The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

We had been meditating another attack on the col. for some time, but we couldn't think of any songs, hymns and lyrics to start it off with. The following mushy mouthings of a meagre mind finally occurred to us, and if you say it is not poetry, we reply sweetly, well, what is it? It's got to be something, hasn't it? Its title is:

ALAS!

Freddy met Florence one day in the Fall,
And he catalogued her as a dream;
He admired her eyebrows and relished the taste
Of her elegant complexion cream.

So along in October he asked her to Prom,
And she sweetly consented to go.
If you glance at your calendar you will perceive
That October was some time ago.

Now Freddy by New-Year's commenced to suspect
That his pippin was really a quince,
And Florence was thinking that Freddy perhaps
Was an oil-can instead of a prince.

By April they both were alarmed at the thought
Of seeing each other at all,
And the vision of going together at Prom
Was more bitter than wormwood and gall.

So they finally handed each other the mitt,
And decided to call it a day,
And they'll probably go to the movies—alone
On the night of the fourteenth of May.

(Which the same, if you ask for our candid belief,
Is a heluva Prom-night, we'll say).

One of the chief merits of the above piece of pottery is the entire absence of slang therein. But we don't claim any credit for that—it's just a gift. President Birge has often remarked about it. C. R. Fish told us so with tears in his eyes.

As we sit and write this, the Haresfeet (plural for Haresfoot) are just moving out of the court. We suspect Van Pinkerton will catch cold before the evening is over. Wonder when Red Domino is going to hold its initiation?

Haresfeet has departed, and their place is taken by a gang of serenaders. The Alpha Phis are egging 'em on—the sirens. It would be more to the point if they would seize that horse shoe with the blue ribbon on it, which is displayed in one of the second floor windows, and throw it at 'em.

Speaking of displays in the Alpha Phi windows — what's that you say, Ed? Oh, very well, if you want to be so darn censorious.

OIL FIRM IN OFFER OF FAR EAST JOBS

Senior and graduate men interested in getting positions with the Standard Oil company in the Far East and the Levant are to be given the opportunity of consulting with Dr. A. A. Snowden, Monday, May 24, at the Park hotel.

The Standard Oil company offers positions to unmarried men between the ages of 21 and 28 who can qualify under a definite test for the work. A training class is conducted in New York three times a week for four months, after which time, men who have proved themselves fit and eligible for positions are given them, not under contract but on mutual agreement of three years' occupation, at a salary of $166.66 a month. During the period of trial

All we were going to say was that some people can't pronounce very well. Dean Nardin for example—the word "bathing suit" gives her hysterics. And Bud Follett can't say "dre."

Here is the place where we usually print a gook (as A. Ward used to say). Have you heard that one about W. W. going to heavy—er no, come to think of it, we can't tell you that.

But here's one we're going up and spring in the Social Science club. "I wear no man's collar!" cried the Socialist. "Why don't you wear a clean one of your own?" asked a bystander. There, isn't that a slicker?

If you ever read Baird's Manual, you may have come across some interesting information, which you might call a horse or two on somebody or other. Here it is: Pastmaster of the Post Burleson is a Phi Gam. Horatio Alger, the juvenile novelist, is a Phi U. Willyum J. Bryan is a Delt.

At this point another serenade—on the Theta porch. They are now singing "Keep your eye on the girl you love." I say, you know, old egg, it really isn't being done—this time of night and all that—what?

PERSONALS
Marion Downing sits on the front porch of her State street mansion daily at 1:30.

Cy Phillips took Virginia riding in his Fjord—she sat on the place where the tonneau ought to be.

Dody Seton is doing her studying on the Kappa steps.

Dean Goodnight took luncheon at the Phi Delt bungalow. (Six years ago).

Here's another gook. This should be gotten off some evening on the Lake drive, to produce its best effects. Ask the Daughter of the Moon (slang for best girl) why she is like a waffle? The answer is, "Because you're so waffle cute."

