Dedication

Perhaps President Eliot spoke impulsively when he designated Wisconsin as the leading state university.

Maybe Secretary Wilson was in error when he selected Madison as the ideal location for the United States Forestry station, thereby conferring an honor of great consequence.

Some skeptics may wonder if Hutchins Hapgood showed appreciation in his able portraiture in Colliers' on "Wisconsin Hats on the Hill".

David Belasco may have been indulgent with Professor Dickinson when he staged "The Unbroken Road" at the Alhambra in Washington.

Possibly Lincoln Steffens and Edward Slosson were in jocular moods when they scribbled in prominent magazines those eulogies which impressed national educators with the positiveness of their spirit.

Perhaps a better place might have been chosen by the Lincoln commission of America for the replica which is soon to be unveiled on the Upper Campus.

But Anyway

While we think that Wisconsin has long since received her measure of recognition, still we believe that the past year was neither uneventful nor insignificant in the annals, and this Badger is sincerely dedicated to those within and without the personnel of the university, who have been the force in her advancement.

Senior History

By a Senior

In the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and five, a collection of high-school graduates and one person from Stevens Point Normal filed through the portals of old Main Hall, and deposited themselves along the bar in the sanctuary of that man of most singular species, the Registrar. It is recorded in the Black List of the Class of 1908, that this band, now the Class of 1909, having signed their various cheques, proceeded cautiously to the lower campus, where they sang, with great fervor, "Heaven Shed Thy Kindly Light"—and incidently decided that 'damn' must be incorporated in the class yell. It is also recorded in a very old archive of the "Purifiers Association" of this illustrious class, that it was after this song fest, that the famous "Black Hand" political gang was organized, which was influential in keeping these said Purists from succeeding in getting a game of graft to work for two and one-half years.

Little need be mentioned concerning the method of class rushes at this period, for we have even to this day, strong recollections of the result of the sophomores defense upon the members of this class. The caulked heeled repulses had a marked effect upon the faces of many of the gallant Frosh. However, the claims to the Loyal Legion lost in this affair were more than regained by the honor of the Western Freshman Football Championship, won a month or two later by these wearers of the purple and gold.

Through the two following years the class of 1909 continued to store up power, and some of the individuals acquired college reputations both famous and notorious. Never do we run across old accounts that fail to treat at length on the mysteries of the factional and faculty interests, nor was ever a thought omitted concerning characters of social merit, the Chesterfields and the Queens of the Court, for there were many in this wondrous aggregation.

In athletics of this time, this class excelled in many branches. In contests with other classes, such as crew and football, basketball and track, it held its own. It boasted of a gymnast, who could win a whole western championship alone; a pigmy football artist, whom all of Minnesota failed to stop; a Varsity pitcher, the best in all the school. Has ever such a class been found before?

To add to the achievements of the athletes and other noted personages—we read of a manager of far spread fame, the chairman of their Junior Prom, who claimed for a whole year the largest deficit in history; further, we learn of an actress with true art, and she was beautiful besides. Constant good feeling was fostered among the members, for it is said that in their senior year, two opposing candidates for class president divided up the campaign expenses.

For four years the class of 1909 held sway; first, as the green addition, second as the Soph with hard hat and pipe, who tells of breaking up the night-shirt parade of the class beneath, then the nonchalant Junior, looking down upon the underclassmen, finally the Senior, who wields the big stick of tradition, recoiling only under the thought that before long he himself must shed his robe of honor, and succumb to the dictates of those much better schooled than he.

So passed the four years of building and improvement, the fellow from the East lived with the fellow from the West, and grew to know him well. The power of the four figures 1—9—0—9 bridged over any subtle reference to Stevens Point Normal, from which that little freshman came, and never was there a time when a member of this class found ill-luck oppressing him, but that same power drew his classmates to him, to succor him with many a willing hand. Up to this time we have been unable to discern, whether the class spirit survived after graduation, this being a treatise on actualities rather than probabilities.

The 1908 Commencement Play was epoch-making enough to deserve a footnote. It was the first full-sized comic opera ever attempted at Wisconsin; it entertained two capacity houses in the off season; and it was put on in three weeks, where, ordinarily, THE MIKADO means eight weeks rehearsal and universal nervous prostration. The man primarily guilty of this performance was Director Dinnie MacDonalld '04, who in that record time, energized a shy mob of thesis-ridden seniors into a troupe that was all to the good from prima donna to the back row of the chorus. Miss Pansy Coon induced the Fuller Orchestra to play real music. That is another record. Roland Roehr was the first class business manager that ever turned in his accounts for audit—along with, incidentally, $430.00, the record senior class contribution to the Student Loan Fund.

EL KASTLER '10

The Season

CENTRAL DEBATING LEAGUE

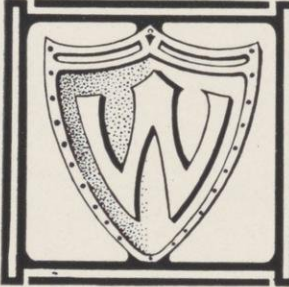

Members	Won	Lost	Pctg.
Wisconsin	4	2	.666
Illinois	3	3	.500
Iowa	3	3	.500
Minnesota	3	3	.500
Nebraska	2	4	.333

During the past year, Wisconsin has won undisputed title to the top position in the Central Debating league, and as a result intercollegiate debating seems finally to be coming to its own. Due to the strenuous efforts of the department of oratory, most of the students at least know that we have inter-collegiate debates and the attendance at the various contests has been an encouraging indication.

The season in oratory was somewhat quiet this year because of the fact that Wisconsin's annual winning of the Hamilton contest could not be celebrated, there having been no contest. As a result of the final oratorical contest, Charles C. Pearce was selected to represent Wisconsin in the Northern Oratorical League contest.

The routine of the joint debates, junior ex, the junior open, the sophomore open, senior open, semi-publics, and freshmen contests, has fully occupied the year as the following pages indicate.

Review of the Season

The opening of the season in September found Wisconsin in a peculiar situation and for a time the whole outlook of the team was dependent upon the outcome of special fall examinations. Because of this and the fact that some of the older men did not report at once, but waited for the opening of school, the first game was anticipated with some anxiety. This was removed in large measure by the announcement at the last moment that the old regulars were eligible and could play.

Lawrence, with whom the first game was to be played, was no mean opponent. The week before they had held the heavy team of Minnesota down to a 6 to 0 score, and as the Wisconsin team was an unknown quantity when they stepped upon the field, the game promised to be a hard one. To the surprise of everyone, Wisconsin showed mid-season form and overwhelmed their opponents by a 35 to 0 score. The game served to show that the team had elements of great power and the entire school waited with expectancy for the next game.

CAPT. ROGERS

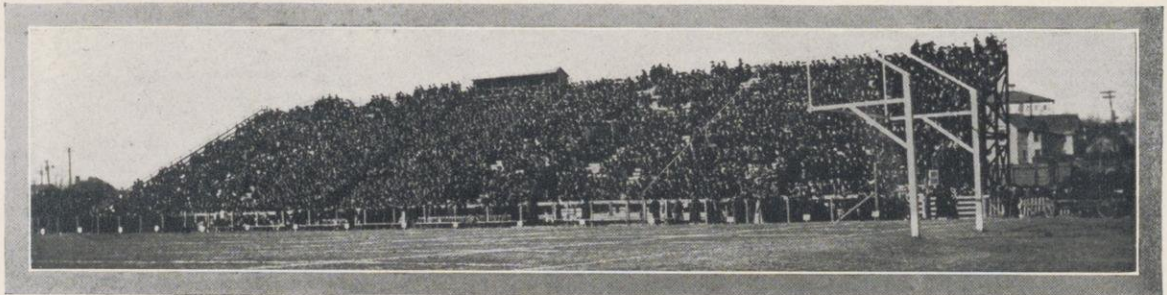

The following week Wisconsin met Indiana at Bloomington. Although badly beaten by Chicago the week before, Indiana had shown in that game that there were great possibilities in their team, and as it was their first big game at home they were well prepared. The day was warm even for that locality and Wisconsin, coming from the cooler climate of Madison was sadly handicapped. Notwithstanding this they justified the hopes of their backers and in a hard fight won 16 to 0.

The two weeks following were spent in preparing for Marquette, but the effects of the game with Indiana showed in the listless way in which the team worked. The usual midseason slump was on, and in fact did not pass until after the Marquette game. The score, 9 to 6, showed the relative merits of the two teams in that game, but gave little satisfaction to the coaches or rooters, who looked forward to the games to come with apprehension.

The first of the big games came the following week with Minnesota. Badly beaten by Chicago the week before, Minnesota was not expected to win; but, as Indiana, they had learned by their defeat, and consequently the game was one of the hardest fought contests of the year. Wisconsin, now seasoned into a veteran team, after a splendid exhibition of defense, opened out into the new style football and scored early in the first half. After this, because of the presence on the side lines of a number of Chicago men, the team played on the defensive and the score was consequently low, no further scoring being done by either team and the 5 to 0 score of the first half was the final result of the game.

The last game of the season was with Chicago, and as both teams had a clear record, the championship of the west hinged on the result of the game. Combined with this, was the fact that it was the first time in three years that these teams had met, and the rivalry was correspondingly keen. The day of the game was perfect, and the largest crowd in years gathered at Camp Randall. The game was fully up to the expectations of the rooters. Starting on the kickoff, with a wonderful run for touchdown, by Steffen of Chicago, the finest exhibition of the revised game was given, that has so far been seen on any field in the country. Wisconsin surprised their most enthusiastic followers by the way in which, with the odds against them, they plunged into the fight and for the rest of the game more than outplayed their opponents. The resulting score, while in favor of Chicago shows how the slightest chance can turn the result of the game under the new rules, and where two teams are equally matched, make the difference of the game.

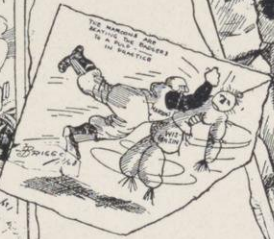

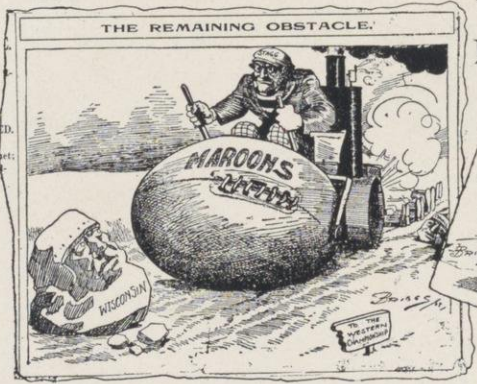

A. B. Rogers.

THE
MARQUETTE
GAME.

THE TRIBUNE'S
VIEW POINT

The Team

Rogers

Captain "Biddy" Rogers of the last season's team has had one of the most remarkable careers of any Wisconsin athlete. Three year's of varsity football; three year's of varsity basketball with one captaincy; and two years of varsity baseball is indeed enviable. "Biddy" comes from Portage, Wisconsin. He made good here at the start; he has never left off playing; and each season has found him playing at the left extremity of the line. He is not a brilliant player, but is full of consistency and coolness in emergencies. He is a good tackler and although a few runners negotiated his end last fall, it was because of the heavy interference directed at his position. The bleachers always bowed to "Biddy."

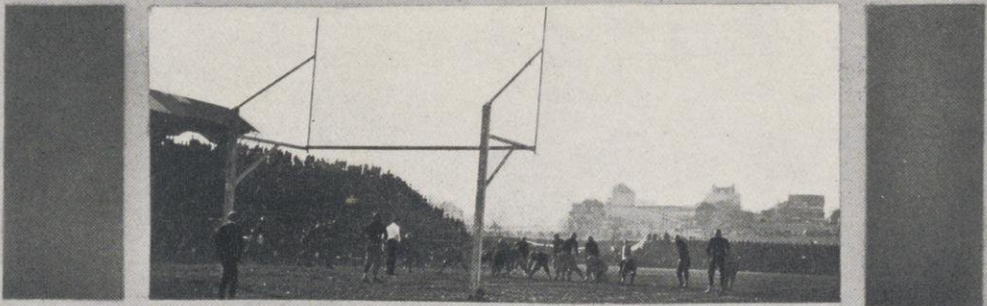

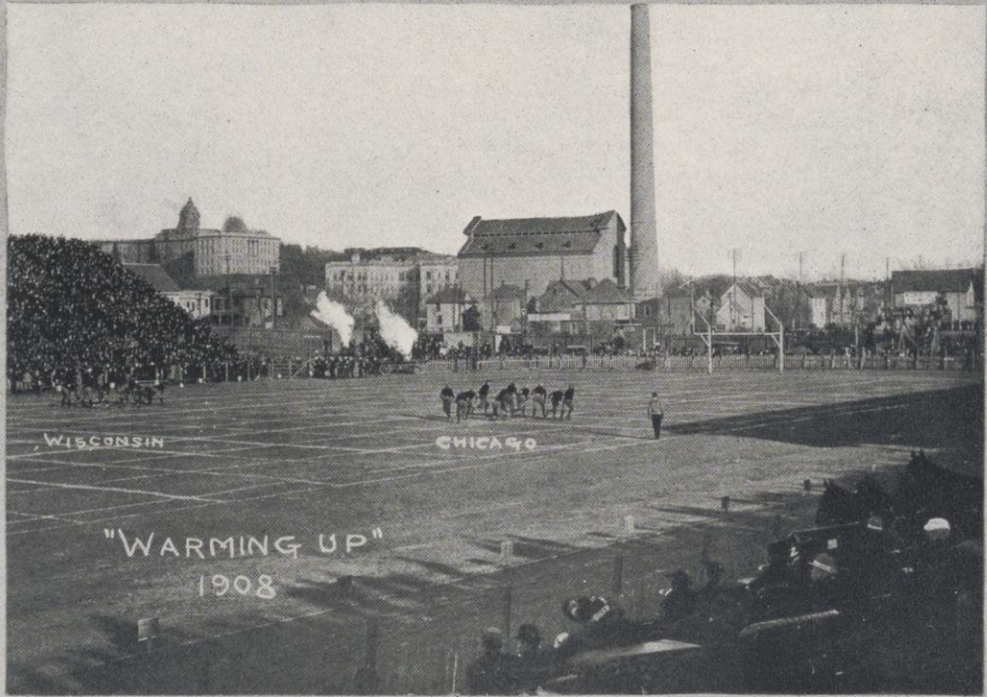

Messmer

With a fat job on Walter Camp's second All-American, and offers of jobs on every all-western team, "Jack" Messmer, wearing three varsity "Ws," closed his gridiron career last November. Of course that's a nery thing to say and "Jack" will not verify it, but then the papers said so and what can you do about it.

"Jack's" main hobby this year was to get down the field first under kicks. The forward pass however was his regular coup d'etat. Forty or fifty yards were easy for him, and his passes were made with the accuracy of a rifle shot. If "Jack" Messmer wasn't worth a whit as a football player, he would still be valuable for his ability to get work out of other men, and aiding thus at his old position of guard this year, he played the greatest game of his life.

BEFORE THE CHICAGO GAME

Muckleston

It was Muckleston who, in that memorable struggle with Chicago, seized Wilce's toss and carried the ball for the second score. It took the right man at the right place. The place was there, so was the man. The man was "Muck." Last season was his second year on the varsity. Although his best field is the defensive, he is generally "there" to advance the ball in every event. There was nothing "showy" about "Muck's" playing, except in the consistency with which he used to nail the backs on the other team. Sometimes they got through, but generally they were twisted around and headed the other way. Then as history repeats itself, so from the bottom of the heap would bob up "Muck."

