Mr. Swope Has a Plan
Must We Have a Fight?
Cutting Down Space
An Old Marriage Custom

Mr. Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, plans for future unemployment crises.

In every General Electric works, on a vote of 60 per cent or more of its employees, a trust fund will be organized to meet abnormal conditions of unemployment.

Workers will contribute 1 per cent of their earnings, the company contributing an equal amount. The company guarantees 5 per cent on the funds accumulated, until such time as unemployment shall make it desirable to utilize the fund for the benefit of idle employees.

The employees will contribute half, the company half, the workers will get all, the company none—a fair arrangement.

An English newspaper suggests that Europe should unite against us in an economical boycott, as European countries united against Germany in 1924.

It would be too bad to have an industrial, economic fight. But fortunately we are ready for it, if it must come.

* * *

The $10,000,000,000 that we sent to our dear friends in Europe last time would be spent on our own fight this time, and $100,000,000,000 more if necessary.

Three American workmen can produce as much steel as ten British workmen.

Ten American automobile mechanics can produce as many automobiles as 100 French, German or British mechanics.

We are meek and peaceful, but if they want a fight they probably can get it.

Mr. Einstein says space is the important thing. He may be right, but the genius of man is making space less important every day.

At a world power conference in Berlin recently, high-powered scientists discussed the latest possibilities of applying electric and other power.

At the same time the United States National Electric Light association was meeting in San Francisco.

Scientists, using the world-wide radio system provided by M. H. Aylesworth, head of the American National Broadcasting system, talked and listened to each other as though they were in one room, instead of being thousands of miles apart.

A solemn German professor, deep in Mohammedan and Jewish marriage lore, says trial marriage is very old. Mohammed borrowed the idea from the heathen Arabs.

The Talmud tells of Rab, "one of the great early scholars, announcing publicly that he sought a wife for the duration of his stay every time he journeyed to Darschild."

* * *

Persian princes on their travels entered into marriages for a single night. Jochanan, according to the Palestinian Talmud, said, three hundred years before Christ, "When a man says to a woman, I marry you for thirty days, then is she married to him for thirty days."

You may go a million years farther back than Jochanan among the monkey tribes or visit the zoological garden today, and you will find the same idea highly developed. It is not what we used to do, but what we ought to do.

* * *

The British are slow, but get things done. In Palestine, one day recently, they hanged three Arabs for rioting last August. News spreads slowly in Palestine; no telegrams or radios in their dwellings among the Arabs.

There may be trouble when it becomes generally known that three were hanged, and funerals celebrated with violent mourning.

* * *

It is pleasant to have other men or railroads working for you.

The New York Central railroad owns 460,340 shares, equal to 95.50 per cent of stock in the "Big Four" railroad. The "Big Four" now raises its yearly dividend to $10 a share, and will pay the New York Central $920,700 additional a year.

Even in these tearful times there are pleasant spots.

* * *

A revolution, starting in southern Bolivia, is important because the revolutionary force is said to be composed of "Indians and Communists." Communist superstition, like religious superstition, grafted upon ignorant Indian minds, may lead to serious trouble.

Lloyd George tells MacDonald, prime minister, that he will co-operate with the Labor party in legislation to solve the unemployment problem.

It will be interesting to see what a man as wise as Lloyd George can do to control the law of supply and demand, which seems to rule us all. Hundreds of thousands are idle. Many are insufficiently supplied with goods that the hundreds of thousands could produce. Raw materials are unlimited. Yet the unemployed cannot be brought in contact with the raw materials and the public need supplied.

Mysterious finance seems to control, and those that control finance understand it as little as its maker understood his Frankenstein monster.

HOT WEATHER A TIME FOR CARE

Don't let the hot weather "get your goat." Take it as easy as you can in the sun and refrain from getting fussy or worried over the heat. In exposing yourself to the melting rays of the fiery orb be careful. Take advantage of such shade as can be found.

