"Beat Iowa" Pep Rally Tonight Opens Dad's Week-End Activities

Thistlethwaite, Cuisinier, and Fowlkes to Address Meeting in Men's Gym

A gigantic pep meeting and cheer rally in the men's gymnasium at 7:30 p. m. tonight will greet the several thousand fathers, who are expected to arrive during the day as the advance guard of the annual Dads' weekend influx of visitors.

Speakers at the rally, which will be the first of the year, as named by John Dixon '30, varsity cheerleader, include Head Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, Francis "Bo" Cuisinier '30, backfield coach, Prof. J. G. Fowlkes, of the school of education, and possibly Dr. Frank "Red" Weston, captain of the 1921 Badger football team. Coach Thistlethwaite has promised to bring along a number of the players from the varsity squad, including Capt. John Parks.

In order to permit the visitors to the campus to spend the evening with their sons and daughters, the meeting will be of a maximum duration of 20 minutes, according to announcement by the committee in charge, which is composed of the "W" club and Cardinal Key.

Plans for the events of Saturday were put in final shape at a meeting of the faculty Fathers' day committee in the Memorial Union Thursday noon. The program for the day includes the cross-country race and inspection of the university grounds in (Continued on Page 9)

Don Meiklejohn to Head Senate

Dormitory President Elected
by Adams and Tripp
Representatives

Donald Meiklejohn '30 was elected president of the Dormitory senate last night at a meeting of representatives of Tripp and Adams halls. The election took place immediately after the regular meeting of the senate and was presided over by Milton Klein '31.

The election was never in doubt, the only opposition being furnished by Clyde Maggett '33, and the Meiklejohn faction triumphed with ease.

At the regular meeting of the group, the chief problems that were brought up were the executive ratification and the discussion of the dormitory budget, and the plea of John Bergstreser, head fellow, for the subordination of the fellows into committees, instead of their capacity of advisors.

The offices of the executive committee which were ratified are: librarians, Donald Hansen '21 and Edward Higby '32; chairman of the athletic committee, Stanley Rector, grad; clerk, Richard Heyer '33; business manager, Frank Capelett '32; music committee, Stuart Lyman, grad, Milton Klein '32, and Arnold Reisky '32.

A letter was read to the senate asking for the reinstatement of dormitory social life, such as dances and parties in the refectory. A vote was taken and the matter was dropped when the senate decreed against the letter's request.

The dormitory budget was submitted to the representatives by Frank Capelett who acted for the executive committee. A discussion was held in regard to the $500 balance which was left from last year's operating expenses, but no definite decision was reached.

'Man Still Rules House in India,' Ruegg Tells Club

The man is still the monarch of the household in India, the Reverend Rueggs, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church told the Euthenics club at its meeting in Lathrop parlors on Thursday evening.

Unlike America where man is the head of the house and woman the neck so that she can turn the head wherever she wants, India allows a woman no freedom. She is disgraced unless her father has contrived to get her married before she is nine years old.

The English government is doing all it can to hold the Indian people, who are bound to their religion, according to Rev. Ruegg. There is great opportunity for doctors, nurses, and teachers, particularly among the untouchable "caste."

Fowles' Talks Twice Thrill Music Lovers

By PEARL ROOS

"If you don't like what I say, you can throw things at me, but at least I have the virtue of being sincere, and that is one of the prime requisites of any musician," said Ernest Fowles in one of the two lectures which he gave yesterday.

Standing on the platform of the Great hall in the Union in the afternoon, and on the platform of Music hall in the evening, Mr. Fowles amused, enlightened, and thoroughly entertained two groups of students and faculty—or rather one group plus a few new people, for all those who attended his first lecture on early keyboard music, reappeared to hear the second one on modern music.

Early keyboard music—the title may seem dull. But nothing could be dull under the magic personality and dominating sense of humor which Mr. Fowles displays. He declared that he intended through his first lecture to "direct minds toward a form of music which we are prone to neglect."

"The sixteenth century was a wonderful century in the history of music," said Mr. Fowles. "Music always follows the development of other arts, and this was also true at that time. When Thomas Moore was giving a new political outlook in his 'Utopia,' when Erasmus was spreading his knowledge; when Columbus was discovering new spheres and possibilities, music also developed to an unprecedented peak."

Mr. Fowles then continued with what he termed a "bird's eye view" of that century and the following one, illustrating all he said with piano selections by composers of the time, such as Byrd, Dowland, Bun, Gibbons, and Couperin.

His evening lecture on modern music was but a continuation of the highly entertaining previous one. It touched on Debussy, Scriabin and others of the modern school of composers.

He concluded by saying, "Each of us must form his own opinion as to the worth and beauty of this modern music. It must be judged only by the law of the beautiful, and what beauty is remains an unsolved question. Remember, however, that art is the only thing which endures to the end—which remains permanent in an unpermanent world."

Oct. 27 Set as New Deadline for Homecoming Posters

The deadline for entry of Homecoming posters has been extended two days from Oct. 25 to next Sunday, Oct. 27. Numerous entries in the contest are ready according to Dave Willock '30, art chairman, but are being withheld till the last day.

They must be delivered to Willock at the Phi Kappa Psi house, 811 State street or to Miss Mann in the Industrial Arts building by Sunday night.

A $10 prize and five of $1 each will be awarded by the judges who will be art school faculty members and the Homecoming art committee.

Kohler Outlines Solon's Work to Banqueters

Accomplishments of 1929
Legislature Sketched in Speech to Women

A brief sketching of the accomplishments of the 1929 legislature by Gov. Walter J. Kohler, and an address on "Seeking the Intelligent Voter" by Donald Richberg, who helped found the Progressive party 19 years ago, were the highlights of the banquet of the Wisconsin League of Women Voters, held in Tripp commons, of the Memorial Union, Thursday night. Chester D. Snell, dean of the extension division, extended the greetings of the university.

The eventual organization of the present masses, who have no party, into a gigantic political party was forecast by Mr. Richberg, who urged that the League of Women Voters work out a scheme for organizing these men and women into such a party.

Must Concentrate Interests

"The way to improve the intelligence of the voter," he said, "is to concentrate his interest upon the choice of the party group leader who is to be his duly authorized political agent."

"You may give the average voter a greater interest in government and make his participation more effective," he said, "if you reduce his part in it to the playing of a little game with a small group of friends and neighbors wherein he can size up the players and understand the rules without laborious effort."

Mead Speaks on Dam Project

Calls Boulder Power Plant
Self-Supporting in Talk to Convention

"Boulder Dam will pay for its own upkeep by money raised by subscription to its power and water, but the cost of transporting power to California from the plant will be nearly double the cost of the installation of the dam and power house," said Prof. Daniel W. Mead, of the college of engineering, last night before the engineering section of the Great Lakes division of the National Electric Light association, in a speech entitled "Boulder Dam."

"In my opinion it would be just as cheap to construct a government steam turbine plant outside the city of Los Angeles," Mr. Mead further stated. "How it will work out is rather doubtful in my mind."

Question Long Debated

The Boulder Dam project has been before the country for nine years and before congress for eight years, and one of the fundamental reasons for the whole project is to make water for irrigation available in both the upper and lower valleys of the Colorado river.

When asked by congress in 1928 to become a member of a governmental investigating committee, Mr. Mead said that they were asked to investigate only the financial and engineering feasibility of the project. They recommended to congress that the dam be planned on a larger scale as that planned by the reclamation service was a menace to the lives of the people the dam in flood season. They also advised a raise of $40,000,000, making the total cost $165,000,000, because they did not think that the dam could be built for the sum first set for its construction.

Failure Means Death

In discussing the project first put forth by the reclamation service, Prof. (Continued on Page 9)

Farmers' Co-ops
Urged by Shillingh,
Federal Authority

Farmers' co-operatives were strongly urged Thursday by William Shillingh, member of the Federal Farm board, who spoke at the annual conference of agricultural extension workers at the college of agriculture.

If farmers of America will study the agricultural marketing act and familiarize themselves with the intents and purposes of the act, he said, and then cooperate locally, regionally, and nationally on commodity lines, they will soon be placed in a position materially to assist themselves in working out the marketing problems of agriculture.

"Surplus can be best dealt with by organization," said Mr. Shillingh, commenting on surplus control, "and organization means that the product we are producing must go from the farm to the market in such a way as not to glut the market."

Herbert Gray Leads Faville House Forum

"The American universities are under the tyranny of public opinion," asserted Dr. Herbert Gray, English preacher and Laborite, to an audience in Faville house of Adams hall whose guest he was last evening. That the students of the great universities are all of a general and uniform type, was his contention given during the evening of informal discussion.

"The absence of unorthodox types, the scarcity of many varieties, and the lack of rugged personalities bringing conformity with public opinion at the expense of self naturalness is the reason so little is gained from a university education in America."

"In England," the doctor remarked by way of comparison, "the students that enter a university from preparatory schools are conservative snobs. However, when they come into their new surroundings their views are greatly shaken. They then begin to form their own ideas and to let their naturalness come out."

Dr. Gray suggested that the high entrance requirements which are characteristic of all English universities should be used in America. "What per cent of the men and women that attend a cultural institution in this country are fitted for university?" he asked to justify his reform of the qualifications for admittance. If this was done, there would be fewer uninterested students in the universities.

"The Labor party has as one of its reforms a plan for allowing only those best fitted culturally to attend a university," he said. "The American civilization is, as a whole, without much culture since the people are still in a stage of development. There is no great American poet, no great music, and no great national literature."

"What did they think of the Sacco-Vanzetti case in London?" was asked as the discussion rounded into labor difficulties and socialistic policies. Dr. Gray said that he had never heard of the Boston case in England. Cotton mills and Indian problems were also brought up. That England would have to give up India in the near future, and that in all likelihood Egypt would also be freed, were beliefs expressed by the speaker.

Badgers Will Meet Hawks on Dry Field, Says Miller

Sideline weather prophets who predicted repetition of the weather conditions of the past two years for the Wisconsin-Iowa game Saturday seemed doomed to disappointment when Eric Miller, university meteorologist, announced rising temperatures for this afternoon in his daily weather report.

Continued cold weather is predicted for the early part of the day with a killing frost this morning.

The wind, which has howled from the north and northwest for the last three days, will shift to the southwest today, Mr. Miller predicted.

Mentor Says Pape, Fuhrman
Did Not Play With
Dubuque

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 24—Charges of professionalism launched during the past season against Oran Pape, sensational Iowa halfback and John Fuhrman, veteran guard, and denied by both, received further refutation here tonight.

Jesse B. Graves, high school basketball coach at Bessemer, Mich., declared to officials tonight in a long distance telephone call that he had played quarterback and end with the Dubuque Bears in 1926 under the assumed name of King, instead of Pape as the Big Ten report charges.

The report came at the time when Pape's eligibility was being investigated to determine whether or not he will be able to play against the Wisconsin football team at Madison this Saturday.

Charges Renewed Tuesday

Tuesday Pape and Fuhrman were brought to face charges of professionalism for the second time this season, when a committee appointed by the Hawkeye board in control of athletics, brought up the question in a long session here.

In the Tuesday meeting the status of both men was left unchanged until the report was made following an investigation. Pape has been included in the list of eligible Iowa gridders this season, but Fuhrman was declared ineligible more than a week ago, when the Iowa authorities appealed his case.

Charged With Professionalism

Both men are charged with playing professional football under as (Continued on Page 9)

Minneapolis Symphony Participates in Opening of Cyrus Northrop Hall

Amid martial strains played by a brass choir made up of Minneapolis Symphony orchestra members, the doors of the Cyrus Northrop Memorial auditorium at the University of Minnesota were officially thrown open for the first time at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday night, making the end of years of planning and 15 months of actual construction.

Among the 4,800 persons who packed the building for the program were state and university officials and prominent Minnesota alumni.

Liszt Concerto Scheduled

Eunice Norton, Minneapolis pianist who came from England to play appeared as the "surprise soloist" on the program being presented by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra under the direction of Henri Verbrugghen. Miss Norton played the Liszt E flat concerto for piano and orchestra, which she had played with the Boston Symphony orchestra and in London under the direction of Sir Henry Wood.

The second feature came at the close of the concert, when the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and the university band were combined in the playing of Tchaikovsky's "1812" overture, with a total of 205 musicians on the stage.