Dreutzer

Dreutzer's work was typical of the "Never Say Die" spirit, and his fighting brought him recognition on the second all-western team. He learned football at Annapolis but acquired the Wisconsin's style of playing, and the critical moment in the Minnesota game when he stopped three plays sent against him for a gain of inches by Minnesota, which would have meant Wisconsin's defeat, was only characteristic of his work during the whole season. As one of Wisconsin's famous center trio, he was feared and respected by all his opponents. It will be a difficult thing for the man who plays Dreutzer's position next year to measure up to the standard set by him as a player and a gentleman.

Osthoff

"Ostie" more than fulfilled the expectations of his most enthusiastic admirers last fall and all critics agree that he was the premier tackle of the west. Although naturally a backfield man, he worked to learn the duties of his new position in the line, and he amply justified the confidence in his ability to eliminate the weak spot in the Wisconsin team. "Ostie" is peculiarly fitted for the new style of football combining with his great strength, weight and knowledge of the game, speed, head-work, and ability to either throw or receive the forward pass. If he improves next year as he did this season, he will be one of the best tackles in the country and a candidate for all-American honors.

CHICAGO GAME

Boyle

To see "Butch" Boyle smile at a "purity" banquet and hear the genial words which flow from his lips, one would never see in him the demon who would mutilate the enemy's line the next afternoon. Concealed beneath the kindest of dispositions, "Butch" has a fighting spirit which does not know defeat. Always known as a man of words, he is becoming even more famous as a man of deeds.

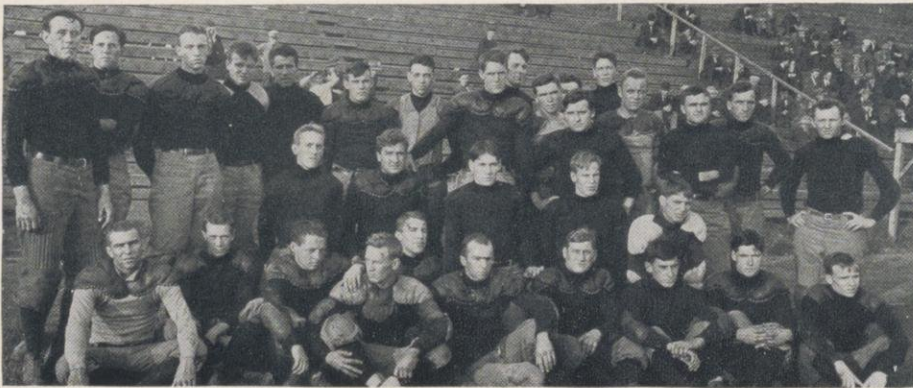

Wilce

'Jack' Wilce is one of the youngest and most versatile athletes who has appeared at the University of Wisconsin in recent years. As leader of the Badgers next fall, because of his consistent playing he will have the confidence of coaches, athletes, and rooters. Wilce will be one of the most silent of captains, but with dogged perseverance, what he sets out to do he is likely to accomplish. The greatest western fullback in 1908 should prove the greatest western captain in 1909.

CHICAGO GAME

THE SQUAD

Moll

"Keckie" is an appellation derived from a felonious act in boyhood. He stole cake from the pantry, and was dubbed "Cakey" by the family. Time has changed the term to "Keckie," and achievement is changing it to "Kickie." "Keckie" received his first football training under "Mac" the best teacher in the world. In the varsity he made quarter on the freshmen team and was later elected captain, when he gave the varsity men lots of trouble. Last spring, he was laid up with rheumatism, but the old disease picked the wrong person. "Keckie" was first on the field in September, and he played well during the season, though never in fit condition in his muscles. As a football general he is without peer. He has two more seasons of eligibility and should make a great reputation for himself.

Stiehm

Stiehm's final season, just passed, has in every way been a fitting climax to his successful career.

Although considerably heavier than last year, he covered lots of territory. He not only broke through the opposing line and spilled the man with the ball, but repeatedly caught the runner out on the end. Charging hard and low, using his arms to great advantage, and bringing into play his long experience in the game, our lanky center was a source of inspiration to his team mates and a fitting middle-man for our impregnable center trio. He put ginger and fight into his team-mates, and struck consternation and dismay into the hearts of the opposing players.]

Dean

After watching Dean play, one needs no further demonstration of "Doc" McCarthy's ability as a coach. Dean was picked for the second all-western this year due to his great tackling ability, his qualities of quickly solving new plays, of smashing up interference, and inevitably nailing the man with the ball. During the Chicago and Minnesota games, he played in top-notch form and his superior defensive work spoiled many a chance for a score by our opponents. With two years left to play, "Jimmie" Dean bids fair to become not only one of the best ends Wisconsin ever had, but one of the best ever produced in the west.

Cunningham

How so much nerve, brains, speed, grit and genuine football ability could be incorporated in such a little person as "Coots" Cunningham, no one knows. But when it came to stopping Walter Steffen, never did the pluckiest and smallest of the Badgers make a false step. Critics did not believe a 134-pound halfback could make a success on a Big Eight team until the little Badger showed them how

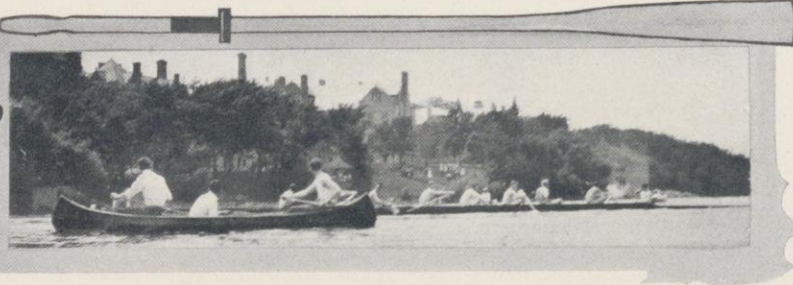

Culver

By consistent and reliable hard work, "Bud" Culver has won his way to prominence in the realm of football. In the past season, he never missed a minute of play. Seasoned by two years of varsity football, he will be one of the faithful "Old Guard" upon whom Barry can rely to help land the Western championship next fall.

Review of the Rowing Season of 1909

While some may doubt the advisability of dubbing a rowing season successful when it is not crowned with a victory at Poughkeepsie, that term surely ought to be applied to the one in Wisconsin's history which ended last June.

Coach Ten Eyck was on hand early in the fall, and crews to represent the various classes in the university were organized, to open the season.

With the arrival of spring and the disappearance of the ice on Lake Mendota, two rowing clubs were organized on a basis similar to those at Cornell, Yale and all colleges where rowing is practiced successfully. These clubs brought out a large number of men.

After the smoke of mid-year exams had cleared, the work of the varsity crews commenced with a good aggregation of veterans, and members of the 1910 freshmen boat in college.

Coach Ten Eyck's idea of rowing with hard work and plenty of it was exemplified by the stiff four mile' rows.

Favored with weather a little better than the ordinary and with the important fact that the make-up of the boat had not once been changed during the work on the lake, the crews prepared for the trip east.

At the Hudson, final work commenced with such spirit as has seldom been witnessed, and the time trials fully justified the feeling that whoever crossed the finish line ahead of us would have to go some. Few who saw the big race did not agree that we had a winning crew.

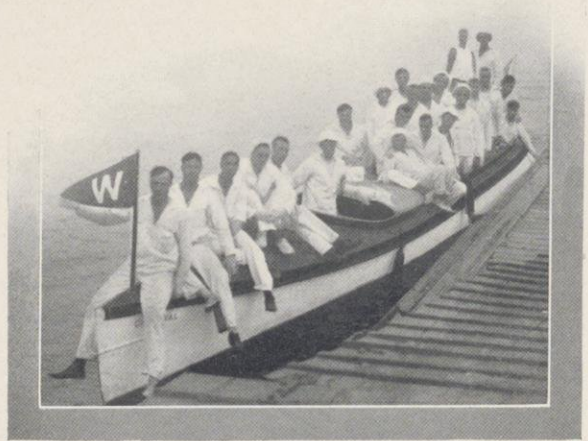

After the two minor events, in which Syracuse won the varsity four and our much lauded freshmen met defeat at the hands of Cornell, came the big event of the day—the race of the varsity eights. At the crack of the gun, Pennsylvania jumped into the lead, followed by Columbia and Wisconsin. When the first mile post was passed

ENROUTE EAST

Pennsylvania dropped back and Wisconsin came to the lead. The advantage was increased to a length at the two mile point and was held easily all the way down the third mile, which is considered the deciding mile for final positions. Just before commencing the fourth and last mile of the struggle with everyone apparently in good form, a slight hitch came in the rhythm of the boat and then a perceptible pause. It was then seen that one of the oarsmen had collapsed and that only seven men were left to carry the boat over the line in another losing race for Wisconsin.

Those who saw the race, realize the standing which Wisconsin gained among the eastern colleges by bringing what would have been a winning boat over the line. With the enthusiasm shown toward rowing this year, it would be folly to cease sending crews east, for, some time in the near future we will have an eight that will bring back the great and coveted prize.

REVIEW OF SEASON '08.

The baseball season was almost an exact repetition of the successful season of 1907. The outlook at the early practice was inspiring, a large number of candidates trying out under our new and efficient coach, Tom Barry. But while these showed great promise, the lack of regulars was rather discouraging, only Messmer, Rogers and Muckleston being eligible. We were further handicapped by the ineligibility of Captain Kaulfuss and Third Baseman Whittier. Consequently the coach was up against the proposition of building up entire new infield and discovering a new catcher. The acquisition of "Dug" Knight to the pitching staff, with Johns and Nash to alternate, removed all doubt as to the care of that position.

The playing of two consecutive games at the commencement of the season showed up our weakness and gave the coach an insight to the work of the team. The season began with the strong Illinois aggregation, groomed in contests with the "Cubs" and "White Sox," and their overwhelming victory was not surprising. Altho compelled to meet Northwestern on the following day, the score indicates the extreme closeness of the game.

In two weeks we met Northwestern again and demonstrated our superiority by reversing the score of the previous game. Our initial game with Chicago on the next day, resulted in a victory for Stagg's men, due to our loss of Knight through his having pitched the game on the previous day. A week later the strong Purdue team was taken into camp in a close game, in which the team showed a decided reverse of form.

Our winning streak was continued, when the "Gophers" met us. In the crucial game, Knight won his own game, with a slashing two-bagger in the ninth inning.

The game with Purdue was a pitcher's battle between Knight and Rice. It was merely a question of luck as to which team would win. The boilermakers were successful in the seventh inning, when a single and a homer brought in the winning score. In the final contest with Minnesota, four regulars were absent and their loss detracted from the customary precision of our play. Nevertheless, we have no hard luck story to tell and will abide by the results of all our games, with the confidence that the student body is back of us and feel that we did our best. Here's hoping that we have a championship team next year.

Review of the 1908 Season

The season of 1908 opened with not a quarter-miler in the university and we looked woefully weak in the high jump, half-mile, and pole vault. Myers and Johnson former conference winners were barred by the three year rule and first class material seemed exceedingly scarce. On account of apparent lack of funds and the disinclination of the athletic council we had no indoor dual meets.

Our only event was the quarter mile relay race with Chicago. A team, picked after three short weeks of training, was composed of a sprinter, a miler, a hurdler and a half-miler, but it made a fair showing against Chicago's quartet of fast quarter milers. Credit is due Dr. Hutchins for his work with the team.

Coach Angell took charge of the outdoor training and with the aid of the more experienced track men, whipped a team into shape for the dual meet with Illinois. In spite of raw cold weather the team was in good condition for this early event, May 9. Had Wisconsin presented a full team, we would beyond a doubt have tied Illinois, and possibly won from them by a narrow margin instead of having to submit to the score of 68 to 58.

In the annual outdoor dual meet with Chicago, Morris, who had been relied on for at least 8 points, stood on the side lines with a strained tendon. The meet proved full of excitement and sensation. Wisconsin gained an early lead, but Chicago forged ahead by winning the high jump, pole vault and quarter mile. At the start of the half mile race, the score stood 44 to 37 in favor of Chicago but by winning first and second places in the half, the score was tied. In the two-mile, the last event, Drew and C. F. Smith won first and second making the final score 64 to 62 in favor of Wisconsin.

Messmer, Grobe and Blankenagle, each won ten points for Wisconsin. The men of the 1908 team will always feel proud of this victory since it was the first track victory over Chicago for a number of years.

Teams from all the leading western colleges competed at Chicago, June 6, for the championship. The struggle early narrowed to a contest between Chicago, Illinois, Leland Stanford, and Wisconsin. The maroons could not claim the victory until Merriam had won the low hurdles, the last event, which gave Chicago a total of 24 points. Wisconsin and Leland Stanford tied for second place with 20 points each and Illinois came next with 18. Wisconsin won the most firsts with Messmer holding the discus event, Osthoff the shotput, Natwick the high hurdles, and Blankenagle the mile run.

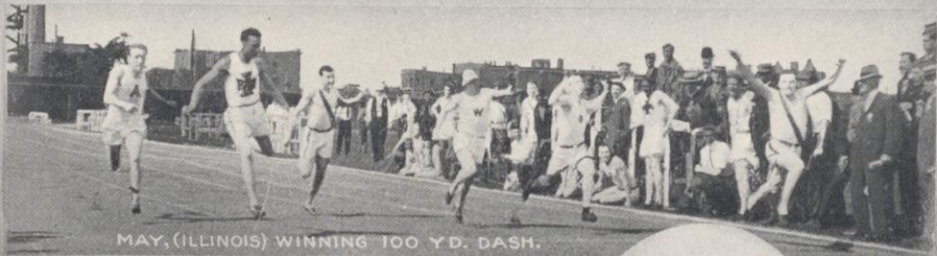

The track season of 1908 as a whole was satisfactory and the members of the team may justly take pride in the fact that by hard, constant effort they did their share in helping to re-establish their Alma Mater where she rightly belongs, among the leaders in clean athletics.

Review of the Season

CAPTAIN SWENHOLT

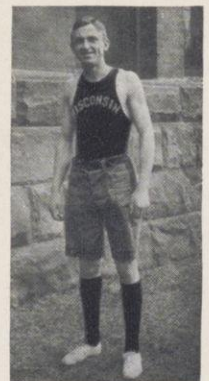

The season of '08-'09 saw basketball, on a new basis at the University of Wisconsin, in that the graduate system of coaching supplemented that of professional coaching. Upon the withdrawal of E. D. Angell, a new staff of coaches, consisting of Haskell Noyes, captain of Yale '06 and '08, and "Biddy" Rogers, captain of last year's varsity, was placed in charge. The efficiency of their work is only partly reflected in the season's record, for they not only turned out a good team this year but in addition have laid the foundation for winning teams in the future.

With three old men back, the prospects for a successful season were bright this year. However, it took some time for the team to round into shape and by the time of the first league games, it was hardly in shape to do itself justice. Furthermore it was handicapped by the absence of Noe, on account of an attack of typhoid fever. As a result, two league defeats were registered against Wisconsin on the southern trip.