Don't be foolish about eating and drinking. Use moderation in everything. Watch the diet and follow rules that are endorsed by the health authorities. Over indulgence in heavy, heat-producing foods is bad. Too many ice cold drinks are not advisable, either, especially when a person is heated.

Dress as lightly and comfortably as possible. That applies especially to men, for the women know how to garb themselves for coolness and need few instructions. A straw hat is always cooler than any other kind. To get rid of warm coats and go in shirt sleeves is no violation of etiquette.

Be sure the drinking water is safe, especially on vacation trips or in motoring. Heat prostrations can be avoided by good sense. Don't go in bathing while the blood is highly heated, nor too soon after eating a meal.

It pays to conserve health for health is the best insurance there is. As the state board of health says among its health maxims: "Take care of your health now and your health will take care of you later. Health is the business of the individual. Disease is our greatest enemy. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

CONGRATULATIONS AND REGRETS

Last week John Lamers of Little Chute was arrested for drunken driving and sentenced to two months in jail, to pay a fine of $100 and costs and to have his license revoked for six months. His arrest followed a wild ride down Wisconsin avenue in the course of which he crowded several motorists off the road and endangered many lives, winding up by smashing into a filling station. It was not his first appearance in court on charges of drunkenness and only the week previous he had been fined $10 and costs for reckless driving.

The small fines which had been assessed against him on his previous appearances in court evidently failed to impress him with the seriousness of his offenses and Judge Berg is to be congratulated on finally losing patience and imposing a more severe penalty.

Unfortunately it has since developed that Lamers was prosecuted under the city ordinance, and the state supreme court has ruled that under a city ordinance only a fine may be assessed, with the alternative of imprisonment if the fine is not paid. Acting on this knowledge Lamers' attorney applied for a writ of habeas corpus which the judge was compelled to grant. Lamers has already been released.

However, there is no reason why he cannot be again arrested and prosecuted under the state statute under provisions of which both fine and imprisonment may be imposed. The case certainly merits drastic action on the part of the court and it would be regrettable indeed if legal technicalities were to permit the man to escape punishment; his record shows that he does not consider a fine as punishment.

Legal technicalities of this kind may be fitting and proper in Chicago, but the citizens of Appleton and of Outagamie county do not want Chicago conditions established here. Appleton is not in such urgent need of funds that these drunken drivers need be prosecuted under the city ordinance to insure that the penalties assessed go to the city and we hope that future offenses of this nature will be prosecuted under the state statute so that the court can impose the penalties warranted.

HIGHWAY REFERENDUM

Referring to a referendum being taken by the Wisconsin state chamber of commerce on highway policies, the Milwaukee Journal has the following to say:

"It asks whether members favor highway building by the state, instead of county control over federal highways, so federal appropriations may not be impaired; an increased gas tax to provide the state with more highway money.

"It should be easier to answer the first two queries. Certainly the state ought to build the highways. They are not local; not mere bits of pavements in isolated localities—or shouldn't be. And when 71 counties largely control highway building, there are 71 programs instead of a single, centralized program.

"None of the business men in the state's chamber of commerce would build a factory by directing each department head to make his own plans, engage his own builders, erect his own section of the plant independent of the others. Even with some sort of central control this would be no way to build a factory. Neither is it a proper way to build a state-wide system of highways.

"The second question is answered under the first. If the state ought to build other highways, it of course also ought to build and maintain the federal highways, whether that affects federal appropriations or not. If failure by the state to maintain such highways—if county control threatens federal appropriations—then that is an added reason for state construction.

"As for an increased gas tax: How can anybody intelligently say whether higher gas taxes should be paid until real, central, state highway building first is tried? There ought to be more efficiency, more accomplishment under a centralized system. Therefore present taxes may be enough; a 2-cent gas tax, added to other motor taxes, may provide sufficient funds for a proper building program.

