Four New Supervisors Are Elected Tuesday

When the county board convenes on April 21, four new supervisors will take their places. They are Otto Thiessenhusen, First ward, Appleton; Marcus Baumgartner, Fifth ward, Appleton; Mike Jacobs, Fourth ward, Appleton; and Wesley Sherman, First ward, Seymour. L. F. Bushey, candidate for re-election from the First ward polled 474 votes against 654 cast for Thiessenhusen. Pat Ryan, candidate for re-election from the Second ward, was unopposed. The closest race in the contest for supervisor was that between Thomas H. Ryan, Third ward, Appleton, and George Hesser. Ryan defeated his opponent by a single vote. Two new candidates were in the field from the Fourth ward due to the withdrawal of John Tracy, who had represented the Fourth ward for over thirty years. Michael Jacobs received 436 votes while his opponent, John Dick, received 256. Peter Rademacher, incumbent supervisor from the Fifth ward, was defeated for re-election by Marcus Baumgartner. Fred Sievert, Sixth ward, won in his race for re-election over Gust Kranzusch, who became a candidate after his name had been written in on a number of ballots in the primary.

There will be only one change in the personnel of supervisors from towns, villages and cities in the county outside of Appleton though competition was close. F. W. Huth, who had served as supervisor for a number of years, declined to enter the race, which was concluded Tuesday when Wesley Sherman defeated E. J. Longrie.

Committee in Favor of Four Additions to Courthouse

Four one-story additions to the present courthouse will be the recommendation of the special committee, appointed at the February session of the county board, to consider plans for building additions to the present structure to provide adequate room for county offices. The recommendation is for the construction of an "L" addition to the southeast and southwest corners of the building and sections to fill out the corners on the northeast and northwest parts of the building, except that at the northwest corner, now occupied by the county treasurer, an eight-foot extension is to be built. The only section that would have a basement, according to the tentative plan, is that at the northeast corner. A new basement entrance would have to be built here, also. The approximate cost of the additions, according to an architect's estimate, is $42,000. The proposition is to be presented to the county board when it meets April 21. C. J. Burdick is chairman of the committee.

Fire Department Poorly Equipped and Not Large Enough, Survey Shows

Appleton's fire department is poorly equipped and undermanned for a city of this size and the box alarm system here is obsolete and little used, according to the report of the National Board of Fire Underwriters on the city of Appleton. The investigation of conditions here was made last October with the co-operation of city officials and the report of the board has just been published. The printed survey states that while the local department in its present condition maintains an excellent system of discipline and keeps its equipment in very fine condition, still the department is not large enough either in man-power or equipment to furnish adequate protection for a city of 25,000 people.

The report goes on to say that the number of ladder and engine companies in service here is only half of what it should be. The city is criticized for centralizing the entire department in one fire station, as the report points out there are important manufacturing and other districts as far as a mile and three-quarters from the center of town. Appleton used to have three fire stations, but the two sub-stations were abandoned and all equipment centralized at headquarters about ten years ago, after a series of test runs had been made to all parts of the city to determine how long it would take to reach the farthest outlying districts. Since that time many more miles of streets have been paved and otherwise improved so the facilities for quick fire runs are even better now than when the centralized plan was adopted.

The report on this point says in part, "Concentration of all companies in a single station has resulted in poor distribution, as important manufacturing and other districts are up to 1 3/4 miles distant. There is no aerial ladder and the number of ladder and engine companies is only one-half of that needed." The existing companies are somewhat undermanned. Apparatus is in good condition, including the reserve pumper and hose wagon. Chemical service is good. The amount and variety of minor equipment is mainly adequate, other than salvage appliances. The response to alarms is well arranged but there are frequent occasions when all companies are out, due to the lack of sufficient companies."

In discussing the local box alarm situation the report states that the time devoted to maintenance by the city electrician is insufficient for proper care of the fire alarm system and that an assistant electrician is needed to relieve him of some of this work. It is also pointed out that serious features of unreliability are introduced through the use of aerial circuits, some parts of which are in dangerous locations, due to close proximity of high voltage power lines. Headquarters equipment and most of the boxes are of obsolete type, it is said. In 1929 the department responded to 239 alarms and only 16 of these came from the box system. Of these sixteen six were false.

The water supply was reported as being adequate for the business section of the city, but unreliable for industrial districts along the river and for the northeastern section of the city. Spacing of hydrants in the principal business section is good, but too wide in many other sections of the city.

