DELEGATES PICK PRIZE PAPERS IN C. I. P. A. MEET

New Method of Judging Increases Desire to Improve, Says Johnson

Publications which were accorded first place in the annual contest held in connection with the fourth annual convention of the Central Interscholastic Press association were decided upon by representatives of each school at a business session at the biology building yesterday.

The Red and White of Lake View high school, Chicago, and The Spy, Kenosha, tied for first honors in the magazine group. The South Side Times of Fort Wayne, Ind., was voted the best high school newspaper and The Roll Call of Culver, Ind., was declared the winning annual.

Give Honor Ratings

No awards of winners or of first, second or third places were made by the contest judges. Under a new form of contest introduced this year, the judges gave "honor ratings" to the best publications entered, awarding them first, second or third class ratings, but not selecting the best within these ratings. Many papers, of course, received no rating. This was thought by the judges to be a fairer method of recognizing merit without encouraging unhealthy competition.

"We believe that by this method publications will be given a bigger incentive to improve in order that they may be promoted to a higher class rating next time and more publications will be given consideration than under the old system," Prof. E. M. Johnson, director of the convention, said in explaining the basis of classification.

Based on Size

In this rating the publications were divided into six large divisions on the basis of the size of the schools concerned. Within these divisions, each type of publication was classified according to first, second and third class ratings.

An All-American group of outstanding publications was selected from each of the six divisions. These were the leaders among the publications of "first class rating," and included 14 newspapers, 9 magazines, and 14 annuals.

Many Receive Honors

The newspapers which received the All-American rating were the following: (figures indicate the number of students enrolled in the school) Central High News, Minneapolis, 3,000; Messenger, Wichita, Kas.; Manualite, Manual High

Gov. Blaine to Preside Over Clash Between Athenae and Hesperia

The fifty third annual joint debate will be held next Friday evening in Music hall. As has been the custom for many years, the governor of the state has presided, and Governor John J. Blaine will act as chairman. Prof. A. T. Weaver of the speech department will be the judge.

This debate, the forensic classic of the season, will be contested between Hesperia and Athenae Literary societies.

The subject for the argument this year is "Resolved, That the United States should become a member of the League of Nations."

The affirmative team of Hesperia consists of Edmund Hamlin '26, first speaker; Harold Cranefield '25, second speaker, and George J. Fiedler '25, closer of the main speeches. The negative team, representing Athenae, is composed of Edgar Smith '24, Eugene P. Meyer L 3 and Henry Blake L 2, closer.

Beg Pardon

No credit line was given to the cut of the C. I. P. A. delegates which appeared in yesterday's issue of The Cardinal. The cut should have been credited to the Photo-Art.

A statement appearing in The Cardinal yesterday regarding the name of the Southern club's president was incorrect. It should have been Bobie Nichols '25, Waco, Tex.

Droll Irish Wits to Sparkle in "Mixed Marriage" Play

"Naw, A don't want a wee walk. A'm alwis sent out fur a walk whin there's a bit o'bother. A'm a man the same as he is."

Calvin Oakford '24 who as Tom Rainey in "Mixed Marriage" will appear at the Parkway theater at 8 o'clock Wednesday proves by the statement that boys all over the world have the same problems in their relations with their elders.

And yet in spite of the attempt of adults to keep the family problems from the youngsters, it is very often these youngsters who settle the difficulties and play a very important part in straightening out matters.

"Mixed Marriage" is an Irish dialect play which the Wisconsin Players selected for their fall production because of the success it had on Broadway two years ago and because of the dramatic opportunities in the play.

Nebraska carried off first place in the stock judging contest.

BOARD ADJOURNS, NO FUNDS VOTED

Special Body to Study Normal School and University Requests

Without making an appropriation of $500,000 to relieve emergency needs of state institutions, the state emergency board adjourned for the fourth time without having voted on the appropriation.

In a statement given out at the close of the meeting Governor Blaine said that the board was continuing its "detailed study" of the requests until next Monday.

An opinion by Attorney General Herman L. Ekern clearing the way for action on the measure was given sometime ago. It is thought that Ekern's opinion brought Zimmerman and Blaine in agreement on the measure and that an analysis of the requests of the normal schools and the university is actually holding up the appropriation.

WEEKS SCHOLARSHIP IS DONATED IN WILL

A new scholarship has been established at Wisconsin from a fund of $5,000 bequeathed by the will of Martha Gunhild Weeks, a resident of Stevens Point, to the university. The income from this fund will be used each year to assist a woman student in the course in chemistry who is recommended by the faculty. The scholarship is to be named after its donor.