A cannon at the head of the mall was fired near the close of the concert, in accordance with the custom of giving a military salute at the dedication of a state building. The sound of the piece was also included as an effect in the overture.

Chimes Were Played

Mr. Verbrugghen used orchestra chimes in imitation of the cathedral bells. A device on his desk signalled the gun squad on the mall of the proper time for firing the cannon.

The prelude to "Die Meistersaenger von Nurnberg" by Wagner, the largo movement from Dvorak's "New World" symphony, and the symphonic poem "Les Preludes" by Liszt were also included on the program by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra.

Kohler Outlines Work of 1929 State Legislature

purchasing, highway traffic, the children's code, and reforestation was among that reviewed by Governor Kohler as he reviewed the work of the 1929 legislature. He briefly summarized accomplishments of various departments as follows:

Finance—The work of the new budget director in obtaining estimates of funds desired for future use, examining the contemplated expenditures, and preparing the report of the finances of the state and the budget.

Highways—The creation of a full-time highway commission, which, he said, exceeded all other issues except education.

Agriculture—the unification of agricultural departments into a single department.

Reckless Driving Hit

Purchasing—The placing of all state purchasing in the hands of a director of purchasing resulting in better prices.

Highway traffic—The removal of arbitrary laws and the desire to prevent reckless driving, fast or slow.

Children's code—The passage of the bill which protects the unfortunate child and improves his chances to become a useful citizen.

State parks—The inadvisability of purchasing state parks now with inadequate funds, and the reservation of 1,000,000 acres of land for reforestation.

530 Bills Passed

A total of 530 bills were passed and signed during the past season, according to Governor Kohler, mostly of constructive and general importance.

"Man-begotten popular government is so sadly in need of moral training and self-discipline that only a mother's patience, trust, and care can reasonably be expected to save the child," asserted Mr. Richberg. He credited voters before the Civil war with a lot more intelligent interest in local and national politics than is now shown.

The pre-Civil war voter, he insisted, furnished far more fertile a field for democratic government than the present day of automobiles, movies and radios. Millions more of persons went hysterical over the recent World's series, he holds, than showed interest in the visit of Ramsay MacDonald.

Helped Found Progressive Party

"We should not expect the intelligent voter to rise again," Mr. Richberg averred, "until into the daily lives of men and women there can be brought an immediate and direct interest in the game of politics. Such an interest can only be found in the work that we must want to do or in the play that we enjoy."

He then sketched his work in the organization of the Progressive party, which took place 19 years ago.

"It is hard," he said, "to find any progressive effort in American politics of the last quarter century that did not have some roots rising out of the soil of Wisconsin."

Reviewing some of the early failures which the party met, he asserted that political activity must become a part of the necessary work of life, or else a part of the day's entertainment if intelligent voters are to be produced in sufficient quantity to control public affairs.

He suggested that voters' intelligence would improve only with the fastening of the voters' interest upon the choice of a party leader and of reducing politics to the status of a friendly neighborhood game.

Urges Huge Party

He urged the Women's league to concentrate its efforts upon so increasing the intelligence and perception of the great mass of voters who now have no party so that in time they would be moulded into a huge party motivated by common sense and a few fundamental ideas. The ideals which should cause this move, he said, are:

1. A desire to increase human happiness by inducing a few million people who don't get much fun out of life to enjoy the process of educating themselves into becoming good citizens.

2. The desire to enrich human life by placing social leadership in the hands of that class which up to date had conferred the greatest benefits on mankind and received the least material rewards.

Convention Sets Bar Standards

Prof. Reindell Gives Report on Meeting at Memphis

Two years of college work, or its equivalent, in addition to three years of legal training, will be required of all applicants for admission to the bar, it was decided by the Section on Legal Education of the American Bar association in its meeting Oct. 22 in Memphis, according to O. S. Rundell, professor of law at Wisconsin, who returned from Memphis Wednesday.

The meeting of the section on legal education was held before the regular convention of the American Bar association from Oct. 23 to 25, and was attended by 500 leaders of the bar of the country, and it was overwhelmingly decided that the American Bar association adhere to the requirements for admission to the bar established in 1921, being the same as stated above.

Of Benefit To Student

"There is no question as to the benefit the student derives from his acquaintanceship with American life and American ideals which is an essential to one whose purpose is engaging in the practice of law in this country," Professor Rundell stated.

The raising of these standards of admission to the bar has its value in recommending to the states a standard through the action of which men are admitted to the bar. "In spite of these rapid rise of standards," Professor Rundell says, "statistics show that the number of students enrolled in the law schools of the United States has raised from 27,000 to 47,000 students for the years 1921 to 1927, and there has been a proportionate increase from 1927 to the present date."

Will Not Affect Enrollment

Due to the installation of a new rule that requires three instead of two years in the college of letters and science before one can be admitted to the Wisconsin law school, there has been a very considerable decrease in the number of first-year law students enrolled at the present time, but this will not be permanent, in the opinion of Professor Rundell, as many students who would have enrolled in the law school this year have been forced, by the new requirement, to remain another year in the college of letters and science.

Journal Ranks Cardinal Editorial Worthy of Prize

Commenting editorially on the editorial which appeared in the Daily Cardinal Wednesday morning, on Oklahoma Justice, the State Journal last night insisted that it deserved recommendation for a Pulitzer prize.

"Kenneth Gaston should be very glad that he lives in Wisconsin," the paper says.

In Oklahoma the judge about whom the editorial was written had sentenced a 17-year-old boy to death for holding up a filling station with a gun. Gaston did the same thing and was turned over to an alienist for examination with a 10-year parole sentence.

Engineers Drop St. Pat's Parade—All Praise to Polygon

WISCONSIN TRADITIONS, venerable grey-beards, are tottering and falling by the wayside in pairs and threes and half-dozen. Last year saw the end of the frosh-sophomore rush; this fall the green cap went the way of all flesh; and yesterday Polygon, governing board of the engineering schools, announced that the St. Pat's parade, most venerable of all traditions at Wisconsin is to be discontinued.

We have been desponding a little lately. Big Ten athletic scandals are not too complimentary to our illusions. Polygon's announcement does our heart good. There is some good in the old school yet. Traditions are things which need spontaneous student support if they are to be healthy; without it, they tremble and grow pale, and not even an interfraternity council can save them.

The green cap has long been outgrown, and last year's insipid St. Pat's parade, straggling down State street in the rain with a following of four urchins, was probably the most futile of all the year's collegiate gestures. It could be dragged along for a few more years if Polygon chose to furnish the cane; they have not chosen and the parade dies the death it should have known half a dozen years ago.

The passing of our traditions is a sign of approaching intelligence. We commend Polygon as a forerunner of a new and more intelligent college body.

Meditations on Jones

Editor Gives a Few Ex-Cathedra Opinions on Colleges

R. L. JONES, war-time editor of the State Journal, was in Madison last week-end; a Cardinal reporter interviewed him and drew forth such a series of heart-warmingly solid opinions as we have not heard for many a day.

Mr. Jones compared the Experimental college to Edison's first lamp; it was not so good as the kerosene lamp, but it was a start towards something better. Although we have never been able to word it so well, that is how we have felt about the college for some time. We have talked with a good many experimental college students; many of them were merely bewildered; a few thought they knew all there was to know; and most of them were still not quite sure whether their two years there had been wasted. We cannot yet give our adulation to the new educational scheme, but it is working itself out; time will prove its value or the lack of it.

"Fraternalities," Mr. Jones goes on to say, "are like Swiss cheese; they are full of holes but there's a lot of good substance in them." Fraternalities have been much maligned as poor nurseries of freshman scholarship, as teachers of snobbery, as hotbeds of immorality; but their great fault is the conformity which fraternalities enforce upon their

To the Dean of Men,
The University of Wisconsin.
Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your notification of my ineligibility for Fail Music 65 (Music appreciation) and Phy. ed. I hereby agree to discontinue this activity at once and not to resume it until I shall have been certified by your office as eligible.

Signed, Forrest Allen.

Just one more word, dear readers. The music appreciation (a one credit course) fail was incurred during the first semester 1928-29. The physical education deficiency is being worked off this semester. As far as I can figure it out, my general grade-point average is over 2. My grade-point average in my major, journalism, is 3.

E. F. Allen, retiring chief editorial writer.

members: the fraternity man must wear small-figured ties, long-pointed collars, and a three-button suit; he must date sorority women; he must cut classes, and say, at frequent intervals, "Never let school work interfere with your education"; he must, in a word, be smooth. Mr. Jones suggests as a cure the multiplication of fraternities. An increase in the number of fraternities would increase the number of students who were members; more members would mean a greater variety of standards. Intercourse between the old houses and the new in intramurals, activities, politics, and classes would probably tend to broaden the fraternity viewpoint. Mr. Jones' suggestion is not a new one, but it is cogent and sensible.

Mr. Jones went on to point out a fact which all college students who know Madison must have noticed: the unfriendly feeling of the town for the college. It is the shopkeepers of State street who benefit most when Wisconsin has a winning football team; and it is the same shopkeepers who shout the loudest about students morals. They send telegrams of congratulation to the coach when the team wins; they paste Wisconsin stickers on the windshields of their cars and hang Wisconsin pennants in their show windows. But they overcharge for their goods, pass enormous tax issues on fraternity property, and decry the sophomoric buffoonery in which immature students especially delight.

Mr. Jones has gone back to Tulsa; it is unfortunate there is no college there: he would do well by it.

Readers' Say-So

Tomato for Octy

Editor, The Daily Cardinal:

LET US CONSIDER today our own Octopus, L sophisticated and erudite catalogue of humor on the University of Wisconsin campus, which grows more "punny" each issue.

Since the ostensible purpose of a college humorous magazine is to spread a little sunshine into the otherwise drab and monotonous lives of our 10,000 students, and since all papers, humorous or otherwise, have held to the theory that they succeed financially and artistically in direct proportion to the increase in their sales, we have assumed that the items which make up the paper should be those that will be of interest to the greatest number of readers.

The most commendable feature of the latest issue of the Octopus, according to reviewers, was the first of a series of lists of the denizens of certain sorority houses, and their strong points, weaknesses, appearances, and most important of all, chances of marriage. Such a feature certainly involved much painstaking research, and was undoubtedly intended to be a big selling point.

We have been a member of this university for a year more or less, but circumstances have kept us, as it has 80 per cent of the student body, from entering the select circle of the socially elite whose stamping grounds are centered in Langdon street. Consequently we knew about one-eighth of the persons listed, and we feel that we have a wider acquaintance in the aforesaid "400" than has the majority of those outside fraternity and sorority portals.

To us, and to our fellow barbarians, the directory was practically meaningless, and yet we have always found our quarters quite eagerly sought by Octopus venders.

However, the directory looked vaguely familiar to us. We can remember our high school paper's humor and personal section very well, and the resemblance to "Octy's" directory is quite astonishing. The most fetching type of humor in our high school paper was such items as: "We wonder where a certain member of the football team

FACT AND FANCY

By EFA

"A STATE STREET beautifully decorated and brightly lighted until midnight, lined on both sides from the capitol square to the lower university campus with buildings of modern architecture, and recognized as the leading retail street of the state."

Amazing as this statement may sound to some of us, it is nonetheless the avowed goal of Madison's newest service-promotion club, the State Street Advancement Association. Nothing less than high praise and commendation should be given the association's aims, for if State street is not the ugliest tin-pan alley in Madison, then I do not know my four-lakes city. Of all the narrow, cluttered up, thoroughfares of architectural monstrosities I have ever seen, it is the worst.

But I am not getting too overjoyed with the prospects for betterment. There is a catch in the program somewhere. For instance, one of the prime movers stood up at the last meeting and said, "The small merchant on State street who has been unable to get publicity in the newspapers because he was not an advertiser will now get front-page publicity on his new front or his new electric sign because the influence of this association will be behind him." This speaker then illustrated his point by stating that only the merchants who ran large advertisements in the papers were able to secure publicity.

I have not the slightest idea that this spokesman is misinformed on the subject. If he can guarantee front-page position for State street publicity puffs, then he must certainly know his ground down at the State Journal and Capital Times, as well as over here at the Cardinal. I am equally sure that Editor & Publisher, which views all publicity seekers with a green eye, would stir its most burning ink at the sound of such brazen braggadocio.

