STOCK JUDGING

CONTEST FOR MEDALS NOW GOING ON AT FARM.

Six Fine Trophies Offered in This Contest—Short Course Alumni Reunion in Session.

A stock judging contest for the Hoven medals is now on at the Agricultural College. Short Course students are competing with one another in the judging of cattle, sheep and swine, the winners to be awarded the two medals, gold and silver, offered by Mayor M. J. Hoven. The first part of the contest was held Saturday last, when sheep and beef cattle were judged by the students. Mayor Hoven was present on this occasion.

The contest held to-day was in judging cattle and swine. There will be another contest in two weeks in the judging of fat hogs which will conclude the competition.

Mayor Hoven, who has always taken great interest in the Agricultural college, first offered these medals five years ago. The medals are two in number, one being gold and the other silver. The gold medal is valued at $100.

Later in the year a number of other medals will be awarded. Among them are the following:—A medal offered by Geo. Harding and Son, breeders of short horn cattle at Waukesha, for judging beef cattle; a medal from Geo. McKerrow, superintendent of Farmers' Institutes, for judging sheep; a medal presented by Hon. W. A. Jones, U. S. Indian Commissioner, for the judging of hogs; a medal from H. A. Briggs, of Elkhorn, Wis., for judging horses; medals from Geo. C. Hill & Sons, F. H. Scribner and Gillette & Sons, all of Rosendale, for judging Guernsey cattle, Jersey cattle and Holstein cattle respectively; and a medal given by "Hoard's Dairyman," published at Ft. Atkinson, for the best judging of all classes of dairy cattle.

Dr. A. G. Hopkins, professor of Veterinary science and ass't instructor in animal husbandry was presented last evening with a valuable watch and chain by the members of the Short Course classes. The presentation was made in room 16, Main Hall and was a token of the good feeling which the students have toward Dr. Hopkins, who has been very successful in his work here. Prof. Hopkins will leave on the first of next month for London, Canada, to take a position on the staff of the "Farmers Advocate."

The celebrated Clydesdale horse "Cloth-of-Gold" which was recently purchased by the University has arrived. It was brought of Alex. Galbreath, of Janesville.

LIBRARY INSPECTION.

Legislators and State Officials see Big Building.

Last evening the various departments of the new state historical library building were thrown open to the members of the state legislature. During the course of the evening about 700 visitors passed through the spacious corridors and the various rooms devoted to the use and storing of the books. The entire building from roof to basement was exhibited for inspection, including the seminary rooms, museums and rooms utilized in the ordinary course of the use of the library. About four-fifths of the legislature were present, besides many prominent citizens and most of the state officers. They examined the building thoroughly and after a complete inspection seemed highly pleased.

The receiving force consisted of the members of the building commission and the library staff. The entire corps of librarians and assistants was at its post to direct the visitors and explain the workings of the various departments. Contrary to custom, the elevator was running throughout the evening, thus making all the floors readily accessible. The usual number of students occupied the reading rooms.

Among those doing the honors were Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Thwaites, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Bradley, Col. and Mrs. Wm. F. Vilas, ex-Senator G. B. Burrows, O. E. Clark of Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Hanks, Capt. and Mrs. C. A. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Conover, Judge Roman Bunn, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Berryman, Professor C. H. Haskins, and all the local members of the State Historical society.

Cigarette Bill Passes.

The Overbeck Anti-cigarette bill passed the lower house this morning.

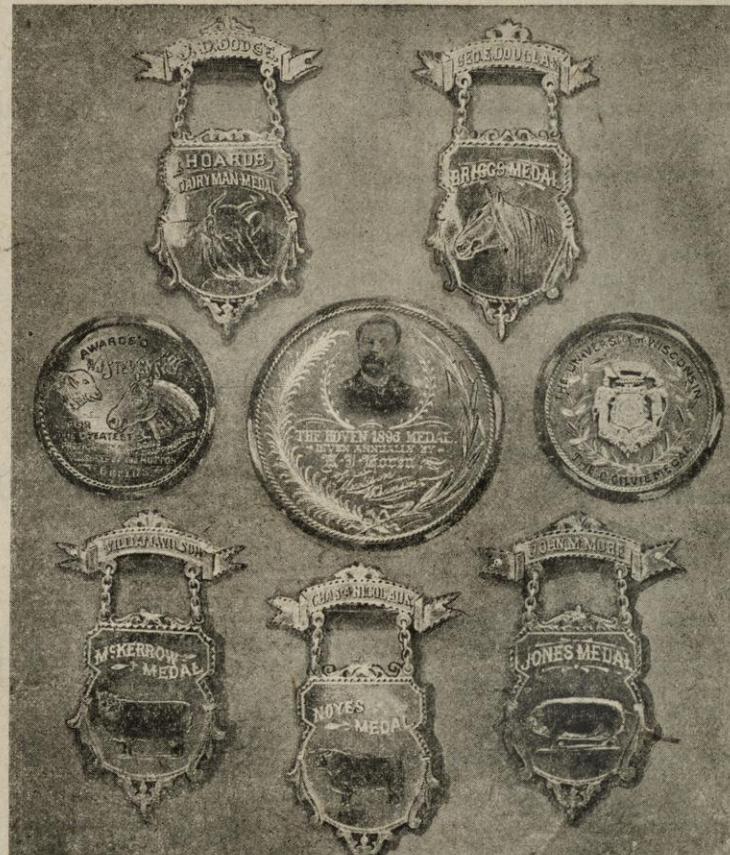

A memorial was sent to congress by the lower house asking that senators be elected by direct vote of the people.