Department records show that a large percentage of fires are extinguished without the use of hose streams. Little salvage work is attempted, other than to make temporary repairs to damaged roofs. A fire inspector is detailed permanently to building inspection work. During 1929, 192 defects were noted and 171 of these were corrected. Chief causes of fires for that year were sparks from chimneys on wooden shingle roofs, electricity, oil burners, insufficiently protected pipes, furnaces and stoves, and poorly constructed or defective chimneys.

A low percentage of fire proof and fire resistive construction is reported for Appleton's principal business district, which condition makes serious group fires probable, the report says. At each end of College avenue the general hazard is increased by a large proportion of frame construction. In this business district 176 buildings are listed, the majority of which are of ordinary construction, and one or two stories in height. Of the thirteen buildings higher than three stories there are two 7 and one 6 story structures of fire-proof construction, one 6 story and four 4 story structures of ordinary construction and one 4 story frame building. A moderate number have unpierced fire walls, but almost all fire walls are too thin and parapets are usually low, the report says. Most of the 2 story buildings have stairways leading directly to the street, seventy-two have unprotected fire openings and only two have properly protected stairways. Three buildings are equipped with automatic sprinklers throughout, two others have the principal hazard protected by sprinklers, and a few have standpipes with hose attached. Fire escapes, where provided, are usually of the unsatisfactory stair or ladder type.

Manufacturing districts in various sections of the city are groups of large 2 to 4 story buildings of frame and ordinary construction. In these groups horizontal and vertical openings are generally unprotected or only partially

Toy Company Will Move to Oshkosh Next Week

The Toy Corporation of America will move its business to Oshkosh the first part of next week and will be located there in the Buckstaff Company factory building, according to information received this morning. The company, which has been located in the Graef Manufacturing Company building at the foot of Drew St., received offers of accommodations from both Oshkosh and Janesville, it was said.

Only about twenty people have been employed by the company recently, but the organization has employed more than fifty wood workers at certain times.

The Toy Corporation of America is an outgrowth of the Toy Company of America organized here some years ago by Appleton people. Almost all the stockholders at the beginning were local men and women. This company at first manufactured a big variety of wooden toys.

The business has been reorganized twice and the name changed. All the stock is now controlled by New York interests. The company now specializes in the manufacture of tables, chairs and dresser sets. The work of moving to the Oshkosh location already has been started.

Band Is Preparing for the State Tournament

Appleton High school band will compete with fifty or more high school bands of Wisconsin at the state band tournament which will be held at Menasha May 15 and 16. Difficult numbers have been chosen by the local band, according to Prof. E. C. Moore, director. Appleton high school band will enter class A and B events. The local band did not enter the state tournament last year, but two years ago won first place in class A at Stevens Point, and three years ago it won first place in class C at Waupun. The band this year will enter Class A as a group, but the individual members will enter both class A and B contests. "The Pilgrim" by Lake and "Morning, Noon and Night" overture by Suppe are required pieces in the contest. "Euryanthe Overture" is the selective number to be presented by the local musicians.

There will be a number of solos, a woodwind quintette, woodwind sextette, and ensembles with brass instruments.

Public Schools of the city will participate in the Memorial Day activities in this city, if a plan suggested is approved by the committee in charge of the day's program. Proposed plans provide for the high school band to march and the chorus to sing at the chapel service. Programs will be held in the schools on Friday preceding Memorial Day.

Local Service Club Will Undertake Big Program for Under-Privileged Children

Members of Appleton Kiwanis club are completing plans for a project in under-privileged child work in Appleton which, when well organized and in smooth working order, will mean a great deal for the welfare of school children in this community, who are handicapped by physical, mental, or social disadvantages. The entire membership of the club has been divided into twenty committees each of which will make a thorough survey of a school in the city to determine what children are in need of attention to place them on an equal footing with the normal school child and thus give them a fair opportunity for success in their school work and probably resultant success later in life.

Alex Benz, chairman of the local club's under-privileged child committee, is chairman of this project and already has named the twenty sub-committees, each of which will have charge of a school. Mr. Benz was a leader in this kind of work in the Fond du Lac Kiwanis club for several years. He says Kiwanians in that city have accomplished a splendid project in community service by keeping in constant touch with teachers and children in all schools of the city. Members of the club will find out from the principals and teachers in all the schools what boys or girls are suffering from lack of proper food, clothing, from some physical handicap such as poor hearing, eyesight or teeth or from some social or mental ailment and will then make an effort to have these ills corrected.

