TURNEAURE SAYS COLLEGE NEEDS RESEARCH MONEY

$14,000 Contributed to Carry on Work of Engineering School Last Year

That the College of Engineering is in need of large additional sums of money to carry on research and experimental work was the assertion of Dean Turneure, of the college, in his talk delivered before the members of the Wisconsin Manufacturers association in which he outlined the operation of the school and particularly the laboratories and research work now being carried on.

It was explained by Dean Turneure that $34,000 was available during the current year for research, $20,000 of which comes from university funds, and $14,000 from contributions. Approximately $10,000 of the contributed funds comes from the Engineering foundations; the remainder from scattered sources, for the most part state manufacturers.

Represent Four Foundations
The Engineering Foundation is composed of the four big engineering societies, electrical, civil, mechanical, and mining, and various large national manufacturers. Their support is rendered through the maintenance of research fellowships, and funds for specified purposes. At the present time there are about 35 men at Wisconsin engaged in approximately 42 problems of research.

Problems of research and experiment are undertaken with the university. (Continued on Page Two)

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT TO FEATURE "Y" VESPERS

A Christmas pageant will be the main number on the program at Y. W. C. A. vespers Sunday afternoon, according to June Deadman '28, chairman. The pageant is in charge of Marcella Eierman '28. Christmas carols will be sung by the vespers choir, in charge of Amelia Soldan '29, while a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet will preside over services. The pageant is being held instead of the talk by the Rev. A. J. Soldan which was advertised in the university bulletin. The Rev. Mr. Soldan will speak at 15 Vespers.

SELECT RHODES SCHOLAR TODAY

Burrus, Franseen, Frautschi, Behnke, Johnson Compete for Oxford Award

The Rhodes scholarship award for the state of Wisconsin will be decided today.

The state committee, made up of several former Rhodes scholars, headed by Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, as honorary chairman, will meet here to decide which one of the candidates from this state shall receive the three years of study at Oxford university, England.

The secretary of the award committee is Arthur B. Doe, of Milwaukee. M. H. Herriott, instructor in law, and C. W. Thomas, instructor in English, at the university, are members of the committee.

Five students who will be eligible for election have already been selected by the university committee, Alden Behnke, Jefferson Burrus, Clifford Franseen, Lowell Frautschi, and George Johnson, are the men chosen.

The Rhodes scholarship pays about $1700 per year towards the student's expenses at Oxford. Two students from each state may be in attendance at the same time, and since these scholarships run for three years, there is one year in every three in which there is no election.

Students are selected on a basis of their literary and scholastic ability and attainment and qualities of manhood.

Larson, who earned his doctor's degree here in 1902 and who is now chairman of the department of history at the University of Illinois, will lecture on "Alien Elements in American Political Life" at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon in 165 Bascom hall. Prof. Larson will speak under the auspices of the history department.

Prof. Larson is a Scandinavian by birth but was educated in this country, taking his higher studies at this university. His particular field deals with modern England and the constitutional history of England.

"A History of England and the British Commonwealth," which is used as a textbook in the history 5 course here, is one of several histories Prof. Larson has written. He is also the author of "A Syllabus of European History," "Canute the Great," and "A Short History of England."

Prof. Larson is active in the American Historical association work as well as in his academic studies. At present he is a member of the executive council of the association.

REQUIRED SUBJECTS ARE BROADENING SAYS DEAN NARDIN

Declares Most Students Follow Definite Programs to Aid in Later Life

"Why are required subjects forced on students?" is a question frequently being asked today," said Dean Nardin in a talk to Freshmen women at the convocation held yesterday afternoon in Lathrop parlors. She pointed out that it seemed to be the popular fashion to deplore the modern college system with its required number of credits and grade points and compulsory lectures as a hindrance to individual freedom.

"It has become the custom to speak of a college as if it were a colony of artists who should be driven only by their own irrestable desires to work. This would be an ideal condition, but it is not an existing one.

Subjects are Broadening
"Most of the persons attending college are not of the artist type; they are the general utility people following a definite program of work to train them for later life. Required studies often help these persons to find unsuspected powers and abilities in themselves, so that they may choose the vocations for which they are best suited," she showed.

"Even the exceptional ones who have definite talents are helped by being forced to take required subjects," Miss Nardin stated, for they help build a broad foundation for living and understanding life.

Vocational Committee Explained
In speaking of women in professions, Miss Nardin said that it is necessary to know what you want to get out of college if the studies are to be of any aid in later life. The purpose of the Vocational committee is to help women who do not know just what they want to do after college.

Viola Wendt '28 explained in detail the formation of the committee. "Bulletins are posted in Lathrop" she said, "listing the new vocations constantly being opened to women. One man from each department has been selected as an advisor to aid those who want to know about positions associated with a particular department."

Another similar conference will be held late in April at which time the director of the Minnesota Vocational bureau, will be present to talk to students about what they want to do after college.