ILLINI DROP 1924 BADGER GAME; GERBER ELIGIBLE

Gerber is Reinstated By Ruling at Conference Faculty Meeting

Irv Gerber will play football for Wisconsin again next year, according to a ruling of the conference faculty meeting at Chicago yesterday. As a result of the ruling, the Badger football stock for 1924 took a sudden sail skyward.

Gerber was protested on grounds of professionalism on the eve of the Illinois tilt last November and remained out of competition for the remainder of the season.

Is Punished

The resolution, unanimously adopted by the faculty committee at their meeting yesterday is:

"Resolved, that the disqualification of E. C. Gerber of Wisconsin was technically correct. That in the opinion of the conference he has been sufficiently punished for his infraction of the rule and that he be and is hereby reinstated."

Refuses Pro Offers

The reinstatement does not come as a surprise on the Wisconsin campus, for it has been felt for some time that the conference committee would be lenient with the Badger tackle.

Gerber has received various offers from professional teams throughout the country to play ball with them this fall but he has steadfastly refused, saying that football or any other sport held no charm for him if it were played as a business proposition. His abstinence from the professional game has saved his career as far as amateur sports are concerned.

Prof. J. B. Kremers of the engineering faculty reported that the steel in the Saxe theater at Janesville, which recently collapsed killing one workman and injuring three others, was of normal strength. Professor Kremers examined the steel beams used in the construction.

Wisconsin Officials Dicker For Home Games; Sign Gophers, Maroons, Michigan

The Illinois and Badger football teams will not meet in battle next year.

That is the report which has come back from Chicago where Western conference officials have been meeting for the past two days to form schedules for next year's athletic schedules.

Hard Games Signed

The probable reason for the change lies in the desire of the Illini to meet Michigan, and their inability to compete with the Wolverines as well as the Badgers.

Games have already been scheduled with Michigan, Minnesota and Chicago. The Wolverine tilt will be held October 25, that with Minnesota November 15 and the Chicago game will be November 22. All three of these games, the fastest on the Badger schedule, will be held away from home.

Iowa May Come

Wisconsin officials were still dickering late last night with other teams to fill the date left open by the inability of Illinois to meet the Badgers. Coach Jack Ryan last night would not say definitely what teams are being considered.

It is generally supposed that an attempt will be made to bring either Ohio State or Iowa here for the game. Either team would fill the gap in excellent fashion for they consistently product teams which are well up in conference standing.

More Production Men to Be Tried Out By Haresfoot

The first call for production men for this year's Haresfoot show was made yesterday by officials of the club. Any men in school above the freshmen class and who have the proper scholastic grade are eligible for work in this line.

The first meeting of those men desirous of trying out will be held for registration purposes between 4 and 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, according to Porter F. Butts '24, president of the club.

"Every man in school who is interested in Haresfoot should apply at the Haresfoot loft, third floor of the Union building, tomorrow afternoon," Walter A. Frautschi '24, manager said last night.

GLEE CLUB OUT TO WIN HONORS

Varsity Organization Works
On Prize Song For Meet

The University of Wisconsin has excellent chances of winning the intercollegiate men's glee club concert again this year, according to Robert Nethercut, president of the organization.

"The prize song which the committee in charge of the contest has selected for us to sing has been sent to us, and we are working hard on it already as it counts the most in the contest."

Glee clubs from 13 middle western colleges and universities will compete in the annual intercollegiate glee club concert at Chicago February 18. Twenty-four men are eligible to sing in each club at the concert, which will be held in Orchestra hall.

Each club will sing three numbers, a light song, a college song and a prize song. Each song will be graded by three judges and the club receiving the highest number of points will be considered the winner, and will have an opportunity to go to New York and compete in the contest to be held in the east.

The Mozart club will hold a regular rehearsal Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Presbyterian church.

BADGER SALES GO FAST IN CAMPAIGN

Wisconsin Leads Illinois In Subscriptions For Contest Cup

Between 2600 and 2700 Badger sales have been reported to Willis G. Sullivan '25, yesterday, with more than 50 workers still to report. An effort was made to have every solicitor turn in his book and report by Saturday night.

"On the percentage basis we are ahead of the Illio in subscriptions taken so far," Sullivan said.

"The contest for the cup will not close until next spring when Illinois will run another sales campaign. We are not planning a spring sale."

Tentative plans for a follow-up sale at increased prices have been made, but until complete reports on the number of subscriptions taken so far are turned in nothing definite will be done.

Wire ServiceDEBATE ON DATE
DIMS CHANCE FOR
NOTRE DAME TILTOnly Chance For Game With Catholics Rests on Schedule

A question of dates is the only thing which is keeping the final arrangements for a Wisconsin-Notre Dame football game next year from being completed, according to word received from Chicago last night.

