No Immediate Solution To Lake Mendota Stink

By JIM WICHMAN
Cardinal Staff Writer

"The problem confronting Lake Mendota is one which will not be solved quickly or at low cost," said Prof. Gerald A. Rolich at Wednesday's meeting of the Lake Mendota Problems Committee.

OVER 80 citizens were attracted to this open meeting at the City-County Building to hear the committee of technical and administrative members recommend and discuss possible solutions to the lake problem.

Several of the committed members were undecided about what segment of the lake problem should be given priority of treatment.

Dr. C. K. Kincaid, Director of Public Health, and Thayer Burnham, City of Madison biochemist, were primarily concerned about the odor of the lake and the unsightly refuse on the shore. Other members were mainly concerned with the abundance of weed and algae.

ROLICH OF the civil engineering department, and Prof. Arthur D. Hasler, director of the limnology laboratory, recommended, as the first step of a solution, a program of aquatic plant harvesting to be initiated as soon as possible. This would utilize equipment which would cut, collect, and load the cut weeds onto barges.

This program should be incorporated with a general effort to clean up the shoreline debris.

Hasler said that removal and not just the cutting of the aquatic plants is necessary. This would aid in limiting the decomposition of cut plants which would just add to the amount of organic nutrients in the lake. These nutrients are the initial cause of the present over abundance of weeds and algae.

A HARVESTING process Hasler said would be much preferred to any method of chemical treatment. He said, "Biologists throughout the world do not recommend any chemical for lake treatment." He mentioned that no chemical has proven effective in all cases of aquatic plant reduction and still harmless to desirable lake life.

Hasler continued, "The abundance of aquatic plants and filamentous algae exceeds anything we've had in previous years. It has been gradually increasing." "It is going to increase as population increases. The action taken will have to go for the next several years," he said.

Hasler mentioned that a second step must also be taken in the solution of this lake problem. This would be the consideration of long range solutions such as those proposed by assemblyman Norman C. Anderson (D-Dane County). Anderson's bill would prevent the effluence of any type of sewage into Wisconsin lakes.

ROLICH SUGGESTED that a

Lucey Accuses Right Of Slowing Education

By JOHN POWELL
Contributing Editor

Lt. Gov. Patrick Lucey described Tuesday what he called a "growing political threat to higher education in Wisconsin."

SPONSORED by the Union Forum committee, Lucey spoke on The Future of Higher Education in the State of Wisconsin.

"A coalition of the radical right and fiscal conservatives" offers a growing threat to higher education, Lucey charged. He said this group challenges Wisconsin's "traditional commitment to higher education to give everyone the benefit of education to the best of his abilities."

The right wing has been "most recently stirred to new hostility by the issues of civil rights and Viet Nam," Lucey said.

PORTIONS OF university communities, particularly students, have lead the civil rights movement and the opposition to U.S.

policy in Viet Nam, Lucey said, thereby drawing new attacks by the far right.

Lucey cited the state Republican party's resolution passed in convention this spring calling for a ban on "subversive speakers" on campus, as evidence of the new threat.

The fiscal conservatives, said Lucey, have "different motives, members and tactics" than the right wing, but "their target is the same."

LUCEY DESCRIBED a fiscal conservative as anyone opposing an increase in government spending. This includes, he said, "some respectable groups including the Wisconsin Chamber of Commerce."

The postwar baby boom with the resultant need for more taxes has gained much public sympathy for the fiscal conservatives, according to Lucey.

While this coalition is on the rise, "the traditional political strength of the University is waning," Lucey said.

The old base of support was the farm population who had close ties through University agricultural services. Now that the farm population is declining, no new base has developed, Lucey said.

"THOSE OF us who support educational opportunity for all, face a tough fight in the next few years," he said.

Lucey put primary responsibility for education on the governor's office. We must elect executives who will support higher education, he said. "If the governor lacks the courage to fight for higher education, no one else will do it."

Lucey, a Democrat, is a potential candidate for governor in 1966. The incumbent, Warren Knowles, is a Republican.

SECONDARY responsibility for education lies with parents and students and the academic community itself, which, Lucey said, do not have the organization or the understanding of state-level issues to be effective.

Lucey also charged that University alumni have done less than they could to further higher education. "The alumni should be more than football fan clubs," he said.

Finally, "the public must make the sacrifices if it believes in educational opportunity for all those qualified," Lucey stated.