"If money now apportioned to the counties gradually can be curtailed and kept in the central highway treasury instead; and if a single central highway organization gradually can be substituted for 71 county organizations, Wisconsin may find that it is collecting enough money for its roads. If not, then higher gas taxes always can be imposed, after it is demonstrated that, even with good central administration and organization, the funds now raised are insufficient."

STOP FOR ARTERIALS

Last week four persons were killed and two more were seriously injured when two cars came together at a highway intersection in Calumet county. Both cars were travelling at high speed and testimony showed that one car failed to stop for the arterial sign. The driver of the car travelling on the arterial also failed to slack up, because he knew he was on the arterial and had the right of way, but that affords him little consolation now. His companion was killed. The driver of the other car was also among the victims of the accident.

The grim tragedy could have been averted had there been less speed at a danger point and if both drivers had exercised more care. The intersection where the accident occurred is open and each driver undoubtedly saw the other. But one had the right of way and assumed the other would stop for the arterial. What the dead man thought, will never be known. Neither stopped, or even slowed up, and the result was a crash which cost four human lives.

Persons who drive a great deal are almost daily witnesses of traffic violations, of failure to stop for arterials and of reckless driving in the effort to pass everything on the road. Careful drivers not only have to watch their own operations at the wheel, but even more have to be on guard against "the other fellow" who may make the wrong move. A tragedy such as the one mentioned here will serve as a warning for a while, but its effects will soon wear off and the reckless driving resumed. No safety signs or rules make intersections safe if drivers are unsafe. More than half the motor accidents in the country are at road and street intersections. Wisconsin roads are well marked, as to curves, hills, arterial stops and crossroads. An intersection itself should be a warning to the driver, regardless of the layout at such a point.

The best work is done by men whose consciences won't let them do inferior work.

Some people's sense of superiority rests on a refusal to expose themselves to a test.

What They Say

CARNIVALS AND GAMBLING

Editor Review:

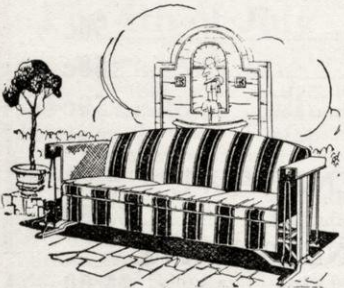

The voters and taxpayers of Town Grand Chute will certainly have a word to say to its town board at the next town meeting, for permitting a carnival to open and operate on the outskirts of Appleton and to make no attempt at supervision. If they felt that such a carnival was a necessity, why did they not at least exercise ordinary care and have the place supervised, instead of permitting gambling games to be operated openly and people fleeced. I understand that Sheriff Lappen acted promptly when complaint was made to him. But why was it necessary for private citizens to make complaint? Everybody knows what these carnivals are and if he had been on the job, he would never have permitted those gam-

AS WE SEE IT

Editor, Appleton Review:

It seems to me that if the police department would adopt the slogan, "A few tickets a day will keep the parkers away," we would not have to stop our cars in the roadway on Washington street while calling at the postoffice. I looked over a solid block of cars parked there in the evening (when few people have business at the postoffice) and found one each from Michigan, Illinois and Ohio. The owners probably were in the hotels or attending the theatres.

About once or twice a day while the officers-in-waiting are at the station, they could amble over, mark the cars and bring the violators in for at least a warning. But it has to be done regularly, and I venture to say there will be a gratifying change.

CHERRY CROP PROMISES WELL

Local People in Charge of Camps for Pickers

According to reports from Door county the early frosts did not do nearly as much damage as was at first feared and present indications are that this year's crop will be larger than last year's. Werner Witte of the high school will be in charge of all the camps and applications for jobs as cherry pickers should be mailed to him at Sturgeon Bay. Boys and girls over 16 will be accepted. A number of other application people will be in charge of different camps, among them being Warren F. Wright, formerly of the local high school, who will be at Camp Chac; Pete Briese and William Pickett will be at State Park; Robert Alexander of Lawrence college will be at Horseshoe Bay; Marjorie Stephenson of the high school and Mrs. William Pickett will be in charge of a new girls' camp at Ellison Bay. Coaching courses and athletic instruction for the various camps will be in charge of Pete Briese and Donald Gebhardt.

