PUBLISHED BY THE BADGER BOARD OF
THE JUNIOR CLASS OF
THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN
MADISON 1901

Dedication.

To Adam and Eve, the original pair
 Who started the practice of co-education,
 Through whom it was sanctioned by special creation.
 We offer this volume, with impudence rare.

To seek higher branches, they took to the trees,
 Where the snake was the first to give apt information.
 That ophidian reptile, whose insinuations
 Caused instant expulsion and loss of degrees.

They introduced Cain rushes, after the fall,
 And entered as agrics for edification
 Concerning the apple and its mastication.
 Athletics commenced with their family squall.

As heirs to these favors, we think it most fit
 To proffer this work — in our own estimation
 A marvel of skill — its complete consummation.
 The perfection of art and the essence of wit.

The Battleship Wisconsin

Another star at a fighting top,
Another flag is set;
The bitter salt on her virgin bow,
Her anchor chains new wet;
The fires burn deep in her mighty heart,
The wind is off the lee—
To-day she slips from the harbor fog,
Hurrah! She's off to sea!

With Eastern steel and Western brawn—
Name of a Northern land;
Yankee brains in the builder's art
And a Yankee in command;
Yankee coal on the furnace bars,
The Badger bronze at her crest—
Off to settle a Yankee's wars
In the East or South or West!

Hull as white as Wisconsin snows,
Steel-cased to the fighting line;
Painted plates like a drift below,
Masts like the autumn pine;
Rugged and stern as the rock-built hills
Of an inland people's home.
She'll weather the worst of war-storm's ills
As her prow, the yellow foam.

She clears at last from the Golden Gate,
Past the High Presidio;
The deep-mouthed guns from the southern height
Boom out and bid her go;
The salt sun-wash that was far astern,
Fades fast in the sunset red—
Now, fair seaway to the Badger boat,
With the nation's foes ahead!

—Charles Tenney Jackson, ex'-'01.

“The Pride of the Navy”

Armored Coast Line Battleship Wisconsin, built by the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, Cal., christened by Miss Elizabeth Stephenson for the State of Wisconsin and launched by Miss Lucile Gage, representing the State of California, on November 26, 1898. Fastest seagoing battleship in the United States Navy, making 17.68 knots an hour for the four-hour speed test at Santa Barbara channel, October 2, 1900. Speed required by government, 16 knots an hour. Pronounced by Irving M. Scott, the builder, to be the most perfect ship ever turned out by the Union Iron Works. Speed of sister ship Alabama, 17.013 knots an hour.

Length of Wisconsin, 368 feet; breadth, 72 feet, 2½ inches; draft, 23 feet 6 inches; displacement, 11,500 tons; contract speed, 16 knots.

Battery—4 thirteen-inch guns in turrets; 14 six-inch guns on main deck; 16 six-pounders; 4 one-pounders and one machine guns; auxiliaries on bridge and fighting tops. The complement of the Wisconsin is 555 men and officers. Her commander is Lieutenant Commander Wilson.

William Henry Rosenstengel

IN MEMORIAM

WILLIAM HENRY ROSENSTENGEL was born September 10, 1842, in the village of Barmen, Prussia. An invalid as a child, he was carried to and from the village school by his father, and there the passion for knowledge first took possession of him. His education was finished at the Barmen Realschule, where his close personal connections with the director gave him an extraordinary opportunity for development. At this time he had entirely recovered his health and was known for his great personal beauty as well as for his mental ability. After graduating, and while still in Germany, he taught at Ellesfeld and Rade-vorm-wald.

In the year 1865 he and his wife, formerly Miss Lena Wirth, came to America and settled in St. Louis. Here he became instructor in German in the Central High School of that city, which position, with several promotions, he held for twelve years. In 1879 he was called by President Bascom to the head of the German department in the University of Wisconsin, and for twenty-one years he occupied that position with faithfulness and ability.

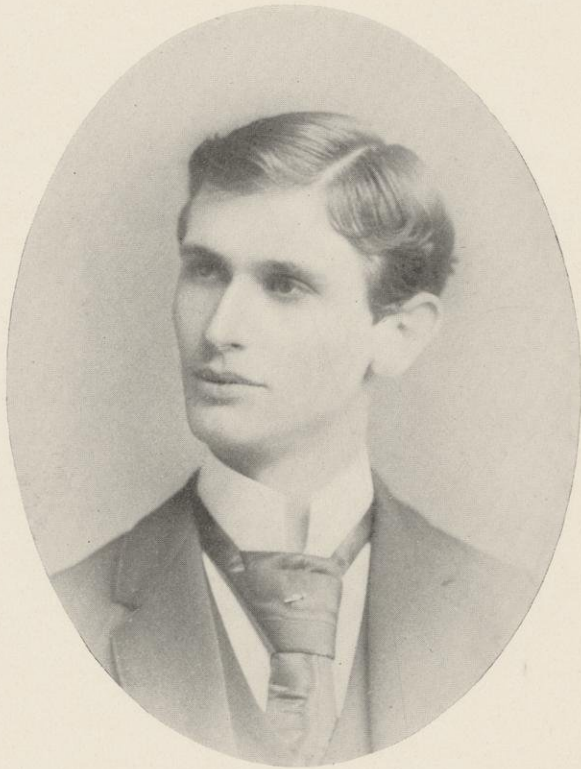

Professor Rosenstengel was known not only in university circles, but in various parts of the United States, where he delivered lectures on subjects connected with the German language, peoples and literature. Besides this, he did a great deal of literary work in connection with German newspapers and magazines, and was the author of many text-books and books of general literary value. Professor Rosenstengel was active in philanthropic and educational matters, and his loss as a friend and citizen has been greatly felt in Madison.

Professor Rosenstengel's character and personality has been designated as, in the highest sense, of the military type. It is interesting to know that, much against his will, he was known in St. Louis as "General" Rosenstengel. Loyalty, industry and accuracy were his cardinal virtues. His philosophy was the philosophy of work and discipline. He demanded of those under him the same untiring labor, the same care for details, the same devotion to duty that were exemplified in himself, yet he lacked no sympathy or helpfulness toward his students. A man of high culture and independent thought, he felt nothing of worth too small for his attention, and whatever he undertook was sure of being done well in its largest and its smallest details. He died, as a soldier should, in the performance of his duty.

His death took place in faculty meeting, November 12, 1900. His wife and five children still survive him. "Some granite column, type of his own indomitable self, shall hold his name in the memory of man; but when the years shall have effaced the record, and the granite itself have crumbled to dust, he will still live in the life of the University he served so well."

WILLIAM HENRY ROSENSTENGEL

HIRAM ALLEN SOBER

IN MEMORIAM

HIRAM ALLEN SOBER was born near Ypsilanti, Michigan, June 15th, 1863, and died in Davenport, Iowa, September 10th, 1900. His early years were spent on a farm, but when the time came to prepare for college he went to Ann Arbor and became a student in the High School. He entered the University of Michigan in the fall of 1882, and graduated with his class in 1886, in the full classical course. He had already selected teaching as his life work, and immediately upon graduation became principal and superintendent of the schools at Coldwater, Michigan. Here he remained for four years, proving his powers as a teacher and winning the confidence and esteem of all his pupils. In 1890 Mr. Sober returned to Ann Arbor for post-graduate work in Latin, Greek and Sanskrit, and the next year he was made instructor in Latin. In 1893 he was called to the University of Wisconsin to fill a similar position, and a year later was made assistant professor, which title he held until the time of his death.

Professor Sober had long been interested in the archaeological side of classical learning, and had several years given courses in Roman topography and Roman private life. Feeling the need of more foreign travel and study among the remains of ancient civilizations, he determined to spend a year abroad. In the summer of 1899 he obtained leave of absence and with his family sailed for Germany. During the summer he studied at the University of Marburg, and in the fall journeyed to Italy and entered the American School of Classical Studies at Rome. Here he remained throughout the school year, working in his chosen subjects of archæology and Roman topography, and preparing courses of lectures for future use. He made brief visits to Greece and the Etruscan country for study of the material remains of those civilizations, but by far the greater part of his year was spent in Rome. In August, 1900, Professor Sober returned to this country, and within three weeks was stricken with appendicitis. He was visiting at his father's home in Moline, Illinois, but was soon removed to the hospital at Davenport, where he died. He had been married in 1892 to Miss Gertrude Clark, a graduate of the University of Michigan of that year, and she, with one little daughter, survives him.

Professor Sober will long be remembered at the University as a thorough scholar, a most successful and inspiring teacher, and for his genial and unassuming qualities as a man. His scholarship, which was always of the careful and thorough, rather than the more showy and specious type, was recognized by all classicists who knew him. He was a member of the Philological Association and of the Archæological Institute of America, but up to the time of his death had written comparatively little. He was a teacher first and foremost, and to his students were his best efforts always given. Then he attracted not more by his complete mastery of his subject and its presentation than by his personal qualities. The modesty and simplicity of his manner, the absolute integrity of his character, and his very rare gift of sympathy drew his students into a relation far more intimate than is usual between master and pupil, and the unconscious influence he exerted, particularly, perhaps, over his younger pupils, can hardly be overestimated. It is in the memories of these that Professor Sober finds his fittest monument.

Nelson Oliver Whitney

IN MEMORIAM

ELSON OLIVER WHITNEY, B. S., C. E., was born May 3, 1858, at Aiken, South Carolina, where his parents were temporarily located. He fitted at Mantua Academy in Philadelphia, and graduated from the civil engineering course at the University of Pennsylvania in 1878 with the degree of B. S. During the summer following his graduation he was on the Geodetic Survey of Pennsylvania and the next winter he was instructor in civil engineering in the University of Pennsylvania School of Industrial Art. For the years 1878-80 he was in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad where he was engaged in construction work. The next two years he spent in Mexico as locating engineer under the late A. M. Wellington on the Mexican National Railroad. In 1882 he returned to Pennsylvania and became locating engineer on the South Pennsylvania Railroad and during 1884-86 he was resident engineer on the Tuscarora tunnel. In 1886 he was appointed Assistant to the Chief Engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in charge of construction and maintenance at Chicago, which position he held until called to the chair of Railway Engineering at the University of Wisconsin in 1891. He has since taught civil engineering with major work in railway engineering. Professor Whitney was the Engineering Editor of the University Bulletin, First Vice President of the Western Society of Engineers at Chicago, and a corporate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. He was married in 1883 to Mary Ella Taintor, of Philadelphia, who, with five children, two sons and three daughters, survive him. Professor Whitney died suddenly at his home Sunday evening, March 17. He had been in delicate health for a year following pneumonia. When Professor Whitney died, one of the sweetest influences, as well as one of the most inspiring instructors was withdrawn from our University faculty. A practical engineer, a man whose life was among the realities of outdoors, he had all the tenderness, purity and gentleness that one associates with fine arts and the cloistered life. Dean J. B. Johnson, who has been closely connected with Professor Whitney for many years, speaks of him as follows: "He was one of the very few railroad engineers who were fitted for college work. He was at once a successful engineer, with a large experience in responsible positions on the leading railroads of the world, and also a very successful teacher. He was as zealous in his college work as in his engineering practice. He was always solicitous for the individual interests of his students, and he followed the subsequent careers of his boys with almost a father's attachment. His manner was always mild but earnest, and his students held him in the highest respect and esteem. It will be a difficult matter to fill his place in this college."

NELSON OLIVER WHITNEY

New Members of the Faculty.

CHARLES FREDERICK BURGESS, B.S.

CHARLES FREDERICK BURGESS was born in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, in 1873.

He graduated from the Electrical Engineering course of the University of Wisconsin in 1895, receiving the degree of B. S. He was employed in the works of the Walker Manufacturing Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, and returned to the University of Wisconsin as assistant in Electrical Engineering, receiving the degree of Electrical Engineer in 1897. From 1897 to 1900 he was instructor, and in 1900 was made Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering, having charge of the work in Applied Electro-Chemistry.

Professor Burgess is a member of the fraternity Beta Theta Pi and of the honorary engineering fraternity Tau Beta Pi. He is also an associate member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

AUGUSTUS TROWBRIDGE, Ph.D.

AUGUSTUS TROWBRIDGE was born at New York City in 1870. He was prepared for college at Phillips, Andover, after which he spent three years in Paris studying under private tutors. He returned to America in 1889, and attended Columbia University, which he left in 1893 without graduating, entering into engineering practice. During this period he was engaged in laying out the World's Fair grounds, and afterwards in railroad work. In 1894 he entered the University of Berlin, where he remained until 1898, taking the degrees of M.A. and Ph.D. The next two years were spent in teaching physics at the University of Michigan. In 1900 he came to the University of Wisconsin as Assistant Professor of Mathematical Physics. Prof. Trowbridge has written extensively, and many of his papers have appeared in "Wiedemann's Annalen," "The American Journal of Science," "Nature," and "The Physical Review." He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

GEORGE RAPALL NOYES, Ph.D.

GEORGE RAPALL NOYES was born at Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1873.

He prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts, entering Harvard in 1890, where he remained until 1898, when he received the degree of Ph.D. During 1894-96, while doing partial work at Harvard, he taught Greek and Latin in a preparatory school in Cambridge. In 1898 Dr. Noyes was awarded an honorary fellowship from Harvard for the study of Slavic languages. The two following academic years he spent as a "voluntary student" at St. Petersburg. In 1900 he was elected Assistant Professor of English in the University of Wisconsin.

VICTOR LENHER, Ph.D

VICTOR LENHER graduated in chemistry from the University of Pennsylvania and for three years following he was assistant to Professor W. B. Rising in the chemical department of the University of California. From 1896 to 1898 he was engaged in pursuing special duties in chemistry, mineralogy and geology at the University of Pennsylvania, receiving the degree of Ph.D. from that institution in 1898. Dr. Lenher has been a regular contributor to various chemical journals, and has done considerable work in translating from the French. He now holds the position of Assistant Professor of General and Theoretical Chemistry in the University of Wisconsin.

ALBERT WILLIS TRESSLER, A.B.

ALBERT WILLIS TRESSLER received his education at Montpelier, Ohio, high school, Knox College, and the University of Michigan, where he graduated in 1891, receiving the degree of A.B. In 1898 he spent a half year at the University of Chicago, taking graduate work. From 1891 to 1893 he was superintendent of schools at Marinet City, Michigan; at Munroe, Michigan, from 1893 to 1897; at Ripon, Wisconsin, from 1898 to 1900. In 1900 he was appointed Assistant Professor of Pedagogy in University of Wisconsin, and Inspector of High Schools.

JAMES CHARLES MONAGHAN, A.B.

