ACTION ON MEN'S DORMITORY NOW UP TO REGENTS

Building Plans Still Unsettled

Definite arrangements for the building of mens' dormitories will not be made until the regents of the university decide how much of the surplus revolving funds may be used, according to the office of J. D. Phillips, business manager.

Bonds to be sold by a non-profit organization together with revolving fund surpluses will furnish the money for the buildings. Additional units will be built as the money becomes available and as the need for more room increases.

Although preliminary sketches have been made of the proposed buildings no plans have been drawn nor has the site for the new buildings been definitely chosen. It is thought the actual work will not begin for some time.

The right to use a part of the university revolving funds for the erection of dormitories was granted recently in a bill signed by Governor Blaine.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB HEARS ABOUT CEYLON

The social meeting of the International club held last Friday evening was well attended. A short talk on Ceylon by D. B. Gunawardena was the main feature of the program.

Others who participated in the program were: Donald Lee who played a few Formosian melodies, Vera Albe rendered a piano solo, Elsie Streuli a reading and M. Matsuno demonstrated the Japanese paper-folding art. Games and singing followed.

This Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Lathrop parlors the club will have an international social night. Folk stories, legends, marriage customs and other social etiquettes will be told by various foreign students. The meetings are opened to the public.

PROF. BOAS, LONDON, LECTURES ON POETRY

Prof. Frederick S. Boas, of the London county council, lectured on his hobby, "The Poetry of the Pre-Raphaelites," Friday afternoon at Bascom hall. "The first publication of these poems was made in 'The Germ,' which was jointly edited by Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Christina Rossetti, Holman Hunt, and William Collinson. This was replaced after four short issues by the Oxford-Cambridge Magazine, a student publication, which also was very short-lived," said Mr. Boas.

FRED DOERFLER DIES SATURDAY FROM POISONING

Frederick Doerfler '24, died Saturday afternoon at the university infirmary from blood poisoning which developed from an injury received on a canoe trip.

He was a member of Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity and of the University Social Science club. A part of his prewar work was done at Harvard.

The funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at his home in Wauwatosa. He is survived by his parents, Justice and Mrs. Christian Doerfler of Wauwatosa.

BLAKE BEGINS WORK ON LANGDON PAVING

Work on the repaving of Langdon street between Lake and Park streets was started this morning by John J. Blake, Madison contractor.

Let Lloyd's Get You By; Insure Against Flunks

If you aren't sure that you can pass your exams this summer, you may take out an insurance policy against that very contingency.

Lloyd's of London insure students against flunking exams, husbands against their wives having twins, golfers against bad weather on week-ends, and any other risks that they are asked to take.

"Lloyd's will take a chance on anything under the sun," said Berwell W. Crosthwait, insurance broker at Lloyds. "Golf insurance policies are widely in vogue. When it rains golfers are cheated out of pleasure. A man can estimate what his game is worth to him and take out a policy to cover the loss."

The newest kink in insurance is liquor insurance. Lloyds will let a man place his own value on the liquor and then figure the risk at that value.

SUMMER DIRECTORIES ARE BEING DISTRIBUTED

Student directories for the summer session are being distributed from the Registrar's office. 1800 of the 5000 directories ordered were given out from that office today.

The new directories contain the names, home and Madison addresses, and telephone numbers of over 4,500 students. Classification of students has been omitted, contrary to the established plan of the regular session directories.

No new faculty directory was printed because changes were too few to warrant such extra expense.

DEVEREAUX TO GIVE 4 PLAYS

"Magic" Is First of Series To Be Shown Here, July 18-21

"Magic," the first of the series of four plays to be presented by the Devereux players on the Open Air theater, July 18, is by G. K. Chesterton, who was here himself two years ago and who talked to a very enthusiastic audience on "The Ignorance of the Educated."

The brilliant comedy satire "Arms and the Man," by Bernard Shaw, which will be the second of the series, abounds in humor, plot, and interest. The play will be offered as Shaw wrote it, and not diluted into the musical version familiar to us under the title of "The Chocolate Soldier."

Brilliantly satirical as it is the gibes are all in genial mood, this being one of the famous Irishman's "pleasant plays." Moreover, it is comedy in the best sense, bordering on farce, but staying safely on the hither sides, its situations, with the exception of the first act, being amusing rather than dramatic.

Shakespeare's play, "Much Ado About Nothing," and "The Vagabond," by Echegaray, will also be given on July 20 and 21.