At this season of the year, when the gibbons moon sheds its translucent rays over the atmosphere, and Djer Kiss fills the air, and one's path is beset with pitfalls and with gin (not Gordon), we call to your attention the following little ditty, which is very old stuff:

My boy, beware the baby stare,
For, if it is a bluff
She knows too much, and if it's not
She doesn't know enough.

What has become of this legal baseball game, which was to cost somebody $600?

The thing we miss most in the Libe these days is the "Vie Parisienne."

Well, we could go on in this fascinating way for some time, but the serenaders have quit, and it's 12 bells (and so bon swot. (French for Dean-of-Men).

Tin Cans Take Part of Squallers in Baby-cart Parade

The puzzle: from whence came all those infant-sized push-carts?

The most stupendous and extraordinary collection of baby carriages in captivity was exhibited to an admiring public at the Ku Klux Klan initiation yesterday.

Promptly at noon the procession started from the library steps. In keeping with the formality of the occasion, the neophytes were attired in the radiance of black swallow-tail coats and super-shiny top hats. The tastes of the bourgeoisie and lowbrow public were also considered in the choice of blue shirts and bolsheviki red ties.

Finally, to be quite up to date and follow the season (said season being, it seems, summer), the entire gathering were charmingly clad in white trousers and white shoes. The result was really remarkable, and most pleasing to spectators.

All State street was treated to this interesting spectacle. Babies being sadly lacking, the effect was camouflaged by strings of tin cans attached to the carriages, which tinkled on the street very musically.

The initiates are Robert McDonald, George Geiger, William Sale, Dexter Brown, William Collins, David Mahoney, Arthur Kinnan, Dale Merrick, Guy Sundt, Carl F. Ceaser, Stephen Falletti, Bertram Ellis, Cecil Brodt, Joseph Holbrook, Fred Smith, Thomas Coxon and Reuben Chadbourne.

IN WHICH BOY-HERO RESCUES CO-ED HAT

This is the brief tale of beautiful co-ed, a runaway horse, and a straw hat.

A young co-ed astride a bay steed came dashing down Langdon street last evening. Frantically clutching the reins she called for help, and "Joe" Duff, standing on the P. A. D. porch, seeing her plight rushed forth to the rescue. But alas, he was too late and after running as far as the library, where he last saw the girl as she rounded the corner, he came back out of breath but he carried a straw hat.

Duff is jealously guarding his treasure until its owner calls up the P. A. D. house.

LECTURES ON NEW ADVANCES IN CHEMISTRY

Series of Three Talks by Oberlin Expert to Start

"Of all the marvelous developments made in chemistry during the past decade none has surpassed in interest or real value the development of colloid-chemistry — that branch of chemistry which deals with the borderland between true solutions and suspensions of coarse materials," said Prof. J. H. Mathews, director of the course in chemistry, in speaking of the series of lectures to be given by Prof. Harry N. Holmes, head of the chemistry department at Oberlin college, in the Chemistry auditorium tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

"Many technical processes, such as the tanning of leather and the dyeing of fabrics have for the first time been adequately explained and by means of this new branch of an old science, many new technical processes are being developed. Processes which formerly took weeks and even months to accomplish now take but a few days and oftentimes result in a far better product than was formerly obtained.

"In geology and mineralogy nature has afforded many applications of colloid chemistry and many natural processes which were formerly obscure are now understood as a result of the study of colloid chemistry.

"The chemistry of the living organism is almost wholly the chemistry of colloid material and the modern research worker in the biological sciences must be informed on this recent phase of chemical development, if he is to make any real progress.

"The department of chemistry has given a course of lectures on the subject for a number of years — one of the few universities offering such courses — and fundamental research is being carried on along these lines."

TENNIS PLAYERS WHO RISE EARLY WAKE SLEEPERS

Sterling Court Residents Up in Arms Because of Disturbance

Playing tennis at 5 a. m. on the three courts at the corner of Park street and University avenue again is causing annoyance, those who live near these courts complain.

