MARTIN STILL IN U. S.; WILL APPEAR HERE

Sinfonia Denies Report That Singer Has Sailed For Europe

COMES HERE ON JULY 27

That Riccardo Martin, "America's greatest tenor," sailed for Europe on the steamship Majestic recently is emphatically denied by Sinfonia fraternity.

When the announcement was made in the July 15 issue of "Musical America" the club sent a wire to the Chicago manager of the grand opera star. An immediate denial came back saying: "Martin did not sail and will be with you as per contract."

Will Sing Here

Martin is scheduled to sing July 27 in the university gymnasium. Prospective concert goers who saw the musical magazine were afraid that they were to miss the opportunity of hearing the international opera star, and consequently there were many telephone calls to get the matter cleared up.

Martin has passage booked for a trip to Europe and his concert in Madison will be given en route to New York but that will be after appearing in Madison. The artist is at present in California.

He Swims

The trip to Europe will be a vacation, for traveling is one of the singer's greatest delights. Although he has to do a great deal of it in his concert work, yet he also chooses it as a recreation. He is an ardent motorist and has made several transcontinental trips in his high powered cars.

Swimming and rowing are other favored sports of the tenor so that his friends predict that he will find the Madison lakes greatly to his liking. He is athletic and firmly believes that the more rugged the singer's exercise the more robust will be his singing.

BOARD STUDENTS RECEIVE HONORS

Lists have just been completed of the Federal Board students of the University who have received Honors this year.

The system of the local office, which is based on the the number of grade points received in scholastic work for the semester or year, is run independently of any system of the University. High honors are given for 40 or more grade points per semester, or 80 or more per year. Honors are given to those who receive 30-39 grade points, inclusive, per semester, or 60-79, inclusive, per year.

The list of High Honors is headed by G. A. Ballam with 105 grade points. G. G. Mackmiller received 100 grade points, J. J. Michaels—84; W. Christensen and N. C. Trauba 83.

Honors for high scholastic work were also given to H. G. Horne, H. B. Reyer, G. B. Henry, R. W. Pinto, L. R. Oshaw, R. W. Kanitz, H. L. Kuester, Leo H. Kohl, O. C. Rabbit, L. C. Nelson, L. W. Peterson, Louis C. Crew, Frank Hyer, F. L. Webster, M. W. Brown, Wm. A. Hartman, J. T. Desmond, L. E. Hume, G. E. McMillin, Jos. Semb, J. L. Bumbalek, G. H. Haug, R. I. Canutesen, W. L. Lowry, B. A. Stein, O. E. Benell, W. H. Searls, H. C. Nelson, E. Oertel, E. A. Ramaker.

ROSS RECITAL IS CANCELLED HERE

Apprehension that the rail strike might prevent Gilbert Ross from reaching New York in time to sail for England Aug. 2 on the York is the reason given by Prof. M. V. O'Shea for the sudden departure and cancellation of the violinist's recital scheduled for this evening in the Music hall.

Mr. Ross is planning to make his debut early this fall in Berlin. After giving two recitals alone he expects to give a joint recital with his cousin Sylvia Lent who is also a violinist. Returning in the spring Mr. Ross plans on making his first American appearance in a concert to be given in New York.

For the past three years Mr. Ross has been studying under the direction of Professor Oure of New York. He is the son of Prof. E. A. Ross of the Sociology department.

Amateur Journalism Incentive For Work

"Amateur journalism furnishes the strongest incentive for a student to turn out a perfect piece of work," declared Mr. Maurice W. Moe, instructor in West Division high school, Milwaukee, in a lecture Wednesday afternoon in the Law building on the use of amateur journalism in connection with the teaching of English composition.

Students who have not attempted to write for the school paper will be attracted by amateur journalism, Mr. Moe said. The fact that they are writing for print will stimulate them to do their best, and they will become more interested in their English work. To interest his students the teacher should become an active amateur journalist himself.

Local clubs, branches of the United Amateur Press association, may be formed. To become a member of this association the applicant sends a piece of writing as a credential, and a small initiation fee. Papers or magazines are often published by these clubs. Several of these were on display after the lecture.

