MY LAKE.

I cannot bear to part from thee,
Most beautiful waters that flow so free,
Thou art my friend, companion true,
How can I then be false to you?

The many changes that take place in thee
Are always full of wonderment to me.
With pleasure I watch the different shade
That by reflection of the sky is made,
The many colors of green and blue
Are so handsome and becoming to you.

With you my friend, I can sit by the hour,
To me you are as sunshine is to the flower.
No difference what your mood may be,
You are the most marvelous, gorgeous sea,
Sometimes so tranquil, peaceful and quiet
Giving to bathers and boaters keen delight.
Other times cruel, revengeful and merciless,
Even taking the lives of those we love best.

But your dear old waters are not to blame
It is outside elements that bring you to shame,
The wind who is boisterous and proud
Whips thee and makes thee moan aloud,
Then when the gentle breezes blow
You whisper sweet memories soft and low.

I could not bear to be away from you long
I could always hear the sweet appealing song,
Or it might be the rush and roar
Calling to me to come back once more.

So I will live in a castle by your side,
With the waters stretching far and wide,
And listen and dream of things to come,
Bring happy days 'til life is done.
Even the farm will have no enticement for me
I will think of thy cool breezes and come back to thee.

The poem " My Lake " was found among the papers of the late Harriet B. ( Mrs. Oliver S. ) Nickels , who passed away on March 19th. Mrs. Nickels wrote many beautiful poems as she sat by the shore near her home in Buena Vista Park and this one was sent by her husband at the editor's request with permission to pass it on to readers of " Lake Geneva Observer ".

THE SHADES OF THE PAST

The cover for this issue was designed by Mr. Elmer Birdsall of Fontana, who receives much of his inspiration for his art work from Geneva Lake. Mr. Birdsall does sign painting and the like for a living, and is an artist even in that.

THIS IS THE SUMMER WELCOME NUMBER

Here it is . The number in which we folks who live and have our business in one of the communities around Lake Geneva, wish to express our cordial welcome to our Summer guests or residents. The number who have wished to show their welcome by placing their advertisements has been so large that it is necessary to continue the Welcome over into next week.

" Lake Geneva Observer " will appear every week during the Summer. Many of you have been subscribers and received it under the name of " Bay Leaves " all during the Winter and Spring. All who get this number ( there are 1500 copies ) are cordially invited to subscribe for it at 50 ¢ for the Summer , $1.00 for all year to be mailed to your Winter addresses. Two score of our shore residents sent sponsoring subscriptions of $5.00 last year.

Several have renewed this year. Such subscriptions are for the editorial department in securing historical data, poems about Lake Geneva and other interesting material which can be collected and preserved in such a paper.)

After next week delivery will be limited to those who have subscribed or indicated that they wish the carrier to leave it at 5¢ per week. A young man from your community will deliver it.

A MESSAGE TO BUSINESS MEN

The unusual happened this time in that there was not room for many others who wished to place welcome advertisements in this number. There is yet time for you to send in your copy for next week. Specify space you want and I will write your advertisement from copy you send. Advertisements must reach the office by Tuesday noon.

Stories of 100 Years Ago Around Geneva Lake

Under the heading, "Sixty Years Ago," this series of articles giving reminiscences of pioneer life at the head of Geneva lake was written 40 years ago by Cyrus Church, pioneer settler, for The Observer, the first newspaper published in Walworth. The Walworth Times and Bay Leaves and Geneva Lake Observer, are cooperating in reprinting these interesting stories of early days.

THE INDIAN IN THE TREE-TOP

Near the lake shore on what was long known as Porter's or Fontana Park, now owned by W. F. Furbeck, stands a large white oak tree, with a crotch in the top of it. The tree has changed in appearance since I first saw it. The crotch is nearer together, as it has grown to be much larger than it was 60 years ago.