Mr. Benz stated that many boys and girls are found to be backward in their school work because they are suffering from some physical ailment. Poor eyesight is one thing responsible for frequent headaches, inability to read books or blackboards readily, continual strain and consequent discouragement in trying to keep up with the class. Under-nourished children also have a difficult time doing their work successfully because good general health is one of the first things to be considered in good school work. Children poorly clothed are very susceptible to colds which result in many absences and getting behind in the school work.

In some cases the parents do not know the true physical condition of their children, but in many cases they know there is something wrong, but probably are too poor to give the child the proper medical care. It is such cases that the Kiwanians plan to take in hand and see that these unfortunate youngsters have the same chance for success as the normal healthy child. These are the cases of physical ailments.

Then there are boys and girls who are a bit wayward in their habits and show tendencies of becoming moral delinquents as they grow older. For these youngsters also the Kiwanians are sponsoring this school survey project. Most of them, with a small amount of guidance on the part of some older person who interests himself in their welfare, will turn out to be the right kind of young people and be a credit to their school and their families.

Mr. Benz tells of how Fond du Lac Kiwanians on numerous occasions gave hospital treatment to boys and girls whose parents could not afford to pay this expense. A close watch was kept in all the schools and whenever some needy child had to have hospital treatment the Kiwanians did everything they could to see that such treatment was forthcoming. Whatever physical ailment or need was found the parents of the child were notified and in most cases co-operated with the service club members to the best of their ability. Mr. Benz says that one room in the Fond du Lac hospital is known as the Kiwanis room because it is used for the most part by children whom the club is helping. The Appleton club members hope to establish such a room here.

In relating experiences in his former club at Fond du Lac, Mr. Benz says that this club took care of from six to eight cases a month, or about sixty cases a year on the average. In addition to this transportation to and from school was arranged for crippled and sickly children who had to come a considerable distance. "Every Kiwanian tried to find some boy he could help," said Mr. Benz. Many of them brought these boys to the club meetings. The greatest satisfaction the club members got out of this work was to hear the reports of the progress made by under-privileged children who had been helped. Some of these became leaders in their classes—others completely regained their health. Still others, inclined to be somewhat wild and unruly, got a new outlook on life and became more conscientious about their work when they were properly guided. The work offers wonderful opportunities for a service club in any community. A start is to be made here soon but it will take some time to get the project operating smoothly and the benefits and results may not begin to appear until another year or two has gone by, Mr. Benz said.

Chairmen of each of the twenty committees will confer with principals of the schools about the children in such schools. In some schools there may not be any boys and girls who need help of this kind, but in others there may be numerous cases. The chairman of each of the twenty sub-committees will confer with the principal or officer of the school which his committee is assigned to. Following are the sub-committees and the schools each is taking care of. The first name given on each sub-committee is the chairman of that group.

There were fewer new automobiles registered in Appleton in March, 1931 than there were in March of 1930, a report from Theodore Damann, secretary of state, reveals. Ninety-two new automobiles were registered in Appleton last month compared to 133 in March a year ago. During the first three months of the current year, only 173 new cars were registered. In the first quarter of 1930 there were 228. The registration for Outagamie county shows 139 new cars in March against 243 a year ago. For the first quarter of 1930 a total of 421 new cars was registered while the first quarter of the present year is credited with 280 cars.

A JOLT TO OUR FIRE SECURITY

After reading over the research report of the National Board of Fire Underwriters covering matters of fire hazard and fire protection in Appleton as referred to elsewhere in this issue, the situation sounds like the old adage, slightly varied, "Pride goeth before a bad fire."

It has been Appleton's pride to refer to its fire department as one of the best equipped both in apparatus and personnel. The low record of fire losses over a long period of years has made us feel secure against conflagrations; in fact, fire insurance rates have been reduced to a minimum because of the advantages the city has enjoyed.

Now comes the rude awakening in the following summary taken from the report: "Water supply adequate but somewhat unreliable. Adequate quantities available in principal mercantile district; good to poor elsewhere. Fire department under-equipped, seriously undermanned, and companies not well distributed, but with substantial outside aid available. Fire alarm system inadequate and unreliable."

