State U. Honors Parents of Its Students This Week

A weekend full of activities arranged to give parents a representative view of the lives of their sons and daughters at the University of Wisconsin, including events from athletic contests and tours of the campus to the senior honors convocation and a banquet for parents, students, and faculty, has been scheduled by the University of Wisconsin faculty and students committees for the annual Parents' Weekend to be held this coming Friday through Sunday, May 23, 24, and 25.

Mothers and fathers from all sections of Wisconsin, as well as from many other states, are expected to converge on Madison these three days to take part in the festivities planned by the State University to honor the parents of its students. Last year over 1,500 parents visited the campus for Parents' Weekend.

Over 75 students and faculty members have been working for more than a month on committees to prepare as broad and as representative a program as possible for the weekend, under the direction of Mildred Schiff, Columbus, Ohio, and Joe Barnett, Madison, general chairmen of the weekend. These three days have been set aside during which the campus at large will be open to the parents of students.

The program includes a big banquet in honor of the parents next Saturday night, with more than 600 persons expected to attend, and with Pres. C. A. Dykstra and a mother and father as the main speakers. The University's annual Honors Day convocation will be held Saturday morning with more than 300 senior students scheduled to receive honors for their outstanding scholastic achievements during their University careers.

Also scheduled on Friday and Saturday's program are both men's and women's sports activities, such as baseball games, crew races, and a horse show; a huge military parade and show by the University ROTC unit; a Tournament of Song with various student groups competing for campus choral honors; a stage presentation, "Dark Victory," by the Wisconsin student players group in the Union theater; dance recitals by Orchestra, women's dance society; a reception at which University faculty members, headed by President and Mrs. Dykstra, will welcome the parents; and bus tours to various parts of the campus to exhibit the work of the University. Parents have also been invited to visit classrooms with their sons and daughters to meet faculty members.

Special church services will also be held in honor of the parents in the various churches surrounding the campus next Sunday morning.

Pilot Course Is On Summer Program At State University

Assurance that a secondary course in pilot training will be offered at the University of Wisconsin this summer was received this week from the Civil Aeronautics administration, according to advices from the office of Dean F. O. Holt, of the Extension division.

Although no official government circulars outlining arrangements for the summer course have yet been received, it is expected the secondary course will begin sometime in the latter half of June and continue for ten weeks. It is believed that qualifications and requirements for students will be similar to those established for previous courses in Madison.

An inmate student of University of Wisconsin correspondence courses at the Wisconsin state prison sold an original article to The Survey, and donated his check to the prison educational fund.

Book on Supreme Court Justices, Valued at $5,000, Given to U. W.

A beautifully bound book of etchings and autographs of Justices of the United States Supreme Court, valued at $5,000, the gift of George I. Haight, a Wisconsin alumnus, is on display in the reading room of the new Law Library at the University of Wisconsin. This gift was acknowledged by Dean Lloyd K. Garrison of the Law school at the second annual law banquet recently.

Mr. Haight has given the University many gifts, including a set of reproductions of the etchings in this book, all uniformly framed, which have been hung on the walls of the Law building.

This book was prepared by the famous Monastery Hill Bindery of Chicago, and is done in hand-tooled leather bindings with a hand-illuminated title page. The papers upon which the autographs appear, many of which are letters and business-papers written in the hand of the various judges, are so inserted that the backs and all sides of all sheets included are visible.

Contain All Portraits

The etchings are the originals done by the Rosenthal brothers, Max and Albert, of Philadelphia, two outstanding artists of the country in this line. The book contains portraits of all, the autographs of most of the Justices from John Jay to William Howard Taft. The material for the book was all personally collected by Mr. Haight. Letters and business papers included among the autographs contain all forms of writing from the script, almost illegible to us today, of the letter dated April 25, 1776, by Judge Rut-

Milk Bulletin in Wide Demand

"What fuels are best for stocking the human machine? Many foods can serve this purpose, but one of them stands out as different, unique, exceptional. This food is milk."

With this sound scientific statement, important to dairymen and consumers alike, is started "Milk as a Food Throughout Life," a bulletin which is in wide demand throughout the United States.

