The President's Page

AS THIS is the last issue of THE WISCONSIN ALUMNUS under my administration as President of the Association, I am prompted to submit a brief report and to make a parting request.

The current fiscal year is one of the best years our association has ever experienced. The hard work done during recent years under the administrations of Howard Greene, Howard Potter, Harry Bullis, Myron Harshaw and others, and the consistently effective work of John Berge and his staff is bearing fruit.

Our membership and our income have reached a new high.

We are operating within our income.

Our investments of life membership funds are sound.

We have an effective operating staff.

We publish one of the outstanding alumni magazines of the country.

Our local clubs are in good condition.

Our various committees are doing all that is expected of them and more.

Our relations with the University and the student body are excellent.

We have complete harmony and cooperation among our members, our board of directors and our officers.

We are doing effective work in the interest of the University, the students and alumni, without fanfare.

The war has created new difficulties and also new opportunities for our association. To an increasing extent we are subjected to priorities, increased costs, possible loss of personnel and some loss in revenue. On the other hand we have an opportunity and a challenge to adjust our program to help win the war. A year ago the directors decided to send our publications, free of charge, to alumni in the armed service of their country. We started with a very limited mailing list. This list has now reached a total of 2,100 and the number is increasing daily as more join the colors.

We had some misgivings as to whether the Association could add this financial load to a budget already heavily loaded. We told alumni of the added burden we had assumed and loyal Badgers responded with sufficient additional memberships, especially $10.00 per year sustaining memberships, to send our publications to University of Wisconsin soldiers, sailors and marines everywhere. We trust, as more and more alumni join the Army and Navy, that more and more alumni on the home front will join the Association as regular, sustaining or life members to help carry this patriotic burden. Hundreds of letters from fighting Badgers everywhere testify to the satisfaction and inspiration gained from this activity of our association.

In closing may I thank our staff and the hundreds of alumni who, during the last year through the channels of our association and local Wisconsin clubs, have contributed of their energy and their means to promote the welfare of the University, its alumni and its student body.

Our new president, Judge Clayton F. Van Pelt of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, takes office July 1st. He is a loyal and capable friend of the University, with the desire to make our association as effective as possible in aiding our alma mater and in winning the war.

LET US ALL HELP.

Columns and Columns

IF YOU know Madison, you know Betty Cass' "Madison Day by Day" — the column that has consistently won the approval of its readers during the fourteen years of its existence. In it, Betty Cass neatly mixes humor and pathos, dreams and reality. The column contains a tenderness for home and an appreciation for travel; its material is drawn from the University campus, a newspaper office, and Madison's high schools and homes. Sometimes the column glows with description, again it pokes into the past, or maybe it just stands dreaming old memories over — memories of the little things human beings prize so much.

"Madison Day by Day" is so much a part of the state that the column has a special department in the permanent clipping files in the archives of the Wisconsin State Historical museum.

Betty Cass isn't her real name. Frances Elizabeth Cassell was the name her parents gave her when she was born in Savannah, Georgia. She was still quite young when her family moved to Hot Springs, Arkansas — the town that was to see the dawn of her newspaper career.

When Frances was seven years old, the Hot Springs New Era printed her first feature story. The paper was running children's bright saying contest, Frances wrote about something her younger sister said and submitted it without her parent's knowledge. Her entry didn't win the contest but it amused the staff so much that they gave it a headline and a front page spot. The Cassells were somewhat astonished when they saw the family name staring at them from the front page of the New Era.

When she was twice seven, and a sophomore in high school, the New Era printed her theatre reviews and society notes regularly.

The opinion of the man who taught her high school journalism courses in the Hot Springs classes, brought her to the University of Wisconsin. She esteemed his ability and judgment highly, so when he said he thought Wisconsin would give her the best possible newspaper training, Frances Elizabeth Cassell came to Madison.

In the fall of 1919 she enrolled in the University School of Journalism. She was on the Hill three years and worked besides carrying a full schedule. The first year she did stenographic work, the second, she did filing for Dean Nardin. In 1922, the last semester of her third year the Wisconsin State Journal paid her to pinch hit for its regular feature writer.

IT WAS during this year that Fran, as everyone called her then, acquired her pen name. The newspaper ran a smile contest shortly after she took her temporary place on the staff. The editor wanted someone whom the Madison public didn't know to manage and cover the contest. No regular staff member would do, but Fran Cassell would. To conceal her real identity further, the staff decided to give her a nom de plume. Alfred Willoughby, the man she later married, worked out a name. He used her second name — Elizabeth, and the first three letters of her surname. Fran didn't know what name she was to have until the newspaper indicated that the smile contest article was "by Betty Cass." That's how it happened.

As Betty Cass, she continued to write for the State Journal that semester and the following summer. Then a number of things happened. The society editor left the paper to get married, the returned regular feature writer became the society editor, and Betty Cass erased the word "temporary" from her status as feature writer.

Meanwhile the journalism school decided that Frances Cassell would never make a good newspaper woman. They asked her to leave school for a semes-

hits and misses

NOT SO many months ago the newspapers were full of accounts of the whistling soldiers under Gen. Lear who were so severely disciplined for whistling at girls in shorts. Comes now the reverse on our campus. During the late spring months, the girls in Elizabeth Waters hall got great delight from whistling at the sailors in the Navy's code school as they marched past the hall on their way to classes. Nor is there any explanation of the proper Navy attitude toward the girl who hung a different sign in her window daily, one of which read, "Let us prey! Aaaah men!" . . . The soldiers and sailors now housed on the campus have brought a distinct military air to old Baseom hill. One sees these men everywhere, going to classes, relaxing in the Union, playing ball on the campus intramural fields, and crowding State street and the Square on weekend leaves. . . . THE DAILY CARDINAL was at it again. Following the announcement of the elections of editors and business staff for the coming year, 27 staff members walked out on the banquet meeting in protest to what they called "an unfair election". The tempest died within the teapot and all is more or less serene as the semester closes. . . . And while we're talking about the CARDINAL, it is apropos that we mention the fact that this student daily won "All-American Pacemaker" rating for the third straight year in competition with other collegiate papers. . . . An asterisk after the name of LaVern L. Wade distinguished it from others in the list of candidates for degrees in the commencement program. An explanatory note read: "Died on the field of honor, December, 1941." Wade, who was killed in action in the Philippines, was awarded the degree of bachelor of science in education posthumously. . . . Three hundred freshmen in a class in modern European history were startled to discover at examination time that they had to write their own questions and answer them as well. The students were required to answer three of the eight questions they prepared or three from a test sheet. Grading was done on both the questions prepared as well as on the answers.

ONE of the most thrilling sights at the 1942 commencement ceremonies was the induction of 63 graduates of the University ROTC into the Army of the United States. These young 2nd lieutenants are shown receiving their oath of office from Maj. Franklin Clark, '27, while the entire audience in the huge field house stands at attention. All of these boys were assigned to active duty immediately.

ter. She fully intended to go back to the University that February but married Alfred Willoughby instead.

Then William Randolph Hearst bought the Baltimore American and News. He hired the Wisconsin State Journal managing editor — Ed Moak — and Moak took about six or eight Journal staff members to Baltimore with him. Among them was Alfred Willoughby. After a few months Betty joined her husband on the Baltimore American as a feature writer.

Baltimore was beautiful but big. Betty felt that Madison was more her size. Perhaps if the editors had permitted her to write that column she had her heart set on doing, she would have been happier. She'd been reading O. O. McIntyre and believed, as she still does, that he wrote about the best material that ever graced a newspaper. Every time she told them that the Baltimore American should have a column, they just ignored her.

AFTER four years, Betty Cass returned to Madison, holding fast to her desire to write a daily column. She talked daily column for two years, to both the Capital Times and the State Journal. They said the town was too small, there wasn't enough going on, and people were interested only in New York and Hollywood. Finally the Journal decided to let her try, with the prediction that she couldn't keep it going over three months. After that, they said, it would merely list small unimportant events: birthdays, socials, rummage sales. "Madison Day by Day" was printed for the first time on October 1, 1928. Today, according to a survey made by the University School of Journalism, the column is the most widely read and popular feature in the Journal. It's a hardy fourteen-year-old — this column that was given only three months to live.

It didn't degenerate into mere listing because Betty was wise enough to enforce a certain rule. Every item that goes into "Day by Day" must be a good story. Her readers are her first concern and she gives them good stories in spite of the dozen calls she receives every day asking her to mention a lost book or brooch, a dog or a door-knob.

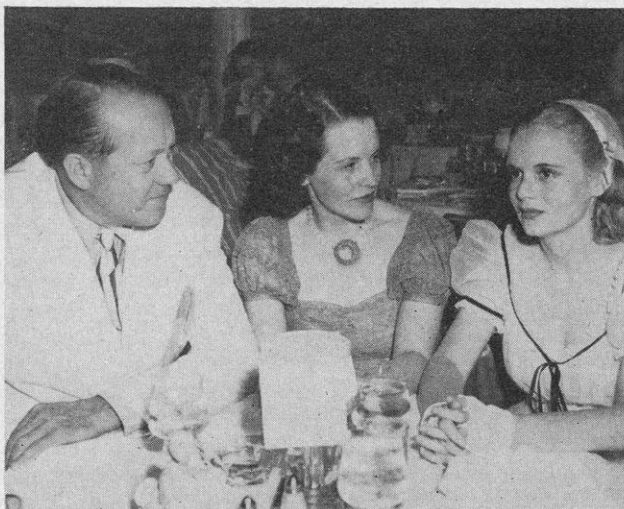

Sometimes, though, she writes stories that interest only herself — at first. Her essay columns, as she calls them, are born of her own experiences, memories and tastes, but they often attract an enduring interest from others. There's the gentle "I Collect Blue" that enchanted so many people; and the warmly real "When the Children are Grown Up and Gone." There was the essay about button boxes she remembered, and the story about the unattended visitors day so gallantly handled by the G. A. R. Even as many as ten years after a first appearance, readers ask for reprints or copies of Betty Cass's essay columns.

In 1928, "Day by Day" was one of the few columns of its time. Now city newspapers print dozens of them. Items from Betty Cass's column are reprinted in newspapers all the way from Boston to Honolulu. All of which goes to prove that when Betty Cass said there was as much to write about on Main Street as there was on 42nd, she was as right as rain. Big names don't make a column, but humanity does, and it's humanity you meet in "Madison Day by Day."

Betty Cass's activities and interests don't end with her column. She has three sons, 9, 11, and 13 years old, who keep her pretty busy at home. She also has two nieces who have lived with her for some time. The five youngsters occupy a considerable share of her time but she hasn't lost a single day of work in these fourteen years on their account.

She writes more than the single column, too. The Milwaukee Journal uses her feature stories frequently. For eight years she has written "Under the Counter" for Manchester's — a column that initiated a new type of advertising. The Betty Cass technique marks this story-advertising column that appears in the Sunday edition of the Wisconsin State Journal. Petty Cash is the by line she uses for this, — a nom de plume of her nom de plume. Manchester's have found that an article mentioned in Petty Cash's column receives the public's purchasing attention. It definitely sells merchandise.

Betty Cass, center, gathering Madison news from Hollywood with Director Nick Grinde, '15, and his charming fiancée, Marie Wilson, popular movie star

For a year, she's been writing a similar advertising column for the dry-cleaning company, Savidusky's. She calls it "Spot News" and it appears once a week. Its interesting, informative, humorous sidelights on dry cleaning tie up human interest and advertising, paralleling the effectiveness of radio advertising. Through this column type, Betty Cass believes, newspapers can meet radio on its own grounds of appeal.

There are still things Betty Cass would like to do. If her past is any gauge of her future, she'll probably do them. She's interested in the magazine field, has already written articles for Home and Garden and trade magazines, and plans to write more. Fiction writing attracts her, too. The Cornish people of Mineral Point whom she knows so well, Betty Cass believes, are good material for a novel. It takes time to write a novel, though, and that's something Betty Cass doesn't have on her hands. But she's done things before that everybody said couldn't be done. Maybe someday . . .

Bess Expeditionary Force

FOR three years, approximately every month, the Saturday Evening Post has published shrewd, eye-witness accounts of the conquered people of Europe's Nazi-occupied territories. The author, foreign correspondent Demaree Bess, crossed the belligerent lines four times, and covered every capital on the continent to gather material for his articles. He climaxed his amazing journalistic feats by dispatching his stories to the Post under the noses of the watchful Nazis. Demaree Bess has been the highly successful European correspondent for the Saturday Evening Post during 1939, '40 and '41.

Behind the man, deserving half the credit for his success, stands his wife and collaborator, Dorothy Bess. Dorothy Bess, a newspaper woman in her own right, is the daughter of Leon A. Berezniak, a Chicago lawyer. As a child, Dorothy was quiet, filled with a thousand aspirations, and addicted to filing clippings for a hobby. After acquiring a grade and high school education in Illinois, Indiana and Arkansas, she came to Wisconsin in 1916 for a university education. The most particular thing she did at the University, Dorothy says "was to fall in love with a Chi Phi, whom I married in 1918 and divorced, in Shanghai, in 1926." She left the University in the middle of her sophomore year, obeying the destiny that seemed to command her never to stay long in one place.

In Chicago, Dorothy began to do newspaper work, mainly because she thought it was an interesting way to earn a living. Her choice of occupation took her to Springfield, Illinois, and then to Minneapolis, which she left, after a time, for Hawaii, Tokyo, and Shanghai as foreign correspondent for the Detroit News.

In 1923, she wrote her first really big story — the news of the Japanese earthquake.

Dorothy met Demaree Bess in the summer of 1925, when he was writing for the Tokyo Advertiser. They were married in Tokyo on September 27, 1927. Their collaboration didn't begin immediately; it wasn't until a few years after their marriage that they discovered that the whole was greater than the halves. Now when they write for the Post, they pool their efforts, Dorothy Bess says, "my husband doing most of the work and I accepting much of the credit."

Everyone is willing to give her the credit she would dismiss so lightly. The Saturday Evening Post "Keeping Posted" column announces that the "Bess Expeditionary Force" is really a team, and that when the office called Geneva, Paris, Berlin, Helsinki, or Sofia, they were just as likely to get Dorothy as Demaree. Dorothy Bess was apparently on the job twenty-four hours a day and then some.

WHEN Demaree Bess crossed into the conquered areas, Dorothy usually headquartered wherever censor trouble wasn't too bad to facilitate the dispatch of the Saturday Evening Post articles. Usually it was Switzerland; once it was Budapest. There was a time when it took no more than forty-eight hours to wireless a war coverage article to Philadelphia. It was Mrs. Bess who received dispatches from her husband while he made his extended tours. When he returned, they worked the information into an article. This done, Mr. Bess' next step was to telephone it to a Press Wireless — which Dorothy helped him do. The copy crossed the sea by radio and was edited in Philadelphia about forty-eight hours after the whole process began.

This year Dorothy and Demaree Bess are home for the first time in four years. Late in September, 1941, they clipped to New York from Lisbon. Mr. Bess is now an associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post; and when Dorothy Bess isn't at her leisure time hobby, filing clippings, she's working with Mr. Bess as he prepares some articles in co-operation with the war department.

Because Demaree Bess is under contract to write ten articles a year for the Saturday Evening Post, you may expect to see more material written by these perfect collaborators.

Still Marching Ahead

FINANCIAL statements for June 1 show that the Wisconsin Alumni Association will have a very favorable progress report to make when the current fiscal year ends on August 31.

Membership income for the first nine months of the current fiscal year (September 1, 1941 to May 31, 1942) is higher than for all of last year, as these figures indicate. Membership income for all of last year — $13,518.50. Membership income for first nine months of current fiscal year — $14,290.50. Unless something totally unexpected occurs between now and August 31, membership income for the current fiscal year should be the highest in ten years.

Two factors are primarily responsible for this increase: Prompt payment of dues and an increase in the number of sustaining members. All types of members have cooperated by paying their dues promptly when billed, so that our percentage of dues not yet paid on June 1 of this year is the lowest in many years. This fine response on the part of our members has increased our membership income and also reduced our collection expense. This is an important item because every dollar spent for collection expense means one dollar less for productive Association activities.

Sustaining members also deserve special credit. By paying $10 a year instead of the regular membership fee of $4, these sustaining members are providing the extra steam that is needed to expand and accelerate Association activities. The extra income from these $10 memberships also makes it possible to offer memberships to the senior class at $1 and intermediate memberships for the first five years after graduation at $2 — half the regular rate. That younger alumni appreciate this opportunity is shown clearly by the fact that 793 of them have joined the Association since this intermediate rate was established five years ago.

Special Services for Badgers In the Armed Forces

HEADING the list of new Association activities this year, of course, are the special services for those loyal Badgers in Uncle Sam's armed forces. This work was initiated by the

by
John Berge
Executive Secretary

Board of Directors at their Homecoming meeting on October 25 last year — six weeks before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Already at that early date, several hundred Wisconsin alumni were in our armed forces. The number has grown steadily and now totals more than two thousand.

The Association sends these Badgers all its publications free of charge. All we ask is that they notify us of address changes so that our publications will reach them. To supplement our regular publications, we send them VICTORY LETTERS filled with timely news about their fellow alumni in the Army, Navy, and the Marines. Each issue of the ALUMNUS also has a section devoted to Wisconsin alumni in the service (see page 305). The Daily Cardinal, the Senior Council of the Class of 1942, and the Wisconsin Alumni Association cooperated in sending a special war edition of The Daily Cardinal to all Wisconsin alumni in military service.

These Badgers have been very generous in expressing their gratitude for these publications. A letter from Corp. A. J. Gamm, '42, put it this way: "The WISCONSIN ALUMNUS seems like a letter from home." Sgt. H. W. Husting, '41, said: "These newsy VICTORY LETTERS are indispensable — they don't come often enough." Don B. Berntson, '39, summarized it this way in his letter: "I am confident that my attitude is representative of all Wisconsin alumni when I say that the Wisconsin Alumni Association is contributing its share to national defense by providing free subscriptions to THE WISCONSIN ALUMNUS to men in the service of the United States."

This phase of our program of activities MUST be expanded and accelerated. These loyal Badgers are doing a magnificent job for their country and their Alma Mater. We must not let them down. These Badgers are hungry for news about their University and their fellow alumni — just as you were if you served in World War I. Supplying this news is our job — but we can't do it without your help. Every membership helps, so tell your fellow alumni about these special services and suggest that they cooperate by becoming members of the Association.

Class of 1942 Sets Membership Pace

IN SPITE of the large number of seniors in military service, the class of 1942 set a new high in Association members with a total of 218. The class of 1941 had 158 at the corresponding time last year. Since then the 1941 membership has climbed to 351 — the highest for any class. One of our jobs during the next few months is to bring the 1942 membership above this 351 mark. With the fine start already made, plus the splendid cooperation provided by the officers and leaders in the Class of 1942, this should be possible.

Recent senior classes have all cooperated effectively with the Association in our membership campaigns, but none have done a better job than Burleigh Jacobs and his associates in the class of 1942. President Jacobs and Alastair Sellars, chairman of the Alumni Association Committee, did an outstanding job and received fine support from their fellow members of the senior council.

World War II has influenced many Association activities during the past year. Our Founders' Day Broadcast, for example, was changed from a national hook-up to a state net-work in order that we might concentrate on telling the people in Wisconsin what the University is doing to win the war. Due to the scarcity of Wisconsin radio stations on the national net-work, a program on a coast-to-coast broadcast reaches only a very limited Wisconsin audience.

Placement activities were curtailed in some instances because jobs were so plentiful this year. Scholarships and awards were continued as last year. Ten of the twelve chapters of the University history have been published.