Picking is expected to begin about July 10 and any one willing to work should have no difficulty in making expenses and having a few dollars left over.

A. W. LAABS TO BE CANDIDATE FOR REGISTER OF DEEDS

August W. Laabs of Town Grand Chute has announced his candidacy for the nomination as register of deeds on the Republican ticket at the primaries in September. He will oppose A. G. Koch who will be a candidate for reelection.

Mr. Laabs is well and favorably known to the citizens of Appleton, as he has been engaged in the real estate business here for many years since retiring as train dispatcher for the Northwestern railroad. He was a member of the city council for several years and since moving to his farm in Grand Chute has been a member of the county board. In both bodies he always took an active part and because of his clean cut opinions and sound business sense his word always carried considerable weight toward shaping the final course of either body. He has never hesitated to express his opinions on public matters, but in spite of his openness and frankness, perhaps because of them, he is sure to find a great many people working for him, many of whom he has opposed in the past, but who have faith in his integrity and ability.

Other candidates who have announced themselves are: Otto H. Zuehlke, John Lappen, Fred Giese and Barney Hoffmann for sheriff on the Republican ticket and Martin Verhagen for sheriff on the Democratic ticket; Miss Marie Ziegenhagen and Earl Bates for treasurer; Alfred S. Bradford, Stanley A. Staidl and Samuel Sigman for district attorney; John Hantschel and William Wolf for county clerk.

With more than one candidate for practically every office the primary campaign is sure to be an interesting one.

SUES FOR DAMAGES BECAUSE LIQUOR INJURED SON'S EYES

Claiming that his son Gordon's eyesight has been permanently injured by liquor said to have been sold him by John Griesbach of Mackville, William Riese of Black Creek has filed suit for $10,000 damages against Griesbach in local court. The complaint alleges that Griesbach sold the liquor to the 17-year-old boy last September, that blindness resulted, but the lad's sight was restored after treatment by local specialists and that the blindness is apt to recur at any time. Griesbach denies having sold the liquor to the boy. The case will be brought to trial soon.

In spite of official denials, rumors continue to circulate that Pope Pius is seriously ill.

ROTARIANS CELEBRATE 25TH JUBILEE IN CHICAGO

by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

INSTALLMENT XIX

He went to the Kirke-Durand building and lost himself in the human stream going up with the elevators. On one of the floors was an office, always ready for him. He shut himself in and locked the door.

He opened the letter. There were many pages, closely written in Claire's hand. With almost childish candor they began to tell him of a woman's fight to triumph over herself. Like an indestructible redolence they breathed the sureness of Claire's faith in herself. Without emotional effort she told him that unless Carla had come into his life she would never have let him know what she was about to reveal. There was no man in the world more worthy of a woman's love than he, she said. Yet, from the beginning, she had been unable to build her respect and admiration into greater things she should have given him. That was one reason why, repelling the thought of making him care greatly for her when she could not love him, she had kept herself away from him so much. One's passion for another, in its holiest form, was guided by a single force. One might stem that and hold it back, but it was impossible to make it die. Such a love was Carla's for him. Then she spoke of another man. It was of Jimmy Ennerdale, the sculptor, who was driving his way so persistently to success. She had accepted Jimmy almost as a brother during her girlhood, but very soon after her marriage the truth had come to her, she said, and had grown stronger with each year. She cared for Ennerdale just as Carla cared for him. It was Paul who might have been her brother, with such frank and unembarrassed simplicity did she confide in him. She knew that Ennerdale loved her, and repeated that a man could not conceal that fact from a woman, though he did not express it in words, and she was sure Jimmy had no idea of her sentiment toward him. This love for Jimmy was the other reason, the more vital of the two, which had held her aloof from Paul. She loved Jimmy's work and wanted to become a part of it. She had never held it to be possible, and had not thought of it in that way until she knew that he loved Carla.

