The Oldest to the Greatest Jubilee.

The jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you as a sabbath.
In the day of atonement shall ye send abroad
the trumpet throughout all your land.

The Significance of the Jubilee

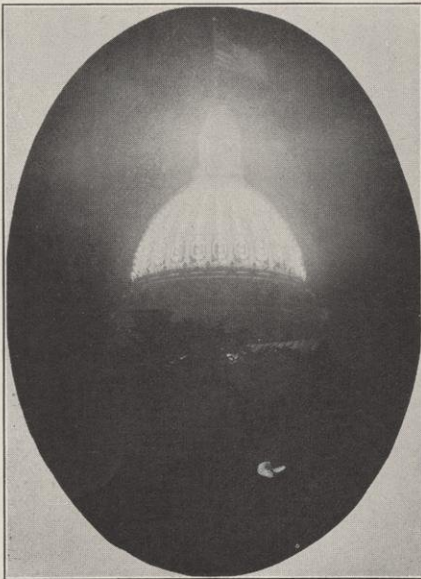

IN biblical days, and we know not how many millenniums earlier, it was customary to halt from time to time, give thanks and praise for what had been accomplished, and to consider the future. The Hebrews made such a halt once in fifty years and named the time "The Year of Jubilee."

Fifty years ago last Commencement the University gave its degree to two men, the first thus sent out to do service in the world. Last Commencement, following the custom of old, the University paused to review the progress of fifty years and to soberly consider the outlook.

Space does not permit a narrative of the development of the University during the half century. Suffice to say that fifty years ago the instructional force of the University consisted of four members—three professors and one tutor. The students were fifty-six in number. The only building on the ground was North Hall. Last year the instructional force of the University numbered two hundred twenty-eight. There were three thousand one hundred fifty students. To provide space for the work required the fullest capacity of sixteen large buildings and a number of small ones. Fifty years ago the entire curriculum was along the traditional lines of the classical college. At the present time the University includes the Colleges of Letters and Science, of Law, of Agriculture, and of Engineering, and the Graduate School, each doing its work upon a broad basis. Thus a large part of the realm of knowledge, but still lacking much of the whole, is covered. The contrast between the conditions of fifty years ago and those of last Commencement is as great as between an infant and a vigorous youth.

The purposes of the University Jubilee were very largely the same as those of the Jubilees of old. Only by pausing and contrasting present conditions with those of a half a century since, can we ourselves realize the progress that has been made, the problems that have been solved, and the great debt of gratitude we owe to the far-sighted wisdom and untiring devotion of those who have accomplished the transformation. If we ourselves had not fully appreciated the achievements of the fifty years, much less was this true of the State. Before last year a few only of the people of our commonwealth, who had had some direct or indirect relation to the University, understood its scope and aims.

All this has been changed by the Jubilee. The words of congratulation and encomium from eminent visitors from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the official congratulations from the many universities of this and other countries, are evidence of the standing which the University of Wisconsin has attained among other educational institutions of the nation, and of the service it has rendered to the people. This recognition from outside the State has been an important influence in leading the mass of the people of the State to appreciate their University and to increase their pride in it. The Jubilee has also had a far-reaching influence in enhancing our reputation abroad, for our guests universally expressed surprise and delight at the superb location of the University, at the extent and excellence of the buildings and equipment, at the size and vigor of the faculty, and at the large number of earnest and enthusiastic students. Thus the Jubilee has been a great benefit to the University in giving to the State an adequate idea of the service the institution has performed for it and in extending the reputation of the University abroad.

DOMES OF CAPITOL ILLUMINATED

But it is with reference to the future that the Jubilee has most deeply impressed me. Consider for a moment the wisdom and foresight, the faith in the future, of Chancellor Lathrop and his associates who planned University Hall and four other buildings when The Hill was an unbroken wood, when the infant institution had substantially no funds, and when the State had only about one-eighth of its present population and a still smaller fraction of its present wealth! With the achievements of fifty years, with the present wealth and population of the State, with the deep-seated determination of the people that the youth of the commonwealth shall have the highest educational opportunities, all before us for consideration, what shall we say of the future?

I scarcely dare put into print the vision which arises before me of the University, as it shall be at its centennial, lest it be ridiculed as the fancy of a dreamer. And to picture the University as it will be at its bi-centennial is beyond the imaginative power of this generation. But certainly he who doubts that the University of fifty years hence will be immeasurably broader and loftier than the present institution is not worthy to have a part in shaping its policy. He who lacks faith in the future should go to the museum of the Library building to see a little case which half a century ago contained some fifty books, largely public documents, the only possession of the infant State historical society. Now hundreds of thousands of volumes are housed in a magnificent fire-proof building. And all this in fifty years.

Wisconsin in some ways is educationally a peculiar State. While it has several colleges of liberal arts, it has only one University. Nor does there seem to be any immediate likelihood that another University will be here established. Thus our institution must do the University work for the entire State. At the present time there are about two and a half millions of people in the commonwealth. How many millions there will be fifty or one hundred years

PRE-JUBILEE BANQUET

hence, no man knows, and it is certain that the University of Wisconsin will grow in greater proportion than the population, for as the wealth and prosperity of the State increases, a larger percentage of the youth of the State are enabled to take advantage of its opportunities.

Therefore, it seems to me that the chief function of the Jubilee is to warn those who are responsible for the control of the University, to have constructive imaginations large enough to foresee the future, and to plan not with reference to the years just before us, but with reference to the centuries to come; to plan a University of a breadth and height commensurate with the teeming millions who will occupy this region; to plan to make the University the great leader of the State both materially and intellectually; so that the substances and forces of nature may be wisely handled with reference to the future, that political and social problems may be solved and peace be among us, and finally so that the intellectual and spiritual life of the entire people may be on a higher plane.

New Members of the Faculty

Charles Russell Bardeen, A. B., M. D.

Professor of Anatomy

CHARLES RUSSELL BARDEEN was born in Kalamazoo, Michigan, February 8, 1871. His early education was acquired in the public schools of Syracuse, New York, from where he went to Leipzig for a year of study. On his return he entered Harvard, taking his degree of A. B. in 1893 and that of M. D. in 1897. After graduation he went to Johns Hopkins University as an assistant in anatomy. In 1899 he was appointed an associate, and in 1901 an associate professor, which later position he continued to hold until 1904, when he accepted the chair of anatomy at the University of Wisconsin.

He is a member of the American Association of Anatomists and of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, as well as a collaborator of the American Journal of Anatomy and of the Journal of Experimental Zoology. He has contributed to various scientific journals and papers dealing with various anatomical problems, especially in the field of the nervous and muscular systems and of the embryological development and experimental morphology.

Arthur C. L. Brown, Ph. D.

Assistant Professor of English

ARTHUR C. L. BROWN, a native of Avon Springs, N. Y. Studied at Hobart College and at Harvard University. Received from Harvard the degree of A. B. in 1894, of A. M. in 1895, and of Ph. D. in 1900. Instructor in English, Haverford College, 1896-1898. Held from Harvard a traveling fellowship for the study, in France and Germany, of comparative literature, 1900-1901. Appointed instructor in English in the University of Wisconsin 1901. Contributor of articles on mediaeval and especially on Celtic literature to Studies and Notes in Philology and Literature, Journal of English and Germanic Philology, Modern Language Notes, Modern Philology, Revue Celtique.

George C. Shaad, B.S.

Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering

GEORGE C. SHAAD was born at Stratford, N. Y., on May 5, 1878. He attended the grammar schools of Ralston, Pa. He then attended the preparatory school of Pennsylvania State College, which college he soon entered. He graduated in 1900 with the degree of B.S. in electrical engineering. He accepted a position with the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y., which he held until 1902, when he came to the University of Wisconsin as an instructor in electrical engineering. He continued in this latter position until 1904, when he was elected associate professor in that department. He is a member of the National Electric Light Association and an associate member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Halsten J. Thorkelson, B. S., M. E.

Assistant Professor of Steam Engineering

HALSTEN J. THORKELSON was born January 18, 1875, at Racine, Wisconsin. He acquired his early education in the Racine public schools. After graduating from Racine High School he entered the University of Wisconsin and graduated with the degree of B. S. in 1898, supporting himself entirely by his own efforts. In 1898 he accepted a position with the J. I. Case Plow Works at Racine. While there he wrote a thesis which he submitted to the University of Wisconsin for his degree of M. E. in 1901. By the fall of 1902 he had risen to the position of assistant superintendent of the Case Works, at which time he resigned to become an instructor in steam engineering at the University of Wisconsin. He held this latter position until 1904, when he was elected an assistant professor.

John R. Commons, A.B., A.M.

JOHAN R. COMMONS was born in Darke County, Ohio, October 13, 1862. He attended Oberlin College, graduating in 1888 and receiving his A.M. in 1890. From 1888 to 1890 he studied at Johns Hopkins. In 1892 he was made professor of sociology at Oberlin College. He taught at Indiana University from 1893 to 1895 and at Syracuse University from 1895 to 1899. In 1902 he was appointed expert agent of the Industrial Commission and in 1903 he was made assistant secretary of the National Civic Federation. Mr. Commons was elected professor of political economy at the University of Wisconsin in 1904.

As an author Professor Commons has written "The Distribution of Wealth," "Social Reform and the Church," "Proportional Representation," and numerous magazine articles.

Daniel W. Mead, C.E.

Professor of Hydraulic and Sanitary Engineering

DANIEL W. MEAD was born on May 6, 1862, at Fulton, N. Y. He attended the grammar schools and graduated from the high school of Rockford, Ill. He entered the engineering school of Cornell University, from which he graduated in 1884. He spent the next year on the U. S. Geological Survey under Professor T. C. Chamberlain, former president of the University of Wisconsin. In 1885 he became city engineer of Rockford, which position he resigned in 1888 to accept that of engineer and general manager of the Rockford Construction Company. He resigned this position in 1895 and opened offices as a consulting engineer in Rockford and Chicago. In 1904 he was tendered the chair of hydraulic and sanitary engineering at the University of Wisconsin, which he accepted. Professor Mead has made numerous contributions to engineering literature and is a member of the American Public Health Association, the American Waterworks Association, American Society of Civil Engineers and the Western Society of Engineers.

Alexander Septimus Alexander, F. H. A. S., M. D. C.

ALLEXANDER SEPTIMUS ALEXANDER was born at Glasgow, Scotland, July 7, 1860. He attended the Glasgow Academy; Glasgow Veterinary College; the Andersonia College, Glasgow; and the Chicago Veterinary College, graduating from all these institutions. In 1903 Mr. Alexander was elected instructor in veterinary science at the University of Wisconsin and was appointed professor in 1904. Since 1892 Professor Alexander has been professor of veterinary hygiene, breeding, feeding and general management of domestic animals at Chicago Veterinary College. He was Veterinary Hygienist to the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago; Consulting Veterinary to the St. Louis World's Fair, 1904; and Official Veterinary International Live Stock Exposition, 1901-4. He is now Veterinarian to the Wisconsin State Board of Agriculture, Veterinary Inspector to the Milk Commission of the Milwaukee Medical Society and veterinary editor of a number of live stock and agricultural papers. He is also a writer of Scotch verse and short stories.

James L. Bartlett, B. S.

Professor of Meteorology

JAMES L. BARTLETT, Professor of Meteorology. Born at Salisbury, Mass., September 6, 1873. Graduate of the Putnam Free School, Newburyport, Mass., 1890. B. S., College of Agriculture, Boston University, 1897. Observer in United States Weather Bureau since February, 1898, having been stationed at the following points: Savannah, Ga., Havana and Cienfuegos, Cuba, Scranton, Pa., Escanaba, Mich., Raleigh, N. C., New York, N. Y., La Crosse and Madison, Wis. Re-established Weather Bureau station at Madison, Wis., during August and September, 1904, and began instruction in meteorology in the University of Wisconsin in February, 1905, at the beginning of the second semester.

Professor Durward Earle Burchell

DURWARD EARLE BURCHELL was born at Clayton-on-the-St. Lawrence in the sixties. He prepared for college at Lafargeville Union Free School. He is a graduate of the Spencerian Business College, Cleveland, Ohio, State Normal School, Oswego, New York, and a post graduate of the latter institution. He took his A. B. at Columbia, where he has also completed work for a master's degree. He began his business career in mercantile and railroad business, drifting into public accounting in New York and Philadelphia. For six years he was on the faculty of Oswego State Normal School. At the time he was called to the chair of Business Administration in the University of Wisconsin, he was Director of School of Commerce in the Agricultural College of Utah.

"Therefore, be it resolved by the class of 1905 of the University of Wisconsin, that the following rules shall govern the conduct and action of all freshmen at the university, excepting such as shall have made the football or other athletic teams, or won a 'W.'

"1. No freshman shall smoke a pipe or be seen to carry a pipe when on the street or outdoors within the city of Madison.

"2. No freshman shall carry a cane or walking stick at any time unless such cane or stick is necessary because of injuries making it impossible for him to walk without the aid of such cane or stick.

"3. No freshman shall wear any derby or stiff hat whatever during the year until May 1, save only upon 'prom' night.

"4. No freshman or sophomore shall under any circumstances whatever sit upon the fence in front of the gym. This rule applies to all freshmen and sophomores without exception."

The University of Wisconsin Skating Club was organized by students in December, 1904, and a rink built at an expense of over $300. The organization had about 500 members. The cost of running the rink, including music, janitor and laborers was fifty dollars each week. In the varsity skating championship races, Charles J. Miller and Max King won first and second places in the one-mile and two-mile races.

Review of the Football Season of 1904

TO REVIEW the football season of 1904, the most disastrous since Wisconsin assumed a place among the leading Universities of the West in athletics, is a task calling for no little fortitude on the part of a member of that ill-starred eleven. But since custom has decreed that each captain shall review for the BADGER the ups and downs of the season, for which he is held responsible, there appears to be no reasonable avenue of escape. This personal effort is solely in response to this decree of time-honored custom and the purely individual views here expressed may be taken for what they are worth.

At the outset, Wisconsin's chances last year appeared excellent. With the two best available graduate coaches, one of them the greatest line-man who ever wore the Cardinal; the other, one of Wisconsin's most brilliant backs of the best days of our football history; with a competent trainer; a nucleus of splendid veteran players like Bertke, Vanderboom, Remp and Findlay, and the largest, heaviest and most experienced squad in the history of the university, there seemed to be every reason to hope for success. The early games seemed to make good the promise of the preliminary practice. In the opening try-out against the regular army team from Fort Sheridan, the Varsity ran up a score of 45-0. A week later, with a considerable number of substitutes and frequent changes in the line-up to try out the men, Marquette College was beaten 33-0. A game with Notre Dame had been scheduled at Milwaukee, with the expectation that it would furnish a sharp test and an interesting contest, but again Wisconsin piled up a large score, 58-0. In past years, Drake had furnished a hard proposition for any team in the West as a practice game, and with this idea in view, the Iowans had been placed a week before Michigan, but again the game proved to be a "walk-away," and the final score of 84-0, increased the already strong hope that Wisconsin had developed an offense capable of gaining against Michigan. The defense had not been severely tried, and this constituted a weakness, but one for which no one could be held accountable, as it had been expected that both Notre Dame and Drake would be much stronger than they subsequently proved.

However, the team entered the Michigan game thoroughly believing in its ability to win, and I think I may say that we did our best—with what result, everyone knows. Wisconsin was outclassed by superior physical power and better football. Even after the chance of victory or score was gone, the team continued to fight, and nothing but this determination prevented Michigan from making more than 28-0. The Beloit game a week later served only to show how the team had fought against hopeless odds, for the men were unable to do more than beat Beloit—36-0, although the Beloit team was not strong. Against Minnesota, November 12, Wisconsin had not yet fully recovered from the crushing defeat by Michigan and the game at Minneapolis was our poorest showing. Everything seemed to go to pieces, while Minnesota, developed especially for this game, was at its best. Ten days later, however, the old Wisconsin spirit was again in evidence, and, I think, no one who saw the Thanksgiving game against Chicago, will deny that the 1904 team made good on that day the old slogan that "There are no quitters at Wisconsin." The Chicago game was a hard one to lose. Except for the brief period in which Chicago scored its first touch-down, I think it will be generally conceded that Wisconsin out-played the Maroons. Two touch-downs following fumbles, lucky for Chicago, and one on Eckersall's 105-yard run were, of course, football, and all counted in the score—still they made it a hard game to lose.

Now that the season is so far past and everyone is looking toward next fall, it seems hardly profitable to attempt an analysis of the causes of our failure, except as such an examination may be helpful in the future. For one thing, the schedule calling for three big games is a severe one; practicable, no doubt, with an exceptional team, but disastrous under anything less than average conditions. Another cause seemed to be, that we were not, all of us, as well grounded as we should have been in the fundamentals of the game. That divided counsels also had something to do with our troubles, can hardly be denied.

