SOLDIER , REST !

Soldier, rest ! thy warfare o'er,
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking;
Dream of the battle fields no more,
Days of danger, nights of waking.
In our isle's enchanted hall,
Hands unseen thy couch are strewing,
Fairy strains of music fall,
Every sense in slumber dewing.
Soldier, rest ! thy warfare o'er;
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking,
Morn of toil, nor night of waking.

SHORTAGE IN SKILLED WORKERS

The National Industrial Board reports, after a careful study, a shortage in skilled metal workers and recommends that part of the work relief funds to train unemployed labor, be used to train them to become more skilful and efficient workers. In the event of a genuine business recovery there would be an acute shortage of such labor.

CONGRATULATIONS ON THE SPLENDID SHOWING AT THE SCHOOL FAIR.

The faculty and students of the Williams Bay School put on a fine exhibition at the annual school fair on Monday and Tuesday evenings. From the Kindergarten up to and including the High School each room had a display of class room work which did credit to the teacher and pupil alike.

In the Manual Training room there were some excellent pieces of furniture that parents will soon be proud to have in their homes.

The merchants were well represented with displays of their wares or with decorative tables.

The Garden Club had an excellent showing of flowers from the local gardens.

There were several visitors from neighboring communities who were enthusiastic in their praise of the Fair.

HISTORY OF WILLIAMS BAY
(Instalment No. 3)

Unfortunately, the early settlers of Williams Bay were not given very much to writing of their experiences. However, Col. Samuel F. Phoenix, who was the first settler in Delavan, kept a diary and from that we get some very good word pictures of the neighborhood as it was first viewed by Israel Williams and his family.

" To the early explorers the country seemed a veritable paradise, waiting only for man to enter into possession. The southern and eastern parts of the county, which were the first to be viewed by prospectors, was watered by the most considerable lakes in the county. Geneva Lake, stretched for nine miles through heavily wooded, rolling country, opening out at its southern extremity on to the beautiful Prairie of Big Foot. Across the country, some three miles to the northwest, another beautiful lake, then known as Swan Lake (Delavan), lay in all its native loveliness, quite heavily wooded about its banks, but flanked farther north by open prairie and groves, or openings, as they were termed, of oaks".

" The oaks had a peculiar fascination for the incoming explorers. Few of them had ever seen the like before. Emerging from the deep woods, they came upon these natural parks, as clear of underbrush as an ordinary orchard, and skirting the prairies on every side. As an old pioneer expressed it, ' They seemed like the old apple orchards in York State, only the fences were all gone, and they extended as far as the eye could penetrate the shade'.

It was along borders of these openings where they skirted the prairies, that the first farmers staked their claims, generally including a strip of timber and a strip of prairie.

On July 15, 1836, Col. Phoenix on his horse "Wall" starting from Spring Prairie (where already Dr. Ansel A. Hemenway had just erect-ed a log cabin), passed through the small settlement of a cabin or two at what is now Lake Geneva City, followed the trail on the north shore of Geneva Lake, then turned north and reached Swan Lake at dusk. He tells of the difficulties of his prospecting trips as follows, " In the midst of the un-traversed wilderness, t rmented by hungry mosquitoes and bewildered in trying to trace the indistinct and sometimes hardly discernible surveyors lines, I was often hungry for the pleasant home in the East and for a brief time felt like giving up " .

The surveyor's marks mentioned had been made the fall before by John Brink, John Hodgson, William Ostrander and party, who had taken a subcontract for surveying the section lines. As Williams Bay is bounded on the north by a section line and is divided east and west by one, this site must have been traversed by the group. It was on this surveying expedition that John Brink in making his map of the district put down ' Geneva Lake ' instead of following his instructions to use the Indian names, otherwise the Lake might have been called Kish-wau-ke-toc meaning " Clear Water."

The actual settlement of the county dates from 1836. Prior to that date, no claims were made on which the claimants remained as settlers. Early in 1836 the settlers began to arrive, the surveys had been completed, the Indian title to the land had been extinguished and the country lay in its native loveliness, waiting to welcome the sturdy pioneer, who with their descendants, have made it to " bud and blossom as the rose ", and become the home of as happy and content-ed a community as exists anywhere on God's fair earth.

HOW COOLERATOR WORKS

All perishable foods give off certain odors, or gases, which when mixed with other foods are objectionable.

Coolerator eliminates all this. Food odors are picked up by a continuous flow of air and passed through a patented air conditioning chamber where they are completely absorbed and washed away. Cold, healthful humified air returns to the food chambers several times each minute. Coolerator circulation is faster, it washes the air more thoroughly.
