The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with Greek text, showing significant wear and damage. The text is written in a cursive hand, likely from the Hellenistic or Roman period. The fragment is divided into two main sections by a horizontal fold or break. The top section contains several lines of text, while the bottom section is more fragmented and includes some larger, possibly decorative or significant characters. The papyrus is heavily stained and discolored, with some areas showing significant loss of material.