A straight butternut log, about six feet long, with ends cut square and smooth was used for a coffin. About one-third of it was split off and the log dug out in workman-like manner. In this the body of the boy was placed, and with it a pipe, some tobacco, bow and arrows, and some silver ornaments. The piece that had been split off was then put on and fastened with wooden pins.

Log Placed in Tree

The log was then placed in the top of the tree, one end in the crotch, the other resting on a limb just large enough to support it. There is no appearance of this limb now and I think it was cut off to let the log fall. It was on the west side of the forks of the tree.

Near the park was an Indian garden. This I planted and cared for in the season of '37, as I was working by the month for Mr. VanSlyke. The trail that I followed ran close to the tree and I necessarily walked along under the tree frequently. At this time the worst stages of decomposition had set in, and the stench was very disagreeable.

Sometime about the last of June a couple emigrant wagons, or "prairie schooners," as they were called, hauled by several ox teams came along that way. There was a number of men in the company, and they camped one night not far from the tree. The next day we missed the log from the tree-top and I suppose these men were the villains who dropped it and robbed it of its treasure.

Sometime later Dr. Wood gathered up the bones, and boiled and cleaned them up. I saw them a number of times.

Some years afterward a phrenological lecturer by the name of Kellogg came along and delivered a lecture in Davis' hotel, which was then but a small affair. It was occupied by Judge Douglass. A full house was present and the room was lighted with tallow candles. Dr. Wood gave him the boy's skull to compare with others which the lecturer had to illustrate the difference in character. He would insert a lighted candle in them. He showed that the Indian's skull was far more transparent than the others. The lecturer said that this skull showed a wonderful degree of native intelligence. He pronounced the boy to be 14 or 15 years old. Warren Wood took the skull to Baraboo with him.

Reader Marked Claim

Deacon John Reader came to this place, marked a claim here and was gone when I came. He returned sometime in June. He told me that while here he cut a small tree, leaned it against the tree containing the body and climbed up to examine it. He pried off the top of the log and saw the body as I have described it.

He thought it to be a boy about 14 or 15 years of age and said it looked very natural and was a beautiful corpse. It must have been placed there just before they left about the last of November, and had been frozen ever since. (This was about the middle of February.)

He said he placed the cover back as nice as it was before. He was probably the only one who ever saw it in the tree.

Mrs. VanSlyke said that Big Foot was often at their house, and was there the day before he left. He was very sorrowful to think of leaving. He could speak English, and she learned from him that it was his son that was placed in the tree.

A little west of this tree on the hill was Big Foot's residence in plain view of the lake and with beautiful surroundings. The workmanship was admired for its genius and perception. It was about 12x20 ft. in size. The frame was constructed of small poles woven together. These were covered with bark.

Big Foot Chief of Tribe

One piece about 4 feet wide and 7 feet long, I had the pleasure of sleeping on for about five months. Surrounding this tent were a number of others, merely rough poles stuck in the ground and covered with mats made of woven flags. Most of this covering had been taken away, leaving only that that was old and worthless.

Big Foot was chief of one branch of the Pottawottamie tribe, and this was headquarters for them. The trails centered in here from every direction. There was one double trail called the army trail.

All the others were single trails and showed much travel. I am sorry I never had the opportunity to see the old chief. The Indians were removed by government soldiers, with teams to carry the feeble ones, about the last of November 1836. It was one of the most powerful Indian tribes in the country, but only a few small bands are now left.

FORTY YEARS AGO IN WMS BAY

From The Observer, June 17, 1898

"The Y.M.C.A. Camp opens today. An announcement to this effect was crowded out last week, but we have been aware that for several days past janitor Dunlop and his force of men have been especially busy making preparations for the summer. The new dining hall and kitchen are in perfect readiness and Sidney Hotton, the genial steward, looks fully four inches taller as he steps proudly through his new domain. Mr. and Mrs. Hotton were early arrivals this week. Mrs. Hotton Sr., who is superintendent of the kitchen, came last week, and the entire force of kitchen, dining room and laundry employees are now here.