JAMES CHARLES MONAGHAN was born in Boston, Massachusetts, October 11, 1857. When about eight years old he was forced to leave school and enter the cotton mills of New England, studying and teaching in night schools until his twenty-second year. Leaving the mills he prepared for college at Moury's Academy, and in 1885 he graduated from Brown, receiving the degree of A.B. The day of graduation he received an appointment as representative of the commercial interests of the United States in Mannheim, Germany. While abroad he studied the educational, political, economical and administrative methods of Germany. His report on these methods was mentioned by Lord Roseberry in his recent address as Chancellor of the University of Glasgow, and also by the English parliamentary commission sent to study Germany's educational and economic conditions in their report to parliament. In the fall of 1899 he was a delegate to the Philadelphia Commercial Congress, and delivered two addresses, one on "American Trade Relations Abroad," and the other on "Industrial Art and Technical Education." About this time he was called to the University of Wisconsin to accept the position he now holds, that of Professor of Theory and Practice of Domestic Commerce in the New School of Commerce.

RICHARD FISCHER, Ph.D.

RICHARD FISCHER was born November 18, 1869, in New Ulm, Minnesota.

Having graduated from the high school of that city in 1886, he was apprenticed in a drug store of his native town, and in 1890 entered the School of Pharmacy of the University of Michigan, taking the degree of Pharmaceutical Chemist two years later. Returning in the fall of the same year he was appointed assistant in the chemical laboratory, continuing his studies and graduating as B.S. in 1894. In the fall of 1894 he was appointed Instructor in Pharmacy at the University of Wisconsin, which position he held for four years. In 1898 he went abroad, studying at the Universities of Berlin and Marburg, the latter University conferring upon him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in August, 1900, his dissertation being entitled, "Beitrage zur Kenntniss der Papaneraceen Alkaloide." Returning to America he was appointed Assistant Professor of Practical Pharmacy at the University of Wisconsin.

SUSAN ADELAIDE STERLING, M.L.

SUSAN ADELAIDE STERLING was born at Madison, Wisconsin. She graduated from the University in 1879, after which she attended Wellesley College during the years 1880-81. The years 1883-84 were spent in Germany, and 1895-96 at Bryn Mawr College. In 1886 Miss Sterling accepted the position of instructor in German at the University of Wisconsin, having held the same position the previous year at Ferry Hall, Lake Forest, Illinois. In 1896 she took her degree of M.L. at the University, and in 1900 was promoted to the position of Assistant Professor, which position she now holds.

HOWARD LESLIE SMITH, A.B., LL.B.

HOWARD LESLIE SMITH was born March 29, 1861, at Madison, Wisconsin.

He prepared for college in the schools of that city, and in 1877 entered the Ancient Classical Course of the University of Wisconsin, from which he graduated in 1881 with the degree of A.B. While in the University he was a member of the Athanaean Literary Society and Beta Theta Pi fraternity; was on the joint debate in his junior year, and won the Lewis prize. From 1881 to 1883 he was principal of the schools at Elkhorn. In 1883-84 he studied at Heidelberg, Rome and Paris. In 1885 he graduated from University of Wisconsin Law School with the degree of LL.B. From 1885 to 1900 he practiced law in Madison, Wisconsin, St. Paul, Minnesota, and Chicago, Illinois. In 1900 he was elected Professor of Law in the College of Law of the University of Wisconsin.

EDWARD DAVID JONES, Ph.D.

EDWARD DAVID JONES was born in Orfordville, Wisconsin, in 1870. He was prepared for college at Lawrence University, and graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan University in 1892. One year of graduate study was spent in Germany at Halle and Berlin, two years were spent at this University, from which he received the doctor's degree in 1895. The same year he was appointed an instructor here. In 1899 Dr. Jones was granted leave of absence to serve as a special agent of the Paris Exposition Commission in preparing the government's social economic exhibit. He was also a member of the jury of award and the American delegate at the Congress of Commercial Schools. The same year he was appointed Assistant Professor of Economics and Commercial Geography in the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Jones has written several works and numerous magazine articles. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

ABBY SHAW MAYHEW

ABBY SHAW MAYHEW, Mistress of Chadbourne Hall and Assistant Professor of Physical Culture, was born at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and was graduated from the high school of that place in 1881. In the fall of 1881 she entered Wellesley College and was there until 1885, with an interim of a year. After leaving college two years were spent in teaching in a private school and one year in travel. In 1889 she entered into the study of physical training in Minneapolis, and in 1891 attended Dr. Sargent's School of Physical Education at Cambridge. In the spring of 1892 she was appointed Physical director in the Young Woman's Christian Association of Minneapolis, where she remained until the summer of 1897. In 1894 she took the summer course in physical training under Dr. W. G. Anderson, of Yale, at Chatauqua. In 1898 she accepted the position of Mistress of Chadbourne Hall and Instructor in Gymnastics for Women. In 1900 elected to the Faculty.

LUCY MARIE GAY, B.L.

LUCY MARIE GAY was born on a farm near Madison, Wisconsin, in 1862.

She received her early education in the public schools of Madison, entering the University in April, 1879. In 1882 she was graduated with honors, taking special honors also in French. In the fall of the same year she taught her first class in French in the University, taking the place of the regular instructor who was on leave of absence in Europe. She was appointed Instructor in French in January, 1885, holding this position up to July, 1900, when she was made assistant professor. The year 1889-90 was spent in Europe, for the most part in Paris studying at the Sorbonne. During the summer of 1895 she was again in Paris. Miss Gay has given special attention to Old French Philology, and has written along this line for "Modern Language Notes."

WILLIAM B. CAIRNS, Ph D.

WILLIAM B. CAIRNS was born at Ellsworth, Wisconsin, June 4, 1864, and prepared for the University at Ellsworth public schools. He has received the following degrees at the University of Wisconsin: A.B., 1890; A.M., 1892; Ph.D., 1897; Fellowship in English Literature, 1890-91. In 1891-92 he did editorial work on the Madison Democrat; 1892-98 was Instructor of Rhetoric in the University; 1898-00 Instructor in English; and in 1900 was elected Assistant Professor in English. He has edited the following publications: "Forms of Discourse," Boston, 1896; "Introduction to Rhetoric," Boston, 1899; "Development of American Literature from 1815 to 1833," Madison, 1897.

Thirty-First Annual Joint Debate

LIBRARY HALL, DECEMBER 19, 1900

Philomathia vs Hesperia

PROFESSOR DAVID B. FRANKENBURGER

President

Question

Would the adoption of a general income tax, levied by the United States government, be contrary to the best interests of the nation?

It being mutually conceded that the government stands in need of revenue; that such a tax would be constitutional; that the system could become law; that it shall remain in operation at least fifteen years; that it shall be conducted under an efficient civil service; and that an inheritance tax shall not be available for federal purposes.

Affirmative: Philomathia

Eugene T. Hancock

L. George Lohr

Paul W. L. Boehm

Negative: Hesperia

Ashbel V. Smith

Championship Tournament

The preparation for tournaments with other institutions and the shortness of the season made it impossible to play the finals.

In the semi-finals Beye defeated Seaman, 5-7, 7-5, 8-10, 6-1, 6-2. He was to have met Crosby to decide the championship.

Intercollegiate Tournament at Chicago

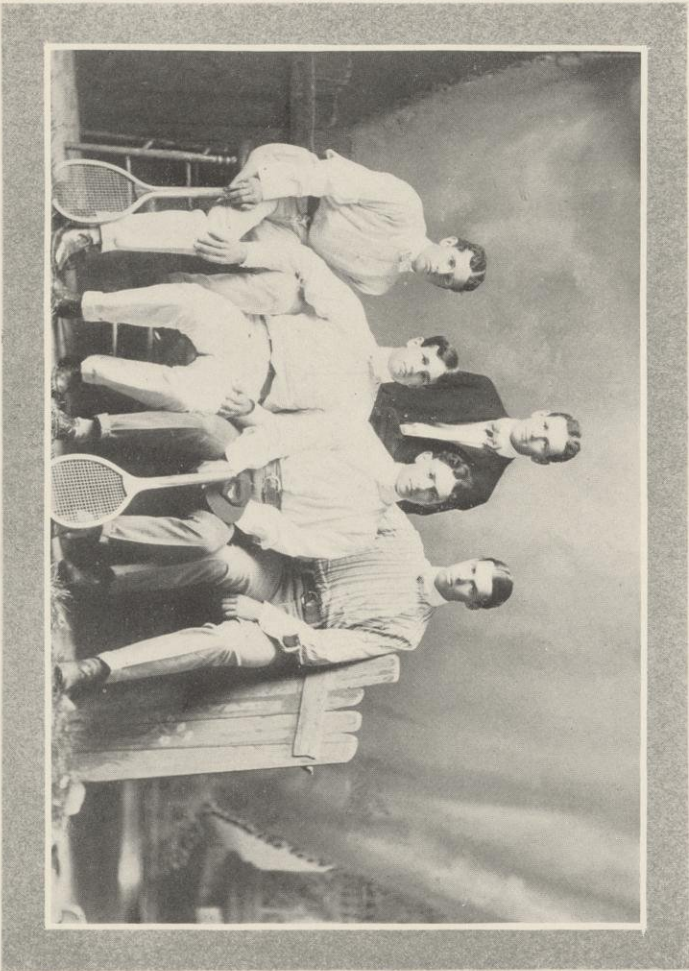

Crosby and Beye represented Wisconsin and were defeated, 6-4, 7-5.

Tournament with Iowa, Iowa City, May 26

Beye and Seaman represented Wisconsin and were defeated in doubles 6-2, 3-6, 6-2. Both won in singles, Beye 6-4, 6-2. Seaman, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

Beloit Tournament at Madison

Beye and Crosby won doubles 6-3, 6-1, 6-0. Beye won in singles 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

LITERATURE

Our Offering

UT of the warp and woof of college living,
We've woven there these stories and this verse;
Here is a fabric torn from dreamland, giving
A rosy gleam; these purple threads rehearse
Some wild rich hours; from high and fine aspiring
This pure white skein was drawn to make them fair,
And sometimes we wove in, the truth desiring,
The grey and sober threads of work and care.

The golden weavings are not seldom gleaming
Of joy and jollity and all delight;
And, here and there, you'll find dark colors, seeming
To claim their right to make the whole less bright.
Will you accept this cloth of strange designing,
These scraps of life that you yourself recall?
Yes, surely, for in loyal glory shining,
Wisconsin's cardinal runs through it all.

A Reminiscence

BELIEVE that night in May, as we sat around the house after supper, was the first time that the boys had ever called Morgan anything but "Cyurnel." He seemed, with his southern drawl, so closely related to "Cyurnal Cahtah of Cahtahsville," that the name suggested the first night we had him over to the house clung to him ever after.

But now his father was with him, and the young man sat listening so attentively to every word, that even the worst chatters among us hesitated even to suggest anything that might seem offensive to the stately old man, who was so fond of his son. The fact was, we were on our good behavior.

It was the day of the Interscholastic Meet, and we had planned a big time for the evening, but our guests, some of the High School boys, had been unlucky that day and a sudden shower spoiled all our plans for the evening, so we all felt a little mopish and not inclined to exert ourselves. Finally however, we did fix up a scheme and sent off most of the High School lads with a few of our boys to see if they couldn't blunder onto some fun, while the rest of us sat around the parlors watching Morgan and his father, who, called to Chicago on business, had come up unexpectedly to see his son.

A general conversation was in progress when Pudd'nhead Jones (for my part I never had any use for Jones) asked suddenly, "Mr. Morgan," (his son had asked us that afternoon not to call him Colonel), "What do you think of Madison?"

We were all greatly surprised when he answered, "This is the second time I've visited the place. I lived here nearly two months once."

"Why, father," exclaimed young Morgan, "you never told me."

"It wasn't the happiest period in my life, and yet, I believe, the happiest day in my life came in those two months."

Our inquiring looks and the wonder in his son's face encouraged him and he went on. "To-day is the second time I have visited Camp Randall. Indeed, I lived there two months once."

His son looked bewildered and the rest of us waited. Even Pudd'nhead Jones waited.

"In fact," he resumed, as he settled himself in the big chair, "I was a prisoner there for two months in the spring of '62."

Most of us had never stopped to think what Camp Randall had once been, what the name really meant, and some of us, Pudd'nhead in particular, were always kicking because it was'n't called Randall Field. (Jones never did again, I believe).

"I was in an Alabama regiment, and was taken prisoner at Island No. 10. About a thousand of us were sent here early in April, as cheerful a lot of half-frozen invalids as ever rode into the enemy's country. Of course there were crowds at the station when the train pulled in; but they treated us as well, I reckon, as Union prisoners were ever treated at the South. Most of us were young, and noticed things. I remember asking what the University buildings were, as we marched to Camp Randall. The capitol, of course, we recognized as a state-house, but few of us, the few who had gone to Yale, Harvard, or Princeton, had ever seen a group of university or college buildings.

"The first few days after we got into Camp were hard ones, for the authorities had not expected to feed so many prisoners, and of course the soldiers drew rations first. But we soon got settled down with plenty to eat and nothing to do but play ball, and nurse our sick (we had plenty of them, too), and watch the few appearances of life up around the main building of the University; it was all woods on the hill west of the Camp. It gave me a shock today as I sat there in the grand stand and looked up at the building there on the hill; how little it seems changed, and then to see a base ball diamond laid out on our old ball field. Some things don't change much.

"The towns-people came out to see us, and a few brought us books. I remember I read Pilgrim's Progress through five times. I also read about half of Blackstone's Commentaries. Of course I often thought of trying to escape; two or three of our fellows did get away; then they watched us more closely, and finally I gave up the idea. Then we were shifted back to Chicago.

"One morning (just thirty-seven years ago to-day) when I got up everything seemed just a little brighter than ever before. I felt like singing or whistling. I couldn't have explained why and didn't try to, but ate my rations of corn bread—Oh! how good it tasted, pretty near as good as corn pone—and tried to cheer up my comrades. It was a perfect May day, and in the afternoon as I lay with my head in the shade of the barracks, sunning my body, I heard an inquiry, 'Is there a prisoner named Morgan here?' Then the boys called 'Jack! Jack Morgan! General wants you.' 'Now will you be good?'

"I approached the guard line and saw a boy about my own age, in Union blue, with his arm in a sling. As I came up, he asked, 'Are you Andrew Jackson Morgan?'

"When I nodded, he took a paper from an inside pocket with some difficulty and said: 'Is this for you?'

"The address seemed somewhat familiar; 'Open it,' he said, 'and maybe you can tell.'

"I unfolded the little bit of brown paper, tea paper, you would call it, and there in my hand lay a lock of brown hair.

"For a moment I stood stunned; then 'Where did you get this? Tell me.'

"'I'm glad I found you,' he said; 'I feared I couldn't. Let's sit down, I'm weak yet, and then I'll tell you.'

"Then he told his story of his capture in a skirmish, of his escape, of his falling in with a Southern family and their tender care for him in his illness. 'For Jack's sake,' he heard his nurse say one day, and of his final recovery. On his departure they requested him to do what he could to find a Confederate prisoner who was somewhere in a Northern prison, and to deliver a message. Oh, how glad I was to get that message. I hadn't even dared hope till then.