T. E. Jones, director of athletics for Wisconsin, met with Knute Rockne yesterday. "I offered Jones a date in November," Rockne said in speaking of the possibility of a game. Prof. Jones could only offer me a date in October, which I could not accept, and so the matter is still in doubt."

Depends on Schedule

If Wisconsin is left with an open date in November, suitable for a game between the two institutions, a tilt will in all probability be arranged. The final Conference schedule for Wisconsin will be drawn up shortly, but until then it will not be known whether the Badgers will have an open date.

The game between Notre Dame and Wisconsin would arouse great interest in the middle west, for the prowess of the Catholic school has drawn the interest of the entire football world during the past few years.

Offset Schedule Loss

Should the two teams meet, a game will result which would rival in interest any Big Ten contest and would serve in a measure to offset the loss of Illinois from the Wisconsin schedule.

Notre Dame and Wisconsin have met in track meets occasionally during the past few years, but they have not competed in other sports.

The money subscribed will be used exclusively for the development of missionary work both in American in charge of the campaign in Madison. Others members of the executive committee are the Rev. Blakeman, Rev. J. W. Irish, Rev. A. N. Chapman, and G. W. Walters.

TAFT AND BELOW
ON CONFERENCE
MYTHICAL SQUAD

Walter Eckersall's selections for a 1923 all conference eleven includes two Wisconsin stars.

Merrill Taft was given fullback position over John Thomas and Bill Zorn of Chicago because of his triple threat ability, a quality that neither of his two closest contestants possessed. His line smashing and off tackle plays in the Michigan and Chicago games gave him the right to a berth as the best fullback in the conference.

Marty Below rated first rank as by far the best man for this position on the left side of the line. Below won over a large field of contenders because of his wonderful ability on defensive work.

Bieberstein and Harris gained recognition on the second honorary eleven, winning the guard and right half positions.

Eckersall commented on the strength of this year's star eleven, saying that it made up the strongest contingent picked for all conference honors since 1906.

RIFLE TEAM TO ENTER RACE FOR
HEARST TROPHYStrongest Teams in Country to Compete For Cup

Announcement that the rifle team would enter the national competition for the William Randolph Hearst trophy was made yesterday by Sergeant R. E. Shire, coach of the Wisconsin team. The Hearst trophy will be a large silver cup and will be awarded to the rifle team making the highest score of any senior R. O. T. C. unit in the United States.

A total of 51 teams was entered from 36 universities and colleges within two weeks after the official forms were issued.

Men to Enter

Besides the team trophy, each member of the winning team will receive a gold medal at a formal presentation to be held in Chicago.

Seven men will be entered in the match, and the five highest scores will be counted. Wisconsin will enter the same team which defeated Northwestern university last week. The names of the first five men are as follows:

5 Rifles Chosen

W. A. Rorison '25, captain; G. H. Ross '26, L. P. Drake '26, A. Paroni '24 and H. C. Hull '26. Final selections of the two alternates have not yet been made, but C. J. Randall '24 and C. J. Ludwig '26 are reported to be holding the lead over other competitors.

"Wisconsin has a good chance to win the Hearst trophy," said Coach Shire yesterday. "We have the best five-man team in the Sixth Corps area at the present time, having defeated Ripon college and Northwestern university by big margins in shoulder-to-shoulder matches this year."

ZERO SCORE ENDS
HOT FRATERNITY
GRIDIRON BATTLE

When Greek meets Greek you would be surprised what good football they can play. The Phi Deltas and the Sig Chis battled four scoreless periods to a tie yesterday afternoon at Camp Randall.

The big surprise was the good football shown by both teams. The field was a sea of mud and fast foot work was impossible.

Ike Skelly and Mike Stone starred for the Sigs, and Len Walsh and Ericson were the best the Phi Deltas had to offer. Freddie Johns and Sid Eagleberger handled the officiating in real Big Ten style.

Practice

Wisconsin is to have a co-ed rifle team. Following the example of Northwestern university, Drexel Institute of Philadelphia, and other universities, Wisconsin co-eds are fast learning the art of sharpshooting.

Three sections of 16 women each have already organized for instruction in rifle practice. The sections will meet twice a week under the supervision of Major Lampert and Sergeant Shire of the Military department.

Preliminary instructions in sighting and nomenclature of the rifles have been given this week in Lathrop hall where the range is located.

The plan was originally suggested by Miss Trilling of the Physical Education department and met with the approval of Dean Nardin and Major Brunzell.