MADISON HUNT CLUB TO FORM DRILL TEAM

Women members of Madison Hunt club will organize a drill team at a meeting at 5 o'clock this afternoon in Lathrop parlors.

Orchestra Members Look Forward To First Concert Of Year Sunday

When the 65 young men and women arrange themselves on the rostrum of Music hall Sunday afternoon for the first orchestra concert of the year, they will not only be interpreting the beauty of symphonic music for the appreciation of an audience, but they will also be enjoying their playing as much or more than the most sympathetic listener in that audience.

For the joy of creating the masterpiece, the joy of expressing their own aesthetic needs through the medium of their instruments is the reward of months of rehearsing, according to Major E. W. Morphy, director of the organization. "The cooperation resulting from this enthusiasm is one of the compensations of my work," he stated.

The student musician has that love for his work that is peculiar to the amateur. Playing with the orchestra is an avocation with the student. In this respect Major Morphy feels that he receives more satisfaction from his work with students than he would with professional men.

The professional has to guard against the danger of routine, which may rob his work of that spontaneity that the amateur possesses.

Especially has enthusiasm been evidenced this year. In the rehearsals of the famous Unfinished Symphony that will be presented Sunday afternoon, the students were carried away by the lyric beauty of Schubert's work.

From the point of view of the director, Major Morphy likened the response he received from the orchestra to that experienced in playing a powerful organ. One feels, however, that behind each instrument in the orchestra is the human personality that is not present in the keys of the organ.

This year Major Morphy has realized his aim of developing an organization of full symphonic instrumentation. The addition of the English horn, the tuba and the increase of instruments in other sections of the orchestra has equipped it to properly interpret the most intricate of symphonies.

TAFT PLEASES AS ARTIST, SPEAKER

Tendency to Earn Way by Wits Robbing Ranks of Sculptors, He Says

Sculptor, characterist, and entertaining lecturer, Lorado Taft, Midwestern artist who appeared under the auspices of the Arden club, won the favor of a large audience in Music hall last night.

"The art of sculpturing is associated with ideals of strength, beauty and divinity," declared Mr. Taft. "All through the ages when people have had something important to record they have expressed it in the difficult and expensive art of sculpturing, and for that reason if I were to symbolize this art I should make a be-benign figure with out-stretched hands, one in gratitude to the past, the other in welcome to the future."

The American tendency to encourage young people to earn their living by their wits rather than their hands results in a great loss of sculptors and painters, Mr. Taft believes. To encourage persons to get away from this tendency and to practice sculpturing themselves he took an egg shaped mass of modeling clay that stood on a wooden pedestal and with swift deft strokes created a likeness of his assistant, Robert Chalez. Mr. Chalez then took the clay and modeled the head of a girl while Mr. Taft completed his lecture.

A good sculptor must make a long study and really know human expression according to Mr. Taft. He illustrated the difference that a twist of the mouth or a raising of the eyebrow can make in a model by starting with a beautiful, but wholly expressionless French princess and with a dab of clay here and a hollowing out there transformed her into a suffering maiden, a terrified old lady, and a haughty queen.

French Club Will Give Annual Play Next Monday Night

SCHWARTZ WORKS DISPLAYED HERE

Library Houses Collection of Modern Paintings by Chicago Man

Brilliant decorative, and distinctly modernistic is the collection of paintings featured in the museum of the historical library this month. The artist is William S. Schwartz of Chicago, whose exhibit is being sponsored by the Madison Art association.

This exhibit, according to Miss Irene Buck, of the association, was shown for three months this summer at the Chicago Art Institute, where it received very favorable comment. It came here directly from Milwaukee where it was exhibited in the Layton Art Gallery. The Art Digest says of the exhibit:

"Huge canvasses, filled with life-sized figures; color with magic in it; form that marries cubism and realism to the advantage of both — here are matters to startle into awareness. Mr. Schwartz makes no attempt to copy nature. Rather, he takes what she offers and makes his own design of the elements."

"Her hair may be what color it please God," quoth Benedick, describing a possible Beatrice. Similarly, one might say this of this artist's figures, since if his composition requires green or blue in a certain spot, he caps a head with hair of that hue. And who shall say him nay in such minor matters, when the general effect so stimulates the eye?"

Two paintings of Mr. Schwartz have been included in the annual exhibit of American painters in the Chicago Art Institute, where only the best artists in the country are given place, and he is having a one-man show in the Chicago Galleries this month.

Hold Instruction Trip

The manufacturers were shown the laboratories and equipment which are available at the university for detailed laboratory and research work on the problems which are or may confront them.

"The idea of the inspection trip, and Dean Turneure's talk," declared Prof. L. F. Van Hagan, of the railway engineering department, "was to acquaint the manufacturers with the facilities which we have here, and to afford them a service similar to that given by the College of Agriculture to the farmers and agriculturists of the state.

