JUNIOR ORATORY

THE EX WON BY SCHMIDT OF PHILOMATHIA.

MISS WOOTTON RECEIVES SECOND PLACE.

Synopses of the Orations—Winner Will Be in the Final Contest.

A large and very enthusiastic audience was in attendance at Library hall last evening to listen to the junior exhibition.

Albert H. Schmidt, representing the Philomathia society, carried off first honors with an oration upon the "Iron Chancellor," Prince Bismarck. Miss Addiemay Wootton of Castalia won second place with an oration upon The New Woman.

For almost a year these orators have been working upon their orations and great interest was manifested by all present concerning the final outcome of the exhibition. As each orator took his place upon the platform he was greeted by applause from the society which he was representing, as well as from the general audience and very close attention was paid throughout to the various orations.

The judges on thought and style were Rev. E. G. Updike, Prof. A. A. Knowlton and E. J. Baskerville; on delivery, Senator T. D. Weeks, H. C. Adams and Harry L. Butler. The orations throughout were of very high order and showed that the orators had put much hard study upon them and were an honor to the society which they represented.

The program was opened by a vocal solo rendered by J. F. Wilson, '96. Miss Nellie McGregor of Castalia acted as president.

The first oration was upon "William Pitt," which was delivered in a masterly way by Martin J. Gillen, the representative of the Athenean society. Mr. Gillen was somewhat handicapped as he has been quite ill for a number of days past, but he delivered his oration in a very free and easy manner eliciting much admiration from the audience upon his clean-cut, pointed sentences and choice expressions.

Miss Gertrude B. Hood, Laurea's representative, followed Mr. Gillen with an oration upon the subject, "A Relic of Barbarism," the Lynch Law. Throughout her entire oration the speaker held the closest attention of her audience and many were the praises which she has received upon her free and easy style and the masterly manner in which she handled her subject.

The subject of Mr. Schmidt's oration was the "Iron Chancellor." It was a fine portrayal of the character of Prince Bismarck and was written in a clear and forcible style. The life of Bismarck was traced and his service to the German empire portrayed in glowing terms. Mr. Schmidt's delivery was excellent and showed the result of long training.

Addie Mae Wootton of Castalia took second place on her oration on the "New Woman." She pictured the change in woman's position in society from ancient times down through the age of chivalry when she held a place above that where she could do the most good. Woman is now in a new field and here she should not awaken hatred, distrust and bloody conflict; she should give to man a higher standard of manhood, a new and loftier aim to every church, public office, school, and most of all to every

H. S. McCard, of Hesperia, spoke on the subject of "Personal Vengeance." It was a picture of the cruelties now being exercised on the negro race by people in various parts of the country and was a strong plea for the rule of law and order.

THE HUMANITIES.

Lecture by Prof. Hale Yesterday Afternoon.

A very large and attentive audience heard Prof. Hale's lecture on the "Humanities in the Classics." The lecture was a most forcible defense of the practicalability and worth of the study of the classics and the so-called humanistic sciences. The special advantages gained from a classical education, he summed up under five heads. The first, the power of close observation and clear thinking, the result of discipline in getting at and grasping the exact and complete thought of the Ex last night were Lieut. Gov. Baensch author. The second, the acquisition of the power of expression.

Thirdly, the vast store of interesting information and knowledge gained. This, of course, does not include the technical and industrial knowledge which is of immediate use to gain a livelihood, but such information on what the greatest minds of literature and art have thought and felt. This can not help but elevate a man both in mind and heart. It was Petrarch who first started this movement which we call the humanistic, that of the study of the classics for what is elevating and inspiring in them. From Petrarch, it spread over all Europe in what we call the Renaissance. The same spirit which moved them to the careful study of the classics, actuates us. The fourth benefit is a broadened and enlightened view of life. He has a background, a foundation from which he receives the keenest and truest enjoyment. And fifth, one acquires a sense of the beautiful and a true appreciation of that which is good and beautiful.

The study of the humanistic sciences is fundamentally the study of man, his best thoughts and deeds. Nothing can be broader or more elevating than this. To understand the present, we must study the past.

THE MUSICAL CLUBS.

The annual concert of the Glee, Mandolin and Banjo clubs comes off tonight. There is every prospect of a crowded house. One change has been made in the program as published in last night's Cardinal. Mr. J. H. Bacon will sing Ben Bolt. It has been decided to hold a reception after the concert which will no doubt prove a very pleasant feature of the occasion.

No summer football practice will be held at Harvard this year.

IN HONOR OF DR. BUTLER.

Celebration of His 80th Birthday by the Literary Club.

At the home of President and Mrs. Adams, the Madison Literary club, held a meeting in honor of Dr. Butler's 80th birthday, last evening. Prof. Stearns and Dr. Updike first addressed the club, commenting on the ripe scholarship of the doctor. Mrs. Adams read an appropriate sonnet in the doctor's honor and Dean Gregory read a poem of which the theme was "There's Rosemary That's for Remembrance."

Mr. Thwaites, secretary of the State Historical society, of which Dr. Butler is a leading member, spoke of his connection with the society and of his work in the historical library.

Prof. D. B. Frankenburger, desiring that Dr. Butler should—

"Take some remembrance of us," presented him on behalf of the club a large and beautiful silver loving-cup, accompanying the gift with a fitting tribute expressive of the love which it exemplified.

