Wisconsin 16, Stanford 14 September 26

A highly touted Wisconsin football team managed to outlast an inspired band of Stanford Indians 16-14, before 41,892 enthusiastic spectators, in a season opening game marred by a torrential downpour midway through the third quarter that seemingly turned the tide of the game toward Stanford.

The rain was a great equalizer this day, and a Badger team that had rolled to a 16-0 lead by the time the weather turned wet, found itself struggling to retain possession of the football as the clock on the fieldhouse ticked off the final seconds of the game.

There seemingly was no doubt about the outcome as the Badgers completely dominated the play throughout the first half, rolling up 13 first downs, 208 yards by rushing and passing to a mere four first downs and 69 yards by rushing (20) and passing (49) for the West Coast Indians.

Coach Milt Bruhn started a veteran team of eight seniors, two juniors, and sophomore Jim Bakken at quarterback—the latter in place of the Badgers' star signal caller, Dale Hackbart, who was on the doubtful list with a knee injury suffered two weeks prior in a practice scrimmage.

Bakken piloted the team with steady assurance, though he did make mistakes, not uncommon for a first year man. The Madison West graduate threw six passes, completed two of them (both to right end Henry Derleth) for 27 yards, and had three interceptions.

The Badgers used two recovered fumbles and a stolen ball to set up their scores, one in each of the first three quarters. After an exchange of the ball in the first period, the Wisconsin attack stalled on the Badgers 30, and on fourth down, Bakken punted to the Indians 32 where Dick Bowers, the receiver fumbled, and hard charging Jim Heineke fell on the ball for a Wisconsin first down on the Stanford 37.

With Dale Hackbart at the controls, the Badgers moved with ease to a touch-down in six plays. Hackbart handed off to Steiner for two yards, then passed complete to left end Jim Holmes for 12 yards and a first down. A well executed reverse—Hackbart to Steiner to Zeman gained nine yards, and fullback Tom Wiesner smashed to the ten yard line and another first down.

Remember 1958 and the difficulty encountered by the Badgers inside the ten yard line? There was none of that on this drive. Hackbart handed off to Wiesner for six yards over tackle, then came right back with the same play, and the Neenah fullback wasn't to be denied. He scored standing up after being almost stopped on the one, sliding to his right into the end zone off two Stanford tacklers.

Towards the end of the second period the Badgers again used a recovered fumble—this one a mid-air recovery by Dale Hackbart after a Norman pass to end Burford was completed for a first down on the Wisconsin 31—to set up a march that ended when right tackle Karl Holzwarth booted a 26 yard field goal when the drive downfield stalled on the Stanford 9 yard line.

Key plays in the sixty yard march were Hackbart's 16 yard completion to Jim Holmes and a draw play that saw Ron Steiner bolt through the middle of the Stanford defense, then lateral to the outside when he was about to be stopped by Tom Wiesner, who rambled out of bounds on the Indians' 24 yard line—a 28 yard gain.

Four line smashes carried the ball to the Stanford eight yard line, but here the attack bogged down on an incomplete pass, and a pitch out that the Indians defended into a yard loss, so Holzwarth stepped back to the 16 yard line, and booted the ball squarely between the widened goal posts. Under a new interpretation, the burly tackle received credit for a 26 yard boot, including the extra ten yards it takes to score a field goal under college rules because the goal posts are on the end line of the end zone, not on the goal line.

Halftime ceremonies honored Wisconsin coaches and athletes now enshrined in the Wisconsin Hall of Fame, and as the teams came back for the second half, a storm was brewing in the troubled skies overhead.

The Badgers used a stolen ball to start their third scoring foray in the third period after Stanford had moved for two quick first downs. Wiesner was on the spot to grab the ball from end Chris Burford as he caught a pass from Dick Norman on Wisconsin's 33. When the Badger fullback fumbled, in turn, Bakken was there to recover.

It took eleven plays for Wisconsin to go the required 67 yards to score, with Bakken completing his first two collegiate passes to Derleth on this drive. A 12 yard completion gave the Badgers a first down on Stanford's 48. Zeman ripped off 14 on a reverse, and on a third down play, Bakken hit Derleth for 15 yards and a first down on the 13 yard line. Zeman was an opportunist on this play, recovering Derleth's fumble as the latter was hit. This managed to sustain the drive.

On fourth down and one for a first down on the Stanford four, Wiesner barreled over left tackle for the score and when Holzwarth added the point, Wisconsin led 16-0, a safe lead many thought with the rains starting to come.

A Stanford storm carried on the right arm of quarterback Norman closed the gap to 16-6 four plays later, as he found his star end, Burford, racing in the clear downfield, and hit him with a perfect scoring pass. The attempted extra point was fumbled, and as the storm from above gathered fury, it appeared that the scoring for the day was completed.