PICNIC POINT GETS PIER FOR LAUNCHES

A long felt need was remedied Saturday when a group of university men, under the direction of Cyril J. Ballam and Walter C. Mackley, erected a pier for launches at the end of Picnic Point.

Canoes have always found plenty of places to land safely at the point, but launches were never before able to come closer than ten feet from the shore. With the new twenty-five foot pier in place, launches may be sure of a safe landing and canoes need no longer take chances among the rocks of the shore.

MISS ZINTA GRAF

PUBLIC PIERS ARE UNKEMPT

Beach Behind Y. M. C. A. Is Covered With Dangerous Debris

That the public piers in the university district are inadequate and in a slovenly condition is the general complaint of the people who must use them.

Of the 28 piers in this locality only four of them are for the use of the public, and these piers are the ones which are in the worst condition.

The Y. M. C. A. pier is the most uncared for along the shoreline. The shallow water along this pier is polluted with rubbish and decayed animal matter. Broken glass and rusty nails make walking hazardous. The other public piers are in a similar condition, but not to such a degree.

At the boathouse there is an old barge which serves as a pier. This old barge was brought here six years ago by Capt. Isabell because there was no place for the students to swim from. Now this old barge is falling apart and is very unsightly. There is an urgent need for a public pier at the boathouse.

The private piers are remarkably clean and a pride to their owners.

CHINESE STUDENTS OF WISCONSIN MAKE GOOD

K. K. Chen who received his Doctor of Philosophy degree here last spring is now an assistant in pharmacology in the Union Medical College, Peking, China. Dr. Chen studied in Wisconsin for five years. He was vice president of the Hesperia Debating society in 1920 and president of the Chinese student club 1922.

Another Chinese student who is holding a responsible position in China is T. B. Pi, who received his masters degree in chemistry here last June. He is the present head of the industrial bureau of the Chihli provincial government of China.

LIBRARY CONFERENCE IS OPENED BY BIRGE

The summer library conference opened this morning with a registration of about 125 representatives from Wisconsin and from states as far distant as New York and Alabama. President Birge will welcome the delegates to the university on Tuesday night. Prof. J. O. Hertzler, Prof. J. H. Kolb and Prof. G. H. Stuart will be among the speakers.

W. H. KIEKHOFER DECLINES OFFER FROM OKLAHOMA

Students Are Factors In Choice

Prof. William H. Kiekhofer, of the University of Wisconsin, announced today that he had declined the offer of the University of Oklahoma asking that he accept the presidency of that institution.

"Purely personal reasons," caused Professor Kiekhofer to decline the offer, he said.

In a statement accompanying his announcement, the Wisconsin professor said:

"I had expected to say nothing about the reports connecting my name with the presidency of the University of Oklahoma. The wide publicity given the matter, however, both in Oklahoma and elsewhere, prompts me with the permission of the President of their board of regents to say that after thorough consideration I have declined the offer."

"The reasons are purely personal. In my judgment both the state and the University of Oklahoma have a great future. The offer and the spirit of the board of regents left nothing to be desired. The support pledged by organizations of all kinds throughout the state was most encouraging."

"But the fact is, I am in the midst of unfinished work here, the completion of which, not only in my opinion but in the judgment of friends who are wise in counsel, is vital to my greatest future usefulness. Accordingly I have decided to remain here continuing my instruction and studies in economics, as well as the personal relations with students and others which have proved so stimulating in the past."

HOLD CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE OF POLITICS

The National Conference on the Science of Politics will be held here September 3-8, 1923.

The purpose of the conference is to bring together all who are interested in the problems of political research and in discovering the methods by which the theories and generalizations of modern politics may be tested out on the basis of objective evidence, according to Dr. Walter Thompson, South hall, from whom information may be obtained.

The conference will be organized into round tables. Each of these will be in charge of some prominent leader and will be devoted to a specific project.

The members of the entertainment committee are, Dr. Walter Thompson, chairman, Dr. Daniel B. Carroll, Mr. Don E. Mowry, Prof. Ford H. MacGregor, and Prof. F. A. Ogg.

DELT. HOUSE IS LATEST ENTERED BY SNEAK THIEF

"A sneak thief entered the Delta Tau Delta house, 16 Mendota court at noon Saturday and succeeded in making away with a $75 gold watch belonging to H. C. Michels of Sheboygan.

Michels' room is separated from the dining room by a second room and hall which enabled the thief to enter unobserved by the men who were at dinner. The condition of the room showed that a thorough search had been made.

Fortunately other rooms were so situated that entrance to them would have been impossible without attracting attention. Madison police, working on the case, say that it is one of the boldest of the several recent robberies.