"Thirty-seven years ago to-day, the happiest day of my life; last New Year's Day the saddest. Richie, you are so like her." And we sat there in darkness and silence while they two held each other's hands, and the tears dried on our lashes. Even Pudd'nhead Jones was still.

ALFRED E. KUNDERT, '01.

Two Reasons

ONE

There's a set to his chin and his mouth,
There's a droop to his shoulders and head,
There's a nonchalant lift to his eyebrows that shows

His indifference to all I have said.
Though I try all my brightest remarks,
And attempt my alluringest smile,
Though I look my most charming—I hopelessly feel
That he's utterly bored all the while.
There's a charm that I cannot resist,
Though why it should be I don't see,
But I'm forced to admit that I like him so much
Just because he cares nothing for me.

ANOTHER

There's a look on his face when I'm near,
There's a tone of his voice under all,
There's a way that he watches and listens
to me,

At the least little word I let fall,
Though I'm stupid, or silly, or cross,
Though I treat him to frowns or to frost,
Though I'm looking my worst, yet I know through it all
Not a bit of his warmth will be lost.
And somehow I can't but be touched,
Though perhaps it is foolish to be,
Yet, I have to admit that I like him so well
Just because he cares so much for me.

Love Laughs at Locksmiths

First Gamma Phi, "I didn't know Mr. Beule was a locksmith."

Second Ditto, "Neither did I. Is he?"

First, "Yes, just as I entered the parlor last night he made a bolt for the door."

Manager Pearce of The Daily Cardinal went into a Barber shop and after giving his name as Smith so he could get a shave on someone else's ticket, he pinned the newspaper around his neck and beginning to read the towel told the barber that he wanted a "shave without illustrations."

"Without illustrations?" asked the knight of the strop.

"Yes, I don't want any cuts used."

Prof. Sparling—Baron Von Hausman is——(Walker turns around and smiles at the class.)

Prof. Sparling—I see Mr. Walker recognizes the name. (Great applause.)

She (thinking of birds) "Do the jays stay here all winter?"

He (thinking of students) "Oh no, some of them get conned out."

"That Miss Steele is a sharp girl isn't she."

"I should say she was. She cuts me whenever we meet on the Hill."

The instructor sat in the Literature class ;
Raising his head he looked through his glass,
There was whispering everywhere,
"There's too much noise in this class so there." ;
A wee small voice not quite out of sight,
Said with a sigh, "You bet that's right,
Although there was silence everywhere,
There's too much Noyes in this class, so there."

The Co-ed Problem

The Girl

Side by side in the class
we sat,
Her hair was of golden hue,
Her mouth curved just like a Cupid's bow
As a sweet little mouth should do.
My heart was captured,
I'll confess,
And why it's flame disguise,
For e'en a heart of stone would yield
With one look in those eyes.

The Self-Same Page

Examination day approached,
The problems, deep and sage.
We bucked together, our two heads
Bent o'er the self-same
But oh, I feared for my little maid.
The questions she'd repeat
Just showed she did not comprehend,
The subject was too deep.
Yet I forgave it all
I know,
For who could wish her wise,
Or care for problems long and hard
When he looked into her eyes.

The Professor

I met her on the street next day.
Her bright face all aglow.
She'd won an "Ex,"
I, but a "Fair,"
I could not believe 'twas so.
Then like a flash it all was plain,
No need for my surprise,
The Prof. was young, and he, of course,
Had looked into her eyes.

Lake Mendota

(Freshman Theme. Required 250 words)

I am sitting here on this rustic bench, gazing with admiration on the still, calm water of Lake Mendota. Why, I wonder, have poets, or students, never attempted before to describe the beauties of this scene, which is so beautiful?

It is an autumn day. The sun shines brightly, and the weather is very pleasant. The leaves are saying farewell to the trees, and floating down to greet mother earth. In her arms they will die, only to be gathered in great heaps and be cremated by some unfeeling man.

The sky is as blue as the lake, which reflects the blue of the sky. I see Maple Bluff in front of me, and Picnic Point is at my left. They are so very pretty. The leaves look pretty, too, in their red and green and yellow garments, but it makes me feel bad to see them so gay about going away. I sigh to think that they are departing from this terrestrial sphere, to a land whence they may never return more.

Next spring new leaves will bud on the trees, and I will be glad—if I am here to see them. I suppose few people have realized how sweet the lake is, and how dainty the woods. But I love nature and I like to talk about it. What inspiring thoughts come to a man in the presence of a scene like this. I have put mine down just as they came. But it would take too long to tell them all.

The Fable of the Freshman Who Would but Couldn't

Once there were two Freshmen who came to the University to Join a Frat. One had to Work Overtime to get Separated from his Coin. The Other had much Knowledge but small Working Medium. But he was Wise.

Number One got Goods from Slam for the Disturbance. He procured much becoming Headgear and considerable Merchandise and Blossomed. He was Certainly Fine. His classroom Linen made Benny Snow's look like Mexican Money with Holes in it. He used Nail Enamel and Carried a Convex Mirror in his Hat. He strolled the Campus afternoons and Choked Himself trying to Inhale Gold Tips. He bought at Louie's and paid in Bills of Four Syllables. In Many other Ways he Tried to Put Himself on Record as One in Upper Case Numerals.

Number Two was One of these Fellows who could Talk Military Hop to a Hall Girl and take her Roommate without Losing His Drag. He would Do the Earnest Conversation with his Freshman Seatmate Friday Noon and borrow Five from him before Convocation was over. He had his Tailoring done by Zach, whose Memory was out of Order, and kept Louie Busier than a Football Property Man marking down his Nickel Sizes. His Check was always Coming and he had a Reckless Habit of Promising Bitter Sweets.

He Sometimes attended Classes in the Morning but Devoted his Afternoons to Conforming his Personal Appearance to that of a Football Dummy at the Close of the Tackling Season. Smoking a ten-ounce Bull-dog made his Mouth look like a South Carolina Peanut. And It Matched.

This was the Limit.

The Greeks got busy on his Measure right Away. Frat Dances and Dinner Parties were Easy for Him and he Took his roommate's Dress Suit out Five Nights in the Week. It was the Pace that Kills. But before the Death Rate got Alarming he Became Brotherly with the Frat where he could Borrow the Most Money.

Meanwhile Number One Waits to be Asked.

Moral—It All Depends.

There was a man in our U
Who thought he was a Shark,
And he said "Lo! I am clever,
When I'm out I'll make my mark."
He was out the first semester,
"Conned"—he never understood;
And his business was, the last I heard,
To chop his neighbor's wood.

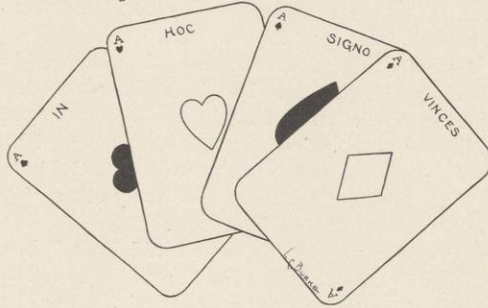

II

There was a girl in our U
Whom some folks thought a Whale,
And she studied nights and Sundays
Just because she "knew she'd fail."
And they thought Phi Beta Kappa
Would be hers, so it was said;
But she got—nervous prostration,
And—the last I heard—was dead.

III

There was a Prof. in our U
Who said he'd never wed.
(He should have found a college
Where there was'nt one co-ed.)
For one in class, looked at him
With such sweet adoring face
That, the last I heard, he'd changed her name,
And left his boarding-place.

UW. POKER CLUB.

Oft in the stilly night
Have I held that little hand,
And felt my body thrilling
With emotion sweet and grand,

Have looked with eager yearning,
On my silent partner's blush,
And staked my every dollar on
That old-time bob-tailed flush.

On the Hill

"Let's walk slow—it's early—and
I'll tell you all about it.
This hill's so hard to climb—Good land!
And I've been three years on it.
Well, this is how it was, you see,—
Hullo! How do you do!
Jack came last night and asked if he—
Good morning—How are you?—
If he—Oh dear, I cut that man
In spite of all your warning—
If he—what was I saying, Fan?
Hullo!—Hullo!—Good morning—
Oh yes, he wanted me to go—
Hullo!—with him—Hullo, there!—

This meeting people on—Hullo :—
I'd almost rather go where
I don't know anyone—here comes—
Good morning—that's the boy—
Hullo girls!—Hullo!—he chums
With—How do you do?—well, Fan, what joy
To reach the top at last.
This door—Oh, thank you, Fan, do wait,
You go—Hullo—so fast.
If all the people that we pass
Find speaking such a bore—
The bell! Good-bye—wait after class
And we can talk some more."

A Race Against Luck

An Episode of the 1901 Junior Prom

BOLTON paced restlessly around the big waiting-room and at last stopped suddenly before the ticket window.

"What time is the Watertown train due?" he asked.

"At 8:10," answered the operator.

"Well, it's past that now."

"Yes, the passenger's near half an hour late to-night."

"Half an hour late!" He stared at the operator as if he had not understood him. "Curse the railroad, anyway," thought Bolton. "Of all nights the year, the confounded train might have chosen some other one than Prom night, if it wanted to be late. Why, the concert has probably begun already, and we ought to be there now. We'll surely miss the first dance!"

But there was no help for it. The train was late, and there was nothing to do but to pass the time as well as possible until it should arrive. He tramped up and down the platform, and found fault with everything around the station. The time dragged miserably. Minutes seemed hours. It was now long after eight. The Prom was doubtless just beginning, and Miss Edwards was still many miles from town. There had been no earlier train for her to take, and no one was to blame for the delay, except the railroad company—perhaps the engineer. Had Miss Edwards been able to arrive on time there would have been no trouble, and she and Bolton would have succeeded in reaching the gymnasium before the first dance. But, as it was, they would be late enough to miss the best part of the whole affair. Bolton muttered it all over to himself during his angry walk, and with every step his vexation increased. He kept looking at his watch and counted the seconds, as the hand slowly revolved. Never before had it moved so sluggishly.

At last, when he was getting most impatient, the train arrived, and he resolved that no time should be lost in getting to the gym, as speedily as possible. As it pulled in, one of the first to come out of the coach was a trim little figure in a neatly fitting jacket.

"I knew we were late, and that you would be in a hurry, so I came out just as quickly as I could," said Miss Edwards, after the greetings were over.

"Yes, and we need lose no time now, for the carriage is waiting, and we can very soon get to the Prom."

"But I must first go to Cousin Mary's. They live on Langdon street, you know."

"I've given the driver that order, and he knows the place, I guess," answered Bolton, as he took her hand satchel and walked beside her down the platform. They entered the carriage and the drive uptown was quickly made. He had never realized before how short the distance was. Then, too, they had so much to tell each other—where she had visited after she left Green Lake, and the canoe trip he made in September. As he saw her sitting beside him, and looking up into his face, he felt well repaid for the annoyance of the delay. They were only girlish commonplaces that she was telling him, but they interested him intensely, and the time flew by as rapidly as before it had lagged. He was quite surprised when the carriage stopped and he found himself helping her out in front of the big brown house.

"Where is my satchel?" she asked.

"Here it is."

"No, not that one, the large one," said Miss Edwards.

"The large one?"

"Yes. Oh, how thoughtless of me! I do believe I forgot to give you the check. It was so big and heavy that I didn't want to carry it. Yes, here's the check in my purse."

"Do you really need it?" asked Bolton.

"It contains my gown, you know," she said ruefully.

"Give me the check and I'll get it. It won't take long," he said reassuringly. "I should not have hurried you so. It was entirely my fault that you forgot it."

Leaving her to enter the house alone, he sprang into the carriage and was whirled rapidly down the street. Down the hill and around the corner they rolled, swiftly passing under the arc lights and over the crossings, past block after block of houses and stores, until at last with a sudden turn they stopped beside the platform. He opened the door and jumped out. Not a light was to be seen. The depot was dark and deserted, for the Watertown passenger had been the last train for the night, and the station was always closed and locked after it arrived.

"It looks as if they'd all gone, sir," remarked the driver.

Bolton went up to the door and gave the knob a twist. It was locked. He ran around to the baggage room door and tried to enter there. It was no use. No one was in the building and there was no way to enter. He walked slowly around and came out where the carriage stood.

"All locked, sir?" asked the driver.

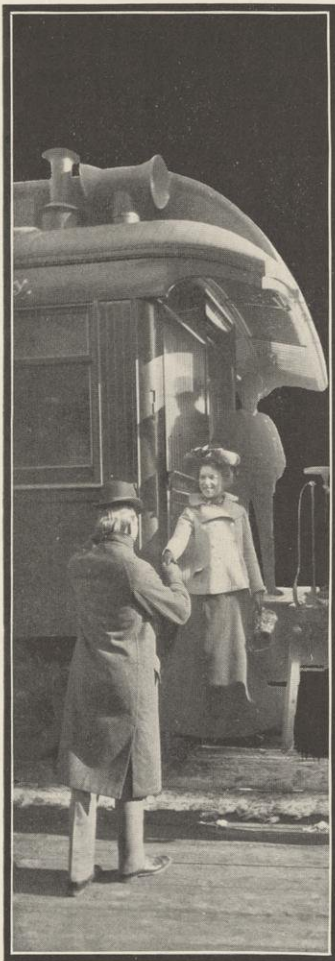

"Yes, I guess I don't get in there to-night."

"If we could find the baggageman—" was the suggestion.

"Yes, if we knew where he lives and could get him. It's the only thing to do, isn't it?" asked Bolton. "Do you know who he is?"

"Mebbe that feller could tell us," said the driver, pointing to a policeman who was leisurely coming down the street. "He knows most everybody and he ought to be able to help you out."

"Bolton hailed him, and the officer crossed over toward the depot.

"Is it Tom McNiel, ye want?" was the question, when the policeman had learned the trouble. "He's the baggagemaster, and he lives just a step from here."

"What street does he live on?"

"Jenifer, near the corner of Pierce. No distance at all. Your driver there can find the place without the least trouble."

Bolton thanked the officer and entered the carriage. They crossed the tracks and followed the course of the trolley out into the Sixth Ward. Past warehouses and breweries they hastened, around corners and into the residence district. Their speed did not slacken and the houses flew by on either side. The driver evidently knew the city and proceeded confidently. Further and further they went, until Bolton began to wonder if they were ever going to stop. "It must be pretty near the Catfish," he was thinking, as he looked out of the window and remembered with grim humor the officer's remark that it was "just a step." The paving became more uneven and the speed threw Bolton from side to side. On and on they went, jolting along the rough street, until with an unusually heavy bump they stopped short at the side of the road.

"That must be the house, 'cording to the description," said the driver, pointing with his whip to a small cottage.

It was as dark as the depot had been and looked uninviting enough, but Bolton determined to give it a trial, in hope that some of the family were at home. He rapped at the door, at first moderately, then loudly. But no one came and he started back discouraged.