The Badgers did their best to control the ball, and, with about ten minutes to play were driving deep into Stanford territory when a fumble on a fourth down play handed the ball over to the visitors.

Norman took over at this point and dominated the play with his passing, completing six of eight attempts in the fifteen plays it took to negotiate 72 yards of sloppy turf. A pass interference call proved vital in the march, giving Stanford a first down on the Wisconsin 25, and two plays later, Norman passed complete to right end Ben Robinson for a first down on the Badgers 13. Another down the Middle pass took the ball to the two yard line, and from there fullback Skip Face bounced over in one play.

Norman then ran for the two extra points and the Badgers lead had melted to 16-14. Only 1:35 was left to play and Wisconsin was content to kill the clock, but they didn't quite succeed. Stanford had five seconds to run off their final play, and you guessed it, it was a pass, but an incomplete one.

Coach Bruhn called Norman an exceptional passer, and added that on a wet field he had a definite advantage over Wisconsin's defenders who found it difficult to defend against the aerial game. The Indians chose the airplanes, and had much success, with several of the catches amazing under the playing conditions that prevailed.

Wisconsin 44, Marquette 6

October 3

Wisconsin's Badgers moved into high gear this clearing October afternoon and trounced its state rival, Marquette, 44-6 for the 16th consecutive time since the Warriors last won in 1943. The game marked the fourth time that Milt Bruhn has directed a Wisconsin team against the Milwaukee school, and in those four games the Badgers have totalled 195 points to 12 for the losers.

This was a day of spectacular plays, both offensively and defensively, with passing the main forte of each team. The Badgers lived with the forward pass, completing 16 of 28 aerials for 276 yards (only in a 1922 game against South Dakota (322 yards) has this yardage figure been exceeded). Five pass interceptions by the alert Wisconsin defense stopped Marquette's attack most of the afternoon. The Warriors completed fourteen of thirty passes for 182 yards, but they did not intercept a single Badger pass, and therein lies the story of the game.

The Badgers, with Dale Hackbart throwing the football, excited the crowd of 47,970. With little more than six minutes to play in the first quarter, Hackbart tossed a 74 yard completion to left end Allan Schoonover, who was downed on the one yard line. It was the first pass the Boscobel senior had caught in his career at Wisconsin, and it goes into the record book as the third longest pass completion play, and the longest non-scoring pass play, in Wisconsin football history. Schoonover caught the ball on the Wisconsin 47, and added 52 yards by running before being hauled down from behind short of a TD.

Late in the third quarter sophomore Jim Bakken stepped back across mid-field and fired a "guided" missile to sophomore wingback Erv Kunesh from Marinette, and the youngster reached with his finger tips for the ball on the Warriors 15, and as the crowd rose to their feet in amazement, he sprinted across the goal for the lone score in the third period.

There were other plays, too, such as Ron Steiner's twisting 32 yard return of a Marquette punt that set up a successful field goal attempt late in the first half to give Wisconsin a 16-0 lead at the time. Steiner was aided on his return by a bone-crushing block on a Warriors' 15, and as the crowd rose to that gave the Badger left back running room. Billy Hobbs turned in a spectacular 2 yard scoring interception with three and a half minutes of the fourth quarter played, and that boosted the Badgers into an insurmountable 36-0 lead at the time.

Even Marquette's tally was on the spectacular side, with second team quarterback Joe Schulte leading the Warriors on a 69 yard march in eight plays, climaxed by a 29 yard pass play to halfback Mike Shea that signalled cheering by both Marquette and Wisconsin partisans.

Coach Lisle Blackburn, coaching his third game in his second go at Marquette, presented a Warrior team that featured a professional type offense, running and passing, and the losers moved the ball well on occasion. Coach Milt Bruhn allowed the Warriors the short 'quickie' passes, while guarding against the long gainers that can do so much to unnerve a defending team. Bruhn's strategy paid off, and two of the five interceptions—a 25 yard return by center John Gotta, and a 22 yard return by Billy Hobbs led to two Badger scores. Gotta's play allowed Hobbs to score on an 11 yard sprint shortly before the end of the first half, while the latter's interception was returned for a score early in the fourth quarter, as earlier related.

The teams traded punts in the first quarter; then Marquette started from its own 34 and reached Wisconsin's 17 yard line before the Badgers stiffened and threw the Warriors back to the 27 yard line. On fourth down halfback Jim Webster's field goal attempt was short.

Lightning struck on the second Wisconsin play, Hackbart hitting Schoonover for the aforementioned 74 yard pass play. It took the Badgers two plays to score, with Hackbart plunging over after a first down pass to Ed Hart was dropped in the end zone. Karl Holzwarth added the first of his three extra points, and Wisconsin led 7-0.