GREEN SANDALS

Brightly flashing shoes, bobbed hair bound with gypsy-colored bands, rolled stockings and the eternal sweater and skirt are only a few of the number of late feminine vanities that are provoking the censure of reformers everywhere.

The modern "co-ed" who dresses in the latest fashion, uses make-up, "adores" dancing and is deeply interested in trivialities, is the target for an endless barrage of sharp criticism—just because youth, particularly femininity in youth, is the most entrancing subject for the tongues and the pens of would-be reformers in every day and age.

In the days when pale woman confined herself in whalebone and lacings, wore an endless series of petticoats, and resorted constantly to smelling salts, the need for women's emancipation from their self-inflicted imprisonment was the lusty cry. The wearing of high heels, they were told, was a method of heathenish distortion, comparable to Chinese foot-binding.

Perhaps those were the days when the saying became axiomatic that "beauty and brain are not found together," for then a surprising majority of people considered that educating a girl was a waste of money. It was often only the girl with a natural desire for knowledge and the energetic ambition to fight for it, who received the higher education; so the young woman who was interested in trivialities, whose personal attractions made her a successful coquette, did not trouble herself about the cultivation of her other qualities,—those of the mind.

Consequently, it was the plain sister who received the appellation "brainy," and the world seemed never to consider that the difference in intellectual achievements was not a matter of natural endowment but of cultivation and effort.

Now that freedom from restrictions has been attained by the modern woman. Low heels and green sandals "remind one of carpet slippers," rolled stockings are indecent and bobbed hair is atrocious, because,—well, just because.

The representative "co-ed" is a proof that beauty and intellect may be combined; and when we remember that in the first century of our era, the Roman writer, Juvenal, was flinging at the women of his time almost all the satirical remarks that a girl of today receives we will not be worried about colored shoes and bobbed hair.

True, there is a possible danger,—that of losing freedom in forgetting the necessity for restraint that it imposes, but we will regard the trivialities, the vanities, the fads and foibles in dress, as merely symbols of the brightness of youth and the lightness of carefree spirits.

THE DIRECTORIES

Student directories for the summer session will be out this week. The directories are the peer of any compiled in the university world. They include not only the name, and the Madison address of the student, but the present telephone number and the home address. Wisconsin students are unusually endowed in having such complete information concerning fellow students at their disposal. During the past year students who were not appreciative of such luxuries were inclined to complain of the fact that this handbook is not even more complete and that it takes so long for it to be published and made available for student use. Nevertheless we should feel rather thankful that we have this indispensable free little guide at all.

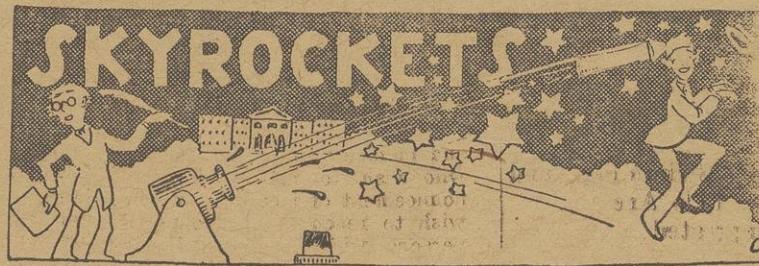

THE CRITICAL POINT

Summer school is now half over and, in retrospect, have we done all we set out to do? If the student has at this time the grasp on his work that he should have he may take leisure to enjoy the rest of his work, but if he has, as many have, wasted the majority of his time he has a long road of toil before him.

At this time of year more than any other, perhaps, concentration is an effort. There are so many opportunities to do other things than study that books go untouched. Admitting that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" there can be little doubt that all play and no work will make him considerably more stupid.

We are living in an age where in the standard of a man's worth is his intelligence. As ruthless as this may seem it is a standard which is distinctly modal because of its adaptability to every individual. Our mental stamina is the result in a great majority of instances of our own efforts, and most certainly the failure to master a course on the part of any one is simply the elect of a lazy mind. Courses on the hill are planned with the view of making them within the grasp of the average student. By no means must a man belong to an intellectual aristocracy to be a successful university student, but he does need that certain firmness of purpose to carry him ahead, and to keep him interested in the accomplishment of a definite end in his work.

At this time it is within the power of every student to either be successful or deficient in this summer school. The crucial time has arrived and the final three weeks will determine whether or not we have absorbed enough of each of our courses to receive a satisfactory grade. They will decide to large measure our intelligence, our will power, our mental and moral backbone.