Now, however, it would seem that the thing for every loyal Wisconsin man to do is to quit talking about the season of 1904 and put his shoulder to the wheel and help make that of 1905 completely successful.

J. I. BUSH, Captain, 1904.

Review of the Crew Season of 1904

THE result of a beaten team or crew is almost invariably a lack of interest by candidates and supporters. At the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta on the Hudson, Wisconsin obtained second place in 1902, third place in 1903, and last place in 1904, and, if the usual result followed, interest in rowing at Wisconsin would now be at a very low ebb. It must be a great pleasure, not unmixed with surprise, to the supporters of Wisconsin crews to learn, that, instead of the usual lack of interest, there has been a very decided and healthy increase, both on the part of candidates and supporters, which seems to show that rowing is a popular form of athletics in firm favor at Wisconsin.

The season of 1904 was an especially trying one for all concerned, and commodore, captain, candidates, and coach had their usual worries about doubled; and it is pleasant to record that the utmost harmony prevailed. There was so much subscription paper in circulation that soliciting funds for the crew was very unsatisfactory. In spite of this disadvantage the commodore inaugurated and carried on to a successful issue a canvass for funds which stamps him as one of the most efficient, if not "the" most efficient commodore in the history of Wisconsin rowing. The freshman crew, in the St. John's Military Academy race, established a new Wisconsin record for one mile and a quarter—6 minutes, 35 seconds, and in the Duluth race this crew rowed the Varsity to one length. The promotion of one man to the Varsity crew, the defection of another, and the rule rendering ineligible long course agrics were the means of disbanding this very good freshman crew.

The new four-oared shell was smashed in transit from Ithaca, N. Y., where it was built; and it was patched up only two weeks before the Hudson River race, which prevented the crew becoming accustomed to the boat and hindered them from "getting together."

The "John Day" was again unfortunate and seriously handicapped the coaching of the crews; but notwithstanding all these drawbacks two fast crews were developed, and Mr. O'Dea is authority for the statement, "That the Varsity crew was the fastest four-mile crew which has been developed at Wisconsin." The Duluth race proved this statement. The crew rowed a slow stroke throughout the race and finished in good form without any signs of distress in 10 minutes, 35 seconds, which, for lake water, is a very good performance.

The Varsity shell "Forward" proved altogether too light for the heavy crew she was called upon to carry, and in rough water, which was unfortunately the case during the first mile at Poughkeepsie, she was absolutely useless. The poor showing of the Varsity crew at Poughkeepsie was due to the waterlogging of the shell, there being between four and five inches of water in the boat at the finish of the race. Most, in fact all, of this was taken in during the first mile, which made the race one long, hard handicap. Notwithstanding this the crew finished the course in good form, and demonstrated once more that "there are no quitters at Wisconsin."

E. L. JORDAN,

Captain 1904 Crew.

Review of the Baseball Season of 1904

THE baseball season of 1904 was marked with success unequaled in its extent by any previous team for a number of years. The early spring training received a serious set-back owing to the lateness in starting outdoor work. However, this early disadvantage was more than outweighed by the selection of a coach well versed in every detail of the game, with the faculty of instructing the men under him in a clear and easy manner in the so-called scientific points of play. He moreover possessed the necessary executive ability to assure himself that there were no shirkers on the team, and being a hustler himself instilled the same spirit into those men playing under his tutelage. To Bemis Peirce no small amount of credit is to be given for the masterly handling of the baseball squad, and the development of a team who were a championship possibility throughout the entire season.

Not alone were we fortunate in securing the services of a capable instructor, but in the unveiling of a young "phenom" who stood head and shoulders above anything we have had in the pitching department since the day of Pete Hustings. In Cy Young we discovered another cause for much of our success, for his pitching was exceptional, and his twelve, fourteen or sixteen strikeouts were indeed an important factor in determining the results of more than one game. Young was probably without a peer in the pitching game, so far as western intercollegiate baseball was concerned. Aided by a heady, experienced catcher, Wisconsin could boast of the premier battery of the West. Leahy was to the catcher's position what Young was to the pitcher's. The rest of the team must not be overlooked, for although their work was not brilliant at all times, they played that consistent type of baseball, which must win in the greater percentage of cases. They were all workers, wanted to win, and always worked with that purpose in view.

A brief review of some of the games and their results might prove interesting. The season opened at Camp Randall Saturday, April 16, with Beloit College as an opponent. Young officiated at the delivery, and won handily. The score of this game was 3 to 1. The next game on the following Monday, again found the rangy freshman doing slab duty, and his mixture of shoots and speed dismayed the Michiganders, who were content with accepting a string of o's. Wisconsin won 3 to 0.

Chicago was our next opponent, and in a mud-fest, intermingled with a burlesque in the fielding game, in which both sides were equal offenders, the Maroons trimmed us by a score of 10 to 6. Young did not pitch. From a chilly blast, resembling more what might have been expected in Greenland than in Chicago, we took the winter course of the birds, journeying to Champaign. Since the eventful season of 1903 Wisconsin baseball teams are always a great drawing card at the Illinois institution. Young unjointed his solitary hook and essayed to mow down the prospective western champions. Before six sessions of the nine had passed, it was evident that the Illinoisans were up against something real, and with a determination to win, but balked by several curves and certain ball speed, they fell before Young like Russians before a jiu jitsu man. He had that Illinois crowd looking like Irishmen in a skat-fest.

This was the signal victory of the year, for in this game the team played the game from A to Z, and utilized every point taught them. Purdue came next at LaFayette, Indiana, and Wisconsin romped in a 14 to 1 shot. Notre Dame, noted for its baseball teams, managed to live up to their past reputation, beating us by a score of 4 to 3. Young was pitted against Rheulback, but the strain of the hard Illinois game in which Cy had sixteen strikeouts, had proven too great, and we went down in the seventh and eighth innings, enabling Notre Dame to pull out by a close margin. Against Northwestern we played the final game of the initial tour about the big nine circuit, winning from them in a brilliant thirteen-inning game by a score of 5 to 1. Midget Foss earned his W by pitching a masterly game, in which he struck out eighteen of the opposing batsmen. The trip, as a whole, showed that Wisconsin was a dangerous competitor for championship honors, having won three-fourths of the games against conference colleges on this trip.

The remaining games were played mostly at home, in which we defeated Purdue and Chicago, losing again to Notre Dame, the only team that succeeded in defeating us on our home grounds. Wisconsin had a patched-up team at Beloit, and further defeats were suffered at the hands of the Michigan Agricultural College in a long drawn out fifteen-inning contest, followed by a hard, close game at Ann Arbor, in which we were defeated 3 to 1.

Three years ago it was an open question whether or not Wisconsin would continue this particular branch of athletics. The team of 1904 proved conclusively that it was not only capable of keeping up its own end financially, but was one of the strongest representatives of Wisconsin athletics.

Review of the Track Season of 1904

THE 1904 track season consisted of three indoor meets, two outdoor dual meets, and the intercollegiate. The first indoor dual meet held at Chicago, with Chicago University, after a close contest, was won by the latter team. Two weeks later, Wisconsin evened up matters by winning the return meet. In the Central Association A. A. U. championship meet held at Milwaukee, our team easily won first place. In this contest Post broke the C. A. A. A. U. indoor mile record.

As the indoor season had opened, so the outdoor season opened with a dual meet against Chicago, in which the latter university was again victorious. The next contest, the Illinois meet, was won by Wisconsin. The most notable performance was the high jump of six feet and one-eighth of an inch by Fuhrer, which broke the Wisconsin and western records.

On the day of the intercollegiate, owing to the skill and efforts of Mr. Kilpatrick, everybody was in excellent condition. Whereas, dope had given Wisconsin credit for no place in the big meet, the team pushed Chicago and Michigan hard for first honors. The latter teams had a better balanced aggregation and summed up a trifle higher score with seconds and thirds. Wisconsin, however, had the greatest number of stars, securing four firsts. This was more than those of any team represented.

In this meet Breitreutz broke the intercollegiate record in the half mile; Fuhrer broke the intercollegiate record in the high jump; and Poage, after winning the quarter mile, tied the intercollegiate record in the low hurdles. Owing to the high class of competitors in the weight events, Devine and Miller were able to secure only third place each. In any previous intercollegiate, their performances were such that they would have broken the record.

E. J. MAC EACHRON,
Captain 1904 Team.

Review of the Basketball Season of 1904-5

NEVER before in the history of basketball at Wisconsin has such a general interest been manifested by the student body. In past seasons never more than two or three teams have been organized, while this season the game was participated in by scores of teams and at all times of the day both courts of our gymnasium were being used.

Basketball at this university has had a struggle toward gaining recognition, because of Wisconsin's conservatism. Much more recognition was, however, granted this season than in any season heretofore and the players showed their appreciation of this by turning out a team well able to uphold the prestige of Wisconsin against the other varsity teams.

Starting out with three of last year's team as a nucleus around which to build a new five, the prospects for a championship team were exceedingly encouraging, and before the end of the season our fondest hopes merged into joyful reality.

The team began its season by overwhelmingly defeating various teams throughout the State, and its first championship game was against Beloit College. In our own gymnasium we defeated her by the large score of 80 to 10, and it was this game that furnished a criterion as to how strong a team Wisconsin really had.

During our invasion of the East we played a longer and harder schedule than any university team ever attempted. Playing the strongest and best teams of the East and under a very different interpretation of the basketball rules, we were able to make an excellent showing. Columbia University, the Eastern intercollegiate champions, defeated us by a score of 21 to 15 in a hard fought game and not until the last few minutes of play did she wrest the game from our grasp. We held the Washington Continentals to the very close score of 26 to 22, and when we consider that the Continentals have yet to be defeated by a college team and before our game had overwhelmingly defeated Princeton, Yale, Harvard and Pennsylvania, our team can claim a high place in ranking with the Eastern fives. In a hard game, we defeated Rochester University by a score of 26 to 17, while on the night following Rochester trounced Pennsylvania University by a score of 32 to 18.

Coming back West, we decided that if we could not win the United States intercollegiate championship we would win for Wisconsin the western intercollegiate championship. We played Chicago University in her own gymnasium, and decisively defeated her, leaving us the undisputed championship. By defeating Chicago on her own floor, we accomplished a feat which Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and Northwestern had found it impossible to accomplish, all having gone down in defeat.

Every one of us feels proud to have gained for Wisconsin the western intercollegiate championship and with three of this year's team and many good substitutes back next season there is every reason to believe that Wisconsin will again win the championship.

Desiring to correct and complete the list of "W" men in all departments of athletics in the University, as printed in the 1905 Badger, the Badger reprints the names. The following enrollment is given in each case under the year in which the "W" was won. Sometimes, as in the case of football, the award was not made until the following year. The list is complete to the close of the year, 1904:

The Spirit of Mendota

(Reprinted by permission from page 394, 1905 Badger)

Alendota

Kind are thy waters
And kind are thy ways,
And the spirit that haunts thee

Lo! 'Tis a sea-nymph
Of beauty divine—
(From the 1905 Badger
We cribbed this last line.)

In her hand she is holding
A harp strung with gold,
And from it she's striking
Strains rich, wild and bold.

(The poet who wrote this
Fell dead in the act—
His imagination
Was stretched till it cracked.)

No, this is no sea-nymph—
The truth we must tell;
'Tis simply a band boy
Whose name is Grindell.

On the shore are his comrades,
At whose instigation
He breasts the deep water
For Cri Del(t)-ectation.

“Rocked in the cradle”
Is the tune that he plays—
He bet on the ball game
And here's where he pays.

Editorially

Agnes Walsh has a petition, signed by most of the faculty, asking that she be excused from all compliments in the Badger.

(Chuck! Chuck! Peggy, how could we!)

Fred Dorner petitions the board not to place any confidence in reports which come through the medium of the Tau Beta Pi fraternity.

(We have heeded your request, Fred. We realize that when a man gets into difficulty with another, and a woman's in the case, reports of the fray are not apt to be altogether unprejudiced.)

Brudder Hans Hoffman has also put in a request to be shorn of all Badger fame.

(We willingly grant your request, Eddie—but Bernice? Nay, nay, Pauline!).

Gay Woledge has addressed a letter to the business manager asking for our rates for advertising matter.

(You can't break in this year, Gay. We place principle above principal.)

Julia Cole wants to know how we ever got wise to her artistic temperament.

(Never mind, Julia. It's no guess, we assure you.)

Tommy and Ethel and Jack held an indignation meeting in the Pal last night.

(They've come together at last! Here's to the Badger; it's an instrument of Providence.)

Ed. Bartlett and Ned Jones asked us very privately not to mention anything concerning the runaway on Langdon Street, when each was fortunate enough to put his hooks on a box of strawberries.

(No, we'll be mum about the strawberries; the box we got was good. How about yours? But we can't refrain from making a passing remark about the pieplant confiscated by the Phi Kappa Sig's and the oil can and egg yolks raided by Morrison and a few others from that neighborhood! We understand, moreover, that Tau Beta Pi managed to swipe a few good looking russets.)

What's that, Jordan? You don't want us to roast you in connection with any girls?

(All right! We'll forbear. We understand very well that the girl down at Syene, Podunk Hollow, Jimtown, might become suspicious of you if we made light of some of your coal-cellar adventures here.)

(We don't believe in sparing the members of the Badger Board. Next year's board might not know their weaknesses as well as we do.)

* * *

President Van Hise gave a rousing smile when he read the Badger.

(We are content. It is now officially a work of humor.)

Me an' Van Hise

(Sung by Willy Gets His)

Me an' Van Hise is all de show!
We rules de bunch bot' high an' low;
An' wot we says has got to go—
ME—an' Van Hise.

We are de bosses of de place;
De leaders of de human race;
He is de Joker—I'm de ACE!
ME—an' Van Hise.

Dere's Jordan tink he's such a lot!
He tink a lot of pull he's got;
But we will show him wot is wot—
ME—an' Van Hise.

An' Ira Cross, and Hoan and Geisse—
Dey tink maybe dey cuts some ice!
We shows dem were dey don't know twice—
ME—an' Van Hise!

Dere's Dean, de guy who's big an' fat,
An' Barry, an' a lot like dat,
We shows dem where to get off at—
ME—and Van Hise!

Van Hise, he's pretty good, you bet!
His words are dose you don't forget!
But I sings first in dis duet—
ME—an' Van Hise!

We are de leaders of de band!
De odders dance to our command!
We two is IT! See? Understand?
ME—an' Van Hise!

The Case of Smith and Elwell

WHEN two men and a girl are concerned, it is the girl that occupies the foreground, and the girl in this case, as everybody knows, was Miss Newton. Smith and Elwell had both been attentive to her all fall—so attentive, in fact, that they lost no love to each other. I was a friend of Elwell, and as such was drawn into the complications that ensued. Let me say that it was due to this friendship alone that I was in any way concerned, for on that point more than on any other, I have been misunderstood.

Just before Thanksgiving, Miss Newton invited Smith to a leap-year party, and, of course, Smith was walking on air for a few days. Elwell was correspondingly downcast, and applied to me, as a friend of his, to put in a good word for him with the young woman. I called that evening. As it happened, the conversation ran in such a fashion that I was unable to work in anything about my friend, nevertheless, my motive had been to do him a favor, and when Miss Newton did invite him to the next party, I was surely not to be blamed for accepting his thanks; and yet he afterward reproached me for it.

On account of my friendship for Elwell, I watched the affair with no little interest. Miss Newton, I observed, treated both the rivals with the same tantalizing combination of coolness and encouragement—the combination that serves to vary the monotony of a co-educational institution. As a mere spectator, I was in a position to take notice of these things.

As my interest in the situation increased, I even made so bold as to call on Miss Newton occasionally, in my official capacity, you might say; and so, not unnaturally, I learned that Smith and Elwell had each asked her to the Prom, and that she had promised to give her answer the last day before the Christmas holidays, at a sleighride given by her sorority. In due course of time the invitations were issued, and I was so fortunate as to draw one.

Now, at a sleighride, I confess, I am inclined to be a little selfish. I covet the warm corner under the driver's seat, and, as a matter of possible interest, I usually get it. This night was no exception; with all due haste I secured my seat. But I was not to sit alone. Miss Newton, either directed by fate or impelled by the sharpness of the weather, sought out the identical part of the sleigh. Here was surely a happening over which I had no control. Fortunately, there was room for both of us (a sleighride at best is an informal affair), and I must confess again that, for all of my spectator's attitude, it was pleasant to have Miss Newton so near.