IN ANSWER TO a question, Lucey admitted that the Democrats, who control the state assembly, are not united in favor of higher education. He blamed this on the lack of the leadership a Democratic governor could give, citing more unified Democratic action under former governor, John Reynolds.

Harrington's Tribute To Stevenson

Adlai Stevenson once said the greatness of the University of Wisconsin lay in its faith in people, and its application of intelligence to the problems of society; he described the Wisconsin Idea as "Faith in the free mind and in the application of reason to government."

These were the faiths he stood on. They were elements of his own greatness.

Maison Francais Celebrates French Independence Day

In Paris, France, Charles DeGaulle rode down the Champs Elysee, flanked by columns of French soldiers, and a sea of waving blue, white and red flags. The celebration was Bastille day, July 14th, commemorating the fall of the Bastille and the beginning of French independence.

ABOVE THE Arc du Triumph and the Place de la Concorde six jets flew past, their vapor trail spreading the colors of the French flag across the sky.

In Madison, we have no jets flying over the Capitol. But there is a Maison Francais, and it did not let Bastille day go unnoticed.

About 50 French students and professors toasted to French independence with a gala evening celebration at the new French House Wednesday.

A FRENCH dinner began the "fete" and was followed by a short talk by Mr. Roche, a French professor from Northwestern University, teaching here during the summer session.

Roche, who comes from the south of France spoke on the history and the meaning of the Marseillaise, the national anthem of France. The song, Roche said, was composed by Rouget de Lisle, commemorating the capture of the "Prison de la Bastille" during the French revolution in 1790.

It was first sung by the Marseille Battalion, as a marching song, Roche said. Soon the whole country took up the rousing anthem—"Allons en avant de la patrie." "Rise up, children of the fatherland; the day of glory has arrived; the bloody standard we raise against tyranny."

THE MARSEILLAISE was sung during subsequent revolutions in 1830, 1848, 1870 and both world war.

At the conclusion of the talk everyone stood, and with the pure accent of the Loire Valley, sang the Marseillaise and then in English, the Star Spangled Banner. The evening concluded with a dance and celebration—French style.

A really good driver never takes anything for granted!

Every driver should expect the unexpected and be prepared to react fast. Quick thinking in a pinch is a lifesaver. So don't take anything for granted. Overconfidence can dull the sharpest reflexes. Many of the 37,000 people killed on our highways last year might still be alive if good drivers never relied on chance. Drive as though your life depended on it—it does!

Publication of the High School Journalism Workshop

University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin, Thursday, July 15, 1965

JOURNALISM WORKSHOP students Maureen Weber, Kris Neverak, and Kitty Kelley find that summer high school workshops can be as demanding as school work. Here, they sharpen journalism skills in a yearbook layout class.

Art Seeks Effective Responses

"Art pervades the whole world," said Hardean K. Naeseth, University of Wisconsin professor of art and art education. Yet how effectively do high school art programs respond to this sphere?

Highland Park's Edgewood Junior High School incorporated a new approach to teaching art, one suited to the enrolled individual's interests and abilities.

The experiment's purpose is "to revitalize the field of art as a meaningful experience for the students."

Some Lag

Other schools are far behind in realizing the benefits of such programs. Naeseth blamed ineffective art courses on "too little exposure."

When we are young, we have to learn how to see and how to feel, he said. A taste of art facilitates an awareness and initiates an appreciation for it.

Be Sensuous

"Be sensuous," he said as he

New Approach TV Education

A new approach to teaching has developed with the introduction of instructional TV, says Dr. Gary Gumpert of WHA-TV.

Students are able to view instructors with vast demonstration facilities. A research staff is able to spend more time compiling materials than would local teachers, he said.

Most subjects are readily adaptable to broadcasting. Science, he said, has proved exceptionally good. Complete courses in zoology and psychology are available on the college graduate study level.

WHA-TV broadcasts a number of classes to the grade school level with their Wisconsin School of the Air. Courses in arithmetic, geography, science, and French are available.

At present, WHA has a broadcasting radius of 40 miles. However, equipment costs are going down which may mean statewide acceptance, Mr. Gumpert said.

fingered a stone paper-weight, like a little boy who can see and feel the beauties of a stone. He continued, adults think a stone collection absurd. But isn't nature part of art's broad scope? "We have to learn to see," he said.

Years of study, psychology courses, and much experience accompanies a real high school art teacher into the classroom, he added.

Is Missionary

This teacher is the "missionary" in aiding students to see and feel, realize and appreciate, Naeseth said. With broad interests and command of the skills, an art teacher can effectively train high schoolers.