"Perhaps it's the wrong house," said the driver, undaunted. "Try the next one."

Bolton followed the advice, and soon a man appeared at the door, followed closely by his wife.

"Does Mr. McNiel live here?"

"No, he lives next door," said the man pointing to the darkened cottage.

"But nobody's at home there," said Bolton, gloomily.

"The family's all off on a visit down to Stoughton," said the woman. "Her folks live there, and I ain't seen Tom since they left."

"Tom only sleeps there while they're away," said the man.

"Do you know where he is to-night?"

"He's at the lawdge, I guess," answered the woman. "Did ye want to see him?"

"Naw, it ain't lawdge night," interrupted her husband. "Tom's likely up to his sister's."

"Where's that?" asked Bolton.

"They live on Broom street and their name is Callahan."

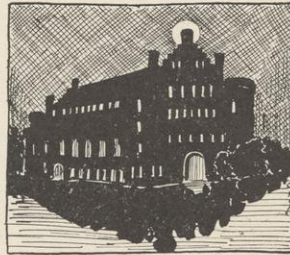

"Mike Callahan, it is," added the woman. "He's a printer and foreman at—"

"Broom street did you say, sir?" broke in Bolton.

"Broom street, three doors south of Miffin," said the man, "You'll find him there, or I'm much mistaken."

"Thank you, I'll go to Callahan's," said Bolton.

He ran down the steps before they could continue the conversation, and threw himself into the carriage. Broom street, it was miles away! And what was he going there for? Probably to find that McNiel had not been there, or that he had just gone elsewhere. Bolton settled back against the cushions and tried not to think. He had reached that stage of despair where one loses all interest in things and decides to let events take their course. But he could not help thinking constantly of Miss Edwards, who now was doubtless wondering what had happened to him and what had become of her satchel. He wondered what she was doing. Probably by this time she was having quite as hard a time to control herself as he had. Luck was evidently against them, for who could have imagined that such an unfortunate train of circumstances would occur. As for the Prom itself, "we'll just about see the fag end of it," he thought, glancing out of the window, "How slowly the horses were moving! They merely crawled along, and they were evidently tired after the long run. It was an interminable distance to Broom street, and Bolton impatiently counted the blocks to be passed before they should arrive. At last they reached it, and after some inquiry found the house they were seeking.

"Is this where Mr. Callahan lives?" Bolton asked.

"It is. Do ye want him?" questioned his wife, who had opened the door.

"No, I want to see Mr. McNiel. Is he here?"

The woman looked at the carriage with a suspicious air and finally said:

"He's jest gone to the theayter."

"No, he didn't maw," cried little Tim Callahan.

"Where is he then?" asked his mother sternly.

"He went to Maguire's. He wanted to see Jim Maguire about some money," proudly declared Timmy.

"Where does Mr. Maguire live?" asked Bolton faintly.

"Around the corner to yer right, the third house. It stands in rather low ground," replied Mrs. Callahan, after she had carefully considered the advisability of giving an answer.

He waited to hear no more. Another minute and they were whirling around into the next street and soon drew up before the house, to which he had been directed. A man was just coming down the steps.

"Are you Mr. McNiel?" cried Bolton, springing out.

The man looked amazed at the sudden appearance. "What do ye want?" he asked.

"Get in here and I'll tell you," Bolton answered, leading to the carriage door. "I want to get a satchel from the baggage room," he went on to explain, and by the time he was well launched in his narrative they were driving rapidly down the street toward the depot. At last the search was over, and the driver seemed to be as pleased as was Bolton himself that they had finally obtained their man. Even the horses appeared rejuvenated and showed no signs of their former fatigue. They soon reached the station and obtained the satchel. It certainly was a large one, but its weight was nothing compared to the burden removed from Bolton's spirits. He left the baggageman standing on the platform, by no means the poorer for his ride, and then lay back against the cushions and rested his feet against the precious satchel.

During all the long ride he had not once glanced at his watch, but now he drew it out and opened it apprehensively. It was nearly ten o'clock. They had lost an hour of dancing, besides the hour which is devoted to the orchestral concert. Even as it was, he could not hope that they would arrive at the gymnasium before another half hour, for neither he nor Miss Edwards were ready for the party and each would have to spend some time in dressing. Indeed, it was the gown that had caused all the trouble. But he promised himself to waste no time at his own toilet, and he trusted that she also would be quite willing to make haste.

They very soon reached Langdon street. He left Miss Edwards' satchel at her cousin's and drove to his room, which was not far distant. In an incredibly short time he was ready and was on the way returning. She was waiting for him and came out of the house as she heard the carriage stop, eager to learn the cause of the delay. The distance to the gym. was not great, but it gave him time to tell her of the long chase, and they both forgot their troubles in a hearty laugh.

The building was brilliantly lighted and the soft music of a Herbert waltz was just dying as they entered and hurried up the stairs. Within the wide door the first person Bolton saw was Weber, his roommate, who came up to be introduced, as soon as he espied Miss Edwards.

"We're pretty late and I suppose we've missed a good many dances," said Bolton, after the introduction had been made. "What's the next dance?" he asked, referring to his program. "The tenth or the twelfth?"

"The next is only the fourth," answered Weber. "Didn't you know the orchestra was late? Yes, the Chicago train was an hour and a half behind time to-night, so you've missed only three dances."

Bolton and Miss Edwards looked into each other's eyes and laughed.

"I'm so glad, Will," she said, "'Cause the next is ours."

"Before going any further, I want to tell you beforehand, not to be surprised at the tone of this letter, for we are all so happy we just can't keep it in. I guess you will all be able to guess why, considering the siege which we have just survived. We not only got ten girls, but we played 'Pom-Pom Pull Away' for them. We played with the Thetas, Kappa Kappa Gammas, Alpha Phis and Delta Gammas. Oh, I tell you it was fine! I guess you all know the bliss of ringing up another chapter home and breaking the dates of a girl whom they are 'crazy' to get. We invited eight of them last week and took care in the mock initiation that enough should be left of them to tell the tale. * * * We have a new chapter house, lovely neighbors and a chapteron who is just as dear as she can be. Of course, we are all having fine times at the ever welcome fraternity parties, theatre, 'deals,' etc. Our girls are all bright and popular and all Mu wishes to say further is, to wish you the same luck as she has had, in not losing a single bid this year; and 'though all the world be dry, she will still drink to thee,' Oh Tri Delta.

A Comedy—Almost a Tragedy

(By one of the Chorus.)

SCENE: Telephone closet in the Sigma Alpha Lodge.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ:

Henry Morris, a Senior, engaged.

Sterling, Morris' chum.

A Freshman.

Chorus of brothers.

(Telephone rings. Freshman answers it.)

FRESHMAN: "Hello!—Yes, yes, I'll get him." (Turning around.) "A girl wants Henry Morris."

CHORUS: "I wonder why." "Who can it be, Hank?"

HENRY: "Shut up." (Shuts door and goes to phone.) "Hello!—Is that you, Alice? Of course, I knew your voice the moment you spoke, dear.—What's that? Angry at me?" (The door opens softly behind him.) "Why, little girl, what do you mean?"

STERLING: "He doesn't understand, poor fellow."

HENRY: (Turning around angrily) Get out of here, will you, fellows?—What?—I didn't hear what you said. Neglected you? Why, Alice, you know—"

CHORUS: (Singing pianissimo) "Bless your heart, I love you in the same old way."

HENRY: "Will you shut up?—No, dear, not at all, but the men are making such a noise outside I can't hear. Indeed, I am paying attention.—Why, you know it means everything to me."

CHORUS: (Singing) "But she's all the world to me."

HENRY: "Wait a minute Alice." (Hanging up receiver.) "Now if you fellows don't get out and keep still there'll be trouble—see?" (The chorus flees. Henry shuts door. At phone) "Hello! Is this—Oh, give me that line you just shut off, please.—Yes, 49,—and hurry up, too. Hello! Is this—is Miss Brandon there? Yes, thank you.—Hello! Why, Alice, why did you leave the phone? But, my dear, the fellows were making such a noise I had to go out and tell them to keep quiet—that was all. Of course I wanted to hear what you were saying.—What have I done?—Not come over? But you know how busy I've been." (Door opens.) "There have been three quizzes this week, and a history topic to get in, and the work on—"

STERLING: "Not to mention ice-boating, and a good novel, and the smoker, and—"

HENRY: "Oh, for Heaven's sake, ring off!—What, Alice,—I tell you to ring off? Why, I just rang you up. The lines must have gotten crossed or something. It's funny how it happens, sometimes."

CHORUS: "Very, very funny! Ha, ha, ha, ha!"

HENRY: "Laughing at you?—I never was more in earnest in my life.—Oh, will you get out?—Never more in earnest in my life, I said."

STERLING: (Coquettishly) "Oh, now you're jollying."

HENRY: "I'll come over to-night, if you'll let me."

CHORUS: "Well, we wont. You promised to go with us to hear 'The Runaway Girl from the peanut gallery.'"

HENRY: (Hangs up receiver desperately) "Now, see here. This is no laughing matter, hang it all! If you don't—" (The chorus flees.) "Hello!—Why, they must have cut us off. Telephones are so unsatisfactory.—May I come to-night?—My voice sounds cross? It's all your imagination. Why, you know I do." (The door opens.) "Oh, blame you!—What?—I—I beg your pardon, I was talking to the phone. One can't say those things over a line, you know."

STERLING: "Try it, old man. There's nothing like trying. I believe you could even send a kiss over the line if you tried."

CHORUS: (Singing) "Kiss me again, I like it."

STERLING: "But a phone is so unsatisfactory, boys."

HENRY: "No, Alice, I can't. Some one might be listening somewhere, and—"

STERLING: "Impossible!"

HENRY: "Don't be angry—I'll come over to-night.—I say—hello!—Don't, Alice; you know that's not true. I'm not angry—Oh, get out, you.—No, I didn't say anything.—Why, you know, without my saying—"

CHORUS: (Singing) "Tell me that you love me, Whisper softly, sweetly, as of old."

HENRY: "I—oh, damn!—No—I say, Alice, one of the fellows came into the closet and found me here and swore at me. You must let me come over to-night.—But I've got to keep an important engagement now."

CHORUS: "Hurrah!"

HENRY: "Good-bye.—Yes, yes—oh, of course I love you." (Hangs up receiver.) "And now you—"

CHORUS: (Dying away in the distance, singing):

"Because I love you, dear,
Much sorrow do I bear."

(The telephone closet is deserted.)

When She Looked Up

When first I met her, I remember well,
For I had seen her with her eyes cast down,
And I had noted all—the graceful head,
The slender figure in its simple gown,
The soft dark hair, sweeping from off her brow,
The curving lip, the faint glow on her face,
But all that I had noted, I forgot,
There was no thought even for all her grace
When she looked up.

Since then, I cannot hide it when I speak
Of her, and you have guessed all I would say,
But between me and all I think or see
Rises her face, just as it was that day.
Those eyes, there, you are laughing at me
now,
But I forgive you, for you cannot see
The beauties and the wonders I have seen,
Which, for the first time, were opened unto me
When she looked up.

The Returns

They had been waiting in the line of Freshmen in the office for ten or fifteen minutes, and the tall Sophomore had been talking very fast, while the Freshman's thin face was growing a shade paler every minute. At last her turn came, and the Sophomore stepped up beside her protectingly with a little joking remark to the class officer. The Freshman stood waiting silently.

The class-officer glanced up and then turned over his papers. He had just been announcing some "Ex's" rather loudly, but he spoke quietly now.

"You have a Good in your English, Miss Wallace," he said.

The Sophomore patted her on the back. "Good for you, May," she said, and then laughed at her own joke. The Freshman smiled faintly.

"You drew a Poor in History and German, but in Algebra—I'm sorry to say—you failed."

It seemed as though the whole room had stopped to listen. Even the Sophomore was struck dumb. The Freshman clasped her hands tighter and lifted her chin helplessly. She met the Professor's eye.

"I—I tried," she said slowly. Then she turned around quickly and went out, with the Sophomore close beside.

"Don't feel so badly, May," she said anxiously, and then, more cheerfully, "Lots of people fail, you know."

A gay voice floated up the stairway. "Oh, girls, three Ex's and a Good—It's too good to be true. I must go and write home this minute."

The Freshman caught her breath hard. "You see," she said softly, "if Mamma and Papa didn't—" then she stopped. The Sophomore drew her hand up under her golf cape, and they went downstairs together without a word.

The Legend of the Laboratory

1 Gravely the Arthropod,
Robbed of his head,
Lamed in his pleopod,
Smashed, but not dead,

2 Raised himself carefully
Out of the jar,
Helped by his propodite,
Nothing could mar.

3 "Are they all gone?" he cried,
"Gone, one and all?"
Aves woke up and cried,
"Yes, till the fall!"

4 Up spoke a trilobite,
Packed in his box,
"Let's have a sporty night,
I have the rocks."

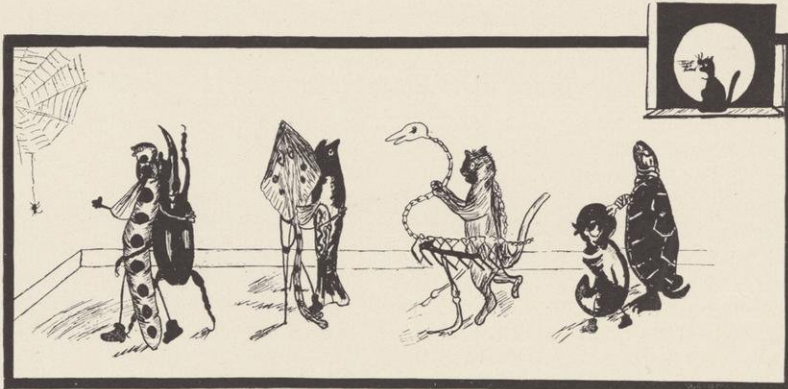

10 Histology freaks then,
Tattered and torn,
Students had sliced them,
They looked forlorn.

11 Nimble a frog went by Minus his pharynx,
Never a croak nor sigh
Came from his larynx.

* * * * *

12 Swelly to terminate
This strange affair
Toasts were contributed,
Cultured and rare.

13 Drunk in the alcohol
Which preserved them,
Gaily the old soaks all
Tipped like men.

5 Quickly a microbe said,
"Frankly to speak,
I've been so widely spread
I've become weak

6 "As a result we must Economize."
"Sure," yelled a malocrust
Minus his eyes.

7 Now being all aroused
Gather the best,
All those with legs endowed
Helping the rest.

8 First in the promenade,
Humming a song,
Battered up dephlapods,
Rubbered along

9 "Some call us squids," they said,
"We're not to blame,
After a fellow's dead,
What's in a name?"

14 "Here's to Art Beule, then,"
First cried the crab,
"He's cut me once or twice
While in the lab."