A recovered fumble by Co-captain Jerry Stalcup following a Marquette completion, Pete Hall to end Larry Hubbard, started the Badgers rolling once again early in the second period. In eight plays the Badgers went 49 yards, with Hackbart using passes to Steiner and Derleth to eat up 17 and 16 yards, respectively, and then on fourth down from the four, the Madison East senior used a keeper play to romp over for the score. A two point conversion run by Hackbart failed, and Wisconsin led 13-0.

Steiner's punt return set the stage for the successful field goal by Holzwarth later in the period. A pass to Derleth for 21 yards gave the Badgers position on the Warrior 22, and after picking up a first down by rushing—the first one by either team up to this point of the game—the Badgers stalled, and Holzwarth stepped back and booted the ball squarely between the uprights and Wisconsin led 16-0.

Wisconsin end, Allen Schoonover (85) is unbelievably in the clear as he prepares to grab a pass from Dale Hackbart. The play netted 74 yards as Schoonover was tripped-up on the one-yard line—it was the 3rd longest aerial gain in the Wisconsin record book.

Moments later, center John Gotta snared Hall's errant pass and rumbled 25 yards to Marquette's 11 yard line before being stopped. One play was needed, Billy Hobbs going wide, cutting back and running untouched for the score. Bakken's attempt to run for two points was no good, and the Badgers led 22-0 at halftime.

The halftime program was to feature the massed bands of 52 Wisconsin high school bands with the Wisconsin Marching Band, but the wet weather of the week cancelled it, and saved the soggy field for the second half football parade.

The Badgers broke the ice late in the third period on Bakken's 48 yard completion to Kunesh, and Holzwarth's kick made it 29-0 for Wisconsin. The fifth score was Hobbs' interception and score early in the fourth period, again Holzwarth converting.

The Warriors came right back to get on the scoreboard (they've tallied just twice in four games against a Milt Bruhn coached Wisconsin team) with sophomore Ron Jennings picking up 27 yards in three carries, and Shea taking Schulte's pass for 29 yards and the score, eating up the majority of the yards needed.

The fans then were treated to a 70 yard scoring march with Badger reserves, mostly sophomores, using 12 plays to set the stage for Bakken to use a keeper play for the final three yards of the march. Bakken's passing was accurate in the march, passing complete to end Bill Kellogg twice for 13 yards and a first down, to end Mike Stanki twice for 36 yards (one good for 29 and a first down), setting the ball on the Marquette 18 yard line. Three running plays,—right back Tom Neumann for 6 yards, left back Stu Clark for 7, a penalty (half the distance to the goal), and Bakken's run gave the Badgers their final score. Bakken passed complete to Stanki for the two extra points.

With four minutes remaining the Badgers rested their case. Marquette swept down to the Wisconsin nine yard line, but eager sophomores ended any hopes for a consolation Warrior score before the final gun.

football from the fieldhouse

While most of the fans that fill Camp Randall five Saturdays out of every Fall cheer the Badgers from their various seat locations in the stadium, two equally ardent rooters are observing and applauding the efforts of the team from another location—high in the University Fieldhouse!

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Bray '27 have special season tickets to all football games which allow them to sit in the fieldhouse and to have a radio in their possession. Permission to purchase the seats was first accorded by a close friend, the late Guy Sundt. Since that time, they have renewed the seats each year, paying the regular season ticket price.

Mr. Bray explains his reasons for favoring the select seats. "In the days before taking movies of games for scouting purposes was so common, many pro scouts sat high in the end zone to get information on plays and players. As we have been fortunate enough to observe games with some of these scouts, our appreciation of football has been enhanced by watching plays develop and players carry out their assignments. Of course, field glasses aid us in watching the plays and players. Our radio brings us the color of the game."

The next time the Badgers are threatening near the south goal, take a glance at one of the fieldhouse windows and we're sure you'll see two of Wisconsin's most loyal supporters.

Wisconsin 0, Purdue 21 October 10

It came to pass! The heralded Wisconsin 'jinx' over Purdue that had existed since 1945 came to an end this soggy afternoon in Ross-Ade Stadium as the host Boilermakers scored three times by air to win 21-0 and become prime favorites to win the Big Ten championship. A first-half-rousing, second-half-soaked crowd of 41,542 sat in and witnessed this rugged struggle, which was played in a driving rain-storm the second half.

Purdue dominated the play all the way, establishing their superiority early in the first quarter by use of the forward pass, and when the field turned into a quagmire, they extended this superiority to control of the ground game, too.