FOUR LEFT IN TENNIS FINALS

Four men qualified in the tennis tournament semi-finals which were played off yesterday. They are: Richard M. Headley, Jack Williams, George Travis, and Robert Stauffer.

Headley defeated T. E. Rawlins 6-3, 6-3; Williams won from H. C. Oakey 6-4, 6-2; Travis defeated V. Y. Tuttle 6-2, 7-5; and Stauffer, last summer's champion, defended his title by winning from R. F. Gibson 6-3, 8-6.

The winners of yesterday's matches will meet today in the final clash to determine the all-university championship. A gold medal will be awarded the winner.

Entries for the doubles closed yesterday with 14 couples registered. Drawings for pairings will be made today and the opening round will probably be played off Monday.

MARS HAS OPEN HOUSE ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Mars held an open house Wednesday evening. Throngs of people at the Washburn observatory patiently awaited their turn to view the planet. Many became tired and decided to return at another time but their places were quickly filled by others.

The usual closing hour, which is 10 o'clock, was extended to accommodate those who had waited so long.

Author's Reading Given By Leonard

By William Engelking

An appreciative audience listened to Prof. W. E. Leonard of the English department Thursday afternoon as he read several choice poems of which he is the author.

Each poem was preceded by a few introductory words. Then with his resonant ringing voice Professor Leonard proceeded to paint a picture so vivid and suggestive, that the idea embodied in the selection was apparent to everyone in the audience. There was no trace of rapid wordiness, but a simple expressive phrasing of poetic conception.

Creates Sensation

The most impressive poem described the fate of four radicals, who had transgressed against our government. The dank, gloomy, dungeon, with its slimy floors and walls, the four emaciated prisoners with their bearded chins drooping on their breasts, chained side by side, are portrayed with gripping distinctness.

The poem was based on the confinement of four fanatics at the prison at Alcatraz, California. Professor Leonard mentioned that at Oberlin the president and the faculty had sent a petition to Washington for their release. Then he added that our faculty has never been known to take similar action, so discussion of it in their absence was next best.

Read Short Lyrics

Several short lyrics were read which show the touch of a genuine artist. "Indian Summer", as the title implies, left a pleasant impression of long, blowing grass, red sumac, golden sunset and melancholy dreams.

The mystery of the "Phantom Skater" had a strange appeal for all. The solitary figure with streaming scarf and shining blades brought with him a wake of curling snow from who knows where? Two sonnets written for the three-hundredth Shakespearean anniversary were dedicated to Shakespeare's greatness in creative imagination and human understanding.

Veterans To Have Big Time Picnic

Approximately 400 disabled veterans from Madison will hold their annual picnic at Bernard's park on July 3.

The committees in charge have arranged an interesting program which will consist of races, prize contests and baseball games for the veterans and their families.

John O. Boheim, president of the 4C Gun and Blade club, states that the veterans are much pleased with the response of the Madison business men for prizes to be given at the picnic.

Transportation arrangements have been made by boat from Park street and Bernard's landing. Boats will leave the Park street dock beginning at 1 o'clock Sunday and Bernard's beginning at 1:10, and every half hour following for the entire afternoon. Tickets will be 50c.

All Federal trainees have received invitations to the picnic and are requested to state their intentions and return the card at once.

LAKE STREET NINE LOSES TO LOWMAN

Coach Lowman's team won by a score of 8-3 from the Lake Street nine on the lower campus yesterday afternoon. Up to the fourth inning the game was closely contested the score being three to three. The next game will be with the Lutherans this evening.

EULER IS ONE OF FEW GREAT SCIENTIFIC MEN

"The history of any science is largely the history of a few great men," said Prof. A. Dresden in his lecture Thursday on "The Life and Work of Leonhard Euler, renowned mathematician."

Hudson Maxim says, "Cigarettes are the makers of invalids, criminals and fools." Which brings to mind the fact that some of our most prominent faculty members suck the weed, and also that it will not affect the Phi Deltis.