The rest of the party, some eighteen in all, crowded into the sleigh in short order, and we started on our trip—a curiously interesting one, as it proved. The night was dark, delightfully so, and we under the driver's seat were completely hidden from view, half buried in the straw. Miss Newton sat on the left-hand side of the sleigh, I on the right. The crowd began to sing; she joined in, and I was about to do so myself, when I noticed, carefully edging up our way, the unmistakable forms of Smith and Elwell—Smith on her side, and Elwell on mine. They had located her by her voice. Here was the crucial point of the whole affair, had I only realized it. If I had made known my location, the trouble would never have happened, but some instinct told me to keep still, and, after all, one's instinct is his oldest adviser. Some one came up on Miss Newton's side, and I heard a voice—Smith's voice—say: "Miss Newton, you were going to decide to-night."

"I have decided," she said quietly. Something in her voice must have told him.

"And it is not I?"

"No," said Miss Newton.

What was I to do? I could not help hearing. I could not make my presence known. Miss Newton seemed to have forgotten me. I felt a gentle pressure on my arm. Some one was looking up into my face. It was Elwell. He had mistaken me for Miss Newton. I have since thought that his face must have worn quite an appealing look. At the time I was wondering how closely I had shaved. I wore a stocking cap like hers but there the resemblance ceased, I fancied. I looked over to where Miss Newton had been sitting, but she had moved down into the body of the sleigh.

Before I could say a word Elwell's hand had found mine in the dark, and the combination of big fur mitten and excitement must have covered the discrepancy. I had no idea he had advanced so far in her favor.

"Grace," he said, "you told me I should know to-night." What was I to say? Obviously, my voice would betray me. I must put him off some way. I shook my head.

"You don't mean 'no,' Grace," he asked in a queer tone of voice. Here was indeed a dilemma. I thought of Miss Newton. Had I the right to accept for her under any conditions? Surely she was the one to do that, and she could do it later. If I should shake my head again, would it not lead to another question, and then what embarrassing complications! If I nodded my head, it would make my "no" emphatic. I nodded my head.

Poor Elwell, I felt sorry for him, he was so dispirited. He sat back and said never a word. I was almost on the point of speaking, but the thought of poor Smith, refused in earnest, came to me, and my pity all went out to him. Elwell's first disappointment, I considered, would only make his final acceptance the sweeter. Then the crowd began to sing again, and as I listened to Miss Newton, it occurred to me that she had a charming voice. I almost envied Elwell when I thought of the pleasant surprise in store for him.

We were bound for a little country inn for a dance and supper, and in a very few minutes, it seemed to me, we reached the place. Here there were new developments. Neither Smith nor Elwell, to the general surprise, asked Miss Newton to dance, neither asked her to supper, and so it fell on me to do both. I appeal to any one, if I could have done otherwise under the circumstances. As a friend of Elwell, if for no other reason, it devolved upon me.

Smith and Elwell, of course, misunderstood it all. We were going out to the sleigh again. I was standing next to Elwell, not talking to him, when Smith came up. I think to this day he intended to be courteous, but Elwell couldn't see it that way.

"Elwell," he said pleasantly, "there was no need of your friend taking Miss Newton to supper. I understand. You have my congratulations."

From a purely psychological standpoint, Elwell was interesting to watch. His whole attitude showed the intense feeling of insult added to injury.

"Is your sarcasm pleasant to you?" said he in a low tone. "Was it for that purpose you left Miss Newton alone to-night? It is beautifully worked out. I may be able to repay you"

Here my conscience got the better of me. "Let me explain," I broke in, but Smith had turned and walked off.

"I'm not blaming you," said Elwell, "you simply walked into Smith's plan. Let's talk about something more agreeable."

Now, could any one untangle such a mess as that? The first attempt at explanation would involve one in half a dozen compromising situations, unpreventable as they might have been. I decided I would think the matter over. And poor Miss Newton! Obviously, neither Smith nor Elwell would speak to her about the Prom again, and yet how she must have wondered at Elwell's silence. Some one ought to take her for his sake, and I was the friend of Elwell.

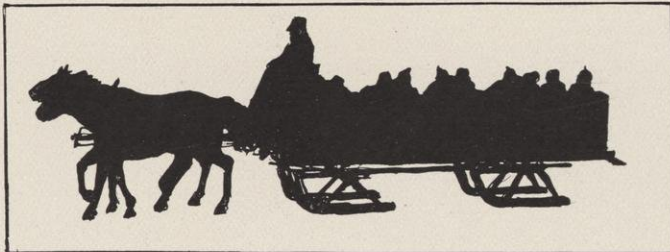

On the way home, Miss Newton and I sat under the driver's seat again.

"I believe you were going to decide to-night about the Prom," I said.

"Yes," she told me, and looked down to where Elwell sat talking foolishly to another girl. My heart went out to the poor fellow.

"Will you go with me?"

And that is how I came to take Miss Newton to the Prom.

The Plaint of the Tackling Dummy

A DIALOGUE.

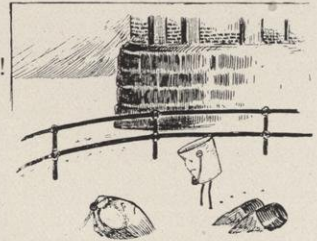

Dummy :
“O LET me burst my canvas sides and die!
This world’s a dreary place;
Neglected, slighted, battered, here I lie
In absolute disgrace.
All honors done, all flags unfurled,
Pass worth and merit by;
This is a cruel wretched world—
O let me burst my canvas sides and die!”

Water Pail :

“ Good friend, your dreary, pessimistic views
Are proof of dining late;
You have, ’tis clear, a classic case of ‘ blues,’
To grumble at your fate.
How diff’rent were your words when Randall rang with loud and long hurrahs!
You spoke not then of death, or pain or pang—
This change, pray tell the cause.”

Dummy :

“ How many deeds of valor have I done!
What brunts of battle borne!
How much is due to me of victories won!
Yet—have I emblems worn?
’Tis I who taught the tackle his fell art,
But he the ‘ W ’ wears, not I!
To him the co-ed gives her trusting heart,
While me she passes by.”

Water Pail :

“ Your words are true, good friend, and wholly right,
Of victories you’re the cause;
But placing you with ‘ W ’ men were slight,
To give you their applause.
No fair one’s eyes your prowess e’er could miss,
No heart your greater charms;
That co-eds pass you by is due to this—
You have, alas, no arms!”

Dummy:

“Then let me burst my canvas sides and die!
For what is glory—fame;
Unless reflected in a fair one’s eye,
What gain, I ask, what gain?
If, lacking arms, still down the coming years
All co-eds pass me by,
I’ve nothing more to live for—spare your tears—
O let me burst my canvas sides and die!”

Reuben, Reuben, Quit Your Joking!

“Who’s that who’s spielin’ over there?”
Said Freshie on Parade.
“That’s Neckerman, a-crackin’ jokes!”
The foxy Sophomore said.
“And wherefore do those fellows laugh?”
Asked Freshie on Parade.
“They’re Cardinal reporters, boy!”
The foxy Sophomore said.

“For they got their jobs from Reuben, and they have to learn the knack
Of laughing loud and lengthily when Reuben makes a crack,
And he who doesn’t laugh enough, he promptly gets the sack,
When Neckerman is punning after dinner!”

“It must be nice to work up there,”
Said Freshie on Parade.
“Not on your life, not on your life!”
The foxy Sophomore said.
“And wherefore is it not so nice?”
Said Freshie on Parade.
“I guess you’ve never heard those jokes!”
The foxy Sophomore said.

“They’re senile wrecks of long ago that Reuben springs as new—
It seems like laughing at a corpse that died in 1402.
Back off! O Freshie innocent, t’would be all day with you
If Reuben got to punning after dinner.”

Manager Rogers Speaks

Production a Certain Success.—Proceeds to be Given to Charity.
Mr. Rogers a Prominent Student

“The { team
club
play } is progressing rapidly,” said { Manager Leader } Paul B. Rogers in an interview with a Cardinal reporter to-day. “Our Business Manager has been making rapid strides toward the completion of the arrangements for the { meet.
trip.
play. } We expect to make the { meet
trip
play } as great a success as it has been in preceding years. As regards the personnel of the { team, club,
cast, } it is far above the average, and is practicing daily for the performance.”

The net proceeds of the season will be turned over by the management to the Portage Home for Incurables.

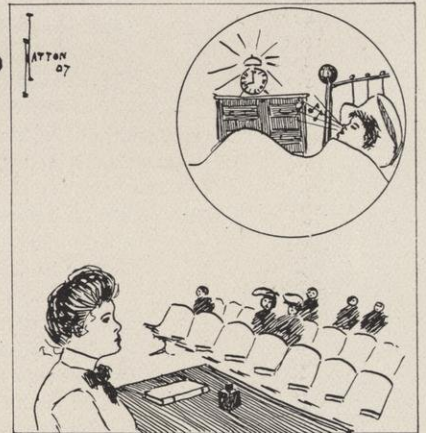

Mr. Rogers is a prominent student, and beside the present production has managed everything there is to manage in the school. We are confident that if the { team club
play } is a success this year it will be entirely due to Mr. Rogers' untiring personal efforts.

WHEN THE WISE ARE PREOCCUPIED

Miss Sterling, as she came in one morning
And quickly looked over her class,
Observed that a few were not present;
And such things, of course, must not pass.

With mien of exceeding great wisdom
She took not much pain to disguise,
She said with alarming directness,
“Will those who are absent please rise!”

He—“I think they ought to give us fellows credit for these hops!”
She—“If it's such hard work we'll sit down!”

I GROW HAIR

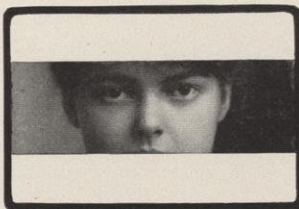

The Photo herewith was taken from life after only two weeks' use of this magic compound.

Gentlemen:—I have used EDWARD'S HAIR RESTORER for the past two weeks, and the accompanying picture will show the result. When I began the use of this Magical Fertilizer, my pate was as bald as Prof. Scott's—yes, Henry Hacker's. Now I have a head of flowing thick hair, which takes two hours to dry. It also gives one a pleasing subject for conversation. I can recommend it in good faith. Sincerely,

The Girl and the Coin

THE afternoon was one in August, quiet and dreary as Madison never is except in the sultry days after the summer school is over. In its survey of the earth that afternoon, the sun found no spot on its surface more remote from life, more hopelessly numb to existence, than the deserted Latin Quarter.

Olivier, the last of the summer school students, with his suit-case in one hand and a single five-cent piece buried somewhere in the depths of his trousers pocket, sped across the lawn to the street and hailed the last car that would make his train. He followed for a block or more, hallooing and whistling, before the conductor chose to heed the summons. In his heart Olivier cursed the man for a stupid, sodden lump of humanity; but the day was too warm for an exchange of angry words, and, perforce, he was content to deposit his suit-case as speedily as might be and sink into an end seat. He mopped his brow, felt in his inside pocket to make certain of his ticket's safety, saw to it that his precious nickel had not been shaken from its repository, and, finally, satisfied that all was right, settled down comfortably. The breeze fanned up by the moving car presently had restored him to his customary equanimity. Moreover, his seat neighbor, being worthy of attention, completed the work of removing from his thoughts the last lingering hint of his recent annoyance.

This seat companion was a fair-faced girl of some one-and-twenty, becomingly garbed in a shirt-waist and a hat of white lace. She was unknown to Olivier, and yet she bore that air, indefinable but "fetching" nevertheless, possessed by all Varsity girls. From his stealthy but oft-repeated glances he got this result: Her eyes were brown—limpid, thoughtful eyes, for once he caught them turning from their apparently steadfast forward gaze to take a surreptitious sweeping glance of his own face; there was character in the silhouette of the countenance, likewise gentleness; and the chin by its firmness lost little in roundness, and absolutely nothing in plumpness. Yes, the effect of it all was striking, certainly, and Olivier longed for the opportunity to open up a conversation.

More than once on similar occasions, relying upon the free-masonry existing among college students, he had boldly broken the ice. But on the high-bred face of this girl there was plainly written the repulse with which such an attempt would promptly be met.

And yet, sore against his will, Olivier was fated to address her on his own initiative. The conductor was slow in collecting fare. For the last several minutes he had been engaged in an altercation with a full-bearded passenger, who strenuously insisted upon tendering, in lieu of fare, a much worn Canadian coin, which the representative of the corporation as emphatically rejected.

Olivier, his mind brought back to earth by the noise of the dispute, reached down into his pocket to have his lone nickel in readiness on demand.

"Well," he reflected, "it's back to the old man's office now till October. But I've had my fling and I guess I oughtn't to have any kick coming. Talk about drinking life to the lees, not a cigar, no tobacco, not even a cigarette paper left—nothing but this little dinky coin. One copper less and I guess I'd a' had to telegraph for money. Funny, ain't it, how a fellow'll get strapped like this? Wonder how it would seem to be out in the world with no old man to fall back on." He turned the coin meditatively. "The old man's certainly given me a square deal. He's given me more dough than I really ought to have, I suppose. Gee, but I've had a time this summer! That was a mighty nifty bunch of fairies up at the Dells on that geological trip. I wonder if Marie believed all I told her. Pshaw, of course not! Varsity girls understand these things better than—Oh, well, I can't help it now, all the fellows—"

He rubbed the coin between his palms in his remorse.

"Well, I'll have to sort of—"

He never finished his reflection, for at that moment a dreadful thing happened. That little coin, so low in value ordinarily, yet so precious now, had somehow managed to trickle through his fingers and was gone, apparently beyond all recovery. If it had rolled out of sight on the floor of the car, or dropped to the street, that seemingly would have been ill-luck enough; but it was far worse than that, and no wonder the startled look in his eyes speedily gave way to one of positive alarm as he realized the full extent of the disaster. There it lay, not on the floor, just out of reach, not even beneath the skirts of the fair unknown, but shining most maliciously as though it found a wicked joy in Olivier's misfortune, the coin peeped forth from one of the small pair of Oxfords the brown-eyed maiden wore. It stuck there only a moment, just a little below the shapely ankle, which even in his bewilderment Olivier noted was well-turned. Then as she gave her foot a startled jerk, it crept swiftly down between leather and hose and was lost to view. A look of wonder and surprise came over her countenance, and then the situation dawning upon her, the hot color began to steal over her cheeks, and not content with that, dyed her ears, forehead, and neck a glowing crimson.

He sped across the lawn

"I—I beg your pardon," said Olivier, timidly and anxiously.

Within, her good temper was struggling with anger and mortification. The balance was for a moment doubtful; but ultimately the former triumphed over the latter, and through her color she smiled kindly enough.

"Have I your money?" she inquired, a trifle coyly.

It was Olivier's turn to blush.

"Oh, don't mention it, I beg of you," he expostulated; "it was a mere beggarly nickel."

"No, no, I insist upon repaying you. I can't give you the original one,"—she smiled teasingly—"but I can give you one every bit as good." And disregarding his embarrassment she fumbled in her purse.

It was again her turn to become confused.

"Why," she stammered, "I must have left all my money at home. I paid the conductor with a ticket and"—

"Oh, I beg of you not to consider the matter at all," pleaded Olivier.

"I am so sorry," she answered, but her laughing eyes belied her words.

Olivier reached for his suit-case.

"I fear I must leave the car," he said, haltingly.

"Oh," she cried, the truth dawning upon her, "that was your last nickel!"

A sickly smile crept over Olivier's face.

"Why, you see," he said by way of explanation, "I've been to summer school and I've spent a little too much on the side. I calculated I could just land at Hargersville."

"Oh," she interrupted, "do you live at Hargersville? Perhaps you know Miss Trent."

"Indeed I do; why, we live next door."

"I met her at the University of Chicago last summer and we became such great friends."

"Why, then you're Miss Thompson."

"How did you know that?"

"Miss Trent did not fail to mention you."

"And you are Olivier?"

"Yes, but how—"

"Because Miss Trent spoke of you in such glowing terms that I could not very easily forget the description and,"—she added slyly, "the original does not fall far short of the eulogy. But really this is too bad. Will that dreadful man actually put you off?"

"I'm afraid so, bag and baggage," replied poor Olivier.

"Oh, dear, here he comes now," she cried, clasping her hands; "perhaps if you'll just look the other way I—" she blushed scarlet.

Olivier's obedient eyes began to survey the signs over the stores along the street.

He heard a rustling, a tugging, a quick intaking of breath and little mutterings, which in a man would be set down as imprecations. Then something dropped to the floor, like the sound of a light slipper, but he dared not look to see.

"Here," she said presently.

Then Olivier looked. Her hair was tumbled about and her face was prettily flushed. She dropped the warm coin into his hand and as it touched his palm the spot of contact seemed to burn.

"Fare!" called the conductor.

Olivier reluctantly dropped the sacred piece of metal into the man's profane hand. As he did so he looked at Miss Thompson from the corner of his eye.