Ten times since 1945, Purdue and Wisconsin met on the gridiron, and nine times Purdue was on the short end of the score. Only in 1956 did they gain any consolation when they tied the Badgers 6-6 at Camp Randall in Madison.

There was no denying this Purdue team this day. They intercepted Dale Hackbart's first pass of the afternoon on the second play of the game, and in eight plays marched 61 yards to score. Quarterback Bernie Allen, called on for a first team berth when Purdue lost their regular signal caller the previous week with a broken shoulder, caught the Badgers off guard with sharp passing, completing four of five passes covering 47 yards in the march down-field.

His first play was a pass, complete to Purdue right end and Co-Captain Len Jardine, good for 25 yards to the Badgers 36. Fullback Bob Jarus was stopped for no gain, then Allen pitched to Jarus over the line for five yards. A third down pass play was incomplete, and the drive appeared stalled. Here occurred the first Purdue break of the day, for as they lined up and then shifted into a punt formation, the Badgers charged offside, made contact, and the five yard penalty thus inflicted gave Purdue a first down on the Badgers 26, and with the drive thus sustained, the Boilermakers were not to be denied. Badger fans will never know what might have been the game's outcome had not the penalty occurred.

Allen passed complete down the middle to the left end and Co-Captain Dick Brooks, and a first down on the 15. Jarus made three yards, and Wisconsin was penalized half the distance to the goal for holding. Two running plays gained nothing as Badger Co-Captain Jerry Stalcup personally stopped fullback Jarus in his tracks on both plays, but Allen, starting his first college game, stepped back and hit Jardine in the end zone for the touchdown with just 4:48 of the game played. Allen booted the extra point, and Purdue led 7-0.

Six plays later, the Boilermakers sewed the game up, though every loyal Badger at the time believed the Badgers could come back. That they didn't must be a tribute to a stout Purdue defense, that stopped the Badgers cold both rushing and passing.

Tom Wiesner returned the kickoff to the Badgers 22 yard line, and then carried the ball twice for six yards. On third down, Steiner fumbled Hackbart's handoff, and Brooks recovered for the victors on the 25 yard line.

A running play gained three yards, a pass fell out of reach of Jardine in the end zone, and then Allen, on the same play found Jardine all alone in scoring territory, and hit him with a perfect aerial dart, and Purdue led 13-0. Allen's extra point made the score 14-0 with 7:59 left to play in the first quarter. Purdue, in this early surge, scored four-ten points while the Badgers had possession of the ball for five plays; two of Wisconsin's plays being misplays that turned the tide of battle. The Boilermakers became the first team to score in the initial period on the Badgers since Michigan State did it in the sixth game of the 1957 season—a span of fifteen games. Perhaps such a shock was too great for the Badgers this day.

Wisconsin made only four penetrations into Purdue territory all afternoon, with their deepest penetration coming on a second quarter march that began on the Wisconsin 18, and ended ten plays later when Hackbart's third down pass was intercepted by Terry Sheehan on Purdue's 13 yard line. The Badgers had reached the 20 yard line of the Boilermakers on this march, when full-back Tom Wiesner bulled six yards on first down, but after a second down pitchout play lost four yards, Hackbart took to the air and was thwarted by the intercepted pass.

During this march, the Badgers completed their only two passes of the afternoon, both by Hackbart from the spread formation—remember, it was so effective late last year—to right end Henry Derleth, covering 27 yards of the 62 gained by the Badgers in this march downfield. Hackbart contributed two fine runs during this march, too, one for nine yards, the other for fourteen.

Three plays after the interception Purdue quickkicked, and Hackbart retrieved the ball, returning eight yards to the Badgers' 43. Two running plays netted a first down on Purdue's 47, but Wiesner's fumble was recovered by Jack Laraway, and the handwriting was on the wall—it wasn't going to be Wisconsin's day. The torrential rains came with less than two minutes left in the first half, and the field was flooded as play began after the intermission. Billy Hobbs returned the second half kickoff 35 yards to the Wisconsin 49 to brighten Badger hopes momentarily, but eight plays later, the march halted on Purdue's 30, where Bakken was spilled on an attempted pass play. Two first downs, one of them on a neat piece of running by Ed Hart moved the Badgers to a first down on the Boilermaker 25, but the attack bogged down, and Purdue began to assert its superiority on the slippery turf.

Both teams found themselves relying on their kicking game as the afternoon's play continued, Purdue content to run two or three plays, then quickkick. The Badgers found the kicking good, too, as back Clyde Washington boomed a 57 yard punt downfield to the Wisconsin 23, and quarterback Allen put his foot into a 56 yard boot that gave the ball to the Badgers on their own nine yard line. The Badgers were stymied. They could only match Purdue's kicking game.