953 Students Enrolled

Other figures given by Dean Turneure include: an enrollment of 953 students in the college this year; a teaching staff of 81 members in the technical departments; and a salary budget for the teaching staff of $233,000.

"It should be understood that the principal use of the engineering laboratories is for instructional purposes," Dean Turneure declared. "Their equipment and use for research purposes constitutes a relatively small part of the whole. In some departments, very little has yet been done to assist and promote research; in some others, the research activities are more pronounced. The space available has been a large factor in determining this question."

Work on Program for Pumpkin Holler Frolic Progressing

"Work on the program for Pumpkin Holler which will be given in Agricultural Auditorium at 8:15 on Friday night, has been going along very smoothly," Esther Hettinger, speech grad, who is coaching the stage work, stated yesterday. "Two one-act plays and a comedy sketch taken from a minstrel show have been developed in a clever manner."

"The Brink of Silence" which features four boys in the agricultural school, is the drama of an arctic explorer's life, according to Miss Hettinger. The plot somewhat resembles Enoch Arden, involving the explorer's return home to find his wife about to be married to another, and his handling of the situation. Booth Tarkington's "The Trysting Place" is a comedy farce which seems well adapted to

OPERATION ON COACH SPEARS IS SUCCESSFUL

ROCHESTER, Minn.—The rugged physique of Dr. Charles W. Spears, University of Minnesota head football coach, is bringing him back to health following an operation for a gall bladder ailment at St. Mary's hospital Wednesday, it was reported today.

Weakened and not in condition to withstand surgery, Dr. Spears has reacted favorably since awakening from the anesthetic, and in making satisfactory progress. When he will leave the hospital is not known.

Dr. Spears became ill at the start of the football season, and an operation was favored at that time, but might have removed him from the side lines until next year. He chose the alternative of directing the Minnesota team and deferring the operation.

TRAINING TABLE TIPS

Three Fives Lead

Minnesota Worried

Franklin Comes Down

Nothing much happened in our section of the athletic world yesterday, but don't let that worry you. The old vocabulary works just the same.

According to an opinion which many of the sport writers share with us, Indiana, Iowa, and Wisconsin stand at the head of the printers' ink champions in 1927. Indiana, by virtue of having some four-fifths of last year's team back in the business together with some worthy recruits from a well-trained freshman squad, has everybody worried. Iowa, too, is building castles on the return of several veterans, Hogan, McConnel, and VanDeusen by name.

And all the boys understand Wisconsin well enough to know that the same team that lost eight games last year may come back and crown an approximately similar number of opponents in this year's competition. All we gotta do is do it.

At Minnesota they are taking that 27-26 difficulty with North Dakota seriously. All the fans, not unnaturally, fail to see how the Gophers can keep step in the conference if they have to strain muscles beating North Dakota. Incidentally, three of the Minnesota netters just dropped out of their football togs a couple of weeks ago and haven't yet loosened up fully. Nydahl traded in his halfback tag for a forward job, Hulstrand, center, took up the same position on the basketball team, and Tuttle, second-string end, comes in as a guard.

Purdue, another big fish in the basketball pool, will present a lineup considerably jammed with football men this year. "Cotton" Wilcox, Bob Wilson, Ramby, Speidel and Eibel are all after cage jobs and at least the first two are sure of being successful. With the crafty Spradling and the altitudinous Cramer gone, however, the Boiler-makers can still stand a little improvement.

Once the "Wonder Five" in the midst of great basketball country, Franklin college is coming back to par this year. None of the former Franklin stars remain this year, and Coach "Griz" Wagner must build a new team. Franklin's future opponents, including Wisconsin, are not discounting her strength in spite of all that.

Rink Smaller in Accordance With Conference Rule

Wisconsin's new hockey rink, in accordance with conference rules, is smaller, both in length and width, than the rink of last year. Under the present arrangement the whole rink has been shifted to the west to make the construction of some bleachers possible on the east side of the rink.

Last year's hockey rink was oversized with its 210 foot length and its 100 foot width. Hockey men wasted an excess of energy covering this enormous space. The length of the present rink has been shortened to 190 feet, and the width narrowed to 80 feet.

The U. W. hockey squad is at a disadvantage in that both Minnesota and Michigan have indoor artificial ice rinks and as a result have the benefit of early practice and consistently good ice. It is seldom that the Badger puck squad has access to the ice before early December.

The weather dictates the condition of the ice on Wisconsin's rink. Under the influence of the sun the ice often becomes too slushy for play. This retards the development and condition of the squad.

Tom Lieb, acting Badger hockey coach, put all his men in action Monday and compelled them to as-

COACH JONES HAS BIG ENROLLMENT IN TRACK PROGRAM

Varsity Squad Divided Into
Two Sections for Work
During Week

More than 500 men are enrolled in the intramural, interclass, and varsity competitive sports activities included in Coach T. E. Jones winter track program. Meets for the season are scheduled between the various gym sections as well as those between the class and intramural squads.