Thomas Edison says, "There are too many stocking banks in the U. S." When did he change his field of observation? And why?

The free movie last evening left the librarians free to improve their time. We intend to enlist the support of the multitude of municipal clubs in pressing the city council to pass an ordinance prohibiting the showing of free movies within two blocks of the university.

In connection with the above mentioned worthies we might say that Anna, the daughter of Esch, has decided to become a painter and paint red barns like Wee Ma-Greger. She will do the eaves while Bernie Mautz plies a giddy brush about the foundation.

Every Cleveland Player Makes At Least One Hit in Game

WASHINGTON—Cleveland recorded its 11th consecutive victory on Thursday when it defeated Washington, 8 to 2, in the second game of the series. The visitors knocked Erickson out of the box in the fifth when Jamieson clouted a home run over the right field wall with Uhle, who had tripled, on base. #### WHAT MUSIC HAS DONE TO ME

Now there was mother. It killed her.

Before we met mother she was all for a musical career.

Most unfortunately, father was a practical man, a plumber, and true to the views of the union he considered that the only worth while music was rendered by a steam calliope.

Mother was a dead game sport so she decided to satisfy her thirst for sharps and flats by making a Kreisler out of brother Henry.

From 8 to 18 Hank played the fiddle for mother and then he went away to college.

When Hank came home from college mother didn't mind the fact that he had learned to smoke and drink and chase promiscuously. She could forgive all the vice if he would just do a few numbers from the Melody in F.

Well to leave out the literary umber, Hank stumbled over to the fiddle and knocked out all the blue notes of "Stumbling" and mother passed from this terrestrial sphere to a better land which lies beyond the grave.

Play Finals

Mrs. Melvin Jones Will Play Mrs. Letts For Title Today

CHICAGO—Mrs. Melvin Jones of Olympia fields, with whom the women's city golf championship has become a habit, will tee off at Indian Hill today in the finals with Mrs. Frederick C. Letts, Jr., Onwentsia, as her opponent. Mrs. Jones yesterday defeated last year's runner up, Mrs. E. E. Harwood, also of Olympia fields, 5 and 3, and Mrs. Letts continued with a 7 and 6 victory over Miss Lester Rein, Ridge-moor.

As to the ultimate result, every one is invited to roll her own conclusion. Golf as played by feminine golfers at Indian Hill this week has been more than ordinarily tricky.

Mrs. Jones, whose elimination appeared to be an easy matter for the first comer, has improved steadily all week, and she is now playing the game that made her leader of the local women golfers. Mrs. Letts has gone through her matches untroubled by a close fight, played a little more consistently yesterday than Mrs. Jones, but what will happen today is something not to be prophesied.

His interpretation of well known French and Italian numbers marked the singer as one who can fill the place of Caruso. Unlike most singers who have studied in Italy, Mr. Martin retained all the qualities of a true American artist. His tones were mellow and true, his pianissimos perfect.—Aberdeen Journal.

Last War Was Only On A Retail Scale; The Next Will Be Wholesale, Declares Irwin

"This last war was fought only on a retail scale, the next one will be fought on a wholesale and will crumble the white man's civilization," said Will Irwin, war correspondent and author who spoke in the interests of the Madison Park Chautauqua before 5,000 people at the university gym last night.

"The next war will mean the elimination of the white man's civilization and the domination of the yellow. We will find ourselves poking around in the ashes of our old civilization if the events of 1914-19 are reiterated.

"The next war will be fought not by individuals but by nations and the individual will not be an important figure, he will only be a part of a mammoth slaughtering machine. Airplanes and gases will feature the next war. Everything will be destroyed by both sides.

"Every man, woman and child will be fair game for killing in the next struggle. Generals realize that war is now a struggle between nations, and not armies, and each side will take the opportunity to ruin the country of the other, killing everything that they can, and ruining the rest.