After this however, the team materially improved. So marked was this progress, that Wisconsin proved a formidable rival of Chicago for the championship honors, and a season which began so inauspiciously, was creditably finished.

Good team work characterized the performances of the quintet throughout all their games. Their short, snappy passing, excellent blocking and guarding were instrumental in gaining many victories for the Cardinal. Stiehm, Witt and Noe played in old time form and exhibited stellar qualities. Birch, a newcomer in varsity athletics put up an exceptional game and gives promise of becoming a star.

Through graduation, Wisconsin loses Stiehm and Swenholt, who completed their athletic careers this year. However, prospects are bright for next year with Witt, Birch and Noe in the game and a wealth of material in sight.

Tennis

REVIEW OF THE SEASON

After three years of routine for the growth and final completion of the new tennis courts at Camp Randall, the university now has four additional courts, and with plans for a special caretaker, there are hopes for a marked increase in this branch of athletics at Wisconsin.

G. E. Acret was elected manager of the tennis association last spring, and conducted a local tournament which was won by D. F. Wiley, a freshman. Unfortunately the first year rule prevented Wiley from doing anything for Wisconsin in the Intercollegiate tournament.

Kypke was elected captain of the Wisconsin team, and with Gross entered the tournament at Chicago. The weather conditions had been such during the spring here, that the inter-college tournament had been impossible, and the lack of experience and practice was apparent.

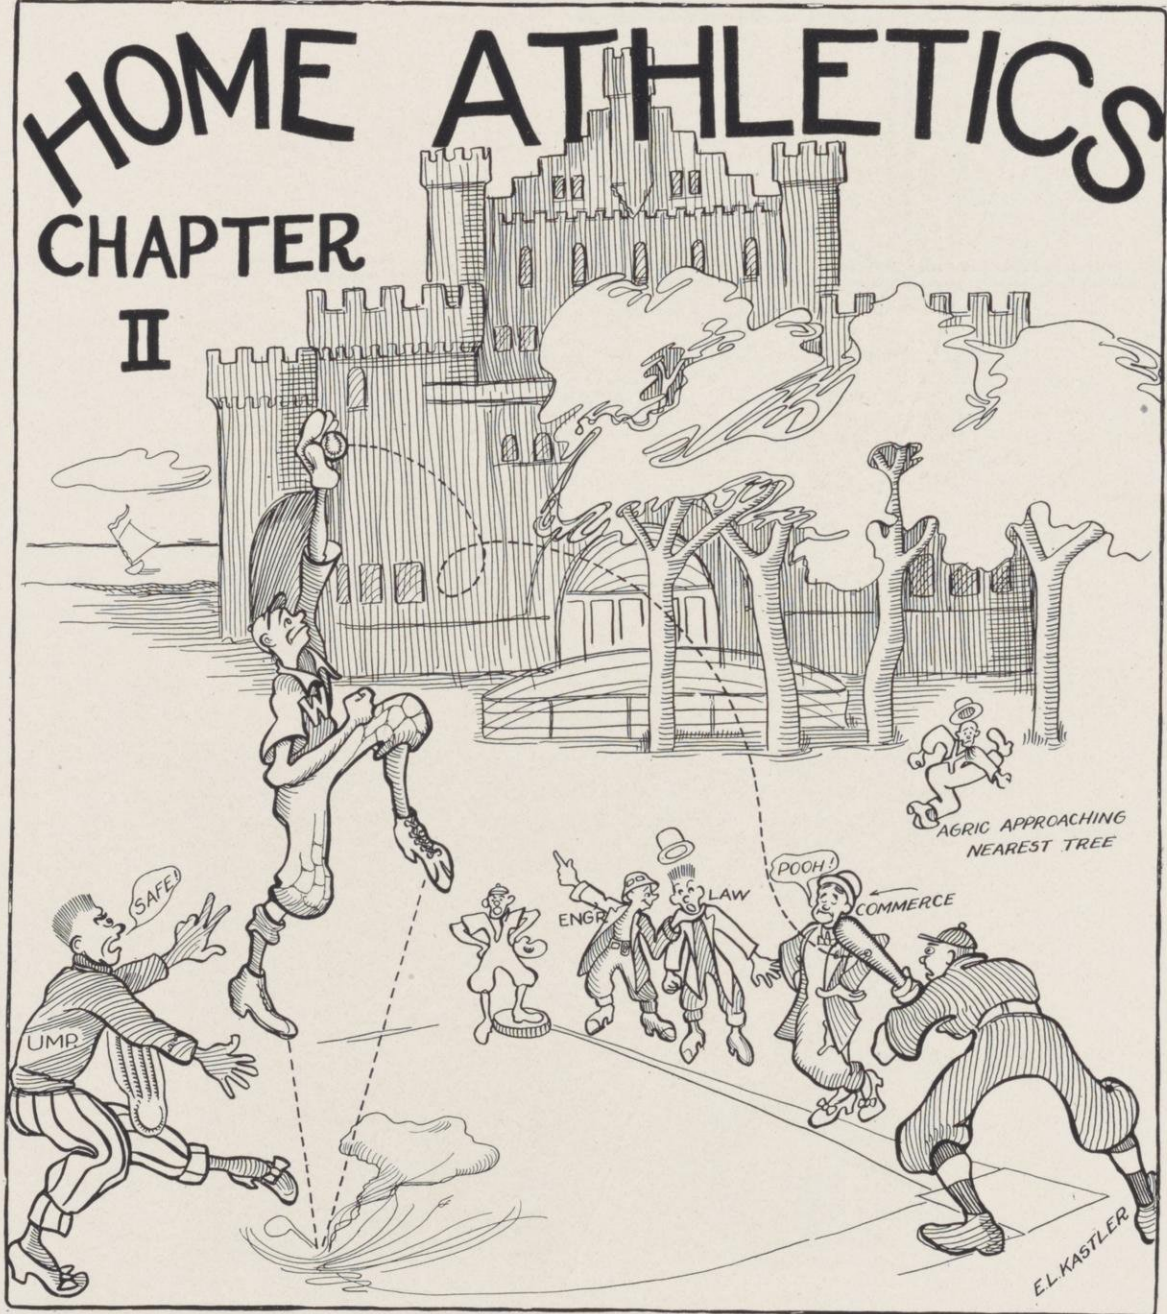

In the singles, Gross lost to Potter of Minnesota, and Kypke lost to Ross of Chicago in the same round. In the doubles, Gross and Kypke lost to Muir and Potter of Minnesota. Ross won the championship in the singles, and with Page won the championship in doubles.

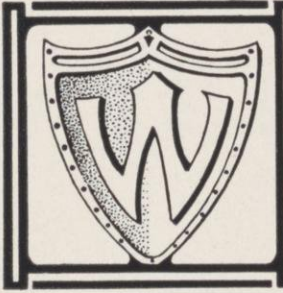

Ross was elected president of the W. I. T. A. and Kypke secretary and treasurer for the present season.

Programs in First Semester

- Oct. 21.—Illustrated lecture; "The Rhine." Dr. M. H. Haertel.
 Nov. 4.—One Act Drama, "Die Nonna." Dramatisation by Maud E. Miller and Lulu B. Fiske, '99. Presented by students under the direction of Prof. Goodnight.
 Nov. 18.—Musical Program under direction of Dr. Morgan. Guests of honor: The well known German author, Carl Hauptmann, and Mrs. Hauptmann.
 Dec. 2.—Student Program, the main feature of which was an illustrated comic lecture on the faculty of the German department by Louis P. Lochner.
 Dec. 16.—Annual Christmas meeting, held this year in the gymnasium of Chadbourne Hall.
 Jan. 19.—Under the auspices of the Gesellschaft, the Pabst Theater Gesellschaft of Milwaukee presented Schiller's "Wallensteins Tod" in the Fuller Opera House.

During this year the membership of the Gesellschaft reached the highest mark in its history, the number of tickets issued exceeding two hundred at the end of the first semester. Meetings of the scientific committee under the direction of Prof. Hohlfeld were held frequently throughout the year and subjects of a more technical and scientific nature, of interest to more advanced students, were discussed.

BOOK IX.

The Call of Mendota

When the wild flowers first bloom
With their varied perfume
And the clods of the earth are sprouting anon.
When the warm springtime breeze
Sings you strange symphonies,
Then take to the lake —send your boat on.
In your graceful canoe
With the maid of your dreams,
You revel in nature
And the water's bright gleams
With the whirl of your blade,
There seems beauty to you
In each cloud that flecks
The ethereal blue.
There, in languid content
You are drifting along
Alone with your girl,
Your pipe and your song,
While there's nothing you long for
And nothing she craves,
As you dash o'er each frolicking, rollicking wave

Letters of the Secretary

It certainly is true that modesty "never got anybody anything," and if Lincoln Steffens said that the University of Wisconsin "goes to the people" surely the university cannot be called modest. Anyway the university couldn't be very bashful after having the spotlight flashed on by such men as Steffens, Slosson, Hapgood and others, as it has been this year. The utilitarian charge was the most pointed, and with that of last year on what "U.W." spells, many have wondered what the real standing of the University of Wisconsin may chance to be. The Badger, influenced possibly, by the general feeling of being in the glare with the remainder of university affairs, has not been particularly unassuming and shyly admits having slipped over a stunt whereby the real standing of the university may be determined from other than magazine reading. The Badger is presenting some of the real, heartfelt, sympathetic expressions of opinion from some of the university's prominent visitors, in the form of one side of its brief correspondence.

The search for "cow" compliments has proved to be almost vain, and the charge of utilitarianism is now reduced to a mere passing expression. Wouldn't you agree to that when you note how Taft beamed on us; how Bryan gave us a front rank place; how Roosevelt narrated with pleasing reminiscences; how James Bryce put the university on a substantial, lofty plane; and how Steffens handed a suggestion to the undergrads, which is well-backed.

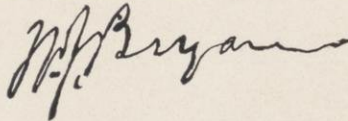

Madame Gadski was the first victim in the search for opinions when she appeared in recital at the gymnasium, in November. She was enthusiastic, and said so, but all that can be offered to substantiate, are the words she appended to an attractive photogravure of herself.

Hon. William J. Bryan had been with us frequently, and the sincerity of his words, is appreciated when it is known that the following letter was written, November 14:

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 14, 1908.

I beg to say that I have for many years regarded the University of Wisconsin as one of the greatest in the country. Its course of instruction is high; it has a distinguished corps of teachers, and can boast of one of the most beautiful locations in the United States. With all these advantages it is not strange that it should maintain its position in the front rank.

Very truly yours,

President William H. Taft apparently had a larger correspondence at about that time, and wrote more briefly, as follows:

Hot Springs, Virginia,
November 16, 1908.

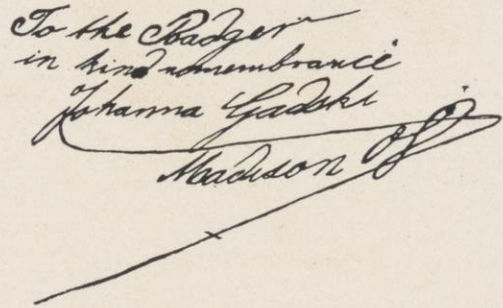

I look back on my visit to the University of Wisconsin with the greatest pleasure and appreciation of the good work which the University is doing.

Very sincerely yours,

The announcement that Elsie Janis was coming in January was a trying temptation to secure an extravagant expression, and she was all keyed for an interview, writing from Chicago that she was "willing to be placed in the story alongside Mr. Taft, if he was willing," but regret of regrets, a manager took her back to New York and the event was lost.

To the Badger
in kind remembrance
Johanna Gadski
Madison W.I.

From the British Embassy, Washington, came one of the pleasantest, most gracious, and undoubtedly a carefully weighed letter, under date of December 7, 1908.

Mr. Bryce has been a great admirer of the University of Wisconsin and was last in Madison when he delivered the baccalaureate address at the commencement exercises last June.

BRITISH EMBASSY,

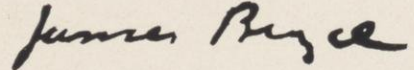

Washington, December 7, 1908.

Madison is a charmingly placed city and one of the most attractive sites for a University that could be imagined.

As to the University itself everyone in this country knows how high it stands both as regards its theoretical and its practical work not only among the State Universities, but among all Universities of the United States. No other University has more completely drawn to itself the unqualified confidence of the State, none exercises a more beneficial and daily extending influence both upon the material prosperity and the intellectual development of the surrounding country.

As your University may well be proud of Wisconsin, so may Wisconsin be proud of its University.

Very truly yours,

The frequent references by Carl Russell Fish to the work of Theodore Roosevelt in the "Winning of the West" caused a suspicion of another opportunity for "big" correspondence and the President was attempted. Secretary Loeb first gave the Badger the conventional letter to fanatics that "it was impossible for the President to attempt to answer all such letters—sorry—etc., etc." but later through the courtesy of friends he was influenced to write:

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Washington, December 29, 1908.

While engaged in writing "The Winning of the West" I studied in the archives of the University of Wisconsin and I also address the students of the University. I again visited it in 1903 while I was President. I take pleasure in testifying to the cordial help given me by the University authorities while I was writing my book, and to the kind courtesy extended to me when I visited the University by the faculty and students and by the citizens of the beautiful town in which the University is located.

Theodore Roosevelt

The writer of the "Serious and Frivolous Facts" in The Post, has a close connection with the University of Wisconsin, in that a check under his signature is cashed monthly at the State Street Branch, and from the fact that he visited Madison last summer, one of the soul-to-soul letters was mailed his way. His answer, clever and striking, explains his connection with the university:

SAMUEL G. BLYTHE
Washington, D. C.

Jan. 28, 1909.

To The Badger:

With all the universities in the country to choose from, I sent my only son to Wisconsin.

That tells what I think of your great institution better than I could in a page of praise.

Samuel G. Blythe

Norman Hapgood of Collier's spoke rather seriously before Professor Bleyer's class on Journalism in January, and he was asked to account for the remark as quoted in the press. Gallantly, he came across like a true man of his words and wrote from New York, the statement under signature:

From what I know, it seems to me that the University of Wisconsin stands first in the great work of keeping the university close to the people and directly leading their thought.

Norman Hapgood

After careful deliberation, we may conclude, however, that, as we have learned to say like the speaker of the assembly, "the point is not well taken."

The authentic and sincere statements of some of the foremost, pre-eminent men in the United States is evidence that Wisconsin is assuredly well known, and by the way, appreciated.

Max Rogers appeared before us in a bulging house in "In Panama" in January, and later wrote, presumably as an expression of his views from over the foot-lights:

I should like to put on a comedy, "At Wisconsin."

Max Rogers

Should the article not have appeared before the Badger is on the campus, a little free advertising may be done for the Independent of New York, by stating that Mr. Slosson, the literary editor has a story on "us", meaning the Utilitarian collection, which was slated for appearance this month. Mr. Slosson was in Madison in January and soon afterwards dictated the following:

THE INDEPENDENT
130 Fulton St.
New York
Editorial Rooms

January 28th, 1909.

The University of Wisconsin is located at Madison, but it occupies the whole State. It is on a hill-top, but it does not look down on the surrounding farms and shops. It is a stable institution, because it broadens its foundations as it raises its towers.