15 Each drunk to Art Curtis,
Meyer — Miss Gopen,
They did them all justice
With great elation.

16 Scarce was the last speech done,
The last toast drunk,
When up came the peeping sun
Down they all shrunk.

17 Back to their empty jars,
Case, shelf, or box,
Clambered each wearily,
Even the rocks.

18 Sorrowed to quit the fun
But with the light,
All was serene again,
Forgot was the night.

The Quarrel

I fear I'm very weak of will,
But then, what could I do?
We disagreed the other day,
For Harry says "the U,"
While I insist on "'Varsity.'
Think of Wisconsin called
"The U"—just like Chicago!
Why, I was quite appalled;
I said I wouldn't have it,
As crossly as I might,
But after what he answered
How could he want to fight?
For then he said, the foolish boy,
with eyes that would adore,
"Of course, I love the 'Varsity,
I can't but love U more."

If the Badger Board Were the State Legislature it Would Give every purchaser of the Badger a job at the capitol.

Pass the anti-cigarette bill (Messrs. Cronk, Stillman and Beebe, and Miss Seeber vigorously dissenting.)

Purchase an electric plant for the engineering department, a printing plant for university publications, a century plant for the botany department, and an egg plant for Dean Henry.

Put a prohibitive tax on male and female spinsterhood, and would frame a law especially applying to that bright consummate flower of bachelordom—Charles Noble Gregory.

Offer a standing reward of a thousand dollars to every undergraduate co-ed who should become engaged to any member of the faculty; reward to be doubled in case of the capture of Prof. Meyer or Prof. Giese; in case, however, Prof. Pyre should become so engaged, he and not his fiance, should be entitled to the reward.

Ask the Board of Regents to make one more effort to prevent the entrance of students from other states, recommending as the most efficient means therefor another increase of fees.

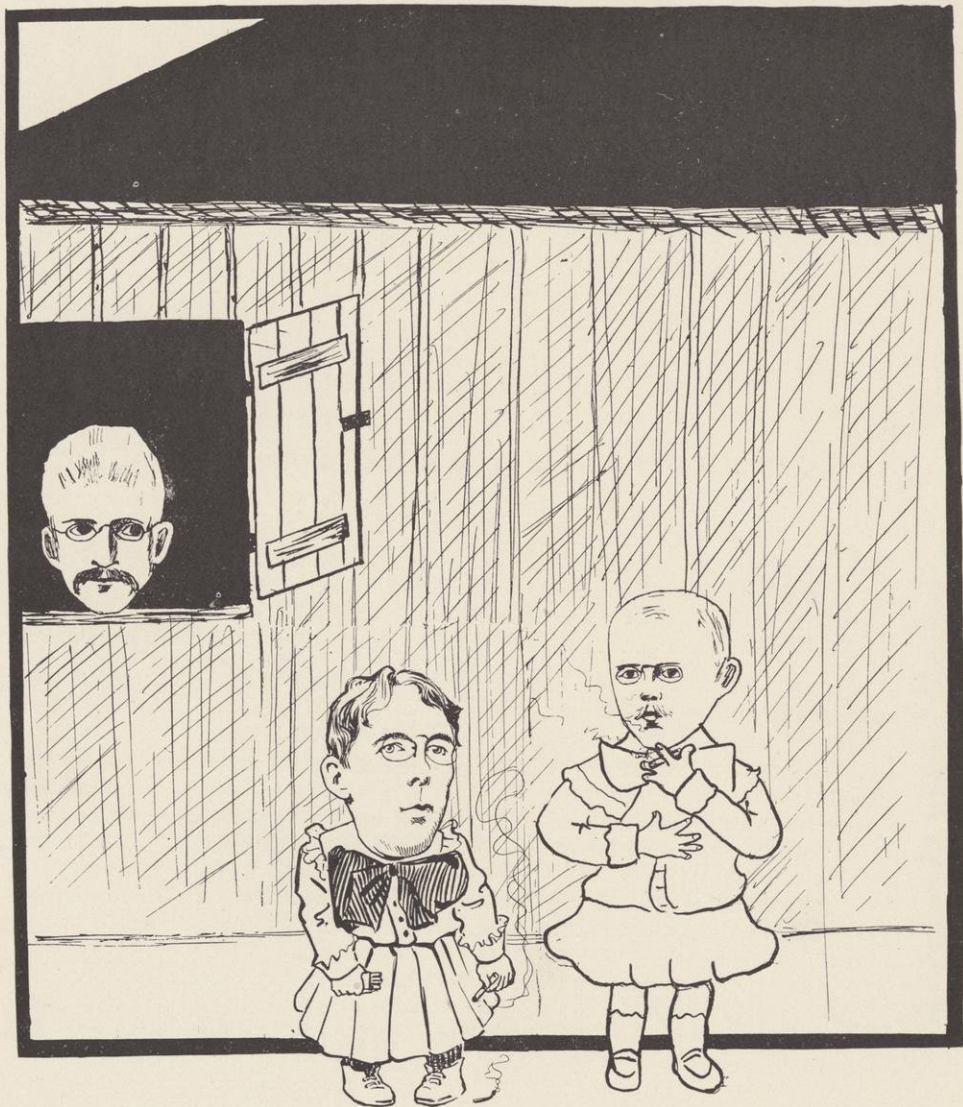

Send a memorial to Congress praying that military drill requirements be increased to six times a week, continuing four years.*

Create a special lectureship for Bobby Haight on "Conversation: How to talk Learnedly on any Known or Unknown Subject Without Saying anything." Course to be open only to faculty members and instructors of suitable preparation.

Prohibit all games, sports and amusements dangerous to life and limb, except post office and drop the handkerchief.

Amend the election laws of the state so as to prevent any student from voting at more than six different "homes" at any one election.

*This matter was brought up on a petition from Major Rhode and Captain Kemp, presented by Fourth Sergeant Davis; the comatose state thereby induced in the Board permitted the ladies to push the memorial through, which they did, misunderstanding "hop" for "drill." Brennan woke up in time to vote with the ladies.

"THOSE NAUGHTY BOYS—CIGARETTES AGAIN"

The Diatom

The diatom sat on the banks of the Nile,
Chewing his cud with a broad blue smile,
And he wiped his nose on the back of his hand,
And said, "By golly, this view is grand."

The ibis said as he waved his bandanna,
"What would'nt I give for a nice red banana"
Then he flew to the place where the crocodiles grow,
And instead of bananas he is now eating crow.

The diatom envies this luncheon of bird.
"That he should have it is simply absurd."
He said with an oath as he swam far away,
"I guess I'll come back on Easter Day."

For then I'll have eggs if I can't have the bird,
If I can't have them boiled I will have them shirred."
Just then all the water went out with the tide,
And the diatom turned up his toes and died.

Terrible!!!

Smith. "Why do they call them 'logs' anyway?"

Jones. "Because when you first saw them you were stumped. Then after sapping your energies in this branch of the science you discovered that the bark was worse than the board. As that augured well for you it became plane that it was time to leave this subject and go to extracting roots. There, I guess that will make you sufficiently occupied for awhile. If it does not just plank down another two bits and I will see what I can carve out for you."

Betrayed

One of the Sigma Chi boys was visiting the Hall and the two of them were teasing Cupid.

"Ah, I see a flush on your cheek," said the maid.

"No?" he exclaimed nervously, "bob-tailed or straight?"

"Yes," said the Freshie, "for the last two years my habits have been as regular as clock-work. I arose at 9, breakfast at 6:30, dinner at 12, and always in bed by 9.30."

"Say," said the man at the end of the table, "what were you in for?"

Official Notice

Examinations in Metallurgy will be ore-all this semester.

W. H. HOBBS.

At Christmas Recess

First D. U. It's very good of you old man to come down to the train to see me off."

Second D. U. "Don't mention it. I am darn glad to have the chance."
And now the other fellow is wondering what he meant by the remark.

Her Eyes

THE joint-debater came out of the door of the hall in the old Library building and slammed it behind him. He was heartily sick of this everlasting rehearsing and re-rehearsing. It seemed like a waste of time to stand up there on the platform and repeat time after time the same old points and the same old statistics in the same old tone, punctuated now and then with Frankie's quick criticisms and correct intonations. After nine months' solid work on the debate, gathering material far and wide, traveling, writing, bucking, interviewing, all interesting and instructive work, then to be reduced to parrot-like repetition of the tiresome matter gathered together. How much better in some ways, how much more interesting for all if only they could saturate themselves with the subject, and then, on the night of the debate, each get up and speak offhand, and right from the shoulder. But experience had developed another system and to this system he was a slave, soon however to be freed, for the emancipation proclamation, in the shape of debate posters, was spread abroad.

As the door closed he climbed the dark stairs to the reading room, deigning hardly a glance at the faithful Freshman sentinel at the door. As he hung up his hat he vowed he wouldn't come in there again for a month after the debate. As usual the library was nearly full and he dropped into an empty chair near the revolving case. His eye strayed around the room from Psyche to Apollo-with-the-beveled-ear, as Bobbie Gay used to say. Three girls were whispering at the catalogue case. A pile of newspapers on the table in front of him caught his eye. He tumbled them over, The Manitowoc Pilot, Spirit of the Times, Boston Ideas. Something beneath one of them caught his eye, an envelope. On the outside was the name of one of his opponents in debate. It might contain the debate outline. He glanced around. No one was paying any attention to him. He slid the envelope toward himself; then he bunched up his own papers and slid the envelope beneath them. Shortly he pushed back to leave but as he looked up he looked straight into the eyes of a girl standing at the revolving case. She stood there with one hand resting on the shelf, her eyes fixed as on something far away. She was trying to remember something but he did not know what. He knew only that those eyes, reminding him of his mother's, of eyes he might have dreamed of, of eyes he might hope to dream of again, had saved him from an act he would surely have regretted. Without realizing that she was being stared at, the girl turned again to the case, took down a book and went to the other end of the room. He leaned over the table, slid his papers off the envelope, leaving it lying among the newspapers as before. A few minutes later, as he stood talking at the librarian's desk, he saw one of the opposing team rush wildly into the room, turn over all the papers on the tables, and then, with a sigh of relief seize the envelope among the papers. He wondered who the girl was.

Perhaps he would meet her sometime. But this showed how ignorant he was, for of all people, no one is harder to get an introduction to than a co-ed.*

At last the preparations were over, each society had brought down dray-loads of charts and books and piled them high on the tables near the side doors. Now the nervous debaters and the unwearying aids of either side were sitting around waiting for the gathering of the clans from their respective halls. As our debater sat talking and arranging his authorities, an alumnus of his society stepped up to him and, after chatting a few minutes, asked him to come back and meet his sister who had come to hear the debate. When the brother introduced him he recognized the sister as the girl with the eyes. He stood embarrassed; the other two talked but he could answer only in monosyllables. His mind was taken from the debate, but the brother, himself an old joint-debater, knew the distraction was a good thing. He had no reply when the girl said: "Oh, I hope you'll win. I bet a lot of fudges that you would. That was on my brother's account, before I knew you, but I'm glad I did, now." Fortunately the cheers of the opposing forces coming into the hall put an end to the conversation, and the debater hurried back to his place.

The debate went as all debates go, the hopes of either side rising and falling alternately, but when the judges left the room each side was firmly convinced that it had won. After what seemed an interminable delay, the judges appeared and, with the utmost deliberation, gave the decision to our debater's opponents. After the mighty, overwhelming rush of the winning society upon the platform, and amid the confused cheering of the winners, the defeated ones stood for a few minutes, listlessly receiving the congratulations of their ardent supporters, meanwhile preparing to leave by the side door. Just as our debater had slipped on his overcoat, he heard a girl's voice just beside him, "I'm so sorry you lost. You did finely. I suppose I will have to make fudges now. If you'll call, I'll make some for you. I'm at the Hall." The brother added his congratulations and commiserations and the defeated debater started slowly home.

Here was the result of nearly a year's hard work gone up and nothing to show for it. Yes, he had something to show for it. He had the experience, the knowledge of his subject, and the material for his thesis, and—, and—, if it hadn't been for this debate, he probably wouldn't have met—, yes, he had got something from his work. but bitter thoughts still haunted him and it was only when he was asleep that he was freed from them. Then who knows what his dreams were, for his last waking thought was: "Do you know I like her eyes."

LAURANCE C. BURKE, '01.

*This statement is based on personal experience.

"I happen to know why they call it Drill,"

Said a member of 1904

"Because," and he smiled as he walked up the hill,

"It's such an awful bore."

"What is the difference between Willie Walker and a locomotive?"

"Give it up."

"One has a light head and the other has a headlight."

"Have you chosen your major for this year yet?"

"Oh my, do I have to choose a Major too? I already have a Captain and two Lieutenants and I do not know what I am possibly to do with a Major."

Phil King

BE isn't a hero, a saint or a poet,
No shrine will be raised to his work or his name,
But he who is faithful and skillful is great—
If he generals an army,—or coaches a game.

And we of Wisconsin, and we of the rooters
Would somehow fain glorify all that we may
This man who has greatened the Varsity's fame
And has made its name known on the lips of to-day.

For football has thrilled us and football has chilled us,
Made strong men to weep, and made women to pray;
And so do you wonder our praise is so great
For the man who has led us, and shown us the way?

His name and his face they are dear and familiar;
We like the soft drawl of his smooth Eastern tongue,
The smile that dawns slowly, when,—watching us win—
He is there on the side lines, while "Hot Time" is sung.

And we of Wisconsin have known him defeated,
His loyalty, courtesy, justice, the same,
He knows how to touch our resolve with action,
We flush at his praise, or we blush at his blame.

And so to his skill and his power do honor,
And so, while the "Toast to Wisconsin" you sing,
We will offer another, we're proud to declare—
While Wisconsin's Wisconsin, Phil King is Phil King.

Revenge

I wonder if he could forget
He has this waltz with me.
How can he care to linger there,
And talk to Marjory?

That Music is so distracting Oh!
The wretch to made me wait!
What won't I do! I'll cut him too,
For coming up so late.

Discovered

He whispered softly in her ear,
And yet I could not help but hear.
I saw her cheek flush rosy red,
The moment that the words were said.

Some secret bit of cupid's lore?
Ah, no! And yet it moved her more,
For this is what the message bore;
"Your rat shows through your pompadour."

Chat Letter

I came in the other day and found Freddie staring at the opposite wall, with a far away look in his eye. I had only just sat down, when he groaned, flopped over in his chair, and sank into thought again. I looked up.

"What's the matter, old man?"

"Oh, I'm such a fool."

"I'm afraid I can't deny it."

He paid no attention, but banged the chair-arm thoughtfully.

"What did I say?"

"Oh, come Freddie, what's the matter?"

He looked over at me disconsolately.

"It's just another one of my awful breaks. I was fool enough to write to Jack the other day, because I heard he was laid up, and I thought he'd like to get a good old-fashioned scrawl and hear how things were going and what was going on. Oh, gee," and he groaned again.