Under the heading "Conflagration Hazard," the report further states: "Severe group fires are probable in the principal mercantile district . . . The probability of a general conflagration is moderately severe. In manufacturing districts, serious group fires which might easily spread are probable."

Serious consideration will be given to the defects pointed out by the investigators, of course, but what they say is no cause for hysteria. These men would not have done their full duty if they did not go to extremes and propose the last word in fire department, personnel and protection. They would not want a future condition to arise here for which they could be held responsible by not pointing out the facts in their investigation. The plausible method of dealing with the report therefore is to analyze its recommendations and adopt from it such changes as will remove any malignant dangers.

Appleton's location precludes the necessity of maintaining a battery of equipment so extensive as to handle conflagrations. Our apparatus can cope with fires of large proportions but that is as far as we need to go. The city has a reciprocal arrangement with Fox river valley cities such that six fire companies can be summoned here from outside and be in action within ten to fifteen minutes. Half a dozen others are available within thirty to forty minutes. They are all under agreement to respond on call without permission from city officials. Appleton likewise serves these cities on call. The hose threads of all of these cities have been standardized so connections can be made by any apparatus at any hydrant anywhere. Such a situation should be considered before enlarging the Appleton department to a point where it could function entirely without aid. Thousands of dollars are saved the taxpayers by a mutual arrangement of this kind. The speed and efficiency of modern fire fighting also are such that the possibility of conflagrations is remote and Appleton can take its chances on approximately the present setup without being foolhardy.

If the local department is seriously undermanned, that situation deserves thorough study. Our centralized system has made more men available at every alarm than the outlying station plan and we likewise have a rapid mobilization system by which to place on duty quickly all men on the off shift of the two platoon system. These methods have ingeniously overcome the need of a larger number of men on the payroll but nevertheless the city never wants to be caught short because the combined forces are not enough in a dire emergency.

With this pessimistic picture of the fire situation there comes a revival of the demand for abandonment of the one-station system. The board appeals for a fire company at the north end of the city, one at the west end, and eventually one on the south side. Changes in water mains, purchase of new alarm equipment, addition of hydrants, addition of fire alarm locations, and employment of an assistant inspector of alarms also are recommended. Expansion of the city of course demands that the fire department keep pace but the adoption of all of these improvements will put a decided crimp in the efforts of the city council to economize. It will take a lot of study to determine how many of these changes are really justified and it will be necessary to face the issue squarely if the need is there, even though it means increased expenditures.

There should be no belittling of the report. Several years ago it was necessary to revamp and augment the fire equipment because it proved inadequate in a fire that was a real test. We must not wait until emergencies are here, but must prepare to meet them if they ever do arise. The underwriters' report is valuable in stirring us out of a feeling of security. It clothes us with facts expertly arrived at so we can proceed intelligently with any strengthening of our facilities for coping with the ravages of fire destruction.

MAKE THE AIRPORT A MUNICIPAL PROPERTY

Some disposition probably will be made shortly of the George A. Whiting airport because of the liquidation of the North American Airways Co.

While aviation as a commercial venture outside of the metropolitan cities does not seem to prove practicable, yet it is necessary for each community to have an airport for the benefit of air mail, commercial air routes and private aircraft owners. It would prove a disadvantage to Appleton were this property sold for other uses than an airport.

No doubt Appleton, Menasha and Neenah could join in the purchase of the airport, especially at a time when it can probably be had at a low figure. The three cities could maintain the grounds without a great deal of cost, using men and equipment they now possess. The buildings could be rented out to private interests on a concession basis for the operation of a repair, supply and rental service for planes.

Location of the airport on the Menasha highway halfway between Appleton and the Twin Cities makes its use logical jointly by the three cities, thus reducing to a minimum the expense to each. It would be well for each city to consider the possibilities of the project, and then hold a joint conference to devise ways of obtaining the property.

THE FIFTH WARD EXEMPLIFIES DEMOCRACY

One organization in Appleton that has been cussed and discussed during the last year is the Fifth Ward Voters club. It was organized by citizens who felt there should be closer scrutiny of city affairs, and a better understanding between officials and the rank and file.

Meetings have been held frequently to discuss city issues, and candidates for office as well as incumbent officials have been invited to express their views and answer questions. A frank and sometimes spirited discussion has clarified issues and brought better understanding.