Nearby residents find it impossible, they claim, to get any sleep after the tennis enthusiasts begin playing and the playing begins each morning as soon as the sun begins to show itself. The noise made by the players seems to disturb the slumbers of all living within a radius of a half block, and in this district there are hundreds.

When a person, who seems to have just dropped asleep, is awakened by some one just outside his bed room window yelling "ready, play," he is not in the most congenial frame of mind. When he keeps on hearing these same words interspersed with shouting of "outside," "30-40," "deuce," and "love all," he gets up using stronger words than deuce, and anyone who may see him knows that he does not love all.

Those who live almost on top of the courts have threatened to drop bricks on the heads of the few students, who continue to disregard the request to keep off the courts until 7 a. m., and take great delight in making more than the usual amount of noise.

The untimely playing on the courts began two weeks ago, and continues. In years past there have been controversies about this question which involved the city and university authorities and which resulted in rulings which are not posted or being lived up to this spring.

PROF. HENDERSON, MICHIGAN, SPEAKS TO BADGER CLUB

Prof. William D. Henderson, head of the Extension division of the University of Michigan, will speak on "Science and the Bible" at the Badger club meeting at 8 o'clock tonight.

Professor Henderson is one of the most popular speakers in the state of Michigan, though not so well known in Wisconsin. His lecture tends to disprove atheism by facts and a science in connection with the Bible.

Dean and Mrs. Louis E. Reber will act as hostess at the Badger club. Dean Reber is director of the University of Wisconsin Extension division.

Music for the evening has been taken charge of by Prof. P. W. Dykema's class in the School of Music. Corinne Langraf will lead the community singing. She has been chosen regular leader. In addition to the singing there will be special music.

The committee for next year will be announced in the meeting. Doris G. Lucas, junior in the College of Letters and Science, has been chosen women's chairman of the Badger club for next year. She will announce committees tonight.

Refreshments will be served after the lecture.

SCORE ANOTHER FOR AMERICA

THE Extension Division is to be congratulated on its latest contribution to the cause of Americanism. Under its direction a civic ritual, embodying the highest principles and ideals for which America stands, has been drawn up to be used as a ceremony in welcoming new citizens into citizenship.

This ceremony is intended to be used not only for receiving aliens into citizenship but also for honoring the youth of the nation upon attaining the age of 21.

By accomplishing this task the Extension Division has performed a great service to the university, the state, and the nation. The action comes at a time when men and women have apparently shut their eyes to the dignity and glory of American citizenship. In the wake of the reaction from the noble and passionate patriotism of war days has come a spirit of indifference, almost cynicism, toward those things which have made our nation revered in the past.

This virus seems to have affected even the student body at Wisconsin, and we have the spectacle of men neglecting to uncover to our national colors—thoughtlessly, no doubt, but certainly illustrating the widespread collapse of fervent devotion to our country and its institutions.

Surely, the pernicious effects of such lethargy should be patent to every university man and woman. Already the Extension Division has responded to the challenge and it is up to the student body to swing into line. A public celebration to welcome new citizens will have a profound effect in impressing upon their minds the deep meaning of American citizenship—its obligations, its privileges, and its real worth.

Why not try it out right here in the university? A revival of sincere and reasonable patriotism in our midst should spread over the entire state.

The message should be carried home by every student this summer. He should put the matter up to the mayor, the school superintendent, and various civic organizations. The Extension Division will back him up and furnish him with the material necessary for putting the feat across.

Two thousand years ago the proudest boast of a man was: "Civis Romanus sum,"—"I am a Roman citizen."

Have we not, as a nation, more to be proud of than Rome? Down in our hearts we believe we have. Then let us translate our faith into works. Get behind the Extension Division and help score another victory for Wisconsin and the nation.

THE TENNIS-HOUND

TIME was when the tea-hound was too prevalent at Wisconsin.

Now a new figure occupies the stage. The tea hound is crowded out of the spot-light by a red-blooded person, with unpressed, comfortable clothes, red, sweat-covered face and disarranged hair.