But she was demurely regarding the street car advertisements of Johnson's Best Yellow Soap. Only a pair of her very bright eyes and a loose string dangling on the floor betrayed the recent little episode.

Wanted: A Chaperone

BETTY was irresistible last night; her lively humor was so captivating, her manner so puzzling and yet so fascinating, that my own spirits rose in sympathy.

"Betty," I said, leaning forward to catch the sparkle in her eyes, "Betty, there's going to be a sleighride party out to Middleton—the Green Armour, you know."

"Oh, what an innovation," with amusing sarcasm, "there's nothing now-a-days like things without precedent; when is this singular form of amusement to take place!"

"Saturday night, and—well, I should like a chaperone." (This with an insinuating glance that was truly wicked.) "It's considered the proper wrinkle, isn't it?"

Stiffening slightly and lifting her pretty chin, she retorted, "There's no question but that you NEED one, Tom!"

"I'll not dispute you there," I said, good-naturedly, "that's the fundamental truth which I intended to impress upon you."

"You should have known that you wouldn't need to waste words trying to convince me upon that point," Betty persisted, meaning to hold her ground. "I've known you too long and too well."

"I'm so glad we're agreed—such moments are very rare," I returned. "Now, since we've decided that I'm in crying need of a chaperone for this sleighride, perhaps you could suggest who would be glad to act in this capacity?"

"Oh, you are considering it a privilege,"—leaning forward with exaggerated surprise—"the natural conceit of man," she added.

"But, Betty, don't you think it would be fun to go?" I said simply, forgetting my former stand.

"Of course you would want some one quite a little older than you," evasively. "Now there's Miss Pugsly, that post-grad—"

I laughed heartily at the suggestion in spite of my efforts at composure. Miss Pugsly was nearing forty, angular, set, and formidable, with a sort of "woman's rights" air about her. "You don't seem to be on to the fact that the younger a chaperone is, the more nearly she attains to the modern ideal of such a necessity," convincingly. Then, as I watched her toss her head in defiance, braced for another stand, I realized how fruitless would be my efforts to try to make her give in. Finally, point blank, "Wouldn't you kindly condescend to take the burden upon yourself?"

"Not as a chaperone," moving her dainty foot back and forth on the rug and scrutinizing the tip of her patent-leather.

"Women can be so plagued exasperating," warmly. "Will you go with me, Betty?"

Carefully spreading out her lace handkerchief over her knee, she said, after a little pause, "If you had only asked me that long ago," deliberately, "I could have told you that Billy wanted me to go to the Hop Saturday night."

"Hang Billy!" I exclaimed. "That lobster is always butting in!" starting up angrily for my coat and hat. "Some people never have sense enough to mind their own affairs!" I muttered.

"But, Tom," Betty said sweetly, "I didn't say I was going with Billy, you know."

My Lady from Madison

MY DEAR LADY FROM MADISON:

Would you please answer the following questions?

1. Don't you think "gym" suits very becoming to girls?
2. Just to show how much they thought of me, the sophomore girls gave a spread for me in the "gym" office, and upon my honor I forgot to go. I was really out driving with a senior girl. I'm sure they feel hurt. What shall I do?

POTTER.

Answer, 1. Yes, we think gymnasium suits very becoming as well as hygienic.

2. This is a very serious case. Such a breach of good manners in one who ought to know better is hard to forgive. I'm afraid you have lowered yourself considerably in the young ladies' estimation. But if you buy each one several boxes of flowers and a goodly supply of bonbons you may come again into favor. One word of advice, if I may—scatter not your affection too profusely.

ALEXIUS BAAS.—Yes, we appreciate that it is a great trial for you to have a fine voice, which, as you say, the girls admire. We would advise you to refrain from singing in public for some time. Perhaps, then, the co-eds will forget about you for a while.

A. C. L. BROWN.—No, we do not think it would be wise for you to be too persistent in paying attention to the girls of one sorority. If refused by two of the members, by no means ask a third. It will save "hu-mil-i-a-tion."

MR. HOWARD.—As the temptation to stare at her is very great, I would advise you to take a seat further away. Staring at a girl is exceedingly bad form.

MADISON.—From your letter we would infer that you are extremely conceited and self-conscious. You might possibly be more successful with the young ladies of your institution if you made yourself less conspicuous and less effeminate.

ANDY PLAYTER.—Yes, being with a girl every day would naturally lead her to believe that your intentions were serious.

* * *

HARRY WHEELOCK.—As long as you enjoy the society of Madison girls during the year, it would seem to us no more than right that you should also take them to the Junior Prom.

CARL RUSSELL FISH.—We fully sympathize with you, but why do you not wear modest, quiet neckties? We would advise you to always wear your Beta pin; you will avoid much gossip.

(H.S.)

(Yr. H.)

JIM CASSERLY.—Don't worry much about gossips.

Is it proper for us to take a different girl every evening? We should like to confine ourselves to one, but we know they all like us and we can't bear to disappoint them.—The Inbuschi.

Answer. Yes, it is perfectly proper in every way, and we think that it is a good means to make lots of friends among the young ladies.

A. B. DEAN.—Do not let that trouble you, for we are sure every one knows your mother lives there too.

I've Got to be a Military Man

I'd much prefer to flunk in drill if it wasn't for the hops
 Where an ordinary man can not get in.
 If he goes there uniformless, at the door he always stops,
 No matter how he shovels out the tin.
 So they march us and they tramp us
 Up the hill and 'round the campus,
 Till we swear we'll join the signal corps the next year if we can.
 But then the contemplation
 Of that frequent recreation
 Alleviates the sorrows of a military man.

CHORUS.

I had to join the military-ary,
 Or I'd never get a dance with Jane or Mary.
 So if you plan to be in the van,
 You'll have to be a military man.

(Sung with great success by Irma Kussel of the Germanistische Gesellschaft.)

PRETTY GIRL PAPERS

BY ABBY S. MAYHEW

Answers to Questions

A. E. E., Chadbourne.—Later hours, regular visits to the drug store, and more "fish nights" at the Hall will help you to obtain the desired pallor.

IRMA K., Chadbourne.—No, we don't approve of late Sunday night suppers, nor do we think walks after the library closes are conducive to health.

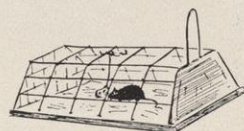

MABEL CH—, University Ave.—We wouldn't allow him to bring a box of candy every day. Too much sugar is harmful. Flowers and books are less apt to prove injurious gifts.

ANNA S., Chadbourne.—Yes, the windows should always be raised both from the top and from the bottom. But protect yourself against burglars by having a screen, or something like that, put in, and leave your valuables in safe keeping. Nervous shocks are very dangerous.

HARRIET —.—We know of no reliable remedy for turn-up noses except to cultivate a great meekness of spirit which might alleviate the trouble.

Besides, to some people, aspiring noses are not unbecoming.

ORAL S.—As you say, peppermint drops are very useful in most diseases and mental disorders. They may now be obtained with chocolate coating should the plain article be distasteful.

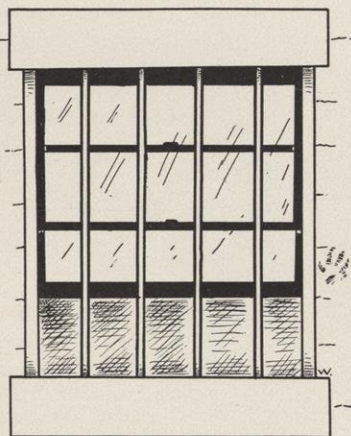

EDITH MC—.—We should advise another mouse-trap.

EDNA M. K., Chadbourne.—Though we consider dancing a healthful exercise we would not recommend it to anybody whose conscience condemns it. In that case the after-effects would be apt to be anything but pleasant.

MAY DOUGLASS.—Do not frequent the Pal so much, and do not consume so many bitter sweets.

BERNICE H.—It is not advisable to expose yourself to night air and lake breezes, and it is positively dangerous to sit on stone benches after sunset.

THE INNOCENT ABROAD

A senior girl and a freshman fellow came from the same town. She had always been a sympathetic friend of the freshmen, and had seen to it that those from her home town were properly introduced into the mysteries of Chadbourne Hall. At the moment of which we speak, the telephone rings and the freshman is called to the phone.

"This is May. Have you an engagement for this evening?"

"No, I don't think so."

"Well, would you like to come over to the hall and make fudges?"

"Yes, I would, but you see I have so much work—"

"O don't mind that! The work can wait."

"Yes, but my roommate is going to have company and—"

"Let your roommate do the honors alone this time. You had better come."

"Well, yes; but the fact is I don't know the number of your room!"

Men Girls Would Like to Marry

RECENT replies of representative girls as to their masculine ideals. The answers are various and very amusing; in many cases remarkable revelations.

IRMA K: My ideal is rather slight in build. He must be a law student, belong to a law fraternity, be exclusively attentive to me, not object to my going out with other men and must give me a good time.

MABEL C: All I can say is: "I have found him and he is a lab man."

CORA N: My tastes are very changeable and my moods vary exceedingly. Often I think I prefer the dreamer, sometimes the man of action. But I'm not certain. I'm waiting for him to come.

CELINE B: I don't care to state my preferences. I'm afraid I will scare some one away, don't you know. I like most men as long as they like me. But he must have lots of money and be an Eastern man. The Western men are not cultured enough—though I like some Westerners real well.

A. E.: I like a man that is a man and not an apology for one.

ORA M: He must be a Tau Beta Pi, interested in Christian Endeavor, and willing to help me in my church work.

JULIA C: My ideal is a fine all 'round man. One who has a strong mind as well as a strong body; a master but not a tyrant.

LOTTIE H: I have always admired a self-made man—a man with lots of push to him.

BERNICE H: I do like humor in a man; one who is clever and entertaining, and who spends his money freely. I prefer a man of about my own age.

FLORENCE D: My ideal must be rich and fine looking; a fraternity man, one fond of travel and enjoyment. I should like a manageable man.

GENEVIEVE E: My ideal is the very "parfict gentle knight," who loves me intensely and is capable of appreciating my histrionic ability, and has skill in turning pretty phrases and paying charming compliments.

FRED S: I should consider a man's family first. Then he must have a comfortable income and a good position—a college man preferred. I like a great deal of attention, too.

GWENDOLYN J: I admire a man with noble ideals, a sense of humor, and a generous pocketbook.

DAWN W: A military man for me. I do not ask for wealth, if he only loves me.

LORETTA C: Must be fine looking and dress well; one that will take me around a great deal, and give me a good time, and make a great deal of me.

LIL T: I'm in doubt; but I'm keeping them guessing until I find out what I DO want.

The University Critic on Future Books

I.

ONE of the epoch-making text-books in modern history has just been published by Dr. Sellery, of the University of Wisconsin. The specially gifted author has at last accomplished what he has so long promised to his classes—he has produced a text-book, which is just what everybody needs, which lacks all the faults of similar works and contains all their good points. Dr. Sellery combines clearness with elegance of style and his work is a marvel of literary skill as well as of historical accuracy and philosophical insight. It is a book that no one can afford to go without and it will bring to its author well-merited fame.

II.

Professor Cairns has revised his "Forms on Discourse," and has succeeded in making it drier than ever.

III.

Dr. Elsom has published the results of his experiments in beauty culture in his new book, "The Value of Beauty and its Attainment." The book contains pictures of many well-known co-eds before and after taking the course. The illustrations will prove a revelation to many who have wondered at the increased beauty of their friends. It is believed that the book will induce many more to take the course. The method of beauty culture employed by Dr. Elsom was less successful with the men than the women. An immense sale is predicted for the volume.

IV.

Miss Kussel has published a new novel, called "After Library Hours." It is a fascinating story, well written and the author shows in her work that she is thoroughly familiar with the subject she has treated. The book is full of thrilling incidents and can not help but fascinate and interest the reader.

V.

The latest production from the pen of our gifted registrar is a serial story, "Flunks." Specimen copies have been mailed to a few favored individuals but great secrecy is observed by them as to the contents.

VI.

A pamphlet of great interest to students has just been published by Professor Frost. It is a treatise on "The Periodical Disease of the Eyes Prevalent at the University of Wisconsin." Professor Frost has thoroughly investigated this dread disease and has also succeeded in finding some very effective remedies, which he discusses at length in his work.

VII.

A book from the pen of the popular Professor Pyre is always sure to find a ready welcome, but the author has outdone himself in his latest work, "A Compendium of Allerlei Wissenschaft." The book contains, among other valuable things, a satisfactory philosophy of life, an unfailling recipe for successful literary productions, a special treatise on the making of oyster patties, but the most interesting feature of the book, which will insure it the greatest popularity, is the Appendix, which takes up about three-quarters of the volume and is entitled, "The Best Jokes I Have Cracked, the Best Puns I Have Perpetrated and the Best Slams I Have Given." No loyal Wisconsin student could ever read the appendix and not feel a longing to resume his seat in "Sunny's" class. We are sure the book will be deservedly popular.

VIII.

A new book that is creating quite a stir in University of Wisconsin circles is "Bessie Luellen," a character sketch by Albert Ramstad. The author has spent considerable time in the study of his subject and is fully competent to write about it.

IX.

A very useful and instructive work is Miss Elnora Dahl's latest publication, "The Proper Use of the Telephone." It is a very practical little book, the result of much experience by the author.

Archibald Berton Braley As He Really Is

"A H, YOU know Berton Braley? Tell me about him!" people often say to me. They are not satisfied with the stories of Cardinal reporters, and Sphinx reviewers; they want something that the press representatives can not give, something about the man himself, the man at home, in classes, away from the "public eye," if it be possible for so prominent a man to hide himself from the "public eye." Since the appearance of the "Sonnets of a Freshman" these questions have grown more frequent and insistent. Some of them, with the author's trustful permission, I am going to answer here.

As is well known, this famous author lives in Madison, Wisconsin. His charming personality makes a visit to his home a most pleasurable event. The last time that I had that pleasure, Mr. Braley was in a very communicative mood, and graciously told me of how he first came to conceive of the character of his hero of the "Sonnets."

But stay, I have not told you of the "den," which is such a good index of the character of the editor of the Sphinx. Many beautiful pillows are artistically piled on the couch. The walls are decorated with the original drawings of many of the Sphinx masterpieces, witnessing Mr. Braley's well known excellent taste in art. By far the most interesting thing in this extremely interesting room is the desk, piled with manuscript, at which Mr. Braley's works were composed. One could devote pages to this desk, but we must hasten to satisfy the curiosity of our readers concerning the origin of this author's most famous creation.

Leaning back in his armchair, and taking a whiff at his pet briar, Mr. Braley told me this astounding story: "One night," he said, "many months ago before I had written any of the 'Sonnets,' I had been to a particularly enjoyable smoker. When I reached home, I was rather restless, and decided to read for an hour or two. Picking up my favorite 'George Ade,' I settled myself for a very enjoyable time. I must have fallen asleep in my chair, for soon it seemed as if I were walking up the hill. But, strangely, I had not my own personality at all, but seemed to be a freshman, and a particularly fresh freshman at that, with all the awkwardness and greenness usual to the species. My thoughts and feelings, if you can believe it, were those of a freshman, and when I awoke, the feeling was still so vivid that I jotted down my impressions then and there. Thus was born the first of the justly famous 'Sonnets,' as you are pleased to call them. My power of concentration is such that since then I have been able to call up the personality of the freshman at will, and so have been able to complete the series." Mr. Braley then discussed the probability of the theory that the astral body of some freshman of former days had taken possession of his spirit. He utterly denied the rumor that the "Sonnets" are autobiographical.

There are many anecdotes which might be told of this gentleman, but many of them are spurious, as is also too often the case when the eager thirst of the public for information about a famous man causes unscrupulous writers like W. S. Underwood to draw on their imagination when facts fail them. I can not do better, however, in closing this sketch, than to quote a favorite anecdote.

Mr. Braley had been engaged in composing "Spring Thoughts" for the next issue of the Sphinx, and, very naturally, was unable to spend much time on the reading of some poems assigned in one of the literary courses which he, notwithstanding his greatness, attends. On his failure to recite, the instructor remarked that Mr. Braley might say, as Dr. Mousser is reported to have said, "I do not READ poems, I WRITE them."

This epigrammatic summary of Mr. Braley's concentration on his creative work, and the praiseworthy consistency with which he allows nothing else to disturb it, expresses better than words of mine could the estimate in which A. Berton Braley's work will be held by future generations.

*Love me, love my book.
Who loves too much wine,
Women and song,
Will be dead broke his Whole life long.*

The Bench

There's a bench on the bank of the shore of the lake
Which is sung of by poets galore.
It's the theme of Friend Braley, of Winslow, of Blake;
It's a subject for sonnets predestined by fate;
It has served now for Badgers a score.
But we thought it would be a stunt somewhat neat
If we spoke not a word of this time-honored seat.