In addition, the club has accomplished something for the benefit of the people. An instance is the protest against lack of transfer privileges on city motorbus lines. The club requested a public hearing conducted by the state railroad commission, aired the matter from all sides, and obtained an agreement between competing companies for the transfer privileges desired.

These Fifth ward voters are not meddlers or trouble makers. They are good citizens. If every citizen of Appleton would take as keen an interest in public affairs as this group, officials would find it much easier to serve the people, because they are backed by a united sentiment of their constituents and have no doubt as to where the public stands.

NEWS REVIEW

A Digest of Events and Trends for Busy People

More water was used by residents of Appleton during March of this year than in the corresponding month a year ago. The report of A. J. Hall, superintendent of the city pumping station and filtration plant shows that 55,820,000 gallons were used during March, an increase of 3,470,000 gallons over a year ago. About 1,872,000 gallons were used last month for washing filters against 1,610,000 gallons used for that purpose in March, 1930. Of the entire amount of water pumped during the month, 53,340,000 gallons were pumped by the Diesel engine and 1,980,000 gallons were pumped by auxiliary units.

I. Baheall, Inc., dealers in iron and metals, have filed articles of incorporation with Theodore Damann, secretary of state. One thousand shares of stock quoted at $100 par value have been issued. Incorporators are I. Baheall, Joseph Bailin, Walter Rosenzweig, and Edward Baheall.

First ward residents interested in the improvement of Bellaire park, have formed an organization to be known as the Bellaire Park Improvement association. R. S. Powell is temporary chairman and V. J. Whelan temporary secretary. A permanent organization is to be formed tonight. The purpose of the organization is the development of the park, extension of the storm sewer which now drains into the park, ultimate removal of tracks of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad company, used only for transfer work, and beautification of the river bank, particularly at the end of the park. Plans of the organization will be worked out according to suggestions of Leonard C. Smith, city planner, who several years ago studied possibilities for beautifying the city.

Kenneth McCoy, route 2, Appleton, was arrested by Officer Duval Wednesday morning for loitering about the city. The young man was picked up about 2 o'clock in the morning and brought in to municipal court on Wednesday. Judge Theodore Berg fined him $1 and costs, but suspended sentence on condition that McCoy remain out of the city nights.

Five students of Appleton High school have been chosen to enter the William Heiss Oratorical contest, which will be held at the high school auditorium on the evening of April 13. The contest is an annual event, held as near as possible to March 23, the date of William Heiss' birthday. Heiss was a member of the class of 1916, which sponsors the contest. The winner will be awarded a silver loving cup and will represent Appleton in the Fox river valley contest in Green Bay. The boys chosen and their selections are: Gordon Harriman, "Society and the Payroll;" Simon Sigman, "Banish Hate from Education;" Harold Hauert, "Misguided Youth;" Vernon Beckman, "Automatons of Man;" and Charles Widsteen, "Prisoner at the Bar."

The annual meeting of the directors of the Y. M. C. A. will be held on Monday evening, April 13, having been postponed from April 9. A nominating committee will be appointed to prepare a slate of candidates for vacancies on the board of directors.

Girl members of the Appleton High school graduation class have decided against elaborate graduation gowns and extravagance in personal adornment. The senior girls recently held a conference with Miss Mary Baker, dean of girls, and Herbert H. Helble, principal, to discuss the dress problem.

J. P. Frank will address the monthly meeting of the Wisconsin and upper Michigan fruit jobbers at the Conway hotel Saturday evening. Fifty fruit men are expected to attend the meeting. Representatives of railroads with which the jobbers do business have also been invited.

A meeting of the committee, which was appointed at the last session of the county board to consider the advisability of building an addition to the old court house, met at the court house Thursday afternoon. C. J. Burdick of Black Creek is chairman of the committee, which also includes Louis F. Nichols, Peter Rademacher, Sylvester Esler, and Patrick M. Garvey. The committee will report to the next session of the board, which convenes April 21.

H. M. Wriston, of Lawrence college, and H. H. Helble of the Appleton high school, will address the City Superintendents' association and the Wisconsin School Board association which will meet jointly in Madison today and Saturday. B. J. Rohan, superintendent of public schools, Mrs. S. C. Shannon, and William H. Kreiss, members of the school board, will also attend the meeting.

Outagamie county residents are decidedly in favor of having automobile licenses issued by the state department, according to the vote against the proposed change cast in Tuesday's election. The proposal was rejected by a vote of 9,308 to 3,385.