INCLUDED IN THE association's program is the employment of a full-time secretary who will devote his high-priced energies to advertising the street as well as take part in solving parking and traffic problems. It is my humble suggestion that instead of hiring the full-time secretary, the group should hire a full-time wrecking crew, and keep it well supplied with dynamite. I should further suggest starting the demolition work at the corner of Lake and State with the destruction of that terrible eyesore across State from the Co-op. Continuing on toward the square the wreckers could happily blast away that ghastly bath tile monstrosity in white. As I recall it, there need be no pause in the wreckage on that side of the street from DeLonge's to the Capitol theatre. On the north side the devastation could proceed uninterrupted from Gilman to the Orpheum.

This, of course, is merely a suggestion. After these simple preliminaries are out of the way, the association could carry on an intelligent program of sign regulation. First, if the traditions of the Fifth Avenue Association of New York are to be followed, those hideous overhangings in front of the Capitol and Orpheum theaters would have to come down. The managers of these two show houses would probably be greatly relieved to do this, since their usefulness is zero. Everyone knows where these shows are, and as competitive facts the signs cancel one another out. Their removal alone would tone up the whole street something terrific. The rest of the State street merchants, as is to be expected, will gladly take down their overhanging signs in the interest of making the street beautiful.

NOTHING COULD BE more natural than that the merchants who rely chiefly on university patronage for their business should be interested in the appearance of the avenue connecting the "two hills of law and learning." Civic-spirited all, these men will not be content with tumble-down shacks simply because such slipshodness pays good dividends in progressively higher rents. Not these Madisonians, for they are proud of the renowned university and the noble capitol.

If the uniformed visitor to our town wonders why this ugly connecting link between our two proudest institutions has been permitted to sprawl in its slouchiness, we can hastily assure him that it is all a mistake, that there is now an association for the advancement of State street which will give everyone front-page publicity and solve the parking problem. If the same visitor returns next year and finds the high-curved alley the same as ever, we can slyly whisper in his ear that the dynamite shipment went astray and the steam shovel broke down. And if the visitor lives long enough and our excuses hold out, he may see the day when State street is as proud as lovely Mendota.

He may and he may not. I am not too hopeful, yet at the same time I am trying to be fair and a bit less pessimistic than ordinarily. Brown's new store is doubly encouraging, indicating a desire to make the building attractive as well as utilitarian, and obscuring to some extent as it does that awful white tower. If all future construction is as sensible as this, if the merchants can enforce sane regulation of electric signs, then the street may after all change its homely face.

The enjoyment of writing a column like this comes in the fact that so many people read the rockets every morning. To date Sinus has had one piece of fan mail; but, Oh! The comments.

And to start the day right, would you like to hear the week's best joke?

Modern Co.Ed.—When I get married it's going to be for alimony or money!

Even more modern C.E.—Well, what else is there to get married for?

"Wisconsin pays her Athletes," Says the paper in my hand. If that's the case, I want my pay For playing in the band!!!

Has anyone found out where Professor Troutman's new office is? We'll give you a hint. It's in Bascom hall, but unless you know where to look, it's harder to find than the bell system in the Pi Phi lodge.

Little Paul—I understand Mike is studying to be a pullman porter. Little John—Why?

L.P. (again)—Every time you see him, he's studying a book on birth control.

All of which puts us in mind of a contribution we received:

She was only a miller's daughter, and she'd been through the mill.

Let us warn the contributors! If we get any more jokes like the last, the person or persons responsible will not be admitted to the 6 Pop Arts Ball except in disguise. We will not be responsible for mob violence.

The Kappa Sigs are lonely, A sittin' home alone. They have no classes: only It's not much fun at home!

The rockets staff is really of the opinion that if such sluggards as the P.A.D.'s, Gordy Swarthout, Eddie Owens, and the Delta Zetas would not stand out in front of Bascom hall all day long and show off, it would clear up traffic and allow such prominent figures as Claude Jasper, the police force, Sinus and the A.O.P.'s to share the limelight. How about it Gordy!

May I mention again the trip to Minnesota. Call up Howie Black at the Alpha Chi Rho, Pi Phi, or Theta Xi house and get your tickets early. There is to be a special car on the train for dancing, and it's not a twelve-thirty night—We hope!

The Kappas had a wedding Wednesday and the yard was really decorated!

Beta Sigma Omicron leads in big Fan Mail Contest!

Each week Sinus is resolved to pay anyone back for each letter printed in this column. Simply address letters Sinus, Rockets staff, Cardinal, Memorial union, etc.

Following, are this week's prizes.

Teeth (Kappa Sigma House)—Please, dear Sinus, tell us the best cure for diphtheria.

Answer: Remove Bud Foster from the house. He is enough to give anyone diphtheria.

Mary (Cook at Sigma Kappa Phi House)—What is the best way to keep the boys from going out with my daughter?

Answer—Take two ounces of Cockroach chaser. Boil for three minutes, slice into thin slices, and serve with parsley, as a side-dish. This is guaranteed also to remove gin spots from dresses, and may be used as silver polish, or floor wax as desired.

I. M. Black (Beta Sigma Omicron House)—How can we be popular? And if we must follow that course, Why?

Answer—Be free and easy like the Kappas; be generous like the Delta Gammas; be wise like the Gamma Phi's; and virtuous like the Pi Phi's.

Again I say, enough is enough. Until I'm shot . . .

Summer Survey of Students Compiled for Highway Officials

Geologists Save Road Commission Thousands of Dollars Each Year

Contributing by cooperation with the state highway commission to a saving of approximately $231,000 per 100 miles of concrete paving, students in geology in the University of Wisconsin have just completed work on summer surveys which E. F. Bean, state geologist, is now assembling into reports to be sent to county and state highway officials.

Since 1920 Mr. Bean has directed the cooperative survey each summer of numerous road projects. In this period approximately 100 students have taken part in the work of exploring contemplated or proposed highway building locations for local road materials.

Cites Advantages

"The advantage of this combination is that the state gets the benefits of geological training directly applied to solving problems of locating highway materials," Mr. Bean comments. "The student benefits by getting opportunity to immediately apply to specific problems knowledge gained in university class rooms."

Students under direction of capable geologists make excavations near proposed highway sites at different points until satisfactory materials are found. Their report concerning the location and nature of the deposits goes to a materials engineer who determines whether the materials are of the right quality or of sufficient quantity to take care of the project.

By locating "local pits" of road materials the cost of freight, truck hauls, and re-handling are eliminated. On the Madison-Baraboo highway, says Mr. Bean, 35,000 yards of gravel were taken from a local pit. Netting the property owner 5 cents a cubic yard, the gravel was obtained by the state at an estimated saving of $30,000 on the 11 miles of paving.

Student Assistants

Students assisting in the surveys during the past summer were A. T. Eberhart, Verona, A. A. Hunzicker, Madison, R. L. McGann, Baraboo, K. S. Kurtunacker, Madison, R. B. McCormick, Madison, B. E. Karges, River Falls, E. H. Powell, Elkhorn, Lewis Gottschalk, Lake Mills, and E. E. Wilson, Verdin, Ill.

Heading the exploring parties in the capacity of chief geologist were the following:

J. E. Doerr jr., R. R. Licking, E. F. Gansen, P. D. Larson, G. T. Owen, and E. F. Williams. All of these but the last received their first training in this work under Mr. Bean. They have served on the surveys from three to nine summers.

Eastern Coach Has Formation for Baffling All

Washington, D. C. — The football year 1929 is to be featured by the newest formation, worked out this summer by Coach Lou Little, of Georgetown.

"The Scrambled Egg" formation, he calls it, and he firmly believes that he will eclipse them all, including Georgia Tech's Heisman shift, Penn's hidden ball trick and New York university's Prussian march.

Used Only on Offense

The play, which, it is said, will be used only on the offense, resembles somewhat a moving picture reverse construction of a dynamited rock.

Two groups are formed, the players crouching, facing each other in straight lines. Upon the calling of the proper signal each man starts wandering, apparently aimlessly, about the field. Although this appears to opposing players and spectators highly foolish, every player knows just what he is doing and the reason why.

Get Mixed Up

The object is to become so hopelessly mixed up, that the opposing players find it impossible to figure out who is where and who is who.

Or a sudden the mess takes form, every man jumps to the position he occupied before the ball was snapped. Then the play as called by the quarterback in the huddle, is executed.

Little believes no one ever will be able to decipher the play because it can be worked in so many hundred different ways. No matter how often the opposing team shifts its formation, it never can be sure it has done it correctly, Little says.

County Supervisor Proposes One Bank for State Deposits

A proposal to establish a state bank for governmental deposits has been offered by G. J. Herrmann, Milwaukee county supervisor, who also demands an investigation of chain banking methods as a preliminary step.

Mr. Herrmann said Sunday his plan was actuated by the fact that the state, cities and counties receive only two per cent interest on their deposits with banks, whereas the banks charge six per cent when any of these government units wish to borrow money.

The supervisors believe that a state bank, with as many branches as might be needed, should be created. He plans to present this idea before the Milwaukee county board with a recommendation to prepare a bill containing the proposal for the next legislature.

The state bank, he thinks, could handle all state, county, and municipal funds at 4 or 5 per cent and could in turn lend money to various counties or cities at the same rate.

MILLIONS OF STARS CAUSE MILLION COSMIC DOUBTS

"There is no peace on earth or in the sky, and the astronomer is not left to inspect the stars in the quiet meditation that the majesty of their movements in respect to human measurements would suggest," declared Prof. Joel Stebbins, director of the University of Wisconsin observatory, in a lecture on the "Heavens and Earth" before the class in contemporary thought at Northwestern University Thursday.

"The stars, to the average observer, appear innumerable," said Prof. Stebbins. "That is not so; to the naked eye only two or three thousand are visible above the horizon, but a photographic plate will record millions of stars through a large telescope."

Compute Stellar Density

"Matter is interchangeable with energy, and the astronomer works with the physicist in the calculation and recording of information about the heavenly bodies. For instance the companion star of Sirius has a density 2,000 times as great as platinum, only explained by the theory of stripped electrons, which permits a concentration of great mass in a small space. On the earth one pint of the material of which Sirius is composed would weigh 25 tons, and would travel a distance of 100 miles a second if it was dropped. And yet this material is a gas.

"The sun is an average sort of star, as stars run. And the earth, which with the sun is in the same great galaxy as the Milky Way, is peculiar in its composition of the most substantial material there is in the universe. Only Mars approaches the earth in conditions favorable to life in some form.

"Through the naked eye is visible the constellation of Andromeda, approximately thirty thousand light years across. The light it radiates is one and a half times the amount given out by the sun, and through the telescope these are some 300,000 of these spiral nebulae visible.

Time Element Complicates

"The trouble is," continued Prof. Stebbins, "things are not what they seem. We see the stars, not now, but years ago, as they were at the time the light rays we see started from their place in the heavens. And light travels 186,000 miles per second.

"As to the origin of the earth, the Laplacian theory of an orderly arrangements without chance as a factor has been discarded. Collisions between stars in our own galaxy occur at about the rate of one collision in ten billion years, but near approaches are more frequent.

"The earth is the result of one of these near approaches between the sun and some great dark star that swung from its nearly straight course as it approached, and drew from the sun a tremendous spouting of gaseous material. From that material were formed the earth and the other planets of our particular solar system. That was some ten billion years ago."

Carnegie Installs Testing Tunnel

Airplane Apparatus Second Only to Langleys Put in Pittsburgh School

Pittsburgh, Pa.—An airplane testing tunnel of the newest and most approved type, second only to the tunnel at Langley field, is soon to be installed by the aeronautical engineering department at Carnegie Tech. A rib-testing machine and special equipment for calibration of aeronautical instruments will also be added.

The expansion of the facilities for student instruction in aeronautics is a result of the rapid growth of this new course. There are 55 sophomores and 25 juniors enrolled in the aeronautical course. Present tendencies are toward an even larger group next year.

Describe Tunnel

The aerodynamic wind tunnel for Carnegie is of the Gottingen type, which is the most approved type in use. Pittsburgh has no airplane testing tunnel, the nearest being at Dayton, O. Addition of this equipment will further aid development of airplane manufacture in Pittsburgh and is therefore an important addition to the influence of Carnegie on Pittsburgh's industries.

The purpose of the tunnel is to test small models of the planes under conditions similar to those encountered in actual flight. The layman marvels at the huge but graceful airplanes which are appearing with increasing regularity.

