"In the University men shall not live by bread alone."

Volume XX

Madison, Wis., December, 1918

Number 2

President C. R. Van Hise, who had the high honor to be the one university president to accompany a party of twelve American editors to France and England on invitation of the British Ministry of Information, has returned to Madison. That Dr. Van Hise was selected for this important mission is signal tribute to and recognition of his ability in international affairs, which brings honor to our University whose good fortune it is to have so able a leader in these tremendously important times. There can be no doubt that President Van Hise proved a valuable counselor to British officials. The rich experiences afforded by the trip will be lasting investments for the betterment, growth and influence of the University. Welcome home!

Fort Sheridan heard the "Badger Yell" and "On Wisconsin" many times during the two months training camp for faculty members and students last summer. Wisconsin led in the total numbers from any one of the 300 institutions represented. By the way, the Badger "Gobs" from Great Lakes got together about one hundred of their chanty crew for a dinner with the "profs" at Lake Forest. Dean Cool accompanied the Jackies. Stephen Gilman came as chief orator. The army men, not to be out-done by the navy got together more than one hundred Wisconsin "doughboys" later for a similar occasion at Highland Park, where G. I. Haight delivered a speech which every student soldier pronounced "the best ever," which was a sincere compliment after the way student soldiers are "fed up" on speeches in camp. Don't think these sixty days were all merry making—5:15 A. M. to 9:30 P. M., hard work and lots of it with a mess allowance of about fifty cents a day, was the regular program. We understand that many students were pleasantly surprised when, after clause six went "out of action" as a result of the new S. A. T. C. plan, they received commissions as "shavetails," and most of the faculty members were unpleasantly surprised to find that the new plan does not permit them to act as military instructors and remain civilians.

Clause 6. The faculty members and students will be trained as assistant instructors to help officers who will be assigned to institutions; no commissions will be issued but certificates of qualification as instructors.

What electives can he take? What hours must he drill? How many hours does he study? Well, if he is in the S. A. T. C. he is a soldier. He does what he is told. He sleeps, eats, works, plays, and goes to the hospital when he is told. He is really busy this year. If he loafs, he can't keep up. If he works he may become an officer. If the student is not in the S. A. T. C. conditions are not materially different from years gone by. More work and less play for the men. More knitting and less social frivolities for the women. Everybody is busy. Nearly everybody is happy. The college of peace times is not the college that war times temporarily necessitated. Perhaps the real things of college life are more in the foreground and the superficial things have been temporarily set aside. War had its demands. Peace has its requirements. War needs have had undisputed right of way this fall so the changes in the course of study were natural and necessary. The course of study for reconstruction times may require different emphasis than was required in peace times before the war. Whatever the demands, the University will intelligently serve.

Course of Study

Early in the fall the Secretary of the Faculty furnished statistics showing 1,048 alumni in fighting forces, 1,900 students in fighting forces, 75 alumni engaged in Government, industrial or social service, 174 Statistics students engaged in Government, industrial or social service—a total of 3,197. Records are already on file of 50 University students who have given their lives in our country's service. It is probable that the records of students in war service are almost complete, but that the records of graduates are still far from complete. All graduates who have not reported war service activities to the University are urged to do so.

The Win the War Convention called on November 8, 9, and 10, by the University, in cooperation with the League to Enforce Peace, was one of the most important meetings ever held in Madison. Formal League of Nations approval in September by the State Legislature makes this convention the first meeting of its kind authorized by an American commonwealth. The objects of the convention were:

To sustain the determination to fight until Prussian militarism has been forever crushed.

To confirm opposition to a premature peace.

To support the President to the utmost in his efforts to make good for the world the American Declaration of Independence.

To focus attention on the only advantage the American people seek to gain from the war—permanent peace guaranteed by a league of nations.

That a league of free nations is the one way to guarantee world peace is the firm belief expressed by the thoughtful recognized national authorities in representative fields of public activities who participated in the program. The growth of this idea is certain. County committees are already at work to consider the problems, and knowledge of this important matter will spread from this great meeting at Madison to all parts of the State.