Paul finished, and it seemed as though tiny raindrops were falling in his brain, so clearly could he hear and feel the beating of his pulse. In a few moments the moaning of life came to him in a distant wave. It struck nearer in the slamming of an elevator door. Indistinct voices passed down the hall. From another street, blocks away, the hammering of rivet drivers on new steel rose above the rush and roar of traffic. Paul looked from his window, as if he might see the pit, out of which the same sound had come night and day for three years. His eyes fell upon gloomy, sooty walls. Under him lay an unending fabric of men's toil, a great sea of roofs strung with wires, craggy with ugly architectural warts, broken with chimneys, streaked with tarred gutters, and with the gaping, shifting mouths of ventilating funnels sucking air into their artificial lungs. He looked down and saw a thousand moving things, in a stream, like ants, every hurrying particle a human soul struggling in the furious Twentieth century effort to make itself greater than God. From all this Claire had freed him.

She had given him new life, and with it love and happiness. He crushed her letter in his hand as if some pitiful breath might wrench its precious pages from him.

Then he turned to the telephone. It was impossible for him to wait. He wanted to tell her there was one other woman in the world as wonderful as Carla.

In Claire's voice was a trembling note of happiness when he said this.

"Dear old Paul," she cried softly. "But you mustn't come to me until evening. I have something which I must do before I see you again."

That night, when he went to his home, Claire was not there.

She had left a note for him.

"I have gone to see Carla," it said. "Only a woman can make another woman—like Carla—understand."

And here we find ourselves where we began, with the lovely Crippled Lady on her porch at Peribonka.

There have been changes since the Crippled Lady was borne from the hospital to the place, near her mother, where she wants to live. The pit is no longer a pit, but a mighty force driving its energy in unending streams through high-tension wires. The Mistassini may rumble and roar and growl, but it is a slave, securely shackled, and will probably go on laboring for its human masters for all time. This change—or development—was expected, anticipated by experts almost to the day and hour. But others were not. The world, for instance, accepted a very small corner of it as the whole, could not understand why a man like Paul Kirke should deliberately sever himself from the huge prestige and wealth built by his father's success, and, as the story went, bear away with him all his personal possessions in a trunk and a handbag. It could understand, quite easily, how a husband and wife might end their marital relationship, but it was puzzling and shocked that a woman like Claire Kirke should throw herself away, soon afterward, on a stoop-shouldered, prematurely ageing man who was possessed of nothing on earth but an admirable passion for shaping things out of marble.

Carla always sits on her porch so that she is looking up the river toward the north. Paul is there, working out a part of the dream which absorbs them both. Thirty miles beyond the green and blue-black edge of wilderness which she can see Paul has a timber concession, and fifteen men working with him, where a little while before he might have had fifteen thousand. But these fifteen men, and what they are planning to do with the concession, mean more to Paul and Carla than all the millions in the world.

"It is not necessary to slaughter Nature, or even harm her, in order to possess for ourselves some of her products," Paul says in a paper he is writing for a pulp-wood journal. "There is such a thing as harvesting lumber and having a better forest each year instead of a diminished one. Nature wants to fraternize with us, and will, when we cease to sack and plunder her like vandals."

Next year the fifteen men will be increased to fifty, but now camps are being built and just enough timber harvested to cover the expense of the work. Paul labors with his ax, along with the others, from morning until night.

Every Friday he comes down the river to Carla.

Carla knows that she is going to get strong and well. This mental attitude, her sureness and optimism, together with her great happiness, has overcome the doubt of physicians. She is beginning to stand a little, with Paul's arms about her, and their two precious days a week together are filled with wonderful plans of what she is going to do in another year. Wherever Paul is, there she will also be. That is the point from which they always start in building their castles.