Looking ahead, several jobs demand our immediate attention. Since winning this war is the first objective of every red-blooded American, the Association must expand and develop its war-time activities. We must increase our membership so that we have the necessary funds to handle effectively the manifold services which logically belong to our organization. We must increase and strengthen our alumni clubs because every alumni club has a part to play in promoting the best interests of the University. Many of these clubs are now doing a splendid job in legislative work, promoting scholarships, finding jobs for seniors, and the many other activities which are open to every live alumni organization.

We need more awards and scholarships made possible by alumni clubs, individual alumni, and the Wisconsin Alumni Association. We need an award for women comparable to the Herfurth Efficiency Award for men provided each year by Theodore Herfurth,

War Time Reunions

*Streamlined reunions attract many;
new Association officers announced*

President-elect
C. F. Van Pelt

MEET your new president, Judge Clayton F. Van Pelt, B. A. '18, LL. B. '22, judge of the circuit court at Fond du Lac, Wis., a fine, intelligent leader, known to the public as "Judge" and to his countless friends as "Van". Judge Van Pelt was named to the presidency of the Association to succeed Albert J. Goedjen, '07, who has served during the past year. "Van" has been a member of the Association board of directors for the past two years, served as first vice-president this past year, and has long been a loyal and active alumnus. He was elected to the circuit court post in 1939 by the late Gov. Kohler. At the time, he was the youngest circuit judge in the state.

Elected to serve with Judge Van Pelt for the coming year are Philip H. Falk, '21, Madison's superintendent of schools, as 1st vice-president; George Ekern, '28, Chicago attorney, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. Hugo Kuechenmeister, '13, Milwaukee, secretary; and Dean Frank O. Holt, '07, of the University Extension Division, treasurer.

These elections were but one of the many highlights of a definitely "streamlined" reunion weekend. Because of the war and its attendant tire shortage, the speed-up in work schedules and the active participation by many in the service of the nation, all plans for reunions were curtailed from their usual length. Class affairs were confined to Saturday. The Alumni Institute was abandoned in favor of a single meeting sponsored by the Wisconsin X club. University activities such as the Memorial Day ceremonies and the Student Honors convocation were dovetailed with the reunion activities.

But in spite of the many deterring factors this year, a really grand group of reuners turned out for the affair. With the exception of the younger classes, which have been more deeply affected by the war conditions, all classes had at least average attendance. As one might expect, the Class of 1917, with a representation of more than 100, took top honors. 1907 and 1902 also had a fine attendance.

GETTING back to the Association's activities, members will be interested in the outcome of the elections for the board of directors. The following ten candidates were declared elected at the conclusion of the mail ballot conducted during May: Dr. Gunnar Gundersen, '17, La Crosse; Maj. Franklin L. Orth, '28, Ft. Benning, Ga.; A. M. Kessenich, '16, Minneapolis; Harlan B. Rogers, '09, Portage; A. J. Goedjen, '07, Green Bay; Mrs. Marshall B. Wood, '29, Rockford; Mrs. Richard Krug, '37, Milwaukee; George Ekern, '28, Chicago; and Dean Holt and Philip Falk of Madison.

The directors also announced the following elections of Association representatives on University boards: Mrs. George Lines, '98, Milwaukee, in place of Ben Kiekhofer, '12, Milwaukee, on the University board of visitors; Robert B. L. Murphy, '29, Madison, in place of Walter Frautschi, '24, Madison, on the Union Council; and Charles L. Byron, '08, Chicago, in place of Howard I. Potter, '16, Chicago, on the Athletic Board.

The directors took full cognizance of the seriousness and vastness of the war program on the University campus and passed the following resolution at their Saturday meeting:

"RESOLVED, that the Wisconsin Alumni Association supports every activity of the University in an all-out policy to aid in the national effort to win the war and the peace and, as an organization, pledges itself to give every possible assistance to implement the program of the University and our national government.

"FURTHER, that the President of the Wisconsin Alumni Association shall appoint a committee whose first responsibility shall be to formulate a specific program of war activities to expand the Association's present program and that this shall be presented to the Executive Committee of the Association for approval. Upon approval by the Executive Committee, the committee appointed to formulate the program is directed to implement the program."

THE reunion weekend opened with a dinner, sponsored by the Wisconsin X Club (former officers and directors of the Wisconsin Alumni Association) in Tripp Commons of the Union. Feature of this dinner, attended by approximately 200 alumni, was the singing of the Tudor Singers, a group of students and alumni organized under the direction of Prof. Edgar Gordon, of the School of Music.

Following the dinner, the group, augmented by several hundred additional alumni, was privileged to attend the X club's program in the University theater. There, under the chairmanship of Harry A. Bullis, '17, president of the X Club, alumni heard one of the finest speaking programs ever presented on the campus. John Earl Baker, '06, recently administrator of the Burma Road in China and resident of that country for more than a quarter of a century, spoke on "China and the United States: Partners in War and Peace." Prof. Edgar E. Robinson, '08, chairman of the history department at Stanford University and recipient of an honorary LL.D. at the June 1 Commencement ceremonies, spoke on "America's Answer". Both men did an excellent job of presenting the historical background, the present day developments and the future possibilities of the current conflict in the Far East.

Mr. Baker stated that "China will remain America's partner so long as America continues to fight. . . . I believe that China can hold on the Indo-China frontier and that the Chinese people will still be fighting Japan when our battleships and planes are taking Tokyo." Looking to the post-war world, Baker said that China would provide a tremendous market for American goods. He pointed out that development of China as a major factor in the Far East is important to maintain democratic ideals throughout the world.

Prof. Robinson discussed America's Answer to the war needs, basing his findings on the history of this nation. Dr. Robinson listed the six elements of American strength in the current war as manpower, machines, self-government, a record of aid to the oppressed, equality of opportunity to all men, and a recognized code of international conduct. America's record makes certain that this nation will again fulfill its destiny and lead the world to future progress, he concluded.

At its meeting early Saturday morning, the X club elected the following officers: John S. Lord, '04, president; A. John Berge, '22, secretary; Mrs. George Lines, '98, L. F. Graber, '10, and John Lord, executive committee. It was also decided by the members of the club to raise a scholarship fund for the student selected as the senior who had done most to promote the best interests of the University.

SATURDAY noon was the occasion for all reuning classes to gather for special class luncheons or picnics. The Home Economic alumnae and the School of Nursing alumnae had special meetings as well. Most colorful of these gatherings was the Half Century club luncheon in Tripp Commons. Present as guests of the University were the reuning members of the class of 1892 and those returning alumni of classes prior to '92. President Dykstra, President-emeritus E. A. Birge, Dr. Harry L. Russell, '88, retiring club president, and A. J. Goedjen, Alumni Association president, spoke to the group. Each member of the Class of 1892 was presented with a special membership card in the Half Century club by Mr. Goedjen.

At the conclusion of the meeting the club elected the following officers for the coming year: Dr. E. H. Ochsner, '91, president; Elbert H. Hand, '92, vice-president; and Mrs. Sophie Briggs, '88, secretary.

THREATENING weather forced the cancellation of the plans to hold the annual reunion dinner on the terrace of the Union and the event was moved to Great Hall, where nearly 600 alumni gathered. The speaking program has been eliminated from these dinners, but alumni were entertained by several student groups of singers and a young lady accordionist who accompanied the Class of 1897.

Two Madison alumni, Mrs. Charles R. Carpenter, '87, and Dean Frank O. Holt, '07, shared the spotlight at the annual reunion program in the Union theater following the dinner. Both were given special awards of recognition by the Alumni Association for their services to the University and the Association. In addition to these two awards, special cash awards were given to the student winners of the Walter Alexander award and the Alumni Association's outstanding junior awards. President Dykstra spoke briefly on the state of the University and retiring president Goedjen spoke about the work of the Association. The new president, Judge Van Pelt, was chairman of the meeting.

Mrs. Carpenter has been active in Alumni Association affairs for many years. She served as Association president in 1911, the only alumna to hold this office. She has been a member of numerous Association committees, has been an important cog in the Madison alumni club, and has never failed to answer a call to help the Association. In addition to her Association activities, Mrs. Carpenter served as a member of the University board of visitors for more than twenty years.

Dean Holt has been an increasingly important factor in the Association program during the past six years while he has been a member of the board of directors. He served as comptroller of the organization for a year and is currently treasurer. As chairman of many Association committees he has given unstintingly of his time for the betterment of the organization. Dean Holt is dean of the University Extension Division. He is known to be one of the ablest and best known faculty members and is without doubt the University's No. 1 ambassador of good will.

John Kotz, Wisconsin's all-America basketball player, was awarded the Walter Alexander scholarship, contributed by Walter Alexander, '97, Milwaukee, one of Wisconsin's old-time athletic greats. John Bettinger and Rose Marie Anderegg were awarded the two Alumni Association $100 checks as the outstanding man and woman of the junior class. Both students have exceptionally fine scholastic records, approximating perfect averages, and have been active in numerous and important extra-curricular activities.

President Dykstra told his listeners of the great part the University is playing in the nation's war effort. He told of the establishment of the Navy's radio code school here, the Army air corps mechanics school, the recruitment of five full units of Flying Badger squadrons, the CAA pilot training program, and dozens of other campus war-time projects now in full swing.

The usual luck of reunion weekends didn't hold, and Sunday morning dawned with a downpour to cancel all plans for the usually delightful informal breakfasts on the Union terrace. Many of the alumni came to the Union, however, and enjoyed leisurely meals in the Rathskeller. The rain continued to confine activities to indoors for the remainder of the day, but informal reunions continued in the Union and at private dwellings for the remainder of the weekend. All who attended reported a truly enjoyable time.

Still Marching Ahead

'94. We need more awards like the Walter Alexander Award, won this year by John Kotz. There is a scarcity of awards and scholarships for outstanding sophomores.

Recognizing this need, the Wisconsin X Club authorized its executive committee to perfect plans for a $100 award to the senior who does the best job in promoting the best interests of the University of Wisconsin. This award is prompted by the primary objective of the Wisconsin Alumni Association as expressed by its founders eighty-one years ago: To promote, by organized effort, the best interests of the University of Wisconsin. There will always be a need for such promotion on the part of both students and alumni, so this new award by the Wisconsin X Club is very much in order.

President Goedjen presents Edgar L. Wood, Law '92, his Half Century club membership card

Let's Keep Writing 'em

"IF YOU could see those boys' faces when the mail orderly is calling out names and flipping letters to the lucky ones, you wouldn't need a cartoon to make you reach for a pen and paper," writes a lieutenant at Ft. Dix in a recent issue of The Saturday Evening Post. "The front line is doing okay, but it would do even better if the line from home does its part — and regularly."

Yes, those boys in the Army, Navy and Marines get mighty lonesome for a line from back home. Most of them are young lads, many away from home for the first time. Just those few short lines in a letter, a newspaper clipping from the old home town gazette, a magazine, a package — why most anything just so that mail orderly has something for them when mail call sounds — means the difference between topnotch fighting men or "just another bunch of soldiers".

That's why the Alumni Association is sending all Wisconsin alumni in the Nation's armed services complimentary copies of the ALUMNUS, the BADGER QUARTERLY, and those special Victory Letters. That's why the Alumni Association will continue so long as it is financially able to give this small but important service to all the fighting Badgers who ask for it.

And you can do your part in this program, too.

First of all, if you have friends or relatives in the armed forces, see to it that they get a letter or card or clipping from you at least once a month — better still, make it once a week.

Secondly, you can help the Alumni Association to keep its services going to the boys at the fronts. How? Simply by paying your dues promptly or increasing your membership from the regular rate to a Sustaining Membership,

By paying $10 a year instead of the regular fee of $4, these sustaining members furnished the extra steam necessary to handle several new and important Association activities. Their financial support, for example, made it possible for the Association to reduce its membership fee for younger alumni: $1 for members of the graduating class and $2 a year for the first five years after graduation while these youngsters were getting started in their life work. And now these sustaining members are helping to finance one of the biggest jobs ever tackled by the Association, viz., sending its publication FREE to the hundreds of Badgers in Uncle Sam's armed forces.

So why don't YOU become a Sustaining Member today? Add this extra fee to your War Budget. We all contribute gladly to the Red Cross, the USO, local War Chests, War bonds and stamps drive. Here also is a way in which you can be of real service to our nation. Hundreds of your fellow alumni have taken this way of showing their appreciation of the job these boys and men are doing for us. Join that throng of back-home Badgers who are keeping the fighting Badgers happy.

If you are already a paid-up regular member, simply send your check for an additional six dollars with the request that you be made a Sustaining Member right away. If you haven't paid your dues, send your check for ten dollars for a full Sustaining Membership. There is also a special rate of fifteen dollars for a Family Sustaining Membership.

Let's keep writing 'em, and they'll keep fighting 'em!

"All we want to know is how soon can you bring our mail!"*

'42 Graduates

THERE was a distinct, sombre military air pervading the field house on the morning of June 1 when more than 1,600 graduating seniors marched across the platform to receive their coveted diplomas from President Clarence A. Dykstra.

Perched high in the second balcony at the north end of the building were three hundred sailors from the Naval Code school on the campus. In the 'midst, in double "V" formation, were the 29 students who comprise the fifth unit of the Flying Badgers. Seated on the floor, in their trim kahki uniforms with their second lieutenants bars gleaming on their shoulder straps, were the 63 ROTC graduates who received their commissions in the Army of the United States.

Gov. Julius Heil and President Dykstra in their charges to the graduates dwelt upon the world-wide conflict into which these young graduates have emerged. Senior president Burleigh Jacobs added a further solemn but hopeful note to the proceedings when he announced the Seniors' gift — the initial contribution to a fund to study "the cause and cure of war."

And there was many a tearful farewell and embrace by those who were leaving almost immediately for duty with the armed forces.

But Commencement in this first year of the war had its bright sidelights, too. There was the ovation given to Miss Evelyn Smith as she was led, gingerly, across the platform by her Seeing Eye dog, her constant companion for her four years on the campus. There were the laughs provoked by the usual skyrockets of the engineers and the lawyers, a final fling at their traditional campus rivalry. And there was the goodnatured response to the skyrocket for "Wild Bill" as Prof. Kiekhofer arose to present the honorary degree awards.

BUT most pleasing to alumni and University officials was the presentation to the University by Lt. Paul Faust, '27, U. S. N., of a special certificate of service by the U. S. Navy. The University is the only school in the United States to be thus honored. The certificate was granted for the excellence of the University's program of aiding the Navy in its enlistment program here on the campus. The induction, by Lt. Ferree, of the fifth complete unit of the Flying Badgers was ample testimony of the excellence of the University's service.

Honorary degrees were awarded to Dr. Hu Shih, China's ambassador to the United States and 1942 Baccalaureate speaker; Miss Georgia O'Keefe, noted artist; Dr. Edgar E. Robinson, '08, famous historian on the staff of Stanford university; and to General Douglas MacArthur, Wisconsin-bred commander of the United Nations' armies in Australia. Gen. MacArthur's degree was awarded in absentia, the first ever so awarded by the University, and accepted by Maj. Gen. George Grunert, commanding general of the Sixth Corps Area. Gen. MacArthur cabled his appreciation and acceptance in a stirring message from his headquarters in Australia.

Keep 'em "digging" up there and we'll "Keep 'em Flying"

Pvt. F. G. Springer, '43, Keesler, Miss.

THIS timely challenge was included in a letter that arrived recently at Alumni Association headquarters. We accept your challenge, Pvt. Springer, and hope we can do our job as effectively as you and your fellow Badgers are doing yours in Uncle Sam's armed forces. You're setting a tough pace for us to follow but we'll do our level best to do our share.

The second half of the first year of war is now under way. The first half brought much discouraging news. Pearl Harbor, Bataan, Singapore and Burma recall unpleasant memories.

But the tide is now turning. Severe losses were inflicted on the enemy at Makassar Strait. We licked the pants off the Japs in the Coral Sea. More enemy ships were sunk off Midway. Huge bombing fleets have battered Cologne, Essen and other Nazi industrial centers. Today's news bulletins report that huge formations of American built bombers are being used by the RAF in daylight raids on the German held coast of Europe.

Two factors are helping to turn the tide: the supremacy of American industry and the best fighting men in the world.

Hitler and his partners are fast learning that American soldiers, sailors and marines have what it takes to win this war; that Americans have the leadership, courage, stamina and fighting spirit that will eventually wipe out the Axis gangsters responsible for World War II.

So — best of luck to you, fellow Badgers, as you carry on your swell job. Your fellow alumni on the home front are proud of you. We'll keep on "digging" so you can "Keep 'em flying".

Yours for Victory,

THE WISCONSIN ALUMNI ASSOCIATION,
John Berge, Executive Secretary

Dykstra Reviews First Five Years of Administration

PRESIDENT CLAR-ENCE A. DYKSTRA,
who completed his first five years as president of the University on May 1, says he looks forward to five more years in the same job, and though he has had many offers to leave the University for other positions, he has no intentions of leaving Wisconsin.

The president has carried a heavy burden since he came to Madison. And the war program has increased the work of every university president and educator, but Dykstra has other duties in addition to those increased calls. He was director of selective service at its inception. Then he was chairman of the President's defense mediation board, a nearly full-time job. He's a member of more commissions and committees than he can enumerate.

But Pres. Dykstra seems to carry his heavy load without great trouble. He still makes all the normal public appearances expected of a university president, and handles the administrative details of his position. Looking back over his five years, the president feels satisfied with the job.

"Wisconsin is recognized as a strong educational center," he says. "The scientific research of our staff has been on a very high plane, and the contributions of faculty members to publications have been very wide.

"Financially, the University is stronger than it was five years ago. The salary waivers that were numerous here when I came have been wiped out. Men have been promoted and there have been modest increases in compensation.

"Our plant — the buildings and equipment — is in much better shape. We have many new buildings, such as the law library, the addition to the Wisconsin Union, the men and women's dormitory buildings, and cancer institute, the bio-chemistry building, and quite a few more.

"And we have lots of new facilities that aren't so obvious — the improved University farms, our seed house, such laboratories as the animal disease control study and the monkey house for infantile paralysis research.

"All in all, I think we've added $5,000,000 to our plant value.

"I think student government has made great progress here, and the student facilities are much better. And we've added many very promising young men to our faculty. We've also done much to improve the relations of the University and the Madison community."

The president said the University's defense service is the most varied offered at any university. "The emergency has shown that education is not a peacetime luxury, but a wartime necessity," he declared.

Hicks Leaves for California Post

PROF. JOHN D.
HICKS, chairman of the history department, has accepted a post in the history department of the University of California at Berkeley, and will report there in September.

A member of the University faculty since 1932, Prof. Hicks has been chairman of the history department since 1938. He is a native of Missouri, and obtained his bachelor and master of arts degrees at Northwestern university in 1913 and 1914, and his doctorate at Wisconsin in 1916. Before coming to Wisconsin, Prof. Hicks was dean of the college of letters and sciences at the University of Nebraska for three years.

State's Citizens Will Get Awards

WISCONSIN citizens who give service to the state through outstanding work in their fields will be honored by the University of Wisconsin, the University faculty has decided. Awards of recognition for service will be given under a plan similar to that used by the College of Agriculture which each year gives certificates of recognition to leaders in Wisconsin agriculture and home life.

Activities

Birge, Juday Say Study Completed

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of study, the lake research of Dr. E. A. Birge and Prof. Chancey Juday has been concluded. The scientists informed the state conservation commission in May that they had decided not to request their allotment of funds for 1943. Dr. Birge, president emeritus of the University, is now 90 year old.

Athletes Given Eligibility Break

ACTING on recommendation of the athletic board, the faculty voted in May to revise eligibility standards for athletics and make them conform more closely with those of other Western conference schools.