Among the distinguished speakers on the program were:

W. H. Taft, C. R. Van Hise, J. M. Whitehead, Hamilton Holt, Mrs. L. K. M. Rosenberry, Mrs. P. N. Moore, Franz Sigel, J. B. Winslow, Rev. A. T. Guttery, Shailer Mathews, E. L. Philipp, A. M. Simons, J. P. Frey, A. L. Howell, M. M. Knecht, Capt. Snogge, Vittorio Falorsi, Toyokichi Iyenaga, Mrs. E. H. Van Ostrand, Rev. A. B. C. Dunne, R. P. Wilcox, and M. L. Burton.

Some shouted, some prayed, some sang, some pounded on tin pans, rang bells, blew whistles, yelled, danced, paraded. Probably all communities had various sized editions of the same sort of celebration. Three Armistice big demonstrations occurred here. One in the early morning long before daylight; another before noon which took the form of a large parade to which the University cadets added much dignity and a third in the afternoon when twenty thousand congregated for a more formal celebration at Camp Randall. The picture taken of that truly thankful gathering is so large that we regret that the pages of the Magazine will not contain it. The local question now uppermost in University circles is—"What about the S. A. T. C.?" No answer is offered. At present S. A. T. C. activities are going on as they did before the great news reached us that the armistice had been signed. That such activities may continue until general demobilization plans take effect would seem natural.

HOW THE WAR CAME TO WISCONSIN

By E. A. BIRGE

It gives me great pleasure to be with you (the U. W. Clubs of Chicago) tonight and to tell you about the University. I fear, however, that my speech will disappoint you.

The remarks of the chairman, as well as the questions which you have been asking me, indicate that you expect from me a statement of what the University of Wisconsin is doing in the war. That would be a very interesting story since great numbers both of the Faculty and the students are engaged in war service. Unfortunately, the most interesting part of the story can not be told until the war is over, but even so, much remains of which I could speak. But I did not come here to talk on this subject. My topic is not what Wisconsin is doing for the war but how the war came to Wisconsin.

Most of you probably know something of the new Students' Army Training Corps which has recently been established in colleges and universities. It started in Washington, not as an enterprise of the Government itself, but carried on by a council closely related to the War Department. The youth of the country were urged to go to college as a patriotic duty instead of going at once from high school into the Army. In this way they would secure both education and military training at college and by the time they had reached the draft age, then 21 years, they would be prepared to enter the Army as officers or in special technical service. The University was asked to cooperate in this movement, as were all the universities in the country. During the summer we pushed this plan vigorously, endeavoring to hold before the youth of the State the duty of serving the country by coming to the University to receive both academic and military training.

When the new draft law was passed, however, the Government changed completely its plans for the S. A. T. C.; the draft age is lowered to eighteen; the students who come to college are to be retained months rather than years. They

E. A. BIRGE, Acting President

With marked ability has been in charge during the establishment of the S. A. T. C.—the most important change in activities of American colleges.

are enlisted as privates in the Army and receive subsistence and lodging from the University, as well as education, and the Government pays for all of this. This new plan was announced to us on August 30. You will readily see that it is totally different from that which preceded it and that it involves a very complete reorganization of the University.

The University agreed to provide for 3,000 students of this type. It was necessary, therefore, to provide for housing and feeding this number of men. I need not go into the details of these arrangements. The boys have been housed in the women's buildings at the University, in the University Club, the Y. M. C. A., and in fraternity houses. The women of Barnard and Chadbourn have been housed in the group of fraternity houses at the foot of Henry Street. Thus a complete change has been made in our arrangements for housing;

a change which is partly indicated in our every day talk. We now speak of the "Chadbourn boys" and the "Chi Psi girls."

The changes in the course of study which the S. A. T. C. made necessary were even more numerous, and almost as revolutionary. Under the conditions of war the number of men among the students had greatly decreased, and the Faculty also had been greatly reduced. These conditions were found in practically all the colleges of the country. With the organization of the S. A. T. C., a great number of men were sent to the colleges and these must be taught with a reduced force of instructors. It was, therefore, necessary for us to revise our studies; dropping many elective courses in order that the large number of students might be taught by the smaller Faculty. A minor matter has been the division of the year into three terms instead of two semesters.