No shadow is cast over their happiness because Carla cannot walk. Paul wheels her about the village in the big chair, and not a cottage is missed in their visits. They go as far as the little picturesque old cheese factory and down the hill to the still older wharf where the boat comes in from across the lake. Doctor Derwent, who is at Mistassini, has allowed Carla to go twice to the monastery, in Paul's launch, and if October is fine she will make her first trip to his concession during that month. Paul takes her over the soft, sandy roads to the edge of the blueberry plains in a buggy, and then carries her in his arms to a place where she can help him pick fruit for their Sunday dinner. He will never give up carrying her like that, he says, even when she is strong again.

Peribonka has grown happier with them. Even Maria Chapdelaine is younger, and Samuel has forgotten his financial losses.

So Carla wrote to Claire:

"It is glorious here. I love September."

MENUS FOR TINY TOTS

This is the season when tiny tots have parties, picnics and little excursions of one sort or another. But how perplexed, how hesitant, even disconcerted, are some mothers when their tiny tots are asked to one of these. They are afraid the daily food schedule of the little ones will be upset by a hit-and-miss party menu, with much too generous an allowance of sweets and syrupy beverages.

But such fears can be allayed by careful planning and a wise selection of foods on the part of the mother of the tiny host or hostess. Some highly recommended menus, with several recipes, are given below. These will suggest other groupings of the right foods for small children. Be very circumspect in the kind and amount of "refreshments" served, and the degree of excitement provided and your party

Our Gardens

WILD FLOWERS IN MY GARDEN

A goodly number of our native wild flowers here in Wisconsin are valuable for garden use, because they are so hardy and are so thoroughly in harmony with their surroundings, having grown in their environment for a long, long time.

Our early settlers often carried a few roots or "slips" with them from their eastern homes, and for the rest, brought in the wild flowers from the prairie or the woodland to beautify their door yards. Some of us can recall the time when our beautiful ravines and hill sides, here in Appleton, were decked with lovely wild things from early April until late November. I once found a fringed gentian along the board walk of an outlying street, and later recall trips to the woods which gradually added treasure to our garden.

Perhaps, in the very modern garden, with its brilliant masses of bloom and formal arrangement, there is no abiding place for the wild flowers, but they have meant much to us of the middle west and I shall always want a few of them close about me. Some spring blooming perennials from the deep woods that greet me with the early crocus and scilla, before the leaves come out on shrubs and trees; and some of those strong, bright autumn flowers that toss their heads defiantly at winter's threat.

Hepaticas—white, pink, deep rose, heavenly blue—have been so grateful for the care I gave and richly rewarded me. The pale, shy violets of early spring; then the larger blue ones, yellow, white, and the lovely birdfoot. They come so early and stay so late and their foliage is so thrifty and free from pests, they are splendid for borders, masses where the grass is poor, or filling in among the taller plants in that corner where you "let things grow as they will."

Wild Phlox—blue, a marvelous deep rose; and once I found a pure white one in a shady woodland nook. Once established, it needs little care in the garden. Wild geranium, bloodroot, anemone, spring beauty, dog tooth violet, trillium, wake robin, blue flag, wild columbine, bottle gentian, tiger lily, field lily, twin flower, Solomons seal, jack-in-the-pulpit, lady slipper, buttercup, and a host of others will grow in your garden with reasonable care.

For the later blooms, wild sunflower, wild asters—white, rose, purple—shooting star, Indian paint brush, brown-eyed Susan, bind weed, golden rod, and many more will serve you well.

Where roads are being widened, where wood lots and cutover lands are being given over to pasturing (wild flowers will not long survive in pasture lots), there get your wild flowers and save them by caring for them in your garden. Move them with as much dirt about the roots as possible. The more delicate sorts are better marked and moved after the ground has frozen. Place them in your garden where conditions will be similar to those under which they grew, if that is possible.