The faculty took the following actions:

1. Approved the decision of Big Ten faculty representatives to waive for the duration of the war a conference rule that an eligible athlete must have been in residence one academic year, must have completed one full year of work, and could not compete until one full calendar year after matriculation. (Under the new rule the student who has completed two semesters or three quarters will be eligible.)

2. Declared that a student who has earned 24 credits toward graduation and has satisfied the conference regulations as to residence will be eligible. (In the past Wisconsin's definition of credit requirements has been one full year of work, representing 28 credits, or an average of 14 per semester. The Conference rule set 12 credits per semester as the minimum study requirement.)

3. Declared that summer school work would be considered in allowing a full year's credit. (This interpretation, athletic board members said, will bring Wisconsin in line with other Big Ten schools which have changed or speeded up their semester systems to enable students to earn a degree in three years or less.)

Haugen, Curtis Given Guggenheim Fellowships

GUGGENHEIM fellowships have been awarded to two University of Wisconsin faculty members. Dr. Einar Haugen, professor of Scandinavian languages, will write a book on the linguistic experiences and behavior of Norwegian immigrants in the United States. Dr. John T. Curtis, assistant botany professor, will study the botanical status of the "lake forest" of Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, and Ontario.

Byron, Rundell Named to Athletic Board

CHARLES L. BYRON, '08, Chicago patent attorney and past president of the Alumni Association, was named one of the two alumni representatives on the University athletic board during May. Mr. Byron succeeds Howard I. Potter, '16, Chicago, also a past president of the Association. He will serve on the board with Dr. James Dean, '11, Madison, the second alumni representative.

Mr. Byron was president of the Association during 1926, 1927 and 1928, after serving as a member of the board of directors for six years. He is a past president and director of the Chicago alumni club.

Coinciding with the announcement of Byron's selection, was the naming of Prof. Oliver Rundell, '10, of the Law school as one of the faculty members on the board, to succeed Prof. Chester Easum of the History department. This is the second time that Prof. Rundell has served on the board.

Near-Perfect Juniors Win Association Prizes

ROSE MARIE ANDEREGG and John Bettinger were named the outstanding members of the junior class at the University by the student relations and awards committee of the Wisconsin Alumni association during May. As a tangible award for their selection, both students received a $100 prize at the Alumni Assn's. reunion program on May 30.

Fourteen students were given honorable mention in the voting. Roger P. Lescohier and John Vergeront of Madison were among those receiving honorable mention. Others selected were Elaine Bosshardt, Cynthia Kersten, Florence Ovrum, Betty Jean Querhammer, Margaret Schindler, Mary Jane Vroman, H. Copeland Greene, James F. Kelsner, Lloyd E. Kronsoble, Gladys Dolge, Paul F. Hoffman, and James R. Oberly.

The outstanding junior awards are given annually to the man and woman juniors who have demonstrated exceptional abilities by their scholarship, self-support, and participation in University activities.

Miss Anderegg has a grade point average of 2.92, is a junior member of Phi Beta Kappa, and has been active in the Dolphin club, the women's house presidents' council, the Wisconsin Union, and women's intramurals.

Bettinger has a grade point average of 2.97, is a junior member of Phi Beta Kappa, is a member of the Badger board of control, Seabard and Blade military fraternity, Alpha Kappa Psi commerce fraternity, and Phi Delta Theta, and has been active in the Wisconsin Union, orientation period, the Badger party, and during the past year has served as coordinator of the student war activities.

Three Honored by Ornithologists

DR. LEON J. COLE, professor of genetics; Aldo Leopold, professor of wild life management; and Dr. H. H. T. Jackson, Washington, D. C., of the department of interior, who received his master's degree at Wisconsin in 1909, were honored at the fourth annual convention of the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology at Green Bay in April.

Gillin Honored on Retirement

PROF. JOHN L. GILLIN was honored late in May when a group of 135 friends and colleagues assembled at a dinner in the Memorial Union to pay their respects and witness the unveiling of a portrait of the professor presented by 200 of his former students and associates.

Wisconsin loses Prof. John Hicks to California

Prof. Gillin, a criminologist and sociologist, was praised for having done as much as any one man in the country to break down the old idea of "punishment to fit the crime", and bring about modern treatment of criminals.

The dinner marked the beginning of Prof. Gillin's emeritus professorship. The portrait, to be displayed in the professor's honor by the University, was done by Christian Abrahamson.

Chief Justice Marvin B. Rosenberry of the State Supreme Court, toastmaster at the dinner, declared that on the Wisconsin Conference on Social Work, where Gillin served, "the outstanding piece of work" was done by the retiring professor.

James L. Fieser, Washington, D. C., executive vice-president of the American Red Cross, said educational work done by Gillin for the Red Cross in 1917-1919 taught the organization the fundamental needs that led to its present development.

Like Topsy — They Just Grewed

ALTHOUGH Dean Scott H. Goodnight had expected just the opposite tendency, University grade averages for the first semester were higher than during the corresponding period of the previous year, and the all-fraternity averages for the first time rated above those of the men's dormitories.

"I can't explain it," Dean Goodnight commented. "We had feared a serious drop after December 7." But war or no war, the men came out with a 1.453 average.

Student Board Kills Junior Class Office

THE junior class presidency is no more. The traditional office over which campus politicians fought for years, has been streamlined and enlarged by the student board to "junior prom chairman" and the office of junior class president has been abolished, like the sophomore class presidency, which went by the boards last year. The student board's ruling provides that the prom chairman shall be a member of the junior class, but that he shall be elected by the entire student body. Profits from the prom will be dispensed by the chairman and his committee, and there will be no profits or deficits carried over to the senior year by the class, the dance being sponsored by the student board.

Daily Cardinal Marks Fiftieth Anniversary

SEVERAL hundred "alumni" of the Daily Cardinal gathered in the Memorial Union in April to wish the University's newspaper a happy birthday, and mark the 50th anniversary of the publication.

Guest of honor was W. W. Young, '92, the first editor, a native of Monroe and now an advertising executive in the East. Speakers in addition to Young were Judge Alvin C. Reis, Madison; Sen. W. A. Freehoff, Wisconsin legislator, and Robert Lewis, Osseo, present student editor.

Young related incidents he encountered in launching the paper 50 years ago, and emphasized that newspapers should always be independent."

Lewis recounted some of the paper's history, saying that the Cardinal has always been a consistent liberal.

British Wrens Visit Campus

WITH military ball and the Haresfoot club eagerly cashing in on the attendant publicity, six blue-jacketed WRENS, members of the Women's Royal Naval Service of England, were guests on the campus the weekend of April 10.

The English girls traveled 1,000 miles from their stations with the British admiralty in Washington to attend Military ball as guests of Haresfoot. They had "blind" dates for the ball, lunched at a dairy bar, stayed overnight in sororities and dormitories, spoke over the radio, and attended a Wisconsin Players production in the Union theater.

Students Dig Dirt — University Saves $ $ $

BORROWING picks and shovels from the

Dane County WPA, 800 students waged an eight-hour attack on a campus cornfield early in May, and at the end of the University's second annual "work day", the co-eds and husky boys had cleared away six inches of topsoil from the field to convert the area into an athletic field for women. Using volunteer labor saved the University $1,000. On hand to pep up the workers was part of the University band, and loudspeakers broadcast swing music recordings. Beer, soft drinks, and a free lunch were attractions which kept the students on the job.

Faculty Members Honored; Others Take New Jobs

PROF. C. A. ELVEHJEM, of the biochemistry department, nationally known for his work in nutrition, was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of science at the Ripon College commencement in May.

William P. Mortenson, associate professor of agricultural economics at the University, has been called to Washington by the War Production board as economic analyst of civilian food supplies in the strategic foods division.

Prof. H. C. Berkowitz, of the department of Spanish and Portuguese, was elected president of the central west and southwest division of the National Federation of Modern Language Teachers at the annual meeting held recently in Detroit. The group includes language teachers in 13 states.

Prof. Guy Lowman, for many years head of the men's physical education department, was given a year's leave of absence by the board of regents in May, because of illness.

Prof. Hugh E. McKinsstry, of the geology department, has applied for a year-long leave of absence, and plans to report to Washington in June for work in the war minerals field under the department of commerce.

Prof. Charles Bunn, of the Law school, who has been on leave as a special assistant to Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, has had his leave extended to include the first semester of next year.

John R. Commons, eldest of the many University economists who taught several generations of Wisconsin students the principles of economics, is publishing another book, at the age of 80. Prof. Commons has returned from Florida to Madison, and reports that his new book will be a "theoretical basis for Wisconsin Progressivism."

Prof. Horace Fries of the University's department of philosophy was elected secretary-treasurer of the American Philosophical association at its meeting in Madison last spring.

W. Bayard Taylor, professor of finance in the School of Commerce, has been named chief price officer for the state of Wisconsin by Don T. Allen, '19, state director of the Office of Price Administration. Taylor's duties will include explanation of price control to the wholesale and retail trade. He will have eight price specialists under his direction, each specializing in a particular line.

The Regents

A SERIOUS administrative problem has arisen at the University as a result of over 500 changes among civil service employees brought on by the nation's war effort, according to a report of Pres. Dykstra to the board of regents in May.

Since July 1, 1941, 40 per cent of the administrative personnel of the University has been changed. Many of those leaving the University have taken federal jobs at Washington, D. C., at the Forest Products Laboratory in Madison, or in other cities, the president said. Others have taken jobs in the state capitol, and with private industry. The greatest turnover, the president said, is among clerical workers and nurses.

At the same meeting, the regents approved 44 faculty resignations, among them that of Howard Odell, former assistant football coach, who has been appointed head coach at Yale University. For the most part, the resignations were among research and graduate assistants and instructors. In addition to the resignations, the regents approved 97 appointments, mostly among instructors and assistants, and 31 salary and service adjustments for faculty members assuming extra teaching duties because of resignations of other teachers.

Conduct to Govern Japanese Admission

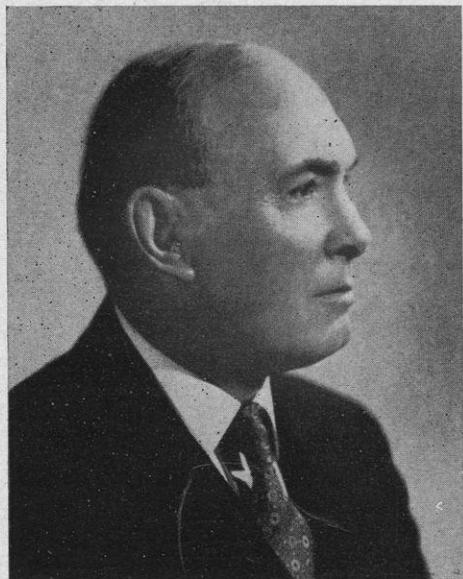

STUDENTS of Japanese origin will be admitted to the University only if they can secure a certificate of "good conduct" from the federal government and from the institutions they formerly attended, as well as a residence release from the government and the Army, Pres. Dykstra announced in April. Although no Japanese students have requested admission to the University, some inquiries have been received regarding entrance. The Japanese students would presumably come from west coast schools and universities which have been placed in zones from which enemy aliens have been barred.

BECAUSE the University feels that many undergraduate students who have left the campus to enter the armed forces may never come back to school, certificates will soon be sent to hundreds of sophomores giving them the title of "junior graduates."

Pres. Dykstra explains that certificates have been given to those students who have requested them in recent years, but that this year many students — especially the men — may never return to the campus, so the University is presenting them with the recognition certificates.

The president said the certificates could be sent only to Letters and Science students, since that college is the only one having a two year division point. The certificates are also limited to students entitled to return to the

Prof. John Gillin, honored by colleagues on occasion of his retirement from faculty

University as full juniors, and who have done at least one full year's residence work at Wisconsin.

Compulsory Phy Ed for Campus Coeds KEEPING in step with the national physical fitness emphasis, the University regents voted in May to require that all freshman and sophomore women take courses in physical education. The action was taken on recommendation of the physical education department for women. The co-eds will be required beginning next fall to take two years of physical education with two class periods of 50 minutes each per week. Previously, co-eds have been required to take only one year of physical education.

Committee to Suggest Sellery's Successor RECOMMENDATION of a successor to Dean George C. Sellery of the College of Letters and Science will be made by a special regent committee conferring with Pres. Dykstra, as a result of action taken by the board of regents in May. Regent Walter Hodgkins, Ashland, is chairman, and Regents Michael J. Cleary and Leonard J. Kleczka, of Milwaukee, are members of the committee. The group will report back to the board by the June 27 meeting.

Dean Sellery, a faculty member since 1901, will retire in June under a rule calling for retirement of faculty members at age 70. The regents appointed a special committee to work with a faculty committee to arrange for a suitable expression of the work and influence of Dean Sellery at the University.

Regents Re-elect All Their Officers A. J. GLOVER, Fort Atkinson, was elected to his fourth term as president of the board of regents at the board meeting in May. Mrs. Barbara Vergeront, Viroqua, was re-elected vice-president, and M. E. McCaffery, Madison, was chosen for his 35th consecutive term as secretary.

Deductions for War Stamps and Bonds Approved VOLUNTARY payroll deductions for the purchase of war stamps and bonds by University faculty members and employees was approved by the regents at the meeting in Bascom hall in April.

At the same meeting, the regents accepted $51,350 in gifts and grants, including $32,500 from the Wisconsin Alumni Research foundation to support research during the coming year. In addition to accepting the gifts and grants, the regents accepted the library of Dr. L. R. Jones, emeritus professor of plant pathology. When Dr. Jones retired, he left his library in his office in the Department of Plant Pathology for use by colleagues and students, and recently offered it to the University.

Veteran Guy S. Lowman, granted leave because of illness

Board Approves Divisional Plan ADMINISTRATIVE control of the University was reorganized at the April meeting of the regents, when the board approved creation of four major divisions to be superimposed on present colleges and departments. Under the plan, faculty members in each of the four new divisions, biological sciences, humanities, physical sciences, and social sciences, will choose an executive committee and a chairman who will serve in an advisory capacity regarding courses of study, students credits, and departmental budgets. The purpose of the plan is to provide for greater correlation of the University's teaching and science research among the various departments.

Prof. Henry A. Poehmann of the English department heads the humanities division committee. Prof. George W. Keitt, of the department of plant pathology, is chairman of the biological sciences division, and Prof. Farrington Daniels of the chemistry department, is representing the physical sciences division. A social studies division chairman has not yet been named.

Morningside Sanatorium Offer Declined by Board

THE offer of directors of Morningside sanatorium, near Madison, to give the $100,000 institution to the University was declined at the April meeting by the board of regents. The regents declined the offer with an expression of gratitude to the institution's directors, on recommendation of a special regents' committee. An investigation by the committee had shown that a substantial expenditure, which the University could not afford, would have been necessary to put the institution in shape for use by the University medical school, as had been proposed in the gift offer.

New Campus Plan Approved

IT'S A LONG way between classes for students on the campus, but that is one condition the state planning board hopes to correct under a long term program of development for the University, details of which have been published in bound form for distribution to regents and University officials.

The program calls for eventual segregation of the colleges of engineering and agriculture so that their students will not be required to travel to buildings of the College of Letters and Science for instruction. Foreseeing a possible expansion of the University to as many as 20,000 students, the program proposes establishment of a University plan commission to adopt a master program by which future building activities would be guided.

Fraternities Get Bill Collection Aid for Duration

PAYMENT of room and board bills at student-operated houses, such as fraternities and co-ops, will be enforced by withholding of University credits until the accounts are settled, as a result of regent action taken at the May meeting.

The move is an extension of the policy of withholding credits from students who fail to pay room and board bills at University-operated dormitories. The action was taken by the board of regents at the recommendation of Scott H. Goodnight, dean of men. Pres. Dykstra said the extension of the rule to fraternity houses was requested because men students who apply for lodging in University residence halls but cannot be accommodated will be referred to fraternity houses. Tripp and Adams halls will be closed to students next year because sailors in the U. S. Navy radio training school at the University will be housed in those dormitories.

Pres. Dykstra said the rule is for the duration of the war emergency.

At the same meeting, board rates at several University-operated residence halls were raised for next year. Rates for room and board in the Kronshage units of the men's halls next year will be $310 a year; in Barnard and Chadbourne halls for women, $420 a year for single rooms, and $390 for double rooms; and in Elizabeth Waters hall, $430 a year.

Board Accepts Gifts Totalling $124,287

A TOTAL of $124,287 in gifts and grants, including one grant from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation amounting to $70,000, was accepted by the regents at their recent annual meeting.

The $70,000 grant from the Research Foundation is to provide grants-in-aid to research, including research associates and post doctorate fellows at the University during 1942-43.

The remainder of the gifts and grants came from a dozen other individuals, research organizations, and industrial firms to provide for scholarships or research work on the campus. Among them was one gift of $10,000 from the Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich., for loans to needy medical students, and another grant of $10,000 from the Carnegie corporation for the advancement of music.

Other gifts included: $25 from the Chi Omega sorority for the establishment of the Chi Omega scholarship in sociology; $1,000 from the Matt Rens Hemp Co. and the Atlas Hemp Mills for an industrial fellowship in agronomy; $2,200 from the Red Star Yeast and Products Co., for the renewal of an industrial fellowship in agricultural bacteriology and biochemistry; $1,200 from the Upjohn Co. for the continuation of research in the pharmacology department; $9,600 from the Rockefeller Foundation for Research in nutrition; a second grant of $14,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation for research in physical chemistry; $1,747 from the U. S. Public Health service for continuation of the public health nursing program; $4,500 from the Winthrop Chemical Co. for an industrial fellowship in biochemistry; $15 from the Wisconsin Alumnae association of southern California for scholarship purposes; and a gift from Robert P. Ferry, '08, of a collection of Wisconsin and New York statutes and treaties for the University's Law library.

War Service Needs Counselling Program Set Up for Summer

A SPECIAL counseling service, designed to assist high school graduates and college students to match their abilities and aptitudes with military and civilian needs has been authorized by the board of regents to be in operation during the summer months. This service will be centralized in the office of the University Personnel Council under the direction of its executive secretary, Assistant Dean of Men W. W. Blaesser. C. H. Ruedisili, Assistant Dean of the College of Letters and Science, and M. L. Hayes, Assistant Professor of Botany, complete the executive staff.

Information has been assembled about all possible opportunities for military and civilian placement in the war effort, including immediate and deferred service.

There is considerable information about specific requirements and the training leading to these opportunities. Testing facilities are available to assist students in determining the best possible use of their abilities and aptitudes. The counseling program is coordinated with all personnel offices of the University and each person seeking advice and counsel will be given individual attention.

Interested parents and students should write or come to the University Personnel Council, 123 Bascom Hall. A branch office will be maintained in Milwaukee at the Extension Building. The service available here will be primarily for those who cannot visit the campus at Madison. In addition, counseling officials will make several trips to selected cities in the State to meet with parents and students who find a trip to Madison impossible under present circumstances.

The Campus at War

by Walter G. Curtis, '42

SUMMING up the University's work and achievements in the nation's war program, Pres. C. A. Dykstra recently declared that no school in the country has a more varied program or is more active in the national service than the University of Wisconsin.

"We are not relaxing our efforts to educate young people, conduct research, and serve the state. But we are adding the responsibility of being hospitable to those now enlisted in our armed forces and of helping to train them," the president explained.

Besides the many thousands of regular students, the president said, the University will have a great number sent to it by the Army and Navy for special training. He summarized the war work of the University under seven headings

1. The University is the home of a radio and communications school for the United States Navy. More than 1,000 bluejackets are receiving specialized instruction from faculty members.

