with whom he had conversed it was easily recognized that the description fit another student-member of the seminar who permitted the stranger to assume that he was "Ely".

The day of the trial finally came and the prosecution ordered me to produce all my articles and books. Several of my students, their arms loaded down with books, walked with me to the auditorium where the trial was held. A glimpse of the volume of my published works probably discouraged the opposition from the idea of examining them, assuming that they had that idea originally. After a few preliminary discussions on the method of procedure one of the striking printers was put on the stand. He was asked the question — "When did you last see Professor Ely." He replied, "I never saw him until today." It gratified my friends and me to see the expression of confusion on the faces of Mr. Wells and his attorney at this unexpected answer.

As the committee examined the accusations against me, one by one, they collapsed. The attack turned out a fiasco. Madison roared with laughter when there appeared in a Madison newspaper selections from Superintendent Wells' latest report, which, considered by themselves, would give the meaning that he was a dangerous radical.

The committee published their decision, completely exonerating me. Part of the regents' statement of exoneration was written by President Charles Kendall Adams, and it is now inscribed on a tablet in Bascom Hall. President Adams' statement remains to this day a beacon light in higher education. It has come to be regarded as part of the Wisconsin Magna Charta:

"As regents of the university with over a hundred instructors supported by nearly two millions of people who hold a vast diversity of views regarding the great questions which at present agitate the human mind, we could not for a moment think of recommending the dismissal or even the criticism of a teacher even if some of his opinion should, in some quarters, be regarded as visionary. Such a course would be equivalent to saying that no professor should teach anything which is not accepted by everybody as true. This would cut our curriculum down to very small proportions. We cannot for a moment believe that knowledge has reached its final goal, or that the present condition of society is perfect. We must, therefore, welcome from our teachers such discussions as shall suggest the means and prepare the way by which knowledge may be extended, present evils be removed, and others prevented. We did not believe in progress of all departments of knowledge. In all lines of academic investigation it is of the utmost importance that the investigator should be absolutely free to follow the indications of the truth wherever they may lead. Whatever may be the limitations which trammel inquiry elsewhere we believe the great state University of Wisconsin should ever encourage that continual and fearless sifting and winnowing by which alone the truth can be found."

Dykstra Resigns Mediation Post "BORROWED" by the federal government since last fall, President Dykstra resumed July 1 devotion of his full time to the University.

With high praise for his services, President Roosevelt accepted his resignation in June as chairman of the national defense mediation board. President Dykstra had resigned as draft administrator to take the mediation post on March 15.

The regents had given President Dykstra part time leave of absence to set up those two agencies and put them in smooth running order. It was understood that he would not stay with the federal government throughout the emergency.

Faculty OK's Student Court A STUDENT court which will have jurisdiction over student infractions of established rules and standards of the University was given final approval by the faculty last month.

The faculty approved a revised set of 10 articles which provides for a "student court of the University of Wisconsin," and establishes its power, jurisdiction, organization, and procedure.

The court plan was recommended by the faculty committee on discipline as a procedure in democratic self-government. The new student court will go into effect next fall if it is given a minimum affirmative vote of 2,000 in a special student election early next fall.

The court will decide all cases of student violations of standard regulations or student conduct, except cases now handled by the student life and interests committee of the faculty, or the Women's Self Government Ass'n.

Groves Drafted by Treasury Dept. PROF. HAROLD M. GROVES, '19, University tax expert and former Wisconsin legislator, will soon become consultant on tax matters at the treasury department in Washington.

Groves' services were requested by Secretary Morgenthau. The regents will be petitioned for a leave of absence for Groves so he may take the post. Groves has been on leave of absence from the University during the last semester while making an appraisal of the entire Wisconsin tax system.

Guggenheim Award Goes to Neale-Silva DR. EDUARDO NEALE-SILVA, assistant professor of Spanish, has been granted one of the 85 fellowships awarded by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial foundation to American and Canadian scholars and artists for research and creative work in 1941-42.

A native Chilean, Dr. Neale-Silva has been given the grant to study the Spanish-American novel. He will study in Colombia and Brazil.

Peace Group Calls It Quits THE university peace federation made an attempt at peace work on the campus in June, but finally decided to disband because a Communist minority was "making too much trouble."

Franklin J. Kramer, Elgin, Ill., president, declared, "We simply don't want to make a fuss by kicking out the Communists, and we realize that no peace work can be done in an organization which includes Communist members."

Before the disbanding of the group, it had been refused permission to act as co-sponsor with the Union forum committee for the annual University peace rally.

Three Prominent Faculty Members Retire this Year FOR three of Wisconsin's most prominent faculty members, the end of the semester meant not only the advent of another summer vacation, but the beginning of permanent retirement as well.

John L. Gillin, head of the department of sociology and anthropology; Chancey Juday, professor of limnology, and famed zoologist; and Andrew R. Whitson, professor of soils, will all be eligible for retirement next January, 1942. Dean George C. Sellery will be eligible for retirement in January, 1942, though he will retain his post until the end of the year.

Because of the state retirement law, no member of the faculty may remain after he reaches 70 years, although he may finish out his school term. Dean Sellery has not made any statement on his plans for next year. Dr. Juday will continue his lake water research after he stops teaching.

Professor Gillin, a noted penologist and criminologist, will retire from the faculty this June. He retires at the age of 69, a year under the compulsory retirement age. He was a member of the state pardon board from 1935 to 1939.

Professor Whitson, noted soils authority, has held a professorship at the University since 1901.

Dr. Juday's work on Wisconsin lakes will be continued in collaboration with Dr. E. A. Birge, president emeritus.

Dr. Gillin came to Madison in 1912, and since then has taught more than 8,000 students. He became chairman of the department in 1915, and in 1937 was made department chairman. In 1928 he started the first inquiry to determine what part a man's background it is that shunts him into criminal ways.

When he retires, he plans to take six months to integrate all his work in previous studies, and when he is finished, will take a plane to South America to study prisons there.

Dr. Juday was born in Indiana in 1871, and has been professor of limnology here since 1931. He came to Wisconsin first as a biologist in 1898 with the Wisconsin Geographical and Natural History survey. In 1908 he joined the Wisconsin faculty as lecturer.

He was president of the American limnological society, and is a research advisor for the United States Bureau of fisheries. Dr. Juday and Dr. Birge have published many papers on Wisconsin lakes, especially Lake Mendota.

Minnesota born, Prof. Whitson has published many documents dealing with Wisconsin soil. He was a student here from 1891-1892 and joined the staff as assistant professor in soil physics in 1899. For 40 years he has been a professor on the agricultural college campus, and is one of the best known agricultural experts in the midwest.

Organizer and first president of the American Association of Soil Survey Workers, and active in other state groups interested in soil improvement, the new Soils building on the campus is a tribute to his work. He plans to retire from teaching duty this spring, but will devote time to research and writing.

Campus Chimes To be Silenced

W. NORRIS (CURLY) WENTWORTH, daily serenader on the University's carillon, has left his post in the residence halls here to become director of residence halls at the University of Illinois, Urbana. Wentworth has been a member of the residence halls staff since 1934. He has been carillonneur since 1936, when the bells were first played.

No one has been found yet at the University to take his place, and the carillon remains silent.

Teaching Staff Level Maintained

THE University has come out of the "depressing thirties" with a teaching staff about equal in number and probably in the lower ranks more highly trained than that which it had ten years ago, the first general report of its special committee on quality of instruction told the University faculty recently.

The first committee report, presented by Prof. Mark H. Ingraham, chairman, declared that since 1931 there has been about a 24 per cent increase in the teaching load of the University and a four per cent decrease in the personnel of instruction, and that during the same time the number of students in the College of Letters and Science has increased 16 per cent while the cost per student credit has decreased 22 per cent.

DEAN GEORGE C. SELLETT approved in May the nomination of the college of letters and science faculty of Prof. D. D. Lescohier for the chairmanship of the department of economics for one year. Prof. Lescohier succeeds Prof. E. E. Witte, chairman since 1936, who plans a leave of absence next year.

Prof. John L. Gillin who retired after 29 years of service

MERRITT Y. HUGHES, professor of English, has been appointed a research fellow for 1941-42 at the Henry E. Huntington library at San Marino, Cal., to begin work in September. Professor Hughes' appointment marks the fourth time that a member of Wisconsin's English department staff has been selected for a post at the Huntington library.

PROF. IVAN S. SOKOLNIKOFF, mathematics department member, is leading research in applied mechanics, and mathematical physics at the Brown university summer session for defense technicians.

PROF. JOAQUIN ORTEGA of the Spanish department may leave the University to go to the University of Mexico this year. He has submitted his resignation but Wisconsin officials have asked him to reconsider. He has been at Wisconsin 25 years.

FOUR Wisconsin graduate students in mathematics, including Dr. Edwin L. Crow, Vladimir Morovkin, Robert D. Specht, and Lester Cronvich, have been selected to participate in the institute of Brown university this summer to assist industry in solving problems in mathematical research related to defense.

PROF. WILLIAM E. ROSEVEARE, and his family, have left Madison to make their home in Richmond, Va., where Prof. Roseveare will do research on rayon for the du Pont co. Prof. Roseveare has been on the faculty since 1929. He was assistant professor of chemistry.

DR. CHARLES E. BROWN, director of the State Historical Museum, was given a gold medal for his work in archeology and ethnology at Northwestern university May 2. The presentation was made by the Mississippi Valley Federation of Archeological societies.

EDWARD P. ALEXANDER, named superintendent of the Wisconsin State Historical society, to succeed the late Joseph Schafer, will begin his duties in September. The new superintendent is 34 years old, and a native of Keokuk, Iowa. He has directed the New York historical association since 1934.

French Physicist Conquers War

THREE months after the regents approved a $2,500 salary for a Frenchman who could teach here in place of Prof. R. G. Herb of the physics department, who was going to work on national defense in Boston, the Frenchman finally arrived, late in May.

He is Prof. Leon Brillouin, brilliant student and teacher of theoretical and mathematical physics and former director of the French broadcasting system.

The physicist taught here before in 1928 and 1939. He is a former member of the faculties of the University of France and College of France.

The Professor and his wife started for the United States in January. They were delayed a month in Lisbon, Portugal, as well as in other places.

Norris Wentworth's departure for Illinois leaves the University without a carillonneur

WARF Engaged in Vital Suit

THE Wisconsin Alumni Research foundation was notified its suit to test the validity of patents on the world-famous Steenbock Vitamin D irradiation process will be brought to trial in Los Angeles June 30. L. D. Barney, the Foundation's business manager, made the announcement.

The suit charges the Vitamin Technicians, Inc., of California, with infringement of patents which the Foundation holds on the process developed by Dr. Harry Steenbock. The suit was filed in 1939.

Barney said the Foundation seeks to protest its right to exclusive control of the patents, which have netted thousands of dollars of revenue from dairy corporations, bakeries, and other food and drug processors since 1925. Foundation fund incomes have been used to finance much of the University's widespread research program.

Dean Davis Leaves After 16 Years Service AFTER 16 years of service to the University as instructor, dormitory hostess, assistant dean of women, and loyal friend of many students, Dean Susan Burdick Davis will leave Wisconsin this June to carry on research on early Middle West history and "do a great deal of speaking."

Miss Davis came to the University as a lecturer and graduate student in the speech department in 1925. That year she was also a hostess at Barnard hall. For 15 years she has been assistant dean of women, having as her special field freshmen women.

The dean's parting word to the University was:

"No one could have had a richer or happier experience than that association has been. Naturally to know freshmen is to know the upperclass students too. The longer and better I have known them all, the greater has been my faith in their integrity. Sometimes I have been pretty worried about their elders, but I have been pretty sure of the purposes of the students."

Dean Susan B. Davis retired this year after 16 years counselling

Unique Planetarium Gift of Madisonian DURING the 85th and 86th years of his life, when most people have long since foregone any active work, Francis D. Winkley, mechanical engineer, inventor, builder, and student of astronomy, has been busy producing entirely out of metal the unique planetarium which he recently presented to the University.

At his Elm street home in Madison, Mr. Winkley perfected the machine, which is a maze of 36 metal cog wheels which are the working parts of the planetarium, and are powered by an electric motor.

The planetarium, on exhibit in the mechanical engineering building, reveals simply and clearly to the layman the movement of the earth, sun, moon, and the planets Mercury and Venus in that part of the universe in which we live.

Building Program Killed by Inaction of State Legislature A PEACEFUL death was the lot of the University's building program in the state assembly June 3, when, after little debate, the finance committee's substitute amendment was rejected.

The original bill, granting $1,975,000 to the University, was replaced during the session by a general measure allowing construction of buildings at the teacher's colleges, Stout Institute, and other state institutions, as well as the University.

Discussing the bill, many legislators seemed to feel that Bascom hall should be fireproofed, but the final vote defeating the measure came after legislators said the general measure was merely a "political measure."

The legislature approved a $200,000 short course dormitory before considering the general building program bill.

Short Course Dorms Voted by Legislature WITH only four dissenting votes, the state senate late in May put final legislative approval on the bill appropriating $200,000 for a short course dormitory for the University. The board of regents at its June meeting asked the state architect to prepare plans for the building.

The building will replace the sheep barns where agricultural students now are housed.

Dean Chris L. Christensen, appearing before the regents during June, outlined plans for a building which will house 372 students during the short course session conducted during the winter. Specific instructions were given by the regents that the building must primarily be a dormitory, and that if under the $200,000 appropriation, such "extras" as a dining hall and a council room can be included, that will be "fine."

The dormitory will be erected on Linden drive, directly across from the present horticulture building. The area near the site of the building is now in use as an intramural athletics field.

Botanical Work Brings Honors to Prof. Allen

PROF. CHARLES E. ALLEN of the botany department will be awarded an honorary degree by the University of Chicago at a convocation Sept. 29 climaxing the three-day academic festival celebrating that University's 50th anniversary.

Dr. Allen is considered one of the foremost botanists in the country. He was the first to discover sex chromosomes in plants, furnishing the basis for modern theories of sex phenomena. He is a member of many national scientific societies.

Business Officers Hear About WARF

DR. HARRY L. RUSSELL, '88, director of the Wisconsin Alumni Research foundation, told 150 members of the Central Association of University and College Business Officers at their convention at the Memorial Union during May that the Foundation turned over about $200,000 to the University last year, despite the fact that nine out of ten ideas turned out to be "pipe dreams."

Dr. Russell was one of many addressing the 31st annual meeting of the organization. He emphasized the importance of such Foundations in present day universities and colleges. He labeled the Foundation an "experiment in the socialization of research."

Prof. Helen White was given an honorary LL. D. by Mount Mary

Faculty Leads Defense Institute MORE than 350 business men and educators heard speeches by such experts as President C. A. Dykstra and discussed national defense problems at the two-day meeting of the Wisconsin Public Affairs institute in the Memorial Union during May.

Americans, as well as anyone else — even those who follow the dictators — can "do whatever we want to do in terms of defense," President Dykstra told the group as he gave his first public report on work of the national defense mediation board, of which he was chairman. Other speakers and panel discussions leaders kept arguments alive on how to settle America's defense problems all through the meeting, discussing everything from strikes to price fixing.

Helen White Honored by Union & College

PROF. HELEN WHITE was elected president of the University teachers union during June.

Prof. William G. Rice was named vice president, and Herman Sallinger secretary. Prof. White was honored later in June by Mount Mary college in Milwaukee, which conferred an honorary degree of doctor of letters upon the University English professor. Dr. White is also the recently elected head of the American Association of University Women.

Fraternities Praised at Annual Banquet

THE last few years have shown a marked increase in the basis for justifiable fraternity existence, Dean Frank O. Holt told nearly 600 Wisconsin fraternity men at their annual all-fraternity banquet at Hotel Loraine April 15.

"Your progress has been clear and real," the dean declared. "And I know there is a place for fraternities and that for which they stand."

Dean Holt said he saw a great change in the attitude of students today from that in the 20's and 30's.