Many may be transplanted successfully while in full bloom, if the work is done carefully. Wild lilies give best results if moved after the tops have died down and all the lovely ferns, should, of course, be transferred to the garden in the early spring.

Most wild flowers can now be secured from dealers and many of them can be quite easily grown from seeds. I would suggest that this way be used where they cannot be obtained from woods or fields that are being given over to some other purpose.

I should like to hear what success gardeners have had with applying fertilizer to the wild flowers.—E. L. S.

Our Friendly Neighbors

Have you ever built a bird house for a certain family of the feathered species and to your utmost surprise found a different pair in complete ownership and occupancy?

Early in the spring two small, spick-and-span wren houses were set up on poles near the river bank. They glistened with fresh paint and, even to the little stoops in front, were ready for the first visitors.

Patiently the houses were watched; with more and more disappointment as each day ended with no sign of even a curious wayfarer and the houses seemed to be destined merely for ornamentation. Then one morning, after a week of anxious waiting, lo and behold, applicants for one of the houses arrived! Perched on the top of the roof was a bird about twice the size of the expected wren and on the little front stoop sat the mate. The air was filled with melodious chirps as the pair of strangers proceeded to inspect the housing situation. Upon closer examination it was discovered that a pair of swallows had taken a temporary lease on the dwelling.

Not much attention was given the swallows because it was expected that after a short visit they would leave the house for a different nest, the hole being about half the size required for an entrance. But Mrs. Swallow took a different view of the subject. Sitting on the front stoop, her small beady eyes looked warily in all directions; then, with a quick movement, she would thrust her head and part of her body into the opening and just as quickly withdraw. Again and again she would try, and as many times face defeat.

Finally one of the members of the family took a ladder and with a jack-knife cut the hole a little larger. Not more than a half dozen steps were taken from the house, when Mrs. Swallow immediately returned and again proceeded to convince herself that it was a futile effort to gain entrance.

Three times the hole was enlarged and each time both birds hovered nearby or perched in a neighboring tree, awaiting the completion of the task. Each time they promptly returned, and finally gained an entrance to the dwelling.

For the next three days there probably was not a busier pair of birds in the world! Straw, twigs, dry grasses, and pieces of shavings all entered into an elaborate system of home building. When the female was out in search of material, the male perched on top of the house; and when the rush of wings brought the female back with her quota of building material, the male immediately departed, so that never was the house unprotected.

And it certainly needed protection. Sparrows would try to invade the new home and oh! what a battle ensued! Down the river bank, across the river, over the neighboring fields, the chase was carried on. Not only sparrows, but martins and blackbirds as well, received their due punishment for interference. After four or five days of hard and persevering labor, they settled down to a more peaceful and undisturbed existence. Each evening they make a wonderful picture, sitting on their new home and thrilling out a song for the world to hear.

Who said perseverance does not bring victory?

Query: Should a wren house be cleaned out each season? I cleaned mine last year and of all the things I found in it! Hair pins, a safety pin, buttons! Some of my friends say the houses should be cleaned each season, if I want the birds to come back. Others say they should be left to the birds.

—Mrs. R.

Answer: I would say "No." The wrens seem much better satisfied to find things as they leave them. During the summer, after the young birds have flown, the male often returns and looks things over. Then in the spring the pair do their own housecleaning, throwing out much of the finer material and replacing it with new.

Wrens are very cleanly housekeepers, the mother and father taking turns in removing and carrying away the little sack of excrement and the long cold winter probably kills any vermin that may find lodgment. A friend has had a pair of wrens return to their house in an apple tree season after season, without any handling of the nest box between times.

Bombings and riots continue in India. British make many arrests.

Last Friday United States dry agents brought the total of stills raided in Cicero, Chicago stronghold of Al Capone, to 24 for the week. The monthly revenue to the booze syndicate from these amounted to nearly a half million dollars.

THE NEW TRAFFIC LIGHTS

The new traffic lights have been installed and it was expected that they would be put in service to help regulate the traffic during the S. A. W. Veterans convention. However, this will not be done.