So the bench on the bank of the shore of the lake
Is destined to lose all its glory.
No amorous sonnets, predestined by fate,
Of wooers and lovers who sit there quite late
Shall ever break into our story.
For we thought it would be a stunt somewhat neat,
If we spoke not a word of this time-honored seat.

That Reminds Me

(The Brightest Things Students Have Laughed Over)

Prof. Ely of the University of Wisconsin is very absent-minded and depends greatly on his wife for the management of all practical affairs. It was a great comfort to have her with him at a visit he recently paid to the president of Colorado University.

One day the women of the party were going to a reception late in the afternoon. The men were to follow them later and meet them at a dinner party. Prof. Ely watched his wife depart. Pride and satisfaction filled his heart as he looked at her; but when the trailing skirts had disappeared in the carriage a feeling of desolation and helplessness came over him and a great doubt filled his soul. Frantically he rushed down the steps and called after the departing carriage in tones of deepest despair and agony :

“ Anna, Anna, do I know where my clothes are? ”

This same Prof. Ely was walking along State Street in Madison one day, deeply absorbed in thought. An old college friend hailed him and engaged him in conversation, in the course of which he asked :

“ You’re married, ain’t you? Let me see, what is your wife’s maiden name? ”

The head of the economic department of the University of Wisconsin looked rather puzzled for an instant, and then answered, “ Ah, yes; my wife’s maiden name! Ah, yes—It’s Morris, Anna Morris.” His friend looked at him rather dubiously but refrained from further remarks.

That night at the dinner table, Prof. Ely told his wife that he had met an old friend.

“ And, Anna,” he added, “ he asked me what your maiden name is. Why do you suppose he asked that? ”

Mrs. Ely ignored the question and asked apprehensively :

“ What did you tell him, Theo? ”

“ Why, Morris, of course.”

“ Why, Theo, you knew better.”

“ Why Anna, isn’t your name Morris—Anna Morris? ”

“ Oh, Theo, it’s Anderson—Anna Morris Anderson.”

A Slight Mistake

Oral Shunk, an excellent Latin and Greek student, very warmly defended her favorite studies against the charge of uselessness which one of her friends was fond of urging against them. One night they were “ having it out ” as usual and the discussion waxed very warm. The classical student brought forward all possible arguments, good, bad and indifferent.

“ Just think! ” she said at last, her cheek glowing, her eyes flashing and her slight figure all a-quiver with excitement. “ Just think—if you knew no Latin and Greek, why, you wouldn’t know what even the titles of big things in literature meant.” “ Oh, girls, you’ll never settle that dispute to-night or any other time. Let's sing something," said the other friend, rocking forward automatically and helping herself to the popcorn.

The music had a soothing influence. At last some one suggested that they sing Gaudeamus Igitur, when our excellent Latin and Greek student retorted: "No! I can't sing DUTCH!"

They had already taken several views of the room and had just lighted the fourth flash-light, when a heartrending scream came from the adjoining chamber where Dr. Morrill dwelt. A sound as of somebody falling down stairs followed. The girls opened the door, but, seeing no one in the hall, they continued their photography. When they had finished and the girl with the camera was ready to go home, the others escorted her to the door. When they got out into the corridor a frightened face looked at them from behind a heavy wardrobe, and a voice, tremulous with fear, said: "You must not—you must not go home yet, the storm isn't over. There was a frightful flash of lightning just about five minutes ago. You better stay with me behind the wardrobe. You can't see it here. Oh, I'm so scared, and—and the lightning looked as though it came from your room, too."

The Lost Mop

The Flint family were comfortably established before the blazing fire in the study. Suddenly, Mrs. Flint remembered. "Oh, dear!" she said to her husband, "I nearly forgot; we had to kill those kittens to-day. Before you leave will you bury them? They're in the pail at the back door. Please bury them deep." "Yes, yes," nodded the professor, deeply absorbed in his book, "yes, I won't forget." In spite of his answer he did almost forget, but remembered just in time. He ran for a spade and then found the pail outside the back door as he had been told.

The next morning the maid came running up in great agitation. "Plase mum, plase, I can't find the mop any place and there's a pail full of dead cats at the back door." And it took them some time to unearth the useful article, for the professor had buried the contents "DEEP."

Little Margaret came home from school in great excitement. "Mama," she called, "Helen wasn't in school to-day. Her mother said she couldn't go."

"Why, what's the matter with Helen, dear?" asked her mother.

"Oh, she's sick, she's got ruffles in her head."

"Ruffles in her head!" ejaculated her mother. "What's that?"

Margaret knew no more, but insisted Helen had ruffles in her head. The next day Margaret's mother met Helen's mother and asked her concerning Helen's condition.

"Oh, she has a bad cold, and some gatherings are forming in her head."

Dr. Brown is very fond of physical exercise. Last summer he undertook to make a trip to Milwaukee on his wheel. He reached that city late at night and at once went to secure rooms at the Pfister Hotel, anticipating a good night's rest. When he applied for a room the clerk looked him over and said, "I beg your pardon, we do not take tramps here." Dr. Brown slept at the Atlas that night. His appearance was too much against him.

“WOMEN CAN NEVER RULE IN A DEMOCRACY BECAUSE A WOMAN FINDS IT IMPOSSIBLE TO SUBMIT TO THE WILL OF THE MAJORITY WHEN IT CONFLICTS WITH HER OWN INCLINATIONS.”

Thus spoke one of our learned lawmakers at the last session of the legislature.

Was it true? Possibly, at the time.

Is it true now? No!

Besides being an institution from which emanate new discoveries which startle the scientific world, new inventions which revolutionize industry and agriculture, new effusions of humor which set the universe into convulsions of hilarity, Wisconsin now has the distinction of refuting once and forever the words of the eminent statesman quoted above. And who is the heroine? ESTHER CONCKLIN!

In these days of the survival of the fittest, when self-interest occupies a goodly portion of human thought, it gives one pleasure to meet with a character willing to yield her most cherished desires, yea, almost her principles, that she might live in harmony with her surroundings. Thus did Esther Concklin, Martyr of Chadbourne Hall. Here is her story in three short chapters.

CHAPTER I

Saturday, Oct. 12, 1904, 5 p. m.

Meeting of girls at Chadbourne Hall.

Miss Meyer: “The question before the house is, shall we allow callers at the hall on Sunday evenings?”

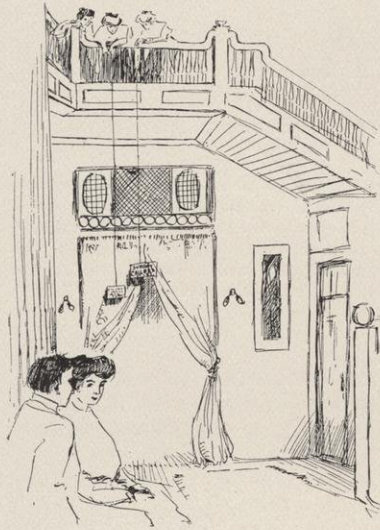

Esther Concklin: “Girls, O girls, please don’t! It would be simply awful to permit men to come here Sundays. We would be so overflown we would have to entertain them in the rotunda, if they came late. That would be dreadful. We would break all the traditions of the institution!”

CHAPTER II

Girls waving handkerchiefs. Miss Concklin weeping.

Miss Meyer: The meeting decides in favor of Sunday callers by a vote of 99 to 1.

CHAPTER III

Sunday, Oct. 13, 1904, 8:20 p. m.

Miss Concklin entertaining a caller in the rotunda of the hall. Paper signs hanging down from above.

Esther: "Well, you're here at last. I was so impatient. Isn't it perfectly grand that we can entertain callers Sunday nights now?"

Little Jack Horner sat in a corner
Eating of bakery pie;
He stuck in his thumb,
But instead of a plum,
He pulled out a little piece of solder.

Wrote a poet: "My Pegasus bids me arise
And soar on his wings thru the blue, summer skies."
But the editor wrote: "If you do, you're a fool,
For it's plain that your Peggy is only a mule."

Ye Jokes and Puns of Sunny Pyre

Ye jokes and puns of Sunny Pyre,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye blossom forth each year,
And have us think ye're new and rare?
Ye'll drive me mad, ye ancient puns,
Ye'll make my sense of justice burn.
O would ye were departed joys,
Departed never to return.

Aft have I raved in English class,
To see the girls those jokes admire;
And ilke jest sang of the love,
Its master bore to Sunny Pyre.
With desperate heart I made a pun,
Full worth I thought a hearty smile.
And ne'er a smile they gave my pun,
But laughed at Sunny's all the while.

MISS ALLEN (in wrath): "What did you get for an answer to that example?"

FRESHMAN: "Age of father, ten; age of son, four."

PROF. ROEDDER (entering a drug store): "Will it please you to sell me a box of talcum powder?"

DRUG CLERK: "Mennen's?"

PROF. ROEDDER: "Ach nein! Women's!"

Preamble to the Constitution of the Young Widows' Condolence Association:

We, the loyal sisters of the university, feeling it our duty to preserve inviolate the memory of those who have gone from us; to live in spirit with the departed; to hold forever a fond remembrance of those days when we promenaded along Lovers' Lane or drove behind one of the L. A. A. W. fast pacers; to recall those spring evenings on the lake, and a thousand other pleasant memories which were and are no more, do enact the following constitution for the Young Widows' Condolence Association.

SECTION I.

ARTICLE 1.—All female students of the University of Wisconsin who shall have attained to the age of eighteen years, and who, during their college course, shall have fallen the victim to what is known as a "college crush," shall be eligible to membership in this society, provided:

ARTICLE 2.—That the "Crusher" is no longer in college, and that in the meantime, the "Crushee" has not been afflicted with a second attack of the "college crush."

SECTION II.

ARTICLE 1.—The charter members of the Y. W. C. A. are chosen by the Self-Government Association with the co-operation of several Greek letter organizations. A unanimous vote is necessary to a choice.

ARTICLE 2.—All charter members of this society shall hold offices, their rank as officers depending upon their enthusiasm as members. The officers for the ensuing year shall be:

Chief Mourner,	- - - - -	AGNES WALSH.
Vice-Mourner,	- - - - -	EUGENIE SHEA.
Condoling Scribe,	- - - - -	JULIA COLE.
Financial Sufferer,	- - - - -	INEZ ETTER.
Executing Committee,	AGNES WALSH, EUGENIE SHEA, JULIA COLE, INEZ ETTER.
Janitor,	- - - - -	WILLIAM HAMILTON.

ARTICLE 3.—This constitution may be amended by a two-thirds vote of the association, with the consent of the Chief Mourner and the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Little Willie
Had a billy—
(It was all his own)
Little Willie
Angered billy—
(How should he have known
That a billy
Could knock silly
Even one full-grown ?)

There's a certain professor named Sunny,
To see him is well worth the money;
He's fond of the stage,
And is quite all the rage,
Though in lectures he tries to be funny!

Yes, the Prom is the time for great fun!
When all to the limit is done!
You rent a dress suit,
And a stiff hat to boot,
And then wire dad for some "Mon!"

For a' That and a' That

I've heard the girls speak of the man
They'd like to love and a' that.
The foolish things! They never can Contented be and a' that;
They want a hero scarred in war,
And marred by strife and a' that;
But the fellow whom I most adore
Is the college lad for a' that.

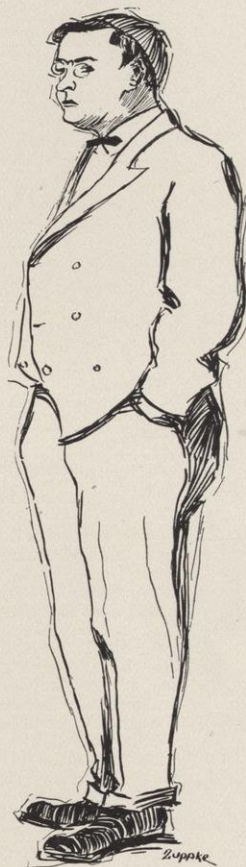

For a' that and a' that
His trousers wide and a' that,
The college chap with the small skull cap
Is the king of men for a' that!

There are drummers bold and clerks untold
Who balance books and a' that.
With bank accounts of large amounts
And credit, cash, and a' that.
They're all quite nice, the box and dice
Of laboring lads, and a' that;
But the man for me is a man to be,
Though from cash quite free, and a' that.

For a' that and a' that,
His trousers wide and a' that,
The college chap with the small skull cap
Is the king of men for a' that!

In years to come when I am done
With Madison and a' that,
And drummers bold and clerks untold
Come hovering 'round and a' that,
It'll not be strange if I should change
And think them nice for a' that.
But while I'm here, to me is dear
The college chap for a' that.

For a' that and a' that
His trousers wide and a' that.
The college chap with the small skull cap
Is the king of men for a' that!

AH THERE, THAD.

Thaddeus Brindley, sub tackle on the Wisconsin football team, a member of Beta Theta Pi and also the 1906 Junior Prom Committee, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pratt Sunday. Thaddeus is getting to be quite a husky fellow.—Whitewater (Wis.) Register.

The past week Ralph Pratt has been boarding one Thaddeus Brindley, a junior in the Agricultural course at Madison. Mr. Brindley worked for Ralph one season, and having proved himself trustworthy, Ralph left the estate in Brindley's care the other morning while he, Ralph, took the butter fat to the 8.10 train. While Ralph was gone, Manning DeWolf, a neighbor, came to the farm to get some clover seed. Mr. Brindley, who is a junior in the University of Wisconsin college of agriculture, had no difficulty in locating the seed and attending to the details incident to the purchase. Characteristically Mr. Brindley forgot that he had the money until night came and then he reluctantly passed over the coin and told of the sale. Ralph didn't say anything but went out to investigate and found that Brindley had disposed of some of the best alfalfa seed to be found in southern Wisconsin. A rush was made for the DeWolf farm but it was too late—Mr. DeWolf had sowed the seed that day. Mr. Brindley has arranged to visit Whitewater again in a few weeks or at such time when the alfalfa will be high enough to pull.—Whitewater (Wis.) Register, Tuesday, April 25.

BETA PIN IS MISSING

Not long ago Dr. Fish appeared in the large lecture room in Main hall to deliver his lecture. He was adorned in a new winter suit of brown. He placed his hand in a convenient pocket, thrusting the coat aside, and displayed an expanse of vest. The pin was missing. A murmur went up from the girls; a little laugh passed about among the men—a missing fraternity pin in college usually means an engagement.

The Madison gossips got busy and put together a yarn about Dr. Fish's engagement. But the gossips couldn't find the pin and the question, "Where's Dr. Fish's pin?" still is going the rounds.

Madison students get some consolation out of the fact that Dr. Fish has for some time been attentive to a Madison visitor, but that's a part of the story that has not been fully developed. She does not wear a Beta pin.

"But then," said a Madison co-ed, "you know a girl can wear a fraternity pin lots of places where it wouldn't be seen. The pin's gone, and all the girls have given him up. And next to 'Sunny' Pyre, he's the nicest man on the hill, too."

Dr. Fish Popular "Prof."

Dr. Fish, the man of the missing Beta pin, is among the most popular members of the university faculty. It has been his custom, with Dr. A. C. Tilton, instructor in European history, to hold informal receptions every other Thursday night for his men students. The papers—not even the Cardinal—have ever told what takes place at these meetings, and probably never will. They never have been probed by the faculty, at least to anyone's knowledge.—Milwaukee Free Press, December 25, 1904.

TRAIL OF THE SERPENT

University Juniors Plunged in Election on La Follette Lines

Political animosity ran high at the university Wednesday afternoon, when the junior class met to elect a president. In strict conformity with the rumor current for several days that no one but a supporter of Governor R. M. La Follette could get on the ticket, it was confirmed to-day when an organized body elected a capitol employee, Ralph Hetzel. After three secret meetings, at one of which in particular it was said a "capitol boss" appeared, the slate was planned. This intense interest has been manifested because it was from such captainship the university boys may be whipped into line for the governor. That this is to be a predominating feature in campaigning the university this fall is certain, for the other class presidents are to be chosen with astuteness. In order that the engineer forces may be satisfied and whipped into line, the chairmanship of the junior prom committee will be awarded to a La Follette engineer.

Other men who have developed unusual strength for the presidency, but whose names were not fully considered, were: Henry C. Duke, Lewis W. Bridgman, George McConochie and G. W. Blanchard.

The others nominated were: Vice-president—"Siam" Bertke, engineer.

Secretary—Miss Washburn, Chadbourne hall.

Treasurer—Miss Hunter, Gamma Phi Beta.

The following will be sold:—12 cows, 1 bull, 1 team work horses, 6 shoats, double and single harness, horse rake, sulky plow, stone boat-fanning mill, quantity of tame hay and a large number of small farming tools too numerous to mention.—Whitewater Register.