From this large group of men Coach Jones is constantly uncovering and developing good material for his regular varsity track squad. Most of the men Coach Jones has to work with have done little or no work in track in high school and come to the university unknown and unheralded only to be ferreted out under the watchful eyes of the coach or of his subordinates. Such competition of interclass and intramural character has proved particularly fruitful, as a wealth of good intercollegiate material is always brought to light by the rivalry shown between these teams.

Varsity Squad Out

Varsity candidates for the track squad have been divided into two sections and are practicing three and four times a week for two or three hours an afternoon in the gymnasium annex. Coach Jones is working his men lightly at the present as the active and strenuous track campaign will not start until right after the Christmas recess.

At present Coach Jones is working with three or four men from the freshman and varsity squads in each event to prepare them for an exhibition they will give before the annual clinic of coaches from all over the country that will be held here this Friday and Saturday.

3 High Jumps

In the high jumps Coach Jones is concentrating his attentions on Capt. McGinnis, Barnes, and Pahlmeyer. These three men will demonstrate their jumps at the clinic meetings. In the pole vaults, Capt. McGinnis, Fox, Coates, and Lyne will work.

Hummel, Francis, Kreuz, and Smith will run in the sprints. Capt. McGinnis, Pahlmeyer, Murphy, Jirtle, and Stehr are entered for the hurdle exhibition. Shaw, Sappenfield, Smith and Kreuz will run in the dashes. Members of the cross country team and the longer distanced men will show their running form for the coaches.

HOCKEY SQUAD IN INITIAL WORKOUT

Lieb Sends Squad Through Light Workout in First Night's Work

The Badger hockey squad inaugurated their puck season Thursday with a brisk workout on the new hockey rink. The rink resounded with the clash of the sticks and skates of approximately 40 hockey candidates.

In view of the snow and mild weather much difficulty was experienced in getting the rink in fit condition of use. Coach Lieb was extremely anxious to get on the ice and consequently the squad made use of it despite its thinness and roughness.

Light Workout

The workout consisted merely of puck shooting and skating the rounds of the rink. Tom Lieb personally coached the first string varsity men, and particularly stressed offensive and defensive work. Following the puck work the squad was ordered to skate sist in the removal of the thick snow that covered the newly constructed rink. No sooner was the snow removed than the actual flooding of the surface was begun.

Intramural Notes

The postponed Greek touch football championship contests will be played off at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Camp Randall. The Sig Chi will tangle with the Theta Chis for third place. The teams appear to be quite evenly matched. The Alpha Chi Sigs have a slight edge over the Pi Kappa Alphas for first place. Both teams have won most of their games by top-heavy scores. Two individual stars will appear against each other in this game. Ted Whitenack, Alpha Chi Sig, is a veritable triple threat star, for he passes, runs and kicks with equal facility. One of his accomplishments in the Beta game was a dropkick from the forty yard line. Whitenack is easily half of his teams offense. On the other hand, Eddie Donagan, Varsity baseball star, is another Bennie Oosterbaan on the gridiron. Donagan has been directly or indirectly responsible for most of the Pi Kappa Alpha touchdowns by his marvelous reception of passes.

Games Saturday:
First—Alpha Chi Sigma vs. Pi Kappa Alpha—2 p. m.

Third place—Sigma Chi vs. Theta Chi—2 p. m.

CHURCH LEAGUE
The Congregationalists defeated the St. Paul indoor baseball team 1-0 at the Gym Annex Wednesday night.

BASKETBALL

Defensive play appeared to be the predominating factor in the games played by the Greek quintets Wednesday. The Alpha Chi Rho smooth-working offense ran up the highest score thus far in their game with the Alpha Kappa Kappans. Shaw, Alpha Chi Rho, captured individual scoring honors of the day with nine points.

Results Wednesday:
Tau Kappa Epsilon 2; Tau Sigma Omicron 0.
Phi Gamma Delta 12; Sigma Alpha Epsilon 10.
Delta Epsilon 8; Alpha Tau Omega 3.

The rink, although decreased in size, did not cramp the men for room. The entire rink has been shifted to the west in order to facilitate the construction of bleachers at the east end.

The caretakers of the ice are working frantically to get it in perfect condition. It is expected that the ice will be in that condition by next week if the weather continues to be freezing.

CAGE FIVE STILL PUZZLE AS FIRST GAME DRAWS NEAR

Badger Defense Appears to be Shining Light on This Year's Cage Team

Regardless of the fact that the Badger basketball team has twice defeated the frosh cagers by overwhelming scores, it is still a puzzle as to their exact strength. That will not be determined until they engage the Franklin five here a week from tonight. It has been a long time since the varsity teams have been able to handle the frosh like Meanwell's gang did the other night but it is generally believed that the poor showing of the frosh was due to superb defense they met in the personage of Hotchkiss, Barnum, Merkle and Stotts.