Based upon the results of scientific nutritional research, this bulletin from the agricultural experiment station of the University of Wisconsin has been requested by groups as well as individuals from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. The most recent request came from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, which is distributing several thousand copies among its clientele.

Commercial concerns have secured large quantities for distribution through the consuming centers of the eastern seaboard, reports Andrew W. Hopkins, extension editor, in charge of distribution.

Educated Citizenry Seen as Bulwark in National Defense

The broader the educational preparation of the people the stronger the nation's defenses will be, is the contention of educational leaders at the University of Wisconsin. The view was expressed in a University extension bulletin, recently issued, advising high school graduates of opportunities available for continuing their education where they live, if unable to attend college.

"At present," these youth were told, "any additional educational preparation may be considered advantageous in a defense program. In a considerable number of areas in the defense program, prerequisites include training beyond high school graduation. In some instances (as in pilot training under the CAA program), one year or two years of college credit is a requirement. In others, preparation in mathematics or in other fields is demanded. In the expanding program of national defense one can be assured that any additional preparation will be an asset."

The message was directed primarily to that large quota of young people who, after graduating from high school, face restrictions in continuing their studies, and it described opportunities whereby University courses can be taken at home for desired ends, such as for a college degree program, or to give a better preparation for a vocational future.

This program was the subject of a commendatory article in the Christian Science Monitor, in which it was described as affording special opportunities, not matched by any other facilities, for youth who are denied further education in local schools.

"Plenty of people from the time they graduate could use college courses in this way," the Monitor writer said. "Nearly all of the accepted schools will allow one full year's credit for work taken by correspondence, and some allow as much as three-fourths to be taken that way. The schools, colleges and universities of America offer the cheerful and capable cooperation of their best minds in enlarging your horizons and your usefulness."

Dykstra Thanks Wisconsin Citizens, Officials for Support of University

Gratitude to Wisconsin citizens and public officials for rallying to the support of the University of Wisconsin with great enthusiasm during this year was expressed by Pres. C. A. Dykstra in a talk over several Wisconsin radio stations this week.

"Wisconsin citizens and public officials have rallied to the support of the University with great enthusiasm this year," Pres. Dykstra asserted. "Governor Heil has stood 100 per cent with our institution. We have had real teamwork from Alumni, Faculty, Student Body, Governor, Legislature, and Citizens which some might say is unusual. For this situation the president of the University is grateful. This is, and must be, a day when each is for all and all for each. We must stand together for the things we believe in. We are doing it in Wisconsin and at the Uni-

Pres. Dykstra discussed the proposed building program for the University in his talk, and referred to the crowded conditions in campus buildings, especially in Bascom Hall.

4-H Members Meet at State Club Week at U. W. June 18-23

Citizenship, health and leadership training will keynote the 32nd annual State 4-H Club week which will be held at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, June 18 to 23, inclusive, according to an announcement by T. L. Bewick, state club leader.

Plans are being made at the University of Wisconsin to feed and house at least 1,000 older 4-H club members, who, with their adult leaders, will assemble on the campus of the College of Agriculture for five days of club conferences.

Opening their program Thursday, June 19, club members will occupy their discussion with consideration of responsibilities of citizenship. Scheduled to address them are T. A. Erickson, Minneapolis, former Minnesota State 4-H Club leader; Mrs. Frederick Roetter, German refugee, Madison; and Miss Frances Zulli, home economics director; Miss Blanche Lee, in charge of home economics extension; I. L. Baldwin, assistant dean; and W. W. Clark, associate director of agricultural extension of the University of Wisconsin.

Will Glimpse Science

While in conference, club members will take occasion to inform themselves upon new things in science and agriculture. J. R. Roebuck, of the University physics department, will explain interesting things in science; and Noble Clark, associate director of the Wisconsin agricultural experiment stations, will report on new things of interest in agriculture.

Problems dealing with citizenship, methods and problems in club work, and health will all be considered in panel discussions under the direction of H. L. Ewbank, of the University speech department, and Martin Anderson, of the department of rural sociology. Taking part in the discussions will be club members, county agents, county club leaders, and others actively connected with 4-H club leadership.