Edwin K. Slosson

Lincoln Steffens seemed to know all right, when he put in The American an article on the faculty men and how Dean Henry had "driven in the boys," but we were somewhat surprised, yet elated at his letter from Boston:

All that is needed now to make the University of Wisconsin leap into life is a curious sense among the undergraduates in the Academic Department of the relation of all learning--history and belles lettres, philosophy and the sciences--to the living world today; in other words, a DEMAND to know.

Yours very truly,

Lincoln Steffens

His advice was appreciated and recorded, and the feeling that Lincoln Steffens ought to be well informed, the idea of hunting more people who "really appreciated us" was dropped, and we turned back to outside reading.

The point of the whole matter is—is Wisconsin really known among the great schools? Well, it's hard to say.

A Ballad of Bygones

Canst tell me in what lonesome burg,
Ike Dahle sports a purple suit?
In what green vale does Vena Brunk
Teach stupid brats to be acute?
Where's Beebee, he the too astute?
The wind has blown them all away.
Go ask the 'lumni magazine.
Where are the grads of yesterday?

Oh, tell me where is Roland Zinnst,
And Robinson, the tightwad's pride?
Where's Edna Cooper, Richard Scholz,
And many a good Phi Bete beside?
Have they crammed too well and forthwith died?
The wind has blown them all away.
Carl Russell asks with a vacant smile
Where are the grinds of yesterday?

Where now does Lieber blow the foam?
Who pours out Vandy's tub of suds?
Does Gussie Blatz still boost the firm?
Where's Ritcher with his shambling duds?
Where withered all these blooming buds?
The wind has blown them all away.
Has the charm of the stein undone them all?
Where are the sports of yesterday?

Alas for students. One by one
The wind has blown them all away,
The grind, the sport, the prince, the pill,
Where are the grads of yesterday?

For "Lizzie" Boys

This is a sanitary resort for the standard bred tin horns who have made too bold with the jolly jug and who are fain to reduce inflammatory temperance with our delectable heat killers.

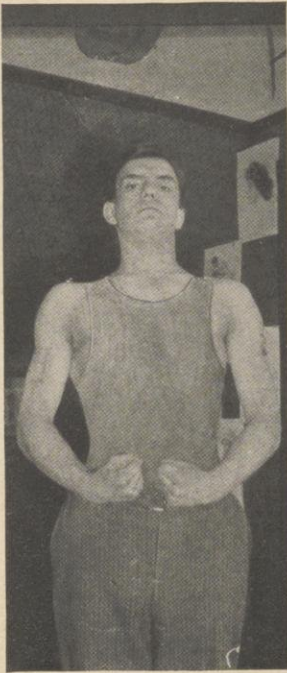

Others who scrape Keeley's saucers and blush at our waitresses are the Agnes type of man who always run hard by a saloon, fearing that they will be teased in. They are the kind whose best friend is their class advisor and the lady manicurist, who fakes up half moons on their finger tips, tells them when their cuticle is rough and how to comb their eye brows like Marion.

AMONG OUR INCESSANT PATRONS ARE

Barlow, Dean, Grady, Malone, Glick, Osthoff,
Stiehm, Messmer, Whittier, and other "Lizzie Boys"

Can You Classify 'Em Under the Above Analysis?

NOTE: A Shapeless, Charmless Creature Taking Co-education

N. B. Our latent modesty forbids us to append some of the noms de plume to the above snacks of wit. Those we print are bad, but the rest would grieve you so! We find that a horrible mistake has been made, that the order is cryingly false. It relates merely to those flashy bits which have been stigmatized by the caustic censor, and hence are not allowed to run at large in these pages. You may not find this invidious material, however, in the writer's suitcase under the iron bed on the second floor. There we can show you something swift and lifelike for a slight trifle (two bits and a beer—hush.)

Announcement

THIS is the magazine of the Eddying Era, or the whirling age when you, the prof and the girl, are swept about in the churning surges of a sad tumult.

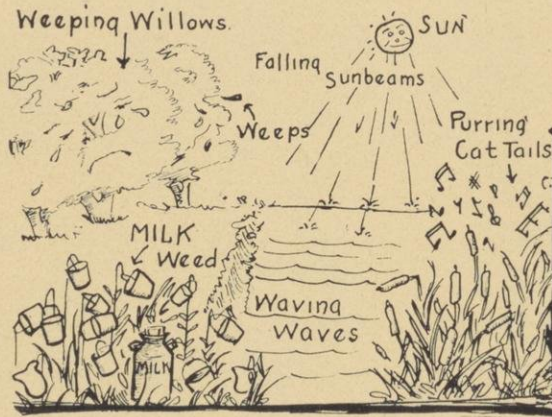

We of Everybadgers' have pictured a few chimerical glimmerings of the great disorder. We depict them with the scrawl of the scholar and the touch exquisite of the artist. Our pages are palpitant with the vitality that is corpuscular and not anaemic. Its pages tingle with the vagaries of yourselves, the foibles of the prof and the fantasies of woman. We have exposed your pruderies, your puppyisms and all through the fabric of foolishness, you will find a burnished thread, suggesting rehabilitation in these, your sillinesses.

We have amalgamated here in the essence of perfection, the sickening domesticity of the Cute Set, the blood coagulating deviltry of the Copper's Weekly, more sprite-like elegance, more warmth and glow than you will ever ferret out in the Wisconsin Literary contortions, and humor more bubblingly spontaneous, than those old prostrate poets, Hill and Winslow, were ever able to charm from their ponderous cerebral processes. Cuddle up, fair reader, and prepare to be tickled more deliriously than you were ever before agitated.

Spring Song

By the Dream Poet

When the willows are a'weeping,
And the cat tails purrin' low;
When the underbrush is sweepin'
Where the sassy breezes blow;
When the milk weed is a curdlin'
And the waves are wavin' too,
How I long to hear the birdies
As they sing, "Gill-ill Gill-ew".
When the lilly pads are padded
And the bull rush rushes on;
When the primrose is a primpin'
As it quietly blushes on;
When the buttercup's o'erflowing
With its load of crystal dew,
How I love to watch the sunbeams
As they drop from out the blue.

The Tyranny of Katy Ann

Sung in Chorus by the Triumvirs. Hartley, the Conqueror; Brown, the Hopeful; and Luce, the Persistent.

When the lakes sheathed in white
And the snow eddies round,
And the great winds ne'er falter nor wait,
Where the ice boats skim by
With their sails waving high,
There I long to go sailing with Kate.

Her movements are awkward;
She's a tyro you know,
But where's there a winsomer mate
So I'll be her tutor,
And I know it would suit her,
If I'd go a skating with Kate.

When the week end approaches
And they're dances galore
Then I dream in a transcendent state
On the broad gleaming floor
'Tis far from a bore
To be dancing, entrancing dear Kate.

When the D. G.'s are starving,
With cadaverous maws
And a craving that's insatiate;
What a joy 'tis to to save her,
In truth 'tis a favor
To spread out a dinner for Kate.

When the warm breath of spring time
Keeps calling, suggesting
The joys that no gloom can abate;
In a fragile canoe,
As I'm chramed thru and thru,
'Tis a joy then to picnic with Kate.

But perchance on some night
When I've been superseded,
And some bold cavalier has a date;
Then no maid seems so fair
As I rage in despair
It's h—— when I can't be with Kate.

The Tryst

An Extravaganza a la Chambers

"Lead me to some idyllic haunt," said Isadore, as her lambent eyes flashed under her languishing furry lashes. "I tire of the terrestrial and thirst for the romantic; the laughter of the waters, the fanning of breezes, the drowsy peace of these warm airs and the mesmeric lure of the night."

Grasping her with a firm but gentle touch by the finger tips, he led her in a docile fashion to the pier, where the lake sparkled in its broad expanse and out on the far reaches of quiet water, the beacon lights of soft-purring launches, danced and glimmered like strange fantasm.

The girl sat expectant. The boy sat quiescent, listless, in a post-exam fashion.

"Soft evening," she thrust at him, when his guard was open.

"If there's anything I like with a man," she giggled, "it's total darkness."

"Yes," said Gussie, "It's an early spring." "Seems good," he blurted, "to see the buds buddin' and the flys flyin'".

She felt like punching him between the eyes, for his inanity, and when he started to talk about Confucius, she thought of taking her things and quitting her job in a huff. Her mind, poor reader, was in a turmoil, for Gussie was about as brave as our Prexie on horseback. After his three weeks' assiduous proximity, Gussie was about due to drop her a tip and on this night, which was about as intoxicating as a brace of Louisville sluggers, it was surely his chance to score. And now she felt intuitively, that he was preparing his face for the avowal. He was a natural twitcher when about to ope his lips, and she felt an answering thrill when she saw that his hands were flopping about on the bench and that he was shaking like a debutante in the clasp of her first waltz. Then came a splutter, a clutch at the throat and he uttered simply, "Issie," real reproachfully like a mother to her wayward daughter. But it was a good opening and Issie settled luxuriously for the Wisconsin standard methods of proposing. She wanted him to do the grovelling act, to lie prostrate before her like a lap dog in the sun, so that she could jump on his neck, if she didn't like the rhetoric.

But Gussie was not there with the levelling stunt of humility. He didn't charge but just sat as usual. Now his arms were across his chest in an attitude of defence, his nostrils dilating and he was showing his teeth as if in an angry mood.

"What a strange boy," pondered Issie. But still she liked Gussie for she had heard that he had a pedigree that was long and pleasant reading. But she was disposed to tell him to swallow the pancakes and proceed, for she was incensed at his gurgling silences.

But Gussie was only preparing, for now his poet's soul broke forth and he started in to relate a tale of affection that would make Romeo sound like a silent partner. She knew he had stolen the bunk somewhere but he had left no traces. In all her outside reading, there had never been any ecstasies that could match little Gussie's declaration of soul yearning.

In brief, he told her to raise her anchor, and hie herself away with him, away from the con talk of sorority chaperones, and become a coyote killer and an ozone breather in the free spaces of the west. Gussie's words were redolent with the fragrance of the mountain fronds, of the daisies, and the climbing violet, and eloquent of the happy prattle of strenuous streamlets, coursing through soft shaded grottos and twisting tortuously through fair meadow vistas. Then Gussie spoke of the coming of the dawn, how the sun climbed over the mists of the mountain, glorifying all the vale, as it glared bright gold, in those dreamy, sapphire skies.

All this would be "hern and hisn," he averred.

"I vote aye to the scenery," said Issie, "but what of you?" Were you ever prominent like Roehl or Burgess. Were you ever an Iron Cross?"

He shook his head with emphasis.

"Where did you get that flashy suit and your boisterous lingerie? Were you ever a fraternity treasurer, or manager of the Cardinal?" she queried.

"No," (shamefacedly.)

"Whence those steel trap mits, and the muscles that play like living things under your satine sleeve? Was it rowing on that crab-catching crew or hurling bricks in a brick-yard?" interrogated she.

"Disclosed. 'Twas the brick yard," he whimpered.

"Whence the puffy look about the eyes? Did you ever flaunt the symbol of Monastic or Yellow Helmet?" Her voice was getting harsh and unpleasant like coal scuttling down a metallic flue.

"Alas, no," he wailed, "I've been as unimportant as a drink of water at Governor Davidson's inaugural dinner."

"You beat all the fellows for being nothing at all, that I have ever piped," she tossed at him hotly.

"But listen here, Issie," he said, arching his neck proudly, "there's another honor I've escaped. I've never been as Brunow, Ordway, Newman or Algeo, an officer in the university regiment."

She swayed gently in the relief of the moment.

"I could almost squeeze you for that, Gussie," she lisped.

"But," she continued, "you've never put me next to the medal that glitters in the fold of your pleated shirt."

Gussie saw the double privilege in the question, but being a shy stripling, he did not "rise to her lure," nor did he cling to her as the oak leaf clings to its twig during winter desolation.

"Whisper it, Issie. I'll have no dark secrets from you. That pin is T. N. E. The faculty says it's dead, but it lives, it lives," he bawled in triumph.

"T. N. E." She clutched the buttons of her directoire convulsively, her face working hard for the moment, while her demoniacal laughter echoed and re-echoed among the bulging bluffs that gird Mendota's shores.

"T. N. E.! Not on your secret motto!" she hissed. "Cruel, cruel, Gussie. They're not even 'rum goers' any more. They used to be up to the track record, but now they're more tedious than a bunch of Chi Psi yearlings and as stale as a frat menu. Would you were a Psi U," she sobbed. "They're so strong in the far east. Out of your lurid vision Gussie, you've spoiled the mirage". Sic endit.

MORAL:—This is a fair example of your puppy love at Wisconsin. Here it balks at a bauble. Never marry a school girl. They're in the shallow stage and there's quicksands all around.

Flight of Campus Rumor

And, oh, see what's here: but we must be very quiet and not disturb these men, for they are Mr. Jones and Mr. Zillmer who are talking over the abuses of the universe. Do you not think that these men look very unhappy? Yes, that is right my dears, they are very unhappy. They are writers for the Spectator. Do the men then write stories for the students? Yes, the men write stories for the students, but the students do not read the stories. Why then do the students not read the stories? That you will learn next time little heavy-eyes, but now you must toddle off to bed and close your eyes tight, lest these boogie men write a story about you, and make you very unhappy also.

Who is the man that's the man when you want a man? Cunningham that's him—plus. Admiration doesn't express our feeling for a man who can graft twelve meals straight off the Delta Gammas and still get a bid to every little fest. Think of it, dear reader, and try to imagine it. Could you or any one else—the immortal Coots excepted—listen to a small sized finishing school, talk crepe de chene four rounds without spilling your Arbuckle's, or diving into the cream tomato? Heavings no! But he does it and if you don't believe it, pipe the grin—he is planning to do it again. Oh you Coots, of wonders you're the seventh and we will all give you something on the way you work the fair ones.

Let us now look at the next picture, little Bright Eyes. What do we see here? We see two boys sleeping. What are the boys' names? The boys' names are Heine Allin Jones and George Hatetogetup Mills. Are they not then lazy boys? No, dear children they are not lazy boys. If they wake in time they will go to their eight o'clocks this afternoon. Why do these boys not go to their eight o'clocks this morning. Because they might keep the other boys in the class awake by their snoring. Are they not very thoughtful of others.

Glance at this please before passing, and then we will turn to the next exhibit. This scene is termed Feste and Marie. Do you understand the pose? The young man is protecting the young lady. Do you observe how she snuggles up behind his right shoulder, and the manly way in which he puts his hand in his pocket, and throws up his head as if to say, "Away. Off. Stand aside. Do not touch this fair lady. I am her protector." On the other hand has Miss Thieman not a pretty face to look upon. It was she who, wearing a large and merry widow hat, in the hall of outside reading one night, tacked around in such a manner as to jibe quicker than was expected, and the beautiful green globe of a table lamp was lost to culture. This picture of the happy young couple was taken on one of the days which they spent last harvest at the fair.

Did He Pay?

'Twas our friend Roger Angstman who thought he would try
 To coach up in bowling the girls of Ski Hi.
 He cried out "to full," and he said make it "thin,"
 But the game that he played there was nought but a skin.
 For when the girl left, who was bearing the dough
 Roge said, "I'll advance it, if I am broke, you know."
 No sooner he's paid it than he thinks and repents,
 Supposing the girls should forget those few cents!
 He calls up next morning, and refers to the debt
 So the girls pay him back to save him regret,
 But the shame of it is, and Oh, Roge, it's too true,
 They paid not for their game but for Roge's game too.