"The history of warfare shows that in the wars of the barbarians the conqueror had no restrictions placed upon him, there were no restricting code of ethics governing his actions. Along about the time of the Greek philosophers we find the beginning of what we describe as the first code of civilized warfare. By modern times we have a developed code of warfare which is known to every soldier and officer. War today is supposed to be confined to armed men and civilians are not supposed to be troubled by either side, and cruel tools of killing were not to be used.

"If it had not been for this code of warfare that was built up during the centuries we should never have reached the glorious stage of civilization that we have reached. We should have all been killed off because of the intense armament and the cunning of the new war inventions.

"Within a fortnight after the beginning of the gigantic struggle in 1914 the code of civilized warfare that it had taken 26 centuries of civilization and Christianity to build up had dropped away. The Germans were the first violators when they killed some innocent children and the British were the next with their blockade on the German coast. Both of these actions were breaches of the international law. Page by page the code of civilized war dropped away and king barbarism reigned supreme.

"April 22, 1915, is the most important date of the war to my notion. It was a beautiful spring day with the wind blowing directly from the German's lines toward our own. Suddenly from the German lines came a beautiful bluish-white cloud which hung low to the ground and turned a beautiful opal in the last rays of the setting sun. It crept nearer and nearer to our lines until it finally enveloped us. Wherever it went men fell coughing and dying. The French and Canadians were in that line there at Ypres, and I was there, and none of us know how that line was held in that gas attack.

"I say that this date is important in the annals of human warfare because it marked the date of the beginning of the use of man's 'brain child' to kill man.

"The theories of strategy have been revolutionized in the last war. In the old days it was necessary for a man to hit another man with something hard in order to kill him. Today gas does the work more effectively and on a wholesale scale. War between armies died at Ypres that day that the Germans used gas. That simple chlorine gas was the beginning of the war between the gas makers until we find 14 different kinds of gas being used at the close of the war.

"America who has some of the keenest minds of the world entered the war a little later and soon had their brains at work manufacturing killing weapons.

"It was a college pal of mine that invented the most deadly of all the gases just as the armistice was signed. William Lewis was his name. Lewis' gas was sinking gas and would find its way into the most remote corners. If it settled on your skin in a place as large as a dime you were sure to die. It would eat through skin and clothing.

"Twelve good sized bombs of this gas, with a fair assistance of wind, would exterminate all the animal and human life in the cities of either Paris, Berlin or London.

"Women are now employed in war. They do the work of the men in the munition factories and supply the deadly weapon. For this reason women are fair game in warfare.

"I am not a yellow sensationalist but I am giving you the statements of every fighting man who really saw real trouble in a real war. This war cost us 10,000,000 boys which is more than the total population of France.

Greek Statue, Believed To Be 2000 Years Old, Is Dug Up On Untermeyer's N. Y. Estate

YONKERS, N. Y.—Buried three feet below a water main which had not been disturbed since it was laid thirty-eight years ago, workmen have found a statue, declared to be "pure Greek and 2,000 years old," at Greystone, Samuel Untermeyer's country place.

Isidor Konti, sculptor, after examination on Thursday declared that in his opinion the work not only was Greek but that it was too good to have been done by any but a real master. The statue is of a woman about four feet six inches high without the head, which has been broken off. No theory for the presence of the statue has been advanced.

PAVE LANGDON STREET

Langdon street, between Park and Lake streets, should be paved this summer.

Merely filling existing holes will not do much good. This has been demonstrated several times.

Every day cars bounce over the ruined paving with resulting danger to life and property. Perfect control of an automobile is practically impossible with the paving in its present condition.

Must some person be injured before the city and state can be induced to act? Is it necessary that actual damage result before the street can be repaired?

It is a disgrace to the city that one of its principal thoroughfares should be in the condition that Langdon street is in. Not only is the paving worn to such an extent as to be a menace, but the street is narrow and the storm sewers are inadequate.

Langdon street, between Park and Lake, should be repaved this summer with some permanent material, the street should be widened, the capacity of the storm sewers should be increased.

WATCHFUL GUARDIANS

Uniforms usually demand respect, if not admiration. They stand for service to a cause which is usually worthy and honest or else it would not advertise through the medium of a uniform.