It is reported that the reason for the delay is to be found in the fact that the city traffic ordinance prohibits left hand turns at all intersections controlled by traffic lights, and that this paragraph has been seized upon by opponents of the lights to threaten legal trouble for the city if left hand turns are permitted. To prohibit left hand turns would undoubtedly cause confusion and so the lights will not be turned on until a compromise can be reached or the ordinance repealed. In case the latter solution proves necessary a delay of five weeks will ensue.

In the meantime the intersection at Appleton street and College avenue has been marked to show drivers how left hand turns are to be made and immediately resulted in a noticeable speeding up of traffic at this busy corner.

WALTER KOHL OF GRAND CHUTE ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm Walter Kohl of Grand Chute was arraigned in local municipal court Monday and released under $1,000 bonds. His hearing was set for July 3.

Kohl was visiting at the farm of Otto Noack when word was received that bees had swarmed on a fence post on the property line separating the Noack farm from that of Louis Peters. They hastened down to hive the bees and met Peters on the same errand. An argument over the ownership of the swarm ensued, during the course of which Peters was struck over the head with a hoe. He walked to the farm of W. C. Wilharms, where he collapsed. He was immediately carried to St. Elizabeth hospital where his condition was pronounced serious and continues to be so, although several days have elapsed since the altercation in which he was injured.

INSANE MAN MAKES FIVE DEPUTY SHERIFFS WORK

Louis Hoffberg, 47, of Chicago, who was on parole from an Illinois insane asylum, applied at the police station early Friday morning for protection from his family, which he claimed wanted to kill him. He was locked in a cell, but after a short time became violent and tore out the fittings of the cell so that he was transferred to the jail. Here his violence increased and he tore two steel bunks from the walls and pulled them apart, in spite of the fact that the pieces were welded together. He was examined by physicians and as it had been established that he was insane, he was taken to Northern hospital at Oshkosh to be cared for until he can be returned to the Illinois institution. It required the combined efforts of five deputy sheriffs to overpower him when the time came to remove him from the cell, but he was finally conquered, rolled up in a blanket and taken to Oshkosh.

TWO KAUKAUNA MEN PUNISHED FOR LARCENY

POSTER STAMPS TO #### ADVERTISE STATE

Over 4,500,000 poster stamps telling the facts, advantages, and opportunities of Wisconsin are to be placed in circulation on outgoing mail through the cooperation of the business and professional men as a part of the complete state wide expansion program of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce.

The State Chamber has a practical and ambitious program for 1930-31 and through using Wisconsin Poster Stamps as the motive power will carry on an aggressive program of state wide advertising and development calculated to add millions of new wealth annually to the state.

"On Wisconsin!" is the keynote of the organization's program. The state today produces more than three billion dollars in new wealth annually from agriculture, mining and manufacturing. The State Chamber aims to conservatively and effectively tell Wisconsin's story to the world, in close cooperation with the local chambers of commerce and trade organizations of the state with a view to bringing in more people and money, which mean greater prosperity.

The first series of Wisconsin Poster Stamps are just off the press. They are printed in four colors with 30 different stamps on a page. Each stamp carries the wording: "Find Out All the Facts—Write Our Chamber of Commerce." The object of this is to bring inquiries prompted by the stamps back to the city from which the stamps were mailed.

Additional series of stamps are being prepared and will be announced soon, it is said. The various poster stamps being issued in connection with the State Chamber's program will tell what Wisconsin has, wants, offers, how the state ranks and about its special points of interest to the visitor.

The poster stamps are bound in 25 page books and are given free with budget subscriptions to the State Chamber at the rate of 25 pages of stamps for each $25.00 budget subscription. In this manner the organization accomplishes the two-fold purpose of enlisting the cooperation of the business people of the state in advertising Wisconsin to the world and at the same time creates its $150,000 cash budget to carry on this and other work.