"Today college youth is busy with the moral and ethical problems of the world. He's thinking less of himself and more of the obligation education places on him and of the service that will be expected of him because of his training."

The banquet, sponsored by the Interfraternity Council and the Resident Counselors association, marked the resumption of annual interfraternity dinners after a lapse of many years. More than 30 fraternities were represented.

Students Win Senior Awards

ARTHUR C. NIELSEN, Jr., Winnetka, Ill., commerce school senior, and Raymond D. Black, first year law student from Richland Center, received the Kenneth Sterling Day award at the Parents' Weekend banquet in May. Prof. George S. Bryan, committee chairman, said no distinction could be made between the two men. The honor is given annually to the senior man who is most outstanding in moral qualities and constructive influence on campus life.

ELWIN C. FULLER, Oshkosh, chosen as the outstanding senior agriculture student this year, won the Theodore Herfurth award of $100 for showing the "best record of present and past performance" of any member of his class this year.

Runners-up in the contest were Clarence Schoenfeld, Lake Mills, retiring editor of the Daily Cardinal, and Howard Boorman, Madison, president of the University religious council.

Candidates for the award were nominated by the deans and heads of various extra-curricular groups. A group of 40 men were designated, and from this list, Fuller was chosen as most outstanding.

Workers School Attracts Large Group

THE general six weeks summer school for industrial workers, and four special institutes of one to two weeks in length, will bring more than 200 industrial workers to the campus this summer.

Both the six weeks session and the four institutes are supervised by the University's school for workers in industry. E. E. Schwartztrauber is director. The general six weeks school will run from June 30 to Aug. 8, and is open to workers from all industries.

Dykstra Awarded Harvard Degree

CITED as a "citizen active in time of crisis," President Dykstra was granted an honorary degree by Harvard university at Cambridge, Mass., during the eastern university's annual commencement exercises June 19.

President Dykstra is the second president of Wisconsin to be honored by Harvard. The late Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University from 1903 to 1918, was the first Wisconsin president cited by Harvard.

The Regents

IN ONE of the heaviest business sessions it has ever had, the board of regents on June 21 adopted a University budget totaling $6,905,995 for the 1941-42 fiscal year, approved the purchase of the entire Young farm including famed Picnic Point on Lake Mendota at a net cost of $205,000, and raised student fees from $32.50 to $48 per semester, at the same time wiping out all present laboratory fees.

The regents for four hours waded

Lovely Elizabeth Waters hall

through a steady stream of University business and educational matters presented to them by President Dykstra. Then they took time out to accompany Dean Chris L. Christensen, of the College of Agriculture, on a trip over the agriculture campus seeking a satisfactory site for the new farm short course dormitory recently approved by the legislature.

Previously, the regents had authorized President Dykstra to request the state architect to proceed with plans and specifications for the dormitory, with orders to keep the cost figures for the building within the $200,000 amount voted for it by the legislature. The regents approved a site for the new dormitory near the soils building on the agriculture campus.

The University budget figure for the next fiscal year represents a total increase of a little more than $340,000 over this year, all of which was voted by the 1941 legislature. Of the total increase, $243,835 is largely for building and grounds repairs and miscellaneous capital, while the remaining $96,790 is largely for the University Extension division and radio station WHA.

Of the total budget, $5,453,856 is for educational and general functions of the University at Madison, while $1,452,139 is for the extension and public service functions of the University. The total budget figure does not include allotments for the auxiliary or revolving fund enterprises of the University, such as residence halls, the Memorial Union, hospitals, and intercollegiate athletics, which are entirely self-supporting and are established on a monthly cost-accounting control basis.

The increase in fees and the concurrent wiping out of all the special laboratory fees in the University was recommended to the regents by the University administrative committee, which is composed of the president, all of the deans, and the secretary of the faculty, C. A. Smith. The increase still leaves Wisconsin with the lowest fees of any comparable university in the Middle West.

The recommendation pointed out that a decrease in enrollment and rising costs of materials and equipment are expected to reduce University revenues during the coming biennium by at least $200,000. The committee further explained that the only way the University could meet this situation was by raising fees.

The recommendation of the committee as approved by the regents raises University fees from $32.50 to $38 in all colleges except law and medicine and that these be made $55 and $112.50 respectively. Then the committee recommended, and the regents approved, the abolition of all separate laboratory fees so that all students may take any courses desired in the University. To make this democratic procedure possible, the committee declared, a general laboratory-library fee of $10 should be assessed each semester against all students except those in law and medicine, making the total general fee $48.

"This fee is equal to a sum which would be the average of all laboratory fees paid by all of the students enrolled and will produce in revenue approximately the amount now collected in laboratory fees on the campus," the committee explained. "This equalization of fees will make it possible for the student with small funds to take what now seem to him expensive laboratory courses. The total result will be to keep the fees at Wisconsin the lowest in the mid-west. In other words, our Wisconsin students will still be paying lower fees than they would be required to pay in any neighboring state institution."

Action by the regents in purchasing the properties owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Young out beyond Willows drive on Lake Mendota, called the Picnic Point farm, brought to a close several years of bargaining by the University for the property.

The University obtained an option on the famous Picnic Point part of the farm two years ago, but by their action last month the regents bought not only the 20-acre Picnic Point area but also the more than 100 acres of farm land which adjoins it, making a total of 125 acres with a total of 8,000 feet of shore line on Lake Mendota.

The total price paid for the property by the regents through the University Building corporation at this time is $230,000, but Mr. Young donated $25,000 of this amount to the University, reducing the total net cost to $205,000. This amount is provided through a mortgage by the building corporation to the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, to be amortized over a 25-year period.

In addition to the purchase price, the University also conveys to the Youngs the Eagle Heights property a half mile to the west of the Picnic Point farm. This 33 acre tract, wholly unimproved, has been held by the University for 30 years without making any use of it, and which it is felt will not be useful for the purposes of the College of Agriculture or the rest of the University.

Purchase of the Picnic Point farm now gives the University title to all of the shore line areas of Lake Mendota from the old armory and gymnasium on Langdon street west to the Eagle Heights tract, except for a few acres known as the Stevens-Jackson property out on what is called Second Point on Lake Mendota.

REAPPOINTMENT by Gov. Julius Heil of Walter P. Hodgkins, Ashland, to the board of regents for a term ending May 1, 1950, was confirmed by the state senate recently.

Boys and Girls Get Camp Site THE DREAM of thousands of Wisconsin boys and girls is soon to come true. They are to have a camp where, meeting in the midst of natural and unspoiled beauty, they hope to gain still wider appreciation of nature, to realize more fully the importance of conservation and to develop ideals of constructive citizenship.

At the June meeting of the board of regents, Dean Chris L. Christensen, of the College of Agriculture, announced the offer of Elizabeth U. Davis and Caroline U. Hughes of Wilmington, Del., as a camp for the youth of the state, of scenic Blackhawk Island located in the Wisconsin river. The gift has been made by the donors to honor the memory of their father and mother, Horace A. J. Upham and Mary Greene Upham.

Rural leaders believe that the donors, in offering the tract and the regents, in accepting the gift, have helped the youth of Wisconsin realize a hope which they have cherished for years. The tract will be named, and known as, Camp Upham.

Under the terms of the gift the island is to become an outdoor laboratory and camp for youth such as 4-H clubs and other people cooperating with the University in the advancement of conservation, of agriculture, or of rural culture.

In representing the donors at the meeting of the regents, Howard T. Greene, past president of the Wisconsin Alumni association, expressed the belief that Blackhawk Island, serving as a youth center, would add immeasurably to the cultural enrichment of Wisconsin.

The island includes more than 200 acres of dense woodland and is regarded as in an ideal geographic location to serve the rural people of the state. It is close to the center of the rural population of Wisconsin and being only 50 miles from Madison on main state and federal highways, is readily accessible at all seasons of the year. The camp when established will be supervised by a committee carrying the specific responsibility for the protection of the island as one of the state's outstanding beauty spots and will be perpetuated in its natural wilderness condition.

The camp will be of great value in teaching conservation and the love of the gifts of nature to the young students.

Provisions Made for R.O.T.C. Exemptions A PROGRAM complying with the new compulsory military training law passed by the legislature this winter, which will enable the University to keep its Reserve Officers Training corps enrollment within the limits laid down by the Sixth Corps Area headquarters, was adopted by the regents in June on recommendation of the faculty.

The program sets up exemption rules to hold enrollment within the government's quota of 1,550 students for the two year basic course. The military department said it expects to have 550 of last year's freshmen in the sophomore corps this year. This leaves an estimated 1,000 vacancies for freshmen next year.

All incoming frosh will register, but exemption will be given selective service registrants, University band members, the physically unfit, and those who for other satisfactory reasons may be released by the military department. Students exempt from military training will still be required to take physical education.

Regents Granted Scholarship Loans WITHOUT debate, and by a 21-6 vote, the senate in May passed a bill requested by the University authorizing the regents to grant scholarship loans to Wisconsin students.

The bill provides that the loans shall not exceed the amount of incidental, general, and laboratory fees. The loans are to be made from the University fund and repaid by the students after graduation.

Governor's Complaints Deferred for Time Being IRKED by a speech which Dean Lloyd Garrison of the University Law school delivered just before he was to step to the platform, Gov. Julius P. Heil refused to speak on the citizenship day program in Milwaukee May 18, and later complained about recent actions of the dean in a letter to Regent Frank J. Sensenbrenner.

After years of dreams, Picnic Point has become the property of the University

The governor found fault with Garrison's speech at the citizenship rally, and with Garrison's arguments before the governor recently against the Gettelman bill barring the Communist party from the Wisconsin ballot.

The governor also, according to Regent Sensenbrenner, asked for an investigation of "Wake Up, America," a series of radio programs being broadcast by WHA. The governor said complaints had come to him that some things were not satisfactory at the University, and that the views of some of the faculty were subjects of criticism. The regents, at their May meeting, took no definite action on the complaints.

N.Y.A. Health Center Plans Given Okay PLANS for the University supervision of a National Youth Administration health center for 200 young men rejected for the draft because of nutritional deficiencies were approved by the regents May 28 meeting at the home of Regent F. J. Sensenbrenner, at Neenah.

The men will be housed in rooms under Camp Randall stadium, which will be finished as a dormitory, kitchen, and dining room by expenditure of approximately $18,000 of NYA funds if plans are approved in Washington.

The project would provide an opportunity for research by many expert nutritionists on the University staff, President Dykstra said. The federal government is to pay cost of operations.

Acting on appointments, the board named Margaret Pride Hebbard assistant to the dean of women on personnel advisory methods, promoted Chester Ruedesili from assistant dean of the college of letters and science to junior dean of the summer session, and gave Lt. Col. H. H. Lewis, new ROTC commandant, the rank of professor of military science and tactics.

The regents approved appointment of a state-wide advisory committee on policies for state radio station WHA. No action was taken on requests for a separate college of commerce.

Coeds, as Usual, Get Their Way THE "priming" of Wisconsin coeds for parties reached out a long way last month — even to the board of regents.

That august body recently approved a request from the residents of Elizabeth Waters hall for installation of a branch of a Madison beauty parlor in the residence hall.

President Dykstra knew all about it.

"They'll have an operator there every day of the week, and two on Friday nights for parties," he explained. "Our girls have to look pretty, you know."

Mrs. Barbara Vergeront, '06, Viroqua, board member and vice president, led a loud chorus of ayes as the regents approved unanimously.

Coon Succeeds "Bob" Buerki in Hospital Post DR. HAROLD M. COON, for four years superintendent of the Wisconsin State Tuberculosis sanatorium, was approved by the board of regents June 21, as successor to Dr. Robin C. Buerki, '15, as new superintendent of Wisconsin General Hospital.

Dr. Coon, a 1920 bachelor of science graduate of Wisconsin, received his doctor's degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where Dr. Buerki goes next fall to be dean of the graduate medical school.

Truog Appointed to Athletic Board PROF. EMIL TRUOG of the soils department was named to the Wisconsin athletic board June 21 by the regents. He replaces Prof. Oliver Rundell, of the Law School.

The regents reappointed the following to the board: Prof. W. F. Lorenz, chairman; Prof. Henry R. Trumbower and Prof. Chester V. Easum, representing the faculty; Dr. James P. Dean, Madison, and Howard I. Potter, Chicago, representing the alumni; and Donald Frank, Milwaukee, student athletic board president, representing the students.

Emergency Board Asked for $179,100 FOR fireproofing Bascom hall, obtaining three weeks annual vacation for 150 hourly workers, selective service examinations, and coal for a possibly "hard winter," the University has asked the state emergency board for $179,100.

The projects will be:

Fireproofing Bascom hall and taking other safety measures—$110,000.

Obtaining vacations for hourly workers equal to those of civil service workers—$27,000.

Financing the physical tests on all of Dane county's prospective draftees at the student infirmary—$7,500.

For winter coal—$34,600 to be set aside as a reserve.

Extension Division

THE processes and programs of the Extension Division have been harmonized increasingly with the national defense effort. The Extension endeavor is part of the larger University venture; in itself can be credited as a definite contribution both educationally and in terms of practical training for service.

A strictly educational phase of this effort seeks to create an informed citizenry and to guide community groups toward the most appropriate action that may be needed in the national emergency; another purpose is directed forward strengthening the country's manpower through pilot training programs. Other resources reside in special training afforded by many courses of study giving individuals a better equipment for their part in the national task.

Campus Joins in Defense Conference THE University offered its facilities and leadership in laying the groundwork for a better informed Wisconsin. Through the Wisconsin Public Affairs Institute in May, it conducted a state conference on defense problems on the university campus. The University was represented among the sponsors by the extension division, the college of agriculture and home economics, the Memorial Union and University administrative staffs. State government departments and a large number of state organizations cooperated.

Four-hundred ninety-eight persons from 55 counties registered, and many others attended.

Out of this conference came plans for holding regional meetings to relate defense needs more closely to the community responsibility.

At the Madison conference the situations on the military, industrial, and agricultural fronts were outlined as a background for showing how state organizations can render the fullest cooperation on these national fronts. Likewise the home front was illustrated as offering a challenge to the activities of Wisconsin people—as individuals and as members of organizations. Also presented were the needs of the Red Cross, the recreational and related requirements in the defense program, the educational side, and the consumer interest.

The role of youth in defense was not overlooked. Youth was represented as in need of finding a larger place in the national economy—as being “wanted” for the great task of building a strong civilization worthy of defense.

Offering interpretations on the broadest implications of defense, Chief Justice M. B. Rosenberry and President C. A. Dykstra drew upon long and distinguished experience in the judicial and administrative fields, respectively.

From the University, from state government departments, from Wisconsin organizations, from the adult educational movement, and from the national defense organization the various speakers pointed the way to local action calculated to help democracy work more effectively, to help frustrate threatened national dangers, and to assure unity of effort in the task.

Defense Facts for Local Forums

AS AN immediate outgrowth of this institute, the Extension Division, with the approbation of the state council for national defense, the state board of vocational and adult education, and other agencies, organized a discussion program service for local groups. The purpose is to provide information on defense needs basic for the setting up and proper functioning of defense measures in the communities of Wisconsin—that sphere where all national defense requirements depend for fullest success. Not only problems of the present but those of post-war years, such as problems of world organization to assure an enduring peace, are listed among the discussion topics.

These forums will be arranged in cooperation preferably with local school authorities and local defense boards, under University leadership.

Prof. R. J. Colbert will counsel with the groups conducting these forums.

U-Trained Pilots Bolster Air Arm

THE University made a further contribution to the nation's potential air forces in June when it closed its fourth program of pilot training. Forty-eight students finished the semester's ground school work and 46 of them completed flight training out of the 50 who began the course last February; while 29 out of 31 finished ground school and 27 completed the flight phase in the secondary course. Similar results were attained in the first semester. Altogether, the University has trained about 750 pilots in the past two years!