The College Student Conference convenes today, June 17, and continues in session until the 26. A larger enrollment than ever is expected and the number undoubtedly will go over 300. The Camp is not open for members and guests until the conference closes.

The interim of four days will be very quiet and will be used in getting ready for the Y.W.C.A. Summer School, which is in session from July 2 to 12. From now on until Sept. the Camp will be a busy place whose members will not only be enjoying all the advantages of Geneva Lake as a summer resort, but will be gaining spiritually as well."

Holiday Home opens today. Mrs. Chase, the matron, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wm Steele, came out last Saturday. All is now in readiness for the first session, composed as usual of 80 working girls, and women, escorted by the Superintendent, Dr. Prince. The force in charge of the Home is practically the same as last year.

HARVARD CLUB

Judge and Mrs. S.P. Spencer of St. Louis, are arrivals this week. They intended to come earlier but were delayed by Mrs. Spencer's illness."

THE BELFRY PLAYERS

The Belfry Players add to the resort vacation possibilities the same dramatic touch that is found throughout the New England resort territories. This local Little Theatre group puts on its shows in a quaint little eighty year-old Mormon church which they have converted into a playhouse, retaining however, all the original charm of the divided pews, the delightful wallpaper, and the kerosene fixtures which have been wired for electricity. The old pulpit is now the box-office out front. Through the generous interest of some of their lake shore friends and their own industry in razing some of the original Yerkes Observatory buildings for the material needed, they now have added an adequate stage to the original building and now have a theatre of which they may be justly proud.

The Belfry Theatre is located one mile north of Wms Bay on the Elkhorn Road, C H-H ) or one block south of St H 50 on County H.

With the ambitious schedule of six plays for the summer season, and the procuring of professional directors, it is hoped that many of the summer residents can be interested in summer memberships and participation in the shows.

The Plays and the dates on which they are to be presented are on page 3, this issue, and any of the summer residents interested in dramatics are asked to come to the tryouts.

On account of delay on construction work at the Belfry Theatre, the first of the plays, "Petticoat Fever", has been postponed one week, to June 29, 30 and July 1, 2.

NOTICE TO SPORTSMEN

All persons interested in hunting, fishing and conservation are asked to attend a meeting at the Court House in Elkhorn, Friday evening, June 17 at 7:15. Members of the County Fish and Game Committee are to be elected and hearing regarding

TIME TO BUY AND BUILD

from Kenosha News

"A real estate expert from New Jersey says realtors should forget the stock market, calamity howlers and politics and go ahead using the property and the market at hand. Real estate today is in an unusually favorable position, he maintains.

"We have never lived in a period when the vacancy ratio was so low, interest rates on mortgages so low, money so plentiful and terms so favorable to the buyer."

The situation certainly is tempting from that point of view for investment. People hesitate to buy in spite of the wonderful bargains and the easy credit, because they're doubtful about the future. Those who have money are inclined to sit on it until things clear up and they can bank on a sure thing.

By that time, experts say, they'll be sorry. Prices will be up and terms will be tougher."

GIRL SCOUT BENEFIT JUNE 22

BUYS RR TICKET, ASKS REFUND

The Nickel Plate railroad was asked the other day by J.O. Goff of Fort Wayne, Ind. to refund his money on a one-way ticket from Latty, O. to Fort Wayne which he bought in 1903 and did not use.

This reminds me of the man who bought a round trip ticket from the railroad company and thought he would not use the return ticket, and so cheat the railroad company.

THE WATER SUPPLY OF LAKE GENEVA
from

The Book of Lake Geneva- Paul B. Jenkins

"It is probable that ever since the glacial period the water supply of Lake Geneva has been derived, as today, partly from many springs, which discharge immediately into the lake, and partly from numerous small streams which deliver the water of other springs a short distance away. The village of Fontana was well named, more than half a century ago, from its abounding springs.***These and many other springs at Fontana unite their waters into the clear, cold stream which enters the Lake at its western end.