Oh Pocahontas saved John Smith—
 Just as the hatchets shaved him.

But if he had been Lenny Smith,
 I doubt if she'd have saved him.

Chuck Meadows on the Circus

Well, Saturday comes an' it's me for de big show, tho' I knows all de time it's a fake—stoodent affairs allays is. No cops to pinch yuh an' it's chicken for de resoive seats, wid swell dames from de collech accompanyin'.

Den Andy, de guy wot runs de shoe shop downtown, hands it to de band to rag off a little "Hot Time." An' den when de females begins to fan demselves he shows up wid ice-cold lemonade at one check per chill.

An' all dis time der ain't notin' else doin' 'til out comes de craziest bunch of delerium tremens yuh ever seen; snakes, and nags wid flyers, an' a great, big, overgrown jackass. An' den at last der crows out a t'ing lookin' like a soft-shell crab, all lit up for fair, a'makin' faces an' waddlin' aroun' like it pained him. One of de collech girls takes hysterics right here and I figgers it's hers for de funny house, but she blurts out, "Oh, I know wot dat is, it's Dodo Folk, couldn't be notin' else", Den she felt better. I never knows before wat Dodo Folks is, but dey sure are de limit.

Says I to myself if dat's de kin of acts dey dope out here, yours for de reefund and no return. But den a candy lookin' bunch of frat guys comes out hitched to a doll house dat looks like de gym. Dey was de Dealer To Dealer frat, or sometin' like dat, an' dey was a-goin' to chase de bugs from de shack. Dey was all armed wid guns an' whenever a bug shows his fiz, dey pops him wid a gun so as dey won't have to soil de swell togs by gettin' near 'em. Dat bunch never has no old rags anyway.

De ringmaster gives it to us den dat de act is over an' de Fly Gams is goin' to shoot a aeroplane stunt. Dis ringmaster was sweller 'n'ell to look at but he don' say no more dan a stude in a quiz class. I tinks meself dat Andy ought to be de ringmaster. But den de Fly Gams cranks de boid and pretends to fly across de gym. But dey don't do it because de boid's on a chain an' dey stops in de middle.

Den a guy falls out of the buggy on some twine an' gets jabbed in his retreat to de exit by a couple of rubes wid hay forks, and sixty-seven guys in the front row claps long and fast to make it look like 'twas a swell act. Dey was all Fly Gams, too.

Wat de next act was I don't see, as a couple stoodents widout a brain in de noodle comes beatin' it up to de resoives. Dey was clowns an' had to make de audience laugh, but I tink wat dey was lookin' after was a drag wid de fairies. One of dese guys was shorter'n de other, but de other was a reglar bean pole. Dis bean pole gits to mixin' it up wid de fairies an' a-twistin' de false curls on his digits, 'till one of de queens gits sore an' pipes out "Oh, Gene Donot," an' he tinks she means it an' chops de' comedy right dere.

Den anudder clown tries to do a han' stan' on his ear, an' cheese how he hit dat floor. He was de goods, an' no mistake. I hears de fellows call him Sato.

But de best act of all was de circus act by de Kappa Sigma frat. Dey had a couple of live goats an' a ting wid sheat' gown on, an' it was de real draperies at dat. Next comes a strong guy an' he pulls a sketch on de weights, but a weight lands him in de solar an' he goes flatter'n one of de Prexo Van Hise's jokes. De real limburgher tho' was de strong man behind de scenes. When dey gits thro' wid de act a husky guy grabs de ponies under his arms an' elevates 'em up de staircase. Dere was a swell skirt sittin' behind me who wipes de china at de Park, an' she says "Oh, dat's de han'some Mister Osthoff carryin' de toys upstairs," an' she begins to pipe about sorority chocolates so as de girls will tink she's from de collech, and give her a knock-down.

De last act was a sketck on Teddy, but I figgers I've had enough, an' cuts it for me papers. Stoodent shows is wort' de cush all right, when you beat your way in, but I saves me wad for a good sketch an' takes Mame to de Majestic.

Noyes' Defense

It appears an explanation
Of a certain escapade
Would save some imagination
On the sort of hit I made
 When I gave my pale pink tea.

In the wildness of my Yale days
When my youth was at it's tide
How I'd revel, how I'd star-gaze
With the fairies at my side
 After every pale pink tea.

I was under obligation
To the Gamma Phis and such
So I gave them each their ration
They were happy in the clutch
 Of the spell of my pink tea.

Laughing Gertrude with the green eyes,
Miss Verona with the pose,
Fair Lorraine, blush like the sunrise,
All with shimmering, spangled clothes,
 Giggled at my pale pink tea.

How those sylphs did crowd about me
Whispering their sincere delight,
Each avowed she ne'er would doubt me,
But it surely wasn't right
 The way they guzzled my pink tea.

Some sad scribe has sought to chide me
For the precedent I've set
Some buffoons may still deride me
But there're joys you cannot get
 'Cepting at a pale pink tea.

The Agric Dude

By Donnie Mihills

I'm weary of the mooin' of bull calfs;
I'm dreary with the quaver of horse laffs;
I long to be a gentleman once more.
How on some quaint old epic, I would pore
My soul, and yearn to feel the spirit soar
 And soar.

I'm sickened of the sight of buttermilk,
And Percheron's hide though sleek as dazzling silk;
I long for symmetry of classic lines,
For beauty's varied guises, my heart repines.
But gad, my fate, the grace of boars and huge Holsteins!
 'Tis tough!

Highwater

By Henry's Wadsworth Something

(An Extract.)

Then the little Janet Van Hise,
Paddling through the woods in summer,
Spied a bear who slumbered peaceful,
Like a stude in "Transportation"
Gaily cried the playful maiden
"See the Ted on that bank yonder";
"Paddle closer Daddy, dearest,
Let us smite him where he sitteth."
Then the old man very cautious
Paddled near the beast ferocious,
While his daughter, fair, fair Janet,
Smote the bird one with her paddle,
Smote him where he sat, that morning,
Caught him napping, poor, poor, Teddy.
Said the old men—the professors—
"Woe unto our alma mater,
We shall lose unto Chicago—
Janet smote the nation's idol."

The Wisconsin Stage

RED DOMINO.

Cousin Kate, with Blair and Terry starring.

"Cousin Kate" is one of that class of plays so familiar to the Wisconsin theatre-goer,—the problem play. The problem is, "Which girl shall I take?" This is a weighty question and it takes Mit Blair, the hero, the whole evening to decide it. Several times he endeavors to make up his mind, but no sooner does he get it made up, than the disappointed party throws herself upon it and musses it all up again. At length the hero picks out the shorter of the two aspirants, who will naturally have less hooks and eyes to be fastened, and marries her. The fortunate party is Cousin Kate. Her cousin, that is the cousin of Cousin Kate, or to be more precise, the daughter to Cousin Kate's cousin's mother, finding she cannot wed the handsome Heath Desmond, decides to get even with the preacher who married him, and becomes the Reverend Mrs. Bartlett. Everything ends happily in this double marriage, and the old truth, "Troubles never come singly," is verified.

This play is an exception to most problem plays as it abounds in humor. But it is not a play that we should advise a young man to take his sweetheart to see. No, by all means, take her to any other of the Wisconsin theatres, but do not let her see this play. If she sees it, being a woman, she will immediately fall in love with the hero, and a once-was crush will count for nought.

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY

Tessie at College.

Big hit from beginning to end, but particularly clever in spots. Consult Sam Kerr, Gene Dinet, Dode Falk, and some of the others who were spotted.

The story of the play is simple. Tessie, a daughter of the soil, treks to college to gather in some etiquette and any stray affections lying about unemployed. She hits Madison in a blue mother-hubbard and is snubbed by a prominent student who used to drive her father's cow. The student, a big-hearted fellow, hates to hurt his little playmate, but has been seen dancing once or twice at Kehl's and doesn't dare stretch his reputation any further.

The play progresses, as plays sometimes will, with Tessie's learning several things; among them that S. G. A. means Sorry Girl's Association, whose motto is, "If we cannot be fussed, neither can others." Tess who never sees anyone but short horns, is pulled in without a blackball and is considered the star member.

Here the worm turns. One morning Tessie's papa goes out to milk the heifer and gets the backache doing it. Upon examining the small quantity of cereal dressing extracted, he finds that the heifer has slipped one over on him and is giving condensed milk. He mentions this fact in the Student Farmer and sells the animal as a result. (Advertisement.)

Tessie gets the money, buys a pair of tan ties, a straight front, a gallon of paint, and some other bric-a-brac. At once she becomes the most popular girl in college, and has to hire a secretary to book her dates.

Then the student who snubbed her tells her it was all a mistake and that he would rather eat breakfast food with her than to dine without her at the Varsity Cafe. Tessie bites at this proof of his devotion and they assume wrestling position number one.

Miss Gertrude Kennedy, the heroine, has already become a great favorite with the public and we need not comment upon her ability as an actress. She is ably assisted in this play by Mr. John Jones and other well known stage lights.

Women as a rule do not care for this play because it reveals to men the fact that any fence post will look well if it only has classy enough duds on. The men, however, will find it highly diverting and instructive.

HARESFOOT.

The Dancing Doll, Musical Comedy, with Cunningham in the Title Role

Real criticism cannot be claimed as an adjunct for the wearers of the false, but when it comes to ferreting out a soft sounding syllable or twain wherewith to describe something pleasing, no one will deny that the ladies can use a lot of language. Cutie and beo--o-o-tiful are the "epitaphs" which are now being showered upon that magnificent production of Mr. "Hod" Winslow's, "The Dancing Doll," by those fair feminines who are smooth enough to work the easy sex for a passport.

But in order that we may not get ourselves disliked, let us concede these points and proceed. Unlike most musical comedies "The Dancing Doll," has some real music in it, and those students desiring to make a killing in their native hamlet, are strongly advised to have a few of the hits transposed for the dulcimer and sent at once to Sister Gwendolyn to disseminate.

As the Dancing Doll, Coots Cunningham proves to be a regular actor, going through his stunts like clockwork, without any alarm either.

The Dance of the A. T. O's.

Wildly the throb of Roehl's wierd strains,
Incited the A. T. O's
And they danced in a trance to soft refrains
As the melody fell and rose.
"Better to dance by yourself, my dears"
Is the sonorous advice of Ob,
Than to mingle in Kehl's with a dozen beers
And anger the grimy mob.
So the A. T. O's are too sweet for Kehl,
They're rebuked by each coed sprite,
Hence they trip to the viol of Julius Roehl,
As they mince minuets each night.

George Hill, portraying the trials and tribulations of a wife who has lost her disposition, sobs at times with real lachrymals as tho' her husband were broke. All who see Georgie in this play agree with the boy's preacher, who says Georgie will one day become a great actress, or something worse.

Mit Blair, as the unfortunate husband, for an almost-single-man portrays wonderfully well the deep emotions incident to his being hitched to that awful face which he playfully calls his "Bitter Half."

Pink Marsh and Billy Richardson, as the Lieutenant and Alice, are to put it in the vernacular, the real sentiment. Their dancing clutches have a shade the better of the proverbial mustard plaster on a summer's day, and their songs are always touching. It is hard to conceive now a man can have the nerve to portray so faithfully the part of a woman, but Billy Richardson puts on a bold front, had charms the most immune. Many critics censure Richardson in the name of modesty, for this front he puts on in trying to look like a woman, but we cannot see that it is at all inconsistent.

The choruses in "The Dancing Doll" are unusually comely. The plot is delightful, and the cast and chorus shy on limes. We predict a long run for Mr. Winslow's comedy.

The Chuckin of Miss Plank.

What cared I for the chaffing and the laughin',
What cared I for Dug Knight's elastic curves?
From the spring of secret joy, I was a quaffin'
So I beamed not at those tantalizing swerves.
For I was with my Josie, fairest Josie,
Not booted aught the fans' excessive din,
As when among the peanuts quietly sitting
Fair Josie reached across and chucked my chin.
Not once, but often, did fair Josie chuck it
And as she chucked it, so I chuckled too,
The crowd kept hollerin' coarsely at her chuckin',
Fair Josie really chucked it black and blue.

The Formal Excesses of Chi Psi

The dark chill night comes whistling through my door and mocks
Mendota's waves pound on the shore and lash
the rocks.
There're patches on our Tubby's pants and hose.
We sulk at home and only blow
our nose.
No more does Woody Spitler sally forth to booze,
Nor can he show the filthy bucks to pay his dues.
Withered the bloomin' flowers each bought for Her
His hearts delight,
Nor can a maiden's fairy grace allay
our plight.

"What is the cause," you ask, "of this anomaly?"
Twelve bones it cost each Chi Psi boy to dance quite formally.

Twelve bones! The wood fire sparkleth low
And how the wintry breezes drive the snow!
Cold are these halls and shrunken, lean and gaunt
Is Holverschied and each sad boudoir seems a gruesome haunt.
Gone are the curved throats, the dreamy eyes
Of that night's bliss.
Left are the mush and milk—some noodle soup,
And emptiness.

TWELVE BONES!

The Exchange of the Pins

By Fickle Fritz Cardenas, the Boy with the Chameleon Affections

As I press my haughty way
Through the throng of mollies gay,
All their smiles and all their dimples
Spell their ardent coquetry.
But I spurn their longing glances,
I've enough of such seances,
For my heart's door now is fastened
By a Kappa Gamma key.

Though the Delta G's may press me,
And the Alpha Phis caress me,
And the other girls allure me,
With my proud fastidious taste.
But in vain my soul they harrow,
I am true to Pi Phi's arrow,
Which means wondrous consolation
And a privilege to a waist.

I have sipped of love's elixir,
Since my infancy at six, sir;
I have never known the vacuum
Of a soulless, loveless sigh.
But now I know enduring joy
That remorse can ne'er alloy.
It's embodied in this trinket,
Sparkling crescent—Gamma Phi!

THE ENGINEERS' TRIP

E.L. Kastler

I'm just back from the Eastern trip and I feel like a Chi Psi tenor after the neighbors have called in the police. You needn't mind opening your face. You are about to inquire if I like the East and its hurly bustling. All I can say is that Wisconsin incarceration has got the perpetual motion idea looking like a long slide up a stony macadam incline—it's rough and unpleasant. If that guy Weston had been with us, he'd be pickled and done up as preserves by this time. We scratched at West Allis, and we lingered at Schlitz to be wet down, altho some candy boys didn't even get damp. But those profs, I thought they'd get swept away in the torrent. Those pedagogues were too solicitous. At times, it was difficult to get a date, and then they always stepped in and pushed you off into the ditch, while they always hurried over to spill some tea on her dress. And when the profs were located Spoor, Iakisch or Klinger were always there with their ingratiatin' ways. One of the skeezicks told me and Si Rote and Barton to stay by her and watch the falls shut off at eleven. We stayed but the whirlpools still purred and the spray kept spraying us as in the gloaming. She looked like a pippin in the dusk.

Slip me the makins. Those railroad cigars were inflammatory. Buffalo? Why you rude thing! Mention not her name. Our relations were anything but pleasant. Lackawanna, it's 47 miles thru the plant and we made it in "absolutely nothin'." The unlettered guides of our invasion had us scaling young mountains to spot the drinking supply. But when we arrove, they didn't offer to buy, altho it was very dry. We visited the telephone system, but the girls were as unprepossessing as a crowd of sorority alumnae. The next day one of the profs and I played tag in a factory, and I stepped on a red hot rivet. In the "worruds" of G. B. Hill,—the hott, hissing hunk of hell penetrated my sole midst my harrowing howls of horrible hurt." But the acme was Buffington Cement.