SIZE OF SQUAD IS BLAMED FOR
FROSH DRIBBLINGScore Did Not Give Real Indication of Freshman
Strength

The 49-0 defeat that Coach Lewis' freshmen suffered at the hands of the regulars last night is by no means the complete story of their strength. For, despite the long score, the frosh made a credible showing, when the length of time the first year squad has been drilling on team work is taken into consideration.

Divide Squad

The squad, assuming the unmanageable proportions of thirty players has of necessity been broken up into three divisions of ten men apiece. Each of these groups has had one day's practice a week only on fundamentals. This fact accounts greatly for some of the rough spots in yesterday's scrimmage.

Even though there was no attempt at organized team work, offensively or defensively, many men showed capabilities of becoming future Cardinal wearers of merit. Brooks, a rangy southern lad, who worked in the center position showed up exceptionally well. He handled the ball nicely, was consistent in following it, and uncovered talent for dropping in free throws.

Martell, all state forward from Two Rivers, played a fast game at his position, and was responsible for the yearlings lone two point tally.

Dopp Stiffens Defense

Dopp, who played on last year's Wisconsin high all-state champions was put in at guard soon after the scrimmage commenced, and with his appearance in that position the frosh defence stiffened considerably. It is likely that in the next practice game he will play with Otis, another Wisconsin High star as a running mate.

The next open practice game is scheduled to be played Tuesday afternoon in the gym. The freshman line up will probably be Brooks at center, with Martell and Harget at either forward, and Dopp, or Walsh and Otis at guard.

Comb U. W. for Former Members Of Boy Scouts

A census of former Boy Scouts at the university is being taken by the boys' work division of the university Y. M. C. A. in cooperation with Ray Overholzer, local scout executive, with a view to forming an older scouts' club. The club will be organized to assist in scout work when called upon.

And Citizens' Courtesy

time and effort spent in getting out a high school publication was explained by Dr. W. G. Bleyer, director of the Course in Journalism, at the closing convocation.

State secretaries for the Scholastic Editor, the official publications of the Central Interscholastic Press association, were appointed at the business session. It was decided that next year a group of professional journalists will be appointed by the directors to decide on the three best publications of each type.

Hold Discussions

The morning session was devoted to round table discussions and individual conferences with each of the delegates. Experts along different lines helped the high school journalists to iron out difficulties and suggested ways in which they might improve their publications.

Election of student officers for the association was indefinitely postponed, and an attempt to change the name of the organization to National Interscholastic Press association was defeated.

These are busy years and there is no rest for the man or body that wishes to keep ahead. Not so many years ago it was that a job completed meant a respite of some sort before tackling another. But today, even in the misnomered "sedate" life of college, one thing follows another with tremendous rapidity and force.

Thus Wisconsin today gives a last hoarse cry on the stadium and watches the last long punt or tackle of the season; but tomorrow, before the sore throats have had a chance to heal, it looks immediately toward a most successful season in basketball.

At the beginning of this school year, the school admittedly lacked the necessary degree of spirit and enthusiasm. Then something happened after the Homecoming game and the school woke up. It realized it had pep; it realized it had a team; it realized it had a coach—it gave living demonstration to its realizations.

There was a feeling in the very air itself. Two days before the Michigan game there was depression; the day before there was an unconquerable spirit of power. The very air was surcharged with confidence so that even the team felt it, and there could be no doubt as to the fight to ensue.

Wisconsin's problem now is to maintain this enthusiasm. Of course there will be no trouble in filling the gym for the seating capacity is far too small now for the demand.

There is much that can be done outside, however, which will indicate that a belief in the school and a proper spirit are present. Optimistic talk, interest itself, communications, demonstrations, even window painting—all are indications of a virile student confidence and pep—the kind of support that wins games.

Friday's basket ball game with the freshmen demonstrated the Varsity's strength. Rather than five men on the team let's make it eight thousand this season.

PROM'S PROGRESS

Day by day the date of the 1925 prom comes nearer and nearer. Although the committees for the affair have not yet been announced, there is much activity evident and plans are well under way.

Already many far sighted individuals have obtained dates for the affair. Many women will use the Christmas vacation advantageously to obtain a new "formal" with the hope of out-rivalling all rivals. "Give Her a Prom Date for Christmas" appears to be the slogan again for this year.

But in the midst of this activity and while things are still in the embryo it will be well for all students and all committee men to remember that Prom is for all—above everything else a democratic affair.

Every effort should be made to make this Prom as beautiful, as formal, as charming as any other; but every effort should also be made to keep the price within reason and to bear in mind that no fraternity clique is promoting the dance but that rather a great junior class is sponsoring an all-school formal party.

This year's Prom workers, so far as they are announced, have expressed this as their ideal. The student body should aid them in realizing this conception.