"Well, I don't see the point, yet."

"Why, you have heard of Jack's sister, haven't you?"

"Slightly. A man couldn't know Freddie very well without hearing of her." Freddie seemed sunk in contemplation again. "Well, for Heaven's sakes go on. What's the idea, anyhow?"

"Didn't I tell you I wrote to Jack? Well, I got a note from him to-day. I didn't know how sick he was—how should I? And, of course, I didn't stop to think. Why, his eyes gave out for a while, too, and he couldn't even read his letters. They didn't tell me that."

"Well, Jack didn't die or anything, did he? What's the matter? Was your letter important?"

"Important? Great Heavens, it's liable to be! Don't you see, you old idiot, that he couldn't read it, so she opened it and read it to him? And, oh, old man, I've been thinking for the last hour, and I can't remember what I said."

A Tragedy

4:00 p. m. Harry Winkler heard to express an intention of calling on Miss McDill that evening.

6:00. Mr. Winkler calls up 61, asking for Miss McDill. She is at dinner.

6:30. Art Uihlein, who has heard the foregoing, waits until he hears Miss McDill call up 598, and then asks if Mr. Harold Haskins may call that evening. "Yes, you may." "Thank you."

6:35. Harold Haskins, who has also heard the foregoing, and who fears a "grind" on himself, calls up 61 and asks for Miss McDill. "This is Mr. Winkler. May I call this evening?"

"No, I'm so sorry, I expect another man. You're the fifth person who has asked. Wont some other time do?"

6:40. Mr. Winkler, who has not heard the foregoing, rings up 61 and asks for Miss McDill.

"This is Harry Winkler. May I call this evening?"

Miss McDill heard to gasp through the phone:

"Why, Mr. Winkler, you've rung me up before this evening. I'm very sorry, but as I told you before I expect Mr. Haskins to call. Wont you come to-morrow?"

6:50. Mr. Winkler still pawing the air and swearing revenge.

7:00. Mr. W. calls up Mr. Haskins, who has meanwhile gone home to dress. Mr. H. answers phone and Mr. W., feigning Miss McD's voice, asks, "Is that you, Mr. Haskins? This is Miss McDill. She—ah—I mean, I had promised one of my friends to go to Middleton this evening, and you can't come up."

Mr. Haskins, who "tumbles" immediately, "Say, Wink, ring off; you're it."

7:00 to 8:00. Mr. Winkler still emphatic when interviewed on the situation.

8:00 to 9:30. Mr. Haskins hearing all about who has called on Miss McD. for the last week.

Next morning 8:00 a. m.—1:00 p. m. Miss McD. passes Mr. Winkler "ice" and he wonders why.

AN EIGHT O'CLOCK

Library Rules and Regulations

1. All books and periodicals taken from shelves in reading and periodical room should be returned to their proper places unless students wish them for their own use. In that case they should be placed on the wrong shelves or any other place where they may not be found by any except the student reserving them. This course is especially urged at times when the books are in great demand.

2. No Normalite should use one book more than eighteen hours or less than four hours a day.

Normalites are advised not to eat their breakfasts on the steps or in the entrances. They should bring their own lunches for the present. Lunch counters will be provided in the near future.

3. As many lights as possible should be turned on and left. It is Eric Allen's special work to turn them off.

4. Students are cautioned not to splash ink farther than a radius of six feet around their chairs.

Special Regulations Concerning Communication

1. Students who are accustomed to receive callers in the reading room should have regular visiting hours, otherwise no communication is allowed.

2. Assistants, instructors and graduate students should not communicate above a whisper.

3. Professors may speak loud enough to be heard from any point in the reading room.

4. Library officials and heads of departments in the University may employ megaphones in communication.

Miscellaneous Suggestions

Students are encouraged to bring bread crumbs, especially in the fall and spring, to feed the birds which frequent the library during the day.

The reading room gives the best view of the notable visitors who throng the gallery.

“Engaged”

LEN FAIRCHILD had come to take his last walk with her, and for the first time in all the four years of companionship Mary's heart was beating fast and her hands were trembling as she got ready to go down. For the last half-hour she had been curled up on her window-seat thinking helplessly of what she had overheard at the Alumni Ball the night before. The words echoed in her ears—“They must be engaged. She wouldn't let him go on caring for her so long and then throw him over—she isn't that sort of a girl.” And they were talking about Len and about her. Think of being “that sort of a girl.” She had been thoughtless, selfish, heartless—why hadn't she told him about Fred? He would have kept her secret. But it must be all a mistake—and then she remembered miserably the odd embarrassed look he had given her when he had asked her to go out, and how he had said abruptly “There's something I want to tell you—something I meant to say for some time—but didn't have a chance.”

She hadn't straightened things out much when he came, only she had decided she musn't give him a chance to say what he wanted to, before she had confessed about “Fred.” It wouldn't be fair to him. Oh, the poor boy—how she wished he wouldn't mind much. She felt like a villain. I wish I had my ring here,” she said to herself as she went down-stairs very slowly—“it would make it easier.”

They shook hands rather gravely. There was something unmistakably embarrassed in his manner, and Mary felt her heart sink as they walked silently up the hill together. She tried to talk gaily but all her efforts fell flat, and by the time they had passed Main Hall and started up toward the Observatory she felt desperate. She couldn't blurt out what she had to say without any excuse. When they stopped at the bench she sat down mechanically, leaning her head against the trunk of a tree, and silence descended as they looked out over the lake.

“Don't you hate to leave it all?” she said, she knew as soon as it was out that she hadn't improved the situation much.

“We have had lots of good times here.” Len seemed to be no more at his ease. “I shall hate to give them all up. You and I have had lots of good times here.”

Indeed they had. Mary fully realized it, but didn't exactly care to discuss them then. “Yes—we have been very good friends.” She tried to say it carelessly, yet warmly, but it sounded stilted.

Len stretched out his legs and plunged his hands deeper into his pockets. “I'll never forget what good friends,” he remarked.

Mary knew she ought to say something, but not a word came to her mind, and silence fell again. Suddenly Len stood up and leaned against one of the trees, looking down at her.

“It's because we've been such good friends,” he said determinedly “that I want to tell you something. Perhaps you'll think it's queer that I've never said it before—that I've waited until the last day—but I didn't have the right until lately, and—and there hasn't been a good chance."

Mary's cheeks flushed. "Never mind now, Len," she said, almost pleadingly. "Let's just enjoy to-day as we have the other days."

"I—I hope it won't make any difference, Mary, he said anxiously, his eyes on her face.

His steady gaze troubled her and she stood up. "I hope not," she said, trying to speak lightly. Then she found she was trembling and sat down again.

"You know that nothing makes any difference in my feeling for you," he said slowly. He was not looking at her now, and she stole a glance at his face. It was troubled, and it hurt her. Poor boy—and that last speech was so generous, so manly. He wanted her to understand that he would be loyal at all costs. And she was to blame for this.

"I haven't told you yet," he began, but she stopped him.

"You don't need to, Len," she said slowly. "I have guessed it. I'm afraid I've been to blame, but—oh, Len, I'm so sorry," and she looked up at him with the tears standing in her eyes.

He looked around at her, his face flushed and alarmed. "Don't! Mary," he said, almost vehemently—"don't for heaven's sake say that. You musn't. You don't mean it. I—"

But Mary interrupted him quickly. "Len," she said earnestly, "I can't help it—it isn't any use. I have something to tell you. I ought to have told it before—only I never guessed—really." She paused an instant with one glance at his distressed face. He tried to speak, but she stopped him. "Wait, please. I—I have always cared for you as a friend, Len—and always will. But—I am engaged—and have been since Christmas. It is Fred Morris, a home man, you know. It is a secret, but—I had ought to have told you." She stopped and sat looking out over the lake. She could not bear to look in his face, and see the look she knew was there. She would not intrude on his sorrow—it should be sacred.

"Engaged!" There was an odd little tremor in his voice.

"Yes, Len."

He sat down suddenly. "But —" he stammered—"but that is what I was going to tell you. I'm engaged, too."

"Engaged!"

"Yes, Mary."

Mary turned and their eyes met. There are no words to describe that look. The whole conversation passed in review before their minds, and then—Mary gave a sort of gasping breath and then a half hysterical laugh. "But—I thought —"

"So did I—or—I mean—Oh Mary, I beg your pardon—but" and an irresponsible laugh burst out—"shall we call it quits?"

He held out both his hands. There was just a moment of hesitation. Then she met his eyes and surrendered—hands and laugh and all.

"Oh, Len!"

"Oh, Mary!"

And a stray Sophomore, who had wandered up the Hill shortly after them—partly by accident—stole away to inform everyone interested that Mary Fiske and Len Fairchild might not have been engaged to each other before—a question in dispute—but they certainly were now. But most people are liable to make mistakes.

A Tale of Wisconsin

OH, he was a man, and she was a maid,
 They went to Wisconsin, so 'tis said,
 And neither was old and neither staid
 And neither of either the least afraid--
 It's a way we have at Wisconsin.

Now she was a girl with a charming way,
 And he was a handsome man, they say,
 And they climbed the same hill day by day,
 Until four whole years had passed away—
 It's a way we have at Wisconsin.

They heard the lectures side by side,
 He took her to many a dance and ride,
 And numerous walks they had beside
 And they talked and jollied, discussed and guyed—
 It's a way we have at Wisconsin.

Now, I've heard it said on authority
 That a co-educational 'varsity
 Is a matrimonial agency.
 And I've heard it stated complacently
 It's a way we have at Wisconsin.

And I dare not say that it isn't true (Though they usually wait till their course is through)
 That the men—and it's so of the women, too—
 Get married as often as most folks do—
 It's a way we have at Wisconsin.

This man and maid did the same you see—
 She married an Eastern LL.D.,
 And he a girl from Menomonie,
 And they lived—oh more or less happily—
 And this is a tale of Wisconsin.

My Old Sweetheart

With apologies to Riley.

Like one who sits in silence on the banks of purling streams,
And lets his fancy wander in a world of idle dreams,
I sometimes sit and ponder, painting pictures wondrous fine
Of happy days I've had and have, with that old sweetheart of mine.

How well do I remember the happy, pleasing smile
That lit up lips and forehead when I told her at the stile
That I'd give the world to win her, that I'd work for ages nine
To be sure that then I'd have that old sweetheart of mine.

When days are dark and dreary and the soul is tempest-tossed
Like a ship on angry waters, when the cry is "All is lost."
Her words and ways are winning, like the lifeman's saving line,
Are the winning ways and words of that old sweetheart of mine.

What the world has now of goodness, what it's gained of honest worth,
And all there is of progress 'mong the nations of the earth,
Is due in the percentage expressed by ninety-nine,
To generous, noble women, like your sweetheart and mine.

In the darkest days of danger, in the doubt that often comes
To the man whose home is marble, to the toiler in the slums,
Her heart is full of patience and courage that's divine,
That makes me ever more in love with that old sweetheart of mine.

The world has noble women, and men worth tons of gold,
And some have hearts so happy that they never can grow old;
But, with the years are better, like the noblest vint of wine,
And that's the way it always was with that old sweetheart of mine.

Ah, happy days are fleeting and we both are growing old,
But half the happiness we've had can never more be told;
And the money that I've garnered most gladly I'd resign
For half as many years again with that old sweetheart of mine.

For fifteen years we've wandered in the ways of man and God,
For fifteen years been happy in every path we've trod;
I'm rich as ancient—no monarch of the Rhine
Had ever such a treasure as that old sweetheart of mine.

For what I've had I'm grateful, give thanks to God and men;
For what's to come I'm hopeful, I know that ne'er again
Can come to me more pleasure than comes to me and mine,
Through this, my greatest treasure, this old sweetheart of mine.

A Freshman's Diary

Oct-17 Over slept my eight o'clock this morning so thought I might as well cut my nine o'clock too - went up town - turned in to see Brunette the Flying Lady - who's a damned fake. Met Walt Curtis and McChesin there and fore rubbered in at the Cherry station - least said, the letter. Hung round all morning with those chaps. Spent my money ~~not~~ noticeably. Got hit in the head with one of those infernal return balls. If I caught the man who did it I'd have furnished him. Met one of the cops I cut up at the glass house - gentle fasten I dodged -

Got a letter from father this afternoon. No check - wonder if ~~he~~ he thinks a chap can live on nothing.

A CONVOCATION

This isn't a pictured night-mare.
 This horse, poor rubbering wretch,
 Is one of Prof. Henry's racers
 Who's kodaked on the home stretch.

Consolation

I.

There, little Freshie—don't cry
 The lake it is wet, I know;
 But have no fear
 That you'll drown this year,
 Your head is too light, you know;
 Your soaked up skin will soon be dry;—
 There, little Freshie—don't cry!

II.

There, naughty Sophomore— don't cry!
 You have taken a vow, I know;
 But remember yet,
 That the lake's as wet
 As it was a year ago.
 So bury your hatchet, or lay it by.
 There, naughty Sophomore— don't cry!

III.

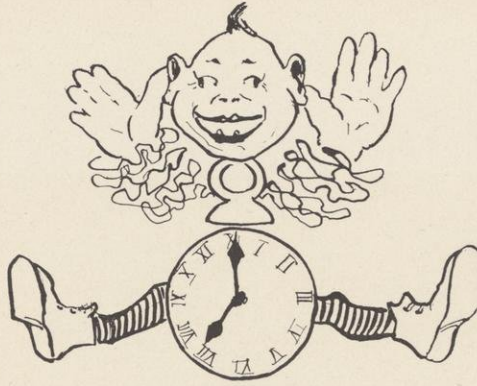

There, worthy Junior—don't cry!
 You're not yet a senior, I know;
 But thoughts of this
 Will be untold bliss
 As the "Prom" times come and go.
 So rent the suit you cannot buy;
 There, worthy Junior—don't cry!

IV.

There, sober Senior, don't cry!
 You are soon to leave us, I know;
 But in fancy still
 You will climb the "Hill,"
 In the years that come and go.
 Bid hills and lakes and Profs. good-bye;—
 There, sober Senior, don't cry!

THE FOUR EDUCATIONAL STAGES OF MAN.