Truly, the guards are the real strength of the Badger five to date and in Merkle and Barnum it is believed Meanwell has another Williams and Tebell combination. Hotchkiss is going like a house on fire at the guard position, also, and with this additional strength the Badgers should have another one of those crack Meanwell defenses.

New Defense?

Apparently Coach Meanwell is abolishing the five man defense this year—evidently figuring other tactics will be more effective with this year's team. It was Dr. Walter E. Meanwell who first used the five man defense and it has been copied by hosts of other coaches and today remains the favorite defense of the majority of colleges and high schools. Meanwell's idea this year is to play a man-to-man defense, at least that is indicated by the two open practices.

The two sophomore centers, Kawalczyk and Tenhopen, did not come through the second open practice tilt with as much polish as they did the first game but that is nothing amazing and something that Meanwell is expecting. The veteran coach has been heard to remark that he can't expect much from his sophomores until the second semester as it will take four or five games to teach them what it is all about.

Disregardless of the many defects that can be found in the Badger machine, these are close followers of the cage game indicate that Meanwell will have his team in as good shape as he has had in any opening tussle when he takes on Franklin college here a week from tonight. Meanwell is entirely satisfied with the workouts he has had to date and readily admits that this year's team is stronger than it was last year.

Franklin is said to boast of four veterans, also, and will truly provide an acid test for any school to open a season. Coach Wagner has a well seasoned team polished and drilled waiting this conflict with Coach Meanwell, his old rival.

"Marriage Clause" is Sentence for Him, Critic Says

"The Marriage Clause," current at the Madison, turned out to be a sentence to the critic. The story is based upon a few false assumptions and is entirely lacking in the essentials of good drama.

At the start of the film, Francis X. Bushman, as the stage director, falls in love with Billie Dove, whom he has made a star in her first play. The subtitle calls it "the inevitable love of the creator for his creation."

When, after her first performance, the producer comes to her with a contract containing a clause forbidding her marriage for three years, she signs it against her will. But she was not forced into it; she signed on the advice of her lover, the director, who stood beside her with a marriage license in his hand. He was too noble to stand in the way of her success!

For three years they waited, in what sort of agony or bliss we don't know, and at the end of that time they began to behave like a couple of kids with a bad case of puppy love.

Our Paradoxical Educational Situation

Governor Christianson tells the Board of Regents of the University of Minnesota that the people of the state will not submit to an increased tax levy for university purposes.

President Coffman replies that without the increased appropriation it will be necessary to limit the enrollment.

In these recent declarations lies the crux of an almost paradoxical situation in respect to our modern state universities. Taxpayers resent the rising costs of supporting them, while their sons and daughters impelled either by a desire for learning, technical rather than cultural, or a desire for a university education because it is fashionable, are swelling the enrollment and making increased appropriations necessary.

This new phenomena makes the dilemma of a university president two-fold. It is not alone a dilemma concerning the physical needs of a university, buildings, laboratories and research funds—it is a problem respecting the structural organization of the university curriculum. Besides being a publicity agent who must continually extoll the greatness of the university to the people of the state, the modern university prexy must be a sort of magician who can organize the study procedure to meet the logical demands of the student seeking for technical knowledge and the student who desires learning for culture's sake alone.

A university dares not close its doors to the mass seeking education without meeting the hue and cry of democracy. Education is held fundamental to democracy. A middle-western university failing to respect that doctrine would find its appropriations promptly shut off. What a paradoxical situation! The governor of the state says that taxes are too high, whereas the enrollment cannot be limited making higher taxes unnecessary because such a procedure would be undemocratic.

Although realizing that the desire for technical education is a siren call today, the universities must not be altogether blind to the demands of the student desiring "culture." Such a student resents the expansion of a university into an educational institution whose curriculum is minutely sub-divided into hundreds of courses, and whose greatest thinkers cannot do more than lecture to auditoriums of students instead of expounding the subject in a tutorial fashion to discussion groups.

Furthermore, the student of "culture" cannot find an avenue of escape in the small college, for these institutions of learning have also been revolutionized in the trend towards mass education. Wisconsin's smaller colleges, once strongholds of liberalism in education, have been forced to add departments of engineering, law, and medicine. Endowment funds must be adequately subscribed to and the necessary enrollment secured. In the East, Dartmouth College has reluctantly added a medical and a business school. The trend is the same throughout the United States.

The needs of the "culture" seeking group of students at the University of Wisconsin were until this present semester met most fully in the Course of Humanities based upon the curriculum of the old college of liberal arts and instituted primarily for the benefit of students willing to devote a large part of their college work to non-professional, purely cultural development, either for its own sake or as a preparation for special study. This course has been augmented by the establishment this semester of "Honor Courses" whereby students of upper group status may take individual work outside of course as a partial requirement for the work of a major.

Another significant step was taken last spring when the "Junior College" plan of study was formulated. Under this proposal a selected group of freshmen and sophomores will work in liberal courses for two years.