WE'RE WITH YOU, MADISON

To those men downtown and to those members of the common council who are sponsoring the proposed extension of University Avenue, the student interest gives wholehearted and enthusiastic support.

While the students as Madison citizens for four years at least are vitally interested in the question for all the good reasons advanced by its city advocates, they also have a selfish interest in the question for they feel that it will aid the university and expedite much of the college transactions.

Much of the extra traffic which comes to this city as a result of special occasions, conventions and gatherings is due directly to the university's presence here, and so it would mean that two thoroughfares would be open to the university rather than one. The Madison men have carefully advanced the arguments, that two points of entrance would be opened on the square.

The reverse might just as well be demonstrated for the university.

At Homecoming time, for instance, it would be of the greatest relief to have two streets leading out of the metropolitan section into the university district.

Other Editors Say—

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST

College students, as a class, are often accused of a lack of seriousness. They take their responsibilities too lightly, it is said, and fail to realize the earnestness of the struggle that awaits them out in the cold hard world. Because university undergraduates succeed in having a very good time, and manage to enliven their studies with much laughter, athletics and dancing, and to crowd a good deal of real living into what is, after all, only a preparation for life, they are branded by too many superficial observers as a rather pleasure-loving set of genial irresponsibles who, it seems, are lacking in the great quality of earnestness.

It would not be difficult to present a long and very dull defense against this charge of frivolity. We could show—very seriously and in all earnestness—that this unfortunate impression of what fiction-writers are pleased to term "the college set" owes its being to the amusing caricature of campus life that makes the "college comics" such pleasant reading. We could write earnestly and at great length in vindication of the college student, citing many examples of heroic toilers through the night, studying to make the most of a college education for which they are paying out of the fruits of their own serious and earnest labour. We could—but perhaps it would be of more value if we answer those, who, with uplifted palm and long demeanour, urge us to "be earnest, young man, be earnest," somewhat in this manner:

"Sir, your advice is undoubtedly well-meant, and indeed it is excellent counsel. But its application, as we think you will admit upon a moment's reflection is very limited. You say, 'Be earnest,' but our name, unfortunately is not Ernest. To the excellent fellows who bear this cognomen your advice could not be improved; for to them, instead of being a tame exhortation to a leaden-eyed gravity, it is a clarion call to individualism, an exhortation to self-reliance, which to them means: Be yourself. How much more fitting is it to urge upon young-men to be themselves than to thunder at them an exhortation to assume, what even you will admit, is unbecoming seriousness. You will see, then, that what is rather useless and platitudinous advice to Tom, Dick, and Harry, and Myrtle, becomes to Ernest a great and inspirational cry of: Be yourself."

If any advice is needed by college students today, it is above all this call to be oneself. Standardization is beginning to infect the land like a plague. We dress the same way, we read the same newspapers, we talk about the same things in the same manner, and are dictated to by the same foibles of fashions at the same seasons. We even come to think the same things in the same way, until one is sickened with the word "same." This state of affairs should certainly not be allowed to exist. Each one of us has an individual personality which should be as recognizable as our face. Let us not hide it under the cloak of standardization and custom. We do not want to wear this coat because it happens for the moment to be the style, and to get that because the next fellow has one; and above all let us try to rid ourselves of that most subtle form of insincerity, the habit of doing things just because—"well they're done, you know." Cultivate an individual personality, and then show it. Develop a few harmless eccentricities; it will be a pleasant relief from the present colourless sameness from which so many seem afraid to depart. Above all be yourself, but do not forget that you must first make yourself something worth being. And if your name is Ernest remember it is better to be Ernest than earnest.—McGill Daily.

"Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" Has Original Popularity

Credit for the revival of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" should be attributed to Alma Gluck. This southern melody had fallen almost into oblivion when the popular soprano discovered it and sang it for phonograph records.

James A. Bland, author of the song, wrote a great many popular successes, but none of them have come down to this generation with its original popularity, excepting, perhaps, "O Dem Golden Slippers."

No matter when and where "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," the song is heard, it always creates a spirit of reverence and dignity. Perhaps it is the element of home and the longing expressed in the song that is so appealing. Whatever it is, when the first chords of the song are sounded, quietness reigns.

Peculiarities of Chinese Language Explained By Wang

"A peculiar characteristic of the Chinese language is its absence of grammar," Chi Chen Wang '24, said last night addressing the International club in a short address on the Chinese language in the Engineering building Friday night.

"The changes of tense are told by the modifying adverb."

The Chinese language, is primarily a picture language, Wang explained. Each word has four tones, each particular inflection having a different meaning. Chinese poetry is written in couplets, in a form dissimilar to anything in the English language.

