The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Two Irishmen

They say that one time there were two Irishmen who crossed the ocean and when they arrived here in the President's land (the United States), they travelled around looking for land. Finally they met up with a great farmer with a load of pumpkins. They stopped him and said, "What is that load you are carrying?"

The farmer said, "Those are eggs."

These two Irishmen were amazed at how big they were and they bought one for themselves and paid $500. Then they went on. There was a hill where they were going and when they got to the top, he dropped the egg and it rolled and went down the hill. So they chased it and it hit into a pile of brush and broke up. To their surprise a rabbit ran out and they chased it but they were unable to catch him. They thought it was a donkey that ran off.

So then these two Irishmen went looking for the farmer and when they found him again right away they bought another egg and again they paid $500. Again they were travelling and at last the egg became rotten. They were still looking for land and finally found a nice field and bought it for themselves. They didn't realize that swamp grass was growing there. They thought it was timothy hay.