All of these changes had to be made in the course of a month since the University must be fully ready to receive and teach the students of the S. A. T. C. by October 1. The hearty cooperation of the Faculty made it possible to accomplish this work and, indeed, to do more than I have indicated. The plans of the War Department were almost as little formed as ours, since the scheme was a new one for it, as well as for us. In the last days of September, for instance, after we had revised our course of study and sent the time-table to press, we received instructions from Washington which made it necessary for us to stop the presses, revise the course of study again, and make a new time-table within three days time.

More than 2,600 students registered with us for the S. A. T. C. during the first week of the semester. About 1,730 women registered; a number practically identical with last year's registration. Besides these we have some 400 men in the ranks of the civilians. The University is reorganized on a war basis and is now in full operation as a military institution so far bread and it has striven to furnish that bread of daily life to its students and to the State. But the University has also fully exemplified the truth that man does "not live by bread alone." It has tried to supply that "word of God" by which both students and state must live. The war has modified and profoundly disturbed this relation. It has given an emphasis to technical and vocational work necessary for war ends, but quite out of proportion to the needs of peace. The fundamental question for the University of the future is whether the University will return to its former conditions when peace comes, or whether the vocational and technical work will continue to predominate. The war has shown the country the value of this work as never before, and there will be a strong pressure to over-emphasize it at the expense of liberal studies. The

I think that the best statement of the accomplishments and ideals of the University that I have heard was made by the Dean toward the close of his remarks. I suggest that it would be profitable if you could furnish Dean Birge with this portion of the transcript to have him employ it as the basis for a special article upon the ideals of the University of Wisconsin. It occurred to me as I was listening to him that night that there is probably no one better qualified to speak upon that subject than he, or better fitted to present a clear statement of what the University really is. This is merely a suggestion, but as questions as to the policy of a university education may be very vital at the close of the war, it might be helpful if the alumni could be able to express concretely some of the purposes for which the University has been striving heretofore.—G. I. H.

as the S. A. T. C. students are concerned. It is teaching besides over 2,000 civilian students, including as many women as we ever have had.

We have not yet reached the end of our changes. The War Department informs us that many of the S. A. T. C. students will be with us only three months, others for six months, while only a relatively few students in technical courses will remain longer than the end of the college year. The War Department states that it intends to replace the men thus called away by others sent from the cantonments, who may, or may not, be high school graduates. It is plain that since the students are continually changing, the nature of our work for them must be correspondingly altered.

Thus the war has come to Wisconsin and has profoundly modified our daily life and our daily work. It has changed our curriculum and our methods of teaching. At the close of the war the University will again need changes. It must be rebuilt, as so much else in society will need to be reorganized. One often hears of the peculiar characteristics of the University, but probably no two persons would exactly agree as to these peculiarities. I have found them in the combination that has existed there of technical and practical studies vigorously taught and of liberal studies as strongly maintained. Ours has been very far from the university in which "nothing useful is taught." On the contrary, it has cordially accepted the truth that man lives by pressure will come on the courses of study. It is likely to affect even more powerfully the temper of the students who come to us. If, therefore, after the war, the University is to be reorganized on its historical basis of associated liberal and technical studies, it will need, most of all, the aid of its alumni who sympathize with and share that spirit which I have tried to set before you.

We do not expect that the University of the future will be a mere reestablishment of the University of the past. That would be a misfortune. We must look for and work for an institution with a larger vision, a wider outlook; a University with a spiritual life made deeper and stronger by the profound experience brought to us by the war.

WISCONSIN ALUMNI CLUBS

"Sit together, listen together, sing together, eat together, and talk together, and you'll work together"

MINNEAPOLIS

The Club has had an unusually successful year under the splendid leadership of Guy Meeker, '99, monthly meetings at Dayton's Grill having been held, with an interesting speaker each time. The average attendance has been about twenty-five.

WEST BEND

The West Bend Club was organized in 1916 and, due to the zealous efforts of Cora Rohn, '10, whose death notice appears in this issue of the MAGAZINE, the three annual meetings have been distinctly successful. It was at the inspiration of Miss Rohn, who served as secretary, that the Club came into being, and the other members feel a signal loss in her passing.