The program was to be continued during the summer with a primary course quota of 50 and an advanced course composed of 30 students chosen from recent primary classes. It is expected the same program will be resumed in the fall.

Campus Reaches to Army Camps

TWENTY years ago Wisconsin, recognizing the sacrifices made by her war veterans, granted to veterans a soldiers' bonus. Later, state bounties gave to veterans certain educational benefits. In 1941 the state carried the policy to greater lengths. Not only were veterans of the World war again offered University extension courses without cost, but by another enactment the legislature took heed also of the sacrifices made by those citizens who are serving in the armed forces in the present national emergency. It confers upon all Wisconsin residents serving in the army, navy, or marine corps the privilege of taking extension courses from the University at the expense of the state. It is expected the opportunity will be used by many service men whose education has been interrupted by their induction, and by others as a solution of the problem of fitting themselves better for places in the business or industrial world.

Campus Lends Citizenship Aid THE University made new contributions to the fulfillment of Citizenship Day plans in the state. This movement originated in the Extension Division in 1938, and was given its first convincing demonstration at Manitowoc in 1939. Action by the Wisconsin legislature gave it official status; Congress proclaimed a national recognition day; the National Education association created a committee on induction into citizenship and issued a book on the subject.

In Wisconsin this year (May 18) about thirty counties participated in ceremonies honoring native-born new voters. University professors, jurists, statesmen addressed Citizenship Day audiences in many states. Countless overreaches throughout the country gave a striking indication of the vast outreach attained by this Wisconsin-born idea. New York was reported as furnishing the largest public assemblage in the country's history at ceremonies in Central park.

The program will be continued on a nationwide basis next year.

Youth Excel in Speech Contests THE school years in high school forensics, a field in which the Extension department of debating and public discussion gives a large participation, saw several thousand young people reaching goals of attainment in competitive public speaking. Well spaced through the year, the forensic program gave wide scope to student proficiencies in dramatics, debate, oration, declamation, extemporaneous speaking and reading, with tournaments in every district leading to state finals on the University campus to determine state honors.

Three hundred ninety-two high schools made up the 1940-41 membership in the Wisconsin High School Forensic association.

When the program is resumed next fall, the present national crisis will figure in the debate discussions. The state debate question will read: "Resolved, that every able-bodied male citizen in the United States should be required to have one year of full-time military training before attaining the present draft age."

Students Make Vacation Count THE Extension Division placed before University students in June the opportunities available for continuing study programs during the summer. Hundreds of students applied at Basecom hall headquarters for correspondence courses to supplement their residence programs. Extension classes will be resumed in the fall, when the full college program of the first year, and in some cities the sophomore year's work, will again be offered in many cities, together with a large program of evening classes wherever the demand is felt.

Law

THE second annual spring program put on by the Law School and the Wisconsin Law Alumni Association on May 9th and 10th was very successful. About three hundred persons, mostly lawyers, attended. On the lighter side there was a nip-and-tuck baseball game between the Law Faculty and the Seniors, a reception by President Dykstra, the Law Ball, etc. On the serious side there were five Round Table discussions in which students, members of the faculty and prominent lawyers and judges participated. In between were a luncheon in which the high-lights were talks by Edmond G. Toomey, '16, and William S. Kies, '01, and the presentation of portraits of William H. Page and Frank T. Boesel, members of the Law Faculty. The program culminated in a banquet with Claire B. Bird, '91, presiding, and Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson of the Circuit Court of Appeals delivering the main address.

Badger baseball again brought out big crowds on the balmy late spring days

Recent Gifts Bring Beauty and Funds

THE Law School has been the fortunate recipient of several gifts recently. Not content with his recent gift to the Law School of a magnificent collection of portraits, George I. Haight, '99, has followed through with a priceless book containing original etchings and original autographs of practically all the members of the United States Supreme Court from John Jay down to the present day. Arthur Fairchild, '01, has generously donated the funds for painting a mural in the Law School. An anonymous donor has contributed a $50 annuity to the scholarship fund, a fund which is used to provide scholarships for needy and outstanding students.

A group of former Law Review editors put up an award for outstanding student law articles, an award which they hope to make an annual affair. These contributions, added to the previous Joseph E. Davies Scholarship, the William J. Hagenah Scholarship and the Wisconsin Law Alumni Association scholarships, are beginning to approach a sizeable total, in sharp contrast to their complete absence up until a few years ago.

At the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Law Alumni Association, Claire B. Bird, '91, was elected President for the coming year. The new directors elected were Judge Evan A. Evans, '99, Judge Roscoe Luce, '16, and Malcolm K. Whyte, '20.

News About the Faculty

DEAN LLOYD K. GARRISON is acting as arbitrator to settle disputes arising in the Allis-Chalmers plant under the agreement between the com-

Evelyn Smith and her "Seeing Eye" dog are familiar campus figures. In spite of her blindness, Miss Smith, a junior, has maintained a fine scholastic record and lives the life of an average student pany and the Union.

Professor Oliver Rundel has returned after a semester at the University of Michigan Law School. Professor N. P. Feinsinger's "Survey of Business in Relation to Law and Government" has proven a very successful experiment, thanks to the wholehearted cooperation which Madison business men have given him, and will be continued next year.

The Law School, both students and faculty, have rendered a yeoman service to the students and faculty of the entire University in advising them concerning problems related to the draft. Professors Feinsinger and Hurst have been in charge of the work.

Women's Phy Ed

MISS BLANCHE M. TRILLING, director of the Department, announced that up to June 1, approximately thirty-five per cent of this year's graduating class had been placed in teaching positions. Additional positions were coming in daily and indications are that the Department's record of placing all of its graduates will be continued this year.

Miss Margaret H'Doubler's book, Dance, has been given wide acclaim by critics

Miss Margaret H'Doubler's book, Dance—A Creative Art Experience, has for the second time this year, been accorded publishers' honors. The Editorial Committee has selected it as one of the fifty best books of the year out of more than six hundred textbook publications.

New members of the staff for the academic year 1941-42 will be: Miss Helen Knight, Purdue University, and Mrs. Jennie Grainger of Monticello College. Mrs. Grainger is a Wellesley graduate and Miss Knight is a graduate of the University of Illinois. Both will teach in the dance division.

Miss Katherine L. Cronin was the guest speaker at the mothers and daughters banquet at the Fort Atkinson High School on May 15.

From a graduating senior class of thirty-one in the Department, forty per cent will receive honors at graduation. The Department is justly proud of this academic achievement by its senior class.

The contribution of the Department to the Parents Weekend program consisted of two performances of Dance Drama, demonstration tennis matches, and the Randall Green Festival. All of the events were well attended.

The staff of the Department entertained all senior and graduate students at a formal banquet at the Madison Club on May 13.

The annual Students Research Day was held June 3 in Lathrop Hall. Seniors and graduate students presented papers and demonstrations of their work on thesis and research studies. The culmination of Research Day was a supper in honor of the Seniors, followed by an hour of folk dancing, under the direction of Miss Bassett.

Commerce

THE past few weeks in the Commerce Office have been most pleasant because of the many alumni who have visited their old "hangout" eager for news both of their classmates and of the School itself. The period is almost like an "old home week," and is another proof of that esprit de corps developed in the School of Commerce.

Honors for long distance travel go to Cyril Nave, '18, who with Mrs. Nave spent several hours visiting his former professors. Nave is now Vice President of the Atlantic Refining Company of Brazil, with headquarters in Rio de Janeiro. "Cy" Nave will be glad indeed to meet any Wisconsin alumnus who may be traveling "down to Rio."

Many Urge Commerce and L. & S. Separation ALUMNI and business men generally are greatly interested in the campaign to separate the School of Commerce from the College of Letters and Science. There are 55 universities in the Association of Collegiate Schools of Business and all of these have separate Colleges or Schools of Business, save Virginia and Wisconsin. A separate college administration for the School of Commerce means that it would no longer be under the control of the Dean of the College of Letters and Science and that its budget would be brought out into the open where business men and every other citizen could easily see just how little is being spent at the University for business education. Since the formation of a new college needs legislative action, the bill will be before the 1943 Legislature.

It is anticipated that such a separation would assist the Commerce faculty materially in their request for funds for research. It is hoped that the School of Commerce may be as great a service agency to the business men of Wisconsin as the College of Agriculture is to the farming interests. The business men of Wisconsin have been very patient in this request for a separate School of Commerce, and now that the movement has started, they, together with the Commerce faculty, want every alumnus to interest himself in the prospect so there will be no question about the goal being reached in 1943.

Commerce and economics seniors this year comprise about 34 per cent of all seniors receiving degrees in the College of Letters and Science. It is apparent that any group having 400 seniors a year deserves a School of its own in a university like Wisconsin, and when this factor is backed up by the great success and enthusiasm of its alumni, it would seem that the separate college was assured. Any alumnus who wants to know more about the School of Commerce should write to F. H. Elwell, Sterling Hall.

Nursing School

THE School of Nursing Alumnae successfully sponsored a reunion and a field day on June 21st. This is the first time since its beginning that this organization has planned any other reunion except the annual homecoming banquet each year. In spite of the fact that the three hundred members are widely scattered throughout the country the reunion was well attended and the field day plan accepted with much enthusiasm.

The day's activities began with registration at the Nurses' Dormitory. All registrants were presented with the June issue of the Alumnae Magazine. A tour through the Wisconsin General Hospital showing the new departments was enjoyed by a large group.

A luncheon was served to 87 alumnae and eight guests at the Wisconsin General Hospital with Mrs. Rhea Hagedorn Normington, '32, of Milwaukee as guest speaker. At this time a corsage was presented to Miss Eugenia Schoen for her splendid work as editor of the Alumnae Magazine.

A very fine educational program was presented at 2:30 P. M. at the Wisconsin Union in the Play Circle Theater. The speakers and their topics were:

1. Miss Christina C. Murray — Director of School of Nursing
"Changes in the Nursing School since February 1925"
2. Dr. Wm. S. Middleton — Dean, Univer-

Director Fay Elwell again pleads for a separate School of Commerce sity of Wisconsin Medical School

"Nursing and National Defense"

3. Dr. John W. Harris — Professor Obstetrics and Gynecology, University of Wisconsin Medical School

"Modern Trends in Obstetrics"

At 4:30 P. M. a tea was served at the Nurses' Dormitory with the class of 1931 as hostesses on the tenth anniversary of their graduation. A display of new procedures and equipment used in the hospital took place concurrently in the dormitory classroom.

Journalism

THE journalism faculty for the six week summer session includes Profs. Frank Thayer, Helen M. Patterson, and Robert M. Neal. In addition to specialized research and thesis courses, eight courses are being offered, as follows: Writing and Selling of Special Feature Articles; Business Problems of Student Publications; Using Newspapers in the Classroom; Interpreting Foreign and War News; Newspaper and Radio News Writing;

Public Relations of Schools and Colleges; Editing and Managing Student Newspapers; Supervision of Student Publications and Journalistic Classes.

Hyde Vacations, Prepares Book

GRANT M. HYDE, Director of the School, will take his first summer off in three years. Prior to a vacation in the Far West, Professor Hyde plans to complete a new book on newspaper reporting. His first book on newswriting, published under the title, "Newspaper Reporting and Correspondence," was a pioneer in this field, having been published in 1912.

"J" School Family Dinner

LLOYD GLADFELTER, Journalism, '26, city hall reporter for the Milwaukee Journal, was the principal speaker at the annual Journalism Family Dinner recently held in the Memorial Union. The attendance was the largest in a number of years. Coranto, Theta Sigma Phi, Sigma Delta Chi, and Alpha Delta Sigma, journalism professional organizations, sponsored the event. Charlotte Dahl, '42, president of Theta Sigma Phi, was the toastmistress.

M. A. Degrees Increase

BY THE close of the current year, the School of Journalism expects to have granted 16 Master of Arts degrees in journalism. Those who received their master's degrees in June were Scott M. Cutlip, Alfred O. Gray, Gordon A. Sabine, and Kenneth W. Underwood.

Journalism Honors Given

CLARENCE A. SCHOENFELD, '41, executive editor of the Daily Cardinal, was given the Sigma Delta Chi award this spring as the outstanding male journalism graduate by the national office of that organization.

The Sigma Delta Chi scholarship awards, given annually to the highest ten per cent of the graduating class, were awarded to the following seniors: Virginia L. Crump, Rochester, N. Y.; Ellen L. Gibson, Menomonie; Tolman E. Holten, Cottage Grove; Frances A. Ryan, Green Bay; Clarence A. Schoenfeld, Lake Mills; and John E. Short, Manitowoc.

Harry J. Grant, chairman of the Milwaukee Journal, was honored May 16 by his initiation as a professional member of the Wisconsin chapter of Sigma Delta Chi. The ceremony took place in Milwaukee.

Kenneth W. Underwood, graduate student, won the annual Coranto feature story award for this year. Mary Lu Slack was the winner in the annual Sigma Delta Chi news story award.

Sigma Delta Chi awarded Clarence Schoenfeld, '41, its top prize

Home Economics

MISS SHIRLEY NEWSOM, one of the instructors in the Dorothy Roberts Nursery School, has resigned her position to become head teacher in the nursery school at the University of Hawaii. During the summer session Miss Ethel Wright, head of the nursery school of the Skokie School, Winnetka, Illinois, will be in charge of the nursery school.

In the fall Miss Helen Dawe, at present on the staff at Iowa State College, will come to the University to take charge of the nursery school. Miss Dawe is a graduate of Smith College and has her Master of Arts degree from the University of Minnesota and her Doctor of Philosophy from the State University of Iowa. Before going to Iowa State College Miss Dawe was head teacher of the Preschool Laboratories and assistant in parent education at the University of Iowa, and while working for her Ph. D. was a research assistant in that institution.

Miss Betty Rhodee, '38, will assist Miss Wright during the summer session. It is planned the facilities of the school will be enlarged when the students in home management move into the new home management house, giving more space for the nursery school in the present practice cottage.

Faculty News and Happenings

SEVERAL members of the University staff attended the National Nutrition Conference in connection with the national defense program which was called by President Roosevelt and held in Washington, D. C., May 26 and 29.

Miss Frances Zuill and Miss Mary Brady were among those who took part in the meetings.

Alumnae to View Management House IT is planned to hold open house at the new home management house on Saturday, June 21, for the home economics alumnae who come to the campus on that day to attend the home economics alumnae luncheon. At that time the out-of-town alums will be given an opportunity to inspect the new residence, a gift to the University, for the use of students studying home management. Next fall the resident instructor will be Helen Waite, now a member of the home economics faculty at the University of Iowa. Miss Waite had her undergraduate work at Montana State College and her graduate work at Columbia University.

The Home Ec's home management house is now completed and awaiting next year's seniors

MISS DENA CEDERQUIST, who has her Bachelor's and Master's degrees from Iowa State College, has been appointed as a part time instructor in diet therapy and institutional management for the coming year.

Farm Folks View Exhibits SATURDAY, June 7, was Farm Folks' Field Day on the campus of the College of Agriculture. Exhibits showing some of the latest information on textiles, interior decoration, home lighting, cookery problems, and adequate nutrition were on display in the various laboratories of the Home Economics Building during the morning. In the afternoon a style show sponsored by Miss Marion Juairé and the students in the Clothing Department was held at Bascom Theater. Following the fashion review tea was served at Elizabeth Waters Hall to the women in attendance at the program.

Inside of Business Seen on Field Trip JUST preceding the spring recess the students in tea room and cafeteria management and the students in the course in the merchandising of textiles went to Chicago on field trips. The institutional management group visited wholesale markets, large cafeterias, hospital dietary departments and hotels while the merchandising group was given an opportunity to study at first hand some of the problems of store organization as well as an opportunity to attend the Fashion Seminar which was held at the Palmer House. The merchandising portion of the trip was planned and conducted by the Altrusa Club of Chicago, a project which is in line with the club's vocational guidance program.