Such has been the program at Wisconsin. With the continual growth in enrollment, the task of rehabilitating the curriculum will become greater. The trend in American universities will be interesting to watch.

Was His a Good Life?

Some days ago news came from Belgium that John M. Browning, world famous inventor of firearms, was dead. Browning, an American and resident of Ogden, Utah, had gone to Europe to experiment with the invention of a new type of double-barrelled shotgun and was working on his latest venture in deadly weapons when the grim-reaper overtook him.

His name was known the world over. It was publicized by the weapons which he invented and which the American and Allied armies used during the World War. He was a man of genius, of perseverance, of ability. But now that his span of accomplishment is run can it be said that his life was one that will make for advance of the world; can it be said that the world is better for his having lived in it. We wonder.

It is true that as far as we judge success in the mechanical or industrial world he was a success. He had ideas which he carried into reality by his genius pistol of .45 caliber which is used by the United States for invention. From his brain came the automatic army, the automatic rifle of deadly power and accuracy, the machine gun rifle and during the war they were all manufactured by the millions both in this country and abroad for the American and Allied armies. King Albert of Belgium awarded Browning the title of Chevalier of the Order of Leopold when the plant at Liege completed the millionth automatic pistol in 1913. Browning, through his inventions, undoubtedly did a great share towards winning the war for the Allied cause.

But can it be said that he lived a good life in devoting it to the making of weapons with which to kill off our fellow men. There is room for conjecture as to whether the world would have been better off had his weapons never been invented. Perhaps the world war would have been fought just the same, but would there have been the wholesale slaughter without his arms?

There are many sides to the question. If Browning was the first to supply the world with such deadly instruments we do not believe he bettered the world. If he invented them merely to offset similar devices of our wartime enemies, then it is apparent that he did America and the Allied armies a service and a good with his genius.

He was a successful man. He accomplished much. But is the world better or worse for his having devoted a lifetime to the invention of deadly firearms.

It's Tough to be Rich

This complicated society of ours! We have just finished reading a story in the Saturday Evening Post telling the world how hard it is to be the son of a very wealthy man. The writer, himself the son of a multi-millionaire, has a very good argument supported by good facts, but we wonder if he ever stopped to consider just how hard it is to be the wealthy man.

The latest drain and drawback to be put upon the wealthy man is the income tax return blanks. For some years we have read and heard jokes about their intricacies and length, but now we read one which caps off all the rest. The University of Wisconsin is giving a special course through its extension bureau in the art of compiling income tax returns!

Materials for the course consists of 375 pages of printed matter on the contents of the income tax law, and 100 mimeographed pages telling how to do it. It must be tough to be a rich man!

And while on the subject of Rocketeers and such, we wish to say a word or two concerning Papa, sometimes called Acon. In his last col. he said that he had suffered severely in French class because he couldn't smile, he had been reading too many of our columns. The truth of the matter lies in the simple fact that Acon is an Englishman, and the more clever of our jokes haven't touched his sense of humor as yet. Next semester he will probably be thrown out of his class in Thesis because he'll be laughing too much at the jokes he read this semester.

BARNSTORMING!

Editor, Daily Cardinal:
Again we find occasion to lament the manner in which Union Board concerts are being handled. Mr. Chamlee and Miss Miller must be complimented indeed upon the way in which they managed to cope with the situation on Monday evening.

Had not Mr. Chamlee been blessed with an amazing capacity for assimilating punishment in every form imaginable, we surely would have had to huffe our sawdusty way out into the night with the concert but half over. As it was, he continued without protest and with little visible annoyance.

By the time he had reached the third number in his first group, a diabolical radiator had reduced us to a state bordering upon insanity and violence. It fizzed, and groaned, and squeaked, and burred with happy disregard for the expressed emotions of the singer. It chortled most friendly even as

YOU OUGHT TO KILL HIM

The S. A. E. who looks over our shoulder mourns very sadly 'How shocking!' and we throw him from the room.

Beside, the office manager, just came in crying as if her heart would break. Being naturally sympathetic, we do our best to console her.

"What is the trouble, little girl?" we ask kindly.

"I'm so sad," she sniffles.

"Yes, yes, and why?"

"Streetscars ain't got no mammas," she sobs.

WELCOME DUKE

The Duke of Rockford says that Chief Hasse of the Washington gendarmerie (that's the word that got this contrib in) claims that if lights were installed in the upper decks of our busses they would eliminate night time petting. "I don't think they would eliminate petting, but they would be a lot in picking out the girl," says the Duke. The remark of a true gentleman and scholar. Come again, Duke.

the artist, with softly modulated voice, brought out his gentlest and sweetest tones. It waxed staccato when Mr. Chamlee sang hauntingly and it moaned lugubriously as the singer broke into quicker time. It continued with its joyous refrain throughout the entire concert when but a single turn of a knob would have silenced its bellows.