He is the tennis-hound.

The class of tennis-hounds is large and each day the enrollment swells. The average tennis-hound is above criticism, but those who belong to the pedigreed class, are such devotees to the racket and canvass-covered ball that they would spend all their spare time on the courts.

The average tennis-hound is rather envied and admired by all. When he dresses up in white trousers, and a low necked shirt, and his addition to the tennis habit is such that he spends only an hour or two of the afternoon at the game, everything possible should be done to give him this amount of invigorating exercise. But the insufficient number of courts and the usurping of these courts by those who attempt to chase the ball all day long is forcing him to dress up in tennis togs, only to sit up against a back-stop to watch pedigreed tennis-hounds demonstrate their ability.

A few freshman tennis hounds who know nothing concerning the regulations about playing on the courts at the corner of Park and University, are getting themselves thoroughly disliked by playing there before 7 a. m. Like all other hounds, they made too much noise at the wrong time, and unnecessarily disturbed persons uninterested in their pursuits.

The increased enrollment this year and the unprecedented enthusiasm for the game of tennis makes a larger number of courts and posting of rulings in regard to existing courts a crying need. Playing on courts surrounded by sleeping quarters should be absolutely forbidden. Proper courts should be provided for the early birds, if enough of this kind do not already exist.

Each court should be provided with a daily card upon which any student, by signing up the day before, could reserve the court for the hour he expected to play.

COMMUNICATIONS

CONCERNING TRADITIONS

To the Editor of The Cardinal:

Whenever the perennial objectors to our traditions attack these long-established rules, we are too prone to dismiss their objections as being only the railings of disgruntled freshmen. There is also a tendency to become too disparaging or else too commendatory. The opinions voiced upon either side of the issue are likely to be too one-sided, like an evangelical tract. The root of the trouble lies in the fact that the freshmen have not experienced that which constitutes the main reason why the upper classmen advise traditions, and neither can the upper classmen see the matter from the viewpoint of the freshmen.

The main reason for traditions is to discipline those callow and inexperienced youths in the freshman class who would, to use a slang expression which aptly expresses the idea, become "cocky". The upper classmen assume that their seniority as regards years spent in college, naturally entitles them to have a voice in the matter. However, this overlooks the fact that a "cocky" freshman often becomes a doubly "cocky" sophomore. Unfortunately it often requires more than traditions to change an individual's innate nature. Another complication is added by the fact that by becoming a sophomore, a former freshman experiences a change of viewpoint, and things which he formerly considered arrant nonsense suddenly become very wise and judicious measures, toward which time has made him very tolerant. Thus, we sometimes find ourselves entertaining even cordial memories toward people who may have treated us very badly when we were children.

The theory of control by right of seniority has been further undermined by the fact that in recent years the freshmen are, in many cases not "cocky" or callow, and are often older in years and in experience than the upper classmen who would control them. The exemption of overseas men from the tradition prescribing the wearing of the green cap, illustrates this very clearly. Thus, it can be readily seen that a rigorous enforcement of all traditions would, in many cases, result in numerous instances of injustice to individuals.

This is the formidable problem which confronts us. It is, in fact, a very complex problem, since it involves such serious matters as freedom of conscience and the inviolability of the equality of rights.

The question of whether upper classmen have the moral right to chastise freshmen by lake duckings or placarding, is as complex and delicate as the question of whether parents have the moral right to beat their children if they do not behave. In either case we cannot state a general rule; the decision rests entirely upon a consideration of each individual case. Obviously moderation and respect for the complexity of the problem with which we are dealing, is the wisest course to pursue. Progress is being made slowly, but if discretion is used I do not see why we cannot entirely remove this inharmonious and discordant influence which is often the one blemish upon an otherwise enjoyable college course.

What the College Editors Say

OVERALLS

Washington has not succumbed to the overall craze, fortunately. Such a display of horse sense in the midst of so many mono- and poly maniacs should give encouragement to persons who profess no faith in a college education.