When a uniform is a symbol of law and order it has every reason to be respected. Provided, however, that the service it stands for is really tendered by its wearer.

The uniform of the Madison policeman is a symbol of protection of the power which is to guard our rights and protect our property and lives. It would be well if we were occasionally reminded of this real purpose of the Madison policemen.

When deeds do not advertise, then words must. And deeds of protection, of safeguarding Madison citizens and their possessions have not been largely evident.

In fact the recent weeks have witnessed many cases of the hopeless inefficiency of the Madison police force.

Consider some of the recent robberies of fraternity and rooming houses. Consider the recent entrance of an intruder into a girls' rooming house. Cases where the police reached the scene entirely too late to be of any service in apprehending the offenders.

Or stand at the intersection of Henry and State streets and try to interpret the traffic officer's signals. If efficiency means making of a few unintelligible motions of the fingers, then the traffic officer at this corner is highly efficient. Nothing but shrewd guesswork on the part of the motorists prevents serious accident and loss of life.

The proverbial policeman who is seldom present when there is real need of him, must have many descendants on the Madison force.

World's Idea of a Scientist Is Wrong Instructor Claims

True Scientist Is Human, Alive, And Interested In Everything

"The world's idea of a scientist is all wrong," said C. D. Leake Thursday afternoon at Science hall in his lecture on "The Scientific Imagination."

The typical caricature of a scientist is a stony hearted vivisectionist with a Van Dyke beard, peculiar, narrow, prejudiced, and unsocial, but respected and supported by a world which rather fears than understands," Leake explained.

The true scientist is a very human individual keenly alive, and interested in everything about him. He is just like the rest of us—PLUS."

The same characteristic which makes a painter, sculptor, or a poet produces the scientist. That thing is imagination. The great Darwin didn't discover anything new. He just applied his imagination of facts that had already been observed and discussed by naturalists for generations, but his scientific imagination helped him to see the significance of those facts over great periods of time, and, behold, he had discovered the theory of organic development.

"The qualities of a scientist are the qualities of any successful man," concluded Mr. Leake, "but his powers of perception are probably keener, his patience greater, his attention to details much more careful."

PROF. LEONARD'S BOOK OFF PRESS

Prof. S. A. Leonard's new book, "Essential Principles of Teaching Reading and Literature," has just come from the press.

It deals with the teaching of reading and of literature from the third grade, through the high school, but it discusses methods only to illustrate how principles of choice and of procedure have been carried out in school rooms.

Notable features of the book are chapters dealing with educational dramatization, testing of reading, uses of composition, and class help in literature.

The central idea of the book as stated by the author is "that children's reading of literature should be always an achievement of realized, true, and significant experience."

The appendix contains extensive reading lists for pupils in both elementary and high schools.

Deer Diary

By K. T. Kutup.

Episode II. The First Big Mixer. June 30th, 12:30 p. m.—Diary, I should be slumbering now but here I am cruel enough writing away in the brilliant electric light and it glaring in Laura's sleeping face.

Diary, I can't sleep till I tell you all about it!

Tonight was a big mixer up on the campus. It was a beautiful night. The trees looked so big and dark and the moon was so round and yellow. It made me feel just awfully romantic so I decided to be the vamp tonight.

Under each big tree on the campus the native sons and daughters of each state assembled. There was an awful nice looking crowd at Illinois and the cutest cheer leader.

Each bunch sang their state songs and gave their state yells and believe me, old top, Illinois had the boys that put the noise in Illinois.

We sang that song, "Don't Send My Boy to —" and ended up and rather to Wisconsin—you know the rest.

Nobody mauled us cause nobody heard as they were all yelling their heads off.

Poor bunch from Dixie weren't going very strong so me and two Illinois fellows went over and sang "Old Kentucky Home" and "Dixie" and I rolled my r's and one of the darlinest boys from Tennessee took a fancy to me and we went to the "U" pharmacy for a sundae.