When I emerged from that Engineering excavation, I looked like a spurious imitation of the great stone face, as dirty as after a gym shower. No more Marathon for mine. Say can you advance me a trifle. I want to set my disgust on the tide, down it, and rejoice as it vanishes.

Niagara Falls

Pittsburg

Journal of A College Joiner

In setting down this snatch of my biography, I desire merely to relate some of the deserts that have been dished to me by the servents of vanity in a college career.

I am a scion of a rich old family and my fraternity inclinations were acute before I ever felt a frat bull-dog tearing up my B. V. D. or knew "Doc." McCarthy's rancid views on "The Great Greek Evil." I had a "recommend" from a guy at home, saying that I was a nice boy, with a leg like a Sandow's and when I joined the eleven I would make Chicago look like a bevy of sorority sisters after a formal reception. What's more he hinted that I could tease the ivories like a Rosenthal and when I braced up to a woman, Greek or plain, she just naturally sidled into my arms and wanted me to take her down my favorite path where there was no movement save the twittering of the winds and no sound save the sighing of the birds.

With an impetus like that I had the other nursery products appearing like a bunch of roisterers looking for a chance to do the spring sowing. Then they put me in a closet, and a youth came in with winning dark eyes, and after a few hypnotic gestures, he had me jumping after a little label that looked better to me than any trade mark I had ever seen on the commercial travellers or the Knights of Pythias. Then they set me to work rounding up the blue ribbon class and sending the coarse grains back to the boarding house, and I became a fraternity bulwark.

I had not been showing my shape around the school very long before the Skull and Crescent boys commenced dressing in risque style, getting familiar, and flirting with me, in a manner that made me blush. I was one of them after they took their low pecuniary advantage. (I forgot to say that it was here that Earlie Quirk, Harry Brandel, Kemp Slidell, et alii, got their momentum to fame.)

During their abandoned moments these boys used to sit around and make nasty arguments about a policy, for they realized that a society without a policy, is like a saloon without a barkeep—it will never get you anything. Won't some one please hand these kids a policy? It will save 'em a lot of heavy thinking and light talking, when they ought to be out in the sunshine getting strong. These boys gave a duck show once at a football game and their stunt was about as humorous as a hard case of measles during the holidays. But in the spring they give a little spring dance, and the sorority coquettes are present to admire the cream of the freshman milk crop, and to see who really does amount to something around school. All we say is, "Look again". (Plagiarism.)

And the next my friends, was Inner Gate. You pay the toll at the gate and mine was enough to buy a prom gown for Mary Moffat and a ticket besides.

Please write it down in your family album that it isn't every common scrub who can be an Inner Gate. You have to be as good as Dodge, Springer, or our old friend Underwood. You couldn't be homely as a windrow of Sigma Chi rushees, nor could you be of the Appolonaris group, and you must be affable as the late Edward McMahon, and when you meet a mere slight acquaintance you must make a charge at him and man-handle him as if he were just recovering from a hang-over, or a hard week at the pest house. You didn't have to be a reservoir for Haussman's home tonic but it was better if you could heave a few without coloring, talking silly about the American stage, or how the Kappas have picked up. These Inner Gates give a dance every spring and when any of the sorority blushers see a gazabo dancing there, they know he's been "preferred" and they feel like running up and telling him there's no soup stains on his sleeve and that he's the most promising thing on the bill. Then they go home and say nice, nifty things about them behind their backs, and wonder why Lou made it and why some of the other Lul-Lu boys didn't.

Tiring of all this, I thought I'd throw my innate caution to the zephyrs, increase my chest expansion and be a Hesperian. This was as facile as being a clown in the University circus. When I had wafted myself in, I noticed a bunch of high-headed geezers; Pearce, Springer, Hollister, etc., looking wiser than Hogan of the Student Conference and more responsible and weary than a Chi Omega chaperone. They all looked as if their strings needed tuning, and that a little of Dr. Munyon's nervine might resuscitate 'em some. They asked me what I thought about the new cream puff monopoly in Skidunk and I got up and gave 'em a good hot spiel, rife with rabid verbiage. My remarks hit the head pin of the issue and when I desisted the head geezer's eyes lighted up like an oriental sunset, and I saw that he was moved as his chair was tilted back. He spoke:

"Enough. You are one with us. You hold your mouth in the correct position and your gestures are becoming and healthy."

I guess that is sort of tossing a hot one over the home plate of Hesperia.

But ah, fair reader. I see that you are breathing hard and that you are well nigh spent. Let me satisfy you that Yellow Helmets are the orange headed hellers. Monastic merrymakers are nothing but university club-men before they have put on long pants. Their chins are still velvety with the down of adolescence, and their capacities are shallower than the average social matrons. They are nothing but Iron bruisers with a white seal future, mayhap, who dabble their dimpled fingers in the cesspools of Bohemianism.

The Bane of the Laws

Or

The Rhapsodies of Miss L'Hommedieu (chief offender)
Accessories—Wright, Williams, Gulliford, McMillan.

Oft in the law shop dreary
When we master minds are weary,
And we've sickened of tort feors,
And the wrongs that they have done;
When we've read up all the courses,
Murder, arson, and divorces,
Then each brain is like a maelstrom
That goes blindly whirling on.

Thus the tenor of our feelings,
When our fagged brains are reeling,
Comes a cry within our sanctum,
Through the sultry turgid air.
'Tis the strain of a soprano
As she bangs on her piano,
And the lay the birdie sings
Is something rare.

Like the cry of a soubrette,
When transfixed with a stiletto;
Like the creaking of a box car
On a blaring heated track;
Now like the crash of thunder,
That rents the Dean asunder,
Such the entity of noises
That have kept us on the rack.

Now they juggle their crescendo,
As we plug on our "habendo,"
How they massacre great "Carmen,"
To the air of "Mandy Lane."
Now they hum the vibrant "Soul Kiss,"
To the tune of "Kiss me Quick, Sis,"
While each pessimistic bonehead,
Writhes in pain.

With a vibrant little quiver
That creates a general shiver,
They lisp the "Marie Outcha"
With Rud Kipling's "Mandalay"
And we dream of lithe forms dancing
In their flowing togs entrancing,
As we hearken to the sirens
As they chant their roundelay.

And that's the long sought reason,
Why we don't know theft from treason,
And Gillie, Moore and Eric
All hand us out the con;
We are slaves unto the pleasure
That is stirred by music's measure
As each successive spasm
Stirs us from our depths anon.

The Sluggish Gazelles in Operation

Johanna cast a cold eye around the hall, and then told Marg Ryan to return it. (It was done, amid tense silence.)

"We are met," she said explosively, her face petrifying into a hard lump of hauteur. "We are met to consider the varlets who are besieging our hearts and to detect what they really mean." (A sense of palpitation pervades the audience and beautiful faces are seen to blanch.)

The president herself is extremely comely. Her locks, as fine as the thinnest ether, bristled over as fair a forehead as ever struggled with a headache. Her eyes, like a fawns in expressiveness, were deep and fathomless as the infinity of space itself. The president was a strong piece of architecture and all the young things knew she was there as burly and effective as a section gang on an easy summer job. Her cheeks were sleek and plushy. She was a veritable engine of destruction and let us note in brief, she was a "beaut."

'Did you ever wake up in the morning, girls, feeling that you were living among a hard bunch of villians? They're the scandalous scouts," she vociferated. "Even as we sit here as composed as a bunch of hardened stage hands when the leading lady is kicking holes in the skylight, Stafford and Meyer may be hitting the milk shakes, Barlow and Buchen may be playing charades with the Norwegian cook, and like as not Rogers and Colignon may be roller skating in front of the library steps.

"But to digress. How many of you are true to the mandates of the first degree to shove any and all jaspers off the dock, who start talking about your soft hands, your shimmering hair, or the natural carmine of your cheeks? Arise." (They comply.)

"You're the cherries after my own pickin,'" says the president warmly. "How many are sanctified enough to give the Johnnies the gentle jar who start to talk in subdued lulling tones, and ask you to call them "hon" or "buddo," the second time around?" (A general uprising.)

"You're the fillies after my own training," roared the president looking benevolent.

"Well, pets," she rambled, stretching herself dreamily, "you're a pretty decent bunch of performers after all the returns are in. You've beaten the Vassar statistical record. You've got Miss Something-on-the-Hudson looking like a bunch of heavy spooners, and as for the four-C girls, they really ought to take Chautauqua work or something."

A clouded look of doubt passed over the sensitive face of the president, tarried, hesitated, and then faded away in the distance noiselessly.

"But to ascend," she announced, "if you can only shy away from the blandishments of such pretty electrifiers as Murphy, Bunker, Stark, Sauthoff, McGeever, and Wobbly Walker, the Chi Psi kid, you'll be as safe as an armoured cruiser in a duck pond. They are the lowest of the breed.

"But let me say figuratively; we may run slow in a speedy field of goers, girls, but when it comes to jumping over the high places of intellectual finesse, and soaring with grace o'er the ditches of temptation, we will not be laggards and when the heat is run, we'll be rubbing the noses of the winners in this, the great race for husbands. (Huzzas loud and lingering, led by Ruth Cotton, Polly Conover, and Marion, sweet Marion Holmes.)

The president beamed, yawned and said casually, "light please, and a Chinese high-ball." Whereupon she stimulated the glim and served the tea leaves. Then her features had re-hardened, a large and copious smile rippled across her face, like a giant tidal wave, transfiguring the map of nature.

"We will dwell next," she exhorted, "on Dean Birge's conduct at Prom and why the Pi Phis do not fuss."

Whereat an acquiescent murmur filtered thru the gallant ranks. The radiance of the day was again admitted and the pensive prudes assumed a quasi human aspect.

MORAL:—Speed up girls or you'll be distanced by some of the recent classy entries.

Is it any wonder some people worry about the future.

BELOVED PREX

Beloved Prex, all iron grey,
 With hairs that whisker o'er your face,
 Beloved Prex for you I say
 Would we take up the pike and mace.
 That "No Exam" joke now is dead
 And convocations you abridge.
 Then praise to you, our noble head.
 We, but the valley, you, the ridge.

NELL MURPHY

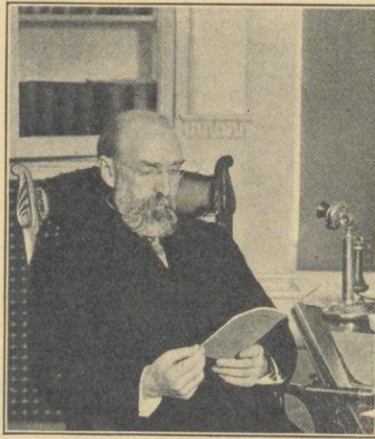

For who so fair as Nellie,
 And who so fickle too?
 Go ask the am'rous Ruben Trane;
 She thrilled him thru and thru.
 But who so cruel as Nellie?
 Or who's an icier palm?
 For she danced with her young kid brother,
 At the glittering junior prom.

JOHANNA ROSSBERG,

THE FLIPPANT

You have heard of the Swift Get Away? Well this is the leader who heads the escape, who thwarts the pursuit. She is the subtle force that has forestalled more potential marriages than the "new woman movement." But stop that wavering of the eyes, Joann! What about those walks in Greenbush with the "head squeeze" of the International club? Note the tell tale flush!

Saucy and Facetious Facts About the High and Haughty.

TUBBY WHEELOCK

This, ladies and gents, is the Chi Psi prodigy whose form, disposition, and coloring have baffled evolutionists, psychologists and us. He is oft described as the youth with the shape like an old married lady's and a smile that will not erase. Among his friends the Yellow Helmets, or the saffron headed devils, he is merriest of the merry, but to appreciate our convex friend, you should see him in his bathing suit of flaming lavender, sunning himself in the soft airs that come tripping lightly over the pulsing bosom of Mendota.

THE LILT TO EDNA JUNE TERRY

O Edna June, O Edna June,
 Why flit away and leave so soon?
 You've charmed us with your magic art,
 You've had us coming from the start,
 O clever Edna June!
 You've taught us Ed. to know the trance,
 That's lurking in your flashing glance,
 You've taught our souls to be in tune,
 To list to you, O, Edna June,—
 To you, O, Edna June!

ROLLO, THE RASCAL

This sad-eyed boy with the ungovernable bangs, bears the classic name of "Rollo." His second name is Lucerne, or something equally poetic, and at the age of three, he is said to have showed powers of the coming genius by scratching off a sonnet "to my buttercup," in the dead of winter on a frosty window pane.—That's the kind of a baby Rollo was. But let us look at the man, as he is, the celebrated human geyser, whence spout an unending shower of forensic proverbs, the man who can make a voice like an old Sun Prairie rock crusher sound like the soprano murmur of the Girls Glee club. Besides, this, he is famed for his easy jaw motion, and as flexible a set of lips as ever scratched the lustre off the crockery. It is averred by his nearest friends that Rollo was "desert" for the feminine natives at Harvard, and at times he had to wear rough clothes to keep the girls from chasing him around like a bunch of union subscriptionists after a large draft. But then he belongs to the Sigma Chis,—the devils.

SUNNY PYRE,
THE BEAMER

We assume to hear your exclamation at the mere mention of our subject. "Poor overworked 'Sunny'!"

But to drop 'Sunny' completely from the lists would be as cruel as breaking a fraternity pledge. Much has been written of this historic creature, but how's this?

Like Bobby Burns with his ready smile
He seeks the maidens to beguile;
He suffers a lapse of official duty
Each time he pipes a freshman beauty.
With his winning smile and his ready pun
He keeps the goddesses quite undone.
—But he's married now.

STEMP, THE LITTERATEUR

This, our little playwright with the Ella Wheeler Wilcox eccentricities of style, needs no calumny, for he still remains one of the Wisconsin's most dazzling scintillators even since the advent of George Hill. By their eccentricities you can spot these geniuses. Stemp plays not the game of love. He cares not for the wriggling grace of the soubrette. He is the sphinx of the desert, a desert of which we are the mundane sand particles. But under his blase shell, he harbors in his poet's heart, a vision of Rusty Smith, the girl philosopher, the only kindred spirit he has known, through all the dull years of his blossoming fame. 'Tis hard.

FIGHTING
MARG
H'DOUBLER

We admire your reputation,
As a premier athlete.
We admire your wondrous prowess,
In the games where you compete.
But remember with your victories,
That it is no silly trick,
For a man to feel devotion,
To the girl he cannot lick.

DOOLEY
CAREY

Well "be-jabbers" fair Dooley,
You're the pride of Tipparary,
As your mother and father before you;
With your smile you're not chary,
With your laugh, light and airy,
No wonder that Emmet adores you.

BUNNIE
CASTLE

This juvenile quantity with the soft, bulbous head, pulls at his nurse's hair, squirms at the washing of his neck, while his shapeless lips gurgle profanities. He used to toddle up to see the Pi Phi girls and they were wont to fondle him and call him "their own little Siddle" in soft accents, and make ribbons, of insertion for his blouse. But now, no more does he punch their cheeks with his cherub-like hands. He has learned to wobble past into the dark alleys.—Won't someone take care of Siddle?