THE FIRST of the week has found part of last week still hanging over us.

Book Corner

THE GOOSE STEP, by Upton Sinclair; Pasadena. (Published by the author). $2 at The Book Corner, Mifflin Arcade.

By K. Y. S.

Upton Sinclair calls his book "a study of American education." From the very first it is evident that he lacks the critical temper that would give value to such a work.

Throughout it is filled with examples of an unexcelled venom and a most colossal egotism. The ever-recurring "I" becomes particularly objectionable.

"Our educational system is not a public service," he declares, "but an instrument of special privilege; its purpose is not to further the welfare of mankind, but merely to keep American capitalist. To establish this thesis is the purpose of 'The Goose Step.'

At every turn he finds American universities dominated by "the plutocrats." A prominent banker on the board of trustees, or the ownership by the college of a small amount of railroad stock, is enough to convict that institution of the utmost corruption.

The majority of his examples are gained from isolated instances reported to him by the malcontents. Doubtless some of his criticisms against our present day system of education are just, but Mr. Sinclair weakens his own case by the spiteful pettiness of these very examples. At times he reminds us of a small boy sticking out his tongue.

The author's conclusions about the University of Wisconsin are of particular interest to the Wisconsin reader.

"The University of Wisconsin has the reputation of being the most liberal institution of higher education in the United States," he says in the beginning of his chapter on Wisconsin. "On the whole I think that reputation is deserved."

However, he finds much to criticize. His impressions of the student body Mr. Sinclair apparently gains from a careful study of two issues of the Octopus.

He even selects several questionable for quotation. One poem he cites as evidence of the terrible depravity of student life.

"Absinthe makes the heart grow fonder,

Makes the lights go blinking yonder,

Makes one lamp-post seem like ten, Absent absinthe, come again."

A foreigner might as well try to judge home life in America from the comic supplement. It is very hard to believe that Mr. Sinclair expects to be taken seriously. Certainly he must be lacking in a sense of humor.

As a serious indictment of American education, "The Goose Step" fails utterly. Altogether it makes a book which may be read with amusement and interest, but not with any profound respect.

WHITE LIGHTNING. Edwin Herbert Lewis. Covici-McGee.

By W. A. F.

Here's a good clean story of the outdoors and written in a new and unique mechanical fashion. There are 92 chapters, each one titled after its corresponding chemical element according to number. Here the technical trend of the tale ends, however, although each metal or element is cleverly woven, at least symbolically into the events of each chapter.

It is sufficient to say that a boy and a girl are concerned herein, but there is more. There is some of the philosophy of the present age, but there is more. There is the fresh and new feeling of the expansive out-of-doors, but there is more. There are spots of literary brilliancy, but there is more. Most of all, there is plain likeability. "Nuff said."

STRANGE GAME FOR STUDENTS

Horse Back Swimming and Water Polo Are Suggested

"Horse back swimming will be the latest sport at the University if there are any equestrians with nerve enough to try it," said Herbert Bruckner, head of the Black Hawk riding academy. "It is great sport and one which requires skill," he continued.

If there are any students of the academy or other riders who feel that they can both swim and ride well enough to obviate any danger from the pastime, Mr. Brucker plans to organize some horse back swimming parties.

"The only equipment necessary is a bathing suit, a horse and a bridle,—no saddles are used," Bruckner said. "We will start at the stables of the riding academy and go to the Willows on Lake Mendota where the water is not very deep and where there is a stretch of sandy beach.

"Water polo, which is really hand ball played on horse back in the water, is another thing we will try if there are any students who feel equal to it."

Bruckner, with two students of the academy, Jerry Bond and Joe Higgins, tried out the horse back swimming stunt on the Fourth of July at the willows.

"The horses didn't want to go into the water at first but when they felt the cold water they played like children and lay down and rolled. What did we do then? Why, we got off and swam until they got through—that's what makes it interesting!"

meeting of the club last Friday. "The grand review in Paris, dancing in the streets, and fireworks are all features of the program."

In addition, Professor Guerard reviewed the origin of Independence Day. Following his address, an amusing pageant, "La Mule du Pape," was presented by Dorothy Hardigg, Louise McKay, Lanadon Phillips, Elizabeth Adams, Doris Langenfelder, Mary Baie and Elton and George Hocking. John Irwin and F. Logan with Mlle. Marguerite Treille directing. A group of French folk dances followed.

Music formed an integral part of the program, "La Mere Machelle Aupres De Ma Blonde," and finally, "La Marseillaise" being sung. Mlle. Sylvia Brewer, president, presided.