Tests Are Important

He takes it for granted that these creations are the product of the engineer's ability to juggle higher mathematics and manipulate drawing instruments. But this is only a partial truth since the aircraft designer depends in a very large measure on the data obtained in wind tunnel tests.

The wind pressure on the model can be measured. With this information, plus certain formulas based on elementary principles, it becomes easy to design an airplane which seldom fails to perform as its designers expected.

The diameter at the experimental section of Carnegie's wind tunnel is four and one-half feet. Air is circulated by means of an eight-foot three-bladed propeller, driven by a 125 horsepower direct current motor. Wind velocities in excess of 100 miles an hour will be generated and it will be possible to test models having a wing span as large as 36 inches.

Beat Whom?

Illinois Freshmen Learn to Yell by Ancient Parental Method

Champaign, Ill.—A freshman, trudging slowly through the parkway bounded by Chalmers, Armory, Second, and Third streets, was suddenly waylaid by six sinister men.

Fearing bodily injured the benighted members of the class of '33 dared not utter a sound as the half-dozen raised him high on their shoulders.

"W-what do you want?" he stammered.

"Let's have a big 'Beat Iowa,'" the leader growled.

The frosh tried, but his vocal organs failed him and he was promptly set down and rewarded with a lusty stroke from a paddle.

"Now let's hear it," they chorused.

This time "Beat Iowa" resounded through the parkway, and the six strode back to train another first year man how to yell in proper Illinois style.

Airplane Industry Employs 25,000 in Plants in 29 States

There are 29 states in the Union that have plants engaged in manufacturing airplanes. New York, California, Michigan, Washington, and Ohio are the states which lead in this industry, although New Jersey and Connecticut rank above them in the production of airplane motors.

Seventy-eight firms covered by this survey reported 4,886 planes completed during 1928, giving employment to over 25,000 people. The indications are that the production for 1929 will be much greater.

This rapidly expanding industry offers opportunities in many fields for those who are properly trained. Besides the manufacturing of planes, it gives much other employment, both directly and indirectly. Factories and hangars must be built, pilots must be trained and employed, both for mail and commercial work; many mechanics and other employees are needed at the air fields. Numerous schools of instruction are coming into existence which give training in these various lines of work, including a number of schools which give the fundamentals of aviation through home study courses.

Employment is also given to persons engaged in the manufacture of materials such as metal, wood cloth, rubber, paint and other products used in the construction of airplanes. Airplanes have also materially increased the consumption of oil and gasoline.

Youths Attend Judging Contest

High School Boys Will Visit College of Agriculture

One thousand high school boys from the Smith-Hughes agricultural departments of the state and their coaches are expected at the college of agriculture Friday and Saturday for the annual judging contest which has been held at the college for many years.

The judging contests held this year will be larger in scope than those of other years. The pupils will judge livestock, poultry, crop, potato, dairy products, meats, farm mechanics, and singing contests.

A program of entertainment both varied and new is being planned for the boys and coaches this year. The annual banquet will be held on Friday evening at the men's gymnasium. Gov. Walter J. Kohler is expected to be the speaker of the evening.

The group will attend the Wisconsin-Iowa football game Saturday afternoon in a body. This feature of the week will be an event for most of the boys as many of them have not had the chance to see a football game at the university before.

Winners of the contests will be announced Saturday morning in the agricultural auditorium at eleven o'clock.

The boys and their coaches will drive to Madison for the contest, and while they are here the Park hotel will be their headquarters.

Student at U. of C. Commits Suicide; No Motives Evident

Why a college student who apparently had no worries or love affairs, who was considered a brilliant scholar and whose parents were moderately wealthy, should commit suicide was a problem at the University of Chicago recently when the body of William Anton Benes, 20, a junior, was found in his room in Gates hall.

A bottle of poison was found under the body, which lay face down on the bed. A caretaker had seen the body in that position Thursday morning, but did nothing till he saw it again in the same position Friday morning. The university issued the following statement:

"No cause is known for Benes' act. He had a brilliant record as a student with an 'A minus' average for his work. His instructors in his current courses said he was doing good work and was an able student."

The college widow in Michigan may no longer wear her boy friend's fraternity pin—so orders the state legislature.

The fraternity pins, long the symbol of affection in campus courtship, has been ruled out of that realm.

The legislature has made it a misdemeanor in Michigan for anyone to wear a lodge or fraternity pin if not a member of the organization the insignia represents.

Badger Offensive Strengthened

Injured Bees Leave to Play at South Bend

Wisconsin Hampered by Loss of Time for Preparation

With only a few days of active preparation for the battle, Wisconsin's "B" team will leave for South Bend after a light workout this afternoon to encounter Notre Dame's reserves on their own field Saturday.

Because of a mistake in the original date set for the contest, the Wisconsin Bees have been able to prepare for the Irish contest only during the past few days.

A number of injuries are still hampering the Cardinal reserves in their practice, and the line-up Saturday will probably not be full strength, because of the number of men who will have to remain on the bench nursing their injuries.

Wisconsin Underdogs

After receiving a decisive trimming at the hands of a powerful Illinois "B" team here last week, the Badgers have been training hard to get back into shape. They ruled underdogs in the contest Saturday, in which they will attempt to avenge the defeat which the regulars suffered at the hands of the Irish last week.

The strength of the Notre Dame outfit is a questionable affair. After making a powerful bid in their first game against the Western State Teachers' college, the Irish lost last week to Michigan state at Ypsilanti.

The explanation offered for the difference in the showings made by the Irish is that Rockne keeps a different number of men for the main contest each week, depending on the difficulty of the battle played by the regulars.

Irish Have Large Squad

Last week, when the Irish regulars met Wisconsin, Rockne and Lieb kept a large number of men on the bench, with the result that the reserves were considerably weakened. This week, however, the contest between the Notre Dame majors and Carnegie is not expected to be particularly hard, and consequently the Irish Bees should have a long list of powerful players.

Wisconsin's Bees had a well-balanced outfit at the start of the season, but injuries suffered in the two contests

Phi Mu and Charter House won by default from Pi Phi and Barnard. The players were: Chad: L. Verhulst and C. Schmidt; Tri Delta: B. Hayner and M. Owen; A. E. Phi: B. Cohn and E. Tollius; Langdon Hall: J. Heyda and M. Meyers.

The club holds an informal dinner once every two weeks and plans to entertain the various departments of the university throughout the year.

J. F. SEDGWICK '03 DIES

Burrus, '27, Advises Paying Athletes

Simultaneously with a long series of charges of proselytizing and subsidizing made against colleges and universities of the United States by the Carnegie Foundation, comes an article written by Jefferson Burrus, a Wisconsin grad of 1927, recommending high salaries for college athletes.

Burrus, who two years ago, published a pamphlet on college athletics, was a star end on the 1927 football team, captain of a crew which finished third at Poughkeepsie, prom chairman, Phi Beta Kappa man, and winner of the Rhodes scholarship.

Clarence E. Cason, professor of journalism at the University of Alabama, former member of the school of journalism staff here and once a member of the editorial staff of a local paper quotes Burrus in the current issue of the Nation.

It is recommended by Burrus that colleges pay their athletes high salaries for their services and use them as bill-boards to advertise the splendors of their alma mater.

"Recently," says Prof. Cason,

"I saw Burrus at the University club in Madison.

"There was not an ounce of bitterness in his attitude. His nine months in Idaho had done him lots of good. He plans to return to Oxford university. At Oxford he is determined to fill the role of Rhodes scholar with merit; he is determined not only to learn his law but also to fill in the gaps in his general education and intellectual development. I have not the slightest doubt that he will do both with distinction.

"But out of his experience has come the conviction that college athletes used him rather selfishly.

"He believes that the exploitation of physically endowed young men—some of whom have intellectual capacities—as if they were game fighting cocks or maddened bulls is something less than one ought to expect at the hands of his Alma Mater.

"He discovered in his junior year that he possessed a mind as well as powerful muscles, that modern football was not really an amateur sport at all—that it was from the outside a great show by means of which universities keyed up the loyalty of alumni associations and impressed the general taxpayers; from the inside, a relentless industry which built commodities of various kinds upon the blood and sinew and carefully nourished college spirit of the players.

"Burrus has the notion that fathers of college athletes and the public in general ought to know just how young men with husky frames are utilized as the raw material in a vast industry. His picture tends to show conclusively that a football player has no time or thought to give to anything but football unless he is willing to subject himself to normal strain.

"Burrus has no objection to the frank industrialization of football, for that seems consonant with the American spirit of today; nor does he object to the practical use of football by universities as a means of impressing their public deeply. (But) let the boy who wishes to play gladiator for a few years... he paid a fair price for his services. Salaries should be high because of

Team Prepares Aerial Attack for Hawkeyes

Three Elevens Have Rigid Practice Preparing for Iowa Battle

By BILL McILRATH

Iowa's football team arrives here at 9 o'clock this morning, loaded down with determination to send Wisconsin farther along the line of defeat in the game here Saturday.

The chances of a Hawkeye success are rather slim if indications in the Badger camp this week mean anything. The new offense which Coach Thistlethwaite and his staff is perfecting should tear some vicious holes in the Iowa line.

During the past week Coach Thistlethwaite has been demanding more punch and drive from his squad men. Thursday night, during the varsity scrimmage with the frosh for nearly two hours, the punch and drive appeared.

Varsity Makes Gains

Some of the backs carrying the ball were almost impossible to down. Although the frosh tackling was not up to the caliber to be expected from Big Ten outfits, the varsity was making gains far above what could reasonably be expected of anybody against a conference school.

At times the plays were a little unsteady, as some regular failed to get his man, or when the hole in the frosh line filled too rapidly, but during the last part of the scrimmage the two outfits that were scrimmaging were accounting for long gains through the yearling wall.

Three Teams Work

One eleven restricted most of its players to ground work, and all the backs that the Coach had playing got chances to break out into the open for long runs. Lusby and Behr looked particularly brilliant in the open field work, and occasionally Hal Rebholz smashed his way through the freshman wall and plunged ahead for 10 or 15 yards.

The other outfit worked most of the time on an aerial attack. Russ Rebholz did most of the passing, and Casey, Lew Smith, and Pacetti had plenty of chances to break loose, when they caught the passes.

A third eleven, on which Tury Oman was playing, was sent through signal drill during most of the afternoon.

Work Aerial Game

During the early part of the afternoon Coaches Thistlethwaite and Cuisinier had the men practicing on receiving passes. On the receiving end of the line, Russ Rebholz, who was both passing and receiving, Sammy Behr, and several of the ends looked good. Milt Gantenbein did not get a chance to receive, as he was still standing on the sidelines in civilian clothes. His injury has not yet healed to the point where he can risk himself in the game.

The practice Thursday night was the only chance that the Badgers have had in perfecting an offense through active scrimmage this week. Monday's workout was rather light, and Tuesday afternoon the work the men got was rather in the line of fighting than in drilling because of the weather. Wednesday night the storm forced the Badgers indoors.

Iowa's Hopes Aroused

The game Saturday promises to be a real battle between an outfit bound and determined to make up for a pair of defeats and another squad hoping to continue its strong bid for the conference title. Iowa, after losing to Ohio State by a single point in their first game of the year, came back last week to tie Illinois, and is reported to be one of the strongest outfits in the conference.

Another factor entering into Iowa's hopes is that the last two times that the Hawks have played Wisconsin here they have marched off victoriously.

participate. Young Myers, the Purdue mascot, is a Forensic expert of note who accompanies the team as well as the glee club on their tours. Phelan will speak on the subject of the Purdue-Chicago game. Big Ten coaches will continue to send in last minute telegrams after the final workout of the teams on Friday afternoon.

A. E. Pi's Tie; Faville Wins

Only Three Touchdowns Made in Intramural Games Thursday

Only three touchdowns were made in the two intramural games played Thursday afternoon.

Use of a lateral pass effectively counted against Noyes house, when Faville blanked them 6 to 0, to advance another notch in the dormitory race. Theta Chi and Alpha Epsilon Pi showed a good brand of kicking and defense work as they fought to a seven-all tie.

Faville House Wins Over Noyes by 6-0 Score

A long lateral pass, Merson to Milbee, enabled Faville house of Adams hall to gain another leg on the dormitory touchball trophy when they downed Noyes house, 6-0 Thursday.