2. The University is the center of the Army Institute of Correspondence work, making available to any soldier with four months' training study courses along with his military tasks.

3. The University has been named as a center for both Army and Navy enlistment programs.

4. The military science department has doubled its activities. Notable firsts are the "ski patrol" and the "commando" unit in which cadets participated this spring and winter.

5. The University has provided 45 new and modified courses designed to enable students to participate immediately in various phases of America's war program. The medical and law schools are operating on a year-round basis. The College of Engineering is offering a special 13 weeks summer session.

6. Through its extension division, the University has fostered civilian pilot training; has sponsored in conjunction with the federal government, an engineering, science, and management defense training program in 562 state industries and businesses. More than 3,000 students have been trained in special skills for war industries, where it is essential production be speeded up to maximum volume.

7. More than 100 University scientists are lending their special knowledge and training to the solution of scientific problems in the national war field. Some are serving on sub-committees of the national defense research council. Projects underway on the campus are secret.

Student Stamp Sale Oversubscribes Goal

WITH total sales of war savings stamps $600 over their original $3,000 goal, the University's energetic stamp sales committee closed up shop at the end of the semester satisfied that they had done a good patriotic job.

Starting with a $690 stamp backlog provided by the student board, the committee worked through chairmen appointed in every organized house and dormitory on campus, making sure every student was approached at least once a week and asked to buy the stamps.

The Men's halls association found a good place to invest surplus funds late in May, when the group voted to purchase a $1,000 war bond. It was the largest contribution made during the war stamp sales drive on the campus. The purchase was made with money appropriated from funds of the award committees of the last two years, plus a special appropriation.

Navy Grants University Special Certificate for Outstanding Performance

THE first United States Navy certificate of meritorious service ever given to a university was presented to the University of Wisconsin at the 89th annual commencement exercises in the field house June 1. The presentation was made shortly before induction of the fifth "Flying Badger" unit to enter the Navy air corps from the University.

The award commended the University, saying it had "worked diligently, unselfishly, and devotedly, in the interests of the United States Navy in the ninth Naval district." It was signed by Admiral John Downes, commandant of the district, and bears the Navy's seal.

Lt. Paul Holman Faust, '27, presented the certificate to Pres. C. A. Dykstra during the exercises, and gave special recognition to the school's record of contributing more men to naval aviation than any other college in the country. Following the presentation, Lt. J. S. Ferebee administered the navy oath of allegiance to the 36 men of the "Flying Badger" squadron. Together with members of the fourth "Flying Badger" unit, inducted at Senior Service ball in April, the boys will report at the new navy training school at the University of Iowa in June. This will be the first contingent of men going to Iowa City to consist solely of men from the same school.

Summer Session Geared to War

SUMMER session for 1942 at the University is geared to war-time needs, like the regular semesters, with Law and Medical schools and the College of Engineering operating on regular session programs, and special institutes and war courses listed in the curriculum.

Classes of the six and eight week summer sessions open Tuesday, June 30, and end August 7. A number of the courses to be offered are specially adapted to the needs of teachers and civilians in wartime.

Law school summer classes commenced June 1, and will run for 14 weeks, closing just before school opens for the regular term in September. Beginning July 1, the Medical school will operate on a 36-week continuous program for the coming year. Starting on June 8, the College of Engineering is conducting a special 12-week session to speed up the technical training of its students so they may graduate earlier.

Army Air Corps Mechanics Train in Campus Shops

A CONTRACT with the federal government for the training of between 150 and 170 air corps mechanics at the University of Wisconsin was approved by the regents at their May meeting. The mechanics to be trained here will be soldiers from Chanute field, at Rantoul, Ill. They will be trained in the machine shops of the University college of engineering. The contract will run from June 9, 1942, to June 30, 1943. Pres. Dykstra told the regents the Army will pay $94,000 to cover the cost of instruction and operating the laboratories, and that the University will pay for the housing and feeding at the cost of about $12.50 a week for each soldier.

Army and Navy Place University on Accredited List

WISCONSIN has been accredited by both the Army and Navy as one of the universities in the nation to train reserve officers for both forces. University students may now remain in school until needed by their branch of the service, or until they complete essential studies, under the V-1 plan of the Navy, and the Army Air Force Reserve plan.

The Army program is open to all students, and men are enlisted as privates in the Air Force Reserve. The men are deferred from service so that they may continue their education until called for army training. The plan is to defer the men and permit them further scholastic training provided they maintain a satisfactory scholastic standard.

Under the Navy plan, college freshmen and sophomores from 17-20 years of age may be enlisted, and will be placed on an inactive status in the Naval reserve until they can complete a minimum of two years of normal university work. At the end of two years, they will be given an examination, and those passing will be given the opportunity to transfer to the V-5 aviation cadet training or the V-7 general deck and engineering duty training programs. Those who do not pass will be called to active duty as apprentice seamen. V-7 transfers will continue on inactive duty until they complete their college courses and receive degrees, when they will be ordered to active duty at a reserve midshipman school. Those successfully completing that school will be commissioned ensigns.

Army Correspondence Institute Located on Madison Campus

ANOTHER large-scale war service for which the University has contracted with the federal government is the Army Institute of Correspondence Work, which is functioning through the University extension division to help soldiers in camps and expeditionary forces continue their education.

The institute is the only one operated by the Army, and is similar to those of the Navy and Air Corps. Between 20,000 and 70,000 soldiers are expected to enroll in the courses of study, which will be sent by mail from here. The institute will be set up in conjunction with the extension division, which already has 20,000 pupils of its own. The University teaching staff will handle the correspondence study work, and will also train the army personnel to do the work so that eventually the army may develop its own institute on the basis of the work and training done at Wisconsin.

Naval Training School

THE U. S. Naval Training School (Radio) at the University of Wisconsin was established late in February, with opening date and first classes to be conducted on April 1, 1942. For the Navy, Lieut. Elmer H. Schubert is Commanding Officer. Ensigns P. M. Wick, N. B. Douglass, G. A. McKinley, and G. P. Blaine serve as division officers, and Ensign C. L. Nelson is Supply and Disbursing Officer. Professor John L. Miller, of the Extension Division of the University has been assigned the post of Director of Instructions. Associated with him is a staff of civilian instructors. The program is very broad as complete training is demanded of each trainee by the necessities of the present war.

The Navy student, attached to the school for instructions, comes directly from preliminary recruit training at one of the Naval Training Stations in the United States. He has had at least six weeks of indoctrination and military drill, during which time the qualifications of each man are checked and tested. He is then assigned for further training.

Upon arrival at the School, all trainees are assigned to a section, and to living quarters. Each section has a section leader, who is picked after consideration of his previous experience. He is designated by an arm brassard which is marked with the letters S. L. on it. He is responsible for the actions of his section throughout the day. The men are all housed on the campus of the University in the new Stadium dormitories, and in Adams and Tripp Halls. All meals are served them at the Van Hise Refectory.

Monday through Saturday, reveille sounds at 5:45 A. M. The next thirty minutes are used to bring personal appearance to Navy standard, and for cleaning and arranging of rooms in proper order as required. The men then turn out, muster in section formation, which is followed by physical drill, a requirement for every Navy man. Breakfast is then in order. The sections are formed again after breakfast, and march to their eight o'clock classes. Subjects covered include International Morse Radio Code, Touch Typewriting, Radio Theory, Mathematics, Spelling, Laboratory Work, Naval Procedure for handling messages and communications and Naval Indoctrination, which deals with the military and "sea-going" side of the trainee's life. Classrooms have been equipped to accommodate the men in Ag. Hall, Sterling Hall, Mechanical Engineering Building, Chemistry Building, Soils Building, Field House and at the Stadium. Saturday morning is taken up by a comprehensive quiz covering the week's work, and by Saturday Morning Inspection of personnel and military review, under the direction of the Commanding Officer. Evening classes on a volunteer basis are for men in need of additional work. Men not attending evening classes use this period for study in their dormitory rooms.

In addition to rigorous class schedules, organized athletics are planned, and all trainees participate in some form of sport. The most popular of the sports are Soft Ball, Tennis, Base Ball, Bowling and Swimming. Several soft ball games were played between the Navy teams and the U. W. men's dormitory teams. The recreation program for the men of the Navy fits itself into the life of the campus. All Navy men are provided with student membership cards in the Memorial Union for the duration of their residence on the Campus. Too, the Navy trainees share with the U. W. students the social privileges of the Pine Room, located in Van Hise Refectory. The campus churches, fraternities, sororities and residence halls are all cooperative in their invitations to the sailors, and in their planning of social affairs, dances and parties. The facilities of the Men's Halls Store, in the Mack House of the Kronshage Unit, are open to the students, with special contracts having been closed for laundry and dry cleaning.

Liberty is granted the sailors beginning at 1:30 P. M. Saturday, expiring 12:30 A. M. Sunday, and from 8:30 A. M. Sunday to 10:00 P. M. Sunday. During this time the men use their Union privileges and also attend outside activities. The main attractions

Incoming mail and outgoing lesson books keep the Army Correspondence Institute constantly busy. More than 1,000 soldiers are already enrolled in the courses are the theatres, the boat house, or a walk around town.

The course of instructions at the University covers a period of four months. When the trainee has completed his course, he will be given the opportunity of taking the examinations for a petty officer rating in the communications branch, will be assigned for further technical training, or to duty with our naval forces afloat or at shore bases.

Agriculture

THE man who probably knows more about tuberculosis than any other person in the world retired from the University faculty in June.

The bacteriological studies of Dr. E. G. Hastings, for 40 years professor of agricultural bacteriology, and most of that time chairman of the Wisconsin department, have added untold thousands of dollars to the value of Wisconsin's dairy herds. He reached the age of 70 this year, and University rules say he must retire.

Before the turn of the century, Dr. Hastings saw the challenge of bovine tuberculosis to science, and because he has answered that challenge, 25,000,000 head of dairy cattle in the United States have been tuberculin tested twice. More than 5,000,000 head have been found diseased over the years and have been slaughtered.

For four decades, Hastings has been friend and confidant to state farmers. His work secrets are simple — be practical and refuse to understand what the word "failure" means.

For 32 years he has been chairman of Wisconsin department of agricultural bacteriology, first of its kind anywhere. From his classes have gone dozens of other good teachers, so many that every other good "ag bacty" department in the country now has a Hastings-trained man.

Recognition of Prof. Hastings for his pioneer work in pasteurization process of milk was given in an honorary degree conferred on the Wisconsin educator and research scientist by Ohio State University June 15.

A native of Ohio, Prof. Hastings was graduated from Ohio State in 1898, receiving his master's degree a year later from Wisconsin. He retires this year as professor of agricultural bacteriology, but will continue his research for another year on the University staff.

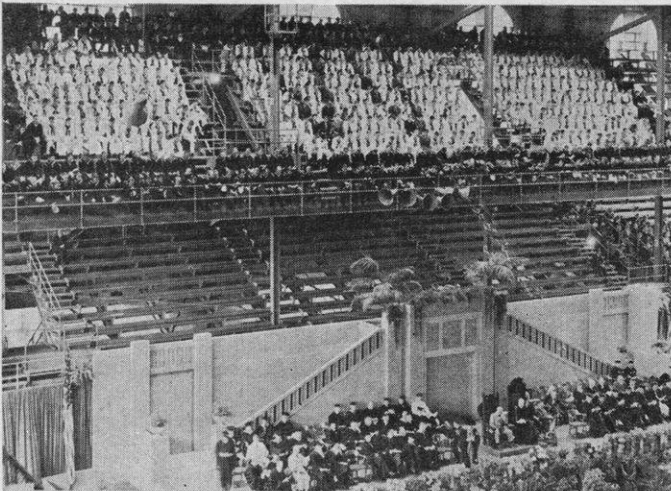

Campus Pigeon Study Aids Signal Corps

THERE are those who claim that pigeons are as important in winning the war as are bombers and battleships.

Armies use pigeons to carry messages when radio communication is impossible, and in 1917-18, homing pigeons carried thousands of messages back from the front lines. Again today the feathered messengers are being used on battlefronts all over the world.

"In wartime, armies find pigeons invaluable for carrying messages where other forms of communication are impossible," according to Dr. Leon J. Cole, world-famous authority on the genetics of pigeons, and member of the University genetics department.

Research done by Prof. Cole in the first World War on night flying of pigeons has helped the Army signal corps to develop other methods of training night fliers that are now valued military secrets. During the World War, Dr. Cole experimented with a flock of birds on the University campus, and present training methods are based on his 1918 report.

To further understand the complexities of breeding, Dr. Cole and colleagues have developed featherless pigeons. They are the only ones of their kind in the nation, and the denuded birds are being used in investigations of inheritance factors in pigeons being conducted by Dr. Raymond D. Owen, assistant in genetics.

Rural Conference Highlighted by War, Peace Problems

QUESTIONS dealing directly with sociological issues of the war and with the peace that is to follow will be main points in the Wisconsin town-country leadership school at the University June 29-July 10. University faculty members will conduct courses on the family, economic problems, community resources, public discussion technique, and recreation and leisure-time problems. Afternoon sessions will be devoted to discussing issues arising directly from the war. A special conference for those unable to attend the first 10 days will be held July 10 and 11.

Agric Alumni Directors Named

NEW directors of the Wisconsin Agricultural Alumni association for three year terms are George Dehnert, class of '35, now serving as teacher of vocational agriculture at Lodi, Wis., and W. John Reynolds, '39, field investigator for the Wisconsin department of agriculture. Chosen from the most recent graduating class was W. James Porter, '41, instructor in vocational agriculture at Plainfield.

L. R. Jones Library Enriches College

REGENTS of the University enriched Wisconsin's library resources by accepting the personal scientific library of Emeritus Professor L. R. Jones of the department of plant pathology. The library as transferred to the University consists of 698 volumes of scientific journals, 10,000 bulletins, 7,400 reprints of technical papers, and 325 miscellaneous books.

Throughout his many years as founder and chairman of the department of plant pathology at the University, Professor Jones has personally acquired an unusual valuable scientific library relating to plant pathology. This collection, started systematically at the time plant pathology began to develop, intensively in America, comprises very complete sets of publications of the United States Department of Agriculture, the state agricultural experiment stations, and Canadian agricultural services dealing with plant pathology and related subjects.

As a member of many scientific societies in the United States and abroad, Professor Jones accumulated the journals and other publications of these organizations. His library is regarded as one of the largest collections available of special literature on plant pathology, and contains a great many items that would now be very difficult or impossible to replace.

The Jones library will be left in the care of the department of plant pathology at the University.

Prof. Humphrey Leaves Madison

GEORGE C. HUMPHREY, retired professor of animal husbandry and for 39 years a resident of Madison, moved to Ludington, Mich., on June 20. He will operate a small farm there. Humphrey will continue to serve dairymen and breeders' groups in Wisconsin and Minnesota "to the extent that he has tires and gas." Coming to Wisconsin from Michigan 39 years ago, Humphrey "grew up" with the Wisconsin dairy industry, and was chairman of the animal husbandry department until 1938, when dairying and animal husbandry were divided. His resignation was effective at the close of this past semester.

Now It's "The Girl Behind the Plow"

TEN Badger co-eds joined the farm brigade this spring, enrolling in a course in tractor-driving designed to train the girls as "tractorettes" and relieve the farm labor shortage this summer. Prof. Floyd W. Duffee of the College of Agriculture trained the girls to operate the farm machinery, and really got them down to earth in the work.

"We turned out co-eds who are not afraid to get dirty and greasy, and who actually plan to work on farms this summer," he says. The girls met for 16 two-hour long classes, and were instructed in driving and mechanics of tractors, maintenance of all types of farm equipment, and the use of planting and harvesting machinery.

Commerce

by F. H. Elwell, director

WITH so many men going into Service, Professor Trumbower's Placement Bureau has been unable to comply with many requests for recent graduates. This is particularly true for those who majored in accounting. There is a wonderful opportunity for women in this field and a heavy increase in the number of girls enrolled in the School of Commerce is expected next fall.

Due to the generosity of half a dozen Commerce alumni, the Commerce News Letter was sent during the academic year to hundreds of Commerce men, literally in every part of the world. The letters which many of these men have written us evidence their sincere appreciation of this effort to keep them informed of what is going on here on the campus. Talk about your Commerce spirit!

Professor W. Bayard Taylor has been appointed State Price Administrator with headquarters in Milwaukee. Professor Taylor's new text, "Financial Policies of Business Enterprise," has just come from the press of the Appleton-Century Company. Ed Petersen, instructor in marketing, has been appointed to Professor Taylor's staff as assistant price specialist.

The School of Commerce is planning to hold a Conference on Retailing next October, probably on October 20 or October 27. Retailer's problems in a war economy will serve as the basis for the program.

Professor F. H. Elwell is on the Convention program of the Municipal Finance Officers' Association to be held in Buffalo on June 22-24.

Professor Erwin A. Gaumnitz is in charge of the Short Course in Life Underwriting to be held on the campus July 27-August 1.

The School of Commerce is giving eight courses during the 1942 Summer Session.

Engineering

by John du Domaine, '42

IN ACCORDANCE with the national defense program to train technical men rapidly, the University is holding a twelve weeks summer session. The College of Engineering is presenting a limited schedule of all four year courses.

Freshmen coming from the high schools may take the first semester of mathematics and the first full year of drawing. To the chemical engineers will be offered the full first year of chemistry. Sophomores may take the full requirement of physics and the first semester's work in calculus.

The individual departments are listing a tentative schedule for junior and senior courses. If there is sufficient interest more courses may be added to the program.

As of May 15 over two hundred students planned to enroll. In Electrical Engineering a total of fifty have made arrangements; of these 16 are sophomores, 28 are juniors, and 6 are seniors. In other departments the numbers are as follows: Chemical Engineering 26, Civil Engineering 3, Mechanical Engineering 106, and Mining and Metallurgical Engineering 23. Out of twenty-six from Chemical Engineering ten will be able to graduate immediately after the summer session instead of February, 1943. Very little interest has as yet been shown by incoming freshmen; however, until actual registration only a rough estimate can be made.

Since June 1st the shops in the Mechanical Engineering Building have been used by the United States Navy to train aviation machinists. In order to make full use of the equipment the shops are being run twenty-four hours a day, enabling more than 150 men to be trained at one time. Instruction is on a three eight-hour shift basis.

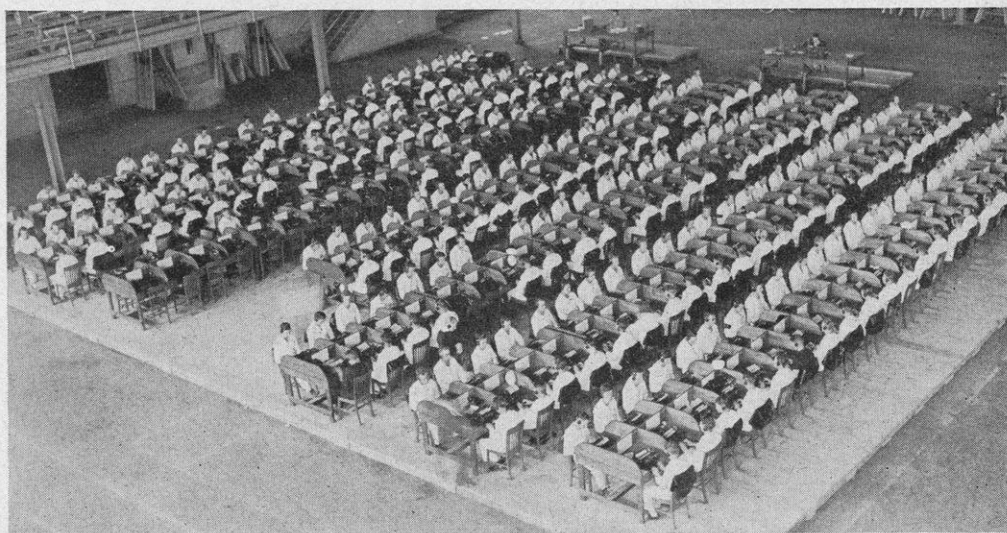

Chemical Engineering Research Assumes Important Aspects

THIS year Professor O. A. Hougen of the Chemical Engineering Department has been engaged almost entirely in research and development of chemical process design. On the staff under Doctor Hougen are sixteen research assistants.