Things Seen in Passing

- 6:00 a.m. Clifford Ireland's alarm clock goes off unnoticed. Furnace tenders are attending.
- 7:00 a.m. Hermy Taylor goes to breakfast on time.
- 8:00 a.m. Some one put snow in the thermometer and Slichter dismisses class.
- 9:00 a.m. Harry Winkler and Phil. Spooner seen ascending the hill for their eight o'clocks.
- 10:00 a.m. Professor Coffin meets his ten o'clock class coming down the hill as he ascends at 10:06.
- 11:00 a.m. Chauncey Blake and Miss Sanborn still in the rotunda.
- 12:00 m. Harvey Clawson flunked in geology. Same performance by others less noted in other classes.
- 1:00 p.m. Weekly review at boarding houses.
- 2:00 p.m. Mr. Ireland finally awakes and says uncomplimentary things about his alarm clock.
- 3:00 p.m. General exodus from chemistry.
Miss Cunningham takes a stroll with Mr. Beye.
- 4:00 p.m. Freshmen seen going towards gym with towels, soap, etc.
- 5:00 p.m. Fred McGowan goes to the library resolved to do a day's reading.
- 6:00 p.m. Clarence White leaves Gamma Phi House, not having been invited to dinner.
- 7:00 p.m. Miss Martin and Mr. Murphy seen going toward the library.
- 8:00 p.m. Miss McDill and Miss Cunningham each expect "men" and fight for the small parlor. Miss Cunningham wins out.
Mr. M. and Miss Martin finally reach the library.
- 9:00 p.m. "Jawbone Club" meets at Johnny Mauer's.
J. R. Kimball, "blown out" at Kappa House by Tommy Frawley, returns early. Exit of Bill Murphy and Miss Martin from library.
- 10:00 p.m. Badger board reads proof. Professor Scott makes out quiz questions.
- 11:00 p.m. "Beau" Walters gets a light lunch at Mr. Ketchner's on the corner.
- 12:00 midnight. Brindley works on joint debate. Willie Walker thinks of Olin in the morning and groans.
- 1:00 a.m. Badger board still reading proof.
- 2:00 a.m. "Owl Club" disbands for the morning. Hermy Taylor comes home.
Bruce starts walking the floor.
- 3:00 a.m. Mr. Wolfenson sets his alarm for five o'clock and goes to bed.
- 4:00 a.m. Dogs at University barns begin to bark. Short horns think about getting up.
Bruce still walking.
- 5:00 a.m. Badger board stops reading proof. Bruce still walks the floor.
- 6:00 a.m. The same as before. Repeat "ad libitum."

OVER THE CHAFING DISH—A MIDNIGHT "SPREAD"

The Proposal

The moonlight came down through the roses,
 The music stole out through the door,
 And their words were original, only, because
They never had said them before.

* * * * *

He said, "I believe I will tell you the truth."
 She said, "For a change, I suppose?"
 He said, "Don't say that, — I'm in earnest tonight."
 She laughed, "You don't mean it?" and rose.

He said, "Oh, don't go! For I must tell you how —"
 She said, "They've begun the next waltz."
 He said, "You are utterly cruel, I think."
 She smiled, "But all girls have their faults."
 He said, "Now I know that you haven't a heart."
 She sighed, "I believe that is true."
 He cried, "Oh, Louise don't say—you can't mean—"
 She whispered, "I lost it, — to you"

Lines on a Street Car Line

She sat near me in the car one day
 It was in the glorious month of May.
 She said "Will you pull the bell for me,"
 I said, "You surprise me, can't you see,
 I can't pull the bell, but I'll pull the rope
 That rings the bell—there's a difference I hope."

She looked at me with a frosty stare,
 And then I blushed to the roots of my hair.
 When she spoke to me she said, "Oh, well,
 I see each end of the car has a bell,
 I would rather do it myself by far,
 Than have you stop the wrong end of the car."

Miss Parkinson's flow of eloquence on her return after vacation and after finding the Kappa house frozen solid, is checked temporarily by the plumber, who asks her to "please don't use such language in my presence. I do not approve of it."

Clippings

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Alonzo A. Chamberlain and Clifford Ireland, two Mormon leaders from Madison, Wis., passed through our city Monday evening on their way to Salt Lake City.—Leavenworth (Kan.) Times.

Allan S. Neilson, the talented young college athlete from this suburb, has won the admiration of all the co-eds at Madison. At a recent secret vote of the self-government association for the most popular male student, Allie received over 97 per cent. of the votes, one sorority alone working against him. He is by far the most graceful dancer in the U. W. Y. M. C. A.—North Milwaukee Correspondence in Milwaukee Sentinel, February 16, 1901.

Mr. Arthur F. Beule, of this city, is planning a driving trip to take in White-water, Waterloo, Janesville and Madison.—Beaver Dam Argos, July 18, 1900.

Owing to bad weather, Mr. A. F. Beule's long-planned driving trip came to an end at Waterloo, where he was delayed for nearly a week.—Beaver Dam Argos, August 1, 1900.

The committee on speakers for the celebration (Fourth of July) have fortunately secured Professor Philip King, of the Wisconsin State University, as orator of the day. We expect an address from him that will pay everybody to hear, hence urge all to make it a point to come and to come in time.—Taylor County Star and News, June 30, 1900.

Sarah Seeber, our talented young university student, has been highly honored by her class at the university, by election to the Badger board, which publishes a humorous annual. Knowing, as we do, Sadie's severe avoidance of anything savoring of interruption to her work, we predict that she will spare but little time to board work, having only taken it up at the unanimously urgent request of her class.—Waterloo Journal, June 1, 1900.

Mr. Sherman Moore, B. H. S. '97, of U. W. regiment, has recently been promoted from the ranks to the signal corps. This position is attainable only by passing a rigid examination, which requires no small knowledge of military science, and tactics. Thus Broadhead is honored by her sons.

H. H. Taylor again Sundayed in Stoughton. Must be some powerful attraction, eh, Hermie?—Madison Democrat, May 15, 1900.

The Sphinx, U. W., is devoted to the interests of "The Beer that made Milwaukee famous," cigars and tobacco.—Athenæum, Belvidere H. S.

More laurels for Ryan's Alumni! Won this time with the pen. "The Sacrifice of Hastings," the story which gained first prize in the Daily Cardinal's contest was written by Joseph Koffend, '96. It is a delightfully interesting story adorning the first page of the Daily Cardinal's special Christmas number. As it will be reprinted in the CLARION, by Mr. Koffend's permission, CLARION readers will have an opportunity of judging of its merits for themselves. We congratulate Mr. Koffend upon his success.—Ryan High School Clarion, (Appleton, Wis.) January 1901.

ATHLETICS.

M. J. Cleary, the newly elected manager of the Wisconsin University track team, has a splendid record in athletic work. As early as his high school days he made fast time in the quarter and half-mile events and since then he has always been identified with athletic work. He managed the high school football and track teams and when he came to the university was soon elected on the Board of Directors. His home is in Blanchardville. Last year Mr. Cleary was one of the Wisconsin representatives in the debate with Iowa.

—Evening Wisconsin

"Do you know Tennyson's Sisters?" said Dr. Cairns.

"No but I met an uncle of his in London last Summer."

We see by the Directory of students of the University of Wisconsin that an Eric W. Allen registers from Milwaukee. As there is but the one of that name given we presume that Ericson is ashamed of us home folks. We reciprocate.—McFarland Items in Stoughton Hub, December 1, 1900.

Blatting

JANE—Come on, Mary, and let's buck that Dutch right away.

MARY—Can't now, Jane. Sonny gave us a lot of outside reading for Lit. and I'm in for four solid hours at the Libe. What's on for to-night?

JANE—I'm going to have a man to-night, and there's some sort of a stunt after that. Blast it anyway, I'm simply swamped for work. Why—

MARY—Oh, cheer up. If I was a blooming whale like you, I wouldn't chew the rag about work. If you had taken all your cuts before the semester was half gone, had three quizzes sprung on you every Friday, ¹lost all your pulls because the Profs. had got on to your stabs, with a con to pay if you'd flunked in—

JANE—Cut it out. If you weren't always getting scared green and would drop your stiff courses and take a few snaps, you could take life easy. Everybody calls you a ²grind.

MARY—Well, that's a slam. Ring off and tell me if you're going to the shindig Saturday night.

JANE—You mean the Hop? I've had four bids. I'm going with Hopkins. He's a frightful ³jollier, but he's the dinkiest dancer I know. Who's your man?

MARY—Oh, I have such fiendish luck. I've had two bids and Smith was on deck first. He's a perfect stick and it would make you howl to see him dance.

JANE—Was the other one Jack? He's a peach of a dancer.

MARY—Corking, and I have a perfectly terrific ⁴crush besides. Well, got to go.

Conversation

JANE—Mary, would it be convenient for you to come to my room presently for the purpose of studying our German lesson?

MARY—It would be impossible for me to come just at present, Jane. Professor Pyre has assigned to the class a considerable amount of extra reading, which he requires us to accomplish to-day for our work in his course in English Literature. I find that it will be necessary for me to remain for a period of at least four hours in the Historical Library in order to complete that amount of reading. Have you any engagement for this evening which will prevent our studying the German lesson then?

JANE—I am expecting a gentleman caller this evening. Then I believe the girls have planned for an entertainment of a nature of which I am not aware, and the hour set for that is half-past nine o'clock. Alas, I feel that my work is at present proving to be very much of a burden. Why—

MARY—My dear, do not let that oppress your spirit. If I possessed so remarkable an intellect as I have observed to be yours I would not take occasion to expatiate on the subject of overwork. If you had absented yourself from classes as many times during the first half of the semester as the rule will permit you to be absent during the whole semester, if on the Friday of each week it was announced, in three of your classes, contrary to your expectations, that examinations were to be given in that course, ¹if you had forfeited all the influence you had formerly possessed over certain members of the Faculty because they had discovered that you were making a pretence of being better informed in that particular branch than you were in reality, if you were required to take a second examination in a certain study because you had fallen below the standard of work required, if you had made a very poor recitation in—

JANE—Please refrain from discussing the subject further. If it were not that you always become so badly frightened in your classes, and if you would not take so many very difficult branches of study, and if you would devote yourself to a few courses which are somewhat simpler you would find your life to be less wearisome. It is the general verdict of those whom I have heard express an opinion that you are one of those who make themselves ²slaves of toil and exclude all pleasures from the daily routine of their lives.

MARY—I consider that in the nature of a libel. Let us change the subject. Will you inform me as to whether you are expecting to attend the festivity on Saturday evening?"

JANE—Do you refer to the dancing party? I have received invitations from four persons. I accepted Mr. Hopkin's invitation. He is very much inclined to converse in a light and somewhat complimentary ³manner, but he is, indeed, the most graceful dancer of my acquaintance. Who is to be your escort?

MARY—I have been very unfortunate. I have received two invitations and the first one was that of Mr. Smith. He possesses an absolute uninteresting personality and it would cause you to laugh audibly if you were to observe the manner in which he comports himself upon the dancing-floor.

JANE—Was Jack the other individual who requested the pleasure of your company? He dances exceedingly well, doesn't he?

MARY—Most divinely. Furthermore, he exercises over me an ⁴inexplicable fascination. But I see that the time has arrived for me to take my departure.

JANE—Oh, I say, Mary, can't you cut that Libè. work and let's go on a good old⁵bat. We'll be squelched for blatting if we hang around here.

MARY—Frankie will regularly sit down on me if I flunk to-morrow, but I don't give a rap. Wait till I get my duds and some tin and we'll go to the Pal.

JANE—I guess you'll have to hurry now.

MARY—There, there—nice girl—too bad she⁶drinks!

JANE—Soak it in. Say, can't you help me on the way down to grind out something on "The Prevalence of Slang in our Colleges." Isn't that a swearable subject?

MARY—It's vile. I don't get the hang of it. It must be a hit at the boys, isn't it?

JANE—I'm dead sure of it. Come on.

MARY—I'm with you.

JANE—Mary, do you not think it would be possible for you to postpone the task which has been set for you to accomplish at the library and to accompany me on a short pleasure⁸excursion. We are likely to be severely reproved for carrying on a conversation in this place.

MARY—I fear that Professor Frankenburger will express his disapproval very strongly if I am unprepared to recite correctly in the morning. However, I shall not let that fact disturb my peace of mind. Will you wait until I have fetched my wraps and supplied myself with sufficient money for the expedition? We will then betake ourselves to Keeley's "Palace of Sweets."

JANE—I think it would be advisable for you to make haste.

MARY—Calm yourself—an excellent young woman—it is to be deplored that she indulges in intoxicating⁹drinks.

JANE—You are making base insinuations. Will you be so kind as to assist me, while we are proceeding on our way, to evolve some thought on "The Prevalence of Slang in Our Colleges." The subject has a tendency to cause the writer to use unseemly language, has it not?

MARY—It is indeed a subject difficult of execution. I find myself unable to interpret its meaning. It is most probably a reproach addressed to the young men, is it not?

JANE—I have not the slightest doubt as to the correctness of your assumption. Let us proceed.

MARY—I am prepared to accompany you.

Notes by the Translator

¹ The attention of the reader is called here to the remarkable advantages of the original over the translation in point of brevity

² We are able to find no English equivalent for the word "grind."

³ Same as note 2. The translation does not fully express the significance of the term.

⁴ The introduction of the word "inexplicable" has been criticised as a mere avoidance of any adequate definition of the word "crush." On account of limited space we find it impossible to discuss the subject here, but the reader is referred to "Essay on the Significance of the Term 'crush,' in Wisconsin Literature," by Prof. Haskins.

⁶ Palace of Sweets—A favorite resort of the times.

⁷ There has been considerable controversy upon the import of this portion of the original text. It is probable that the terms are idiomatic and we have no means of interpreting their exact meaning. The learned Prof. has offered the hypothesis that the preceding speech is a form of repartee known in the original language, as a "chestnut" (not cognate with the English word "chestnut") and that the speech in question is a retort of the same nature.

Jokes are like moving trains—They are hard to get off without some practice.

Elinor M—, "Agnes can't I be a milk maid at the fancy dress party to-morrow night?"

Agnes—, "No, you are too small to be a milk maid."

Elinor M—, "Then I am going to be a condensed milk maid."

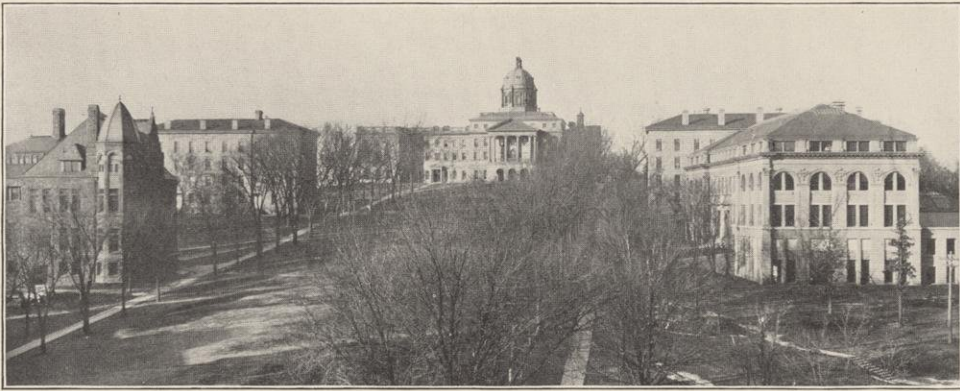

The class were translating Plautus. They were not half slangy enough to begin with, and it dragged. So Prof. Slaughter began to make a few of the characteristic remarks that make his name so appropriate. When he paused for breath, Miss Runner hastened to translate. "Now will you shut up?" And he did.