Book-store Shelves
Are Heaped With Christmas Books

"A borrowed book is but a cheap pleasure, an unappreciated and unsatisfactory tool. To know the true value of books—you must first feel the sweet delight of buying them."

So said the wise J. M. Baldwin. He knew the quiet joy of browsing away a long afternoon among the cluttered tables and shelves of a book-store, dipping into men's lives and thoughts and loves, traveling the seven seas in a breath, sailing on the magic carpet into the chimerical "Land of Make-Believe."

The Christmas weeks are a gala time for the book-stores. They are heaped high with the living things in their colorful, luring jackets, untasted joys between their covers.

One of the sales ladies in one book store was kind enough to leave several importunate book-lovers long enough to tell us of their tastes.

"Fiction is, of course, in the greatest demand," she said. "Christopher Morley is one of the most popular writers, with Cabell, Edith Wharton, Willa Cather and Bojer closely following. We have books by the less important writers such as Harold Bell Wright and Gene Stratton Porter, but we do not feature them and the demand for them is not great."

"I have been impressed by the difference between the books they borrow from our circulating library and those they buy. People buy only the best books, those they will care to reread many times. Thus more biographies are bought, poetry, drama, books such as the 'Outline of Art and of Science.' They buy more classics too, than the up-to-date fiction which is not often re-read."

"By no means do the most well-to-do people buy the most books. Some of our best customers are cultured gentlemen and gentlewomen who look as though they spent considerably more time dreaming in their books, than getting money for less frayed and shiny clothes," she continued.

There is a shelf of French and Spanish classics in the original language. The French books come directly from the Paris publishing houses.

"We have a surprisingly large demand for these books. University professors and students buy the greatest number, though there are a score or more town-people who buy them frequently, cultured people who prefer to read the foreign classics in the original tongue. Anatole France is probably the most popular," she said.

The children's books grow more delightful every year. "Heidi" by Johanne Spyri is still the old favorite, but new writers are constantly appearing. Hugh Lofting's "Dr. Doolittle" stories are established classics. The books with their delicious water-color sketches by the author himself should make an imaginative child beside himself with delight.

"The Story of Naughty Kildeen," by Marie, Queen of Roumania, is a beautifully illustrated fairy story in great demand. Collections of stories by Sarah Cone Bryant and Frances Jenkins Olcott, both children's librarians, are popular.

Central Americans Love Revolt;
in Fact, Can't Live Without It

H. D. S.

The Central Americans love revolutions, in fact they dote upon them, and think they can't live without them. The Americans cannot live without baseball, the English are unhappy without their week-end excursions, the Russians without their vodka, and the Central Americans cannot exist without a little revolution every once in a while. A striking example is a former president of Honduras, who, after being in power without disturbance for over six years, suddenly started a revolution against himself, just to put some excitement into life.

Revolutions in Central America are usually started by a man or group of men who believe that the governing president and his group have been in power long enough and want to get a chance to have their pictures in the paper too.

Everyone is Good Natured

The revolutions themselves are usually quite good-natured affairs, and everybody is as agreeable as can be about it. The only time when revolutions down there become serious, is when some foreign power starts to interfere and sends a battleship down there to pay a friendly visit. Then the sailors and soldiers parade through the streets, the foreigners salute the national flag, and the national troops pay a tribute to the foreign power's flag, quite seriously. In the evening there is a big dance, and more than one bottle of champagne is emptied in the effort to keep established the friendly relations between everybody.

Foreigners Make Trouble

The captain of the ship pays a visit to the president, and trumpets are blown, and cannons shot off, the bands play national anthems, and the revolution is postponed for a day. But while the captain visits the president, the leader of the rebels visits the first lieutenant, and after the visits both parties are certain of the help of the foreign power, both have vague promises, and then the real bloodshed begins. But if the people down there are let alone, they are able to swing their little revolutions quite nicely, and without too much disturbance.

Revolutions are not taken very seriously in Central America, and the Central Americans do not desire foreign intervention in their domestic affairs. An American who once tried to defend foreign intervention was given this plastic answer, "What would you say, if the English would come and prohibit your Fourth of July celebrations?"

Nothing Is Secret

Central American revolutions usually run in the following way. For weeks ahead everybody knows that a revolution is being prepared. The countries down there are so small, that nothing can possibly be kept secret, and so the people have become accustomed to run their reparations quite openly.

Your friends stop you on the street and whisper in your ear that something is going on, and that soon there will be a change of government. Government troops start parading the streets. The telegraph offices and other public buildings are guarded by soldiers.