WANTED

Many copies of the Number 1, Volume XX (November number) of THE WISCONSIN ALUMNI MAGAZINE are needed for men in foreign service. Our edition of 4,500 copies is exhausted. Will you, therefore, kindly mail us your copy of last month's issue so that we may send it "overseas?" Alumni Headquarters, Room 118, Historical Library.

16 Pall Mall E., London S. W. I., Oct. 25, 1918.

My dear Mrs. Commons:

I have sent this day candy and cigarettes to Jack. Buying candy in London just now is like searching for a needle in a haystack. I happened yesterday to visit the embassy and overheard the end of a toilsome negotiation to secure ten ton of sugar for candy-making for the American troops at the front, but what is ten tons among so many, and the English conception of candy is very different from ours.

We get very little news of Russia, less, I think, than you do in America. I was glad, however, to hear yesterday that communication with the troops in Archangel is good, and that they are very well supplied for the winter.

Of course we are all very much excited over the kaleidoscopic changes in events, and President Wilson is growing with great rapidity here. Just now we hardly expect the Germans to lay down arms at once, but we all recognize that the war may be over within a week.

Very sincerely yours,

CARL RUSSELL FISH.

ATHLETICS

T. T. E. Jones, head of the Athletic Department, who has always been counted on for much valuable aid in coaching the football material has been so busily occupied with military affairs cial training. Alumni hope that he may be sent back to Wisconsin.

John Richards, '96, who has had such wide success as football coach at Wisconsin, was called to Washington early in the season to fill an important executive position in connection with government plans for recreational education of war workers.

Guy Lowman, basketball and baseball coach, who is recognized as the keenest football scout in the West, has had almost single-handed responsibility in football matters at Wisconsin this fall.

M. A. Kent, basketball coach at Iowa, has finally been hired as an athletic coach at Wisconsin. Mr. Kent arrived in Madison on November 10.

These four brief items will go far toward explaining some of the many difficulties Wisconsin's athletic program has encountered this fall. The influenza epidemic and military regulations forbidding out-of-town games during October, were additional handicaps. The work of the team and coach is not subject to criticisms that might apply during peace times. Both have labored hard, both have done their best. Both deserve praise and encouragement.

WISCONSIN 21—BELOIT 0

WISCONSIN 0—ILLINOIS 22

The big home-coming game on November 9th was won by the best team. Zuppke's eleven outplayed and outclassed Wisconsin. A puzzling end shift formation was successfully used by Illinois throughout the game. The many home-coming spectators were entertained by some clever forward passing in the fourth quarter when a series of three passes netted over forty yards for Wisconsin. This rally came too late, for when but ten yards from Illinois goal an incomplete pass on the fourth down gave the ball again to the visitors who kicked it out of danger. Sundt out-punted Illinois, but failure of Wisconsin ends to get down on punts usually left such exchanges to Illinois' advantage.

Campbell's time was 27.51.

La Nouvelle Croisade

For this interesting article we are indebted to Lt. M. W. Sergeant, '18, a letter from whom appeared in the April number of the ALUMNI MAGAZINE. After being on detached service for several months, during which he traveled hundreds of miles besides suffering a severe attack of influenza, Lt. Sergeant was assigned to Co. L, 320th Inf. and "got into the scrap at St. Mihiel." The influenza laid him up again, taking him through three hospitals and enabling him to spend three days in Paris, when he "played golf at Versailles all Sunday afternoon." By a devious three hundred mile trip he returned to the front in command of his company, and then—"three days in Hell among dead men and horses under Boche fire all the time, wounded and back to evacuation hospital (where I saw Sgt. Harold Shapiro, former Ag. classmate, working in the sanitary corps) trip to B. H. at Vittel, change to B. H. here at Vichy—life of ease and plenty just like a millionaire's only son. Some life, isn't it?"

One of Lt. Sergeant's first acts upon learning that he had been granted a "war diploma" was to enroll among the alumni and subscribe to the ALUMNI MAGAZINE. The University has no more loyal son.

IN the Paris Matin of August 22, 1918, appeared a letter which will interest all alumni, for it describes a visit to the Americans in the Tardenois. As all war correspondents must do, the writer says, he presents a picture of devastation which is enough to stimulate hatred in "the too forgetful, too kindly French heart." "Let us hate the Germans, even though a little less than they hate us," he exclaims; "that will be to hate them enough." His present trip follows the Marne, "among the ruins of the glorious march of the American army." In the brilliant sunshine which puts all the charming landscape of the Ile-de-France en fete the devastation of war is unusually shocking.