To-morrow's Convocation.

Professor Coulter, head professor of Botany in the University of Chicago, will address the weekly convocation tomorrow. His subject is "Science."

The Prom. tickets are selling very rapidly. Between three or four hundred have already been sold. The gallery tickets have all been practically disposed of.

J. W. Schuster has entered upon his duties as fellow in Electrical Engineering.

Medals Awarded for Stock-judging.

The Melvin Club, composed of the Catholic students of the University, gave a social at Woodman hall last night. The main features of the evening's entertainment were, addresses by Rev. J. M. Naughtin and Rev. P. Hughes of St. Raphael's, and Prof. J. C. Monaghan; also well-rendered vocal solos by Mrs. Monaghan and Mr. E. R. Williams, and orchestral music by Messers. Jos. Burns, Louis Burns, C. J. Kutzke, E. Brown and Miss Minnie Kelley. The musical numbers were of an exceptionally high grade. Rev. Fathers Naughtin, Hughes, Knox, Zitterl and Arentz; Prof. and Mrs. Monaghan, and Mrs. C. G. Stangel were voted in as honorary members of the club. The arrangement committee consisting of Mr. J. O'Meara, Misses Augusta Noelke, Mary E. Brahany and Katherine Kavanaugh and Mr. C. G. Stangel are to be complimented for its efforts in preparing such an interesting program. Refreshments were served by ladies of Madison.

Professor Turneaure will lecture on "Thomas Telford," the great English road builder, in the auditorium of the engineering building tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

list of events, the relay races are probably exciting more interest than any others.

On Tuesday the teams representing the High School and Academy were chosen and from the time made in the trials two more evenly matched teams could scarcely be found. The Short Course-Dairy race also promises great sport. Both courses have several sprinters upon whom they pin their hopes and the race will be closely fought to the finish.

The inter-fraternity race will be the crowning event of the evening. The expensive loving cup, generously offered as a trophy by the Gamma Phi sorority, has added new incentive for winning the contest and each fraternity entered will do its best to carry away the trophy.

During the evening several of Doctor Elsom's gymnasts will do varied "stunts" for the amusement of the crowd.

From the present outlook the attendance will be large. Each fraternity will be represented by bands of rooters to cheer on their teams while the other relay men will be backed by many ardent supporters.

The Entries for the meet are as follows:

Freshman Rowing. Upon looking over the list of candidates for the freshman crew one is astonished at its brevity. A class of the size of 1904 ought to furnish several times as much material as it seems to be doing. This condition denotes either a deplorable lack of enthusiasm among the freshmen or a general falling off of interest in the field of aquatics. We are loth to believe it to be the latter and can only urge 1904 to try and make a better showing. There is always a large number of men who later in the season declare that they wish "they had come out at first and gotten the preliminary work." Well, now is a good time to get out for this work and members of the freshman class ought to turn their attention to this matter.

Some Architectural Reveries. The Ruskinian taste that is responsible for the northward elevation of the new Engineering Building, that built the Chemical Laboratory on the site that had been selected for Ladies' Hall, that drew up the specifications for the brick for the same, that smeared with Machine Shops the fairest spot on the campus, that shows on all occasions and so conspicuously its aesthetic penchant for barbed-wire fences, and that cut the University in two by placing the new Library building where it is, has accomplished another masterpiece.

It is what might have been expected could but custom stale the infinite variety of these vagaries enough to give a prophet half a chance. But who could look ahead with any confidence? Was it not at least equally probable that they would devote the blank wall of the new Library to the dissemination of the notoriety attaching to Lorillard's Climax Plug? Or grant to the Y. M. C. A. a site for an office building a little further within the precincts of learning—on the upper campus, for instance?—or decide to extend the corn and wheat belt a little further east, to the financial benefit of the beloved Alma Mater?

It did seem a little probable, however, that the gentle peace and dignity of old age would be held sacred even by the veriest vandal. But no. The old library is the most fitting and tasteful building on all the campus. Nestling into its little niche in the slope of the hillside, its spire pointing upward, and its churchly architecture with the little leaded windows telling us how it has descended to us from the past, it breathes an air of scholarly retirement and peace that we could not get from Machine Shop even better-situated than ours. This is the building selected for the sacrifice. Once Gothic, it is now redolent of the Vandal. They have chopped holes through its weather-stained sides and lined them with pine sashes. These improvements are scattered at random over the north wall. They are not of the same size and their alignment is peculiar. However they are eminently utilitarian. That is, they are useful and let in light. Why three large windows, of the same size, leaded, and perhaps fitted with slightly stained glass would not serve equally well, appeareth not.

