

The Magic of John Wilde

May 29, through July 25, 2010 | Mayer Gallery

Madison, Wisconsin, March 22, 2010

The Chazen Museum of Art will present The Magic of John Wilde, an exhibition of the Wisconsin native's magic realist paintings and drawings. The exhibition is taken from the Chazen's exceptional collection of art by John Wilde, ranging from the 1940s to the 1990s. The Magic of John Wilde is on view May 29–July 25, 2010.

Wilde's imaginative dreamscapes reflect artistic traditions from European Renaissance painting to twentieth-century surrealism. His artistic vision was also profoundly influenced by his domestic military service during World War II and a deep respect for nature, inspired by rural Wisconsin. Wilde's exquisite oil painting technique is evident in still lifes, allegorical landscapes, and portraits. Vivid and colorful, his fanciful Edenic landscapes are populated with animals, people, and recurring objects that symbolize themes of nature, love, and death.

Born in Milwaukee, Wilde attended the UW–Madison from 1938 to 1942, where he learned the challenging medium of silverpoint from James Watrous and intensely studied the Old Masters. He majored in art, then was drafted in 1942 and served in the U.S. Army until 1946. Following the war he returned to the UW–Madison for his MA in art and art history, with a thesis on the French surrealist Max Ernst. Wilde taught art at UW–Madison from 1948 to 1982. A dedicated gardener, he lived the last 40 years of his life outside Evansville.