Hold Festival

Held during the week will be the state 4-H music and drama festival program which will be conducted under the direction of Miss Geneva Amundson, assistant state club leader, and Mrs. Marie Kellogg, rural drama specialist.

A full program has been planned for Sunday which will include special Sunday services, a carillon concert, ceremony at the 4-H club knoll, attendance at the University of Wisconsin Baccalaureate address, and a twilight concert by the University of Wisconsin band.

Following installation of state 4-H club officers and attendance at the University commencement exercises Monday morning, June 23, the conference will adjourn.

U. W. Student Newspaper Named Among Nation's Best

The Daily Cardinal, University of Wisconsin student newspaper, was recently named one of the 10 best college papers in the country by the Associated College Press. The Cardinal received the annual Pacemaker award, as well as an "All-American" rating. Officers for the 1941-42 Cardinal and for the Badger, University year book, were named recently.

Robert G. Lewis, Osseo, was appointed executive editor, and Ray A. Under, Eau Claire, business manager of the Daily Cardinal. Henry Saemann, Adell, and Arthur Voss, Wauwatosa, were named executive editor and business manager, respectively, of the 1942 Badger.

ledge, to the typewritten letter signed by William H. Taft.

The letter of Judge Bushrod Washington, favorite nephew of George Washington, is dated 1782, and in it he is seeking a loan because, as he said, "my want of cloaths is so great". The letter was sent without an envelope, and on its back is addressed to Mr. Willm. Carr. The other Bushrod Washington item is an assignment of one-quarter year's salary as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, being made out in the amount of $875.

Six Autographs Missing

The letter containing the autograph of Judge J. A. Campbell is written on the letterhead of the "Confederate States of America, War Department", and refers to a plea for deferment from the draft.

There are some few Justices for which no autograph appears, but Mr. Haight believes that they can be supplied later, and pages have been left for their insertion. Among those missing are Justices Brown, Shiras, Jackson, White, McKenna, and Day.

A letter to Dean Garrison preceding the arrival of the volume, Mr. Haight said:

"I am giving this book to the Law school of the University of Wisconsin for one particular reason. It is the hope that it will develop among your students some interest in the personalities of the men who have served on our Supreme Court. The acquaintance is bound to increase the vitality of the opinion that they remained the fireproofing of the stairways of Bascom and the widening and safeguarding of the corridors on the ground floor. The University has asked for $75,000 for this project and a like amount for safety devices of various kinds on the campus.

"The State is insistent that wherever people work—in factory or store—certain elementary principles of safety must be observed. It has not been so solicitous of the safety precautions on State properties or in

State Building Needs

Referring to the construction program for the University which the State Legislature now has under consideration, Pres. Dykstra explained that besides the two items mentioned the projects called for and recommended by the regents are: a farm short course center and dormitory, a dairy industries building, engineering laboratories and classroom facilities and the opportunity for expansion of the home economics department.

"All of these facilities have been long overdue," he declared. "Governor Heil has recognized this and is putting his influence behind the building appropriation bill. The assembly committee on Education has reported favorably upon the program. Hearings for the bill have also been held before the Joint Finance committee. All that is necessary from here on is a favorable vote by the legislature. Sentiment is favorable in both houses, but it needs to be consolidated when our bill comes out from committee."

Invites Citizens to Campus

During his talk Pres. Dykstra invited Wisconsin citizens to visit the campus, especially during the University's 88th commencement weekend which will be held Friday through Monday, June 20-23.

"It will not be long now until another commencement rolls around," he said. "Increasingly the alumni and citizens of the state are coming to the campus for this occasion. There is a growing realization that the University typifies the life and the interests of the whole state as does no other organization or institution. The University responds to the needs of the state and serves it every day in the year. Such things make the commencement weekend a real occasion in the state and our visitors run into the thousands."

"May I take this opportunity to invite you to share the 1941 commencement weekend with us on the most beautiful campus in America. Your presence will do us all good and you will find a hearty welcome waiting for you."