Although there are undoubtedly wearers of the denim who are sincere in their attempt to beat the h. c. of 1., the overall movement in its entirety is little more than a fad. Like most fads, it is ephemeral and costly. Buying overalls, wearing them for a week or so, and discarding them, constitute a doubtful economy.

There is a very real evil connected with the craze, moreover. This is shown by a recent report that overalls had jumped from $2.50 to $6.50, on account of the unprecedented demand. An overall manufacturer has condemned the movement in no uncertain terms as commercially dangerous, saying that it would have an opposite effect from the one desired. When the man who needs overalls to work in cannot obtain them because his silk-shirted, cordovan-shod, $15 hatted brother must wear them to be in style, something is wrong.

Wearing old clothes instead of purchasing new is the remedy for the situation, not wholesale buying of overalls. Students will be accomplishing something worth noticing if they can divert the craze to a saner channel. By bearing with last year's suit and the before-the-war overcoat they can do much good—by buying up the denim market, much harm.—University of Washington Daily.

Each Student Gets an Average of Ten Specials a Year

Did you know that five mail carriers are employed daily just to distribute letters that bear the little blue stamp, "Special Delivery," to expectant or non-expectant Madisonians? And that these carriers all have automobiles or motorcycles of their own, which run all day from early in the morning till midnight? They do, and they don't go slowly either.

Last year 82,000 specials, including parcels post and flowers, were received through the Madison post office. A large proportion of these specials, according to the postmaster, were for the students, and there are more received this year altogether, so the University must have a tidy little quota of friends who "just can't wait to tell her."

Say three-quarters of the amount received last year goes to the students this year—61,000 letters in a year for about 6,000 students. Ten letters apiece! Of course those who receive their regular Sunday Special (which generally comes on Saturday anyway) lower the quota of the others who don't. But still you are getting cheated if you don't get at least five or six in a year.

THRILLS ABOUND IN ACTS SIGNED FOR BIG CIRCUS

Rehearsals yesterday afternoon gave promise that the wild and wooly West in all its attraction will be present in Madison with the advent of the varsity circus May 22.

Horseback riding stunts will challenge the ghost of Buffalo Bill himself and will be a feature alone worth the price of admission, according to Vincent O'Shea, who is in charge of the event. Bareback riders who can do actual circus stunts have recently been found by the committee and have been induced to take part. They will perform hair-raising tricks that will put the watcher's hearts in their mouths.

A Chinese broad-sword fight and a game of shuttlecock will show that the Orientals can take part in a wild west show with real Wisconsin pep.

Mail order sale of tickets will open Monday morning. Orders should be sent to the circus committee at the gymnasium.

JUDGE WINSLOW IS 29 YEARS ON SUPREME BENCH

Chief Justice John Bradford Winslow of the Wisconsin supreme court celebrated his 29th anniversary of service with that judicial body, Friday.

He was born at Nunda, N. Y., Oct. 4, 1851, and in 1855 came west with his parents. He graduated from the law school of the university here in 1875. In 1904 the university conferred the degree of LL. D. on him and Lawrence college tendered him the same degree in 1912.

Judge Winslow was elected to the circuit court bench, serving from 1884 until his appointment as an associate justice of the supreme court in 1891. He became chief justice by right of his seniority upon the death of Chief Justice Cassoday, Dec. 30, 1907.

Justice Winslow is the author of a history of the supreme court of Wisconsin from 1848 to 1880, entitled "The Story of a Great Court," and has served as president of both the state bar association and the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology.

normal geological formations, and the historical associations which permeate them all. Articles written by students take up individual spots, giving the legendary and historical background for the photographs which accompany them.

A picture of the Falls of the Great Spirit, the highest waterfall in the state, situated in the region which has just become Pattison State park, is accompanied by an article by Gilbert Marshall, telling of the battles of the Indians and the activities of the fur traders in this region. The cuts of the Dalles of the Wisconsin are explained by D. R. Lacey. Roy Hull tells of the "Enchanted Isles of Wisconsin," the Apostle Isles, which have such a background of history and legend behind them. The various state parks are described in other articles.