Dr. Butler was exceedingly happy in his acknowledgments, declaring amid laughter that few were permitted to thus enjoy the events of their own funerals. He was reminded of many other birthdays—of one spent upwards of half a century ago in Damascus, and he repeated the graceful but gallant poem which he had then spoken to a young Armenian lady whose birthday was being observed; and of another birthday, that of Mr. Ames, of Oregon, who, with his friends galore, came to Madison some years since to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the only survivor in Wisconsin of the revolutionary war. The speaker made pleasant allusion to the loving-cup, quoting from Shakespeare a passage clearly befitting the occasion.

An hour of handshaking followed, Dr. Butler being showered with the congratulations of his friends.

The loving-cup, a handsome piece of sterling silver ware, has inscribed on one side—

A

Birthday Remembrance.

DR. JAMES D. BUTLER.

March 15, 1895.

From.

The Madison Literary Club.

On the other side are these quotations in Greek text, the first from the Odyssey and the second from the Iliad:

"Many the men whose towns he saw, whose ways he proved."

"From whose tongue also flowed discourse sweeter than honey."

Dr. Butler is the oldest ex-professor of the university. All those who were here when he entered upon his duties as professor of ancient languages and literature, are gone. Prof. Butler was called to a professorship in the university in 1858, coming from Wabash college. He occupied this position for ten years. Since that time he has resided in Madison, except during his absences on journeys, which include two trips around the world, one of which was taken only a few years ago. He has always taken a lively interest in the university and has seen it grow from the two buildings and nine members of the faculty, when he came here, to its present size. Many of us have enjoyed his entertaining accounts of the university as it was then.

The students of the university will take this opportunity to congratulate the old professor and to wish that many more birthdays may be celebrated in as pleasant a manner.

CREW NOTES.

The results of the winter training is clearly shown in the improvement in the work of the crew men during the past two weeks. Many men have been dropped from the squads and only the best men are now in practice. During the last week there have been several changes made in the rowing order of the men. The men are divided into two divisions—the 'varsity and freshman squads. There are a few freshmen who with a little better development would make a hard pull for the 'varsity.

Thursday Coach O'Dea made the following selection for the 'varsity squad:

Bow.—A. H. Smith, law '96.
No. 2.—Walter Alexander, '97.
No. 3.—Percy ApRoberts, '97.
No. 4.—M. L. Webber, '97.
No. 5.—G. N. Knapp, '95.
No. 6.—J. F. A. Pyre, G.
No. 7.—Oscar Rohm, '95.
Stroke—E. M. Wilson, '97.

Substitutes: Dutcher, '97, Street, '98, McConvilie, '98.

The 'varsity second crew is not rowing in any fixed order.

The freshman crew is rowing as follows:

Bow.—C. W. Tuller.
No. 2.—M. E. Seymour.
No. 3.—C. C. McConvilie.
No. 4.—W. Dietrich.
No. 5.—H. G. Forrest.
No. 6.—Hugo Duke.
No. 7.—John Day.
Stroke—C. S. DeLay.

JOINT DEBATE CREDIT.

Resolutions to be Presented to the Faculty.

The following resolutions will be acted on by the different literary societies and if adopted will be presented to the faculty.

To the faculty of the university: Whereas, the time and work spent upon the joint debates of our university far exceeds that spent upon a senior thesis, and,

Whereas, the thoroughness and accuracy of the work gives the debates a wide circulation, thereby serving as an advertisement for our university, and,

Whereas, credit is given for work in the University orchestra, University band, for the work on the Cardinal and Aegis; and for work in several athletic lines; all of which require less time and work than the joint debates:

We, the three literary societies of the university, Athena, Hesperia and Philomathia, respectfully request that your honorable body accept the joint debates as senior theses.

Plans are being made for an infirmary at Harvard.

THE DAILY CARDINAL

OTIS SKINNER AT THE OPERA HOUSE

One of the most notable engagements of the season will be that of Otis Skinner, at the Fuller opera house next Wednesday and Thursday nights in Clyde Fitch's successful new comedy "His Grace de Grammont" and in "The Merchant of Venice. In this brilliant comedy Mr. Fitch has selected his characters from Anthony Hamilton's "Memoirs of Count Grammont," other than this the plot of the play is entirely original. The play deals with court life during the reign of Charles II., of England, and shows something of the artificiality of manners, etiquette and profligacy of the fashionables of that period. About these he has constructed an interesting story of strong romantic interest. He has certainly selected a striking personality for his central figure in the Chevalier de Grammont, who was a favorite at the court of France in the reign of Louis XIV. He was exiled on account of his love affair with Madame Houdancourt, the King's favorite, and took up his residence in the court of the English Monarch. The play begins about this time in English history. The characters are all historical and include, besides de Grammont and Charles II., Lord Arlington, Lord Jermyn, the notorious Lady Castlemaine, Mrs. Middleton, Mistress Warmester, Mr. James Hamilton and Miss Hamilton. The last two are the brother and sister of the author of the Count's Memoirs. Miss Hamilton is the heroine. Fitch has idealized the character of de Grammont in the play and has given his personality something of the romance and heroism of D'Artagnan."