Soon after the opening whistle, with the winners in scoring position on the enemy 20 yard line, Merson threw to Milbee, who was playing far out toward the sidelines, for a touchdown. Although Noyes made many attempts to score their efforts were futile; the strong Faville secondary defense broke up their lengthy passing attempts.

The line-up: Faville: RE Hibbard, C Brower, LE Milbee, QB Ermenc, RHB Fishman, LHB Merson, FB Randolph. Noyes: RE Capron, C Harvey, LE Schwab, QB Ritholz, RHB Byers, LHB Frankie, FB Botsford.

Theta Chi's Score to Tie A. E. Pi's 7-7

After trailing during almost the entire contest, Theta Chi fraternity stepped out, counted a touchdown, and kicked goal to tie the speedy Alpha Epsilon Pi team, 7-7, Thursday at the intramural field.

Until the last half of the fourth quarter, Theta Chi had been held by the strong Alpha Epsilon Pi line, Rothman, right end performing brilliantly. With but six minutes to play to the end of the game, Theta Chi launched an aerial attack that culminated in a touchdown, Rose to J. Paul, on a 60-yard pass. With the result of the contest hanging in the balance, Rose stepped up and planted the oval between the goal posts for the extra point.

Alpha Epsilon Pi garnered their seven points when Wald, on the 50-yard line shot the ball to Rothman who received it on the 20 yard marker and trotted across the line for a touchdown.

Because the teams were so evenly matched, rough play was prevalent on both sides and frequently the game was stopped to iron out some difficulty. Both teams have now won two games, lost one and tied one.

The line-up: Alpha Epsilon Pi: RE Rottman, C H. Fox, LE Turner, QB Feld, RHB Nashban, LHB P. Fox, FB Beller. Theta Chi: RE Moore, C Manzer, LE Rose, QB M. Paul, RHB J. Paul, LHB Woerner, FB Secker. Umpire, Kramer.

2,000 Hawkeyes Plan Trek to Game; 30,000 to Attend

More than 2,000 Hawkeye students and an equal number of alumni will trek to Madison this week-end for the Wisconsin-Iowa game. Although this large crowd is expected to be on hand, George Louis announced Thursday that tickets were still available, and that the open sale would continue until game time. The Dads' Day crowd will undoubtedly eclipse the attendance mark set at the Northwestern game. Indications are that there will be a crowd of over 30,000 to witness the game at Camp Randall this week.

Annual Badger Steeplechase Run off Today

The annual Wisconsin steeplechase will be held this afternoon at the intramural field. Anyone, except members of the varsity cross country squad is eligible to enter the race. The proximity of the Iowa cross country meet Saturday morning has caused Coach Jones to bar all the varsity harriers.

The race, an obstacle affair, is run over a two mile course. The record for the event here at Wisconsin is held by Blair, who won the race in 1927. His time was 11 minutes and 2 seconds.

The winner of the race will be awarded points toward his class numerals. Instead of water hazards which are used as obstacles at the Olympic games, there will be hurdles every 440 yards. All those who wish to enter this event should report promptly at 4:30 to Coach Jones in the gym annex.

Seats have been provided for a battalion of 110 R. O. T. C. students in charge of Phillip Judson '31, senior cadet, who are responsible for the passing of the contribution buckets at the Homecoming game, Nov. 2.

The buckets will be passed through the stadium between halves. The proceeds will be used to meet the expenses of sending the band to the Chicago game, Nov. 9.

Harriers Meet Iowa Saturday

Hawkeyes Bring Very Strong Team to Run Against Badgers

The Wisconsin Harriers are set to avenge the defeat handed them by the Hawkeyes last year, when the two squads meet at Madison Saturday morning. Coach Jones is basing his hopes of victory on the eight Badger harriers who finished best at the quadrangular meet at Evanston last Saturday. They are Fallows, Goldsworthy, Ocock, Cortwright, Wohlge-muth, Capt. Fink, Foolsom and Steenis.

Although the team showed potential power by their clean cut victory in that meet; they did not encounter any real high class competition, with the exception of Wilson of Notre Dame, a member of the 1926 Canadian Olympic team and a first-class harrier. He won the race when Fallows, the Wisconsin speed merchant, weakened on the home stretch. However, since Wisconsin annexed third, fourth, fifth, and sixth positions, they won the meet handsly.

Iowa is the first big Ten opponent to face the Badgers this season. The Hawkeyes have a veteran contingent and promise to cause Coach Jones' harriers plenty of trouble. Last Saturday they took Missouri into camp to the tune of 41 to 16. The five men that Coach Bressenham entered in the Missouri meet topped the first five positions.

The Hawkeye squad is built about five veterans; Wickey, Trott, Kelly, Naylor, and Everingham as fast a quintet as has been seen on cross-country courses in some time.

The race will start in front of the gym annex at 11 a. m. Saturday morning. The harriers will travel west on Longdon street to Park street where they will veer north to the lake following the lake drive to Picnic point and returning via the same route, an aggregate distance of four miles.

A special feature of the race is that during the race the spectators will be furnished with a report of the positions of the different contestants at various points on the route.

Purdue Coach Will Be Heard on WLS Pep Session Friday

Coach Jimmy Phelan of Purdue will head the list on the WLS Big Ten Football Pep session Friday evening at 9:30 p. m. Cheerleaders from the University of Chicago, George Myers, 7-year-old mascot of the Purdue team, and the Alpha Pi Chapter of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity will

Squad of 200 Whittled Down to Group of 60

Two former Badger cage stars, George Nelson and Ray Ellerman, are coaching this year's frosh basketball squad, which has been working out for the past month. Nearly 200 men reported the first day; since that time the squad has been gradually narrowed down to the present number of 60.

The prospects have been divided into two groups so that the coaches will be able to get a better line on the ability of each man. At present the candidates are meeting three times a week.

It is too early to give an accurate list of outstanding players; however, the coaches have been impressed by the knowledge of fundamentals displayed by about 20 men. Scrimmages which will be started Monday, may bring out some new luminaries.

There is plenty of material for the forward positions. Peters of La Crosse, Wis., Wickman of Barrington, Ill., Strain of Harvard, Ill., Goodell of Loda, Ill., Strampe of Lodi, Wis., Parth of Columbus, Wis., McKenna of Madison, and Kapelski of Laporte, Ind., appear to be the most likely prospects. Most of these men are small and fast.

The centers are led by a rangy lad named Surquist who stretches a mere 6 feet 8 inches from the ground. He is being taught how to handle himself on the floor and is progressing rapidly. Other candidates for this position are Greiwark of Laporte, Ind., Hammond of New York City, and a lad named Ahlgren, who is on the hospital list at present.

The outstanding guards are Pollack of Lake View high school, Chicago, Ill., Ryckman of Waukegan, Ill., Carver and Liebenson of Oshkosh, Oshkosh of Tilden high school, Chicago, Kocvara of Madison, and Knetchth of Madison. The majority of these men are big and husky, which should make Doc Meanwell smile.

The coaches state that any man who would like to try out for the team will be given a fair opportunity to show his wares.

sumed names. The appeal in Fuhrman's case was based on a statement emanating from Iowa officials that the guard had played semi-professional football under his own name and without pay.

In the developments today it was understood that the Big Ten charges against Pape included a report that he played under the name of King with the Dubuque professional football team against Elizabeth, Ill., October 17, 1926, and against the Dubuque Cardinals, Oct. 31, 1926.

Says He Knows Pape
Graves, who made the latest report concerning the eligibility of the Iowa star, said that he knows Pape and is positive that he did not play in either of the games. Graves was attending Dubuque university at the time. He also denied that Fuhrman played in either of the games.

Pape, Fuhrman, and Director of Athletics Lauer were in Dubuque today investigating the charges. They were expected to return late tonight, and to make a report to the Hawkeye eligibility committee tomorrow.

Neubert Injured
Among the notable injuries is that of Larry Neubert, powerful plunging fullback, who has made some great showings this season, and who accounted for the touchdown against Michigan's junior squad.

Against Illinois last week, the Wisconsin Bees looked rather weak. Wisconsin's offense was weak and uncertain. However, the Badgers showed enough strength in the pinches to hold the Illini, and it was only through a couple of bad breaks that the invaders were able to score.

Hawkeyes Hope Line Will Duplicate Brilliant Illinois Performance

Iowa City—Defeat two weeks ago, tie last Saturday, and now, if the upward trend of University of Iowa's football fortunes is to continue—a victory over the University of Wisconsin eleven at Madison Saturday afternoon. Such is the reasoning of the Hawkeye team which lost a 7 to 6 game at Ohio State then came back to tie the champion Illini at seven points all.

The Iowans go against the Badgers hoping that the line will duplicate its game against Illinois, and that the Wisconsin tackling and blocking will have lost none of the uncertainty shown in the Notre Dame encounter.

Iowa is prepared to cope with almost any kind of a ground-gaining game, including a running offense with Oman, the ned Finnish halfback, and with Behr, the big quarterback. Passes are most feared by the Hawkeyes, for the team all season has never been quite definite about stoppage methods.

Captain Glasgow will be in better shape than last week, and again will be looked to for the major part of the yard making. If conditions are at all auspicious, the Hawkeyes may hurl passes at more frequently intervals than customary for Iowa teams. Special work on an aerial attack has been given to the team this week.

For the third week in succession, the Hawkeyes will be outweighed by the opposing team. The difference, however is only two pounds to the man. Wisconsin has more weight on the left side of the line and at center, while Iowa backs average some two pounds heavier.

The game is the twelfth in history between the two universities. Wisconsin has won nine, but both of Iowa's victories were scored on the Badger gridiron. In the 1928 game, Wisconsin shattered Iowa championship hopes with a 13 to 0 victory on a nearly flooded field.

the morning, and the football game, Pres. Glenn Frank's reception, the Fathers-Faculty banquet, and the Wisconsin Union dance or the Wisconsin Players' production of "Kempy" during the afternoon and evening.

Banquet at 6 p. m.
The sale of tickets in section D of Camp Randall stadium, which has been especially reserved for fathers and their sons and daughters, will be continued until 5 p. m. today, John Bergstresser '25, alumni recorder, said Thursday. The extension has been made in order to allow students who have not yet received their regular tickets to exchange them for seats in the special section. Since all mail orders have been filled, it is expected that all such requests will be taken care of at the ticket office before the close of business today.

Pres. Frank's reception will take place in the Assembly room of the Memorial Union at 5 p. m. or as soon as possible after the game. The banquet is scheduled for 6 p. m. in the Great hall. The advance sale of tickets just falls short of the 600 quota. Today's demand is expected to take care of all those that are left.

Crew Indoors as Wind Howls

Freshmen Put Through Usual Paces on Machines in Loft

The high wind that swept Lake Mendota Thursday afternoon again prevented the varsity crew from rowing in the shells. During the morning the weather was favorable and Coach Murphy planned to hold a practice during the afternoon, but the strong wind that sprung up about noon failed to subside, and the practice was cancelled.

The inclement weather, however, did not excuse the freshman crew candidates, and they went through their usual workout on the machines in the loft of the gym annex. Coach Orth promised the frosh that they would get their long-awaited workout in the barge Friday afternoon unless Mendota freezes over.

The barge, which was especially constructed for the University of Wisconsin by a firm in Washington, is at present stored in the boathouse. It is constructed entirely of heavy oak planking and will accommodate 16 men. There is a gangway down the center and room for two coxswains in the stern. Coach Murphy was very enthusiastic in his approval of the new equipment.

D. W. Mead Speaks on Boulder Dam

Mead stated: "If this dam should ever fail it would mean destruction and death. I do not think it is ever warranted, and the United States has not the right to endanger the lives of the people below the dam with an experiment."

The Boulder Dam is to be twice as big as any other dam in the world, and is to cost two times as much. The estimated cost is $165,000,000, and the cost of getting the power to California is estimated as being $250,000,000.

"The Boulder Dam will solve the question of water supply for the whole valley, but it will not take care of the bigger floods," is the estimation of Mr. Mead. "The danger in my judgment is, in a long period of years with no floods, that work on the levees will be neglected and thus in the time of a big flood the people would be put in imminent danger. The dam will stop the river for a while so that some preparations may be made, however."