There are big military parades, and everybody gets ready for the coup d'état. But nobody worries very much over what is going to happen and, on the night before the revolution, one goes to bed just as peacefully as ever.

Bullets Whiz High

If you happen to live near a public building, you might be awakened in the middle of the night by the melodious "boom" of a cannon being fired right under your window and then be kept awake for a little while by the friendly "wran-kedepang" of the machine guns. Of course, when bullets begin to fly through your window, and bury themselves on the wall right next to your bed, the safest thing would be to make a careful exit. But usually there isn't enough ammunition in the armories to cause much trouble and besides that you may be fairly sure that most of the shots are shot off into the air, sometimes like skyrockets, just to make noise, because the Central Americans love to make noise.

After a little while the shooting will cease, then you might hear a couple of "Vivas", and the city will after that settle down again for a well-earned night's rest. The next morning an extra paper might tell you of the news, but usually your friends come to see you early in the morning, filled with excitement, ready to describe every little detail.

What's In A Life?

If the revolution was successful, the new president issues a proclamation, thanking the patriots for their efforts, and if the revolution has failed, the old president will issue a similar proclamation. Troops will once more parade the streets, all foreign diplomats and the more important business men will visit the powers that be in the Presidential Palace, and by noon the city will have forgotten the disturbance

Music Tournament
For High School
Students Planned

A music contest for high school students of the state will be held at the university during the month of May, 1924, the first contest of its kind in which the University of Wisconsin, through the School of Music, has inaugurated.

The contest, is an extension of the plan of interscholastic meets for high school students, designed to include the musical interests of the students, competition and intensive study.

The rules under which the contest will be conducted are being announced by the school of music, and detailed information concerning the contest is available at the school. An article by Prof. P. W. Dykema which will appear in the December issue of the "Wisconsin Teacher" explains the contest and details of its conduct.

Contestants allowed in this competition must be regularly enrolled high school students doing passing work in their high school subjects. Music supervisors must turn in names of classes which they will enter for competition, and the selection chosen by each entrant, two weeks before the contest begins. Each contestant must perform a selection set by the rules of the contest, and one which he will select or which the group with which he appears will select.

Contests will be held for groups and for individuals, for girls' glee club, mixed chorus, orchestra, band and solo work in voice, piano and violin. Orchestras and bands will be classed as A or B, according to the size of the school from which they come. Groups from schools of 500 or more will be included in class A, those from schools with enrollment of less than 500 coming within class B.

The prizes given for the solo events will be a gold pin for first prize, a silver pin for second prize, and honorable mention. The first prize for group events will be a silver cup. The high school which carries off the greatest number of points will have possession of the Wisconsin High School Music Championship trophy, a large silver loving cup, for one year.

Points will be credited for first and second prizes, the first place in the girls' glee club contest will give 8 points, second place 4 points; first place in the orchestra competition will give 10 points, second place 5 points; first place in the band contest will give 10 points, second place 5 points and first and second places in solo work will give 4 and two points each.

Marking will be made on the set piece and one the selected piece, quality of music and fitness of the music to the ability of the student forming an additional basis for rating the selected music.

of the night and settled down again for the daily work.

Of course, the leaders of the losing party sometimes have to pay with their lives for the fun, but lives are cheap down there in the tropics, and nobody but the next relatives and nearest concerned worry much. It is known there that he who goes into politics puts his lie at stake, and the people down there who are ready to play the game, are ready to end their lives in front of a gun.

Column Right

Books and Things—Cabbages—
Kings—as penciled by Ever Sharp

There was something quite out of the ordinary going into this column this morning, but, as one will from time to time (I have forgotten what it was and haven't the time to stop to think it out. So it'll have to wait until next Sunday. It's something about the way in which a Chinese editor turns down manuscript. But—oh well, it can wait.

You know how it is when you want to think of something but haven't got the time. Such a predicament is a bad one to get into and we Americans seem to be getting into it more and more. It's too bad that the northern part of this country can't absorb a little of the spirit which prevails in the southern part and vice versa. Each part goes to extremes; here we are so busy that we have hardly even enough time to read a newspaper; there the people have so much time on their hands, or take so much time, that they can read almost everything that comes along.

Admirers of Joseph Conrad will be glad to know that he has just had a new book published. It is called "The Rover" and is the tale of a pirate, Peyrol. He has sailed up and down the globe, holding up ships in every nook and cranny until he finally decides to retire. He chooses a French farm, near the place of his birth, for his retreat and the story then proceeds with his life there among peculiar circumstances, of the after effect of the French revolution, of thrills the like of which Conrad alone can give.