Quoting Doctor Hougen: "The chemical manufacturing plant of twenty-five years ago was disproportionate, poorly designed, and generally disagreeable. It reeked with fumes and was surrounded with hazards. Today chemical plants are built for streamline continuous production. Highly inflammable materials are produced with many of the disagreeable factors eliminated."

The development and construction of any modern chemical processing plant depends on two types of design, mechanical design, which is the old and familiar type, and process design which is a new type and just in the stage of formation.

The Navy code school men use the field house for one of their huge classrooms. They are shown learning to type out messages given over the phone

Chemical process design involves production rates; that is, how fast each step in a process proceeds. The research at the Chemical Engineering Department at present is of this type. The flow of fluids and the flow of heat through gases, solids, and liquids are typical controlling factors. When two chemicals are placed in contact the reaction is not instantaneous, a definite time period is involved. This is the study of kinetics.

Although this field does require the cooperation of the research worker in chemical engineering with those scientists engaged in molecular problems of chemistry and physics, the theoretical approach is inadequate in application. As yet no one has published any rational and general application of the rate of reaction studies as applied to design. Industries have found their way by stumbling around in "trial and error" methods. Often millions of dollars and years of time are involved between the test tube stage and the actual production of the product.

The object of all the study by Doctor Hougen and his staff is that equipment may be constructed which will carry on reactions with the greatest economy of space, materials, heat, and power.

The present national emergency prevents too much description of the projects now under investigation; however, rate studies are progressing on seven different processes. One of the projects deals with a study of 100 octane gasoline production, another with the drying of air. Nine graduate assistants are working on this phase of development. A second phase involves unit operations in chemical manufacture. Here six different projects are carried on by a staff of six graduate assistants. Carbonization of steel is an additional study not belonging to the above groups. At present a survey is being made of a biological chemical nature of existing literature. This may develop a new field for investigation in the future.

One of the projects has been progressing over a period of four years. The plans are at present to continue study at least through 1943. Professor Hougen's chemical kinetics class supplements the individual problems. Here much of the theory is correlated for class discussion.

This research program promises to develop one of the greatest contributions to modern industry. To this end the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation has made a very generous grant to the department of Chemical Engineering.

Faculty Losses Due to War

AT THIS time each year many of the departments lose instructors. This year the problem is acute, however, since opportunities in industry are so promising that replacements are hard to find.

In mechanical engineering Professor G. C. Wilson has already left to accept a position with the Universal Oil Products Company of Chicago. Professor Wilson has been with the department since 1919. His research at the University has been in the combustion of various fuels in internal combustion engines. In his new position he will continue this work with special emphasis on fuels for aircraft use.

Mr. Joseph Firey who has worked with Professor Wilson in his oil research will also leave. He will take a position with the Standard Oil Company of California. George Smedberg who has been with the department several years and who is receiving his doctor's degree this spring is also leaving.

The Electrical Engineering Department is not hit quite so badly. Mr. Harwick Johnson who has been a part-time instructor will leave this June upon receiving his doctor's degree.

In the Chemical Engineering Department the loss of Mr. H. Hoerig will be strongly felt. Mr. Hoerig will receive his doctor's degree this June. He has been in charge for several years of the senior course in commercial organic synthesis. He is to be employed by the Cellophane Technical Division of the Rayon Department of the du Pont Company at Buffalo, New York. Mr. Gordon will also leave the department this June upon receiving his doctor's degree. He is to be employed by the Viscose Division of the Rayon Department of the du Pont Company in Virginia. As yet none of the men leaving have been replaced.

Bain Returns to Faculty

THIS summer Mr. William Bain will return to the Chemical Engineering Department as a research assistant. Mr. Bain had been an instructor in the department prior to 1939 when he left Wisconsin to accept a position as Assistant Professor at North Carolina. His plans are not to join the instructional staff here but to complete work for his doctor's degree as rapidly as possible.

1942 Placement Hits 100 Per Cent

DUE to the increase in industrial activity this year placement of engineering seniors has run very high. As of April first placement has run 80 to 95 per cent in various departments. Many of the men not as yet placed have merely not accepted positions. One hundred per cent placement for graduates was completed before June 1. Salaries offered to graduates this year are ten per cent above last year's average which was in turn ten per cent above the average for previous years. Summer work for juniors in engineering is being offered by many more industries this year as well. Hence the future is brighter for graduates this year and next than it has been for a decade.

Chem Engineers Study Explosives

DUE to the war situation the Chemical Engineering senior course in organic synthesis has been revised to include a much more detailed study of explosives manufacture. As well, the senior course in plant projects has been altered to designing of powder plants. By combining these two courses chemical engineering graduates this year are especially well trained to aid the nation in its war production efforts. The whole phase of production is covered from the process itself, to the equipment and raw materials needed, as well as the special safety factors employed in manufacture.

Summer Camp as Usual

THE surveying camp for civil engineering students will be held as usual at Devil's Lake State Park, although the number of students will be smaller than in the past. Professors R. S. Owen, L. F. Van Hagan, and H. W. Wesle will direct the activities of 25 students through the intricacies of topographic and hydrographic surveying, triangulation, stream gaging, route surveying, latitude and longitude determination, land-line surveying, and dodging rattlesnakes. The students will spend six weeks in a routine that gets them up at 6 a. m. and keeps them busy until 11 p. m. and that is guaranteed to put them into first-class physical shape, if they live through it.

Civil Engineers Hold Conference

REPRESENTATIVES from seven neighboring universities and colleges were guests of the Wisconsin student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers for a two-day conference on May 1 and 2. Eighty-nine students and faculty advisers registered for this First Annual Midwestern Regional Conference of Student Chapters of A.S.C.E. The affair was managed entirely by the students, who took the initiative in bringing the conference to Madison and in arranging the program.

L. R. JONES

Willard Warzyn headed the committee in charge, aided by Alfred Ingersoll, who arranged the programs for the general meetings and the banquet, Clifford Tice in charge of program printing and tickets, Richard Green who managed the registration, Roman Berzowski in general charge of the banquet, and Melvin Ree who arranged the dance and provided the visiting delegates with delectable dates. The conference will be held annually if plans permit.

Builders Depend on Research Done in University Labs

BUILDERS of homes or office buildings all over the nation are depending on research done by University engineers these days for accurately designed air conditioning and heating systems.

Professors G. L. Larson and D. W. Nelson of the mechanical engineering department started their research more than 15 years ago. The national heating and ventilating engineers group has provided some funds for research, and in the University laboratories the engineers have compiled leakage values and air distribution standards now contained in the guide book issued for heating and ventilating engineers the country over.

In one of the tests, the men actually measured the amount of air which leaked through a 13 inch brick wall, as well as test-of. W. Bayard Taylor, recently appointed

ing air seepage on all other types of wall construction. Now they are working with various types of air conditioning ducts, with tubes set up in their laboratories to stimulate the various types of construction.

Mining Engineers Give Summer Service to Industry

PROFESSORS E. R. SHOREY and G. J. BARKER of the department of mining and metallurgy of the College will spend the summer in Wisconsin industry in connection with the mining and concentration of Wisconsin zinc ores.

Prof. J. F. Oesterle of the same department will spend the summer in the metallurgical industry. He attended the annual convention of the American Foundrymen's Association in Cleveland, and presented a paper by two of his graduate students, S. E. Mueller and A. B. Smith.

Extension Division

by Louis W. Bridgman, editor

"BLUEJACKETS" of our Navy, no longer subjects of landlubbers' curiosity at this inland training point, and khaki-clad army men in increasing numbers dominate the academic scene where once the ends of peace were the prevailing objectives in higher education. Today it is the army, navy, and aircraft training schools that figure largely in the life and thought of the campus. Still other projects of government sponsorship are firmly planted in the University community as part of the war effort, and accepted as a service the institution owes to the nation's cause. With these various agencies the Extension division maintains a joint responsibility. As with other departments, it has come to feel war's rigorous impacts in many directions upon policies and personnel.

The recent status of these Extension-operated, wartime endeavors is reported here:

Sailor Students Throng Campus for Radio Course

FROM 300 in April to 900 in June is the picture of the changing sailor population at the University. July will bring 300 more, so that the naval contingent will number 1,200 at one time. These youthful potentials of Uncle Sam's fighting forces are here to study radio code and communications. In August the first 300 will "graduate" and be assigned to fleets for immediate service. Then will come 300 more, and this succession of new naval students will continue until July, 1943. The arrangement for the radio school may not end there.

Newly equipped quarters under the stone-faced Stadium were occupied by the Navy in May. They offer excellent laboratory facilities and dormitory accommodations for 300. June, with its new complement of men, witnessed abandonment of the temporary barracks on the University farm and occupancy of Adams and Tripp halls — largest of the red-tiled dormitories for men on the Mendota shore. Here 600 men now are quartered, and in one of them are the new offices of the administrative staff headed by Lieut. E. H. Schubert. Navy "chow" is served at the nearby refectory.

Many have been the favorable comments spoken and written about the hospitality shown by town and gown. The young "tars" themselves have waxed enthusiastic about Wisconsin's brand and diversity of food. Dairy products are abundant on the Navy menus. A California mother wrote to the people of Madison of her gratitude for the privilege of the University of Wisconsin environment for her son's radio training and for the hospitality shown her own and other boys far from home. For the larger proportion of these young men, it is fair to assume, this, in retrospect years after, will be "their university." And it may be expected that the University's contribution to the welfare of the men of the Navy will be repaid in terms of good will and friendly words for the institution by the lake "after many days."

Pilot Training Speeded Up to Help Uncle Sam

A SPRING contingent of 50 elementary and 30 secondary trainees brought the University's pilot training output, from the beginning in 1939, to 520. The summer session of pilot training was slated to start in June with the usual quotas filled and with both a full-time course and a part-time course offered. A course for instructors also was planned to start June 29.

This University is one of a few institutions selected to give courses of both eight weeks' and 16 weeks' duration. To be eligible, students must have applied for enlistment for the Army or Navy Air Corps reserves. Once enlisted, however, they are entitled to be taken off the selective service lists and not be subject to draft during the time they are engaged in aircraft training.

With a greatly increased demand for the training of new candidates for Army and Navy wings in every part of the country — Uncle Sam is seeking 100,000 new pilots — has come this University's proffer of facilities for a summer course for ground instructors. This course was prompted especially by the new interest in the teaching of fundamental aviation subjects in high schools and by the need for more instructors to help satisfy the acute demands by air training schools necessitated by the government's needs for a vast reserve of aerial manpower.

"When shortsighted people would have criticized as militarism the training of pilots," wrote Dean F. O. Holt recently, "we cooperated with the Civil Aeronautics Administration in training pilots as early as 1939. Today this training program operated in Madison, Milwaukee, and nine other cities in the state is in part responsible for the fact that the University of Wisconsin is represented by more men in the air corps of the Army and Navy than is any university in the United States."

Public Responds for Larger Manpower Reserve

IN THE federal and University educational program — Engineering, Science, and Management Defense Training — thousands of Wisconsin citizens have been preparing — others are destined to follow suit — to help meet their country's call for wartime tasks. This extensive program has involved teaching 16 defense courses in technical and business subjects for as many as 115 class groups.

One course — safety engineering — for workers in war industries, enrolled 450 in 13 cities, while a course for radio technicians enrolled as many as 3,500 men and women seeking to qualify for communications work in the Army, Navy, or radio industry. This course was given in 30 classes conducted in 20 cities. More were organized in May and June. Nine classes in plant protection were maintained for men engaged in guard duty and other protective work in war industries.

Some of these courses have been concluded; new class groups have been formed, and a program has been outlined for the summer months.

Army Men Seek New Knowledge from Institute

THE first student in the Army Institute, the War department's new agency for giving correspondence-study instruction to soldiers, was accepted in May. He is Pvt. Joseph A. Benia, Chicago, stationed at Fort Sheridan, a student in a course in radio. The institute, equipped with administrative personnel from the Army's own ranks, has been established in Madison in cooperation with the University. The commandant, Lieut. Col. William R. Young, reported an increasing volume of soldier applicants. The courses are available to Army men anywhere they can be reached by the mails.

The institute's study offerings include 68 of the Army's own courses and others offered by 79 accredited colleges and universities. The Army's courses are described as contributing especially to military efficiency; those taken from cooperating educational institutions are of high school and college grade offering academic credit. The expense to the soldier is nominal.

Serving as the institute's director of training and as adjutant is Lieut. George W. Strong, formerly of the University of Pittsburgh, and a staff of 22 men. This number will be increased as the volume of registrations grows.

Bureau on War Information is Opened on Campus

RESPONDING to federal request, the Extension division assumed responsibility for establishing a key center of war information. In June it established such a bureau on the ground floor of the University Library, where Wisconsin residents now may have access to printed materials, suggestions for local exhibits and programs, and answers to many questions bearing on the local responsibility.

The center is in general charge of Prof. L. H. Adolfson, of the extension faculty in political science, and an attendant is in charge daily.

Applicants will be aided in selecting pertinent printed matter of public and private origin, suggestions and materials for speakers' use, practical ideas for local projects, and explanations on many phases of the war effort. Exhibits will be shown, suggesting ways for setting up similar attention-arresting displays in local communities. The loan package library facilities of the Extension division will be enlarged to make available a wide variety of materials on the war situation as a whole.

Service Men Defy Distance in Training Quest

THE Extension division reported that its courses in the fundamentals of aeronautics — for ground school training — are in some demand by men in the armed forces from Wisconsin, electing to take studies without cost under the state's subsidy. Pearl Harbor is the base for one such student who registered for the course in air navigation in preparation for the air school. Alaska is the source of a registration by a soldier taking aeronautical meteorology to prepare for military aviation. These two courses are among five ground courses in aviation taught by correspondence.

City Students Have Field Day on U. W. Campus

APRIL marked the first time that students of extension class centers throughout the state have foregathered in Madison. The occasion, "University day," brought together about 150 young people — students of freshman and sophomore college classes at local centers — and a number of their instructors for two days of orientation on the home campus. Pres. C. A. Dykstra welcomed them to the University with a candid invitation to make more frequent visitations to what he described as "their own campus."

A luncheon, a banquet, campus tours, visits to campus classes, and an extension basketball tournament — first of the kind — filled their time in Madison. The basketball title was won by the Sheboygan center squad, with St. Croix Falls a close second in the final game played in the old red gym.

Almere Scott Honored by Forensic Body

AT THE close of the year's program in high school forensics, Miss Almere L. Scott, '14, director of the extension department of debating and public discussion, was awarded honorary membership in and the gold key of the National Forensic league as a recognition of outstanding service in the cause of speech instruction in Wisconsin schools. The award was the 20th in the long history of the national body and the third ever conferred in Wisconsin. Miss Scott has been secretary of the Wisconsin High School Forensics association from its beginning.

New Courses in English Literature

THE English department of the Extension division added two new courses to its series of correspondence courses in the field of literature. They are "Contemporary Essays," dealing with modern writings of the conventional type, and "Chaucer," a reading course, including a relating of Chaucer's work to general literary and intellectual traditions. Each may be taken for credit if desired. Alumni in search of a revivification of old habits of study for culture's sake will find their quest consummated here.

Elementary Seminar is Summer Project

FOR the third year the Extension division cooperated with the School of Education and other teaching agencies in sponsoring a summer graduate laboratory seminary — now in progress — at Milwaukee for teachers in the elementary field. Graduate and undergraduate credit was offered. Prof. J. W. M. Rothney, of the school of Education, director, and an assisting staff drawn from many midwestern institutions provided skilled leadership for two seminary sessions — of six and eight weeks, respectively.

Notes on Personnel

JOHN J. KAMMER, Extension division accountant, with the department since 1919, is on leave for duty with the War department, special services branch. First stationed at Fort George Meade, Md., he was commissioned first lieutenant and assigned to accounting duty at Fort Richardson, Alaska, his present post.

Carl Engler, an extension field representative stationed at Appleton, has joined the Navy and is serving as a yeoman at Milwaukee.

Prof. John E. Hansen has returned to his post as director of the bureau of visual instruction after a six months' leave during which he directed a project in educational motion pictures at Glenview, Ill.

Prof. Chester Allen, director of field organization, Harriett G. Holt, assistant professor of mathematics, and Almere L. Scott, director of the department of debating and public discussion, attended the annual conference of the National University Extension association at State College, Pa., in May, when the conference theme was "University Extension and the War Effort." Lieut. Col. William R. Young, of the Army Institute, also participated, discussing the institute's plans for offering correspondence courses to soldiers. The conference visitors were welcomed to Pennsylvania by Dr. Ralph Dorn Hetzel, U. W. '06, president of Pennsylvania State college.

Milwaukee Center

by Irene M. Bozak, ass't. recorder

MORE than 120 men are enrolled in the Pre-Service Military Training course offered by the University's Milwaukee Center. With the aid of outdoor drill, U. S. Army sound films, lectures, and classroom instruction, the course aims to provide men without previous military training an opportunity to become acquainted through practice with basic military subjects, and to provide men with previous training a refresher course in those subjects.

For the first time in many years, the Milwaukee Center is offering a summer program in its evening classes. Over fifteen different subjects are being given. These include several courses in mathematics, English, and history.

The University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee

Badger coeds aid our war effort by an intensive program of knitting for the soldiers has added three new courses to its already extensive ESMDT program. Survey of Statistical Methods taught by John F. Kenney and Elementary Mechanics and Electricity for Engineers under Drs. Miles Martin and Alton Rouse are the new courses. Plans are being formulated to offer Chemistry of Engineering Problems and a new Radio Technician course.

Landscaping of the Milwaukee Center's "campus" is now under way. A sprinkling system is being installed and a new drive and walk are to be constructed. According to Mr. H. T. Avey, building superintendent, various plants and shrubbery are to be placed on the grounds.

Dr. Ross H. Bardell, Acting Assistant Director, at the Milwaukee Center was elected Chairman of the Wisconsin section of the American Mathematical Association at its annual meeting in Oshkosh this spring.

Home Economics

DURING the second semester some of the instructors in the Foods Division of the Home Economics Department have been conducting Red Cross Nutrition Courses and a Canteen Course. Some of these courses were conducted for University students interested in taking the work, while others were open to the public.

Miss Catherine Personius attended the Institute for Food Technologists held in Minneapolis June 15-17. Miss Hazel Manning was present at the Phi Upsilon Omicron Executive Council meeting at Columbus, Ohio, June 15-21. From June 14-26 Miss Helen Allen directed the School of Weaving at Hartland, Michigan. On June 13 Miss Betty Schlingens became the bride of Mr. James Geisler. Miss Frances Zuill and Miss Helen Waite attended the annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Boston in June.

Future Navy yeomen learning to type in the classroom built in the new Stadium construction

The Home Economics Department took an active part in the program presented at the War Time Farming Day which was held on Saturday, June 13. The Women's program included information on "sugar-shy" recipes, methods of preserving and storing foods, information on better nutrition, the care of clothing, and the care of home equipment.