The world admires a self-made man. The world is proud of its Maker. But woe be unto the self-made man proud of his maker!

On one of Prof. Humphrey's recent trips with his classes, the train became stalled when less than half way up a long incline. The members of the Farmers' Course kept their seats, the Short Course students got out and walked, and the members of the Long Course were required to get out and push.

In constructing the rotunda of the new Agricultural Hall, a wise provision was made in that a recess was left in the marble wall to stand in readiness for a huge statue. It is rumored also that the bronze scallops on the eaves of the building have been placed there only temporarily. They are soon to be recast into a likeness of the founder of the college. A miniature of the present farm superintendent will also be made and used for a weather vane on the dairy barn silo.

HENRY I

TRUE GREATNESS

A STORY IN THREE CHAPTERS

CHAPTER I.

“AND to think that every step we take while these little flakes are falling we crush thousands and thousands of these wonderfully beautiful little figures,” said Prof. Snow as he fairly danced before the screen.

The farmers had listened to Pres. Van Hise’s oration on the Formation of Soil; they had visited Washburn Observatory and peered through the big telescope into the mysteries of the infinite; they had listened to Capt. Curtis’ witty stories on College Life in New England, and through the combined efforts of the Edwin Booth and Red Domino clubs for their special benefit on the previous evening, they had been put in touch with the fine points of dramatic art; but this simple story of the little snowflakes appealed to them as nothing else had. In the dim light of the darkened lecture room, tears could be seen glistening on the cheek of many an honest face and way down in more than one manly breast was the firm resolution never again to injure by cruel footsteps a single one of these beautiful geometric figures.

“Oh, isn’t it a pity that more of us do not see and admire the surprisingly beautiful things about us,” continued the professor in a husky whisper. “What a pity we do not know the greatness of the men with whom we associate! Why, don’t you know that there is a man among us whose name will go ringing down the halls of Fame side by side with that of Sir Isaac Newton—whose experiments and discoveries will be remembered till the end of time!”

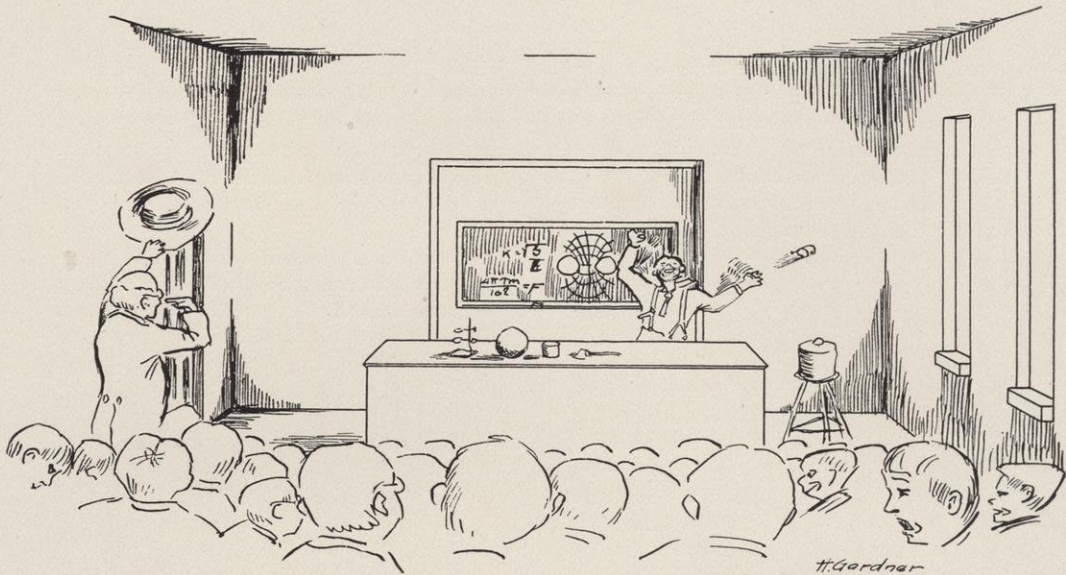

“Tell them about my pig experiment,” thundered a voice from the left of the marble table. “Tell them how I made photographs of the rib-cuts of my pigs and how with them my fame went all over France.”

Bennie was stunned. He faced Dean Henry squarely for an instant then turned pale and grasped the granite with both hands. The perspiration stood in huge drops on his face and his collar was fast passing into oblivion as he stared at the bewildered farmers for a whole minute by the long pendulum out in the elevator shaft.

“Dear me!” he moaned. “I wanted to tell you something about our own Dr. Babcock,” and he started on a trot for the top of the slate steps for a new start.

In the meantime Dean Henry was inwardly deploring the fact that Sir Isaac Newton had not taken the Short Course in Agriculture.

"Tell them about my pig experiment," thundered a voice from the left

CHAPTER II.

The subdued murmurs of eight hundred farmer-students lent awe to the uncanny stillness of the Agricultural Auditorium as the Voice of Science literally took shape in a torrent of words from the tireless tongue of Dr. Russell, and conveyed to the horrified listeners the terrors of tuberculosis.

"For," said the doctor, "so widely are the seeds of this dread malady disseminated, and so susceptible to contagion is the human system when the source of infection exerts a contaminating influence, that the pre-existing germicidal forces of nature are inexplicably held in abeyance by the virulence and avidity of the organism, and not until recently has the Science of Bacteriology gained ascendancy over the inroads thereof."

He threw out his chest and went at it again.

"The modus operandi of the transmissibility of the toxic properties of this potent germ can, after certain a priori conclusions, be simulated only to the ravages of the myriad of allied organisms whose habitat is in one of our own university buildings, erected by the bounty of the State."

A bald-headed man near the aisle was seen to fall in a dead faint, but the rest of the breathless audience gritted their teeth, ready to hear the worst.

"Repeat that, Dr. Russell!"

The mandate came from the box at the left of the stage. Not a head turned, not a limb stirred except in trembling as the doctor repeated:

"The infected victims that have emanated from this particular edifice, appal the imagination and preclude anything but an approximate enumeration."

"Gentlemen!" interrupted the voice from the box on high once more. "The doctor is right. Three times in the last three years some o' dose beasts gave us a hellofa job over at the gym."

Dr. Russell looked up somewhat perplexed but went on: "However, there is one man whose efforts stand out pre-eminently among those who have enhanced the welfare of this, our unfortunate race."

The face that peered over the railing above was now radiant. A second later practiced modesty had given way to words.

"I must say that the doctor is again right," he broke in, by this time leaning oratorically over the velvet drapery. "We scrubbed and cleaned that place with every kind of an antiseptic. And the thing that made my name honored —"

But Dr. Russell was not to be thus completely shut out. "The man to whom I refer," he went on, "the man to whom our present extremely sanitary gymnasium is due, is he whom we revere as the head of our physical culture department. He will soon complete the most successful year's work in the history of the gymnasium."

The form above fell back out of sight. The next moment Supt. Adams and Pa Williams carried the prostrate form of John Hickey on a stretcher down the stage steps and toward the door.

They paused a moment for Dr. Elsom to focus his camera and then passed on into the dean's office.

CHAPTER III.

The Agricultural Faculty had been sitting for eight hours giving each important matter that came up the credit it deserved.

"We are now under the head of 'Miscellaneous Business'" said the chair.

The announcement that the last number in the order of business had been reached brought from Prof. Whitson an unfeigned sigh of relief. Dr. Sandsten stroked his beard and looked desperate as ever. Prof. Humphrey had fallen asleep, but still wore a smile that comes only with pleasant dreams.

"And if the rest of the menagerie is to be any more miscellaneous than the three-ringed circus I have just been a'witnessing, I'll be takin' m'self to m'hoose," muttered Dr. Alexander on his way to the exit. The door slammed behind him, and the chair had things quiet once more.

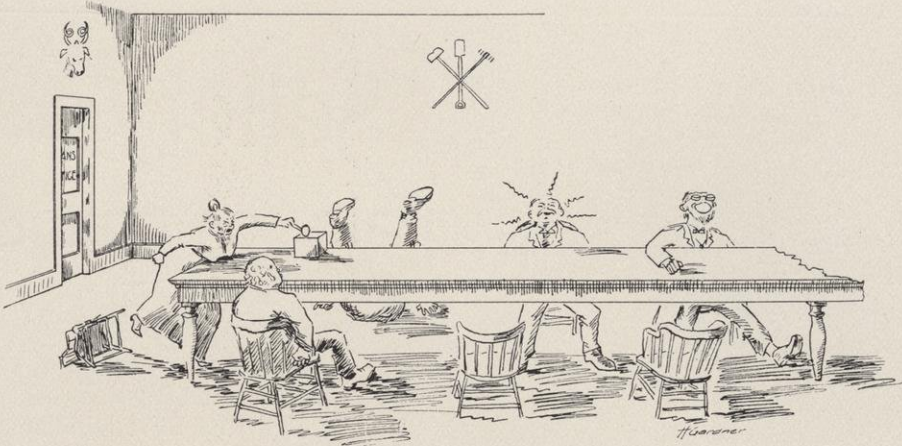

"The first matter to be considered under this head," he began, "is the case of this crew man, Jordan. No earnest student will waste his time on Lake Mendota, and I mean to show this young man that he must choose between work and play."

Profs. Babcock and Woll were seen to hold a hurried conference and then the former gave Professor Kleinheinz the wink, who took the floor.

"I wish to say a few vords pefore I goes to feet my sheeps. We are all prout of the man who has spread the fame of the Wisconsin University the country over already. His name has gone so far as the panks of the Hudtson."

Miss Herfurth took the gavel

At this point Henry C. Duke, who was sitting directly in the speaker's line of vision, raised his hand in a pleading, modest way. "My dear professor, you flatter me. I certainly did raise the standard of oratory at this university last year; and I suppose you remember that I was second to the Northern Oratorical champion in the final contest here. Yes, and there are numerous other honors I might have had but I did not go after them. And, of course, my regimental—"

"Ven I dalks I vill blease haf no putting in!" cried the faithful shepherd.

Duke contented himself with silent meditation, mentally developing the formula: $Loeb \times Oratory + U. W. Corps of Cadets = \sqrt{\text{Duke}}$.

The professor took up the theme where he had been interrupted, and continued. "As I was chust about upon the boint to say, it was Ba Chortan wat vas the best among the poys at Boughkeepsie and it vas Ba Chortan vat vas the best among the poys in judging my fat vetters. Now I tink Mr. Chortan should row mit the crew out again once more if he wants to."

There was commotion at the end of the long table. It was time for Dr. Babcock to laugh. Captain Duke sank upon the carpet. Miss Herfurth took the gavel. George Olson held the stop-watch while the secretary ran for a glass of water. For a moment the ceiling seemed to tremble, but after the storm had subsided the freckled walls of the Agricultural Building with undiminished freckledness looked serenely as ever down on Camp Randall.

Will never be profound,
Till you've tasted of the bitter dregs
Of Sell'ry's Pain Compound!

His mode of manufacture,
Peculiarly his own,
To all his suffering patients
Is perfectly well known.
A pound of solid matter,
A pinch of wondrous wit,
A ton of iron-clad irony,
A bad sarcastic fit;
A bucket full of bucking,
A shovel full of sound,
Is what the doctor uses
For Sell'ry's Pain Compound.

He serves it out in courses
To suit the tastes of all.
He's generous, he's liberal,
In no way is he small.

“PHI BETA KAPPA” isn't for grown-ups only.

Busy people need food that digests readily, slips quickly into dates and facts, and puts no overload on the stomach or head.

“PHI BETA KAPPA” is the one right food for the active college professor. The Beta malt not only digests the great part of “PHI BETA KAPPA” but it also digests any other food that you may happen to eat at the same meal.

“PHI BETA KAPPA” comes from all the various and complex processes of grinding, cramming, bluffing, cribbing and jollyng, a perfectly natural food.

Delicious, partly digested, ready to assassinate.

Evening

THE lazy summer's day had strolled leisurely to its close. In the west the sun paused, the light from his flaming face tinting the sky with a glow brighter than the gleam of a million fire-flies. Above, the delicate pink faded into the blue of the heaven; below, the rich crimson merged into the purple of the hills. Mirrored in the lake lay an angry fire, like a pool of molten iron. Radiating eastward ran lines of light, glinting from wavelet to wavelet, shooting from ripple to ripple, ever advancing across the shadowy green water.

"Beautiful!" the girl whispered.

"Beautiful!" The boy looked in silence. Crouched near the middle of the boat, his elbows resting on his knees, his chin in his hands, he observed her as, from her seat in the stern, she watched the sunset.

"A penny for your thoughts," she laughed in a low voice.

He glanced at her queerly. Her eyes fell. They drifted.

The sun sank lower. The spectrum narrowed, shortened. The sullen waters of the lake encroached upon the fiery surface. Ugly, darting shadows shot out into the crimson, which struggled, shrunk, faded—disappeared. The farewell light in the sky dimmed and flickered out. The western hills lost their royalty and retreated to gloomy haziness. Out from the shore, like greedy giant fingers, crept vague clouds, lengthening, widening, in an attempt to clutch the whole surface of the lake.

The boy looked in silence.

"What is it?" the boy inquired, as his companion stirred slightly. "Do you feel cold?" She shook her head.

He was rowing now, but slowly, so that the skiff hardly cut the water. As he rowed, he cast superstitious glances toward the stern, while she, with absorbed gaze, followed the movement of her hand, trailing in the water.

Night; darkness came—yet it was not dark. In the bowl of the sky blinked millions of tiny eyes. Here and there in the midst of the throng, shone a larger light, as steady, as calm, as clear as the eye of an angel. The lake, its surface now one smooth, blue-black floor, gleamed mirror-like in mimicry of the stars. From over the water came the sound of voices and laughter, so near, so far, like the call of the "bob-white" from a country meadow. A swift canoe, a thief in the night, slunk silently past beneath the shadow of the cliff, and disappeared around a curve in the shore. An assuming little launch throbbed somewhere in the distance; the guttural "ker-chug, ker-chug" of the bullfrog in the throaty tones now high, now low, echoed from an indefinite marsh. The trees on the height sighed soft tales to another as the wind ebbed gently through their leaves; and, from the cuplike hollows in the bordering cliff, came gossipy murmurs in tireless, rhythmic "lap, lap, lap."

Mystery stirred the air. Every little wind breathed a "hush" to the leaves, lisped "silence" to the secret-laden water. The wavelets, born of a freshening breeze, lapped against the boat, and prattled answers to Nature's secrets, impatient that man should hear, and yet not understand.

At last, the boy, in a voice hardly more than a whisper, spoke. "Don't you know?"

The girl glanced up, smiled, looked down again. "Yes," she said. Silently he dipped the oars.

WISDOM

One day a wise young Senior,
With a cap on the top of his head,
Ran up to Professor Bennie Snow
And his face was eager and red.
And talking of gravity pendulums,
Asked this Senior, not at all shy,
"Does the pendulum start of itself, sir--?"
The Professor did not reply.

There once was a man called Hockett,
Who put his false teeth in his pocket;
He bit himself so
When he sat, don't you know,
That he rose "so schnell wie ein rockett."

There's a fright of a thing called Exam,
A thing quite unknown in Siam;
When you take one you shake,
And you tremble and quake,
And all you think of is "D—!"

One of Gilmore's Hypothetical Cases

SUPPOSE A walks along the street, picks up a stone, and hurls it into B's window. The cook happens to be carrying a tureen of soup to the table; the crash of the glass so frightens her that she drops the bowl. The hot soup, incidentally, is spilled all over a very valuable dog. The animal, in his extreme terror and suffering, rushes upstairs and spills a bottle of carbolic acid upon a very valuable sofa, which is ruined completely—the acid burning the upholstery. An old maiden aunt happens to come along, and, seeing the work of destruction and the frightful agony of the dog, and, being of a nervous disposition, rushes to the window and leaps to the ground below. In so doing she lights upon the shoulders of a policeman, who happens to be passing. The shock so disturbs him that, thinking himself assailed by thugs, he pulls out his pistol, discharging it at random and hitting a horse which happens to be passing. The horse takes fright and throws the occupant of the rig, who happens to be in an intoxicated condition, to the pavement. A young lady happens to pass that way, and the man, thinking her responsible for his mishap, enters upon a tirade of abuse and obscene language, which so terrifies the woman, who happens to be a Salvation Army missionary, that she falls to the sidewalk in a faint, spraining her thumb in so doing. The question to be determined is: Can the Salvation Army member sue A for assault and battery?

Fond Parent—"I'm afraid Willie's digestion isn't very good."

Friend—"What makes you think so?"

F. P.—"Well, Jane told me that he wasn't taking anything but lunches at the university."

When Modesty Meets Modesty!

"Zounds, J. Pierpont, 'twill be a hummer!"

