The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Handwritten text on a heavily damaged, browned parchment fragment. The script is a cursive hand, likely from the 15th or 16th century. The text is mostly illegible due to the physical damage and fading. Some faint words and numbers are visible, such as "1530" on the right side of the fragment.

Handwritten text on a second, smaller fragment of browned parchment. The script is consistent with the first fragment. The text is also largely illegible due to damage. Some faint words and numbers are visible, such as "1530" on the right side of the fragment.