MISS BERNICE DODGE, a former member of the home economics staff and now the editor for the Household Finance Corporation in Chicago, was a recent campus visitor. Miss Dodge spoke before the Madison Home Economics Club on the subject of Consumer Education and the Defense Program.

ONE of our Wisconsin Home Ecs, Gladys Branegan, '13, was presiding officer at the June 22-26 meeting of the American Home Economics Association convention in Chicago. She presided at the meeting at which Dr. Julia Outhouse, '19, was awarded the Borden prize of $1000 for outstanding research with milk.

'41 Graduates Find Matrimony and Jobs POSITIONS for the home economics graduates, class of 1941, seem to be plentiful. Matrimony has claimed a number of the young women—several are planning to be married immediately following graduation while others will be married sometime during the summer. Many of those who are going into professional fields have already accepted positions. To date all of those desiring hospital dietitian internships have accepted appointments; those interested in teaching are securing positions in high schools and vocational schools, while those wishing commercial experience have accepted positions in stores, in manufacturing concerns, and public utility organizations.

Home Ec Reunion Draws Record Crowd

BEATRICE SYL-
VESTER, '26,

was elected president of the Wisconsin Home Economics Alumnae Ass'n. at the annual reunion luncheon at the Memorial Union on June 21. Mrs. Leo T. Grace, '21, was named vice-president and Mrs. Myles Rodehaver, secretary and treasurer. Mrs. Iva Mortimer and Miss Stella Patton are the faculty advisers.

Approximately 200 alumnae and 100 graduating home economics seniors attended the luncheon. Mrs. H. L. Ahlgren, '33, retiring president, introduced Frances Zuill, director of the University home economics course, who welcomed the guests.

Abby L. Marlatt, former director of the home economics course, praised the work done by the home economics alumnae to save the pure food laws in Wisconsin. She commended Mrs. Moses Smith and Mrs. Warren Ryerson, '22, for their efforts in blocking legislation which would have wrecked the pure food laws.

Mrs. James Wegener gave a legislative committee report, and the group went on record to continue its efforts to secure a new wing for the home economics building on the campus. The 2,100 alumnae plan to contact other women's organizations to agitate for the construction of the new wing.

Prof. C. A. Elvehjem talked on new developments in the field of nutrition. Anita Hanneman, a home economics senior, directed community singing. Dorothy Roth was the accompanist.

R. O. T. C.

THE graduation of 59 senior cadets amid impressive ceremonies in the historic red brick armory on June 7th climaxed an eventful spring season for the Wisconsin unit of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

At the graduation exercises, the cadets took the formal oath of allegiance and 56 of them received commissions as second lieutenants in the Officers Reserve Corps. The three others received certificates of eligibility for the commissions, which they will receive when they reach the age of 21. Already, almost all of the newly commissioned officers have received orders to report for active duty.

Infantry officers, most of whom have been assigned to duty with the Fifth Division at Fort Custer, Michigan, or to the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia, are: Ernest Anderson, Mount Horeb; Matt Britten, Marshfield; Donald Burrowbridge, Madison; Eugene Delwiche, Green Bay; Benjamin Douglas, Baraboo; George Henry, Appleton; Edward Jones, Madison; Harry Kaul, Madison; Kenneth Klinkert, Menomonee Falls;

at a separate exercise

Officers of the Engineer Corps, who will have a choice of foreign or domestic duty, are: James Allen, Lake Geneva; Harry Clarke, Wauwatosa; Douglas Dowie, Sharon; Jerome Gruber, Chilton; LaVern Hanstedt, Pulaski; Herbert Hull, Madison; Richard Reed, Wauwatosa; Robert Remley, Milwaukee; Charles Rippey, Hartford; Francis Schiffer, Madison; Warren Sommer, Madison; and Ernest Tremmel, La Crosse.

Signal Corps officers, who will go on duty at the Signal Corps school at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, are: William Block, Marinette; Carl Bloom, Portage; John Broekman, De Pere; Anthony Krancus, Kenosha; Willard Mack, Milwaukee; and Joseph O'Neill, Dodgeville.

Going on duty at the Edgewood Arsenal Chemical Warfare School in Maryland are: Owen Husa, Bangor; Thomas Marfing, Appleton; Rudd Meiklejohn, New London; Edwin Pike, Portage; and John Taylor, Wausau.

Entering the Quartermaster School at Philadelphia are Richard Garner, Madison; Charles Howell, Rockford, Ill.; William Johnson, West Allis; Neelian Nelson, Argyle; Arthur Neilsen, Winnetka, Ill.; Earl Roberts, Hancock; Donald Schoenfeld, Plymouth; and Raymond Wernig, Madison.

Graduates who are under 21 years of age and who received certificates of eligibility for their commissions are: Frank Cameron, Toronto, Canada; Martin Siegrist, Green Bay; and Raymond Fabere, Milwaukee.

"Battle of Eagle Heights" Climaxes Outstanding Year

HIGHLIGHT of the 1940-41 year for the ROTC was the "Battle of Eagle Heights," an all day military maneuver on May 24. It was the first large-scale sham battle ever carried out by any college or university.

The sharp cracking of rifle fire, the roar of airplanes overhead, barbed wire entanglements, land mines, and tear gas gave the 1200 cadets a taste of actual wartime conditions during the battle which raged from seven until noon.

Officially declared a draw by the officers who

Col. J. T. Rhett, officer in charge of R.O.T.C. affairs in the 6th Corps Area, presents the Chicago Tribune awards to Ralph Theiler, George Dawe and Isadore Zyduck umpired it, the engagement was a clash between a defending Red army and an attacking Blue unit. The mission of the Reds was to hold off the Blue advance while retreating westward from the armory down the lake road and to hold Eagle Heights until noon. The Blue objective was to capture the Heights before 12 o'clock.

The Reds organized their forces at the armory at seven and moved out shortly thereafter. As they withdrew toward the University farms area, they set up tank traps, land mines, and barbed wire barriers, covering their obstacles with simulated machine gun fire.

The Blues, after allowing the Reds a half hour's head start, began moving forward, overcame this resistance, and pushed on past Picnic Point toward Eagle Heights where the defenders had established their main line of resistance. When toward the end of the morning the battle appeared stalemated, the Blues quietly maneuvered their reserve battalion into position on the left flank to give them fire superiority just before noon when the battle was called off.

Cadets were armed with the 1903 Springfield rifle, and two men in each squad were given blank ammunition. Those who had no bullets simulated fire by clicking the bolts of the rifles back and forth.

Communication was maintained within each army by telephone lines strung by the Signal Corps cadets. Each side was also equipped with a "walkie-talkie" portable radio set.

At noon, the two armies combined forces for a joint assault on a field lunch provided by Madison businessmen, heard a short critique of the problem by the umpires, and trooped back to the armory, where Lieut. Col. Lewis, commandant of the corps, expressed himself as highly satisfied with the success of the maneuver. "These youngsters," he said, "without any experience at all, have done wonderfully."

3000 Parents View Final Spring Parade

IT HAD been a weary and footsore army dressed in old clothes and carrying slung rifles that met the regimental band at the stock pavilion after the maneuver and marched back to the armory.

But the next day, before a crowd of some 3,000 Parents Weekend visitors, the corps put on a dress parade and formal graduation review in West Point style at Camp Randall stadium. With overseas caps set at jaunty angles, with brass buttons shining, and with sabers flashing in the warm May sun, the corps of cadets passed in machine-like precision in review before the graduating cadet officers.

Three Receive Tribune Awards

ANNOUNCED at year-end were the names of the winners of the Chicago Tribune medals each year awarded to the three second-year basic cadets judged most proficient in drill and in military theory.

This year's winners, who received their awards from Col. John T. Rhett, ROTC officer for the sixth corps area, are:

Ralph C. Theiler, Tomahawk, gold medal; George R. Dawe, Madison, silver medal; and Isadore A. Zyduck, Wausau, bronze medal.

Col. Lewis, PMS&T, Leaves R.O.T.C.

THE Spring was also marked by the departure of Lieut. Col. William G. Weaver, corps commandant, for a tour of active duty. He was succeeded by Lieut. Col. Herbert H. Lewis as acting commandant and professor of military science and tactics.

Promotions during the last month of classes included the increasing of the rank of Major Carl E. Driggers to lieutenant colonel and the raising of Captain Franklyn Clarke, '27, to major.

Medical

DR. HERBERT S. GASSER, '10, M. A., '11, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science at this year's Commencement. Dr. Gasser is Director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. His fundamental training in medical science was obtained in the Department of Physiology at the University. He has held professorial rank in Washington University and Cornell University. Many honors have come to Dr. Gasser but none is as fitting as this recognition from his Alma Mater.

Dr. Buerki Named Penn School Dean

DR. ROBIN C. BUERKI '15, Professor of Hospital Administration and Superintendent of The Wisconsin General Hospital, has been named Dean of the Graduate Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania and Superintendent of the University Hospitals. This signal recognition of Dr. Buerki's ability and attainment follows closely upon his survey of graduate medical education in America, the product of a two year study of this involved problem. He will assume his new post in the fall.

Paralysis Research Granted Fund

THE National Infantile Paralysis Foundation has voted a grant of $62,500 to the University of Wisconsin for a study of the possible influence of nutrition in poliomyelitis. This project will be under the joint supervision of Dr. Paul F. Clark of the Medical School and Dr. Conrad A. Elvehjem of the College of Agriculture. A further grant of $12,000 for the construction of a proper monkey house has been made by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation. The major grant from the national organization was made possible by those facilities.

Dr. Robin C. Buerki who will leave for Pennsylvania this fall

Alumni, Student Days Well Received

ALUMNI DAY of the Medical School was held on May 22. A scientific program and exhibits were afforded by the Medical Faculty. Dinner was served at the Park Hotel. One hundred and thirty-six attended this function.

The traditional Students' Field Day, May 23, was favored by especially fine weather. An unusually good program of papers on student research was given and the scientific exhibits of student work were excellent. The Charles Russell Bardeen

Anatomy Award by Phi Delta Epsilon was won by John Keith Fulton. The Wisconsin Alumni Research Scholarship in Medicine, granted yearly to men who have completed the first two years of medicine, was won by Arthur William Hoessel who will spend the next year in Physiology. A stimulating and instructive address on "Adventures in Health Education" was delivered by Dr. William Waldo Bauer (1915), Director of the American Medical Association Bureau of Health Education. At the Intramural Field the second year class defeated the first year class in baseball and the faculty team defeated a composite team of third and fourth year classes.

The Annual Medical School Banquet was served at Tripp Commons and at its conclusion Dr. Haas H. Reese presented an interesting discussion of "The Dancing Mania". A student quartet furnished musical entertainment and student skits caricaturing staff members afforded amusement for an audience of 220.

Dr. Walter J. Meek, Assistant Dean of the Medical School, gave the Harvey Lecture in New York on "Some Cardiac Effects of The Inhalant Anesthetics and the Sympathomimetic Amines".

The first Postgraduate Course offered by the University of Wisconsin Medical School were conducted at the Wisconsin General

The University conferred an honorary Sc.D. upon Dr. Herbert Gasser this June

Hospital from April 21 to 25 inclusive. A comprehensive program in widely divergent fields of medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and surgery was offered to fourteen physicians.

Staff Organizes Army Hospital Unit

GENERAL HOSPITAL 44, an affiliated unit of the United States Army Medical Corps, has been organized at the University Medical School with the cooperation of its associated preceptors. Dr. Joseph W. Gale, Associate Professor of Surgery, and Dr. Frank L. Weston, Associate Professor of Clinical Medicine, are in charge of the surgical and medical divisions, respectively. The personnel and ranks follow:

Lt. Col. Joseph W. Gale, Maj. Kenneth E. Lemmer, Maj. Peter A. Duehr, Maj. Alf H. Gundersen, Maj. Peter A. Midelfart, Maj. Frank D. Weeks, Maj. Arthur A. Schaefer, Maj. Edwin F. Westover, Capt. Clayton P. Wangeman, Capt. Edward G. Schott, Capt. Perry T. Walters, Capt. Richard W. Jacobsen, Capt. Sion C. Rogers, Lt. Homer H. Kohler, Lt. Roy B. Larsen, Lt. Reinhold Kanzler, Lt. Dermont W. Melick, Lt. Col. Frank L. Weston, Maj. Herman H. Shapiro, Maj. Edgar S. Gordon, Capt. Walter F. Kammer, Capt. Malcolm H. Hawk, Capt. Edward Birge, Capt. Garrett Cooper, Capt. William E. Leede, Capt. John L. Sims, Capt. Jackman Pyre, Lt. Cary S. Peabody, Lt. William Jones, Lt. Bertrand W. Meyer, Lt. Dwain E. Mings, Principal Chief Nurse Ida Bechtold, Asst. Chief Nurse Leone Duddleston, Asst. Chief Nurse Marie Maloney, Asst. Chief Nurse Marjorie Sill, Asst. Chief Nurse Ann Schurch and Asst. Chief Nurse Shirley Watson.

The hospital staff and the student infirmary facilities have been placed at the disposal of the Dane County selective service boards and examinations are being conducted at the infirmary weekly.

Pharmacy

ON FRIDAY, June 6, a Pharmacy Field Day was held for the purpose of promoting good-fellowship among Pharmacy students, furnishing extra-curricular instruction, and encouraging students to take an active part in student affairs.

Included in the program were scientific, dispensing, and historical sections, in each of which papers were presented by students. Awards were made for the best paper delivered in each section.

Sylvester H. Dretzka, Secretary of the Wisconsin State Board of Pharmacy, was the speaker at a luncheon held during the event.

Inter-class games of soft-ball were held at the University's intramural field during the afternoon. The day closed with a picnic supper at the Highlands, home of Dr. Edward Kremers, Emeritus Professor of Pharmaceutical Chemistry and former Director of the School of Pharmacy.

Rho Chi Initiation ON APRIL 9 the following students in the School of Pharmacy were initiated into membership in Rho Chi, national honorary pharmaceutical society: Jack E. Orr, Delphi, Ind., Graduate Assistant in Pharmacy; Laura M. Williamsen, Milwaukee; Beryl D. Averbook, Superior; and Joseph V. Swintosky, Kewaunee. The three students last named are Juniors.

Organize Pharmacy Institute ON APRIL 2 the organizational meeting of the American Institute of the History of Pharmacy was held at the Memorial Union. During the day addresses were made by Dr. A. H. Uhl, Director of the School of Pharmacy and President of the Institute, by Dr. B. V. Christensen, Dean of the School of Pharmacy of the Ohio State University and First Vice-President of the Institute, and by Max M. Lemberger, retail pharmacist and Preceptor for Medical Students at Milwaukee.

An exhibit of the History of Pharmacy was prepared by Dr. George Urdang, Director of the American Institute of the History of Pharmacy, and Dr. Edward Kremers, Honorary President of the Institute. The former gave an address on "The History of Pharmacy as Revealed by the Exhibit," and the latter on "The History of Pharmacy and the Retail Practitioner."

At a dinner held in the Old Madison room of the Union, addresses were made by Dean George C. Sellery, Dean W. S. Middleton, Prof. R. L. Reynolds of the History Department, Dr. R. A. Lyman, Dean of the College of Pharmacy of the University of Nebraska, and Dr. Edward Kremers, former Director of the School of Pharmacy of the University.

Pharmacists Given Special Loan Fund

ESTABLISHED during June was the William F. Pfeuger loan fund for pharmacy students at the University as a result of a donation by Mr. Pfeuger, Manitowoc, Wis.

Pfeuger's name has been identified with pharmaceuticals for over 50 years. Administration of the funds will be directed by Emeritus Professor Edward L. Kremers, '88, former head of the department of pharmacy.

Prof. Robert Reynolds was the Commencement speaker at the Milwaukee Extension Center last month

Milwaukee Center

---

PLANS for scheduling courses for graduate credit at the Milwaukee Center in September are being formulated. Over two thousand questionnaires have been mailed out in the Milwaukee area to determine what courses are desired. Courses will be supplied if the demand is large enough, and if facilities are available. Students who have been regularly admitted to the Graduate School at the University may earn as much as one semester of residence at Milwaukee.