Student Honor Awards Made

MISS ELIZABETH WILLIAMS, who will be a senior in home economics in the fall, was awarded the Danforth Summer Fellowship this year. Miss Jeanette Moha was granted the Christine Margaretha Steenboeck Fellowship for the coming year. Miss Moha will be a senior in the department in the fall. W.A.R.F. undergraduate apprenticeships for next year were awarded to the following home economics students: Helen Baldwin, Veronica Stodola, Ann Williamson, Cynthia Kersten. Miss Doris Uehling, who received her Bachelor of Science degree in June, received the Milk Can award at the annual All-Agricultural and Home Economics Student Banquet.

Home Ec Meets Defense Challenge

IN ADDITION to the various defense measures necessary to meet possible community war emergencies, the Wisconsin State Council of Civilian Defense has organized a number of long-time service programs of significance to civilian health and morale. Among these are consumer interests. The problems of the consumer in the war have been attacked by a State Advisory Committee through which county consumer interests committees have been set up as a part of the county organization of civilian defense. Miss May Cowles of the Home Economics Department is the chairman of this State committee. County committees of consumer interests are at work in 56 of the 71 counties of the State. Their job is to keep the consumer informed about the importance of curtailing family consumption to allow all possible productive efforts to be diverted to war materials, to give him information so that he may cooperate intelligently with government measures such as rationing, control of prices, and shutting off supplies of commonly-used goods and to show the consumer how he may adjust his family living to the necessary changes with as little discomfort as possible. Newspapers and radio stations are cooperating by giving publicity to consumer material. Local programs and study groups are being urged. Consumer information centers have been started in a few places and will probably grow in number during the next few months.

Home Ec Alumnae Elect Mrs. Grace

MRS. LEO T. GRACE, '21, Madison, was elected president of the Home Economics Alumnae association at the annual luncheon meeting of the organization on May 30. About 125 attended. Mrs. Grace succeeds Beatrice Sylvester, '26, Madison, who presided at the luncheon program.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Lindley V. Sprague, '30, vice-president; Mrs. Myles Rodehaver, '31, secretary-treasurer (re-elected); Marion Juare, faculty advisor; and Mrs. J. B. Mortimer, faculty advisor (re-elected). All are from Madison.

Among those who spoke at the luncheon were Dean Chris L. Christensen of the College of Agriculture; Frances Zuill, director of the Home Economics Department; Abby L. Marlatt, former director of the Department; Nellie Kedzie Jones, former director of Home Economics Extension; and Frances MacKinnon, St. Louis, director of nutrition for the American Red Cross in the midwest.

Journalism

by Frank Thayer, prof.

UNUSUAL interest was shown in the course in Army Public Relations offered the second semester. Despite the fact that the enrollment was limited primarily to journalism students or to University seniors, more than 70 students took the course, which was conducted by Professors Grant M. Hyde, Frank Thayer, and Helen M. Patterson, and Lecturers W. M. Moore and E. D. Doan. Lieut. Col. H. H. Lewis, University Commandant, was a special lecturer. The course will be repeated each semester next year.

Seventy-two students in the Army Public Relations course handled the publicity for Madison's recent Victory Metal Salvage drive. The students wrote 43 news releases, features and editorials, presented several radio programs, and sent "minute-men" speakers to civic organizations. Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalism sorority, cooperated by supplying 1,000 posters and preparing several movie "trailers" for the campaign. This publicity drive as practical "lab" work was directed by Professors Hyde and Patterson.

Summer Session Offers Five Special Courses

FIVE journalism courses are being offered in the 1942 Summer Session. Professor Hyde is giving courses in Short Story Writing and Propaganda and Publicity; Professor Patterson, courses in Writing and Selling Special Feature Articles and Supervision of Student Publications and Journalistic Classes; and Professor Thayer, a course in Interpreting Foreign and War News. For graduate students opportunities for research are being given.

Co-eds Bring About Enrollment Increase

ALTHOUGH enrollment in the entire University has decreased, enrollment in the School of Journalism for the second semester increased as against the first semester of 1941-42 and as against the second semester of

John Dietrich, '37, assumes charge of Wisconsin Players production

1940-41. This increase is accounted for in part, according to Professor Hyde, by the fact that there has been a marked increase in the number of women students, and by the fact that additional work has been offered by the staff. Little decrease in journalism students is expected next fall.

Because of the increased number of women students, a new course of study will be offered in the School of Journalism next fall designed especially for women students interested in writing about fashions, nutrition and foods, textiles, household decoration, and shopping columns. The Department of Home Economics is cooperating in preparing the new course. Curricula now offered include daily newspaper, community newspaper, advertising, magazine writing, and teaching of journalism.

Medicine

DR. W. S. MIDDLETON, dean of the University medical school, is proud of the school, confident of its future, and will return to it after the war, he told the Wisconsin Medical society at a meeting in the Service Memorial institute in April.

Dean Middleton, who left May 7 to reenter Army service as a lieutenant colonel assigned to a hospital in Atlanta, Ga., accepted a silver wrist watch, presented by Pres. C. A. Dykstra as a farewell gift from the board of regents.

"I want to express for the board and for the University as a whole our feeling for Dean Middleton and our very deep sorrow that he is leaving," said Dykstra. "We who know him and deal with him know he is one of the notable teachers of medicine in the United States. It's a wonderful thing to have that kind of a teacher in the school.

"This watch," he added, "has all the trappings. You can throw it in the water and freeze it in ice. You can take it to the north pole or the south pole. It is rustproof and mothproof. We hope that Dean Middleton will look at it often and say, 'It's high time I got back'."

Dr. Walter J. Meek, assistant dean and professor of physiology for many years, will be acting dean in Middleton's absence. Dr. Middleton came to the University student health service in 1912, and joined the British army in 1917, serving two years on active duty and research before returning to Wisconsin. He succeeded the late Dr. Charles R. Bardeen as dean of the medical school in 1935.

Law School

by L. K. Garrison, dean

SINCE the last issue of the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS my colleague, Professor John Stedman, has been called to Washington where he heads the legal division of OPA in charge of tire rationing. This makes four of our faculty now with the government — Jacob Beuscher with OPA, Willard Hurst with the Board of Economic Warfare, and Charles Bunn with the State Department. Bunn expected to come back this fall to teach but has been persuaded by the State Department to stay on for at least next semester. He is at this moment in Madison with Mrs. Bunn for a brief rest. She will be here most of the summer, and I can still report that their hearts are in Madison. Bunn has been engaged in drafting lease-lend agreements between this country and other countries, and his work next fall will be in the lease-lend field.

Professor Rice will be in Washington for the first half of next year, and Professor Feinsinger and I will be giving part time to the National War Labor Board. One or two other members of the faculty may go for all or part of the time. Naturally our schedule of courses will be much reduced next year, but we will manage to give the most essential ones and in addition to continue most of the so-called defense courses which we have developed this year — Military Law, Public and War Contracts, Defense Laws and their Administration, Price Control, and Industrial and Personnel Management.

We have a summer school enrollment of 80 students, most of whom will stay for both halves of the fourteen-weeks session and thereby earn a semester's credit. The enrollment next fall is hard to estimate but will probably be not over 100, which represents about one-fourth of the average of recent years.

The Navy has invited the Law School to participate in the so-called V-1 plan under which students may enlist in the Naval Reserve in their freshman or sophomore undergraduate year, and at the end of four calendar years from the time of matriculation, be commissioned and called to active service provided they have taken certain work in mathematics and physics and have passed a comprehensive examination in the sophomore year. Under the plan the Law School will accept as candidates for a degree students enlisted in V-1 at the end of the sophomore year. In view of the two lengthened law school summer sessions, these students will be able to graduate in a total of four calendar years from the time of their entrance in the University. The Navy has sent similar invitations to other accredited law schools, and at the present date a number have worked out programs similar to our own, including Yale, Syracuse, George Washington and Marquette.

No other changes in our admission requirements have been made.

School of Music

by Wayne Hugoboom, ass't.

IN AN endeavor to serve in the war effort, Prof. Carl Bricken, head of the School of Music, has written the Morale Division at Washington offering the School as a training center for bandmen and other musical work needed by our armed forces. As yet nothing has been done but the school is waiting and hoping that it may be of service in this present crisis.

The home front has received considerable attention and a series of Tuesday evening sings at the Union were inaugurated this past semester under the able direction of Professors E. B. Gordon, Raymond Dvorak and Paul G. Jones, to help build morale. Their enthusiastic reception has insured the sing a regularly scheduled place in the list of University activities.

The bands, under Raymond F. Dvorak, have also been contributing with music and the proceeds of a recent concert were turned over to the American Red Cross.

Practice Hours Schedule Improved

IN AN attempt to aid music students who are notoriously lacking in sufficient practice hours for their instruments, the School of Music inaugurated a plan this past semester which has proven valuable and welcome. Music Hall and Annex practice rooms have been opened to the students every evening from Monday to Saturday, with at least one faculty member in charge of each unit for the evening. The plan has opened the way for music students to increase their practice hours, to complete necessary reference work or to spend some time acquiring background reading or concentrated study on musical subjects in which they were interested but which were unavailable to them because of lack of time. The experiment has proved highly successful and the School is to be complimented on undertaking such a move.

Pro-Arte Quartet Adds New 'Cellist

WITH the departure of Victor Gottlieb, 'cellist with the Pro-Arte Quartet the past year, the group have announced the acquisition of Mr. George Sopkin, well-known 'cellist of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra who will remain indefinitely with the famous quartet. The quartet will appear in a series

Dean Middleton left in May to join Army medical corps as lieutenant colonel of concerts in Washington, D. C., this summer under the auspices of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and will return to Madison in the fall as regular faculty members at the School of Music.

Mr. Sopkin is a pupil of Feuerman and is well recognized as a leading artist in his field. Mr. Gottlieb, the former 'cellist, is with his family in California, where he will continue concertizing.

The other members of the organization are Antonio Brosa, 1st violinist, Laurent Halleux, 2nd violinist, and Germain Prevost, violist.

Trio to Present Summer Concerts

PROF. GUNNAR JOHANSEN, pianist, Antonio Brosa, 1st violinist of the Pro-Arte Quartet, and Warwick Evans, former 'cellist with the Pro-Arte, now of California, will present two series of trio concerts at the Library of Congress at Washington and on the West Coast under the auspices of Mrs. Coolidge. Both Mr. Johansen and Mr. Brosa will return to the University this fall.

Nursing

by Miss Christina Murray, director

EIGHT nurses have completed the Refresher Course for inactive graduate nurses given during April and May. All are planning to return to either full or part time work in nursing.

The Alumnae of the School of Nursing held another very successful Field Day on May 30.

Miss Marie Ramsey, '35, is serving with the Red Cross Unit in Hawaii. Miss Katherine Baltzer, '40, Miss Doris Froehlich, '40, and Miss Ruth Sonnenberg, '35, have joined the Army Nurse Corps. Miss Baltzer is at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Miss Froehlich at Camp Polk, Louisiana, and Miss Sonnenberg at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Radio . . . WHA

by Harold Engel, ass't. director

THE University broadcasting station, WHA, won honors in the 1942 Exhibition of Educational Radio Programs held at Columbus, Ohio, on May 4 when a First Award and an Honorable Mention went to two Wisconsin School of the Air features. This brings to 18 the winnings of WHA since the competition began, for a total far in excess of that of any other institutional station.

"Under The Lion's Paw" from the literature series Invitation to Reading won First Award in the high school program class. "Corky," of Let's Find Out, received Honorable Mention in the primary grades division. Both the programs were written by Romance Cowgill Koopman, '36, WHA script writer, and produced by Gerald Bartell, '37, WHA production director.

"Meet the Sesars," one of Rev. James C. Fint's programs from "Exploring Americana" in the Wisconsin College of the Air, was mentioned for its use of the documentary technique.

Navy Men "Write Home" via Station SAILORS at the radio school on the Wisconsin campus are participating in a new two-way broadcast series. They record their impressions of navy life, Wisconsin, and things in general on transcriptions which are first played over WHA and then sent to stations in the boy's home communities to be broadcast.

The program was devised by Gerald A. Bartell, WHA production manager, with the cooperation of Lt. Elmer H. Schubert, officer in charge of the Navy school.

Sailors from the same part of the country are heard together in broadcasts, and thus the transcriptions have special interest in certain regions. A commissioned officer appears with each group of men to tell briefly of the purpose of the training. Then the sailors tell about their activities, what they think of Wisconsin, and send messages back home. Basically, the program is a part of the larger morale building activity of the station and the nation's armed forces.

Station Carries Classrooms to State Listeners A SIGNIFICANT radio contribution of the University to the state during the past year is the broadcasts directly from the classrooms. This is the first time that lecture-courses have been offered during the regular year. Summer school courses had been carried by radio.

Professor Chester Easum's course in Modern European History, Professor Howard Becker's course "Ideologies as Weapons" and the Political Science department's course "Government and War," supervised by Professor John Gaus, all draw a highly favorable response from listeners. Many Wisconsin alumni say it is like once again attending classes on the Hill to tune in. WHA plans to continue the classroom broadcasts, offering other courses, when the University opens in the fall.

"Fun Time" for the Youngsters "FUN TIME" — a new daily broadcast from Radio Hall is the most recent answer of WHA to parents' requests for better programs for small children. It is on the air at 9:30 each week-day and features stories, games, riddles and music.

Prof. Beuscher is on leave from Law school to the OPA in Washington, D. C.

Joyce Jaeger, WHA script editor, arranges the broadcasts and they are presented by Gerald Bartell, the station's production director. "Mister Jerry," as he is known, holds a visitors' day each Tuesday. Children accompanied by parents are invited to come to the studio then to take part in the broadcast.

"Country Doctor" — Radio Style

DR. L. R. COLE, director of student health at the University, is striking a new health chord in his weekly broadcasts over WHA. He appears at 9:50 each Friday morning on the "How Can I Help?" program to tell listeners how good health can be won and kept as an aid in the war effort. In a philosophic style, not unlike that of Will Rogers, the good doctor proceeds to say what he thinks.

There's Music in the Air When Prof. Gordon's Young Listeners Sing

WISCONSIN'S veteran radio music master,

Prof. Edgar Gordon, drew 3,500 boys and girls to the University campus on May 9 for the annual Radio Music Festival which each year climaxes his radio lessons in the Wisconsin School of the Air.

The children packed the Stock Pavilion in the morning for an hour of rehearsal and after picnic lunches they reassembled to sing for a broadcast over WHA and the stations on the Wisconsin Radio Network.

Professor Gordon has just completed his 11th year of teaching singing and music appreciation by radio. Nearly 50,000 boys and girls all over the state were enrolled to hear his "Journeys in Music Land" broadcasts. It is the state's largest music class.

Three Summer Classes to be Broadcast Daily

DURING the summer session at the University three courses having a direct relationship to the current war situation will be broadcast directly from the classrooms over Station WHA.

Professor Loyal Durand's course "Resources and Development of the Great World

WHA's honors reflect the ability of Director Harold McCarty

Powers" will be on the air at 8:30 each morning.

Professor John D. Hicks, eminent historian who is leaving Wisconsin at the end of the summer, will have his course, "Recent History of the United States" on the air at 7:00 o'clock each evening. The class is held in the morning and transcriptions made then will be broadcast at the later time. It is hoped that alumni and workers not at home during the day will be able to tune in on the evening hour.

Professor William Ebenstein's course in comparative government of the modern European nations will be broadcast at 1:30 each afternoon. The extension of class-room broadcasting this summer is based on the success and popularity of the courses last semester.

Family Dinner Attracts 130

THE 1942 "WHA Family Dinner" attracted 130 people on May 19 as broadcasters and friends of the station met to take their annual inventory of the year's progress. H. B. McCarty, station manager, was master of ceremonies and performed his usual memory feat of introducing by name each of the guests present.

Professor Henry L. Ewbank, chairman of the University Radio Committee, made the only speech of the evening on the topic "Radio Goes to War." Bill Harley and Jerry Bartell, of the station staff, presented the "1941-42 News Real," a radio style summary of the season's highlights.

Five senior students received recognition in a rose-pinning ceremony at the dinner for their outstanding work in radio. They were Mary Jo Peterson, Peggy Bolger, Barbara Anderson, Irene Bird and Roy Vogelmann.

Chapter a Day Proves Popular

RADIO listeners who have deplored the triviality of the soap-serial fare to which they have been subjected are loud in their praise for "A Chapter a Day" narrated by Gerald Bartell over WHA. This program features the reading of good books selected by the State Traveling Library.

In May when it was necessary to adjust station schedules Chapter A Day listeners in 47 different communities in three states wrote in to help select a new time for the broadcasts. They chose 11:00 AM, and the new half hour reading is heard at that time each week-day.

"Forward the Nation," by Donald C. Peattie is the book now being read. Titles scheduled during the past two years include "Rebecca," "Wild Geese Calling," "Good Bye, Mr. Chips," "Claudia and David," "Pied Piper," and others. Chapter a Day has been a regular WHA feature for years, and Mr. Bartell's reading has built a huge listening audience for it.

R. O. T. C.

SENIOR cadet officers of the Reserve Officers Training corps (ROTC) at the University who were called to active duty with the U. S. Army after commencement got a taste of directing men "under fire" during the annual ROTC inspection maneuvers during the month of May.

A total of 1,650 cadet officers and cadets in the ROTC basic course were called upon to show their stuff under the watchful eyes of three inspectors sent to Madison by the 6th Corps Area of the U. S. Army. Of the cadet officers participating in the inspection 63 went into the Army as second lieutenants in June.

And the ROTC put on an impressive demonstration. Amid the staccato bursts of machine guns shooting blanks, airplanes swooping low over a troop column, the popping of fire crackers simulating rifle fire, and the blue haze of a smoke screen, the cadets carried out military projects set up by the ROTC instructional staff.

Muir Knoll north of Bascom hall on the upper campus was the scene of the most spectacular maneuvers. Here two platoons of infantry successfully stormed the ski jump hill under conditions resembling actual warfare, two planes of the civil air patrol "machine-gunned" marching troops, and engineers set up barbed wire entanglements and "land mines."

But other points on the campus were also scenes of military projects. On the lower campus the signal corps strung its wires for "war-time" communication and other units of the infantry demonstrated how to ward off bayonet attacks and how to disarm an enemy in hand to hand combat. Still other units demonstrated their training in scouting and patrolling, poison gas drill and hand grenade throwing. Since hand grenades were not available, the cadets hurled potatoes, simulating hand grenades with effective accuracy.

Noticeably absent was the close order drill that marked inspections of other years. During these days of all out war, the ROTC cadets are being trained to fight. The cadets showed they know how to use the butts of their rifles to ward off the bayonet thrusts of an enemy in hand-to-hand fighting and to disarm an enemy attacking with a knife in personal combat.

The storming of ski jump hill by two platoons of infantry demonstrated that the cadets are learning co-ordinated warfare as well as the tactics of hand-to-hand combat. The platoons attacked the objective from two directions, one platoon advancing through the underbrush of the heavily wooded Muir Knoll woods west of ski pump hill and the other from the less protected area of Lincoln terrace.

In order to take the hill the cadets had to first "wipe out" an enemy machine gun, shooting blank cartridges. Concealed in shrubbery near North hall the machine gun had a commanding sweep of the ski jump hill objective. The cadets advanced through the woods cautiously until they were just short of the clearing on the hill. They squirmed along on their stomachs and waited within the edge of the thicket until the troops were ready to storm the hill. The hill was then stormed and "taken" by the cadets, charging through the smoke screen amid the popping of fire crackers simulating rifle fire.