HOW THEY DIFFERED.

Secretary Thwaites Contrasts French and English.

Social and Economic Conditions in New France and the English Colonies was the topic of Secretary Thwaites' fifth lecture before the university school of history yesterday afternoon, in the lecture room of the State Historical library building.

Mr. Thwaites spoke of the great difference which existed between the characters of the English and French colonies in America. The English colonists were content to sow and reap in a plodding fashion, extending their boundaries westward no faster than room was needed for growth, although some of their fur traders early penetrated the western country. The French colonists found pioneer life arduous on the St. Lawrence, with the long winter, short summer, and the frequent raids of Iroquois. The fur trader experienced but little more personal danger than the farmer; and a life of adventure appealed strongly to young men of spirit, so that the entire colony was wrapped up in the forest trade, which spread easily over the continental interior.

The history was given of the several commercial companies which successively ruled New France with an iron hand. An account was also given of the system of government in New France; it had no legislative system, the common people took no part in public affairs, the government was like that of a province in France, upon which the governor and intendant reported direct to the king. The often conflicting duties of these two officials led to jealousies and intrigues. The system was feudal; absolutism and centralization ruled.

The lecturer described the methods of the far-reaching fur trade of New France, the profits of which were often enormous, the Company of the Hundred Associates often reaping 40 per cent. on their investment. If regularly licensed trade prospered, much more so did unlicensed trade; the darkest forests were penetrated by gay adventurers conducting such illegal barter, which subjected them to the taint of outlawry, while agriculture languished.

Society was divided into classes—officials, soldiers, priests, nuns, merchants, professional woodsmen, fur traders, boatmen, and agricultural workers. Life in the largest settlements at Quebec and Montreal was described, so also that at the frontier military posts. The costume on the border was an admixture of civilization and savagery. The common people at the border stations led a careless existence, seasons of forest-roaming being followed by slothfulness—plenty alternating with dearth. They were a happy, contented folk, sharing the light-heartedness of the French with the improvidence of the savage.

As against this temperament was that of the English colonists, gathering a wonderful reserve of resources and energy for the inevitable struggle for the mastery of the continent.

LAKES OF WISCONSIN.

Interesting Publication by State Geological Survey.

A new publication concerning a study of the inland lakes of Wisconsin is about to be published by the Wisconsin Geological and Natural History Survey. The investigations have been under the immediate supervision of Dr. E. A. Birge who is director of the survey.

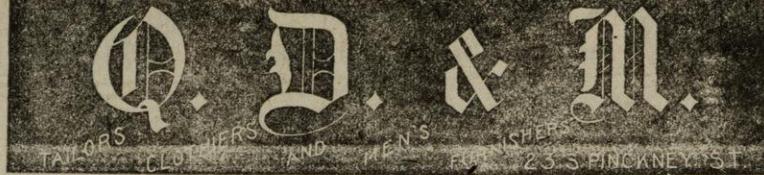

This work which is being done on the lakes is conducted under three quite distinct heads known as lake biology, hydrography and physical geography. The biology of the lakes has been carried on from the beginning of the survey by Dr. Birge and Prof. C. Dwight Marsh of Ripon. During the last year Mr. Chancey Judy has been employed as a biological assistant and devotes all his time to this work.

The investigation in biology has concerned the lower life of the open water, the so-called Plankton. A comparative little study has been given in this country to this department of lake biology. The principal lakes in which this investigation has been Made are Lakes Winnebago, Mendota, Monona, Geneva, Green and the lakes at Waupaca. Dr. Birge has been completing an elaborate study of the temperatures of these lakes as furnishing one of the important conditions for life.

The second part known as the hydrographic survey has been in charge of Prof. L. S. Smith. Ten maps have been completed comprising nearly sixty lakes. Some of the principal ones are Geneva, Mendota, Monona, Elkart, Big Cedar, Beulah and those at Oconomowoc, Waukesha and Wau-pa. The third part concerning the physical geography of the lakes has been conducted by Prof. N. M. Fenneman and Prof. D. P. Nicholson. This comprises the study of the nature and origin of the lakes and their relation to the surface geology with which they are associated.

This work which is being conducted by the Survey not only has a scientific educational value but is also of economic importance as affecting the fish culture and the tourist trade.

Most people think that any old place is good enough for a bicycle through the winter, so they dump it in the basement where it is damp, or into the coal shed where it is almost obliterated with coal dust, etc. Of course they don't think of the consequences until spring, then Oh! My! they wish they had taken it to Wm. J. Park Co., 113 State St., successors to the Madison Cycle Co., and had it cleaned and stored properly for the winter for $1.50, and saved $5.00.