Prof. Mead does not state definitely whether he is for or against the project. Before Prof. Mead's speech, Pres. Grover C. Neff, of the Great Lakes division, stated that an attack is being made on privately owned utilities throughout the nation and he urges the engineers to help educate the public, as to the dangers of this system. The "public is being misled and doesn't understand, and it is the duty of every engineer to acquaint the public with the facts of the situation."

the unusual talent required and the serious hazards involved. "Let coaches discontinue their furtive and evasive bids for material, in favor of open competitive bidding on a frankly commercial basis. The fact that the amateur spirit no longer prevails in the major sports of many colleges should be recognized and dealt with as a reality."

Iowa Students Invited to Attend Union Dance Here

The Wisconsin Union is carrying out its policy of inviting out-of-town students to Union dances by extending such an invitation to Iowa students to attend the Wisconsin-Iowa dance Friday night, Oct. 25, in Great hall. This policy was established two weeks ago at the Wisconsin-Northwestern dance.

Franklin Prinz '30 and his Wisconsin Union dance orchestra will play for the regular Union dance Saturday night. It is intended to procure an out of town orchestra for the Friday night affair.

Tickets for the dance each night will be sold at the door at $1.50 a couple. Both dances will last from 9 to 12 p. m.

Reid Winsey '30, homecoming chairman, outlined the work that the club will do for homecoming.

Delta Gamma's and Medics Win

Latter Looks Good in Con- quering Sigma Kappa, 4-0; Gamma Phi's Lose

The Medics beat Sigma Kappa, 4-0, and Delta Gamma conquered Gamma Phi 3-1 in two women's intramural field hockey games yesterday afternoon.

The Medics were a good team and their center forward, Carol Rice, had little difficulty in scoring the two goals that her team got in each half. The Sigma Kappas showed a stubborn defense but lacked the ability to score. The lineups for the game were: Medics: D. Rogazir, C. Rice, F. Hillebrandt, C. Jackson, F. Mahoney, M. Rousche, J. Paxson, H. Bover, L. Elsing, and R. Chalfont.

Sigma Kappa: F. Gunderson, I. Wollaege, O. Kelley, E. Torrence, M. Orth, A. Thomas, J. Fish, and K. Burg.

Delta Gamma's Triumph
The Delta Gamma's had a closer battle with the Gamma Phi's, but were never seriously threatened. M. Chase, S. Hobbs, and M. Darling made the D. G. scores and E. Hart accounted for the Gamma Phi marker.

The lineups for the game were: D. G.: M. Beardmore, J. Hodges, M. Chase, Almer, S. Hobbs, D. Chelberg, M. Osmond, M. Darling, McCoy. Gamma Phi: H. McLellan, E. Hart, Cool, Kimball, H. Bartlett, E. Scott, M. Harris.

Schedule is Changed
The officials for the first game were Charlotte Flint and Katherine Wasson and for the second Mercedes Weiss and Edith Barton.

Chadbourne is scheduled to meet A. O. Phi at 4:30 p. m. Friday instead of the Grads-Pi Phi game, as was announced previously.

'Equal Rights' Lauds Bardwell

Superintendent Praised by Magazine for Defending Married Women Teachers

The opinion of R. W. Bardwell, superintendent of Madison schools, that the object of public schools is to educate children, and that the question of whether a teacher is married or not is no consideration in hiring her, is praised in an editorial in the current issue of "Equal Rights," a weekly magazine published by the National Woman's party.

The issue contains an article on attempts to oust married women teachers in New Jersey and Maryland, and the discussion which arose in the Madison school board recently, when one member of the board, H. C. Schenck, expressed the opinion that unmarried women teachers should not have to compete with married women.

Cites Object

In an editorial, the magazine says, after commenting that certain superintendents of schools "appear to believe that the primary function of the public schools is to provide a means of livelihood for young, unmarried women."

"It is refreshing, under those circumstances to learn that Mr. R. W. Bardwell, superintendent of schools in Madison, Wis., holds a different opinion. He apparently believes that the object of the public school system is to educate children, a most original idea, and for this reason he wishes to retain in the service of the Madison schools the older and more experienced married women teachers, even if by so doing a few inexperienced normal school graduates are temporarily deprived of a job. This is a novel and interesting viewpoint and one worthy of consideration.

"Superintendent Bardwell maintains that efficiency in the profession of teaching and not the need for a job should determine the tenure of office for a teacher in the public schools.

Quotes Editorial

"If one believes that the purpose of the public schools is to educate children, it follows as the night the day that Mr. Bardwell is right, for the teacher is the corner-stone of the whole system; but if one holds on the contrary that the public schools are a sort of eleemosynary institution designed to provide salaries for young, inexperienced, normal school graduates, then it must be confessed that Mr. Bardwell is wrong."

Reprinting a news report from

The Wisconsin State Journal giving the situation in the Madison school board, the magazine then quotes from an editorial in the Capital Times at Madison in which it was stated that the fitness of the teacher should be the only consideration and it was further stated that the blame for married women's continuing their outside work should be placed on "the real and enormous dishonesty and greed of a system which forces these eight women to continue with their work even though married," the magazine comments:

"The Capital Times seems to ignore utterly the fact that married women want to support themselves, and that they do not dream at all of a 'system' under which their husbands earn all the family living while they enjoy leisure. Married women are coming more and more to feel that the kind of 'system' they would like would be one in which they and their husbands earn livings and the husbands have more leisure as a result to spend with their wives and children."

Miss Zona Gale of Portage is one of the associate editors of the magazine, "Equal Rights."

Purdue Band to Make Trip for Badger Game

Lafayette, Ind.—Official word has been received that the Purdue military band will make the trip to the Wisconsin game, after much bickering back and forth. The band will leave Friday night before the game, making the trip on Pullman cars. After arriving in Madison in the morning, the band will put up at one of the hotels in the city. They will entrain at midnight after the game Saturday, arriving in Lafayette Sunday noon. One hundred and ten men will make the trip, each man paying $3.50 of his own expenses. The remainder comes from the band fund.

Taking a Drink No Crime, Says Blease, Southern Senator

Washington—Senator Cole Blease, South Carolina, democrat, considers taking a drink no crime.

Speaking on "law enforcement" before the Washington open forum recently, Blease, a political dry, outlined his personal views on prohibition, declaring there was no crime in taking a drink and admitting he occasionally takes one himself.

He blamed part of the reputed dampness of this city on the embassies, recommending that the liquor be taken from the embassies and poured into the Potomac—or given to the poor.

Indiana Plans New Building

Hoosier University Will Build New Chemistry Structure

Bloomington, Ind.—All plans, specifications and blue prints for the new chemistry building at the University of Indiana will be submitted to the board of trustees for examination at its next meeting on Oct. 30. Robert Frost Daggett, of Indianapolis is the architect in charge. Seven assistants are helping him finish the plans.

The construction of the building is to cost $400,000. Of this amount $180,000 is now available at Indianapolis. The remainder of the sum will be available after Jan. 10, 1930. The money now on hand was gathered from appropriations and has been available since Oct. 1.

The new chemistry building is to be the largest on the campus. It will contain the most modern and complete equipment of any department on the campus and will be one of the most complete chemical departments in the middle-western schools.

An auditorium seating more than 400 persons will be in one of the extensions of the building. It will be fitted with the most modern design of demonstration tables and will be suitable for all chemical demonstrations.

A lantern slide projector and screen will be part of the equipment with mechanically operated screens at the windows.

Tunnel extensions for heating, ventilation and lighting are to be included in the estimated cost of the building but furniture and other equipment will be purchased at an additional cost.

New Penn State Building Ranks With Nation's Best

State College, Penn.—The new Mineral Industries building now under construction will cost $450,000 unequipped, and will be one of the finest buildings devoted to mineral industry education in America, stated Dean Edward Steidle, head of the School of Mines and Metallurgy, yesterday.

"Reflecting every phase of the mineral industries in Pennsylvania," Dean Steidle disclosed, "the new building and the new program of the school will have hearty public approval and the unqualified support of the mineral industries of the state."

Conforming with the style of architecture used in nearby dormitories and Recreation hall, the new building will be of rose brick, trimmed in white stone. The structure will be two hundred feet in length and will have wings at each end one hundred and thirty-five feet deep.

Tricky Fire Escape Protects Nebraska University Co-ed

Sorority Houses Have Novel Means of Keeping Off 'Peeping Toms'

Lincoln, Neb.—The squabble at Grinnell college between the dean of women and the fire chief in regard to the relative need and use of fire escapes on the women's dormitories is not likely to be repeated at Nebraska. To prevent romantic young swains from bringing their dates home at the wee small hours in the morning and smuggling them into their rooms up the fire escapes, a fifteen foot fence was built around the base of the fire escapes on the women's dormitories at Grinnell.

College officials insisted that the fences were ornamental and intended to keep "peeping toms" out instead of keeping the coeds in after 10 o'clock. The fire chief insists that the fence is a fire hazard and must come down. The dean of women maintains that the buildings are fire proof and that the fire escapes are not needed and that besides there are other exits in the dormitories. Fences, however, came down by order of the fire chief.

Nebraska has a novel way of solving the difficulty perplexing the authorities at Grinnell. The newer sorority houses are fully equipped with adequate fire escapes but the coeds cannot sneak in without being detected. The fire escapes at Nebraska are about five feet off the ground.

A person can reach up and pull down an extension ladder without any difficulty. So far well and good—but when the extension ladder is lowered to the ground an automatic bell rings in the house mother's room and immediately an angered matron comes rushing out to reprimand the unfortunate coed and her escort.

At Grinnell objections run high. "In no case attempt to use the fire escapes," satirically advised the Scarlet and Black, student publication. Campus leaders who were interviewed spoke pleasantly of zoos and penitentiaries.

Rat Has 'Specs' Lost Glasses Discovered in Animal's Home Under Pier

The glasses worn by a university student were, in the opinion of a Lake Mendota muskrat, a suitable ornament for his home, and as a result, the student, Robert Wagershauser '30, is again in possession of the glasses, lost last June.

Wagershauser lost his glasses when he dove from the end of the Beta Theta Pi pier on Lake Mendota last June. With Jack Hayward '30, another student, he searched vainly under the water for his lost "specs."

Later came a muskrat to build a home under the steps of the pier, and finding the glasses he included them as a part of the architectural design of his new home. He left the curved wires of the glasses projecting from the house, however, and when Hayward, who was Wagershauser's swimming companion dove off the pier Thursday he spied the "specs" and tore them out of the muskrat's house. This morning the glasses were returned to Wagershauser, and were still in good condition.

Muskrets are commonly known to be attracted by bright objects, and will use them in the construction of their houses.

Gopher Geology Students Unearth Huge Jaw of Prehistoric Mammoth

Minneapolis, Minn.—A lower jaw of a giant animal believed to be a prehistoric mammoth, two composite teeth weighing 15 or 16 pounds each and a shoulder blade over a foot wide are some of the specimens John Brown and E. H. Strand, geology students at the University of Minnesota, brought back with them from Rice Lake where they have been excavating under the direction of Prof. Clinton L. Stauffer.

The geology department was notified of the discovery of some bones by workmen who are digging a drainage ditch which is part of the reclamation project being carried out at Hollandale, near Albert Lea.

The farm on which the specimens were found is the property of Putman D. McMillan. Several years ago the geology department secured a number of specimens from the same ditch when it was first dug.

Buffalo Bones Discovered

A large number of bones were found but most of them were from buffaloes. One specimen which was unearthed is the lower jaw of one of the ancient mammoths that roamed North America following the last glacial age.

The jaw bone is now being prepared in the geology workrooms for exhibit. Two teeth are preserved. Each is 15 or 16 inches long with a chewing surface at least four inches wide.

Shoulder, Leg Bones Found
The end of a shoulder bone and the head of a bone in the leg are also being prepared.

It is possible that the head of the animal may be reconstructed with the parts added that were found at the time of the previous exhibition. For the present the remains will be placed in the geology museum, Dr. Stauffer said.

The find was called by geologists one of the best ever unearthed in Minnesota. The tusks are missing but the museum has vertebrae, ribs and a number of leg bones.

The mammal, which became extinct 50,000 to 100,000 years ago, is a member of the specie Elephas Jeffersonii.

Fraternity House at Western School Is Quarantined

Boulder, Colo.—Is the quarantine for scarlet fever at the Phi Gamma Delta house a boon or a penalty? The 22 men living in the closed house have adopted strict silence in their opinions.