Proceeding toward the Vesle, the nearer he approaches the front, the denser becomes the crowd of troops and vehicles, the thicker the clouds of dust. The sight strangely impresses him, "this of a people come from the other side of the world on crusade to the rescue of civilization."

Au repos!

(Translation by Julia Brookins, '10)

"At the edge of a wood a song makes us pause; it seems to be the Marseillaise in very quick time. Is it a French company camped there, for some of our army are mingled here and there with the American troops in the Tardenois?"

"These are young Yankees who are singing, seated on a log in the easy manner of the camp, and wearing the forage cap, which according to recent orders is replacing the felt hat in the American army.

"The young men who compose the division encamped here are natives of the states of Wisconsin and Michigan. All come from colleges or from the universities of Madison and Ann Arbor. They belonged before the war to the National Guard, that is to say to a volunteer militia formed by young men with military enthusiasm who drilled once a week for sport. This militia of about 160,000 men distributed among all the states of America composed, with the 80,000 men of the regular army, the entire military force of the United States. These figures can serve as a basis on which to measure the immense task carried out by our allies.

"A lieutenant relates to us the deed of arms of a sergeant of German blood, who, ordered out on a perilous scouting trip, left with the exclamation, "The Boches can't kill a Boche," and brought back his report, delighted to have done an ill turn to the barbarians whom he had disowned.

"The lieutenant tells us of many other heroic acts performed by his division, simply, calmly, light-heartedly—à l'Américaine. His men, who are his friends, listen grouped about him, for in the army of the United States if the discipline—freely submitted to—is most rigorous during action, when off duty the friendly intercourse is charming among these young fellows of like origin and similar education. Among them there are in reality no superiors or inferiors, but they are equals of whom some have only a heavier responsibility and a more difficult task than the others.

"When we ask the lieutenant what the mascot of the regiment is, he presents it to us with a smile. It is a little French child of the invaded regions, abandoned in one of the sad dramas of our ruined homes; he has followed this regiment, which will not abandon him. With his godfathers he will go to America and over there will make his way in life. Truly we leave with regret these young heroes, so simple, so cordial."

After making a pilgrimage to the neighboring tomb of Quentin Roosevelt and glancing at the chateau where Hindenburg established his headquarters, the correspondent takes a farewell view of the region. Here and there the peaceful twilight is angrily illumined by the glare of artillery fire, and he sadly exclaims, "When will our poor country be delivered?" But at the headquarters of the American correspondents comfort comes with the night. The communique shows steady progress; on the great wall map the line is pushed eastward; "and little by little we see the field of deliverance extended."

THE NEW HEAD OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

IN the election, on November 11th, of Frederick H. Clausen as head of the Alumni Association, the Alumni Council paid a most fitting honor to a loyal and prominent alumnus, and secured to the Association the services of an exceptionally able executive.

Mr. Clausen, who is remembered on the Hill no less for his gift for friendliness than for his success along many lines of work, entered the University in 1893. He received his B. L. in 1897, and his law degree two years later.

While in college his activities were so diversified and the offices he held so numerous that they afford the best indication of the breadth of his interests and his popularity both in his class and in the University at large. Mr. Clausen was a member of Athena and appeared on her sophomore Semi-Public in 1894-5; he sang for three years in the Glee Club, was a member of the baseball team, the football team and the crew, besides finding time to serve as officer in the Band, on the Junior Prom Committee, on the Board of the Athletic Association, the Democratic Club, the Board of Directors of the Cooperative Association, and as class president in his sophomore year.

Since leaving college Mr. Clausen has achieved distinction along larger lines. Upon finishing his law course he went to Horicon, where he joined the Van Brunt Manufacturing Company with which he has been identified ever since, being now its manager and treasurer. His success as an executive in business lines and the services rendered his locality have led inevitably to larger work in a state-wide field.

For two years past Mr. Clausen has served as president of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' Association, and, as a part of his war work, has represented the Manufacturers' Association on the State Labor Board in connection with the U. S. Labor Employment Bureau, dealing with the control of labor as affecting all war contracts in the State, and maintaining the new Federal Employment Bureaus. Mr.