"Zounds, T. Catiline, we'll put them to the clear when the votes are counted." And Pierpont curled a fancy curl on the county committee.

"I'm afraid of the First, J. Pierpont."

"Just watch the Fifth, T. Catiline, and you'll learn a few lessons in how to express the will of the people."

"Sh, sh, Pierpont; walls have ears!"

"You've cold feet, T. Catiline!"

"Not literally, Pierpont. You must be discreet." And T. Catiline lighted up another one on the county committee.

"Slush, T. Catiline, slush! Not a stalwart on the block since I moved here. Speak your thoughts freely, and tell me how you feel in your new position of 'Boss of the First.'"

"Quite natty, Pierpont; quite comfortable; in fact, quite at home. I wear my honors with the grace of a St. Germaine and the modesty of a Bill Hagenah. Do you know, J. Pierpont, it does my heart good to puff on one of these weeds and think that I, THOMAS CATILINE MAHON, have the sole privilege of dispensing them in the First Ward. Since Mike became an instructor he must be more dignified and can't dabble in politics. Bill Hagenah always was a politician in a small way. But Bill don't grow. Arne Lerum is busy trying to collect his $76 from the athletic association, so he can't butt into this political business. Too bad Arne misses a chance to butt in—first time in history. Colonel H. J. Barry is busy writing the last chapter of "Profanity vs. Fraternity," and, by the way, they say he's exhausted his vocabulary on the sixth volume. So it's up to you and me, Pierpont, to see Bob through this mess. Me in the First, and you in the Fifth. And, withal, we're modest; not, Pierpont?"

"Certainly. Modest withal. Me in the fifth, and you in the First!"

CORRESPONDENCE OF PROF. C. S. SLICHTER AND BILLY SCOTT

PROFESSOR WILLIAM A. SCOTT,
MADISON, WIS.

FRESH AIR CREEK, WIS.
August 21, 1904.

DEAR BILLY :

You have no idea how I am enjoying the two or three months' rest that we toilers are allowed each year by the grace of the State. This place is one of those old peaceful villages that has successfully weathered the storm of time without so much as the change of a pickle barrel in the grocery store. Just enough cows to make it interesting, and just enough women to make it troublesome! The weather has been a trifle too warm to permit me to wear my plush cap; hence I've been compelled to go bare-headed for the past week.

Billy, there is a matter about which I wish to write you. Being the dean of the school of commerce, you know the unscrupulous methods you teach your students to employ in business in order to be successful. Do you know that these same methods are being introduced into our athletics? I actually know of a case where an athlete is being Paid! Paid MONEY, Billy, to play football! Of course I can do nothing in this matter, as the player in question is on the Minnesota team. It would not be professional courtesy to offend Minnesota; and we must be courteous. Billy, however,

I know of another case that I'll nip in the bud. There's a farmer lad from a near-by burg, who intends to enter the university next fall. He's a rip-roarer of a football man, so they tell me. But, will you believe it, Billy, that fellow intends to shovel snow for a living during the winter months! Did you ever hear anything like it! A man who shovels snow all winter wishes to play on a Wisconsin football team. Professionalism! Rank professionalism! And I'll none of it! I'll serve notice on that fellow to-morrow that before he can don a uniform he must deposit $500 with Al Dean as evidence that he has no professional or other mercenary propensities.

Our athletics are in an awful state, Billy. If the tendency toward professionalism continues, it will only be a matter of fifty or sixty years when college athletes will have sunk to the level now occupied by our captains of industry. God forbid! Teach our men, Billy, to steal, and scheme, and rob to their hearts' content. It's a part of their business. But may Providence preserve our sports inviolate, with Charles S. Slichter as the divinely appointed custodian.

Yours forever at a right angle,

CLEAN SPORT SLICHTER.

When I entered this institution, as a freshman, I first began to appreciate that there was something radically wrong with affairs athletic at Wisconsin. In fact, even before I came, I suspected there must be something on the hog, for, to tell the truth, how could anything be run on the square without Jed doing the running? So I was sure of my ground before I entered upon my crusade of reform, and I say in all due modesty that no small part of my success was due to this. It's a great thing to be sure of one's ground. Well, to continue. When I began crusading I was sure of my ground. I knew that Wisconsin was bound to come to athletic grief sooner or later, and that it would require a Luther to initiate its reforms, a Bonaparte to fight its battles, and an Edward the Great to rescue it from the mire of filth into which it had fallen. I also knew that somewhere in this wide world there must be a man who possessed the necessary qualities to save our dear alma mater. At this time I was not absolutely certain who the man was, but I had an abiding confidence that since God made me he had made me great; and since God had made me great, might I not be the Savior of Wisconsin? The more I pondered over the matter the more I became convinced that I was it. It is not hard to convince me on a matter of this character. And one evening when I was writing the last paragraph on "The Shame of The Universities" an angel appeared to me.

"Jed," said the spirit, "do you know that you are divinely ordained to write the editorials for the Daily Cardinal?"

"Is't so?" said I, "Tell Thy Master I will consider the matter," and summarily I dismissed the emissary of God.

Now I was sure. Savior of Wisconsin! Divinely appointed! Thus was Jed Nordan now.

So I set about my task. I had no difficulty in establishing to the satisfaction of John Moffatt that there was a big pile of boodle in those parts of the university with which I, and he, was not directly concerned. I made a card catalogue and put down the boodle that each member of the football team earned during his summer vacations, and to prove that I am not four-flushing I append the catalogue hereto.

CARD CATALOGUE

Name	Amount earned in summer	Occupation
E. J. Vanderboon	$ 81.01	Politician
Dick Remp	6.18	Glass Blower
Slam Bertke	67.50	Farmer
Jimmie Bush	2000.00	Actor
Stuffy Jones	1.00	Incidentalist
Findlay	11.11	Artist
Donovan	2.18	Modiste

Examine the catalogue and you will be forced to confess to yourself, as I have confessed to you time and again, that the graft in Wisconsin athletics is simply enormous. It almost matches the Cardinal's. Enough said.

I think any intelligent man who reads this diagnosis (good word, that) can tell what's wrong with Wisconsin. But lest someone without intelligence should miss the point, let me make a straightforward, modest, statement of what was the matter and what is the matter.

The fact is that before 1901 Jed Nordan was not at the university. Hence there was graft. Between 1901 and 1904 Jed Nordan was just rounding into form. Hence there was graft. After 1904 Jed Nordan had assumed his official title of "Savior." Hence the graft ceased and Wisconsin is now as pure as the waters of Mendota. All of which is sworn to by C. S. Slichter, approved by John Moffatt, and published in the Daily Cardinal.

Enough said! Men of Wisconsin! Act! Act! Act!

Haleyatha's Fighting

It was in the bleak December, in the forepart of the winter.
Gathered were we all together in our workroom on the third floor
Of the engineering building; gathered there to work on stone-work—
Stone-work taught by Captain Williams. But the Warrior George Haley
Was not working on his stone-work, but was drafting on his bridges;
Working thus upon his steel truss, on a bridge to span Black River,
Where it passes through his home town, Watertown, in old New York State.
All at once upon the stairway comes a tramp—a tramp and patter,
Like a mighty host approaching to lay low the senior civils.
Two flights up and then straight forward, is the way you find the workroom;
You could do it with your eyes shut through the lack of ventilation.
All at once within the doorway of our lodge upon the third floor,
Pops the face of Chieftain Williams—face and form of the instructor.
Gazed and looked he, winked but smiled not.
Trembled all the mighty warriors from the lack of ventilation
And the coldness of his bearing. Shivered they from fear and weakness,
All save Warrior George Haley trembled at the apparition.
Williams' eagle eye spied Haley, Haley working on his bridges,
When he should have worked his stone-work. Williams stood in rear of Haley,
Stood and gazed and winked but smiled not. Haley felt the chilly presence
But he did not see the person; thought, perchance, it might be Larson,
That stood by with so much patience close behind him as he worked on.
Said he cheerily, "Hello!" But the chieftain took no notice,
Gazed and looked and winked but smiled not. Then he said "Good morning, Haley!"
Haley then replied "Good morning!" in a quiet respectful manner,
As required by Chieftain Williams, when disguised as a professor.
"Is this not the special hour to be occupied with stone-work?
I can't spend my time in this wise, if you work upon your bridges!"
Thus did Williams tongue-lash Haley. "I could spend my time much better Far away from this bum workroom with its putrid air and smelling.
If you do not work my stone-work I'll report you to Turneure,
To the dean of engineering!" Then spake up brave Warrior Haley,
With his face afire and blazing, with his warlock, likewise scalplock,
Slowly rising up in anger, stood he up and spake in this wise:
"Listen, O Professor Williams!
I am more in age than five years! Days and weeks and moons and years
Have I lived and suffered good health, and I hope I may continue
In so far as I am able, while I live in this bum workroom,
Where the air is worse and more so! Where the light is strong and killing;
On the eyesight of the draftsmen." Then grew Williams very angry;
Said he to the Warrior Haley: "Is it necessary, Haley,
Though I make an ass of myself that you needs should do so likewise?"
Haley answered "No, Professor!" to the question thus propounded.

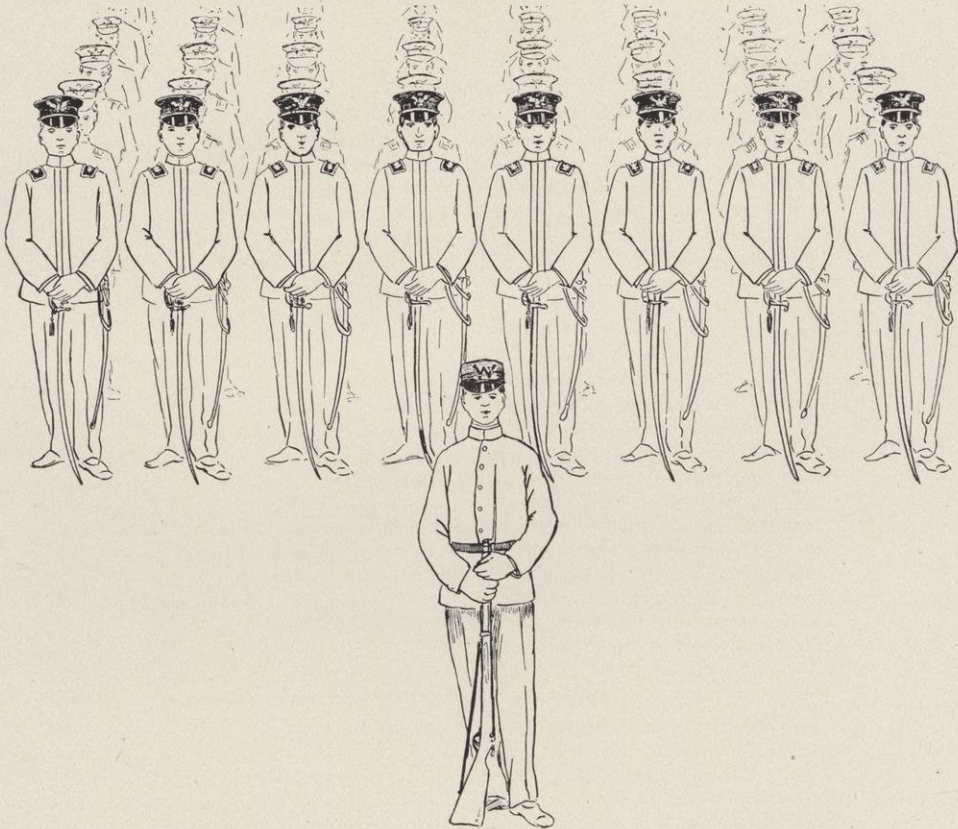

Thus ends the little legend of the brave and courteous Haley.
For we smiled and then smiled still more and the air grew slightly warmer,
Lost its former chilly feeling, as he turned the wrath of Williams
From the class to Warrior Haley; turned the wrath by his soft answer.
And with peace eternal reigning, dwell we now in our workroom,
Where the air grows loud and louder day by day as we assemble.

A Short Horn's Lament

Last night I took her to the play,
Borrowed a hat and dress suit too,
And sent her flowers—I'd heard them say
That was the only thing to do.
We looked all right; the show was slick.
And then—that cabman I could kick!
D—— him! He called me "33!"

For some time the commandant has been in a quandary concerning the undue amount of majors and others with epaulets; the above suggestion is offered as an effective solution.

ARGUMENT—The two benevolent organizations known as Delta Gamma and Kappa Kappa Gamma, being anxious to discover the true relation toward each other, appointed a joint committee to inquire into it. And they saw that it was good.

SCENE: Chapter room in the Delta Gamma house.

THE Incarnation of the Self-Government Association in the person of the Radiant Angel of the Greeks sings:

“How sweet is the life of a Kappa!
 From dawn to even she spends,
 Praising her D. G. sisters,
 But hoping they'll make amends;
 Hoping they will amend,
 But—praying they'll come to an end!

“How sweet is the life of a D. G.!
 From even to dawn she strays,
 Singing the praise of the Kappas,
 But hoping they'll mend their ways;
 Hoping they'll mend their ways—
 But—praying they'll end their days!

CHORUS:

“This is the situation;
 It is a strange creation,
 A mad infatuation,
 They bear each unto each.
 Ay, strain not the relation,
 Nor mar the fair flirtation.
 'Tis harmless admiration
 Which each from each beseech.”

(Enter a quartette of able-bodied Kappas, somewhat De Lapidated.)

They sing:

“We’ve come from a jaunt of twenty miles
To conduct this investigation.
We’ve brought along our pleasant smiles,
We’ve left behind our wiles and guiles,
We’ll read the records, search the files.
We’re after information!”

ECHO:

“They’re after information,
In the D. G. habitation.”

(Enter the D. G. Florodora sextette:)

“Three shoes drop on the bedroom floor above.
’Tis nothing! ’Tis a symptom of pure love.”

The sextette sings:

“Kappas, we greet you,
Sisters adored and fair.
We two are well aware
That peace should reign.
We’ve thrown our pins away;
We’ve cut our nails to-day;
Fear not this grand display;
Peace we proclaim.”

ECHO:

“Peace we proclaim.
War we disdain.”

(Enter an Envoy:)

“The Delta Gamma sisters in the upper regions await your report with impatience. The Kappa sisters on Park Street have just telephoned for the news.”

Grace Woock: "Sisters, let us hie to the dining room, where our feed awaits us."

(Exit all except Flossy. Shuffling of feet. Creaking of the banister.)

Flossy:

"Now go we in content,
To liberty, and not to banishment."

(Exit Flossy.)

ACT II

SCENE I: Kappa Kappa Gamma chapter room. A chorus of twenty voices sings their dachology:

"Praise Chi Omega, K. A. T.,
Praise Tri Delt and praise to Alpha Phi.
Praise Pi Phi and praise K. K. G.
But Lord! O Lord!—Don't praise D. G."

SCENE II: Upper floor of the Delta Gamma house. Twenty girls assembled around a pan of pop-corn. They sing:

"Believe me if all those endearing young buds
Which dwell across from Chadbourne Hall,
Were to fade on the morrow or sink into suds,
Or slide off the earth with a fall,
Thou wouldst still be abhorred as this moment thou art,
Let thy loveliness (?) dwindle or wear;
And o'er the dear ruins each wish of my heart
Would offer a requiem swear."

(Upper floor of the Delta Gamma house.)

ACT III

SCENE: Same as Act I

(Enter the Envoy:)

"The joint committee of Delta Gamma and Kappa Kappa Gamma, after deliberating three hours over the coffee cups, the high-teas and the question at issue, submit the following report:

(Beating of drums. Calling of the haute-girls. The joint committee enters singing:)

" With much deliberation
We've solved the situation.
We've quelled an agitation
Extant for many years.
With Delta G precision,
And Kappa Gamma vision,
And with combined derision
We've smothered all our fears;
And while secretly each other we derided,
Through courtesy we mutually decided

THAT

If you are a Delta G,
You're all right, you're all right!
If you are a K. K. G.,
You're all right, you're all right!
For we feel sure amid our spats,
Our squabbles and the din,

THAT

God made the world for the K. K. G.'s
And let the D. G.'s in.

Or,

THAT

God made the world for the Delta G's
And let the Kappas in.

(Curtain.)

Procrastination

He chose his thesis subject in his happy Junior year,
And he talked the matter over with his Prof,
“For,” he said, “When I’m a Senior I’ll be busy, that is clear,
So I’ll do the thesis now and have it off.”

But the prom; and eke the Badger, and a hundred other stunts,
Made procrastination easy, and though, when
The spring was over he remarked, “I’ll get to work at once,”
The thesis wasn’t written even then.

His Senior days are pleasant and albeit he resolved
To get that thesis finished mighty soon.
He hasn’t got it started, not a word of it evolved!

