The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

This is how I supported myself long ago. I'd often want us to eat cornbread in the morning. In the evening I would wash the corn and then hang a basket until morning when the corn was dried out. Maybe around four o'clock in the morning I'd get up and make the flour until my old man got ready. He carried a pail out to the barn to go get milk and I put the bread (to boil) in water and then I went right out to help him until we were done. Then the bread is cooked and we ate it for breakfast.