Francis Beeler, a transfer student from Ohio State, contracted the disease, and the quarantine was placed on the fraternity house recently. Beeler was taken to the county hospital in Boulder. The quarantine will be removed in the near future, providing there is no other case of scarlet fever in the house by that time.

Fortunately, a number of the football men are not living in the house so that the varsity football team will not be without its regular lineup.

The Fijis refuse to give any infor-

Change Made in 'Kempy' Cast

Janet Lucksinger '30 Ineligible; Katherine Fitz Given Role in Play

With 24 hours in which to memorize her part, Katherine Fitz, grad., will replace Janet Lucksinger '30 as Ma Bence in "Kempy" tonight.

Miss Lucksinger, who has continuously insisted on her eligibility, was dropped from the cast Thursday night when R. W. West, professor of speech pathology, confirmed an incomplete in his course.

Troutman Had Choice

Miss Fitz, according to J. Russell Lane, manager of the University theater, is an experienced actress and is expected to give an excellent performance Friday night. She was formerly with the Pasadena players in California and has played with stock companies in repertory where fast memorization was necessary.

Faced with the choice of postponing the first performance of "Kempy" until Homecoming, or of obtaining a special dispensation for Miss Lucksinger, W. C. Troutman, director, decided to put another actress into the part.

To Obey Eligibility

In regard to the substitution, Mr. Troutman said,

"At the beginning of the semester we requested that all persons with doubtful eligibility withdraw from the tryouts. We intend strictly to exclude ineligible persons from theater activities regardless of the importance of their work with us."

Before the university committee on student life Wednesday, Mr. Lane announced that the Wisconsin Players will make no requests for special dispensations or leniency in matters of eligibility this year.

"The theater," he said, "will be a university activity under university government, and will make no attempt to have faculty rulings set aside to permit ineligible students to appear in productions."

Use Little Theater in Creative Work, Says Ethel Rockwell

The little theater is more and more coming to be the community's only hope for seeing the leading current plays and the great dramatic classics, Miss Ethel T. Rockwell, chief of the extension bureau of dramatic activities at the University of Wisconsin, commented in a talk recently over WHA, University of Wisconsin radio station, in a talk on "The Little Theater: A Community's Best Avocation."

"You who keep the wheels of the world going in factory, office, shop, and home, do you like to build castles in Spain? Make them a reality in your own town theater," Miss Rockwell urged. "Do you have a flare for designing costumes which you cannot wear in your workaday world? Utilizing all of the arts, this form of dramatic activity gives utmost opportunity for self-expression."

Americans are too dominated by a "sitting and looking" complex, Miss Rockwell continued, and our civilization is in grave danger of losing the real spirit of play and substituting for it the form of amusement which comes from the outside, rather than from the inside.

That the little theater can fill the demand for dramatic entertainment left unfilled by the disappearing road-shows and the vanishing silent pictures, and that it can at the same time furnish everyone an opportunity for self-activity and creative work, is Miss Rockwell's opinion.

Tariff Research Work Conducted Again This Year

Tariff research work conducted during the last semester of 1928-29 under the direction of Prof. B. H. Hibbard, chairman of the agricultural economics department, and Prof. John R. Commons and Prof. Selig Perlman of the Department of economics, will be continued this year under the direction of Prof. Hibbard and Commons.

The work of last semester covered 24 agricultural commodities, and it is aimed to bring these studies up to date and, in addition, to do work on a number of manufactured products such as iron and steel, lumber, and cotton, woolen, silk, and rayon manufactured goods.

Besides those in direct charge of the study, nine graduate students are working on the project under the supervision of Prof. Walter A. Morton. These students are R. R. Renne, T. W. Schultz, H. R. Mohat, and L. S. Ellis who were working on the project last year, and Miss Lee Michelson, J. G. Maddox, F. H. Turner, Charles Alexander, and F. M. Fitch who are new students at Wisconsin this year.

The main object of the studies is to determine the effectiveness of the various tariff rates in raising prices in this country. No appraisal of the tariff as a national policy has been attempted.

A volume will be edited at the end of the year to cover all the work done in tariff research, and as the studies progress, periodical releases will be made.

Kedroff Four to Open Series

Famous Quartet Offers First
Free Union Concert
Next Sunday

The world famous Kedroff quartet will be presented by the Wisconsin Union through its program committee on Sunday, Nov. 10 at 4 p. m. in the Great hall of the Union, as the first of its series of Sunday afternoon music hours which will be offered without charge to students and other members of the Union during the winter and spring season.

The series will include many well known local artists as well as outside artists, according to Freeman Butts '31, chairman of the program committee.

Second Appearance In Union

The enthusiastic reception of the quartet last year in the Union was the first step toward an ultimate aim of the Union, to make good music and art readily available to the entire student body. With the inauguration of the series this year university students and faculty members will join with the Union in celebrating a partial realization of that aim.

The Kedroff quartet will again be presented through the generosity and interest of Hon. Charles A. Crane, former ambassador to China, who has led the way for others interested in the university and the Union to a proper appreciation of the Union idea and the use of its facilities.

Feature Church Folk Songs

The Kedroffs will present a program Russian church and folk songs which have generally been neglected, but from which the great composers have drawn inspiration. This year the quartet will also sing a group of Russian church songs, because of the many requests from their friends and admirers.

The quartet, which was organized more than 30 years ago, was founded by N. N. Kedroff, baritone, formerly professor in the Imperial conservatory at Petrograd. The other members of the quartet are C. N. Kedroff, basso, formerly professor in the School of Musical Technique in Petrograd; I. K. Denisschhoff and T. F. Tasakoff, first and second tenors, both formerly of the Imperial Opera of Petrograd.

Hillel Vodvil Night Will Be Jewish Dad's Day Event

One of the traditions of Father's day for the Jewish students of the university is to take place Saturday, Oct. 26, at 8 p. m. in the Central high school auditorium, with the presentation of the fifth annual Hillel Vodvil Nite. The Jewish students and their fathers witness this offering of the outstanding local talent, and every Jewish citizen in Madison is invited to attend.

Four sororities and fraternities have prepared acts in competition for the silver loving cup which is being offered for the best group act. They are as follows: Kappa Phi, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Phi Epsilon Pi, and Zeta Beta Tau.

Aaron Tietlebaum '31, well known varsity debater, Frank Fernback '32, Dorothy Steinberg '32, Thelma Feingold '31, and Emmy Blitzstein '31, are competing for another cup to be awarded for the best single or double act.

In spite of the fact that a large number of tickets have been sold, there still remain a few for those who wish to buy them at the door. Admission is 50c. Henry Youngerman '32, is business manager of the event, which is being sponsored by the Hillel players, of which Morris Gold, Med 2, is president.

Dr. Henry Wriston Addresses Alumni Tonight at Dinner

Dr. Henry Wriston, president of Lawrence college, will be the guest speaker at an alumni dinner to be held today at 6 p. m. in the Round Table room of the Memorial Union. All alumni in and near Madison and former students are invited to attend. A limited number of reservations may be made at the Union desk.

Rex Mitchell, secretary of the alumni association, will be present at the dinner. Winfield Alexander, blind soloist of the Lawrence Glee club for three seasons, will lead the singing of college songs. Dr. Wriston will also speak Friday at a meeting of the Council of Teacher Training to be held in Madison.

Miss Galla Guyles, Madison, has been in charge of the arrangements.

Farm Institutes Are in Demand

Agricultural Meeting Movement Grows Since First at Hudson

Because C. E. Esterbrook, one time attorney general of the state of Wisconsin, gained a conception of the good that might be accomplished by making agricultural instruction more universal, farmers' institutes began in the Badger state in 1885 and have, in the 44 years since, developed into a project which annually reaches more than 125,000 Badger farmers.

Farmers' institutes have transformed the agriculture of 1870, when farmers struggled with wheat fields infested with Hessian flies, to dairying, says E. L. Luther, state superintendent of institutes.

The first institute in the country was held at Hudson, Wis. At that time, according to Luther, men who have since become famous for their work in agriculture were instrumental in putting the movement of short time schools for the farmer under way.

W. A. Henry, Hiram Smith, W. H. Morrison, and Stephen Faville are some of the names which were connected with the first farmers' institutes.

The movement developed rapidly, and in 1887, 54 meetings were held. It is interesting to recall that the institute workers at the first meetings advocated the expansion of the dairy industry as a means of increasing agricultural prosperity in the state. This year more requests for meetings have been received, at the office of the state institute superintendent than ever before.

These applications include calls from about 450 one-day meetings, 57 women's institutes, and 62 two-day institutes. Luther expects several more applications from counties which have not yet sent in their requests.

Fifty-four counties are represented in the list which demands institutes this season. Such a large number of meetings practically cover the entire state and reach approximately 125,000 people.

Electrical Short Course Presents Power Application

Another three-day rural electrification short course illustrating the application of electrical power to common farm jobs will be given at the Wisconsin college of agriculture, Oct. 31 to Nov. 2.

The application of electricity to common farm jobs will be considered, for instance, its use in modernizing farm homes, grinding feed, supplying water to the farm and home, elevating grain, incubating eggs, refrigerating dairy and food products, preventing poultry robberies by alarms, ventilating barns, and filling silos.

Instigators of the course plan to bring together men and women that are interested in electricity and its application to agriculture, discuss practical questions, and obtain available newly discovered information.

All persons interested in the operation and installation of electrical home equipment are invited to attend. Those desirous of attending are requested to register in advance of the time the sessions are to occur. Registrations are being accepted by the agricultural engineering department of the state university at Madison.

The RAMBLER

"Complete Campus Coverage"

(Due to the lack of space, this column was omitted from Thursday's paper. It was the first regular issue of the Daily Cardinal since Feb. 24, 1929, which did not carry the Rambler.)

By special arrangement with the brethren and sistren of the ancient and revered order of the "pieyes", secret society within Wisconsin Play-ers, we will hereafter serve as the official bulletin for the dramatists. Let it further be known that Karl Cass, grad, Rusty Lane, grad, and John Brown, L2, have been pledged. Gilbert Williams '30, chief grand mogul of the organization, also requests that all members get in touch with him in order that a new roster may be drawn up. The old list has been either lost or forgotten. (We hear that it never really existed.) Mayhap the Rambler will rate an honorary membership for this item.

We couldn't get it verified, but rumors from without announce that Dick Harvey '32, won a cheese-eating contest at the Chi Phi's Norman castle.

The studes are preserving those pictures of Herbert Gray, which have been passed out by the "Y" for the simple reason that the backs of the cards are blank, all of which makes them useful for jotting down notes.

We offer a pun from a campus wag. On throwing a copy of the Amecury aside, he exclaimed, "This is de bunk."

Among the sights at the last Union Bored dance was a feller in formal clothes, even to the extent of a wing collar, except that he wore a red bow tie.

Also at the same affair, two young bucks came along and made it known that they wanted to buy tickets. One of them offered a check and he was referred to Henry Behnke '31, ticket sales manager, who pondered over whether or not he should accept the paper. Meanwhile, the boy friend of the man with the check thrust his lapel into Hank's face and asked, "Does this mean anything to you? Alpha Delt." Surely enough he was wearing an Alpha Delta Phi pledge pin.

Pearl Roos '30, who has been handling most of the publicity for Ernest Fowles, who was here recently, received a telegram asking that it be returned. Instead of transmitting the message in this manner: RETURN CUT FOWLES, they sent it thusly: RETURN CUT FLOWERS. Yea, verily.

This is what Alice May Fink '30 told her roommate when she entered her chamber Tuesday night: "It's raining, snowing, and sleeting, and I don't see where there's room for it all."

Comprehend this if you can. Prof. J. H. Walton told his elementary chemistry section that if one cubic foot of matter was broken up into batches of one million molecules each, it would still be possible for each person in the United States to get enough batches, which, if exchanged for one cent per batch, would net each person over a million dollars. So he said, honestly.

We beg to inform you that Betty Kendall, grad, is one person who has simply been thrilled by the snowfall which has been descending in these parts. Betty, who hails from Noo Awleens, had never before seen any snow.

Lambda Chi Alpha entertained Dean Scott H. Goodnight to other evening. All went well until the crackers and ice cream were served for dessert. Then up spake the dean of men, "I am highly flattered." It was only a coincidence, however, that the crackers bore the word "Scotty," across them. It was the trade name or something of that sort.