Homemakers to See New Foods, Styles, Gadgets, on June 7

Taking the guesswork out of jelly-making will be one of many subjects taken up when Wisconsin farm women meet at the State University College of Agriculture in Madison for Farm Folks' Field Day on Saturday, June 7.

Jelly will "jell" every time if the proportions of sugar and pectin or fruit acid are correct, say home economists. A handy gadget now on the market shows how to get the proportions right, and this will be demonstrated on Field Day along with the effects of under-cooking and over-cooking.

Better diets will get attention, with a discussion on why the government, as a national defense measure, is encouraging increased production and consumption of certain foods. Advantages of the new "enriched" bread will be compared with those of whole wheat. Housewives will get a stock of new, tested recipes.

Other subjects of the morning program, at the home economics building from 9 to 12, will include interior decoration, better home lighting, and the care of babies. There will be continuous moving pictures.

Highlight of the afternoon program will be the popular style show, to be staged with improved facilities in Bascom theatre this year.

The program will close with tea at the new Elizabeth Waters hall from 3:30 to 4:00 p. m.

Rural Leaders to Hold Recreation Laboratory Phantom Lake, June 1-6

The fun side of farming, often referred to as that neglected side of rural life, will be studied by leaders of Wisconsin rural groups when they meet for their fourth annual Recreation Leaders' Laboratory at Phantom Lake, June 1-6. Represented at the camp will be farmers, homemakers, the rural church, farm organizations, 4-H clubs, FFA, state extension service, and others.

Among the things to be considered at the laboratory will be the various arts and crafts that can be carried on at home as recreation activities; social games and folk dancing; and recreation as it applies to the church, community and family.

Scheduled to address the laboratory on objectives and values of recreation are: Charlotte Chorpening and Neva Boyd, Northwestern University, Evanston; John Tracy, Marquette University, and Peter Murphy, director of recreation, Milwaukee; J. H. Koib and A. F. Wilemon of the rural sociology department; Blanche Hendrick, of the home economics extension, University of Wisconsin; and Ella Gardner, recreation specialist for the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Instructing sections in arts and crafts are: painting and poster making, Byron Jorns, University College of Agriculture; stage craft, Fred Buerki, Wisconsin Union Theatre, Madison; metal or leather craft, William Koch, Milwaukee; archery, Chester Nelson, River Falls; wood chipping, Jean McFarlane, county club leader, Milwaukee; and art craft, Philip P. Lescio, Madison.

Marvin E. Klitsner, Lancaster; John F. Eaton, Great Lakes, Ill.; Harold E. Riebe, Philadelphia, Pa.; Howard A. Huntington, Green Bay; James K. Manwaring, Marshalltown, Ia.; Jerome O. Hendrickson, Eau Claire; John F. Konrad, Oshkosh; Peter P. Woboril, Milwaukee; and Benjamin D. Goldfien, Milwaukee.

scholastic honor society; Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honor society; and Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism society.

Honors day is held near the close of each school year on the campus to give the State University community an annual opportunity to pay public tribute to its outstanding students for their splendid scholastic work.

Easy Problem for Teachers, Students: Northern Summer Vacation + Summer Study = U. W. Summer School

The possibility of a northern summer vacation combined with six or eight weeks profitable study was extended today to teachers and students throughout the Middle West and South in a bulletin issued by the University of Wisconsin Summer Session.

Wisconsin's cool forests and lakes always offer an inviting prospect for a summer's vacation, and Madison, setting of the State University, is encircled by some of the most charming of lakes and woodlands the bulletin declares. The campus of the University itself covers a wooded, hilly area, and is located on the southern shore of beautiful Lake Mendota.

The bulletin gives additional advantages and information:

"Because it has at its disposal some 2,000 acres of land, the University has been under no pressure to crowd its buildings together. Broad lawns shaded by trees which were old when the first students gathered there, informal gardens and flower beds give the Hill a park-like atmosphere which makes it an especially pleasant background for summer work.

Not infrequently teachers adjourn their classes to some quiet spot on Muir Knoll overlooking the lake.

"One of the institutions of the campus which stands as the University's recognition of the importance of rec-