PROF. ROBERT L. REYNOLDS of the history department on the Hill was the principal speaker at the Milwaukee Center's closing exercises held on June 7, at the Grand Avenue Congregational Church. "Stoics and Better: American College Students in the Coming Generation" was the title of his address. Regent Michael J. Cleary presented certificates to twenty-nine evening school students. Day school candidates for honors and awards were presented to Dr. Charles M. Purin, Director, by Mrs. Irene Langwill, Recorder.

FOR the first time in several years, the Milwaukee Center is scheduling a summer program. Art and business courses, defense program courses, and engineering mathematics are being offered in the evening.

TWENTY students are enrolled in the government's defense program at the Milwaukee Center. The fees of these young men who are being trained for drafting in industry are subsidized by the government. Physics, three courses in Drawing, two courses in Mathematics, Mechanics, Machine Design, and Strength of Materials are included in the program.

THE Milwaukee Center's "Campus" which has been torn up for several months will be filled in and ready to seed by July 1, it is expected. Governor Heil, State Architect De Gelleke, Mr. Gallistel, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at the University, and Mr. Peterson, University Comptroller, were at the Milwaukee Center on June 5 to discuss plans for improvement of grounds with Mr. Avey and Dr. Bardell.

THE evening class program for the fall semester was announced in May. New courses added in the field of Liberal Education include: Food and Health, Language in Action, Music of the Masters, Shakespeare, and The Art and Life of the Western Hemisphere. In the field of Business, Personal Finance and Investments is being given for the first time. Voice Improvement will supplement the popular speech courses at the Center.

THE University Extension League announced at its annual luncheon at the College Women's Club in Milwaukee in March the establishment of a scholarship fund in memory of Irene Kunze. Gladys Michel was the first recipient of the scholarship which will be given each semester to sophomore girl chosen for outstanding scholarship and character.

Music

IT WAS made known recently that the world-famous Pro-Arte String Quartet, who spent six months of the past year in residence at the University, will return again this coming year to present concerts for Madison and Wisconsin audiences and coach members of the University orchestra and Music School students in strings.

The group, in connection with Gunnar Johansen, pianist, Brittingham Professor of Music, will present a series of recitals during the summer months at Leland Stanford University at Palo Alto, Calif., returning to Madison in September to begin the regular fall teaching term.

Music Clinic Faculty to be All-Wisconsin FUTURE University students attending the 1941 All-State Music Clinic to be held on the campus July 7-26 will have an opportunity to meet and work with the regular faculty members of the School of Music for they will head the clinic this coming season. They are Prof. Carl Bricken, orchestra, Prof. Raymond Dvorak, band, and Paul G. Jones, chorus.

All three men have had wide experience in their respective fields and it is felt that this contact with regular faculty members will not only be of value to the students but will better acquaint them with the work being done at the University.

Among outstanding summer music events to be sponsored by the clinic will be, Music Clinic Faculty concert July 10, University Summer Session Band concert July 11; an informal sing July 14; the All-State orchestra and chorus festival concert July 25; and the All State band festival concert July 26.

Prof. M. O. Withey spoke at the June meeting of the American Society for Testing Materials

An additional event will be the All-State band concert at the Milwaukee Midsummer festival, July 19.

Noted Musicians on Summer Faculty

THE 1941 Summer Session will open July first with several international musicians on the University School of Music faculty, among whom are the composer, Ernst Krenek, Vassar College; Samuel Gardner, Julliard and Mannes Schools of Music, New York City; Mme. Clara Bloomfield, Milwaukee and Herman F. Smith, Supervisor of Music, Public Schools, Milwaukee. Regular members of the faculty will include Professors Carl E. Brieken, and L. A. Coon, Associate Professor L. L. Iltis, Assistant Professors A. C. Barthel and R. F. Dvorak, Instructors Helene Stratman-Thomas, Paul G. Jones and Hilmar F. Luckhardt, and Assistant Wayne Hugoboom.

Spring Festival Proves Success

THE annual spring festival, held on the University campus from May 10 to 25 was climaxed on Sunday afternoon, May 25, when the University chorus, coached by Paul G. Jones and Earle E. Swinney, and the University orchestra, presented Purcell's Dido and Aeneas in concert form at the Memorial Union theatre under the baton of Carl E.

Brieken, director of the School of Music. Following the choral part of the program, the Orchestra presented the Brahms' Fourth Symphony to an enthusiastic and appreciative audience.

First School Dinner Held

APPROXIMATELY one hundred Music School students and faculty members attended the first annual Spring Music School dinner, May 26, at Tripp Commons. Guest speaker of the evening was Dean G. C. Sellery. Brief talks were also presented by Carl E. Brieken, director, Paul G. Jones, and Robert Woollen, president of Sinfonia, with genial R. F. Dvorak, band director, acting as toastmaster.

A music program composed of ensemble groups from the school was closed with the Choral Guild, directed by Paul Jones, and Orville Shetney, soloist, presented the "Ballad for Americans". The dinner, the first of its kind for the school, was sponsored by Sinfonia, national music fraternity.

Wisconsin Union

RETRENCHING in anticipation of a decrease of revenue during 1941-42, the Union Council has approved house committee budgets $1100 under the amounts spent during the current fiscal year. The new budget of $3,748 entails a 23.3 per cent reduction in the budget as compared to the expenditures of last year. Disbursements in 1940-41 were $4,884.62.

The need for the sharp drop in committee budgets, John Spindler, treasurer of the Union directorate, explained, was the anticipated loss of enrollment next fall and the decline of revenue from outside sources. Because each student pays annual fees of $10 toward the support of the Union, the drop in enrollment expected because of the draft will seriously curtail the Union's income during 1941-42, he commented.

To the Memory of Those Who Served

CARVED on the wall in front of the Memorial Union is a quotation that in a few short words catches the spirit in which the building was first conceived and the ideal to which it was dedicated. "Erected and dedicated to the memory of men and women of the University of Wisconsin who served in our country's wars."

Pres. Glenn Frank broke the ground for the new structure on Armistice day, 1925. The cornerstone was laid on Memorial day, 1927, 14 years ago. The building was dedicated in a grave and solemn ceremony in October of the following year.

Most of the 7,000 people who enter the Union every day pass through the solemn, high vaulted Memorial hall, dedicated to the 219 gold star representatives of the University. These students who have passed through the hall day after day, on Memorial Day paused to pay tribute before the oaken panels in each corner of the room where the gold star names are carved.

Student Artists Get a Boost

WHEN one faculty member heard of the interest of the residence halls in purchasing student artists' work from the Union's 13th annual art exhibition he promptly wrote a check for $10 to add a purchase award for the men's halls.

"The idea is just right," he said. "It gives real encouragement to student artists and adds a good picture to the blank walls of our halls for hundreds of students to enjoy."

The donor prefers to remain anonymous. The new award is listed simply as "$10 purchase award for the men's residence halls presented by an interested faculty member."

Engineering

SAFE water, the item over which nothing is more important in the life of the buck private, has become the responsibility of Prof. Lewis H. Kessler, who left the College of Engineering in June to become chief of the water and sewer units of the repairs and utilities section, office of the quartermaster general, United States Army.

The job takes him "troubleshooting" for operation difficulties in army camps all over the United States and possessions.

A former naval reservist and first lieutenant in the engineering corps officers reserve, Kessler was confident he "could do the job all right," and promised "to put everything I have in this to make a success of it."

The Kessler family, including daughter Gwendolyn, who will enter the University in September, will remain in Madison. The pro-

Unrestrained joy reigned supreme after the Badger won the National basketball championship at Kan City. Coach Bud Foster was carried off the floor his happy charges fessor's leave of absence from his teaching was passed by the regents on June 21.

The university professor looks to good help, and "lots of it," to make his job a success. He has his eye set on a handful of men, some of them former Wisconsin students, to whom he could give a suggestion and then find the work done right away and in the right manner.

High School Grads Take Defense Work

THE College of Engineering has enrolled 38 high school graduates for 12 intensive weeks of industrial training under the engineering defense training program of the federal government.

The course began June 23, and the boys are working eight hours daily five days a week until Sept. 12, when they will be ready to step into jobs in defense industries.

In school they learn machine shop technique, drafting, and shop mathematics. The federal government pays all tuition charges and the students pay only for their rooms, their books, and a $10 deposit on drawing instruments provided by the University.

Rader Edits New Edition

THE fifth edition of Mills and Hayward's Materials of Construction, just off the press of John Wiley & Sons, was rewritten and edited by L. F. Rader, professor of civil engineering. The book has been an outstanding text in its field for more than 25 years.

Kessler Gets Two Appointments

L. H. KESSLER, associate professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering, has been appointed to succeed Prof. Juday on the executive committee for the study of lakes and streams. He was also appointed to succeed the late Charles Seastone as a member of the Madison Metropolitan Sewerage Commission.

Lenz Goes to TVA On Year's Leave ARNO T. LENZ has been granted a leave of absence for one year to accept the post of associate hydraulic engineer with the Tennessee Valley Authority. He will be located at Knoxville in the Hydraulic Data Division.

Walton on 5-State Sanitary Survey GRAHAM WALTON, instructor in civil engineering, will be on the staff of the Wisconsin State Board of Health for the coming year. Under the direction of the state sanitary engineer, he will make a survey of the sewage treatment plants of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, and Missouri, for the Upper Mississippi River Valley Board of Engineers.

Voelker Summers in Manitowoc RAY F. VOELKER, instructor in civil engineering, will spend the summer as engineer on the Manitowoc Housing Site, a federal project made necessary by the expansion of activities in shipbuilding at that lake port.

Mining and Metallurgy Department Notes PROF. BARKER has just completed a very active year of research sponsored by the Solvay Corporation in the application of the patent on the treatment of clays by Professor Barker and Professor Truog.

A paper on the evaluation of activation agents in flotation was completed by Sam Carter, a student in residence under the direction of Mr. Shorey.

Two other research papers were completed. One was on the general subject of the welding of steel castings, the work being done by two of our off-campus students, Andrew Smith and Sylvester Mueller. The other problem was completed by a student in residence, David Ellis. This problem was on the evaluation of cast iron borings as a packing medium for the heat treatment of steel. Both of these were done under the direction of Prof. Oesterle.

Next fall our department will include and direct the foundry classes which were formerly under the jurisdiction of the Department of Mechanical Engineering.

Mechanics Department Researches and News A RESEARCH investigation sponsored by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and supported jointly by that Committee and the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, was carried out during the summer of 1940 by Professor R. J. Roark, assisted by Mr. R. S. Hartenberg. The results of the investigation have been published as a restricted document by the N.A.C.A.

The research project by R. S. Hartenberg, '28, Instructor in Mechanics, "The Strength and Stiffness of Thin Cylindrical Shells on Saddle Supports," has been completed. Saddle and similar methods of support or loading are encountered in the design of large pipe lines, tank cars, bulk storage tanks, cracking stills and the wings and fuselages of metal airplanes.

Mr. Hartenberg has resigned his instructorship at Wisconsin to accept an assistant professorship in mechanics at the Northwestern Technological Institute at Northwestern University. He will begin his new work September 1, 1941.

At the June meeting of the American Society for Testing Materials, in Chicago, Professor M. O. Withey presented a paper on the significance of absorption and permeability tests of concrete.

Radio . . . WHA

WISCONSIN has again maintained its place of leadership in educational broadcasting by winning with three programs in competition with picked programs from coast to coast.

At the Twelfth Annual Institute for Education by Radio, held at Ohio State University, in Columbus, Ohio, May 5, 6, and 7, WHA walked off with two first awards, an honorable mention, and the enthusiastic comments of the judges. Specially cited was "The Stevens Family Plans Thanksgiving", from WHA's OVER AT OUR HOUSE series, written by Alice Hantke, of the College of Agriculture, and produced by Gerald Bartell, production manager of WHA. In addition to a first award for dramatized programs for general use by adults, "The Stevens Family Plans Thanksgiving" was chosen as one of five broadcasts illustrating radio's assumption of social and artistic responsibilities. The judges commended the series as a "fine example of a democratic program concerned with the simple, everyday problems of real people, humanly and humorously presented."

Another first award went to "Wilbur, the Sleepy Little Ghost", from WHA's STORY BOOK LAND series for children. An original story by Helen Frey, "Wilbur" received the judges' praise for its excellent follow-up activities.

In a third division, "The Mystic Mood", part of the GOOD READING series, won the honorable mention given for junior and senior high school broadcasts.

These three programs, chosen from hundreds sent to the Institute by college and educational radio stations and organizations throughout the country, have been regular features of the state station's broadcast schedule, and can now take their places alongside WHA's numerous prize-winners from previous years as nationally recognized good listening for Badgers.

WHA to Expand Radio Service AFTER an eight year period in which it was financed at various times by the state emergency board, the University, and the state department of agriculture, the supervision of broadcasting station WHA was finally officially assigned to the University of Wisconsin by the 1941 Legislature.

Bill 208-A, introduced by Assemblyman A. R. Ludvigsen, (R., Hartland), provided for the transfer of the station back to the University which has operated it for some twenty-four years. It also provided additional operating funds, effective July 1.

An outgrowth of the change will be a marked expansion of the broadcasting service in the early morning and on Sundays. Special all-Wisconsin features are being planned which cannot be duplicated by the net-works.

Another improvement will be the greater development of the school broadcasting activity. Trained workers will be added to supervise the work and give greater aid to teachers using the Wisconsin School of the Air in their classes.

On June 4 the Legislature passed Bill 209-A, also introduced by Assemblyman Ludvigsen. This measure provided funds for the relocation of the WHA transmitter on a more favorable site, the erection of a tall modern tower, and the building of a transmitter house. The station will be located so as to give better service to more Wisconsin listeners. Over half of the people, including populous Milwaukee county, will be within the "primary-service" range of WHA after the improvements are made. This is not expected to be accomplished before fall.

Fall Broadcasting Plans Announced THE Wisconsin School of the Air will resume its eleventh year of broadcasting programs for classroom use on September 22 with a full complement of courses. In the year just completed more than 325,000 course enrollments were recorded, according to a report by Director H. B. McCarty.

- The following features will be offered:
- Afield With Ranger Mac, Nature Study for grades 5-8, 9:30 Monday mornings
  - High School Literature, to supplement required reading, 1:30 Monday afternoons
  - Storybook Land, adaptations of good literature for primary grades, 9:30 Tuesday mornings
  - Let's Draw, a creative art program for grades 5-8, 1:30 Tuesday afternoons
  - Let's Find Out, a primary grade program in nature and social studies, 9:30 Wednesday mornings
  - Journeys in Music Land, Professor Gordon's famous radio class, 1:30 Wednesday afternoons
  - Music Enjoyment, with Mrs. Elyda Morphy, grades 2-4, 9:30 Thursday mornings

Gene Rankin, Wisconsin's N.C.A.A. 135-pound champion, was awarded the Harlan B. Rogers scholarship last month

The Story of America, the social story of our nation for intermediate and upper grades, 1:30 Thursday afternoons
Rhythm and Games, with Mrs. Steve. A participation program for primary children, 9:30 Friday mornings

The French Program, native French is spoken for high school listeners, 11:30 Friday mornings

Book Trails, proposed for Fridays at 1:30 p. m. to stimulate more good reading.

Bulletins and manuals for teachers will be available in September through station WHA.

The Wisconsin College of the Air will return to the air on September 29 with programs to be heard at 3:00 p. m. daily. Among the series are:

The World Today Through Literature (Monday, first semester) by Professor Philo M. Buck, Jr., of the comparative Literature department

Exploring Americana (Monday, second semester) Rev. James C. Flint will depict documentary transcriptions on social problems

Following Congress (Tuesday) a continuation of the nationally famous reenactments of congressional debate edited by Dr. Jennie M. Turner

Over At Our House (Wednesday). This program won 1941 national honors at the Ohio Institute for its content and style in presenting home economics information.