Throw down your traditions! Diogenes' search has come to an end! Fred Tiegs '30 lost a wallet containing $60 in cash, a $20 bond, and two tickets to the Notre Dame game. An unknown young man in Phi Kappa Tau found the wallet and returned it with its contents intact. WELL, WELL, WELL, ETC.

A contributor whose name is "Enough," so far as we know informs us that the now quarantined Kappa Sig boys have a nice little black kitten, which delights in sleeping on typewriters... and that the F. A. D.'s must forget to feed their police dog because it has a habit of indulging in nocturnal howling sessions, usually beginning at about 3 a. m. ... and that a bespectacled young man visited the girls' rooming house at 515 North Frances street "and entered to the second floor. Upon meeting one of the inhabitants sans several things, he made no sign of retreating... he climbed calmly to the third floor and then turned about and retraced his steps into the street before the astonished maidens could summon aid or succor"... and that after informing his journalism students at the beginning of the semester that they would have to earn three credits by attending one lecture, two hours of copy desk, and two hours of typography laboratory weekly, as well as turning in a 500 word weekly report, Prof. Kenneth Olson said, "And you will all hand in your class cards before you pass out."

Esther Wollaeger '31, and a sister Sigma Kappa, both have boy friends in the besieged Kappa Sig house. Tuesday night the girls got together at

Friendships Form in Autumnal Scenes at Club Banquet

The Physical Education club held its first banquet of the year Tuesday night at Tripp Commons. About 150 were in attendance. Candle light cast a glow of friendliness about the tables which were decorated with miniature cornstocks and tiny kernels.

The guests of honor were the alumni, Miss Trilling, and Prof. Roe of the English department, who was the principal speaker of the evening. Elsie Bergland as toastmistress welcomed the new freshmen, transfers, alumni, and new members of the faculty to Wisconsin. Miss Cronin, faculty advisor of the club, sketched the plans for the coming year and spoke of making the organization a singing club.

Miss Trilling stated the purpose of the banquet: that of forming friendships between the old and new members. She expressed the hope that there may be a closer union between the alumni and the student body.

Miss Driver, a new member of the faculty, was song master, and led the group in both peppy and serious songs. The various classes sang their class songs and gave toasts to their sister classes. The grads deserve comment for their unusual tribute to Miss Trilling. Varsity was sung as the closing song of the evening.

Euthenics Club Sponsors Annual Mixer Friday

The annual agriculture-home economics mixer will be held Friday evening, Oct. 25 at 8:30 p. m., at the Woman's building, 240 West Gilman street. This event is sponsored each fall by the Euthenics club of the home economics department. Faculty members of both the home economics department and the college of agriculture are urged to attend. All agriculture and home economics students are urged to attend.

Charity Drive Hits High Mark

Faculty Share of Union Fund Lacks $895 of Goal

The Community Union fund came within $5,586 of making a touchdown for social welfare at the "victory" dinner Tuesday night, when reports of volunteer workers brought the total up to $99,180 in the drive towards the goal of $104,776.

An amount of $1,237, representing 198 pledges, reported by leaders Prof. F. H. Elwell and Prof. R. R. Aurner, brought the university division of the Community Union drive to within $895 of its $8,000 quota. Prof. Elwell predicted that the university would stand by in raising the shortage in the next two days.

By a unanimous vote to "carry on" until victory is reached, some 200 volunteer workers and leaders present at the Tuesday night dinner agreed to bring in further reports at a meeting at the Park hotel, Thursday noon, October 24.

"The Undercurrent," a one-act play presented by the Wisconsin chapter of National Collegiate players, under the direction of Prof. W. C. Troutman of the speech department, successfully set the keynote of charity and tenderness for the unfortunates which motivates the volunteer effort to raise funds for the city's social welfare program. Gilbert Williams, president of the chapter, supervised the production.

The $7,105.75, which has so far come in from the university represents a total of 1,043 pledges from faculty, office employees, and students.

Carl May of Garrick sometimes appears as voices off-stage, etc. Bill Wilcox is an addict to the legitimate drama so the Scandals have been censored out of Octy. Neither of the Rehwalb bros wear hats ever. Those who wish to speculate on their coupon books are victims of a bear market. and bad weather. Haresfoot officers eat free at their weekly meetings. Herb Tschudy, city editor of this sheet starts cleanup of a very dirty office.

Condemned to the eternal fires should be Kimball Young and Frederic Paxson for the fiendish exams which they slung at their classes Wed morn. Bill Troutman who is directing "Kempy" for Players no longer shouts thru a megaphone but instead he sits in glory on a comfy wicker chair. J. mossbackism

The retrogressive activities around these parts are getting worse and worse.

First the ban on certain types of Octy copy spreads the gloom of the denial of the rights of Freedom of the Press to the student publications.

Then an energetic professor resigns because he is too progressive for the boss of his department.

New codes of morals are inflicted on the students every year.

And it is about time that that plate on the front of Bascom curled up with mortification.

Because although little matters such as these are not great "limitations which trammel education" they are signs of the times. They are signs of pettiness and stagnant conservatism.

parkway

The attraction now showing at the Parkway is Leatrice Joy talking and singing in "A Most Immoral Lady." She is assisted by an able supporting cast which includes Montague Love and Sydney Blackmer, the latter Lenore Ulric's new husband.

Leatrice has a very nice speaking voice and sings one song that we liked a lot. The plot is a little out of the ordinary, as it involves the heroine in a refined and high-society version of the old Badger game.

Montague Love makes a very acceptable hero and is decidedly the matinee idol type. Sydney Blackmer brings to the screen a stage presence which registers effectively.

Josephine Dunn, as the rich but unscrupulous villainess is both beautiful and convincing. Her drunken scene in the Parisian cafe is cleverly done. (Reviewed by Nancy).

Decision Held in Marsh Case

Attorneys to File Additional Briefs by November 1

Instead of handing down a decision recently in the Horicon marsh controversy the state supreme court asked attorneys to file additional briefs by Nov. 1 discussing whether or not the law creating the Horicon marsh wild life refuge is an exercise of power vested in the legislature under a 1912 amendment to the state constitution, concerning acquisition and improvement of parks.

The court's action injects a new element into the controversy. After the 1927 legislature designated the marsh as a refuge and made appropriations to the state conservation commission with which to restore the water to the level it was before an attempt to drain the marsh, sundry taxpayers around the marsh asked the supreme court to restrain the state treasurer and secretary of state from issuing any funds to carry out the project. Their contention is that the state is prohibited from spending state funds for "internal improvements."

Intended to Aid Cities

The constitutional provision referred to by the court Tuesday is Section 3a of Article 11. This amendment was put through by the efforts of Assemblyman Eric Stern, Milwaukee, in 1912 with the intention of benefiting cities although it has universal application. It reads as follows:

"Acquisition of lands by the state. The state or any of its cities may acquire by gift, purchase or condemnation lands for establishing, laying out, widening, enlarging, extending and maintaining memorial grounds, streets squares, parkways, boulevards, parks, playgrounds, sites for public buildings and reservations in and about and along and leading to any or all of the same."

Still State Land, Claim

The 1927 legislature's act authorized the purchase of lands necessary for reflooding the marsh, but the 1929 legislature revised the act so as to make purchase of the land unnecessary after the attorney general had contended that title to the land remained with the state because the swamp land act of congress gave the land to the state and the territorial legislature's declaration that it was navigable water clinched the title.

Jim Tully Scoffs at Warden's Fears on 'You Can Escape'

Jim Tully, author, tramp, and adventurer, the advertisement of whose book, "You Can Escape," printed in Time magazine, almost caused the barring of the publication from Wisconsin state penitentiary at Wausau, roundly criticizes Oscar Lee, warden of the prison, in the current issue of "Time".

Tully writes in "Time" as follows: "I read with much amusement Wisconsin Penitentiary Warden Oscar Lee's letter to Time in which he intimates that unless it shifts its editorial ways it will not be allowed to enter his penitentiary."

"I don't know Lee. But I do know and have known quite a few wardens of jails. I found them, without exception, as illiterate as sea gulls and less graceful. I have read 'You Can Escape.' It can no more help a convict get out of jail than it could help teach me to write a novel with the fourth dimension as a hero."

"In some far day wardens will not be appointed by politicians who are as ignorant of the vast wells of human nature as themselves. They will then approach Warden Lawes, of New York, in stature. They will realize that compassion and under-

Aged Renault Relates Wartime Experiences; Says Student Is Kind

Montreal—Old motor cars, like old soldiers never die, they just fade away. Which is as good a way of saying that they eventually arrive at the junk heap as any other.

But there is one old bus on the campus that persistently refuses to fall down on the job. She came into being in 1914 and her aged lines are to be seen parked on Milton street at any reasonable hour of the day.

She is of the family of Renaults and has over 100,000 miles of action under her belt. While still a comparatively young girl she assisted at the battle of the Marne. She wears no decorations and when interviewed recently she seemed strangely reticent about disclosing what must have been a very trying portion of her career.

"Yes," she said, "I was in Paris at the outbreak of the war. I was in better circumstances than I am today and moved in higher circles. On my back seat two high officials of the French Republic one evening discussed the impending outbreak. One was my master who afterwards was killed at Neuve Chapelle."

"I remained in Paris all the early months of the struggle. I remember the details of the British retreat from Mons. In there, also on my back seat, a British officer once struck my Master for referring to the action as a 'retreat.' It seemed that the Britisher preferred 'straightening the line.'"

"Well, one morning the papers came out saying the Germans were only 20 miles from Paris. Every motor car in town was at once requisitioned for the purpose of carrying troops to the firing line. I was taken along too. I made the trip from Paris to the Marne in slightly over two hours and that was moving right along when you consider that all the roads were blocked with traffic."

"How do I feel?" Oh, not so bad for an old car. I can still turn out sixty miles to the hour. I have four gear shifts you know and the shift from third to fourth requires only a little more shove in order to send me into reverse. When I was a young and irresponsible girl I once sent my careless owner through the wind shield just on account of that extra push. My gears were all stripped but the look on my owner's face as he departed over my hood was well worth the trouble."

"I belong to a student now. He treats me fairly well and I like to work for him."

Here the ancient car paused and a kittenish gleam came into her headlights.

"I'm going to Kingston in a week or two," she confided, "and I bet that I get there before many of the modern cars that start along with me. I just hope that they crowd me. Look at how my springs stick out in front and behind. They have dented many a mud-guard."

Here the old car relapsed into silence and no further questioning could draw another word from her.

standing are not merely words in a dictionary.

"Perhaps I am not one to romance about the future. Lee should not worry about books like 'You Can Escape,' excellent as it is. He should be studying sociology from first sources. Any of the boys in his keeping will tell him about the wrongs of humanity. I'll bet him an old fashioned stein of Milwaukee lager that they can also tell him yarns about escapes that equal those in the book, the 'ad' of which shocked his artistic sensibilities."

Bureau Estimates Turkeys Will Be Plentiful This Year

This year's turkey crop will be about nine per cent larger than production last year in leading producing states, according to estimates by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Practically all leading states have increased production this year, but the larger increases are in the eastern and south-eastern states where the crop has been small in recent years.

Production has increased this year in the western states but increases are less marked than in 1928. The bureau points out, however, that increases in the western area go very largely into the commercial turkey supply so that increases there are likely to have a relatively greater effect on the turkey market situation than are increases in other areas.

Weather conditions were fairly favorable for turkey raising over most of the country this year, and the adoption of better methods of handling turkeys and the commercial hatching and sale of young poults are in large part credited with the increased production. The condition of the young turkeys about October 1 as reported by growers was about average for that date, and the reports indicate a disposition in some states to push the finishing of the birds so as to have a larger than usual proportion ready by Thanksgiving. In some areas, a feed shortage and high prices of feeds may also tend to hasten marketings, the bureau says.

Accomplishments Not Necessarily Results of Actions

Bertrand Russell, in an article in Nation's Business entitled "The Sedentary Age" infers that the active person is not necessarily the one who is accomplishing the most.

He says that modern industry has two outstanding features—"one which has been generally recognized, the greater specialization of work in an advanced system of production; the other, which has been much less noticed, that, all the important work is done by sedentary persons, who stay almost motionless in their offices."

He then compares Wellington who rode around the battlefield of Waterloo and personally supervised the battle and Foch who sat in his office far behind the lines and directed the activities of the allied troops.