Clausen is, in addition, chairman of District Fourteen of the Wisconsin section of the Resources and Conversion Division of the War Industries Board and served on his local Draft Board.

In the service of the University Mr. Clausen has been a member of the Board of Visitors and of the Alumni Council and of the Alumni Board. (Mrs. Clausen was Eleanor Bliss of the class of 1899.)

At the Council Meeting, after his induction into the chair by Charles Rogers, '93, the president-elect made a capital speech referring briefly to the problems of peace as touching the University, and the need of alumni cooperation as our Alma Mater, while honoring her dead, must turn to the service of the living.

It is safe to predict that Mr. Clausen will render invaluable service in the difficult years just ahead. Both the University and the Association are to be congratulated.

CLASSES

Sec'y—MRS. F. W. WILLIAMS, Milwaukee

"The name of Kate Dewey Cole, of Washington, D. C., will at once attract the attention of '75 and neighboring classes" wrote Mrs. Perry Williams (Fannie West) in a letter of recent date. "It was the rare good fortune of your secretary," continues the communication, "to spend seven memorable weeks in July and August with our old friend in her beautiful summer home among the hills of southeastern Connecticut. This home is a forty acre farm with a hundred and fifty-year-old house of pure Colonial type, the farm being a mile from the little village of Brooklyn, which is three miles from the railroad. Certainly no more favorable setting could be devised for the renewing or strengthening of an old college friendship. Kate herself has grown old, or older, 'true to type,' as Abby Murdock, '76, of Boston, so happily phrased it. Nothing more need be said to those who remember that fine, unusual type, except that with the years she has grown mellow instead of hard. That, too, may be a part of the 'true-to-type' development.

"The war was dramatized recently for us by the fact that Felix Cole, ex '09, is U. S. Consul at Archangel. To us who knew her well, it is perfectly logical that Kate's only son should be a cosmopolitan, and should now be occupying a position of international importance. He was in the consular office at Petrograd at the time of the first revolution. There he married a Russian girl. When Felix was sent to Archangel as consul, his wife went with her baby to Harbin, Manchuria, where her father is a government official; so the family is about as widely and dramatically separated as possible. There was one U. W. household where Russian news was more eagerly awaited even than that from the Flanders front.

"Theodore Cole, '71, was in Brooklyn for a part of the summer. He also, seems to be inwardly the same, and outwardly, not very different, judged by the level eyes of equal years. Indeed, if one were to moralize, it would be to the effect that character is pretty firmly fixed in the college years, the chief difference being, as Kate herself expressed it, that some of us slow down with the years, while others speed up."

I refer to the fact that during the trying years of the present war, American foreign trade has been presented with an asset which cannot be measured by mere money standards. Every business man knows that selling goods is not a mere mechanical operation. The psychological element, call it 'good will,' or anything else, is a factor of the utmost importance in establishing permanent trade relations. It cements the bonds of friendship between individuals as well as among nations. The war has created unprecedented conditions in this respect. Likes and dislikes among nations have become intense and deep-rooted. It will take a leveling process of many years to overcome these conditions, as far as mutual antipathy and lack of trust are concerned. On the other hand, the ties of friendship, which have grown up between our American soldier boys and their foreign comrades in arms, the untold deeds and love and duty performed by the American Red Cross on the battlefields, in the hospitals and in the devastated regions of foreign countries, and above all, the farsighted and skillful diplomacy of President Wilson and his genius in interpreting the humanitarian and unselfish motives which have guided our people in their relations with other nations, has called forth in all parts of the world unmistakable evidence of good will for America, of faith in her leadership, of respect for the standards of life, of her people and trust in the fairness and integrity of her business relations."