Prize Books in Review (Thursday).

Miss Mary C. Devereaux, of the Library School, and her students arrange weekly programs of the books which have won distinction in recent years.

Speech in Practical Use (Friday) will be the theme of the University Department of Speech series for this year.

Bulletins outlining the courses and listing the weekly programs will be available in September, H. A. Engel, in charge of the project, reports. They will be sent free to the thousands of listeners who ask for them.

Lawmakers Broadcast from Capitol FOR twenty-one consecutive weeks during the 1941 session of the Wisconsin Legislature, the University radio station broadcast the Legislative Forum directly from the State Capitol. A new WHA studio was equipped in the capitol at the start of the session.

This series provided free, uncensored time on the air for all lawmakers for the discussion of public issues. The plan was started in the 1933 session and has been carried on ever since.

Noordhoff Relieves Bliss LYMAN NOORDHOFF, Oshkosh, has been temporarily appointed announcer for the state farm radio program over state stations WHA-WLBL. He will take over the duties of Milton Bliss, farm program announcer, who is on leave of absence with the Rural Electrification administration.

Noordhoff, who graduated from the University of Wisconsin in June, did his major study in agricultural economics and agricultural journalism at the University. He has been active in arranging campus news broadcasts for the Daily Cardinal over WHA.

WHA Ad Libs H. A. ENGEL, M. A. '32, WHA public relations director, is at the University of Wyoming this summer in charge of the radio workshop. He is teaching radio and visual education courses.

BILL ERIN, '41, known as "Colonel Billy" in student entertainment circles, has gone with radio station WOWO in Fort Wayne, Indiana, as sportscaster and announcer. He was a member of the WHA student staff and was active in sports and variety broadcasts.

WILLIAM T. LAZAR, '43, member of the WHA student staff and winner of the 1941 Frankenburger oratorical contest is now an announcer at station WIBA in Madison. He has been active in the WHA Players productions and was frequently heard in newscasts over the station.

A. L. BELL, '31, former WHA chief studio operator has recently been transferred to Honolulu, T. H., with the United States Army. Formerly he was engaged in the installation of short-wave transmitters at the various army landing fields in this country. He announced the birth of a new daughter in April, three weeks after the family's arrival on the Islands. His address: 1412 Whitney Street, Honolulu, T. H.

Theatre

---

WISCONSIN Players' summer play schedule opens with a bang on July 3 with a revival of "Fashion" or "Life in New York," a melodrama of the past century that laid 'em in the aisles in the Seventies. Wisconsin Players are presenting the show to summer session audiences for the second time July 3 and 4, having staged it several seasons ago. J. Russell Lane will direct.

An original farce by Prof. Ronald E. Mitchell, called "No Boots in Bed," will be given July 17 and 18. The show won the Leland Stanford award for comedy a year ago. Mitchell will direct.

"Ladies in Retirement" by Edward Percy and Reginald Denham will be given July 24, 25. The play was first produced in New York in 1940 with Flora Robson in the leading role. Carl Cass directs.

"Wingless Victory" by Maxwell Anderson concludes the season July 31 and Aug. 1. Lane will direct.

In addition Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will read "The White Cliffs of Dover" by Alice Duer Miller, July 12.

Roach Leaves for Kansas

WALTER ROACH, stage manager for the Wisconsin Union theater and director for the Wisconsin Players, will leave the University at the end of summer session for a new position as professor of theatricals, speech and dramatics at the Kansas State college at Manhattan, Kas.

Roach has been director and actor at Wisconsin in addition to stage manager for the theater. His latest production was "George and Margaret" last March. Notable among the parts he created on stage himself was that of the newspaper editor in "Our Town" by Thornton Wilder.

Flagstad, Iturbi Headline Concerts

ANNOUNCEMENT of the concert season for next year was made by Dan E. Simon, chairman of the Wisconsin Union concert series at the close of the school year.

Headlined by Kirsten Flagstad, famous Norwegian Wagnerian soprano, the series will include the Don Cossack chorus with Serge Jaroff, its diminutive and dynamic leader, Jose Iturbi, Spanish pianist-conductor, and a concert-opera presentation of "The Marriage of Figaro," Mozart's most popular opera-bouffe.

The series brings back to campus audiences the Cossacks and Iturbi, both having scored heavily here in previous seasons.

Last year the Union concert series sold out completely and was forced to bring some of the audiences for second nights. Patrons for this season are urged to reserve seats early in the fall.

Dean Ira Baldwin was named chairman of the agricultural bacteriology department, succeeding E. G. Hastings

Agriculture

THE staff of the College of Agriculture, working under the leadership of Dean Chris L. Christensen, is intensifying its efforts in research, extension and teaching, seeking thereby to serve still more fully in the present emergency the agricultural industry of the state and to help farmers to adjust themselves to situations arising out of the world conflict.

A number of changes in personnel and assignments have lately been made. Owing to the retirement of E. G. Hastings as head of the department of agricultural bacteriology, Ira L. Baldwin has been made chairman of that division. He takes over his new responsibilities on July 1. Mr. Hastings will continue for a year as a member of the teaching and research staff of the department.

After forty years of devoted service, Andrew R. Whitson is retiring from the staff of the soils department where he has rendered unusual service to the farmers and farming interests of the state. Recently members of the staff and their friends met to pay tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Whitson. They will continue to be keenly interested in the activities and welfare of Wisconsin farmers.

After spending a period of years in the service of the poultrymen of the state Clayton E. Holmes has been asked to take over a still heavier responsibility at the Oregon State College at Corvallis, Oregon. Holmes has been in the service of Wisconsin poultrymen for more than thirteen years and in that time has been able to be of unusual help to those engaged in this important phase of Wisconsin agriculture.

Wisconsin legislators were almost in complete agreement for the need for new farm short course facilities. By their action in the closing days of the 1941 session they approved the erection of the dormitories and an educational center to house the educational work of this and other short courses.

Alumni visiting the agricultural campus this year will be pleased with the appearance upon the grounds of a new home management house erected midway between Agricultural hall and the Home Economics building. Graduates of the home economics department have been very keenly interested in the construction of a new wing to the Home Economics building in which to better house the laboratories and classrooms of this rapidly growing department. A bill is now before the legislature looking toward the construction of this wing.

Serving on the state and national defense committees on nutrition, Miss Frances Zuill, director of home economics courses, has been able to be of especial helpfulness in the present emergency.

Pasture Improvement Exhibit Hits the Road AN EXHIBIT of the College at the International Livestock exposition has recently been aiding Illinois farmers in their pasture improvement program. The exhibit, entitled "At the Pasture Management Crossroads", was prepared by F. V. Burealow, extension agronomist, and B. C. Jorns, illustrator. It attracted sufficient interest at the International to be requested for use on an educational train for two weeks during which stops were made in 69 towns. At least 2,000 people viewed the exhibit.

Bewick Honored by 4-H Clubs THOMAS L. BEWICK, one of the founders of 4H clubs in Wisconsin, was honored by the University 4H club in March for his 27 years of leadership in farm and home club work at an annual banquet in the First Congregational church. The club presented Bewick with a traveling bag.

Principal speaker at the banquet was T. A. Erickson, retired state 4H leader of Minnesota. Miss Abby Marlatt, retired director of the University home economics department, Miss Blanche Lee, state home demonstration leader, and students and advisers from the Iowa State 4H club also were there.

Erickson stressed the opportunities for service which are before Wisconsin's young farm people.

"Problems are opportunities," he said. "Needs help you to bring in the fundamental principle of 4H club work—service."

Wide Circulation Given Milk Bulletin "WHAT fuels are best for stocking the human machine? Many foods serve this purpose, but one of them stands out as different, unique, exceptional. This food is milk."

With this sound scientific statement, important to dairymen and consumers alike, is started "Milk as a Food Throughout Life," a bulletin which is in wide demand throughout the United States.

Based upon the results of scientific nutritional research this bulletin from the agricultural experiment station of the University has been requested by groups as well as individuals from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. The most recent request came from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, which is distributing several thousand copies among its clientele.

Commercial concerns have secured large quantities for distribution through the consuming centers of the eastern seaboard, reports Andrew W. Hopkins, extension editor, in charge of distribution.

4-H Clubs Pay Moore Respects

THE late Prof. Ransom A. Moore of the College of Agriculture was honored by 300 Wisconsin young people late in June when a tree was planted in his memory on 4-H knoll at the west end of Observatory hill.

Members of each club, in Madison for a week of training in 4-H activities, brought soil from their home communities to place around the roots of the young maple tree.

Professor Moore, an outstanding agronomist before his death Feb. 26, 1941, is credited with launching the American 4-H movement.

More Food for Better Defense

How Wisconsin farmers can step up production of food for national defense is the title of a special circular just published by the extension service of the University.

While American agriculture has an abundance of grain and livestock feeds, it faces at the same time a shortage of certain food supplies. This, the circular explains, is the result of increased home consumption and of purchases made by Great Britain and other nations under the lend-lease act.

The shortage is especially acute among those foods which are easily transported, those which can be stored without refrigeration, and those which are high in essential food nutrients.

Varsity Sports

"BADGERS national champs" read headlines the nation over at the close of the basketball season in March. Bud Foster's "rags to riches" quintet rose from ninth place to the Big Ten championship, and went from there to defeat Washington State's powerful Cougars 39-34 at Kansas City.

At Kansas City, it was Johnny Kotz' unrivalled floor play and his 12 points that gave the Badgers a big boost in the Washington State game. Johnny was picked as the most valuable player of the night. Captain Englund led the scoring with 13 points, but there was glory enough for all. Rehm, Epperson, Strain, Bob Alwin, Don Timmerman, and Warren Schrage came in for much credit.

Thousands of students and townspeople descended on the Northwestern railway station the night after the game to give the Badger players a welcome which well nigh eclipsed any homecoming celebrations seen here.

Boxers Beat Nation's Best

RIGHT in step with Badger basketball fortunes, Wisconsin's boxers came through the winter's boxing wars unscathed, piling up a string of nine straight wins against some of the toughest collegiate punchers.

Coach John Walsh shuffled the lineup several times, with Capt. Nick Lee, Gene Rankin, Warren Jollymore, Bob Sachtshale, Billy Roth, Phil Prather, and Jack Gibson, Ray Kramer, and Verdayne John carrying most of the load.

Wisconsin 5, Idaho 3. One of the closest decisions of the year, this Idaho match nearly spoiled the Badgers' undefeated record. Rankin - Jollymore - Roth - Prather - John, Wisconsin's boxing Panzer division, staged a mitt blitz that sealed up the Vandals' ambitions to upset the Walshmen in their home bailiwick.

Eight ringwise Badger boxers, Jack Gibson, Bob Sachtshale, Gene Rankin, Warren Jollymore, Bill Roth, Phil Prather, Capt. Nick Lee, and Verdayne John, made the trip to Pennsylvania State college for the National Collegiate boxing tournament this year, but only one—Rankin—came back with a national title, at 135 pounds.

Rankin came through three tough bouts, licking Les Coffman of Washington State in the finals. Billy Roth, 155 pounder, was also in the finals, but Rodney Bellaire, LSU, put Billy out of the running.

Track Team Wins in Dual Meets, Slips in Conference Meet

COACH TOM JONES' Badger trackmen again held their own against some of the best competition in the country, winding up the outdoor season with a record of five wins and only one defeat in dual meets. During the indoor season Wisconsin lost one of three duals.

Notre Dame was the only squad to beat the Badger cindermen outdoors. They downed the Cardinal squad at Camp Randall, 76-55.

Against Marquette, Wisconsin was the victor, 79-52. Reliable Schoenike, Paskvan, Beierle, Williams, Zolin, and others piled up points for the Jones outfit.

On a dual meet the same weekend as the strenuous Kansas relays, the Badgers crushed the University of Kansas, winning 13 out of 15 events. Byron Zolin's two fast 440-yard runs, one in 49 seconds and the other in 48.9 seconds, were the best performances of the day. The Badgers repeated an earlier indoor victory, taking the Gophers at Minneapolis, 76-55.

Against Iowa at Camp Randall, Wisconsin piled up its best win of the year, defeating the Hawkeyes, 94-37. The Badgers won every event but the high jump and the mile relay. The crowd roared as Bill Williams, Badger pole vault ace, soared over the bar at 14 feet to tie the meet record of Milt Padway, set in 1939.

Badger track and field men kept well out in front in dual meet competition this year, but in the larger affairs, they fared not so well.

At the 1941 Kansas Relays, Wisconsin was first in the four mile, pole vault and shot put, second and third in the discus, and second in the broad jump to take team honors for the day.

In the Western conference meet, the Cardinals turned up fifth, with Larry Hadley, sophomore, claiming the Big Ten championship in the javelin throw. Other Badgers who placed in the Midwest conference runoffs were Beierle and Paskvan in the shot put, Don Timmerman in the high jump, Howard Schoenike in the two mile, Roger Foster in the pole vault, James McFadzean in the broad jump.

At the Drake relays, where quality and quantity of competition is so great that merely breaking into the scoreboard is an achievement, Wisconsin took one first place, tied for another, and copped a fourth and sixth place. Everett Kelso, sophomore, won the gruelling 440 yard hurdles. Bill Williams shared first in the pole vault with Hunt of Nebraska.

In a triangular meet with Minnesota and Nebraska, Wisconsin came out second, trailing the Cornhuskers by seven points. Scores were Nebraska 64 5/6, Wisconsin 57 1/3, Minnesota 39 5/6.

At the close of the season, Wisconsin took third place in the Central Interscholastic relays at Marquette stadium, Milwaukee, against the toughest competition in the country. This meet concluded work for the year.

Frosh Surprise at Poughkeepsie ENDING their first season under Coach Allen W. Walz, Wisconsin's freshman and varsity crews early in June headed for Poughkeepsie, and the world-famed regatta after months of practice on Lake Mendota.

At Poughkeepsie, the freshmen stole the show from the lighter varsity boat, by taking second in the yearling two-mile pull, while the veterans came in sixth in the four-mile classic. The Badger frosh led to the last quarter mile in their race, but dropped to second behind the fast stroking Cornell shell near the finish.

In the varsity race, Washington battled California all the way down the course and finished strong, leaving Wisconsin's varsity to battle for sixth place with Syracuse, Princeton, and Rutgers.

"Hodag" Johnny Kotz won the most valuable player award in the NCAA basketball tournament

Enroute to the Hudson river classic, Wisconsin's crews stopped over in Chicago where Washington gave them a preview of Poughkeepsie, and a defeat in a mile event on the Lincoln park lagoon. The freshmen tied the Washington Jayvee. Before going East, Wisconsin had chalked up wins over Marietta college varsity and the Lincoln Park boat club of Chicago. The freshmen beat Marietta's jayvees, Lincoln Park varsity, and St. John's Military academy in races at home, and Culver Military academy at the Indiana school's home pond.

George Paskvan was a reliable and consistent point winner

Golf Squad Has Success WINNING four of six tough matches in intercollegiate golf, Wisconsin came through the season in good shape. Coach Joe Steinauer's boys won from Marquette, 14½-12½ to open the season, and carried on against Notre Dame 15-12. Chicago was buried by the Badger teemen, 20½-3½. Northwestern was first to stop the golfers, taking the long end of a 16½-11½ score. Minnesota followed suit, winning over Wisconsin 19-8. But back came the Badgers with a vengeance, to close the season against Iowa, and win 20½-3½.

Tennis Team Bats .500 per cent WISCONSIN'S tennis team closed its season with a loss to Northwestern to send the Badgers' season record in Big Ten play to below .500, and make their season record four wins and four losses.

Coached by the newly appointed Carl Sanger, the netmen this year opened their season with a 7-2 win over Iowa. They then dropped consecutive matches to Michigan and Chicago before snapping out with a 9-0 triumph over Marquette. A trip to Minneapolis brought a 6-3 loss, but revenge in Madison the following week was sweet, at the same score. Illinois took a 6-3 pasting later.