Like most literary men our subject evidences the most staggering departures from the ordinary.

In his blue book marking, he has abandoned, however, the old custom of throwing them against the wall and passing those that fall.

Let us mention that unless Dannie gives at least three "spontaneous efforts" before every engineering convention, he looks sad like a bunch of summer boarders during a wet spell of weather. Dannie smokes none but the Dremo, two for five.

SIGMA
PHILETS

The Sigma Phi children
Have come at last
Tho' you know it's not safe to leave them,
Papa Edson of Chi
Is their famous stand-by;
He comes up every Sunday to see 'em.

BILLIE,
THE WITTE

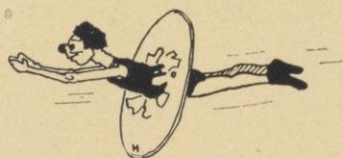

This is the one who is known among the ladies as Witty Willie Witt, and when he gets mellow, they all have to feel around their blouses to see if they didn't rip something, laughin'. But the Gwendolens all think Bill is the cream cheese even if he is mean in such a funny way.

GEORGIE SHEETS, OF THE MARCEL
WAVE

Bred in the sprawling town of Belle Plain, reared on warm sunshine, buttermilk and corn bread, little Georgie came hence, where he kicked the loam off his oxfords and started scrapping with the muse and beating his way to fame. It was George that Billy Shakespeare meant when he handed out that about "Hyperion's curls." Some even say the boys around the grocery store back home used to call him the "Friszy Phenom."

EDDIE MAURE

Among our beloved teachers, perhaps few claim our immediate attention any more clamorously than does Eddie Maurer, who once wrote an able treatise on "Culinary Mechanics," which he sold to several innocent sophomores. He was associated in the days of his youth with a traveling circus where he sold a book during the concert convulsions entitled "Miss St. Clair De Armour—the Leading Soprano in the Green Tights. Her Songs and Soulful Sonnets." Eddie was known among the "tent rasslers" as "Educated Eddie, the mathematical monstrosity." Back to the ring side, Eddie.

KEN BUREGSS

The following skit found in Ken's memory book shows what sort of a poet he is:

O you Elvriny with the sadding eyes,
 O you Elvriny with the madding eyes
 And russet cheek so fair
 And way so debonair
 O Hair of Hairs, what wondrous mesh is thine!
 That frills your head in tempting ringlets fine.
 Smile you Elvriny, on your old time
 Chick,
 Smile ere I take this arsenic!

BILLY HUELS, THE MINSTRELINE

ARROGANT MISS WATERMAN,
 THE SPOILED KID

With the tint of the fairest of lillies;
 With a nose of a classical strain;
 With a wit like the flash of a sabre;
 With a voice like the softest refrain;
 With an air that's indifferent, ensnaring
 She has eyes with the lustre ideal,
 So Brewer has lost all his daring,
 As he serves in the reign of Lucille.

You know him because he is the author of "I'd rather be a minstrel than Prexy at the U."

Billy is so crazy about girls that every time he sees a hair ribbon in a show window, his head swims. He pesters the ladies eight times a week and when he isn't wearing off the plush on some dainty davenport, he's looking around for a poisonous stogie, wherewith to put the quietus on Fannie's foxy father, so that all will be still when Willie steals away from the gate into the dark night shadows.

NATWICK, THE LITHESOME

It is a peculiarity that people who excel in particulars are bum in general. So it is said that no great poet ever filled the wood box without spoiling the wood, etc.

So with our friend Natwick. He's as graceful as a home-made noodle when it comes to jumping the sticks, but his dance is like the ponderous strut of the great whang doodle, which only moves once in an eon, and then with great pain and inconvenience. Be as the duncolored fawn of the forest. Nattie, light and airy.

HANK TRAXLER, THE LATEST THING IN JOKES

Here is a lad who has Mark Twain looking stupid and witless. If any one is looking for an easy demise, go and talk to Traxler, and you'll laugh yourself to death. He's absolutely dangerous, that boy, and the girls are making him think he's the highest card out. Come on Hank, cut loose the parachute and put an end to your airy ways.

Title—"The Banzai Cryer at Rest".

Decision of judges mentioned particularly character of subject secured, pointing to poise of left hand which clutches food, also dark shading under chin—this may have been a light effect. Judges mentioned beauty of reflection in front of face, where food is located. Note how another figure, presumably the female accompanying subject, remains invisible except on close inspection. Points were awarded as follows: Simplicity of expression, 47; Pose, 39; Drapery above hair, 24; Contrast of mug against hand and collar against neck, 20.

Badger Prize Poetry

From the pen of Ernstie Jung, iss it?

I washed my face this morn, Camille
I cleansed it all for you.
I washed my face in nature's suds—
The tears I wept for you.
All nature mourns with me, Camille,
The sky is looking blue,
Pale is each cotton batton cloud,
The moon is paling too.
Green are your eyes, O my Daphne,
Green as the grass-green sward.
Stiff is your manner, my Camille,
Stiff as a hardwood board.
And so I washed my face, true love,
In early morning dew.
And lathered it with Nature's suds,
The tears I wept for you.

Judges' decision made largely on account of subtlety of subject, and novelty of suggestion.

Anecdotes of Historic, Notorious Characters

An Epigrammatic Anecdote

Teedy Stempfel was indubitably a terror. But in his senior year he joined the Y. M. C. A.
"This makes me a holy terror," he said epigrammatically,—flicking the ash from his cigaret.

A Prophetic Anecdote

1912. Mike Riley was being handed the senatorial toga.
"When is a toga not a toga?" he said.
"When is a toga not a toga?" inquired his admiring constituents.
"When it is a mike-robe," responded Riley with racial readiness.
Hopping into the senate chamber, he chased the Republicans up the pillars.

A Sulphidic Anecdote

Mit Blair was sitting on the Alpha Phi porch.
A reporter attempted to interview him on Opera. "Did you say you would rather be anything else than a chorus man?" he was asked.
"No. I said I would rather be Cora's man than anything else," he corrected.
So saying, Mit Blair continued to sit on the Alpha Phi porch.

A Edifying Anecdote

_____ was standing at the gate of heaven.
"Am I qualified to come in here?" he asked of the keeper of the keys.
"You're qualified to come in all right," said Peter, "but I wouldn't advise you to. Your'e too good for this place."

Hendrik Hudson was freezing to death in Baffin's bay.
"Gee," he said, shivering, "this reminds me of a Delta Gamma formal." Overcome by the recollection he gave up the ghost.

"WHEN MIRANDI SINGS"

That's my own composition, that is. Made it up immediately before appearing. I had the old ladies looking in their flashy stockings for their wash rags. I had the masculine section using their sleeves and children were flushing their optics until I just had to stop. I not only spoke, but turning my back to the audience I cavorted, so, that as the sunshine follows shadow, so their faces wreathed in smiles.

The Lambs of Lambda Chi

"Well," said Katie, puckering up her elastic face into a simper, "I hereby open up the alarming record of Lambda Chi, known to the world as the Lemon Club, known to ourselves as the 'Lusty Little Cusses,' or, 'The Girls Who Do Not Give a Darn.'"

"We have seen the glory of the dawn and the gloom of the sunset of the Inner Circlets. We have listened to the expiring wail of the Wislynx. Both have sunk beneath the surface without a ruffle, and why, you Lambda Chis, have they so softly sunk? Whist! I will put you next. It is because they lacked the substance that is to a society what the stick is to the punch—what color is to the after-glow—what flavor is to the soup. Name it, you women of the world," she quavered.

Came the answer gently, "Man."

"Righter than Tiedemann on Real Property," said Katie who browses in the Phi Delta Phi pastures. "Mention the pledges, Celeste, and the reasons thereof," she commanded.

"Galbraith, for as dreamy a pair of luminaries as ever sparkled 'neath a pair of snips," said Celeste, her face suffused.

"Murphy, for being the tireless champ of the unprotected female."

"It's a go," said Katie, "He'll be good to belabor the other beasts; he has cracked many a whip at the ring-side."

"Hirsch, for his drowsy drawl and a true olive skin."

"Well," pouted Katie, "he's rather cold but maybe he'll do. Some of you Circes will have to see that this jigger is jostled up."

"Hube Wolfe, for being a man of note and a true statesman."

"Hube," said Katie, testily, "Why he's a quiet oyster. What do you suspect this is, a clam bake? Toss him back in the lake."

"Puchner, for his adorable flushes and the general pinkness of him."

"This is no color scheme or the sunrise league," said Katy hotly, "but I'll let him squeeze into the family because he's a nice kid. But now," she said, "tighten up the ropes, the tent is crowded."

But the girls cast a squint at these: Boyden, Sauthoff, Whitney, Pawling, Swenholt, True and Reynolds. "Shall we corral all those?" chortled Ava and Fay as in twain.

"Not by your prom souvenirs," she bellowed, "They're too pesky fresh and verdant. They're too fast for the rest of the field," she offered.

"Ah, yes—too mellow," swelled the chorus. "They should be in the bud, and not as they are, old citrons who are beyond the age of picking and as lemons, are not worth the squeezing," they breathed as one.

"Well said, ma cheres," said Katy, the Ki Omega Kid, "Come on thou fated night! And come you all, you lusty lambs with golf clubs, razor straps and feeling mad, like a bunch of wild horses, we'll do some heavy bruising on these, the chosen to ours, the new, the spotless, Lambda Chi."

Once in a Life Time

Did you hear of Helen Willis?
Gee! We thought that it would kill us
When Gertie told us about it the first time.
Seems that some young ignoramus
Too ambitious to get famous
Asked her to a dance (it really was a crime.)

It was a crusader party
But the man, the little smarty,
Didn't know where those Crusader parties were.
Helen thought that she was wiser—
There was no one to advise her—
So he left the leading of the way to her.

Now on just the night preceeding
Helen had been gaily speeding
At a party given by the Gondoliers
So she lead the way down Mifflin'
Don't you think that this is pifflin'?
And they climbed the stairs and entered (little dears.

How could she have known the place was
Where the Saturday night race was?
But she thought the crowd looked strange and rather queer
Presently she heard a lady
Using language rather shady
While another wished she had a glass of beer

This was certainly surprising—
Helen felt the color rising
In her face till it had reached her very hair.
"Hullo there. Say you look new, kid.
Can I have the next with you, kid."
Then it dawned upon her what was doing there.

That's the tale of Helen Willis.
We sure thought that it would kill us
When Gertie told it to us the first time
Do we really give it credit?
Well it's Gertie, here, that said it.
Aint it funny? Oh, You knew it all the time.

The Knife Thrower Vindicates the Perfesh

By Horatio Winslow

NOTE:—By special request, the Badger is permitted to use the following sketch by Horatio Winslow, '06, now of New York City. A connection with the 1910 Badger through his formation of the new plan of electing the board, and the authorship of "The Dancing Doll," make his name too well known for comment.

"They knock us arteests," said the Mexican Knife Thrower, "they say we aint religious but when it comes to genuine religious feeling let me tell you we've got it just as strong as the best of them. We may not get a chance to show often but when we do it's a top liner.

"Seems to me it was Janesville that we struck during the revival; not a particular pious town but with two preachers and a barytone soloist putting on a sketch at the first Consolidated Church the whole place was got on the run. Why you couldn't walk anywhere without hearing fat business men bewailing their sins or ordinarily sensible women planning how to get seats near the platform so's to look up into that barytone's eyes.

"Of course the attendance to the Majestic feel off right at the start because people was told that the theatre was the stage entrance to hell, et set, et set. Yes it was bad enough performing to five ladies and a couple of kids but when the two stage hands got religion and begun to look down on us arteests as miserable sinners it come to be just a drop too much.

"Tuesday night I says to the manager, 'Max,' says I, 'in behalf of myself and the Delanches, (they done a refined dance and I was kind of chaperoning 'em.) "In behalf of myself and the Delanches I want to protest against the treatment from the two tobacco-spitting stage hands who got saved yesterday. Moreover' I says, 'it's getting kind of hard to play to eighteen rows of empty seats and a usher."

"Yes," says Max, "I've been thinking of that and I've caught an idea. There's just one way to win out and that is to get religion ourselves. You watch my smoke," he says, "and tell the Delanches I want to see 'em—right off."

"Well, the next morning all over town there was big two-sheets reading:

Monster Auxiliary Revival at Majestic Theater
Salvation for Sinners made
Pleasant and Palatable Come Early

"Jammed was the word for the house when we came on for the first performance. You see all our regular Monday-Tue-Wed audiences had been staying away out of piousness and now when they thought they had a chance to see the bill and get an extra dose of religion they flocked like amachooors to an agency.

"The first thing that happened was Karl, the perfessor, at the piano. He didn't play no foolish "moon-spoon-soldier boy in blue" choruses. He started right out with "Waiting at the Church," and if that ain't calculated to get an audience into a religious frame of mind I don't know what is.

'There I was a-waiting at the church—
Waiting at the church—
Waiting at the church—
et set, et set.

"And when he'd played that over about ten times and everybody was thor'ly in the atmosphere the curtain went up.

"Ladies and gentlemen, said Max who was standing there on the stage, the impression has got around that a show at a opera house such as this cannot be of an uplifting nature. Now I just want to say that I'll offer a purse of fifty dollars to any clergyman who can prove that the show we're putting on here aint calculated to uplift a man onto the straight and narrow path. Thanking you one and all for your kind, et set, et set—all right Bill, let her go. And they raised the drop where I was with the knives.

"I ought to've been in a better place by rights but they put me first so's to get it started right.

"What did I do? I didn't say a word. I just faced my board and threw the knives in it till they spelled

SALVATION FREE—GET THE HABIT

"Why the crowd just went wild.

"The illustrated ballade that week was 'The Sweetest Song that's Ever Sung is Listen to the Mocking Bird.' Kitty le Roy was singing it and she gave the song just as it was down to the end of the chorus and right there she fixed it up with Karl so it ended like this:

"The Sweetest song that's ever sung is Listen to the Mocking Bird—except (and here music changed to slow and solemn)

"Except those hymns we used to sing in Su-u-u-unday School!" And the picture changed from the Weepin, Willow to the Rock of Ages.

"Hit? Nothing like it for years.

"Then came Hopkins and Hopkins refined blackfacers.

"Say Ed," says Harry, "suppose you was to see a fellow walking along a river bank hugging a girl what religion would you say he was?"

"Why, I'd call him a Press-byterian."

"But suppose he kept right on hugging her."

"Then I'd call him a Method-ist."

"But suppose the girl was to knock him into the river so he'd get wet all over—then what would you call him?"

"Well, if that happened he'd be a Baptist."

"Biff!

"House just went crazy and you see it was an improving joke—one that kind of left a good taste in your mouth—nothing vulgar or naything like that.

"Well, Marvelous DeToo juggled bibles and the Delanches gave eight imitations of sinners dancing at a summer resort and when they flashed Good Night on the Screen after showing 'em a moving picture entitled 'The Drunkard's Dream—A Awful Warning,' I guess there wasn't a better pleased audience in the U. S.

"Oh, yes, said the Mexican K. T., they knock us arteests, but I bet that if we was to put to it we could save more souls to the turn than any preacher that ever come out of a elocution factory."

Visitor: "Some wealthy resident, I suppose."

Native: "No, just a poor student."

The Fiber of Fame

They prate of education
In an ever varied strain,
And they vaunt the power of learning
And the finish of the brain.