The club has just returned from a seven day trip having given concerts at Juneau, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Green Bay, Kohler, Milwaukee, and Racine. Capacity houses greeted the club at every concert and the club was asked for a return engagement at every place.

The concert Thursday night will be the first of the Prom events. Owing to the increased capacity of the Madison high school, there are still a number of good seats left. Prices for the seats are: First 15 rows on the main floor $1.65, and the remainder of the main floor $1.10; first three rows in balcony $1.10; remainder of balcony 83 cents. Mother's Day to be Celebrated Here

Madison churches, Catholic and Protestant, will celebrate mothers' day Sunday. Mention of it will be made in every pulpit, and red carnations for living mothers and white ones honoring those who have died, will be generally worn.

Mothers' day was conceived in the early teens when Ann Jarvis, a resident of Philadelphia, was asked to make arrangements for a celebration in a small town in Virginia in honor of her mother who had been a moving spirit in that community. Miss Jarvis thought that every mother was due the same honor, and as a result of her efforts, congress in 1914, set aside the second Sunday in May of each year for honoring mothers, both living and dead.

Madison florists have an unusually good number of red and white carnations on hand.

50 MOTHERS ARE ENTERTAINED AT PARTY AT CHAD

The pageant last night was only one of the entertainments which the women of Chadbourne hall are offering the 50 mothers who are guests at the hall this week-end.

Saturday morning the mothers were taken through the kitchens of the university commons, to see household economy carried out on a large scale. The afternoon was spent in shopping, sight-seeing or picnicking, and in the evening Chadbourne women and their mothers formed a theater party to see "Cheating Cheaters."

This morning Dean Nardin will speak at chapel, and Avis Labisky, Ruth Beebe, and Bertha Blumer will furnish the musical program.

This afternoon Chadbourne women will be hostesses at a tea. Miss Lucy Newton, mistress of Chadbourne hall, will preside at the tea table, and the entertainment will be furnished by Avis Labisky, Lillian Hanan and Jane Salisbury.

Chadbourne has collected an interesting museum of pictures, letters, books, and other things pertaining to the early history of the hall.

BOY SCOUT CAMP SITE IS CHOSEN

Green Lake Ideal for Camp
Says Executive, R. A.
Overholser

An ideal spot adjacent to Green Lake, about 70 miles northeast of Madison, has been chosen for the Boy Scout camp and the equipping and management are now in the hands of the camp committee of which T. R. Hefty is chairman, according to R. A. Overholser, scout executive.

Scoutmasters are reporting that the scouts are looking forward with intense interest to the big event of the year.

The question of raising the money to finance the camp is one of the big problems which faces the committee. The executive council has forbidden any general campaign of funds for the purpose, and urges that the program be made as inexpensive as possible. A conservative estimate places the cost at about $1,000.

The camp will probably be opened about July 1 and continue for two weeks.

The site, according to Mr. Overholser, is the best that can be found in this section of the country. It has two good lakes, several large bluffs, excellent drinking water and good fishing.

Members of Lower Classes Sought for Parts in
"The Jesters"

Tryouts for the senior class play will be opened to all members of the university Monday afternoon at 4:30 in Lathrop parlors.

"The Jesters," the production for this year, promises to be one of the best and most elaborate productions ever staged by any graduating class.

There is an unusually large cast which offers opportunity for anyone who has dramatic ability of any kind. The plot of the play centers around the Baron of Maupres, who owns a castle in which he secludes his beautiful daughter Solange. The jesters are brought to the castle to furnish entertainment for her. Two lovers, disguised as jesters, seek to gain entrance into the castle in order to see Solange.

Copies of the play may be secured at the library and everyone is urged to read them, before trying out. All those who are interested in dramatics are asked to be on hand Monday afternoon whether prepared or not, in order that work on the play may begin as soon as possible.