The Badgers won 37 matches and lost 35 during the season.

Crew Corporation Elects Directors TEN alumni were elected to the board of directors of the Wisconsin Crew Corporation in a mail ballot recently conducted by that organization. Those elected were Reuben N. Trane, '10, La Crosse; Dr. Dexter Witte, '12, Milwaukee; B. B. Burling, '06, Milwaukee; Dean F. Ellis Johnson, '06, Madison; Don C. Newcomb, '23, Waupun; Dorsey A. Buckley, '29, Chicago; Dr. John C. McCarter, '27, Madison; Karl H. Fauerbach, '24, Madison; Oscar Teckemeyer, '26, Arlington, Va.; and Harry Thoma, '28, Madison.

The Wisconsin Crew Corporation is an organization of former oarsmen at Wisconsin. Walter Alexander, '97, Milwaukee, is president of the group. Franklin L. Orth, '28, Milwaukee, is vice president, and McCarter and Thoma are treasurer and secretary, respectively.

Bob Foss to Head Athletic Publicity ROBERT FOSS, '29, editor of the University news bureau for 10 years, has been named head of the University's sports publicity work by Director Harry Stuhldreher. The centralized publicity office goes into effect immediately. Assistant to Foss in the athletic publicity work will be Fred Baxter, who served as assistant to George F. Downer, '97, former director of sports publicity who died last April. Foss became editor of the University news bureau in 1931, and has also been an instructor in the University's school of journalism.

BOASTING a collective grade average only a fraction less than that of all men students, Wisconsin's athletes came through the scholastic hurdles in fine shape last semester. Teams will lose only two veterans and no freshmen whatever, a close survey of grades for all athletes shows.

Barley Master

THE taste in that foaming stein of beer over which you or your friends may occasionally smack your lips is indirectly due to the efforts of Prof. James G. Dickson, '17, of the University's agronomy and plant pathology department. Prof. Dickson and his staff have tested and worked with more than 1200 varieties of barley from all parts of the world. They are primarily concerned with the high yield of the grain, its ability to resist disease, and its various desirable qualities. The fact that the improvement in the quality of the barley has indirectly improved the quality of American made beer is incidental.

The Master Brewers Association of America tendered Prof. Dickson a dinner recently and presented him with a suitable award and a cash prize of $500 for having contributed most to the industry during the past year. George Sippel, '14, Cincinnati, was present when the award was made. Sippel is president of the Association.

Prof. Dickson has spent most of his life studying and experimenting with barley. He has toured the world in search of new or unique varieties. To date there are about 6,000 known kinds of barley.

Help for Air Corps

TO WASHINGTON went Dr. J. W. Wilce, '10, in April and had the pleasure of seeing governmental officials quickly accept his plan for the speeding up of the Air Corps' physical examinations of college students.

Dr. Wilce, former football star at Wisconsin, later head coach at Ohio State and now director of student health at that institution, pointed out that about 100 colleges have student health centers at which proper medical examinations could be made, thus relieving the travelling examiners from much of their work. The student clinics also have a complete medical history of the students and are in a vastly better position to render more efficient service.

The program which the government accepted provides for the full use of college facilities, enables the local doctor to make preliminary examinations, requests the colleges to help the student with such corrective measures as may be necessary to improve his physical condition, and that the colleges set up this service on a long time basis with an eye toward future enlistments in the years to come.

Ambassador to Reporter

JOHN CUDAHY'S job as ambassador to Belgium and minister to Luxembourg folded up under him with the successful onrush of Hitler's Panzer divisions through the lowlands in 1940. After being detained by the German military for some weeks he was released and returned to America.

There was still work to be done in war-torn Europe, but this could not be accomplished while a member of the U. S. state department. An adventurer as well as a humanitarian at heart, this intrepid member of '13, submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt upon his return to Washington; it was accepted, and John Cudahy set sail for a writing career in Europe.

Readers of LIFE magazine were impressed with his story "Belgium Is Hungry", describing the plight of 8,300,000 Belgians who look to America to save them from the ravages of starvation. This is but the first of a series of factual and important documents which Cudahy will prepare.

Illini J-School Head

PROF. FRED S. SIEBERT, newspaperman, lawyer, and authority on the law of the press, who has taught in the University of Illinois since 1927, has been appointed director of the School of Journalism at Illinois, beginning September 1.

He will be the fourth director the courses in journalism have had since such instruction began, in 1905. Scholarly Prof. Frank Scott was head of such courses 1905-18; the genial H. F. Harrington 1918-21; Professor Scott again 1921-25; research-loving Prof. Lawrence W. Murphy, '21, 1925-40. Professor Murphy resigned as head of the school last year, because of ill health, but continues as a professor.

A native of Minnesota, Professor Siebert was graduated with honors from Wisconsin in 1923. He was a reporter on the Eveleth (Minn.) News, and the Hibbing (Minn.) Daily News, a copy reader on the Duluth Herald and the Chicago Herald-Examiner. He directed publicity for the Bradley college endowment campaign in 1926-27. The next year he became an instructor in journalism at Illinois and studied in the College of Law, receiving his J. D. degree in '29.

Boosts WGN

WITH WGN and Mutual forging to the front among the broadcasting companies, one Badger's recent appointment takes on special significance. He is Bruce Dennis, '30, who last month was appointed director of special events broadcasts. This new assignment is in addition to his other work as publicity director of WGN.

Dennis has already announced that he plans to use WGN's mobile unit to a greater extent in picking up "spot" broadcasts and special events. Another new feature, recently announced is the program, Your Army, which will bring to the listeners news of the workings of each branch of our vast national defense set-up.

After leaving Wisconsin in 1930, Dennis worked on the sports desk of the Chicago Tribune and as city room rewrite and special assignment man until 1940, when he was appointed WGN publicity director.

Schedule Buster

THE government had its tongue in its cheek when it insisted that the job be done in 60 days because everyone knew of the difficulty of working under the broiling Panamanian sun with a bunch of listless native workers. But Al Schneider, '24, didn't have any tongue in his cheek when, as boss of the construction crew, he set out to build the aprons and runways at the important Howard field near the Panama Canal.

Al went at it just as he did when he was a very capable quarterback on the Wisconsin football team nearly a decade ago. And to the amazement of everyone—probably Schneider himself—the job was done in 41 days—nineteen days ahead of the suicide schedule set by the government!

Laying 200,000 square yards of concrete is a tough job in any league, but it becomes that much more difficult when there is inexperienced native labor, terrific heat, and countless other deterrants. The native crews were startled into near immobility at the huge machines brought in for the job. They were unfamiliar with the motors and burned out bearings and wrecked equipment in short order. Their food supply was inadequate so Schneider took to feeding them sandwiches, big batches of them, during the working hours. The hot sun continued to beat down mercilessly, so night shifts were put on to keep the work on an even flow.

The hangars are now being erected at the field and soon will house the massive bombers which will help protect the Caribbean area. And Al Schneider and his fellow workers are back in Milwaukee waiting for another tough nut to crack.

Going Up

WHEN Alex Gottlieb, '28, worked on the Badger and the Cardinal, he was always full of some quip or smart crack. When he was one of the editors of the Skyrocket column in the Cardinal, it was at its greatest "glory." Those "queeps and smott cracks" have done him all right, too, for Alex is now in Hollywood, preparing scripts and directing for the rapidly rising team of Abbott and Costello.

"Buck Privates" and "In the Navy" are products of Gottlieb's facile mind. The success of these two features has launched the gay threesome, Abbott, Costello and Gottlieb on a very high road to cinema success.

Alex started working for the Brooklyn Eagle after he left school and got into the movie game in a rather round about way. He worked as publicity director for the Paramount Theaters in New York city and later as advertising manager for United Artists. In 1937 Walter Wanger hired him for publicity direction but Wanger ceased activities and Alex was out of a job. About this time he sold a film story, Secret Ship, and was launched on a scenarists career.

Then he helped Allan Dinehart patch up a badly botched play and made it sufficiently presentable for a long Broadway run. It started as "Thanks for My Wife" but is now billed as "Separate Rooms". Universal picked him up and had him do a bit for the two comedians. Their sensational success has kept Gottlieb busy night and day, writing and directing and still making his smart cracks.

Milk Research Wins $1000

DR. JULIA OUTHOUSE, '19, professor of nutrition at the University of Illinois and chairman of the Illinois nutrition committee on defense, on June 23 received the Borden award for outstanding research from the American Home Economics association in convention in Chicago.

Nominated by the association for the honor, Dr. Outhouse received a gold medal and $1,000 from W. A. Wentworth of the Borden company, New York; the award was announced by Dr. Gladys Branegan, '13, president of the association.

Dr. Outhouse was cited for her extensive investigations dealing with the role of milk and its components in the diet. An outstanding contribution was her work which showed that the human system utilizes the calcium in milk more fully than the calcium found in any other food. Most of Dr. Outhouse's work has been devoted to the study of calcium, the bone and tooth building factor, in milk. Her studies serve to reemphasize the importance of milk in nutrition.

Seven Up

IF THE Milwaukee Alumni club ever wonders about where to hold their meetings, they might do well to consider the WTMJ studios, for there are no less than seven Wisconsin alumni employed there.

There's Russ Winnie, '27, well known to all Wisconsin fans for his sports broadcasts of Wisconsin and Green Bay Packers games. Bill (Top o' the Morning) Evans, got his degree in '34. George Comte, '35, received his degree in political science so his Today's Events is right down his alley. Don Wirth stayed on the Campus for only a year before answering the siren call of commercial radio last winter. The department of speech gave Don Stanley, '39, and Gordon Thomas, '40, the training they needed to break into the announcing staff. And lastly there's Warren Mead, '32, who does his share to make the staff pretty much of an all-Wisconsin affair.

War Brings New Job

HENRY METZ, '20, was too valuable a man to be permitted to practically rot in the diminishing export department of the Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation, so officials pushed him upstairs into the managership of the Methods Department. Here he will direct the sales force of the company and devise methods of improving services to the customers.

Metz joined the company more than fifteen years ago as a member of the advertising-sales department. Shortly after a transfer to the sales division, he was sent to Berlin to manage the office there. He was called to the home office in Cleveland in 1931 and was soon promoted to manage the Overseas department. He made frequent trips to South America in this capacity and built an enviable production record.

However, like so many other businesses, the war has affected the Overseas sales of the A-M drastically and since Henry Metz was far too valuable to doodle on his scratch pad while waiting for the war to stop, he's now pushing home sales and services at a rapid clip.

Nearing the Top

WHEN Paul Clemens first met John Barrymore, he dubbed him the "dean of the Barrymores" and was promptly called "Doctor" Clemens in return, because "he looked so unlike an artist".

But in spite of his lack of "artistic" looks, Paul Clemens, '32, is one of America's most outstanding young artists and is coming to the forefront with rapid strides. As far back as 1938, TIME magazine called attention to the merits of his work. The New York Times praised his one-man show in New York during that same year.

Since then Paul has moved to Hollywood, where he and Mrs. Clemens, who has long been his favorite model, are hard at work preparing for his second one-man show in New York this fall.

While at the Barrymores, Clemens made some sketches of the "great profile" and from these made a portrait which is now owned by Gloria Blondell, sister of the famous Joan. During the past year he has done about twelve large portraits including those of the Countess of Jersey, William Haines, Mrs. Stanley Barbee, Mrs. Marcus Daly and a number of child portraits of famous people. His "Ruth in the Blue Hat" is hanging in the Los Angeles museum as the "picture of the month".

And when he's not busy at home in his studio, Paul is an instructor in art in the Otis Art Institute in Los Angeles.

Heads Agric Defense

JOHN B. HUTSON, well known to many Wisconsin tobacco growers, has been named chief of the office of Agricultural Defense relations. Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard has asked Hutson to head a group which will work with the office of Emergency Management, War and Navy departments, and other defense agencies.

Hutson studied agricultural economics at Wisconsin, taking an advanced degree in 1926. He later had charge of the tobacco program of the Agricultural Adjustment administration and visited the state frequently while directing that project.

From Barns to Murals

TOM DIETRICH, '30, really planned to become an architect, but the depression sent his well-laid plans awry, so he turned to painting to keep the wolf from his door. He started out by painting signs and then branched out to houses and barns. But during the five years he was so employed, he dabbled away at his own work at home.

It was in 1938 that he sent a painting to the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation, fully expecting it to be returned too promptly. Instead he won a fellowship. That began a period of study of 16 weeks in New York, Cincinnati, and Minneapolis. Since then he has exhibited his paintings in the Cincinnati American, the Philadelphia Water club show, the Kansas Midwest, the Art Institute of Chicago, and the Contemporary American show in Chicago, as well as the Wisconsin Salon in Madison and Milwaukee.

Last year he learned that the U. S. maritime commission was awarding contracts for murals in a nation-wide contest for work to be done for six new ships and that scenes from the lower Manhattan harbor were on the preferred list. He promptly submitted his sketches and won a contract to do the murals for the new luxury liner, S. S. Van Buren. He's just about done with the big order now.

What are his plans? Well, the army has that ominous finger pointed his way, so he'll be called up in the draft this fall.

- 1921 Mary M. HOWARD, Ft. Wayne, Ind., died June 4. Miss Howard taught in Janesville for 7 years, resigning in 1927.

Small Town Impresario

UP IN Batavia, Wis., the boys really go all out for aid to the old home town. Fifty-one male members of this rural community applied the grease paint and climbed into fancy costumes during May to present their gala performance of "Notes to You, Kirsten", a gay musical comedy on the Haresfoot style, written and directed by Ralph Mehlos, '38, an old Haresfooter himself.

This "Orson Welles of the barnyard" generally helps his father with the work on the family farm. But the yen for play production became too great and he deserted the plow and the cows long enough to write, direct and be a member of the cast of a really riotous production. Critics report they were "laying in the aisles."

He assembled all the material necessary for the immediate staging of the production. What costumes could not be made, he borrowed. He took the searchlights from the firetruck, draped them with colored cellophane and used them for flood and spot lights. Many of his choicest quips were picked up from conversations in the village store.

The 50th Reunion of 1891

MEMBERS of the class of 1891 registered in the library of the Memorial Union on the morning of Saturday, June 21.

Recognition was not always immediate, but was most cordial when achieved. At noon the class, in a body, attended the Half-Century Club luncheon, and in the evening, the Reunion dinner.

At the luncheon each member of the class present received a Certificate—token of fifty years of loyalty to the University.

On Sunday morning there was a breakfast on the Terrace of the Memorial Union for the class.

Including wives, husbands, and daughters, between thirty-five and forty sat down at a table with decorations and flowers of dark blue and gold—the class colors.

Dr. Edward Ochsner, class secretary, called the roll—receiving responses in person from twenty-six, and by letter from fourteen.

Dr. Clarence Hardy made considerable amusement by producing the "pipe of peace" smoked at the Class Day ceremonies of 1891, and the "stove-pipe" hat of his senior days.

With the election of Geo. E. Morton of Milwaukee as President, and Mrs. J. J. Schindler of Madison as Secretary, the reunion closed, looking forward to meeting fifty-five years young in 1946.

Class of '96 Reunion

INCLUDING several "et uxes," the Hill class of '96 had nearly 20 at its luncheon table in the Beef Eaters' room of the Memorial Union on June 21. The illness of Frank Lucas and the absence of Mabel McCoy Parkinson, secretary, lent to the luncheon a slightly graver air of maturity than usual and a suspension of customary childish credulity and play. The Laws of '96 joined with the Hill again this year and an even larger representation of that class turned up, including the redoubtable Fred Kull of the football team that used to bring home championships, because it was expected to; Jimmie Drought and Pearl Lincoln, who looked their parts, and Maurice McCabe, who naturally took the head of the table where he belonged. There was no program, but no lack of fun and belated confessions of early deviltries. Iverson, of Chicago, who never fails (he of the $3,000 dog), had class pictures to show and Carlyle Gile, a flaming necktie. President Bill Conway and Dr. "Red" Thompson, Chicago, recalled some class history. In the afternoon the members played bridge in the Rathskeller and revealed the existence of many grandchild prodigies. In the evening the members attended the alumni dinner on the terrace and received so many accretions from '97 and '98 as to make a real showing. From her balcony seat facing them, Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, of fairy-like and sovereign air, beamed down upon them, as Charlie Hayden led in the singing of old favorites. The members had such a good time that they fear a dangerous crush at the next reunion.