In another military project a group of cadets were tested for their agility in hustling for cover when attacked by airplanes. As the column of troops marched along the winding drive leading up to Bascom hall from Park st., two planes of the civil air patrol swept low time and again over the marching column and theoretically strafed the troopers. As the cadets spread out to the side of the drive for cover, protecting machine guns mounted on trucks accompanying the marching column rapped out blank cartridges at the planes.

The ROTC engineers had a separate project in the Muir Knoll woods between Lake Mendota and Bascom hall. Wearing protective leather gloves, they quickly set up stretches of double-apron barbed wire entanglements. In front of the entanglements they laid personnel mines, better known to the soldier as "booby traps." These "booby traps" were designed to explode when tripped off by an advancing enemy. The explosion was simulated by the ringing of an electric bell.

In the gaps between the stretches of barbed wire entanglements the engineers placed "gooseberries." A "gooseberry" is a vicious device which the engineers fashioned out of barbed wire. It is a huge barbed wire ball so constructed that when an enemy steps into the "gooseberry" he becomes hopelessly entangled and each time he struggles to free himself the barbs of the "gooseberry" dig deeper into the soldier. After one group of engineers laid the barbed wire entanglements it was the job of another group to scout them out and remove them.

All of the military projects were planned in advance by the ROTC instructional staff under general direction of Col. H. H. Lewis, ROTC commandant. They were co-ordinated by Maj. Franklin W. Clarke, '27, infantry adjutant.

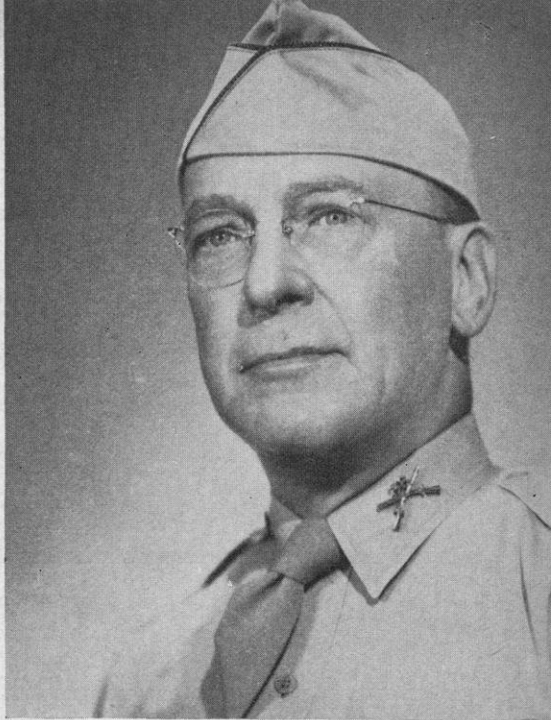

Of the instructional staff, Capt. Joseph J. Peot had charge of the signal corps planning and Capt. John O. Neighbours was in charge of the engineering planning.

ROTC Pistol Team Sets Fine Record

THE University's ROTC pistol team completed its best season in nearly a decade, winning 13 matches and losing 8. Most of these matches were "postal" matches in which the scores are mailed to the various competing colleges. This year, however, shoulder-to-shoulder matches were fired with Purdue and Michigan State at their home ranges. Michigan State is one of the outstanding teams in the country, having compiled a record of 21 straight wins this year. The Badgers lost to them by but one point, 1331-1330. This score placed Wisconsin second in the Sixth Corps Area Match. George Dawe, captain of the '42 team, placed first in the individual competition, setting a new record with a score of 286, breaking the record held by his coach, Capt. Joseph Peot, '34, by one point. The highest team score recorded in the past eight years was fired against Texas A & M, when the Badgers clicked for a 1351 total.

All local matches are fired in the new range in the recently completed stadium quarters. Boasting of all modern equipment in lighting, soundproofing, and target carrying, this is truly one of the finest ranges in the country. On his recent trip to Madison for the Commencement exercises, Maj. Gen. Grunert, 6th

A large share of the credit for Wisconsin's outstanding ROTC excellence goes to Col. H. H. Lewis, commandant Corps Area commander, remarked that the Wisconsin range was the finest he had ever seen. The improved record of the past year's team, both as the wins and team scores, attests to the soundness of good range conditions for improved firing.

In addition to his record breaking performance noted above, George Dawe garnered two firsts and two seconds in the Marksman Class in the Little Worlds Championship Matches held in Madison this spring. Capt. Peot, firing in the Masters Class, gathered two second places and one third in the four events.

ROTC Rifle Team Takes New Honors

THE ROTC rifle team won second place in the national inter-collegiate rifle championship matches in Chicago in April, coming within two points of tying for first place with the University of Iowa. The Badger marksmen shot 1,369 out of a possible 1,500, the highest score ever fired by a Wisconsin team in national competition. Further individual honors came to the Badgers when Ted Pauly, '43, took third place with a score of 281 out of a possible 300 against a field of more than 100 contestants.

The team won the Russell Wiles trophy given annually to the top team in Big Ten indoor rifle competition, and has been adjudged the Western Intercollegiate Conference rifle champions of 1942.

Most of the matches fired by the team are telegraphic matches with the scores being wired to each competing school. It is hoped, however, that more shoulder-to-shoulder matches can be held during the years to come.

While most of the members of the team are students in the regular ROTC courses, the team is open to all students. Eligibility requirements similar to those maintaining for the regular Big Ten sports are met by all team members.

The rifle team is coached by Lt. Kolar B. Chladek, '40, a member of the ROTC rifle team when he was a student.

Speech Department

by H. L. Ewbank, professor

PROFESSOR ROBERT WEST is President-Elect of the National Association of Teachers of Speech. He is in charge of the program for the 1942 convention to be held in Chicago during the Christmas holidays.

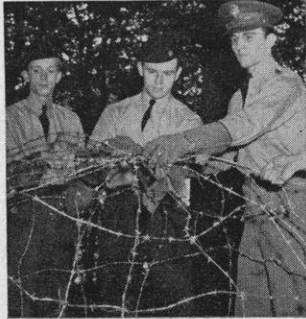

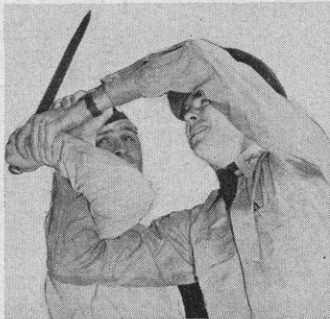

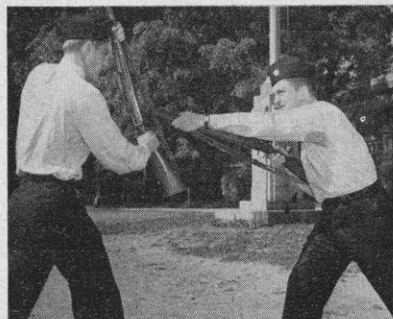

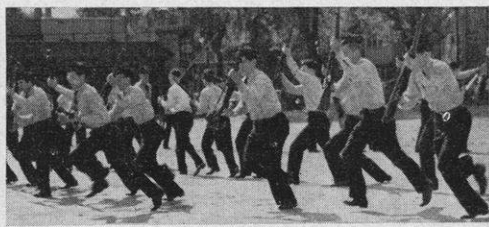

J. R. Lane, Assistant Professor and Director of the University Theatre, resigned in June. Assistant Professor Ronald E. Mitchell has been given full responsibility for the theatre program in addition to the supervision of graduate studies in drama. John E. Dietrich, '37, M. A. '40, formerly of the speech staff at Purdue University, has been appointed Lecturer in Speech. He will have charge of the speech courses for engineers and the men in physical education and will assist Professor Mitchell in the business affairs of the theatre.

Professor Gertrude E. Johnson has been persuaded to reconsider her decision to retire from teaching and will continue on a half-time basis next year, giving her advanced courses in Interpretation.

Department Publications

PUBLICATIONS by members of the Speech staff during the past year include: Speech: Forms and Principles by A. T. Weaver, published by Longmans, Green and Company, New York; Voice Science, by L. S. The Theatre

by Fannie T. Taylor, ass't.

FIVE plays will crowd the Wisconsin Players summer theater schedule at the Wisconsin Union theater during the weeks from July 2 to July 31. "Set It in Troy," Ronald E. Mitchells' prize-winning play in the recent Johns Hopkins playshop contest, will start the season under the author's direction the evenings of July 2, 3.

Maud Scheerer, whose dramatic re-creations have become a traditional part of the summer theater season, will read "Angel Street," a recent Broadway psychological thriller, the evening of July 7.

"Village Green," a folksy, shirt-sleeved comedy of New Hampshire, will pick up the Players productions again on a lighter touch, with Fred Buerki directing. "A Bill of Divorcement," Clemence Dane's tragic study of divorce in England, will be staged July 23, 24. Carl B. Cass will direct.

The summer program will close with a double bill. The first show will be a repeat of one of the spring plays, a Moliere farce, translated and adapted into English as "The Man Who Would Be Sick;" and "Ways and Means," from the Noel Coward collection of one-act plays, "Tonight at 8:30." Wynett Barnett will direct the Moliere show, and Donald Varian the Coward play, July 30, 31.

"Movie Time" Continued for Summer Session

SIX foreign and American made films and a Film Study Group, organized to view three famous films of the past, will be offered at the Wisconsin Union Play Circle this summer.

The regular "Movie Time" program each weekend will continue with "Quiet Wedding," based on a London stage success, June 27, 28, 29. "Lost Horizon," the famous James Hilton story, filmed several seasons ago, will be shown July 4, 5, 6. J. B. Priestley's comedy-mystery, "Laburnum Grove," was given a general production recently in England and will be shown July 11, 12, 13.

The only French film shown this summer will be Sacha Guitry's gay "Story of a Cheat," presented last fall to capacity audiences and brought back again for screening July 18, 19, 20. "Maxwell Archer, Detective," another English film, will be shown July 25, 26, 27. The season will close with a Soviet production, Sergei Eisenstein's great film, "Alexander Nevsky," with an original symphonic score by Sergei Prokofieff, composer of "Peter and the Wolf," and the symphonic background to "Sergeant Kiji."

The Film Study Group, showing films from the Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York, will offer "Monsieur Beaucaire," one of the most popular Rudolf Valentino films; "The Love Parade," with Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald; and "Robin Hood," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Sr.

spring by Wisconsin Players, honorary speech society at the University, for their work in play production and acting during the past season.

Paul Gauger and Marion Conde were cited for their work as the best male and female leads of the year, in "John Gabriel Borkman," and "Pursuit of Happiness."

A co-award was given Joseph Sturm and Warren Rosenheim for the best supporting roles of the year. The award went to Sturm for his work in "Hippolytus" and "The Critic," and to Rosenheim for "John Gabriel Borkman."

The awards were judged by the drama critics of the Wisconsin State Journal, William Doudna; the Capital Times, Sterling Sorensen; and the Daily Cardinal, Chester Goldstein.

Prize Winning Plays Produced

THE three student-written one-act plays, judged winners in the Wisconsin Players annual playwriting contest, were produced in the Wisconsin Union Play Circle during May, with student casts and direction.

The plays were James Terzian's "Tired Wings," which won the $25 award for excellence; "Once There Were Trees," by Henry Dillof; and "How Long is Three Minutes," by Richard James.

Nancy Partridge, Wilma Sparrow, and Louise Froiland directed the three productions. The plays were selected from the entries in the contest by Prof. Ronald E. Mitchell of the speech department, Maurice Shudofsky of the English department, and Prof. Samuel Rogers of the French department.

The Wisconsin Union

by Porter Butts, director

AN ALL-TIME record use of the Memorial Union was chalked up this season, in spite of a 14 per cent drop in enrollment at the University, it was announced in the spring.

A traffic survey, taken the last of April, indicated that an average of 8,024 people entered the doors of the Union daily, an increase of about 1,500 persons over the previous year.

The traffic survey is made each year on the same typical day of the month. This year the volunteer student assistants were organized under the direction of Gordon Brewer, '44, and Florence Fox, '44.

The sharp increase of use, in the face of declining enrollment, is accounted for in the opinion of the student leaders of the survey and the Union staff members, partly by the new use of the Rathskeller on the part of women, partly by the expanded Union program, and partly by the tendency of the students to concentrate their recreation and other activities on campus as transportation becomes more difficult.

Navy Men Given Full Use of Union Facilities

TO THE 1,200 sailors now stationed at the University the Memorial Union serves as the equivalent of USO headquarters and camp recreation center as well as the scene of much free time activity. The Union's program for the Navy trainees has been one of assimilation. The men have been made to feel a part of the University, rather than a group apart, and have been given the same rights and privileges in the Union as the other students.

Aside from a welcome and tour of the campus and Union when each batch of three hundred men has arrived at the first of each month since April no attempt has been made to single them out.

Navy men are welcome to take part in all the activities other students do, dances, tournaments, games, concerts. A Navy man has been appointed to the Union directorate, the student governing board, and he collaborates with the social and athletic chairman for each section of 50 Navy men to carry through Union programs and policies. Meetings are also held between Union and Navy officers to insure adequate recreation means.

The Union remained open through June this year in order to continue to provide recreation headquarters for the Navy men. Special bowling and billiards classes were started, and "dateless dances," popular with the men, were continued through June, being held on the theater deck overlooking the lake.

The Union has arranged a 25 per cent reduction with the University boathouse for boat rentals by the sailors; the Union library committee has obtained 100 magazines a week and 10 new subscriptions, gifts of sororities.

The sailors have responded enthusiastically to the campus program, and over the weekends, during their free time, make full use of Union facilities. Mat dances and the "dans-keller," are most popular with them, while the Rathskeller, game rooms, "Movie Time" and other functions are well patronized.

Folk Festival Climaxes Summer Music Program

A FOLK festival, led by John Jacob Niles, American ballad singer, and student of American folk music, will climax the summer music program on the campus Saturday evening, July 25.

The program, undertaken by the Wisconsin Union Music committee, with the collaboration of the School of Music and the department of Physical Education for women, will be held in the Wisconsin Union theater.

An informal lecture and recital by Niles, singing folk melodies he has gathered in the hills and byways of America, will open the program. The Music School Choral group of mixed voices, led by Paul G. Jones, will follow with a group of four songs, "Sing We the Virgin Mary," "I Wonder as I Wander," "One Morning in May," "The Carrion Crow."

Square dancing by a picked group from the physical education folk dancing class, directed by Miss Helen Knight, will conclude the program.

Mary "Mac" Leaves Union Position

MRS. RICHARD SHOWMAN, hostess and instructor in social education in the Memorial Union and her assistant, Miss Susan Poston, both resigned this spring at the close of the semester. Miss Poston is going to Washington to enter government work this summer.

Mrs. Showman, known to hundreds of students as "Mac," has been Union hostess and secretary for the Women's Self Government association since 1936. Unofficially she has also been advisor to the Student Board. She began her work as assistant to Mrs. James Watrous, former Union hostess, and has carried a leading part in the development of student government projects.

Miss Poston has aided particularly in the personnel work of the Union activities bureau.

Miss Evelyn Hansen, one-time member of the Iowa Union board, assistant hostess and librarian at Iowa for five years, and resident manager of Read Hall at the University of Missouri until this spring, will join the Wisconsin Union staff in September to replace Mrs. Showman. Miss Poston's successor has not been appointed as yet.

Students Win Awards at Annual Art Show

NINE awards were made to student artists at the University in the judging for the 14th annual student art exhibition, on view in the Wisconsin Union galleries from May 5 to May 22. The exhibition was sponsored by the Wisconsin Union gallery committee.

The awards were made by three judges, who also selected the works to appear in the show. They were Wallace Baldinger, chairman of the department of fine arts, Lawrence college, Appleton; Renzo Fenci, Madison sculptor; and Sylvester Jerry, director of the Museum of Fine Arts, Racine.

The Elizabeth Waters purchase prize of $25 was divided into two awards of $15 and $10, given to Mary Gardner, Horicon, for her water color, "Red Barn," and Edward Mayland, Racine, for the water color, "Boat House."

Owen Kampen, Madison, received the men's residence halls purchase prize of $25 for "Man at Bar." John Wilde, Milwaukee, received the newly created John Steuart Curry award of $25 for "The American III." An oil, "Lady in a Landscape with Animals," won the first prize in the Class of '30 award for Sylvia Fein.

Second prize in the Class of '30 awards went to Elizabeth Bennett, Madison, for "November," an oil. Third prize went to Robert Hodgell, Topeka, Kans., for "Judgment Day in de Mornin'." The two Sigma Lambda awards of $5 went to Patricia Benoit, Oak Park, for work in art metal, a pewter creamer and sugar; and to Barbara Wootton, Madison, for "Barnyard," a water color.

Union hostess Mary "Mac" Showman resigns from post

Faculty Artists Present Works WORKS of nine practicing artists on the University of Wisconsin faculty were shown in the main gallery of the Wisconsin Union during May.

The artists exhibiting included John Van Koert, instructor in art education; Roland Stebbins, associate professor of art education; William McCloy, instructor in art education; William Varnum, chairman of the department of art education; Helen Annen, assistant professor of art education; John Steuart Curry, artist-in-residence at the College of Agriculture; James Watrous, assistant professor of art history; Della Wilson, associate professor of art education; and Byron C. Jorns, assistant in agricultural journalism.

Among the 23 works shown was the recent winner of the William Monroe White award for modern painting at the Milwaukee Art Institute, James Watrous' painting, "I, John, who also am your brother . . ."

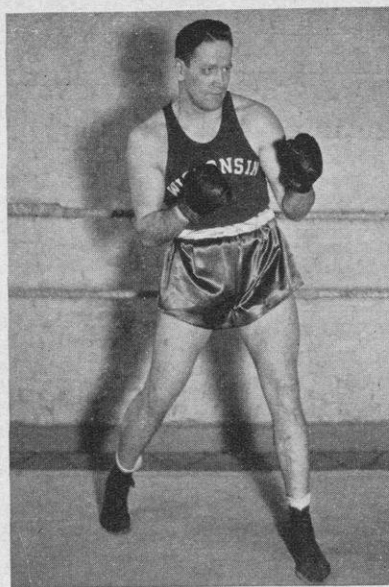

Varsity Athletics

by Fred Baxter, sports ass't

WHEN the final compilation of the entire 1941-42 sports year for Wisconsin squads was made, the Badgers were credited with 61 wins and 107 dual meet appearances. Readers of this opus have read the story of most of these contests, with the exception of those performed by the spring sports squads.

While the Badger squads did not achieve a Big Ten championship, the second place garnered by the basketball five and the third place earned by the baseball nine went a long way toward keeping the Cardinal colors near the top.

Incidentally the Badgers attracted large enough gates to give the athletic department one of the best years, financially, in history. Lead by the basketball squad, which had more people in the field house than at any time in history, the total gate receipts were $273,316.03, the largest since 1929-30.

There were also numerous individual competitors whose performances rated top headlines throughout the country in every portion of the athletic year. During the gridiron season it was "Pat" Harder, "Dave" Schreiner, "Bud" Seelinger who achieved fame by topping the Big Ten in their various lines of football endeavor. Schreiner also won the honor of being the first Wisconsin griddier ever to be placed on the Associated Press and Kate Smith first team All-American elevens. Came the cage season and John Kotz took over front and center for

Wisconsin. His illustrious basket shooting of his first two years of competition placed him well on to the road toward all-time basketball immortality. Then there were those four fighting Badgers, Gene Rankin, Warren Jollymore, Cliff Lutz, and George Makris who hit the metropolitan newspapers throughout the nation by winning NCAA titles. This spring, pole vaulter "Bill" Williams, shot putter "Bob" Beierle, and high jumper "Bob" Hodgell have kept the Wisconsin prestige high by winning Big Ten titles and leading the Badgers to their first Central Intercollegiates win.