But gaze around about you
Upon our learned men,
You'll find the finished diamond
Numbers less than one in ten.

Go examine genial Prexie
The center of our sphere
You'll find he cannot faze a gin
Or sacrifice a beer.

Or take a birdseye view of Bugs
Or "Deanie"—(to be brief)
He's as crusty as a spinster
With a grouch he's due to reef.

And did you ever chance to note
Prof. Meyer at the dance,
Such grace we have no place for here—
The stage for him in France.

There's Billy Scott the commerce
king,
Whose soubriquet is "wise",
He spikes you with his banking text
And soaks you for the price.

Knowest Eric Smith, the paragon?
A barrister of worth?
But still he's not symmetrical;
He's somewhat shy on girth.

Ask Cook, the youthful Pedagogue,
And he will oft repeat
That Eric Smith is nothing
But Simplicity complete.

There's Harry Sanger Richards
With the alabaster brow,
Pipe the screaming flashy neckties
That he's used to wearing now.

Note Gilmore of the ruddy cheek,
A human well of thought,
Yet he's forever wondering
As to whether "is, is not."

So which are great and which are not?
How noted have they been
The universal dictum is:
They're naught but lowly men.

The Twins of Alpha Phi

Who sit upon their throne so high,
And frown on every lover's sigh?
The twins.

Whose eyes, now ebon as the night—
Now flash with a transcendent light?
The twins.

Who raised the stock of Alpha Phi
From something to infinity?
The twins.

Whose accents soft as any note
That ever welled from siren's throat?
The twins.

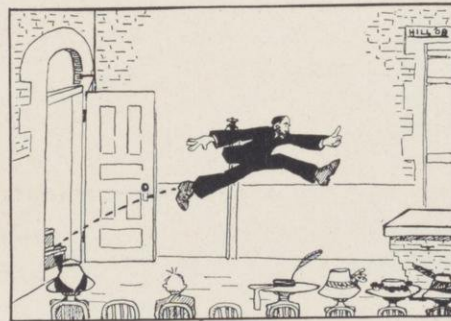

Who kill some hearts most every day?
Who hold a hundred bucks at bay?
The twins.

Gene Dinet, The Ha Ha Child

"Sorry, you know, my little one.
Sorry indeed am I.
But I've got the pip, you know Felice,
And there's something in my eye.
You're one of the queens I asked to prom,
Ha! Ha! it's rough, tis true,
But you never can tell,
As a social belle,
Just what will be handed you."
Now such is the guff that Gene Dinet,
Hands out to each Mary Ann,
The girls say this jest,
Should merit a rest,
Let those few joke who can.

Poems You All Should Know

"Snow Bound."

The Key to Elysium

The soul of the fair co-ed stood at the gates of Paradise while St. Peter politely inquired what she had ever done to gain admittance.

"I never wore a Merry Widow hat," she said, "nor was I ever fussed by Frank Edson, nor did I ever walk up the law side of the hill. Never owned a wire rat, nor bowled in the intersorority league, nor tried out for the Junior play. I never wrote poetry for the Lit, nor took mental development, nor passed Michell the naughty grin. I have never even flirted with Professor Bleyer."

The Saint shook his head sadly. "But not enough," he said, reluctantly. "I took Modern Drama for a whole year," she said, "and heard Sunny get off that old one about 'holding as 'twere the mirror up to nature.' I let

Mr. Leonard walk down the street with me once. I never laughed at the Sphinx's jokes—and I always laughed at Showerman's."

"Still not enough," said the Saint.

"I was a victim on the Badger board, and I used to walk across the first floor of the Y. M. C. A., amid the horde of inmates, to get to the meetings," cried the co-ed in desperation.

Saint Peter opened the gate and stood aside. "Walk right in, you're the nerviest we've seen yet," he said.

Prom--Before and After

A Study in Expression

It was the day before prom. Everyone wore his or her gaudiest, also his or her roommate's, and a large six-inch home-made grin. Why should they not be happy? Tomorrow was the prom.

The Wail of Watsie Tapping

or

A Prom Study

I met her at the D. G. house last year—
A subtle "princess" of surpassing charm.
My haste was quite spontaneous, I fear,
And I, quite guileless, ne'er foresaw the harm—
But thought I'd ask her to the prom.

'Twas in the evening near the tranquil lake,
The moon had shot across the vault of sky,
My thoughts fled headlong from their wonted path,
Amid the flood of radiance from on high.
(Twas' there I asked her.)

Her hair fell gloriously about her cheek
Her wondrous eyes shone in the bright moonshine
I stood beside her in the moment's thrall—
In truth I almost asked her to be mine.
(Instead I only asked her to the prom.)

And through the frenzied, boistrous time of prom,
I courted her and paid her fealty
As knights of old, I squandered dinners,
Drives, dances, and gay formality.
(For that's the way of prom.)

Now quite sequestered in some draperied nook
I'd find her with a gallant coterie—
As I'd shower bon-bons in her silken lap
Her pleading eyes would beckon me away.
(And then I'd blandly smile.)

With dreadful silence in deep cushioned cab
I saw her to the manse in pomp and state
Her final words are branded on my callow soul—
"Say, kid, I thought the boys were simply great."
(For that's the way of prom.)

Fair Herbie

I'm sure you know fair Herbie
Fair Herbie of Delta Tau
Fair Herbie, the trifier of women
The boy without physical flaw.
For he cares not a whit for your "true love,"
Nor the heart strings whereon he plays,
But charms with his wonderful profile.
Are you wise to his rapturous gaze?
Ah yes, you say you know Herbie,
Poor maiden, you too did he fling?
But then recollect little Birdie,
That he's really the handsomest thing.

A Modern Fable of a Dramatic Fiasco

By Orange Ade

Once upon a time, a dramatic Society was organized. That was long, long ago. This Society put on Plays which it was possible for Amateurs to produce, ibid., light Comedies and Farces. To see these productions came large numbers of the Course and Vulgar. They came openly avowing that they came to laugh hoarsely and enjoy jubilantly. As the years wore on, there were nurtured in the Mother Club a few Dyspeptics. They said, "Why do these persons come merely to Laugh? By the Gods it shall not be. We will cut away from all of this and educate them." And so it transpired that some four years had passed by in a Crowd, and a Squab Society was hatched for the Uplifting of the Stage. This All-Star Aggregation of Histrionettes modestly assumed the nickname of Edwin Booth. Two plays were displayed and still the Stage had not been uplifted. The Low-Brows still went and laughed and the Mother Club strutted merrily on her way. For two long years all was quiet in the Camp of the Strong Men. The Spirits of the dear old Classicists were allowed to rest. Then Joy, Oh joy, the Stage was to be uplifted. The Derrick was to be "Twelfth Night." Carefully nursed by the Public Speaking Section, all of the embryonic Booths had learned to throw their voices at the Public.

"Twelfth Night" was tendered and all that long evening, Bill's Shade turned back flips up and down old Stratford's Shady lanes. But all of the lovers of True Art did not take Advantage of this Glorious Opening. Those who were there got together in a stage Box and had a Luscious Time. The Stage started its Soar to Giddy Heights, but the Derrick broke. The Avaricious Tradesmen rushed in and demanded Filthy Lucre. Their Demands were nauseating to the Uplifters, for True Art has no thought of the rude Rubles. But the Tradesmen were common and prosaic and Stubbornly demanded Gold. Then the committee of Philanthropists came to the Aid of Art in its last throes, and so it came to pass that the Uplifters agreed to Gambol on the Green for a Monetary Consideration. But that same day a Deluge came, Thunder pealed, and a storm enveloped the City. Hence the Uplifters had to Gambol on the Rostrum in Association Hall, and the Committee found that they had gambled and Lost. A touching Part of the Deal was the Mob Scene which the Creditors put on. To add to the Misery the Rough Necks said that True Art was a Fizzle, and a Fluke. And so through long weary months the Coffers coughed, but received no Panacea, but the Villian still was hot on the Scent. Then the Rough Necks conspired a Circus. The Low Brows came in Great Numbers, as Blossoms among the Clover, and paid real Money to look on, and a Surplus resulted. The Promoters of Durham Dreams who had Been stung by the Fizzle of True Art decided to make a Gracious Gift to the Uplifters from the Circus Surplus.

The Public Said that True Art would refuse the Tainted Substance of a Circus, the Low Medium of Enjoyment. But Lo and Behold, the Uplifters locked their Sense of the Aesthete in Professor Johnstone's desk, and permitted themselves to be insulted by a Proffer of Sesterces. Thus it came to pass that Brass Lunged Barkers and Slap Stick Clowns dusted off True Art and and put it Back on its Pedestal.

MORAL:—An empty Wagon gathers no Moss

L'Envoi

*We ask no mercy for the iibes
That cut or those that merely stung,
We care not if we hit you where
The texture of your garments lightly hung.
Neither do we crave the pardon
Of each hopeless, luckless one,
Who scans each page in vain to find
His name in jest or pun.
What though the tenor of our humor
Was twice strained,
It straineth us who gave,
If straining you who took,
We only add, we're glad
If these bum breaks have made you sad
As us who made the book.*

The many beautiful year books issued by our different schools and colleges are apt illustrations of the great "art preservative"-printing.

Probably in no other line of art has such advance been made. This is due, largely, to the perfection of present day plate-making.

Thru the pages of the best of these books will be found the trade-mark or imprint of the Buckbee-Mears Company. Schools, Colleges or Students who contemplate the publication of illustrated printed matter of any kind will find it greatly to their advantage to correspond with us.

BOOKS EVERY STUDENT SHOULD HAVE

Burdick on Torts and Burdick's Cases on Torts

(2nd Edition, 1908)

(3rd Edition)

Both by Prof. F. M. Burdick, of Columbia University Law School

Prof. Burdick has taught the subject of Torts in the above Institution for more than a dozen years. The work is used not only in his own class work, but in many of the law departments of the leading Universities throughout the United States. It is a handbook of the Law of Torts, complete, practical and authoritative. The most successful and widely used text book on the subject ever published.

Price, 600 Pages, Canvas, $3.00; Sheep, $3.50.

Burdick's Cases on Torts is a companion volume to Burdick on Torts, especially selected and arranged for the use of students of the law. It will be found admirably suited to the needs of the student.

Price, 1025 Pages, Canvas, $4.00; Sheep, $4.50.

Chase's Blackstone

This edition is by Prof. George Chase, of the New York Law School. It has been so abridged as to retain all portions of the original work which are of historical or practical value. It contains copious notes, a glossary of terms, translation of passages from the Greek, Latin, French and other languages which are found in the commentaries in great numbers. Full table of English, Scotch and American law reports, etc. Topics which were meagerly treated by Blackstone have been entirely rewritten for the American student.

Third Edition, 1168 Pages, 8 Vols., Price, $6.00

American Cases on Contract

By the late Ernest W. Huffcut and Edwin H. Woodruff of Cornell University School of Law. Selected with special reference to the use of law students. 924 Pages, Buckram $4.00; Sheep, $4.50.

The graphic features a stylized city skyline with a sun rising behind it. The word "WATERMAN'S" is written in large, bold, serif letters across the top, with the sun's rays passing through the letters. Below the skyline, the words "IDEAL FOUNTAIN PEN" are written in a bold, sans-serif font. Underneath that, the headline "The Dawn of Pen Satisfaction" is written in a serif font. The main body of text is in a smaller serif font, followed by "FROM ALL DEALERS" and "Look for the Globe Trade-mark; it is our Guarantee". At the bottom, the company name "S. I. Waterman Co." is written in a large, elegant cursive script, followed by the address "173 Broadway, N.Y." and other branch locations. Two fountain pens are shown vertically on either side of the central text, one on the left and one on the right, both with detailed engravings on their barrels.

WATERMAN'S
IDEAL FOUNTAIN PEN
The Dawn of Pen Satisfaction

For examinations, class-room notes and home study, a good fountain pen is the source of continuous satisfaction. It is one of those necessary pocket acquisitions that is always useful and leads to better work. Waterman's Ideals are made of the best materials and on a scientific basis. The wide range of styles, sizes and pen points makes possible the purchase of a style which will be permanently satisfactory.

Original quotation for Allison More, '09, written "by the girls:" "Yet graceful ease, and sweetness void of pride might hide her faults if she had faults to hide."

A Commencement Custom

WHEN we say that one of the best acts a graduate or an under-graduate can perform is to insure his life to cover the increased value and efficiency arising from his higher education, we do not intend to preach a small Commencement Sermon or offer gratuitous advice in private business.

¶ The idea is to put in form a self-evident fact, which might otherwise escape attention, and to state that in several universities there is a growing custom among students to insure their lives before Commencement for amounts at least sufficient to cover their college expenses. ¶ Other good reasons for life insurance will appear later on. ¶ If you feel interested in the possibilities of life insurance, either as a prospective policy-holder or as a field representative, write to THE NORTHWESTERN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF MILWAUKEE, H. F. NORRIS, SUPERINTENDENT OF AGENCIES, for information regarding its plans of insurance, or for its printed leaflets descriptive of the theory and practice of the business.

MARLIN

THE snow and rain, rushes and sand inseparable from duck and goose shooting never bother the hunter who is using a Marlin Model 24 12-gauge repeating shotgun, the best all-around gun in the market.

The ejection is from the side (an exclusive Marlin feature) and the closed breech-bolt covers the action, keeping out all foreign matter, which so often clogs repeating shotguns.

The Marlin automatic safety prevents the accidental opening of the action when firing, and holds the breech shut until after explosion in cases of hang-fire; the solid top of frame is always a protection between your head and the cartridge.

The man who loves a gun needs the Marlin book. It is full of gun information, has the answer to every gun question, contains 136 pages

DO YOU WANT TO BE A SUCCESS IN YOUR

If you are entering the Chemical or Metallurgical Fields

We Can Help You

The degree of success that a man attains depends largely upon what he reads to keep in touch with the best practice of the day. The Electrochemical and Metallurgical Industry is a clearing house for chemical and metallurgical ideas. Engineers of the highest authority contribute to its columns which contain all important live matters in regard to chemical and metallurgical engineering. Published Monthly, $2.00 a year

Sample Copies on Request. Special Rates to Students. Ask for our Combination Book and Subscription Offer. We can supply any ENGINEERING BOOK published.

Northwestern University

MEDICAL SCHOOL

THE CHICAGO MEDICAL COLLEGE

Advantageously located on the great South Side of Chicago. Adjoining the school is Wesley Hospital, containing 225 beds. Nearby are Mercy and St. Luke's Hospitals with 400 beds apiece. In addition to these closely associated hospitals, wardwalks and clinics are given in People's, Provident, Chicago Lying-in, and Cook County Hospitals. Over 44,000 patients were admitted to these hospitals last year, and 30,162 patients were treated in the Dispensary which is conducted in Davis Hall. The University has completed a new dispensary on Calumet Avenue that is conceded to be one of the finest structures of its kind in existence. ¶ These opportunities for practical experience, the well equipped laboratories, the school's practice of giving instruction to small sections in order to secure individual training, the graded curriculum, the high scholastic requirements, and the success of its graduates in securing internships and passing State Board Examinations make Northwestern one of the foremost Medical Schools. Faculty 142. Students 600

Well now if I could wave my hands in that graceful way, as directors of German Glee clubs do, and make the boys snuggle up to me in the International club, you bet I would be proud of myself.