'01's 40th Reunion

THE 40th Reunion of 1901 attracted a larger group than five years ago. Many came back for the first time in 40 years, and some of them made the others promise to come back five years hence. Four former class presidents were there,—Ralph Plumb, Paul Stover, Fred Schoensigel and Lynn Tracy. Fred came from Fairfield, Montana,—never back before,—and his talk at the Saturday luncheon on his experiences in the west was both optimistic and inspirational. Hylon T. Plumb, Consulting Engineer from Salt Lake City, Utah, was also back for the first time, as was Edward T. O'Brien, banker from Two Rivers, Wisconsin. Ed brought generous applause in complimenting the women of 1901 on their youthful appearance. William S. Kies again reunited with the class and gave a fascinating account of the Alumni Research Foundation, which owes much to his executive ability from its earliest beginnings. Frank Rodolf, Fritchhof Vea, Charles S. Wigdale, and Judge George Thompson were also back for the first time. Jimmie Nash, (first trip), Carrie Evans Janssen, Grace R. Hastie and Dorothea Curtis Chiekerling were also called on at the luncheon, which was very properly closed by Dr. Clarence E. Macartney,—just as sound and pleasing to listen to as in college days.

A list of those who came back is given elsewhere, and it includes those who never miss, and those who have been back on different occasions. Many came in for the Alumni Institute and the Glenn Frank dinner on Friday, and still had enough pep left at the Alumni dinner Saturday night to give the rousing "Second to None" Class yell to start off the other classes. The years, and the experiences of the years, with the atmosphere and recollections of the University, seemed to add a certain indefinable mellowness to the group. You who stayed at home must not miss another.

Biggest and Best for '06

EXHIBITING a fraternal zeal undiminished by the years, members of the class of 1906 made their June anniversary the occasion for one of their biggest and best reunions. Against expectations, in view of prevailing conditions, the '06ers maintained the tradition of a very large foregathering of members and their families. Although now one of the smaller class groups, they recorded a registration of 76 members and a total representation (with families and guests from other classes) of approximately 137. All class events were centered in the Memorial Union.

From the apple orchards of the Pacific northwest to the sidewalks of New York these alumni threw off restraints of distance when confronted with an opportunity to meet again in the familiar surroundings. From 2,000 miles to the west came Loomis J. Shadbolt, member of the Washington legislature. But Zeb Kinsey came two blocks farther. Both live in the same neighborhood at Yakima, Wash. Polly Fenton and the John Whytes had the "farthest east" record. They're from New York. Dean E. Foster, Tulsa, was the farthest south delegate.

Unusual and compelling was the alibi of an '06er living in Canada; he was home-bound because it's against the law to take money (beyond four dollars) out of Canada. (Defense, of course). And one can't well travel on promises to pay, alone.

Dodo Bones, composed of '06 men enrolled in the school of commerce, staged their first reunion in 35 years. Of 19 original members, two have died, seven were absent. The ten who came were Louis M. Anderson, Minneapolis; Ralph W. Collie, Philadelphia; Thomas M. Conway, Evanston, Ill.; W. Ray Gilfillan, St. Paul; Hiram C. Houghton, Jr., Red Oak, Ia.; Zebulon B. Kinsey, Yakima; Arthur O. Kuehsted, Appleton; William V. Lehmann, Woodland; Arthur Strong, Dodgeville; Milton L. Woodward, Detroit.

1901 got together for their picture after the Saturday luncheon

Remnants of the '06 crew, on the records as one of the fastest to represent Wisconsin at Poughkeepsie, donned rowing togs again, and in a shell borrowed from the boathouse essayed a time trial in the general direction of Elizabeth Waters hall. Lack of condition, in which bulging fronts played a part, was a handicap, and with many a stop for air the crew wound up its workout, glad to call it a day. Positions: Johnson (Ellis), stroke; Van Meter, 2; Johnson (Guy), 3; Foster, bow.

Members of Kappa Kappa Gamma came back in numbers, and many were the get-togethers enjoyed around the tables inside the Union and out.

The Old Madison room proved too small for the returning '06 hosts. One hundred twenty-five were served at the class luncheon. Afterwards, all assembled for roll call. Prof. Otto Kowalke, presiding, offered to all present a chance to identify themselves and to say things it is customary for returning graduates to say at such times.

A poll of the grandparents present was called for; from all over the room they arose. (It is recalled that it was in 1906 that Theodore Roosevelt made his pronouncement against race suicide).

Greetings were read from many absent ones, including John Earl Baker, now engaged in getting supplies through the Burma Road for the embattled Chinese.

Filling two tables decorated in the orange and black, '06ers attended the Alumni Dinner in force, and were thrilled with the new banquet setting on the Union terrace. Members gathered Sunday morning for breakfast converse at the same place, and for many this lasted until noon.

For drumming up interest in this reunion the class published The Hod, only class newspaper on the campus, with a history of 30 years of much-interrupted publication. It was voted to publish a post-reunion number. Officers were re-elected.

The class register showed a few more graduates were present than at the 1936 reunion, notwithstanding five-year depletions, "the times," and extreme distance that for many is an impediment not easily overcome.

'16's Twenty-fifth Reunion

OVER one hundred members of the class of 1916 returned to celebrate their twenty-fifth reunion, June 20-23. Approximately fifty children accompanied the parents. It was the largest reunion of their class and probably one of the largest Silver Anniversary reunions in the history of the school.

Returning members came from as far West as Honolulu and California; as far South as Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina, as far East as New York and New Jersey and as far North as Minnesota.

For some it was the first reunion and many were the happy get-togethers and discussions of the good old days. Even the weather man helped to give the returning alumni a hot time.

Registration began on Friday, June 20, and that evening, the members attended a Memorial Dinner for the late president Glenn Frank. On Saturday noon, the annual class luncheon was held in the Great Hall of the Memorial Union and as the late arrivals came in by trains, planes and cars, the room was taxed to capacity. When George and Parky Levis arrived, there was nothing left except dessert. Handsome, bronzed, Ellsworth Alvord was quite the sensation among the ladies. Alvord arrived with Meredith Campbell and G. E. McHugh by plane from New York. Austin Mathews, John Bickel, Charles Spencer, Allen McHenry and Erich Wollaeger came back together and seemed to have a great time. Following the luncheon, a Business Meeting was held, and although the writer did his best to stage a fillibuster, he was talked down and all the officers were re-elected.

The group then adjourned to the Terrace where the accompanying class picture was taken. Unfortunately, all the members were not in the picture. Then, two chartered boats took the class on a trip around beautiful Lake Mendota. Through the kindness of Mr. Haight, '99, a quartet furnished entertainment. Dinner was served on the Terrace after which all the alumni listened, in the Memorial Union theater, to the splendid addresses of President Dykstra and Mr. Joseph Davies.

Then came the high spot of the reunion, the midnight luncheon at the Phi Delt house and a keg party at the foot of Lake Street. On Sunday morning there was a final get-together for breakfast on the Terrace, but several of the alumni were still celebrating at the Milton Findorffs Sunday afternoon and evening.

I wish to extend my thanks to all who assisted in making the reunion a success. I express my regrets to those who were unable to return this time, but I hope they will be with us at our next reunion five years hence.

1928 Class Reunion

BACK to Wisconsin came the '28'ers—back this June of '41 for a few brief hours to live over once again those days of underclass activities.

Registration shows forty-five returning which with wives, husbands and offspring made a turnout of double this number in attendance.

We from '28 came to this reunion to really enjoy ourselves—and we did. There was a certain carefree informality about our plans that permitted each individual doing just what he or she wanted to do; something that appealed to his or her nature.

Activities started Friday with the Glenn Frank Memorial Dinner. Then on Saturday afternoon the boat ride and snacks—with an added thrill thrown in when a typical Lake Mendota squall put on by Mother Nature capsize several sailboats all for our interest and added attraction.

Saturday evening brought the Alumni Dinner amid a beautiful setting on the Union Terrace overlooking the lake. Good food, too, at this as at all Union functions! . . . and then "Dancing in the Moonlight" to music of "now" and "then" from Larry O'Brien's orchestra playing out under the open sky on the breeze-cooled balcony of the new Theater. Not till the new day began did the music cease and the weary reuners depart soon to return for informal group gatherings at breakfast on the Terrace.

And so the second reunion of the Class of 1928 came to a close, enjoyable, yes—informal, yes—but best of all a time to once again renew old friendships, to meet old classmates—to see and hear how each is prospering with the years—and to be able to do all this in the surroundings of June time on our beautiful campus is truly most enjoyable. We who returned will long remember those happy days too quickly passed.

The five boys are a lively bunch; and needless to say, my schedule at this time allows me no room for "extra curricular activities". Distance and responsibility prevent my return this year for Reunion, so let me send my best wishes to you through this medium. Aloha."

'30 Pays Dividends

STATISTICALLY speaking, the Class of 1930 had in attendance at its second reunion of

Wind-blown but happy, '28, '29, '30, and '31 posed on the Union terrace after the Saturday afternoon boatride

60 members, 25 men, 35 women, who came back to see the campus, the new Union theater, their friends, their friends' husbands or wives, a few children, and incidentally to have a good time. Half of the reuners were from Madison and most of the rest from within the state, although New York City and New Orleans were represented.

The first dividends we collected on our class dues, paid in the year 1 A. C. (remember when we graduated one year after the crash in '29?), was a ticket to the Glenn Frank Memorial dinner Friday night. Everything else was free for nothing, too.

The real fun began Saturday afternoon when we took a cruise around Mendota in two large launches. Beer, pop, sandwiches, and accordion music as well as renewal of friendships satisfied both sides of the inner man. The sailboat which tipped over in front of our boats was not a floor show arranged by the reunion committee.

The senior-alumni dinner on the Union terrace was followed by a dance to the tune of Larry O'Brien's band on the outside balcony of the new Union theater. Even the weather man cooperated to make it a most enjoyable evening.

A final opportunity to talk over the good old days and to say good byes was provided by the Sunday morning breakfast on the terrace. Everyone vowed to return for the next reunion in five years and bring some of the '30's who missed out on this occasion.

To Our Fellow '31ers

VELL, we op und done it again! And we had a pile of fun doing it, too, all of us who "did" our 10th Reunion on June 20th. The weather was perfect, the program varied to appeal to numerous interests, and the turn-out extremely gratifying. All the facilities of the Memorial Union and the Alumni Association office were at our disposal, and all activities centered there.

The speakers at the Institute Meeting Friday afternoon were tops, and the Memorial Dinner Friday evening was an eloquent tribute to the memory of Glenn Frank, our Prexy.

Can't you imagine the anxious moments we counted during our boat ride Saturday afternoon while the rescue squad raced out from the University pier to the middle of Lake Mendota to pick out of the water the crews of the capsize sail boats? THAT little piece of activity was not pre-arranged by the Committee, but it was the only item they missed, for our every want and need were anticipated and happily provided for. And everything WAS Free!

The food was scrumptious at all times, and the cool breezes blowing in off Lake Mendota made our Saturday nite dance on the out-of-doors theatre balcony a positive delight.

Only re-uners can know the fun in meeting strangely familiar faces in well-remembered places, and trying to attach the right name — sure we slipped more than once, but nobody cared really.

Would we have missed this, our Tenth Reunion, for anything? Nope. Are we all returning for the next one, whenever it may be? Yup. Are we who "did it" this time going to bring along at least one of you who "didn't" so you, too, can share the fun with us next Reunion? Just wait and see.

MIGZIE MURPHY,

same Association also provides you with an opportunity to express your loyalty and allegiance to the University which gave you your training and background for your business or professional career.

Such opportunities have always been appreciated by thinking men and women. Today they mean more than ever before. In these disturbing times important things become still more important. In many other sections of the world universities are being stifled or wiped out of existence. More and more we recognize the importance of the American system of education as the life blood of our democracy. In the face of these facts, our responsibilities and obligations as alumni of a great University are crystal clear. Lip service is no longer sufficient. Our loyalty must be translated into forceful, constructive action. Only through such action can you and I express our loyalty to the University of Wisconsin.

Our greatest handicap today is lack of members. To do the kind of job that should be done, we need 10,000 members—4,000 more than we have had for the past two years. Undoubtedly you know some alumnus who can and should be a member of the Association. Perhaps a suggestion from you is all that is needed to change this non-member into a full-time Badger. If all of us would follow through on this simple, easy plan our membership would soon reach the 10,000 mark.

The '41 Reunions

such a privilege is worth preserving. The people of this state are confident you will do your duty to your country and your fellow men."

President Dykstra in delivering the charge to the class, urged them to recognize the traditional American obligation to maintain the freedom of our individualistic system, to make sure of their personal allegiance to the American way of life, to accept personal responsibility for our inner defenses, and creation of a peaceful world, and to defend the principles "our fathers fought for" and to accept any responsibility that defense requires.

At the Baccalaureate services on Sunday afternoon, 4,500 graduates and parents heard President Dykstra urge "the good fight of faith".

"This is a day of rededication to those human decencies and strivings which Paul extolled 1900 years ago," he reminded the seniors.

President and Mrs. Dykstra entertained more than 5,000 graduating seniors, their families and reuning alumni at their annual reunion-Commencement reception in their Prospect avenue home on Sunday night, June 22. In a steady, three-hour stream, forming a line which at times reached more than a block, the guests filed past the receiving line on the terrace garden and were served refreshments outside as well as inside the house.

date Helen says jokingly, "I have taken so many tumbles I think I have learned all the ways of falling off a horse."

Naturally she is concerned with building a fund for her old age since that is her major concern for her clients, their comfort in their rocking-chair days, but nevertheless she likes to enjoy the present. So each year she takes a splendid trip. Of course, Herr Adolf has restricted the places where adventurous Americans may safely go, but Helen is systematically penetrating as many areas as she can with no danger from Stuka dive bombers and parachutists.

Speaking of clients, Helen serves both men and women. She thinks most progressive people need a competent insurance counsellor today in order to keep informed on estate problems, changes in taxation, investment policies, and social security regulations. For her women friends she is a sort of Gibraltar in their confused financial sea. They trust her implicitly, and no warmer tribute can be paid to her integrity than to say that this attitude exists.

Helen, being primarily a fun-loving gal, likes to laugh reminiscently over her amusing errors. There was the time, for instance, when she tried to sell a juvenile policy to a bachelor. He told her he didn't have a family, "fact is, I don't even have a wife."

And once she called on a chap in his 70's who slapped his thigh at being solicited by what he termed a "female agent." Women producers are no longer oddities, and even the oldsters are used to them now, it may be surmised.

Nothing like selling life insurance to make one forget shyness, Helen avers. She is now equally at ease with Mr. Executive, Joe Garage, or the corner cop. Sometimes her girl scout proclivities get her into trouble, she admits, but she doesn't care. Life is real to Helen, but it's not so earnest it ever becomes dull. Her mother has seen to that.

of national defense

Telephone lines are life lines. They carry the communications so vital to our expanding defense program.

The photograph shows wires being made into a telephone cable. Such cable—containing billions of feet of this wire—is being rushed by Western Electric to meet the urgent telephone needs of the armed forces and of industry.

So too, in vastly increased quantities, are being sped telephones and switchboards—and radio apparatus for the air forces and the Signal Corps.

The efficiency of Bell Telephone service is more than ever essential to government and business, and now as always Western Electric can be counted on to supply the life lines.

Western Electric . . . is back of your
Bell Telephone service