Diary, his eyes so languorous and his dark curly hair and, Diary, he thought I was the prettiest, the wittiest girl he ever knew. Oh, Diary, tomorrow afternoon we are going for a walk around the campus! Now to bed and I'll dream about him. Sweet dreams. (End of Chapter II.)

July 1st. Diary, last night when I was dreaming a wonderful dream I dreamt in the midst that a burglar was picking the lock at my door. I jumped up, thoroughly awake and full of excitement I heard that "scrape, scrape, scratch" and, Diary, it came from the lower drawer of my dresser.

I pulled it open and, horrors, there was a tiny mouse. I grabbed the sleeping Laura, shook her and together we yelled—

"Scat!"

The rat scampered out and around the room and we jumped upon the cots down on the floor and that crazy mouse jumped right into the trunk. By this time I was trembling with fear.

Laura said, "I won't sleep in this room tonight." And out she went into the other girls' room.

"Well, I won't either," I said. "Marian, Rosalind, wake up; there's a mouse!"

With one bound they jumped out on the floor like firemen answering an alarm.

"Where, what?"

Well, the four of us took my cot and we started to move it out into the hall, it being about one o'clock by now. It was too wide for the door, so we turned it sideways and then all the darn old bedclothes had to fall off!

Then we pushed with all our might and with the loudest bang down went the front legs of the cot and the back legs followed in like manner.

We had to get Lillian the strong lady of the house to put things to right again. By that time we were so tired we didn't care if the rats from the whole village of Hamelin were in the room.

But Laura whispered, "Katie, don't you think we'd better set the mouse trap?"

The house was awakened again and at last the trap was found but where was the cheese?

Laura in her usual goofy way says

"Brilliant idea" and grabbed a pen and wrote "cheese" on a piece of paper and set the trap. We all laughed.

But next morning we all ran to the trap and there was no "cheese." "Gee!" I says and "Gee" the girls says.

"Well" says I that rat must have been one from the university or one with an education.

Few Positions Are Open For Teachers Because of Supply

Many New Applicants In the Teaching Field Cut Jobs

There are more applications and fewer vacancies in the teaching field this year, according to Prof. Thomas Lloyd Jones, of the University Appointment bureau.

The increase in the number of applicants for teaching commerce and engineering is greatest because many are seeking employment in that field who have only recently become interested in teaching.

The increased number of applicants has resulted in a general tendency to raise the qualifications demanded for license, and to reduce the number of special licenses granted.

Some of the most recent appointments made are: Louis Van Ermen to Peoria, Ill.; Genevieve Felts to Alton, Ill.; Harriet Leverich to Sheboygan, Selvida Kenseth to Columbus.

The Appointment bureau receives about 50 per cent of its calls from schools outside the state. Its service is available only to students or graduates of the University of Wisconsin. Appointments are made to positions in high schools, normal schools, and colleges.

Kroes Lectures On Safety Education

That 80 per cent of the accidents which occur each year are due to carelessness, and only 20 per cent due to lack of mechanical safeguarding, was brought out in a lecture on Safety Education by A. C. Kroes, of the Employers' Mutual Liability Insurance co. in the Engineering auditorium, Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Kroes, who is director of the safety educational work carried on by this company, explained in detail the purpose of the service and the methods being used to prevent accidents among the thousands of employees throughout the state. The aim is to present propaganda which will instruct the workmen in guarding against accidents by anticipating those which are liable to happen, and by presenting the possibilities of safety by the use of concrete, commonplace examples.

The campaign as outlined by Mr. Kroes, is carried on by means of a succession of illustrated lectures given in the various industrial communities, these being supplemented by special moving pictures and appropriate posters and bulletins.

The meetings which are more of the nature of community entertainments, were held in 53 towns in Wisconsin last year, and the service is steadily increasing its influence among workmen and employers.

$75,000 More

New Hospital

St. Mary's Drive Reaches
$50,000 Mark; To Close Tomorrow

Hospital campaign activities on Thursday brought the total for St. Mary's building fund up to $50,000, according to the big uptown thermometer. Today's reading of the indicator represents sums that have actually been cleared. While in many quarters the response to the workers' appeal has been generous, the fact that some $75,000 remains to be pledged makes the remaining task one against big odds, for the campaign is scheduled to close by Saturday night.