He is starting in to-morrow and intends to read all day,
And read and delve and grind away all night,
For he says, “My thesis subject isn’t awful anyway,
And I guess I’ll get the business done all right.”

But—it isn’t finished yet
And I’m not afraid to bet
That the first of June will witness that the ink of it is wet.
He will start his graduation
In a state of flat prostration.
And the moral is—get busy and you’ll never have to fret.

The Day of D o o m s

V ANDY and Clark were especially thoughtful. J. B. Parkinson, A. M., Vice-President of the University of Wisconsin, Professor of Civil Policy and Political Economy, was lecturing. They sat with backs humped up, chin on fist, fist on arm of bench. To lend dignity to their meditations their eyes were closed. Parky's beautiful sentences (hammered into shape on the eve of the great civil war), fell in cadent periods, soothing as the autumn summer zephyrs to those who believe not in Phi Beta Kappa.

Salter was saving time by reading for Tommy Adams. Duke sat all alone in front, majestic and silent and isolated, thinking his own thoughts, for all of us have thoughts occasionally. Una Johnson was quiet as usual, Marjorie Daw Johnson five minutes late, and Edith Johnson was rubbing three ink spots off her cheek. As for Martha Frances and the nineteen other Johnsons, they weren't there. You can't expect to find the whole Johnson family in one class, if it is Parky's.

"We shall have a quiz," said J. B. Parkinson, A. M., Vice-President of the University of Wisconsin, etc., etc., etc.

Clark stirred uneasily.

"One on Monday and one on Wednesday," continued J. B. Parkinson, A. M., Vice-President of the University of Wisconsin, etc., etc., etc. An awful silence followed. You could hear John Moffatt's labored breathing. Duke fainted. Dick Remp didn't utter even one teenie-weenie one. He and John Hickey were training together nights, and Dick's voice was out of gear. Whereupon Vandy arose, butted a hole in the wall with his head, and sat down sadly to reflect.

"Better one-fifth Olin than six-fifths Parky," he said sadly.

And Dick Remp sputtered till his eyes bulged out; and he had a black look on his face, but he didn't utter even a teenie-weenie one, not one.

Catechism of Humor

- Q. What is a joke?
A. A joke is anything that a prof says with a twinkle in his eye.
Q. Do profs often joke?
A. The profs assure us that they joke very often.
Q. Are we bound to laugh at the jokes of a prof?
A. We are all bound to roar at the jokes of our profs.
Q. What is the penalty for him who does not roar at the joke of a prof?
A. He who does not roar at the jokes of his profs shall be conned out of this institution.
Q. Must we also laugh at the jokes of our instructors?
A. It is well to do so. They need encouragement.
Q. How many kinds of jokes are there?
A. There are two kinds of jokes, conscious and unconscious.
Q. What is a conscious joke?
A. A conscious joke is the pseudo-humorous concoction with which the faculty dope the students.
Q. What is an unconscious joke?
A. An unconscious joke is the faculty itself.

A lover sang songs without No,
While his lady was trying to slo;
Till she rose in despair
And pasted him square
In the neck with a rotten cuco.

There was a young man from Wausau,
His costume had never a flaw,
But when Olson did will
That he cash up his bill,
He needs must scrawl home to his paw.

"The Man Behind" ^(W)

The man behind has a corkin' place!
He can gaze on the figures of art and grace,
And wild at times his heart doth dance,
While his breathing comes in broken pants!
But there are times when he should plan,
To be a man behind a man.

There was a girl named Marion Bell,
Who slipped on the ice and squarely fell;
And when she arose
She felt of her nose,
And loudly exclaimed—"O, Pshaw!"

A senior dressed up very fine
Stepped into a pail of slack lime.
"Ah me," he cried,
"I'm quite mortified, and——"
The rest I'll leave out of my rhyme.

The Last Smoke

*Come, old fellow, fill your pipe;
One last smoke together,
Then we go our parting ways
Through the wide world's weather.
Go our ways—I wonder where,
Years from now—say, twenty—
We shall be and how we'll fare!
Poverty—or Plenty?*

*Well, the future's hid from view
(Thank the Lord) and therefore
Let's consider now the past,
That is what we care for.
'Member Beebe, tall and gaunt,
Peering o'er his glasses;
Butt of many uncouth jests,
Joke of all his classes?*

*And McConnell, short a leg,
But strong as any fellow?
'Member Williams, who could hear
Nothing but a bellow?*

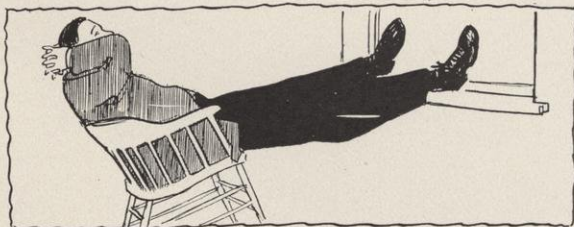

*'Member Davy Annis, short,
Happy, cheery, funny,
With the dinky caps he wore,
And his laughter sunny?
Davy's dead; and some have left
Short of graduation.
Still, the bunch that's left can make
Quite a demonstration.*

*Light your pipe—this is our last
"Smoking-talk" together,
And we go our parting ways
Through the wide world's weather.
Maybe we have thrown away
Quite a lot of tin here,
But we've had a good four years
And we're glad we've been here!*

A Drafting Room Ballad

Blessings on thee Engineer,
In the reading room so dear,
With thy feet upon the sill,
Watching girls go down the hill.

Now with face quite long and sour,
He proceeds to buck an hour.
But the gong rings out at last,
And again the girls go past.

In the winter when the snow
Decks the sidewalk down below,
Then the engineer sits, still
With his feet upon the sill.

In the spring when grass is green,
Then the terror may be seen,
Sprawled out on the campus, still
Watching girls go down the hill.

SCINTILLATIONS OF CARL RUSSELL FISH

"The very best life of Henry Clay is that by C— S—; it's pretty good!"

"Everybody who was anybody in Virginia was somebody."

"This was the man who said 'The presidency is a position neither to be declined nor sought'—then he died at the age of 40!"

"And then the whole fleet was sent to Halifax—ah—Nova Scotia!"

"A shot was fired and the captain killed. Such irritating little incidents occurred quite frequently."

"You can readily see what was left; or, rather, you will find it difficult to see what was left."

GOOD BOY, MADSON!

MR. OLBRICH: "Who was Galileo?"

BIG MADSON: "Galileo—ah—Galileo—was the first gentleman who penetrated the mysteries of Heaven."

DR. CAIRNS: "What is the meaning of 'aperture'?"

FRESHMAN: "An aperture is an opening."

DR. CAIRNS: "Use it in a sentence."

FRESHMAN: "I attended a grand aperture at the Juneau last Saturday."

POLITICAL ECONOMY

HISTORY OF ECONOMIC THOUGHT

21. THE PRINCIPAL TOPICS WILL BE THE DEDUCTIVE AND INDUCTIVE METHODS. The Bibliography in Ingram's "Reviews and Criticisms of Late Economic Writers." Outside reading and quizzes, occasionally supplemented by lectures on Prof. Ely's work and experience. Grammar school discipline strictly enforced.
Tuesday and Thursday at 10. Mr. Thompson, assisted by Prof. Ely.

RHETORIC AND ORATORY

5. FORENSICS. Especially adapted to those who intend to get a general knowledge of general subjects and those who wish to acquire facility of expression of thoughts and less than thoughts. Made invaluable by frequent lectures on the Colorado situation by Mr. Mills, and by talks on many other topics by J. C. Spooner Jamieson.
Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 11. Prof. Frankenburger.

A Love Game

I

It was on the tennis court;
Gaged against me in that sport,
Was the girl I loved in college days of yore.
Tho' I thought her all the world,
Just when I the flag unfurled,
She would answer in the voice that I adore.

"My ball, Love all,
That is the way we play,
Love one is no fun,
And it is not the way.
My serve, your nerve
Makes you not very keen;
You lose, I choose
Ever to love fifteen."

II

Two long years have passed away,
It was graduation day,
And our college life was drawing to an end.
But 'twas nothing done in sport
When she made this sweet retort,
Words that to my heart a joyous hope did send.

"Love one, what fun!
I've changed my mind you see.
It's so, for I know,
And you may trust to me.
Your serve, my nerve
You surely must have seen.
I lose, you choose—
Love one, or love fifteen."

G. H. Taylor of the State university at Madison visited with a friend of his here over Sunday. Mr. Taylor is a rising young lawyer.

—Lodi Times.

A crowd of university students last night presented a German play at the opera house under the auspices of the high school. Among the people who took part were Miss Kussel, of this city, and Mr. Gustav Blatz of the Blatz Brewing Company of Milwaukee, which is said to manufacture one of the best grades of beer in the country. —Watertown Times.

The Melancholy Days Have Come

You may talk about the autumn with its melancholy days,
But for real sad days the Spring has got it stuck.
For 'tis then that Nature dons her gladdest rags (as Lowell says),
While we poor dubs must stay indoors and buck.
Just outside upon the campus you can hear a frequent "ping,"
When a ball makes good connections with the bat;
And the roars that follow: "Put her first!" and "Slide like—anything!"
Make you throw your pencil down and grab your hat.

But to-morrow is your business day; there's physics and descrip,
And a corking plate for kinematics, too;
Then there's that quiz in calculus—you think, "Oh, let her rip!"
But then, again, you know it wouldn't do.
So you sit and plug in order not to be the man behind,
And you almost wish there were no spring at all.
When a guy has got to buck like that, there's nothing, to my mind,
Like those good old melancholy days of fall.

The "Poor" we have always with us; especially when we fail to study.
Let me but copy my neighbor's reading notes and I care not who reads the books.

Sayings of Wise Ones

DUKE: "Some of my friends wanted me to run so I thought I would. There is no use, but then—"
HOLMES: "Don't support him, will you? He is a 'machine man.'"
WHEELOCK: "I think so, Professor."
APPLE: "No more politics for me, boys."
WALLER: "I think that's awful."
HOYT: "Talk to me about logic."
MULCAHY: "I am from Baraboo. See?"
LAMFROM: "I will admit 'it, myself."
SPRECHER: "It's nice to be popular."
TURNER: "Yes, I introduced the corduroy habit."
HAMILTON: "I talked it over with the faculty."
STARK: "Only one!"
KINSEY: "That's hell."
UNDERWOOD: "I write all my stories in the first person."
BARRY: "I believe in no divine rights."

Friend—"The course of true love never did run smooth."

Jack Neverbuck—"Nope! Fact is, I've never found any course that did run smooth for me."

AGRIC: "Look at those 'co-ops' coming down the street."

JOHN (entering his room well loaded): If the Whip-hic hadn't fallen off in the mud-hic I wouldn't a got off the water wagon!

The Wish

(ADAPTED FROM THE FRENCH.)

*I love to lie on a summer's night,
And gaze at the cloudless blue,
With its million flickering points of light,
While my thoughts, dearest, dwell with you.*

*Are you watching the self-same stars as I,
Though we're so many miles apart?
Did you see that meteor cleave the sky,
And treasure a wish in your heart?*

*You taught me that and the habit clings,
But my wish is ever the same;
That our love may survive all earthly things,
A pure, undying flame.*

To Our Patient Readers

No more to say, kind readers, no more at all to say;
Our themes all run in the same old rut and read in the same old way.
We've said a lot that we didn't know and more that we didn't mean,
We've written a lot of futile rot and our stock of thoughts is lean.
There's no more sign of things to write than hair on a finger-nail,
(And we know that figure is not quite good) and we know that our style is stale.

So we must confess what we can't express, the sorrow that we display,
This cry and call means nothing at all--we've nothing more to say!

(This is Braley's work. Originally the poem began with "Nothing at all to say." We thought Bert was depreciating himself too much, so we changed it to "No more at all to say.")

L'Envoi

The stuff is writ, the ink is dry;
The proof is read, the end is nigh.
And now let's all join in a shout,
"Hip, hip, hurrah! The d—— book's out!"

An illustration of a man in a vest and shirt operating a large printing press. The press is a complex mechanical device with rollers and a hand crank. The man is looking down at the paper being processed.

The Printing of an Annual is a work of art, requiring large facilities with skilled workmen in every department.

The production of this book represents our ability to execute this & work of similar character & excellence with intelligence & dispatch.

COLLEGE BOOK STORE

The Largest Book Store in the State

Established Over Twenty Years

¶ During this time thousands of students have bought their books from us, and this long experience enables us to provide exactly what is wanted in the way of Books and Supplies.

¶ We make a specialty of second-hand books on which you can save from 15% to 30%. If you are contemplating entering the University, let us know your course and we will gladly give you an estimate of the cost of the year's supplies.

A GOOD ANNUAL

To make your Annual a good one, you must look to the illustrations. Your engravings must be the best. There is as great a variation in the quality of engravings as in any other commodity, and the BEST is not necessarily the highest in cost.

“Barnes-Crosby Quality” is the Best

Our work is used by the most critical buyers of engraving throughout the country. It is shown in this and many other current annuals. We are well experienced in College work, probably handling more than any other concern in the country. To learn more of the advantages we have to offer, it is only necessary to ask us for prices and give us a general idea of the amount of work that you expect to have. Our booklets and beautiful samples will not fail to interest you, and we will gladly give you information and suggestions.

University of Wisconsin

Situation of the University The University Grounds extend along the north shore of Lake Mendota more than a mile. In point of beauty the site is unsurpassed, if not unequaled. The campus contains 240 acres, besides an athletic field, known as Camp Randall, of 42 acres. On the lower campus are the Gymnasium and the Historical Library building.

The University Embraces The College of Letters and Science.
The College of Mechanics and Engineering.
The College of Law.
The College of Agriculture.
The Graduate School.

The College of Letters and Science embraces General Courses in Liberal Arts. Special Courses which include Commerce, Premedical Studies, Pharmacy, Education, Music, Home Economics.

Library and Laboratory Facilities The completion of the new Historical Library building, which also includes the University Library, affords unsurpassed accommodations for the use of students. The number of volumes contained in the Libraries accessible to students is about 276,000. The laboratory facilities of the University are excellent and include well equipped laboratories in chemistry, physics, biology, geology, mineralogy, petrography, psychology, botany, and in engineering, pharmacy, assaying and agriculture.

Facilities for Physical Training The Gymnasium, 200 feet long, 100 feet wide and three stories high, affords probably the best accommodations to be found in the country. Besides offices, locker rooms, lecture rooms, shower and tub baths and rooms for other special gymnastic work, it contains a swimming tank 80 feet long by 28 feet wide, a running track of eleven laps to the mile, a ball cage, and a general gymnasium 165 feet long by 96 feet wide.

Conditions of Admission Students are admitted either by certificate of graduation from an accredited high school, or upon examination. For detailed information, address the Deans of the respective colleges, or W. D. HIESTAND, Registrar of the University.

in large, well lighted and thoroughly ventilated study & recitation rooms; with a corps of permanent instructors financially interested in the welfare of the student.

The Commercial Department is a miniature community, where Business is not only taught, but practiced as Business is done. At the very start the student is furnished with $5,000.00 College currency which he deposits in the College Bank and uses it as his capital in the actual commercial transactions that immediately follow. Here is a perfect hive of commercial activity where the student learns the laws of trade and the intelligent recording of real transactions.

Pen Art as a Specialty is taught by Mr. Spohn, Penmanship instructor in the Wisconsin School of Commerce.

The Shorthand Department is conducted on modern lines by a specialist well grounded in the science of language and of brief writings, who is a teacher of Pitman, Graham, Eclectic and Gregg Shorthand. The student receives intelligent personal instruction in the groundwork of his profession--English, Punctuation, Capitalization & hyphening and dividing of words.

Entering Upon Prosperity

IS easy if you only have the key. Here it is. We say of a man who becomes forehanded—saves from his income regularly—that he is prosperous. Many find this saving a difficult proposition; they need a motive for saving, and then they can save. Life Assurance furnishes this motive better than anything else. A double motive is offered, that of saving for protection to family in event of death, and saving for self if the assured lives to complete his period.

We invite any one interested to investigate our plans, and will be glad to furnish details.

We would also like to hear from any one contemplating an agency.

The Trostel process of tanning is the most scientific. It produces the most scientific results. It is responsible for the character of Trostel's Tested Leathers, which are recognized the world over as of the highest type. No other class of leathers ever achieved the fame of Trostel's, because no other process can produce the Trostel quality.

They Are in a Class by Themselves

This is not mere assertion. It is vouched for by the fact that wherever leather shoes are used there you will find Trostel's Tested Leathers worn by the largest number of people of discriminating habits, and preferred alike by shoe manufacturer, retailer and wearer.

Trostel's Tested Leathers are kind to the feet; they outwear all other brands and give the best all around satisfaction. You should specify Trostel's.
