

Translation:

Imperial year] the 26th of the month of Neos Sebastos in the town of Oxyrhynchos in the Thebais for good fortune. This is the last will made in the street by me, Taptollion, [daughter of N. N.,] son of Ptollion [his mother being N. N.] from the village of Phthochis, normal and in possession of all my faculties having as guardian my nephew Harmiusis, son of Nechthnikis, grandson of Ptollion his mother being [N. N.] . As long as I am still alive, I have complete power over my own possession to make further stipulations concerning them and to make other provisions concerning them, whichever I want to, and to make this will null and void, and whatever I stipulate will be valid. But if I die without this will being altered, I leave behind as my heirs Harmiusis, alias Pelux, and Amois, both sons of Horos, son of Pelux, his mother being Irene [both from the town of Oxyrhynchos ,] each of them, if he is alive, if not, his children, as equivalent heir to the third part of two and a half and one-fourth arurae belonging to me in the vicinity of Posompus Aristomachu and to the third part [of] arurae [and] of two arurae in the vicinity of Phthochis and to the appurtenances of my father's (property) on the one hand to the remainder of my mother's (property?) on the other hand and to all other things, which I leave behind in whatever way. Should one of them die without children and without a will, his portion of my estate shall belong to the other; should the other one, which God forbid, also die without children and without a will, it shall not be contested that one of my next of kin shall benefit, and absolutely no-one shall be allowed to violate one of these stipulations, or else, without affecting the validity of these stipulations, the person who tries to make any part of these things invalid shall pay to the person who observes these stipulations, a fine of thousand drachmas and an equal sum to the public treasury. The will is valid. I, Taptollion, [daughter of N. N.,] son of Ptollion, have made the will, on the grounds of which I, when I die, leave behind Harmius, alias Pelux and Amois, sons of Horos, son of Pelux, as my heirs to the third part of two and a half and one-fourth arurae belonging to me in the vicinity of Posompus Artistomachu and to the third part [of] arurae [and] of two arurae in the vicinity of Phthochis and to the appurtenances of my father's (property?) on the one hand and to the remainder of my mother's (property?) and to all other things, whichever I leave behind. Should one of them die without children and without a will, his portion of the inheritance shall belong to the other; should the other one also die without children and without a will, it shall not be contested that one of my next of kin shall inherit my possessions, as is written above. I am 35 years old without any distinguishing marks and my seal shows the image of Agathos Daimon and the Good Fortune. I, Harmiusis, son of Nechthenikis, grandson of Ptollion, add myself to this, as my niece's guardian and I am . . years old without any distinguishing marks. I, Demopoios, son of Heliodoros, grandson of Demopoios from the town of Oxyrhynchos have written it for them, because they could not write and I am . . years old [.] [I, N. N., son of N. N.,] grandson of Harmiusis from the same town am a witness to Taptollion's last will and I am . . years old with a scar on my left shin and my seal shows the image of the guiding Tyche. [I, N. N., son of N. N., grandson of N. N.] from the same town am a witness to Taptollion's last will and I am 40 years old with a scar on my right eyebrow and my seal shows the image of [. I, N. N., son of N. N., grandson of N. N.] from the same town am a witness to Taptollion's last will and I am [. .] years old [] and my seal shows images of Bes. I, Ptolleros, son of Dionytas, grandson of Ptolleros from the same town am a witness to Taptollion's last will and I am . . years old with a scar on my left shin and my seal shows the image of Harpochrates. [I, N. N. son of N. N., grandson of N. N.] from the same town am a witness to Taptollion's last will and I am thirty-seven years old [] and my seal shows the image of [. I, N. N., son N. N., grandson of N. N.] from the same town am a witness to Taptollion's last will and I am thirty years old [] and my seal shows the image of [.]