"St. Mary's hospital campaign committee has a tremendous task before it to reach the $125,000 quota by the end of the week," said Charman F. W. Huels today. "While the ward workers have made heroic efforts to cover all the territory assigned to them, it has been a physical impossibility to reach everyone in one week's time."

"Persons who desire to make contributions need not wait until a solicitor calls, but may leave them at the campaign committee headquarters, fourth floor Cantwell building," he said. "We wish to urge everyone who expects to contribute to do so at once."

In the fifth ward Mrs. Joseph S. Evans and Mrs. William Ryan have been added to the ward workers.

The weekly bulletin of the Madison Association of Commerce, alive to the importance of the proposed improvement and to the municipal asset in St. Mary's hospital, says:

"Please remember that with the raising of $125,000 locally, an equal amount will be contributed by the mother house at St. Louis. Please remember, also, that more people who are not of the Catholic faith are treated at St. Mary's than Catholics."

Camp Douglas Is Free From Liquor Report

Prohibition Agents Say No Case Of Intoxication In Five Days

In a five day survey of the national guard encampment at Camp Douglas, not a soldier was found under the influence of intoxicating liquor, two state prohibition agents reported today to W. Stanley Smith, state prohibition commissioner.

Following the edict of Adj. Gen. O. Holway against booze in the soldier's camp, Captains Wisner, Hayward and Fuller, Portage, were detailed. Commencing last Saturday, a five-day clean-up was staged in surrounding towns in Juneau and Monroe counties which netted five arrests and five convictions. Fines totalling $750 were collected from four moonshiners arrested in Juneau county. Carl Moe, Clifton, was arrested and bound over to the circuit court of Monroe county.

"The soldiers are all happy," the agents reported. "They have good food, look healthy, and we didn't find a single case of intoxication."

America Appreciates Music, Martin Believes

"I believe America is the greatest musical public in the world," recently declared Riccardo Martin, grand opera star, who is to appear in concert at the university gymnasium July 27.

Martin's faith in the ability of the average American public to appreciate good music is backed up by years of experience with American audiences from Maine to California and the Gulf to Canada. He has, moreover, sung extensively in all the European countries so that he knows much of the foreign attitude toward music.

"I have found just as keen a discernment and just as excellent an appreciation of the best music in many of the towns and hamlets as I have in the great eastern cities," Martin explained. "An artist must prove his worth and have a high standard of music in the small town of the middle west just as much as in some great city. That is the reason I have such great optimism

PREDICT WISDOM TEETH LEAVING

Wisdom teeth may never cause our descendants sleepless nights and visits to the dentist, according to "The Theory of Scientific Prediction," which was the subject of a lecture given by C. D. Leake in Science hall, Wednesday afternoon.

"Disuse of our teeth, toes, and other organs is leading to their passing away," said Mr. Leake, "and the prediction of their absolute disappearance may be made in conjunction with the scientific laws of organic progression and inheritance."

The most remarkable examples of prediction have been made in astronomy, the speaker noted, emphasizing the discovery of the planet, Neptune, whose exact position and time of appearance were predicted by scientists long before the planet was observed.

Mr. Leake further explained how, in chemistry, Mandeleff formulated his periodic law, the study and application of which made possible the prediction of unknown elements and substances.

EFFICIENCY IN HOME NECESSARY—JOHNSTON

"If the efficiency required in business is brought into the home the work will no longer be the drudgery of old, looked down upon by both the wife and the family, but there will be a joy in creation and dishwashing will be no longer just dishwashing," said Margaret Johnston, supervisor of the Wisconsin state board of vocational education, in her lecture yesterday on "Home-Making as a Vocation." "Home is necessary for the child, the nation's greatest asset, and therefore home-making is the greatest possible vocation. Women are at last waking up to this fact and are even extending their supervision to other homes than their own. Vocational schools are training young girls for systematic management of homes."