We also suffered with Mr. Chamlee in making entrances and exits and in taking his encores. Occasionally he was able to disentangle himself from the entwining and enveloping folds of the stage curtains in a fraction less than a minute, but usually his efforts were not quite so successful. Frequently, after retiring from the stage after a number, he was forced to claw violently along the entire length of the curtain to find the entrance. And always he found it with difficulty. Yet he continued to smile and, eventually, solved the problem by taking his bow at a corner of the curtain in his hand. We almost sweat blood for Powell Weaver, the accompanist, who had even greater difficulty in getting in and out. One able stage hand would have helped a lot.

And the spot-lights used in the operatic selections? We couldn't help wondering just what would have happened if they had been forced to move more than a quarter of an inch or so in any direction! We sat quite close to one of them and were scarcely able to hear above the din it made when a focus was changed. We were almost as nervous as the man handling it.

We are quite sure that Mr. Chamlee and Miss Miller will be (Continued on page five)

LESSON IN GRIT

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

An interesting incident occurred in the gym Wednesday. A meet was being held by the members of the freshman gymnastic squad. The first events passed off smoothly. Nothing happened until one fellow took his turn on the flying rings. At the end of his exercise, he lost his hold on the rings when he was about twelve feet above the ground, and he fell. As it happened, he landed on his back. Those who were gazing horror-stricken at his fall, were aroused by an almost inhuman groan, which came from the lips of the gymnast.

He was in immense pain. His face turned red with the effort he except to feel his awful pain. After of himself. A cold sweat broke out over his body as he lay there on the mats, unable to do anything except to feel his awful pain. After ten minutes, he was slowly lifted by his fellow gymnasts and by the instructors. He was told to walk slowly around the gym floor. Each step he took seemed to be a painful effort. Much as he tried he could not control the tears that came into his eyes as the results of his movements. As he walked around the gym, another one of the freshman gymnasts told him that the reason for his fall was that he had lost his nerve and had let go too soon. Those who were watching saw new tears come into the eyes of the fellow who had fallen and they saw him clench his fists, though even this slight act was almost unendurable.

The meet continued. The group moved over to the parallel bars where a new series of exercises were being given. The fellow stopped his slow walk around the gym and took his place in line. When his turn came, he jumped to the apparatus, performed his stunt with perfect form and then attempted to walk away. He almost collapsed as he did so. He had to be helped downstairs by a bystander, his muscles all tensed in an effort to control that unceasing pain in his back.

Foolish? Perhaps so; but grit, courage, nerve, guts or whatever you want to call it—all those he had in plenty. You can talk about football heroes who get out of sick-beds to play on the team; you can talk about your crewmen who give their last ounce for the victory; you can talk about your track men who fall exhausted after finishing a brilliant dash, and you can justly praise them. But to fight on against odds when cheers await you, and when pleasant smiles will greet you, and when there's honor to fight for, is quite a different thing from fighting when everything's against you and there's nothing to win. This fellow fought, and only to show himself that he wasn't "yellow." That's real grit. And fellow, if there were a Wisconsin Hall of Fame we'd do our bit to nominate you for a place in it.

Cal Scared Of Everybody On Court Issue, View

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale commenting on President Coolidge's message in the Yale Daily News, says:

"There is not a word concerning the world court. The nearest approach is this: 'The foreign policy of this government is well known.'

"Before the president's Kansas City speech we all thought we knew what our foreign policy was, in regard to the world court at least, but now no one knows.

"It would seem that the Kansas City speech showed that Borah had frightened the president into side-stepping or back-stepping the court. It would seem now from the president's message that the outburst of unfavorable comment on his Kansas City speech had frightened him again so that he does not dare even mention it.

Barbara Thompson and John Buckstaff Will Marry Dec. 29

Wednesday, Dec. 29, is the day chosen by Barbara Thompson ex-'28, Oshkosh, for her marriage to John Buckstaff, also of that city, which will take place there in Trinity Episcopal church.

Miss Thompson is a member of Delta Gamma sorority.

Mr. Buckstaff is associated with his father in the manufacture of furniture and is prominent in the yachting circles in the inland lakes.

DENY OUSTED MAN EXTENSION COURSE

Disciplinary Committee Fixes
Guilt in Three Cases; One
Girl Freed

A person suspended from the university is also excluded from the extension division of the university and the courses which it offers, the university committee on discipline ruled at its meeting held yesterday.

An applications for courses in the extension division had come from a man who had been suspended, and the committee was called upon to make a definite ruling in this case.

Two other matters were acted upon by the committee. The first involving a student in the College of Engineering. This student had been noticeably depending on his laboratory partner in physics for the results and conclusions of the experiments which they were presumed to do together.

The committee found the student guilty and recommended to the physics department that he be required to do a half semester's laboratory work independently.

Two sophomore girls who had turned in almost identical blue books in a French quiz were brought before the committee. Both vigorously denied cribbing, but evidence gathered by the committee found one guilty and the other innocent.