Presently, he said, only a few schools employ a worthwhile art program. The product "not a stereotype statement," is the gauge of its success, he said.

Part of Many Courses

Appreciating art, said Naeseth, is "part of a great many courses." It sharpens the senses enabling one to learn and see all its facets, he explained.

"We lag in the acceptance of the arts," he said, and it's up to the high school to respond with effective art programs.

Goal of Journalism Education Includes Teaching, Research

The School of Journalism at the University of Wisconsin has three purposes: instruction in the broad field of mass communications, research programs throughout the world, and serving the public.

Instruction is given in news writing, reporting and editing, and advances into newspaper, radio, television, magazine, media management, advertising, specialized publications, public relations, communication theory and research, and journalism teaching. Practical experience may be gained by work on student publications or in working with WHA or WHA-TV.

Dr. Ralph Nafziger, Director of the School of Journalism, plays a large part in seeing that research programs are carried out.

He spent the summer of 1961 in Austria where he continued a long-time research interest on the origins of modern newspapers.

In the fall of 1961 he served as chairman of a UNESCO Conference on journalism training in South East Asian nations. Held in the Philippines, the conference's purpose was to develop a press to keep pace with the general development of "nations in transition." He conducted a similar program for UNESCO in Nagpur, India, in the fall of 1964.

A grant from the Russell Sage Foundation, set up in 1964, pays for a three year program which each year trains six or more experienced newsmen from the United States and Canada.

In another program, a special student travel fund of $1,000 annually, provided by the Readers' Digest, foots the bill for journalism students who travel as roving correspondents.

Public service concerns the Extension Services and the continual examination of the mass media. The former involves conferences, short courses, and correspondence study. The latter assists citizens in their efforts to be better informed and discriminating users of the media.

Weltanschauung

By ANN LARSON

The dreams and determination of youth will not change—yet his environment will be run by scientific achievements.

The high school student of tomorrow will live in a world of a constant striving for greater accomplishment, in a world of pressure, in a world without love.

Demands will be made on the youth in proportion to his ability. He will have greater freedom in striving for these achievements—through independent study, through laboratories open for student use, and through flexibility of learning schedules.

There will be a need for communication through a universal language—a language of interrelationships.

Expression of his emotion and feeling will be shown through art—art that is bold and vibrating with the feeling of his times.

Yet there will be a fear of expressing the quiet feelings—those of tenderness and love. They will be overshadowed by feelings of bold expression and rebellion.

The student of tomorrow will live in an age of versatility and excitement. The Atomic Age has produced many new concepts, theories, and scientific advances—it is close to discovery on many more. Old beliefs and traditional ideas are disproved every day and this is only a fraction of the change the student of tomorrow will experience.

The high school student will expect more from his world—as it expects achievement from him. His learning will come through machines of both individual and mass communication. His recreation will be organized for the furthering of his creative qualities.

I live in a world of constant war and futile strife for peace. It is a cold war of the free world against a controlled socialistic or communistic society.

It is a war that is never won—governments may take over, yet there will never be a free world. A government such as a democracy cannot conquer the hearts of all the people.

If the free world survives, the high school student of the future will live in a world of achievement. But I feel he will miss a personal quality in his life.

I feel the competition in the world will become too pronounced—the average student will not survive. It will be a world for the exceptional.

"Have I not reason to lament
What man has made of man?"

Library School Director Says Some H.S. Libraries Too Small

"There are some very adequate high school libraries, but many are not up to par," stated Dr. Margaret E. Monroe, Director of Library Schools of the University of Wisconsin.

Five years ago, a library with 10,000 volumes was considered adequate, but the newer ones are being planned with a 30,000 volume catalogue.

There is a needed increase to meet the national standard of one professional librarian to every 300 students. Clerical assistants are also needed so the librarians can do a professional job by being well trained, alert, and capable. A professional librarian needs the opportunity to improve his skills, thus improving the library.

The government has set up a National Defense Education Act by which money from the Federal Department of Public Instruction will supply aid. These funds, which the school matches by spending an equal amount, are used mostly for library materials concerning mathematics, science and languages.

Students can also help! The Student Council can take the demands and problems to the PTA and the Board of Education. The parents can then influence their own children to use the facilities available to them at school to the fullest extent.

In conclusion, Dr. Monroe said there are some exceptionally fine examples of libraries and librarians, but there is a great need to get the total number up to equal the better examples.