First Tri Delt—"Ain't that cute?"

Second Tri Delt—"Isn't it a crackerjack?"

Going Down the Hill

It's pleasant on a morning fair,
To meet some girl you know up there,
To stop and chat a moment, too,
While others pass and envy you,
And then together pass along,
Regardless of the hurrying throng,
Up where crowds the sidewalks fill,
When you are going down the hill.

It's pleasant too, for you to wait,
When'er her class is kept in late,
And wonder if she'll really care,
When she comes out, to find you there.
Of course she makes you think she don't.
And if she's glad, tell you she won't.
But never mind, sometimes she will,
When you are going down the hill.

But pleasant times must end at last,
(How swiftly all the days have passed);
Commencement Day will come again,
And you and she together then
Will visit each familiar place,
Will greet again each well-known face;
And, oh, what thoughts your hearts will fill,
When you are going down the hill.

In years to come, when you are old,
When earthly ties have little hold,
When you have climbed the hill of life,
And finished toil and finished strife,
Have done your work, have played your part,
Be this our wish, then may your heart
With sweetest recollections thrill

Lines to Professor C—

With apologies to Longfellow.

Then said Cairns, the Lit. Professor,
"Heretofore, in every Badger
Has appeared some verse or other
In the style of Hiawatha.
Nevermore here in Wisconsin
Will a Badger be without one.
Nevermore—for very simple
Is the meter and the rhythm"—
Straightway went one from the classroom,
Pondering and much contriving,
How his faith might be rewarded,
How to crib from Hiawatha

Something pleasing to the Lit. Prof.
To the giver of stiff courses,
Granting many hours of reading,
Many Fairs and fewer Ex's
To the students, ardent buckers,
Give me of your space, Oh Badger,
Some part of a page, Oh Badger,
For these lines which I have written
That our book be not found wanting;
Thanking for his kind suggestion
The most excellent Professor.

— LIGHTNING ARRESTER —

To My Pipe.

FRIEND EVER NEAR AND LIGHTSOME, COMFORTER TRIED AND TRUE,
YOU NEVER LEAVE ME LONESOME, NEVER A THING TO GUE.
COMFORT IN TIME OF SORROW,
PEACE TO THE SOUL DISTRESSED,
HOPE IN THE DAYS TO FOLLOW,
JOY COMES FROM THEE, AND REST.
ALWAYS MY LIGHT IN DARKNESS, EVER MY CONFIDANT,
YOU QUICKLY BRING ME GLADNESS, ADDING THE JOY I WANT.
BALM TO THE WEARY WORKER,
CHEER IN THE HOURS OF EASE,
SORACE YOU GIVE THE SMOKER,
ALWAYS THE SAME, YOU PLEASE.

Cruelty

They were sauntering down the library stairs,
Chattering—just about trifling affairs.
They were quite alone—and the time and the place—
Well, everything showed that 'twas clearly a case.

The lights—as electric lights often will—
Went out, and the boy and the girl stood still.
What a chance! He had longed, but he never had dared

To tell her how much and how truly he cared.

The witch! For no matter how often he tried,
The laugh in her eyes all his efforts defied.
But now he told all, in the dark, on the stair.
The lights flashed on, and she—wasn't there.

Procrastination

'Twas so brilliant in the Autumn
When the leaves were turning red,
That when I took her driving,
I feared I'd lose my head.

But I didn't, and in winter,
When ice-boating was the thing,
'Twas enchanting, but I thought Perhaps
I'd better wait till Spring.

Then May came with its greenness,
And she surely was a hummer.
We two went rowing often, but—
I waited on till Summer.

But Summer's come and she has gone,
I must have lost my reason.
I'll try to pluck up courage now
And wait another season.

For the Freshmen

A Short Lesson in Plurals and Other Forms

We'll begin with a this, the plural is these,
But if one took a kiss, would another be kese?
I speak of a cat. A small one's a kitten,
And yet a small mat, would not be a mitten.
If you think of that in the plural as those,
Can more than one hat be thought of as hose?
Or a basket of kittens grow into some cose?
You mention an ox and also some oxen,
But never call more than one box, some boxen.
You run from a mouse, or a whole nest of mice,
But generally look for houses, not hice.
You gaze on the field and see cows, or kine,
But a row if repeated would never be rine.
I mention a foot, or glance at your feet,
But speak of your boots, and not of your beet.
We talk of a brother, the gospel, of brethren,
But our mothers would hate to be talked of as methren.
The masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But try the effect of she, shis and shim!
It's simple you see, if you start the right way,
And the young should be taught that it's merely child's play.

Caution is a great thing; e. g., a student stating the length of a period as "pretty nearly about a century;" also his saying "I don't know that I know."

Prof. Van Hise (calling the roll)—"Miss Mary Wright."
A Voice (floating in from the stairway)—"Here!" Later, Miss Wright followed the voice through the doorway smiling pleasantly.

Das Kindchen.

This isn't a youthful freshman
A wonderful prodigy—
It's only the small kid brother
I awfully long to see.

ANOTHER CASE OF KIDNAPPING

The Past and The Future

We've longed for and dreamed of the Future,
We've hurried the Present away ;
But now the gate opens to let us pass out,
We stand on a threshold to-day.

Beyond lie the lands we have longed for,
The sunlight of love shining o'er,
But somehow, with heartache and craving
new-born,
We turn toward the homelands once more,

And so, though the Future is calling,
There comes a new pain at the last
To know that the life in the homelands we love,
Has silently moved to—the Past.

The University of Wisconsin

Situation of the University

THE University Grounds extend along the north shore of Lake Mendota more than a mile. In point of beauty the site is unsurpassed, if not unequalled. The campus contains 240 acres, besides an athletic field known as Camp Randall, of 42 acres. On the lower Campus are the Gymnasium and the Historical Library building.

Library and Laboratory Facilities

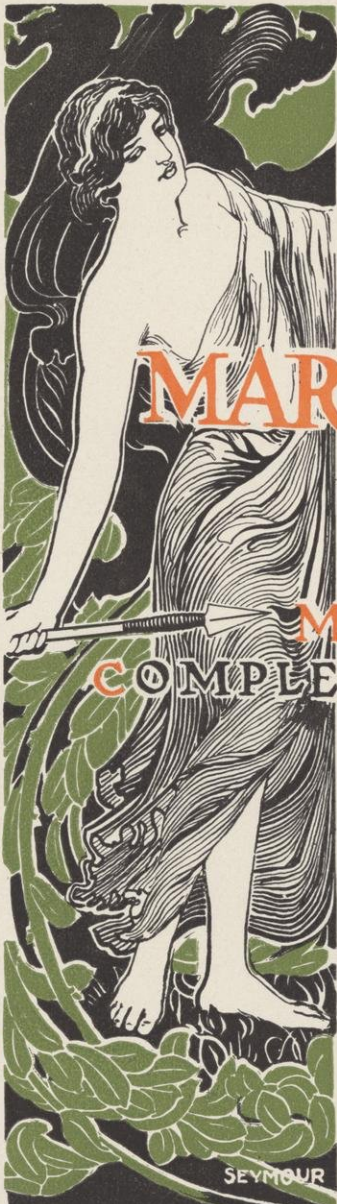

THE completion of the new Historical Library building, which also includes the University Library, affords unsurpassed accommodations for the use of students. The number of volumes contained in the Libraries accessible to students is nearly 250,000. The laboratory facilities of the University are excellent and include well equipped laboratories in chemistry, physics, biology, geology, mineralogy, petrography, psychology, botany, and in engineering, pharmacy, assaying, and agriculture.

Facilities for Physical Training

THE Gymnasium, 200 feet long, 100 feet wide, and three stories high, affords probably the best accommodations to be found in the country. Besides offices, locker-rooms, lecture rooms, shower and tub baths, bowling alleys, and rooms for other special gymnastic work, it contains a swimming tank 80 feet long by 28 feet wide, a running-track of eleven laps to the mile, a ball cage, and a general gymnasium 165 feet long by 96 feet wide.

Conditions of Admission

STUDENTS are admitted either by certificate of graduation from an accredited high school, or upon examination. For detailed information address the Deans of the respective colleges, or W. D. Hiestand, Registrar of the University.

WHY IS THE

Parker Jointless Lucky Curve

Fountain Pen

superior to all others? Because it contains THREE valuable patented improvements that are found in no other pen. They are:

LUCKY CURVE

Feed—insures absolute cleanliness in use of fountain pen.

ANTI-BREAK CAP

Non-breakable and warranted as such.

SPRING LOCK

the most important improvement of all—does away with leaks, joint and easily broken thread.

Showing Feeding Mechanism Removed Ready for Filling

A FEW OF THE THINGS A STUDENT WOULD LIKE FOR HIS ROOM

It isn't a case of awful despair,
It's only a Hall girl drying her hair.

ESTERLY'S HORSE.

Esterly halted his raw-boned steed in front of a Langdon street residence and calling to a boy playing near, said: "Hold him!" "Hold him?" The youth replied: "Say, just lean him up against that tree, I guess that will hold him awhile."

Wisconsin

WISCONSIN, best of 'varsities,
In thy praise, all honor is.
All we can to honor thee,
Do we will, and happy be.

IS there one who doesn't know
Where to college he should go?
Let him come to us and see
Just how happy he will be.

SOMETIMES papers call us names,
When we win too many games,
When we just break up a show,
Then to smash our records go.

CALLED us hoodlums, rowdies, toughs,
And a brutal gang of roughs.
But we bear it all and grin,
We've committed no great sin.

ONLY those with narrow minds
Pay much heed to papers' grinds.
Those who know us best can tell
That we can and do act well.

NOTED in debate are we,
Rowing, too, football, all three,
In these lines our knowledge is
More than other colleges.

SCHOOL or college, what's a name?
After all, they're much the same.
Anyway, Wisconsin's best,
Many years she's stood the test.

IN her work and in her play,
Always high, just as to-day;
Just how high, her records show,
By the places our grad.'s go.

NORTHWEST, southwest, everywhere,
Where the work is, they are there.
Though they're scattered far and near,
Alma mater still is dear.

We Can Suit You to Perfection

Overheard on Langdon, (8 P. M.)

1st Voice: "Say, old man, do me a favor, will you?"

2nd Voice: (who is about to cross the street, pausing): "Sure thing."

1st Voice: "Just ask Dr. Sheldon, will you, to write an excuse for me to-day?"

2nd Voice: "All right."

1st Voice: (hastily): "And say, old man, hold on a minute. Just tell him to make it all the week for gym and military drill."

SPOON-HOLDER!

Miss Mabel Odell's favorite poem:

"Oh, wert thou in the cauld blast
On yonder lea, on yonder lea."

The peace and calm of a quiet room
With the rain and the sleet outside,
An easy chair, a pipe,
and the gloom
Of the world might be defied
The dreams that come, when a fellow sits
And watches the wavering flames,
Should prod the heart,
the poet insists,
With a feeling that's almost pain.
But he's wrong you have no thoughts at all,
You are only pleasantly blue,
You just sit and smoke
as the embers fall
And are glad you've nothing to do.

Our General Catalogue and Buyers' Guide

IS THE most complete issued by any house in the world. It has 17,000 illustrations, 70,000 quotations of prices, and contains nearly 1,200 pages. There's nothing you wear or use but is listed in it; and the prices quoted place you in a position to buy from us, in large or small quantities, at wholesale prices. We do not sell this General Catalogue and Buyers' Guide—we give it away. Every out-of-town caller who visits our store is presented with a copy. It costs 78 cents to print and mail it. We want you to have a copy, and will be pleased to send one to you if you'll send 15 cents to partly pay postage or expressage. It will tell you what you should pay for everything. You will have a two and a half million-dollar stock of goods to select from, and when you learn what we offer goods for, and compare our prices with what you are paying, you will open your eyes in astonishment. We guarantee goods as represented.

If you don't find them so, you can have your money back as soon as you ask it. On request, will tell you just what your goods will cost laid down at your station. Send 15 cents for our General Catalogue and Buyers' Guide. Do so today.

SIX MONTHS IN THE "GYM"

The diatom under the cover-glass,
He flirted his arms as he swam around,
and he winked at me as I watched him pass,
And he laughed aloud without making a sound.

And I heard him saying there to a friend,
And the friend he smiled an amoeboid smile,
"There's the queerest thing up at the other end,
Just squint up through this tube for awhile."

"It's a round black hole, surrounded by blue,
And it winks at me every now and then,
It seems to me—what, aren't you through?
Get out, it's my turn, let me look again."

"Why, that is an eye," was the friend's reply,
And he softly smiled like a Cheshire cat.
"Go on," said the diatom, "I am I,
And I surely don't look like that."

After all, there are two kinds of jokes—a good joke and a professor's joke.

"You should have seen the truck he ate at dinner."
"No wonder he has wheels."
"Wheels?"
"Yes, off the truck."

 But I wasn't too stupid to see after that
 How very becoming she was to the hat.

How members of Prof. Cairns' literature class defined some Scotch words in Burns' poem of "Poor Mailie."

"Tether?" Answer: Tether is the vegetation which grows so profusely upon the Scottish hills.

"An' owre she warsl'd in the ditch?" Answer: Warsl'd means that poor Mailie lay still in the ditch, because a sheep can't move when it is lying on its back. "An' owre" means that she lay in the ditch an hour.

Horlick's Malted Milk

"That's Meat and Drink to Me"

A concentrated food in powder and tablet form for athletes, brain workers, etc. Requiring no addition of milk, and is instantly prepared by simply stirring in hot or cold water.

HORLICK'S MALTED MILK is a combination of pure Wisconsin milk combined with the extract of malted wheat and barley, forming a highly nutritious and easily digested food and is specially adapted to those compelled to study late. A cup taken hot just before retiring invariably insures sound sleep and rest for the brain.

Horlick's Malted Milk Lunch Tablets

A most convenient form of nutrient for carrying in the pocket for use during long lectures examinations or whenever a quick lunch is desired; they are used with great success by leading athletes, and are found invaluable whenever strength, energy and endurance are required.

Sold by all druggists. Vest pocket sample case sent on application to

Necessity

There was a maid whose name was Rose,
Who once went out for a sail,
Her hair it was a golden bronze,
Her face a little pale.

It chanced to storm that very day,
The water filled the boat,
But with her face they bailed it out,
And so they kept afloat.

Scene: Dr. Dowling's freshman class in trigonometry.

Phil Spooner, who for some minutes has been engaged in a vain attempt to straighten out cosines and tangents in his mind, suddenly pipes up, despairingly: "Oh, Dr. Dowling! I can't see these things in my head." To which the Doctor consolingly responds: "Never mind, Mr. Spooner, they probably aren't there."

Ruth Heaton sets her alarm clock and writes out her daily call list.