Reg., U. S. M. C., A. E. F., France, reads:

"My duties since coming over here have been of such a variety as to entitle me to a membership in a Jack-of-all-trades organization. Shortly after landing last year, when work was plentiful and labor scarce, I had the exalted position of boss to a stevedore gang on the new docks. I was later promoted to be a guardian of the health, safety, and morals of the new shiploads of Yanks who were being steadily dumped on French soil. For the last eight months, however, I've been in the midst of the work which will leave the German people kaiserless and the Crown Prince fatherless. I've been in the trenches, repulsed raids, wallowed in mud knee-deep, and met the Boches at close quarters; but, in all my activities in the trenches, nothing can compare with this war of movement and position for real hard work and nervous strain. There's the constant shelling every night, and the advances with hailing machine gun bullets, and hand-to-hand struggles in the day time; and, after the objectives have been reached, there's the digging for cover from shrapnel and shell splinters. A two-shift-a-day worker in the Bethlehem Steel Works has what is commonly termed a "snap" compared to what a soldier undergoes in this war. I'm speaking from experience for I've been over the top with them a number of times.

"A great number of Wisconsin men are in the big fight. I accidentally met Arlie Schardt in a woods the other day while we were stopping the Boche attacks; Irving Wood was wounded in action; and Lt. Paul Taylor was severely gassed, but is coming along nicely. He'll soon be back at the front. At present, he, Lee Brown, and I are convalescing. We all expect to be back at the front in a short time. 'Jud' Felman is still sending his compliments to the Germans through the medium of the famous 75's. Cranefield, Ulmer, and Kinne—all Wisconsin men—were killed in battle."

CAMPUS NOTES

Maj. J. D. Holloway, '10 (Sheffield Scientific School) has recently been sent to Wisconsin as S. A. T. C. commandant. Prior to 1917 Major Holloway was engaged in the steel industry at Wheeling, W. Va. He secured a commission as Captain at the F. O. T. C. at Fort Benjamin Harrison. He comes to Madison from Kansas City, where he had charge of a detachment to prepare men as auto mechanics in the Sweeny Technical School. Prior to being stationed at Kansas City, he was in charge of the first infantry at the S. O. T. C. at Camp Sherman.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching has just issued its Eleventh Bulletin, "A Study of Engineering Education," which has been in process of development during the past four years in cooperation with the Joint Committee on Engineering Education of the National Engineering Societies.

The Wisconsin War History Commission, appointed by the State Council of Defense to promote the collection and preservation of the records of Wisconsin's part in the war, has organized county war history committees. A complete service record of every man who goes from the county, together with his picture, is the foundation of the collection, which will be the enduring memorial of the share taken by the locality in the war for world freedom. To supplement the local war collections a great central collection is being developed at the State Historical Library.

A course in pharmacy is being given in eight terms of 12 weeks each to S. A. T. C. soldiers who desire to specialize in this subject. About 25 soldiers are enrolled in the course at present.

A course in wireless telegraphy, is now being given for soldiers in the S. A. T. C. vocational detachment under direction of the army signal corps, and will prepare men as non-commissioned officers. Applicants must be over 19 years of age, high school graduates, and registrants in the draft of Sept. 12. Members of the collegiate branch, or Section A. of the S. A. T. C. may transfer into the wireless course.

Fraternity life is again encouraged to resume certain approved activities. Early in the fall S. A. T. C. regulations suspended most fraternity undertakings except necessary business meetings.

The Plant Pathology Department will direct the work to protect cabbage growers against the black leg disease which prevailed in many fields this season.

A submarine detector invented by Professors Max Mason, E. M. Terry and J. R. Roebuck of Wisconsin is being used in almost every American destroyer, transport, and submarine chaser. Utmost secrecy has guarded the invention during the past 15 months and even now nothing of its mechanism or basic idea has been made public.

The University of Wisconsin War Book, reprint of the 20 War Pamphlets written by Wisconsin professors and circulated to the number of 400,000 throughout the State last year, will be used as one of the two text-books used in the course on War Aims which the war department requires for all S. A. T. C. men.

The Athletic Council serves in an advisory capacity to the commanding officer to the S. A. T. C. in the control of intramural and intercollegiate athletics. The physical property, receipts and disbursements is handled through Administration Division.

The American University Union in Europe has just sent to America a list of 212 Wisconsin men who registered at the London or Paris Union between July 26 and Oct. 10. This list includes 1 major, 8 captains, 126 lieutenants, and 2 ensigns. Added to previous lists, this brings a total of Badgers registered with the Union up to 408.

Prof. H. L. Smith of the Law School is acting as special agent of the State Department in Columbia and Ecuador.