Coach Woodward Joins the Navy

WHEN we last communicated with you readers of the ALUMNUS the boxing team had just shattered all records by winning four national titles in a foreign ring. They still had one dual match to go. Yes, they won it as usual. By soundly whipping Washington State, 7 to 1, the Wisconsin mitt slingers stretched their current consecutive string to fifteen.

Just after the 1942 season was terminated Wisconsin lost a highly important cog in the coaching machine that has been the power behind the great Badger ring record. Assistant Coach "Vern" Woodward is now teaching potential U. S. Navy aviators the art of self defense. Woodward's loss is a tough one for the Cardinal to take, but if he can teach Unele Sam's birdmen to hand it out to the Japs as successfully as he has helped Coach Walsh, this war will not last long. National champion 145-pounder Warren Jollymore also left soon after the season to join the Army Air Force.

Crew's Lone Race Upsets Dopesters

DESPITE a rapid revision of schedule necessitated by the shortening of the second semester, Badger spring sport squads were able to have almost as full seasons as usual. The one exception to this fortunate situation was the Cardinal crew. With the oarsmen it was a case of being "Kings For a Day." Their only competition of the year came in the Adams Cup Regatta in Boston.

As the Badgers were competing in the race for the first time in history and they had had no previous racing against outside competition, they were accorded little consideration in advance guesses as to outcome of the race. However, when they finally did appear in Boston, Beantown sports writers began to sit up and take notice because of the terrific size of the personnel of Coach Allan Walz's 1942 boatload of young huskies. What a group of young Americans they were! Averaging over six feet two in height and Walz never has divulged their exact weights, the Badgers started quite a fuss in the Old South Station (Back Bayers were afraid they were invaders from Mars).

The 1942 Badger Varsity was composed mostly of young men who had rowed to a mighty close second in the freshman race at Poughkeepsie a year ago, so they were not as smooth as they might be. In their Charles River Basin workouts, they gave the appearance of being a powerful bunch of boys but sadly lacking in unity and finesse of the art of rowing. Then came the day of the race and the Badgers decided that the East by rights should be for a spot of a surprise. So surprise them they did. The young Wisconsinites went right out and finished an extremely close second, much to all the expert's consternation. Only the smoothly stroking great Harvard eight was able to best their efforts.

Remember the Badger varsity next year. If the nation's war effort does not change its personnel too much and allows crew races to be held, this Cardinal shell is going to be right up among the leaders every time out. Carl Holtz, recently elected Captain for 1943, is one of the smartest looking pieces of rowing humanity in the college world today. When his seven cohorts are welded into a smoothly functioning unit, this shell might well be the greatest ever to wear the Cardinal.

Hard Luck Trails Baseball Squad; Finishes Third

ALTHOUGH black-veiled Miss Hard Luck forced Coach "Art" Mansfield, to make tape, splints, and gauze a larger part of his equipment than bats and balls; the Badger nine completely upset the dope by battling through to a third place tie in Big Ten standings by winning seven of its twelve games.

After the fifth game of the schedule, Mansfield was never able to field what he had chosen as his healthy first string. A painful ankle sprain robbed him of sophomore Howard Boese as a pitcher. From then on it was up to another sophomore, Walter Lautenbach, to perform an iron man task on the mound. However, substitutes "Ed" Schiewe and Lloyd Schneider deserted their other positions for hurling duties and came through with timely victories. Only a disappointing pair of losses to Minnesota late in the season kept the Badger from championship consideration.

Tracksters Garner First Place in Central Meet

A SURPRISING first place in the Central Intercollegiates highlighted the Wisconsin track season. The 1942 squad depended almost entirely on its fieldmen in its big competition. While the Badger runners held up enough to aid in defeating Marquette in a dual meet and Minnesota and Northwestern in a triangular affair, the cinder path men contributed very little in the Big Ten meet and the relays entered by the Cardinal.

Such men as weightman "Bob" Beierle, pole-vaulter Captain "Bill" Williams, and high jumpers "Bob" Hodgell, "Gil" Hertz, and "Dick" Moreau were equal to taking up the slack however to lead the way to points in the Kansas and Drake Relays, the Big Ten meet, the Central Intercollegiates, and NCAA meets.

Golf and Tennis Squads Hit .500

COACH "JOE" STEIN-AUER'S golf team and

Coach Carl Sanger's tennis squad enjoyed only mediocre seasons as both mentors were forced to depend on too many inexperienced men. The netmen gained an even split in their eight dual meets, but they were unable to score any points in the Big Ten conclave.

The linksmen defeated Marquette twice as well as a win over Lawrence and Chicago as compared with losses to Northwestern, Minnesota, and Notre Dame in dual meet competition. While Captain Burleigh Jacobs showed up well in the conference meet, none of the other niblick handlers could give him much aid and the Badgers were forced to accept seventh place. The NCAA meet still remains on the calendar with Jacobs having the best chance to get into the championship round.

Madison's late, rainy and cold spring hindered practice sessions for all of the spring squads this year.

Revise Required Phy Ed Program

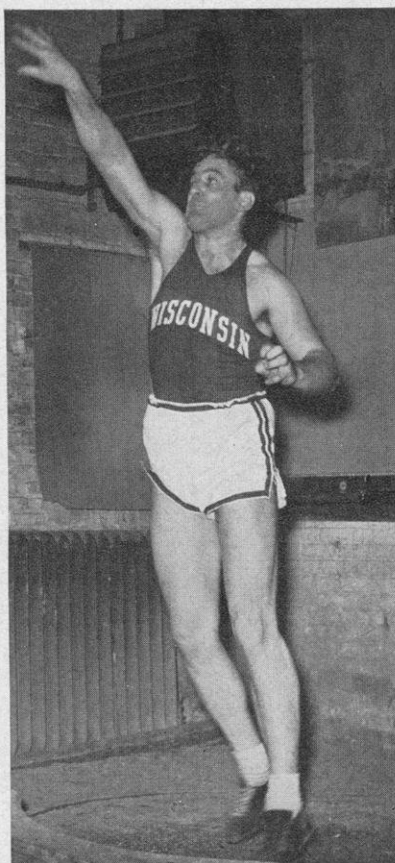

WITH the war making the nation more and more conscious of good physical condition, the Wisconsin physical education department will embark on a greatly enlarged program for men students next fall. All male undergraduates, with the exception of junior and senior engineers, will be required to take two hours of organized physical education during their residence on the campus. The new program will include, for freshmen, a conditioning course for body development and basic athletic skills; for sophomores, juniors, and seniors, sport skills, intramural and varsity sports, and self-defense activities.

The department is also enlarging its summer school program this year to accommodate the increased demand for physical education specialists in the lower schools.

Jacobs Wins Big Ten Medal

WINNER of the Western Conference medal for 1942, based on proficiency in the classroom and athletic field, is senior Burleigh Jacobs. Jacobs has had an extremely active extra curricular career during his four years on the campus and is one of the most popular men in the class of '42. Among his honors are: captaincy of the golf team, chairmanship of the 1941 Homecoming, presidency of the senior class, chairman of the board of directors of the Badger, and affiliation with honorary fraternities Beta Gamma Sigma, Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Kappa Phi, Beta Alpha Psi, and Iron Cross. He is also a member of Phi Delta Theta. After competing in the NCAA golf tournament the last of this month, he will begin officer's training in the Navy.

GEORGE MAKRIS, right guard on the 1941 Badger gridiron machine and NCAA titleholder in the light heavyweight division has been awarded the Harlan B. Rogers scholarship.

AMA's Highest Honor

THE highest honor that the American Medical association can bestow on a member was awarded to quiet, white-haired, dignified Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, a student here in 1883-84 and holder of an honorary Doctor of Science degree from the University in 1916. This distinguished service award was given to Dr. Hektoen for outstanding contributions in the field of medicine during 1942 at the association's annual convention early in June.

Seventy-nine years old, Dr. Hektoen is a world-renowned authority on bacteriology and pathology. He is chairman of the advisory committee of the National Cancer institute and chairman of the committee on scientific research of the AMA. Dr. Hektoen, who 60 years ago learned the fundamentals of medicine here in a year's work under Dr. Edward A. Birge, was for many years professor of pathology at Rush Medical college, Chicago, and now is emeritus professor there.

Among his numerous honors is the distinguished service award of the Wisconsin Medical society which was bestowed upon Dr. Hektoen at its 100th anniversary meeting here last year. Dr. Hektoen has become famous as the author of many articles on pathology, bacteriology, and immunology; has edited the Journal of Infectious Diseases and the Archives of Pathology; is a member of the National Academy of Science, the Association of American Physicians, the AMA, the Chicago Medical society, the Association of American Pathologists and Bacteriologists and other groups in his field.

Lawyer Turns Author

ONCE there was a lawyer who decided to become a writer. So he did and he was very successful. Essentially that's the life story of Walter Archer Frost, '04, who took his law degree here and began practicing law in Green Bay, Wis., and later, Boston.

Then in 1912, Frost became editor of People's Magazine, associate editor of Munsey's magazines, and fiction editor of Good Housekeeping. At this point the first World War interfered with his literary career, and as a captain, Frost served with the U. S. Army.

Frost's first novel, "The Man Between",
was published in 1913, with three others following in the next 12 years, as well as over 500 articles and short stories to leading magazines. A fellow of the American Geographic Society, Frost travelled through Alaska, the Far East, Malay, Java, and Ceylon making ethnological studies.

In September, 1939, he was awarded the Palme Académique by the Republic of France and made Officier d'Académie. For the past four years, he has been literary assistant to Young & Rubicam, Inc., in New York City. His friends envy him his residence at the Salmagundi club there, famous for the exclusive dish of the same name.

85 Million for Homes

DIRECTING the Metropolitan Insurance Co.'s housing developments in New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Alexandria, Va., is a trio of Wisconsin men. When completed in 1943, these housing projects will represent an investment of 85 million dollars, and are designed for the middle class, white-collar workers in the $1,800 to $4,500 a year income bracket.

Tall, genial, direct George Gove, '04, holds the title of manager of housing projects. A newspaperman in Milwaukee early in his career, Gove left Milwaukee in 1911 to become assistant to the secretary of the interior in Washington and became interested in industrial organization problems and in housing. From 1924 to 1938 he was director of the New York state commission of housing and regional planning and secretary of the state board of housing.

Working directly under Gove is Ralph E. Doherty, '10, who supervises construction of all of Metropolitan's housing. He came to Metropolitan in 1938, too, from the public works administration housing program.

Completing the triumvirate is Charles Chambers, '13, an engineering graduate like Doherty. Chambers was in charge of all mechanical work during the construction of the New York Parkchester project, and now he is in charge of construction for the entire Los Angeles project, directly under Doherty.

The Parkchester development, now completed, houses 12,272 families, from 35,000 to 40,000 people. Only about 21% of the land is occupied by buildings; 20% is taken up by streets and parkways and the rest is devoted to lawns, flower beds, play yards for children, and recreation grounds for adults. Parkchester, as well as the other projects still under construction, represents the most modern development of scientific housing for better living. The buildings, all similar but few exactly alike to avoid monotony, stand apart to let the sun shine in and the air circulate. The windows look out on lawns and gardens, and, in San Francisco, on the Pacific ocean.

Round Robin Keeps Rolling

SOME small groups in the present graduating class have probably started round robin letters with the hope of continuing friendships and contacts for many years after graduation. Such groups may be encouraged by the story of a round robin which started after graduation exercises 35 years ago — and is still going strong.

Richards L. Loesch, engineering graduate, '07, started this round robin in July, 1907, among seven electrical engineers who had done much of their studying and "lab" work together. The group included R. L. Loesch, Montrose, Colo.; Allen C. Hibbard, Oakland, Calif.; E. P. Hubbard, Milwaukee; C. W. Green, New York, and formerly London; R. B. Anthony, Chicago; A. J. Goedjen, Green Bay; and Louis Reinhard, Milwaukee (now deceased).

That round robin has constantly pursued its cycle over the United States and for a time included one stop in England. It has travelled about two million miles and has made at least two hundred complete cycles. At least 1,400 letters have been written by the seven members of the group during these past 35 years. The members of this particular round robin look forward to its return after each succeeding circuit and have become more attached to "the robin" as the years roll on, Mr. Goedjen declares. "Our round robin has given so much pleasure and satisfaction," he added, "that it will continue as long as we all survive."

Back Home at Last

FOR the first time in three years, Louis P. Lochner, '09, is living in a free country again. After a year's internment in a German camp, along with other newspapermen, Lochner was given permission to return to the United States where he is now writing, lecturing and broadcasting about life in Nazi Germany at the present time.

Three years ago in June, Lochner was in Madison for his class reunion and spoke at the Alumni banquet on his experiences with the great men of Europe. As chief of the Berlin bureau of the Associated Press since Dec. 1, 1938, Lochner has interviewed Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, Mussolini, Hindenburg, Kaiser Wilhelm II, Benes, and Dollfus, to name a few of the most prominent figures.

As a reward for distinguished service as a foreign correspondent during 1938, Lochner received the $1,000 Pulitzer prize in May, 1939. Because of his reputation as one of the leading foreign correspondents, Lochner has scored many firsts, among them being the story of Hitler's historic first visit to Mussolini in 1938 and the story of the assassination of Dollfus. His most recent achievement was a trip to the Russian front in 1941, bringing back an eyewitness account of the men and the fighting.

Lochner's foreign service began in 1917 when he acted as secretary to Henry Ford when the automobile manufacturer chartered an ocean liner and went to Norway with a large group of world leaders seeking peace in the first war. He became a newspaper correspondent in 1919.

Four out of Nine !

FOUR Wisconsinites have been named by President Roosevelt to serve on a nine-man national railway labor panel under newly-organized machinery aimed to prevent interruption of essential transportation facilities through labor controversies.

William M. Leiserson, '08, of the National Labor Relations board, was named chairman of the new panel. Fellow-alumni sitting with him are Judge Wiley Rutledge, '14, associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; Dr. Edwin E. Witte, '09, professor of economics here; and John A. Fitch, '09, director of industrial courses at the New York School of Social Work.

Leiserson's present appointment adds a new chapter to his work in the field of labor, a series that began on the Hill, when he attended his first lecture by John R. Commons. Previous to his NLRB position, Leiserson had served on the National Mediation board and the National Labor board of the NRA. In addition to these and numerous other government appointments, he was professor of economics and political science at Toledo university from 1915-18, and professor of economics at Antioch college since 1925.

Professor Witte is another Commons man. In 1922, he moved into the position in which he made a national reputation — as chief of the Wisconsin legislative reference library. Thousands of Wisconsin laws are the products of his pen during the 11 years he held the post. Then he was called to Washington to direct the Roosevelt commission on economic security. As a result of this commission's work, Roosevelt's social security program was evolved.

Before Judge Wiley's appointment to the Court of Appeals in 1939, he had been dean of the College of Law at the University of Iowa. He has also been a professor of law at the University of Colorado and Washington university, and practiced law in Boulder, Colo.

A graduate student here in 1906-07 and 1908-09, John A. Fitch has been teaching labor courses at the New York School of Social Work for 25 years. He is the author of THE STEEL WORKERS, CAUSES OF INDUSTRIAL UNREST, and VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE IN ACTION.

Heads Child Congress

KATHERINE LENROOT, '12, the serious-minded and capable chief of the Children's bureau of the Department of Labor, who liked work so much she never learned to play, has acquired an important new position as president of the Pan-American Child Congress. Miss Lenroot headed the United States delegation to the conference which was held in Washington, D. C., the last week in April.

Miss Lenroot went to the Children's bureau in 1915 as a social investigation agent and has risen to the top position by dint of hard work and a genuine love for her job. Her appointment as chief of the bureau came in 1934. Her job, which keeps her busy at her desk from 9 to 6, and often on Sundays, too, is to co-ordinate the work of her staff and to keep in touch with child welfare agencies and State Children's bureaus.

The father-daughter combination of Judge Irvine L. Lenroot of the court of customs appeals and Katherine is well-known in Washington. When a new piece of child labor legislation is passed, it is to her father that Miss Lenroot turns for advice on the legal technicalities of it.

Unofficial godmother to hundred of children, Miss Lenroot was awarded the Parents' magazine medal for Outstanding Service to Children in 1940 as a result of her work in the Children's bureau and on national committees on child labor and delinquency.

ONE of Wisconsin's most successful sons, Merrill P. Skinner, '14, highly respected in public utility circles, has been elected director of Buffalo Niagara Electric Corp., of which he is also vice-president. During the 27 years since receiving his engineering degree in 1915, after his B. A. the year before, Skinner has risen from an apprentice in machine design for Western Electric to his present position as one of the top men in the field.

In 1935 he was awarded the McGraw medal in recognition of the outstanding success of the "Better Light, Better Sight" movement, for which, as chairman of the special lighting committee of Edison Electric Institute which initiated the movement for the proper design and scientific specifications of modern home lighting, he was responsible.

Scott Field Boss

SCOTT FIELD, home of the "radio university of the Air Corps", which has grown in less than two years from an unimportant Army post to the finest of its kind in the world, held "open house" Sunday, May 24, in a celebration marking the 25th anniversary of the post.

Credit for its expansion goes to Col. Wolcott P. Hayes, '18, commandant since 1940, under whose direction hundreds of new buildings were constructed, millions of dollars of radio equipment installed, and trained radio operators by the thousands began the intensive studies that would fit them for duty anywhere with the nation's growing air fleet.

From every state in the union, these thousands of embryo radio operators have come — just how many thousands is, of course, a military secret. The program, put on by these boys, included the first annual Scott Field relays in which many former college stars participated, a formal guardmount, baseball games, fencing exhibition, band concert, and retreat parade. Dozens of Wisconsin men are now in training there, under their Wisconsin commander.

Established in 1917 as a school for pilots in World War I, Scott Field in 1922 became the school for balloon and airship pilots. In 1939, Congress approved a plan for the field's expansion into one of the many Air Corps technical schools; then, in 1940, it became a radio school.

A Helping Hand

AS ATTORNEY for the Federal Communications commission, Daryal A. Myse, '33, was instrumental in saving the University several thousand dollars a year when he was called in on the recent plan of the telephone company to raise the rates in Madison, a proposal which was denied.

Mr. Myse has been with the FCC since March, 1941, going to that position from a similar one for the Federal Power commission. This is not the first time he had worked with Wisconsin phone companies, having been assistant counsel in the Wisconsin Telephone cases under Harold M. Wilkie, '13, from 1936 to 1938, when he was appointed counsel for the Public Service commission of Wisconsin.

A graduate of the College of Engineering in 1933, Mr. Myse then entered the Law school and received his degree in 1937. His law degree was the first diploma signed by the "new" president of the University, Clarence A. Dykstra.

You Can't Get Enough Vitamin D from Ordinary Foods

TO BUILD, properly nourish and help protect teeth and bones, both you and the children need calcium. But did you know that the human body cannot use this mineral efficiently unless enough Vitamin D is available?

AND DID YOU REALIZE that meats, vegetables, fruits, ordinary cereals and dairy products provide too little or no Vitamin D — that sunlight is rarely adequate, never dependable?

PROPER SHAPE and strength of growing children's bones and teeth — your own heart action, blood clotting, nerve function and muscle tone — in each case, calcium, made more available by VITAMIN D, plays a very important role.

EASIEST WAY to get Vitamin D regularly is to place on your shopping list the dependable Vitamin D products illustrated here. They cost little or no more than foods lacking this necessary vitamin. Each is a Foundation-licensed product — is tested regularly for Vitamin D.