Girls' Dean Urges Taking Initiative

"Take the initiative," is what Patricia Taftest, dean of women, urges a freshman girl on the University of Wisconsin campus when she feels inferior.

A freshman girl has to "take the initiative" in social as well as academic activities, the Dean said. The new student has to meet many more experienced people and to adjust herself to campus life. And if a girl would ask questions, she would find everyone is willing to help her.

Miss Taftest said some of the best ways to avoid these problems is to develop proper study habits, improve reading ability, and to begin taking the initiative while still in high school.

Scum and Stink Discussed

Another concern of the committee is the cost of a weed harvesting program. Thayer Burnham, city biochemist, thought that a harvesting program should only be initiated if there were enough available funds.

Herbert S. Roth, Engineering Administrator for Shorewood Hills, estimated that the minimum cost of a set of harvesting equipment would be approximately $40,000. However, the equipment could be rented the first few years avoiding a large outlay of funds.

MAYOR FESTGE said, "If we're talking about equipment purchase, we're talking about '66."

Roth revealed that no equipment would be available from the company he had contacted until August 15 at the very earliest. The reason being that production was bottled-up because of a high demand for the harvester by other communities. This is also true of the rented machines.

The only concrete result of the meeting was a proposal by the mayor that two committees, one technical and the other administrative, be set up to handle the problem.

Coach Rut Walter's Record Shows Impressive Victories

By BRAD BRADLEY

Summer Sports Editor

The five-year record of Charles "Rut" Walter as head track and cross country coach shows an impressive 23-5 mark in dual meets and an overall record of 31 victories and eight defeats in dual, triangular and quadrangular meets.

The Badgers are 14-2 in indoor dual meets over the five year span, losing last to Michigan in February, 1962, in that season's finale. The Badgers compiled an unbeaten string of ten straight dual meet wins during the past three seasons and placed first in four triangular meets during the same years.

Outdoors, the Badger trackmen have a 9-3 record for dual competition. The last dual meet defeat was at Colorado to open the 1962 outdoor season.

Wisconsin has also placed first in four triangular meets and second in another during the same span of time.

Currently, the Badgers have an unbroken string of 16 straight dual meet decisions—indoors and outdoors—and until they placed second to Nebraska in a triangular meet at Lincoln to open the 1965 outdoor season, the Badgers had won 23 consecutive dual of triangular meets. The cross country dual meet record is 18-9 for the five years.

Wisconsin won the 1962 and 1965 conference indoor titles and reigned as the 1964 outdoor champions. In the past four seasons, Wisconsin has placed first-third-second-first in indoor competition and second-second-first-third in outdoor competition. Only conference rival Michigan can match that record during the same years.

Walter's first year as head coach with the material inherited saw the Badgers finish 9th indoors with six points and tenth outdoors with 5 1/5 points.

In the past four first division seasons the Badgers have won individual event championships 14 times—by nine individuals—plus the mile relay crown in 1962 in indoor competition.

Larry Howard, Bill Holden and Barney Peterson are Big Ten record holders for the events they competed in. Howard has a share of the 70-yard high hurdles mark at 8.4 seconds; Holden cleared 6-10 inches in the high jump; and Peterson was timed in 2:09.2 in winning the 1000 yard run. All are indoor events.

In addition, Badger performers have moved into the all-time school record book, too. Indoors, Elmars Ezerins (shot put), Holden, Wes Schmidt (pole vault), Elzie Higginbottom (440 and 300), Al Montalbano (600), Peterson, Howard, Billy Smith and Lou Holland (60 yard dash) are holders of the best marks ever turned in by a Wisconsin performer in those events.

Outdoors, Holland (100 yard dash), Peterson (880), Ezerins, Don Hendrickson (discus), Holden, Barry Ackerman (hop, step and jump), Higginbottom, Montalbano, Mike Manley (3000 meter steeple-chase), Gene Dix (120 yard high hurdles), Gerry Beatty (330 yard hurdles) and the 1964 mile relay team all hold the all-time best for their events.

It's all a tribute to Charles 'Rut' Walter, himself a champion Big Ten and NCAA quarter-miler in his undergraduate days at Northwestern and an assistant US Olympic coach for the 1964 games at Tokyo; and his assistant coaches Tom Bennett and Bob Brennan, both former Wisconsin track performers. There's every indication that Wisconsin will stay near the top of Big Ten track and field in the forthcoming years.