It is truly a Conrad story, yet it is altogether different, as all of his are, from the others. Conrad is one writer who has not gotten into a rut and been unable to get out again. His technique, of course, is individual, at least it was until others started to copy it, and it still is individual because others can't copy it with anything which approximates his success.

Speaking of Conrad, see that a sale of his manuscripts has been held recently with amazing success. In fact, the way in which the manuscripts were bought up is as remarkable a tribute to him as has ever been made to any modern author.

It was the MSS. of "Victory" which brought the highest price of the entire sale, $8,100. That of "Almayer's Folly," the first one sold, brought $5,300, of "Under Western Eyes," $6,900, of "Typhoon," $5,100, of "The Nigger of the Narcissus," together with the preface which was suppressed, $4,500. The entire sale netted the sum of $110,998, and the prices were among the highest ever paid for such articles.

Perhaps you have seen the announcement of the awarding of the Nobel Prize for literature for 1923, but if you haven't you'll be interested to know that it went to William Butler Yeats.

Yeats life has been given over to the Irish renaissance. That unsurpassed Irish dramatist, Synge and Lady Gregory, another great literary product of the Emerald Isle, both directed Yeats in his early work. The Abbey Theater of Dublin, which is known the world over, owes to him a great deal of its success.

Thus far, since 1901 the Nobel Prize for literature has been awarded four times to a German, four to a Frenchman, twice to a Spaniard, twice to a Norwegian, a Dane and a Swede, once to a Swiss, once to a Bengalese, a Belgian, an Italian, a Pole and an Englishman.

That list represents 12 countries. We might sing "Oh, Say Can You See," but if we did we might be put into prison for lack of patriotism. Anyway, there doesn't seem to be much mention of American literatures. Not that it is the fault of those who award the prize, not that I suggest that they may be playing politics, not at all; quite the contrary, there's probably a good reason for the omission.

On my own hook, I might suggest that you read "A Preface To Life," by Edwin Justus Mayer, "Lazy Laughter" by Woodward Boyd, "Streets of Night," by John Dos Passos, "Open All Night," by Paul Morand. If you don't care for any of the above, try Walter de la Mare's new "Crossings," a whimsical book by the English poet.

Filosifies

By FLO

A loud wail from the male of the species—another of his precious smoking accessories has been snatched by the flapper. This time it is his tobacco pouch—but it is put to strange uses.

The new galoshes have appropriated the tobacco pouch opening in place of the traditional buckles. Pull up a little metal catch and the galoshes zip shut. (that is why they are called the zipper boot). A band of self material finishes the top.

These sell for $6. The buckle variety is still much in evidence and sell for $4.50.

And while on the subject of feet—the new shoes for formal wear are exquisite. They come in lovely shades of flowered brocade, blue and silver, pink and gold, and black and silver. Cut work over the vamp is a new feature, combined with the strap effect.

These have been ordered in plain black too—the salesman in one of the smart shops assures us that plain black for evening is to be quite the thing this winter. They sell for $17.50 in the colors; the plainer ones are $10 to $12.

The newest shade for street shoes is the light Russian calf. This is the tan-orange shade that the men have been wearing—rather startling until one gets used to it.

Pig skin for oxfords is good—though of course for the dressier shoes suede seems to rule the boards. Plain edging seems to feature all the new shoes. If the shoe is suede, the edging is leather or patent; if satin, the edge is bronze.

Plainer styles are coming in, salesmen predict. Strap effects are still good—but a word to the wise,

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The business of the middle west is becoming better. Coal production and iron and steel activities have slowed slightly; agricultural conditions are improving, and merchandising though somewhat irregular, shows generally satisfactory conditions.

GREEN BUTTON TO NOMINATE HEADS

Freshman Women to Pick Officers at Meeting Next Thursday Night

Nominations for officers of Green Button will be made at a meeting of the Freshmen women Thursday night. Every year thus far the election of Green Button officers has taken place early in the fall.

This year however, this early election has been deferred until now in order that each girl might have more of an opportunity to know the different girls nominated.

The women of the other classes who have organized societies are: Sophomores, Red Gauntlet; the Juniors, Yellow Tassel; and the Seniors, Blue Dragon. Each organization is handed over from one class to the other so a Freshman who is a member of Green Button becomes a member of Blue Dragon in her Senior year. The annual dues of Green Button is 25 cents.

The second International Scout jamboree is to be held beginning July 10 in Copenhagen, Denmark. American scouts won first place in the contests last year.

SIXTEEN SCOUTS TAKE

The scouts were to stop at Prairie du Sac to inspect the dam and power plant there and visit Devil's lake. Last night they gave a demonstration in the lobby of a Kilbourn hotel and will hike over the Dells today.