The girl found guilty was given 5 extra credits required for graduation for her copying, 10 extra credits for lying about it, and probation until April 1.

SARGEANT, Minn. — (P) — Pool tables will not be permitted in this village, citizens decided in an election Tuesday.

SHERIFF OBJECTS TO STUDYING IN CEMETERY

Harold Colby, a graduate of the university and now a student at the Oregon Agricultural college at Corvallis, Ore., was evicted from a cemetery near the outskirts of that town a few days ago, after having taken up his residence there. Colby went to the college to do graduate work and sought out a peaceful and quiet place to live. He camped at first in the tourist camp, but finding it too noisy, he pitched his tent in the cemetery. The sheriff paid him a visit after nearby citizens had registered a protest and helped him to find another place. No charge was filed against him.

DOLLS IN LIBRARY SHOW ATTRACTIVE

Contrasting National Types
Are Arranged in Colorful
Display

One of the most interesting exhibitions in the Library Museum is a case of 83 dolls which come principally from the Fairchild collection. These dolls have been gathered from almost every country, and are dressed according to their various national types.

There are "character" dolls from China, elaborately gowned in brocades, and with grotesque and terrifying expressions. Two dolls from Holland depict a gingham-aproned peasant and a well-dressed young lady, both of uniform bloneness.

Two nuns from Biarritz try to counteract with their sober presence a Swiss belle in pink satin and a German ballet girl in tulle ruffles and flaxen braids.

A be-plumed Parisienne of the early nineties stands beside a dusky Hawaiian who wears the traditional shredded wheat skirt.

There are some very old dolls that were made in this country. A modest little Quakeress and a bride with many furbelows stand upon the same shelf. Still other American dolls dating from the nineteenth century have short waists, ample skirts, and shiny enameled heads upon which their hats ride triumphantly aloft.

LYA DE PUTTI DOES GOOD ACTING AT STRAND

Bq A. C. H.

Although the cast of "The Prince of Tempters," now at the Strand, is really an all star cast, the only acting worth commenting upon was done by Lya De Putti of "Variety" fame.

Miss De Putti is excellent as the siren who is hired as a foil for the young Duke who had been a monk. Ben Lyons plays the role of Francis, Duke of Chatsfield and ex-monk as though he were a child imitating a grown-up person. Although no doubt that is the impression which ought to be given, Mr. Lyons did not succeed in being convincing either as a monk, or as a Duke getting his first taste of society life.

The story of the picture has as a claim to attention the fact that it is rather more novel than most movie plots. However, the action is too slow—minor incidents being dragged out to such an extent that their significance is lost.

Los Moran and Ian Keith take roles similar to the type in which they always appear. However, Mr. Keith always contributes real characterization to any picture. Mary Brian has a very minor role also. The greatest acting was, however, that done by Miss De Putti and it was by her acting that she raised her part.

STUDENT TOUR OF SPAIN IS PLANNED

University Credit Offered for Two Courses During Summer Trip

The newest item in student trips is the 1927 Residential Tour to Spain, which begins June 25, and embraces a 72-day journey, until September 4, 1927.

Two courses will be offered on the tour. They will be under the direction of J. Horace Nunemaker, A.B. (Colgate) A.M. (Denison). He will commence instruction as soon as the steamer leaves New York. These courses are brief survey of Spanish literature, prerequisite two years of college Spanish or equivalent, and a course in advanced composition and conversation, with the same prerequisite. Both courses are put out by the university and will receive credit here.

During residence in Madrid, the students will attend courses at the centro de estudios historicos, and may obtain the diploma de suficiencia granted by that institution, if they meet requirements of the courses. This certificate is recognized for four credits in this and several other universities.

After a few days in Paris the party will travel via Biarritz, San Sebastian, and Burgos to Madrid, where residence will be taken up in the dormitories Residencia de Estudiantes. After the residence in Madrid, the party will go through the South of Spain, and will re-

Air Device Halts Rush Into Union Building Doorway

At last the mighty must bow down, bow down and sweat, for the university has installed a compressed air device to close the door of the Union building.

All the high moguls that reside in the offices of Union board, Octopus, Lit. Men's Glee club, and the alumni records who came bursting into the Union building yesterday morning failed to burst.

A clever little brass instrument with a Yale nameplate and an air of bulldog determination about it guards the door preventing activity workers from skipping into the Union building, leaving the door open, and giving the Memorial Union secretaries severe colds and more severe tempers.

COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON SUMMER BUDGET

The committee composed of Pres. Glenn Frank, J. D. Phillips, and Dean Scott H. Gooding to make recommendations to the board of regents regarding the university summer school budget, will meet tomorrow morning. The committee was appointed by Theodore Kronshage, president of the board of regents, because of the disapproval of several members of the board to the summer school budget of $140,000, presented to the regents at their meeting on Wednesday.