Every ward in the city of Appleton cast a heavy majority against the change. A total of 4,050 votes against the change and 1,308 in favor of it were polled in the city of Appleton. Reports from the county indicated that majorities ranging from fifty per cent and higher spelled defeat of the transfer.

Outagamie county taxpayers who applied for an extension of tax paying time to June 1 will have to pay their taxes on or before April 27 if they wish to escape paying the twenty-five cents advertising fee. The state law requires that county treasurers must prepare and deliver for publication lists of properties on which taxes are delinquent. In order to give publishers ample opportunity to prepare the list it must be ready for them by April 27. A fee of twenty-five cents is charged against all property holders whose taxes are not paid by April 27 although the tax time has been extended without other fines or penalties to June 1.

Outagamie county's share of the state road aid to be paid under the new gas tax law is $317,916, according to an estimate made by Karl G. Kurtenacher, a member of the state highway commission. Thirty-five counties in the state will receive a larger amount, with Milwaukee county, to which $2,246,783 will probably be paid, leading the list. Florence county will receive the smallest portion with $63,025. During 1930 Outagamie county was to have received $289,052, though the sums actually received were in excess of the estimate.

A. D. Schweke, Reedsburg, paid a fine of $5 and costs in municipal court Wednesday for carrying more than three persons in his coupe, contrary to a city ordinance. The arrest was made by Officer Gus Hersekorn.

"Teachers' Tenure" will be the discussion subject at the monthly meeting of the Appleton high school faculty next Tuesday afternoon, April 14. Miss Blanche McCarthy will present the plans of the Wisconsin Education association, of which she is president, and will explain the status of legislation in tenure. Leland Delforge, Werner Witte, Miss Alice Peterson, Miss Margaret Abraham, and Miss Ethel Carter will have a part in the program.

Frank McCloud, arrested for absconding a board bill in Appleton, was turned over to Green Bay authorities on a warrant charging forgery. McCloud was arraigned in municipal court in Appleton, and his case postponed for a month. He furnished bail of $100, but was rearrested and turned over to Brown county officials.

Harvey Burmeister, town of Cicero, found guilty of lewd and lascivious conduct in municipal court last week, was on Wednesday given his option of paying a fine of $100 or spending six months in the county jail. He indicated he would pay the fine.

R. W. Pringle, formerly principal of the Appleton high school, and Mrs. Pringle were seriously injured in an automobile accident near Chicago recently. The Pringle automobile was blown from the highway during a blizzard, and turned over into a ditch, then rolled down a ten foot embankment. Both occupants of the car sustained broken bones and severe body bruises. Mr. Pringle is principal of a school in Normal, Ill.

Martin Jacquot, Hortonville, paid a fine of $50 and costs in municipal court Thursday after pleading guilty of trapping fish on the Wolf river. He was arrested by Louis Jeske, game warden.

Record Breaking Attendance At Meeting of F.O.E.

The largest attendance in the history of the Appleton Aerie of Eagles was present Wednesday night when a class of one hundred and twenty-six new members was initiated into the organization. Three hundred Eagles attended. Seventy new members have been pledged and are to be initiated later. Officers of the local aerie opened the meeting but vacated their chairs during initiation, which was conducted by the degree team from the Oshkosh aerie. Knowing Our Children Better

By

Edith D. Dixon

Don't Force Child To Eat

"How far can I go in not coaxing a child to eat?" a mother asks. "I am sure that my child of five years would go indefinitely without food as she is never hungry."

How can this mother "be sure" that the child would go indefinitely without food since she has never tried her out? We are afraid to let a child get really hungry because a lack of appetite has always been associated in our minds with physical disorder of some kind. If there is nothing the matter, the child will, if left alone, eat in time. If the lack of appetite is a symptom of cold or other illness, the child is better off without food or certainly with a reduced diet.

The two-year-old daughter of a child specialist went on a food strike. She ate practically nothing for four days. The mother worried and, as the father expressed it, "would have had an eating problem on her hands if I had not been a doctor." When her husband insisted that she ignore the child and show no anxiety before her, the mother obeyed and the child came out of it without any bad results as far as her eating habits were concerned.

We can't all have a doctor to stand at our elbow and keep up our courage. But after all many of us go on food strikes occasionally and are no worse for giving our stomachs a rest.

Children should never be coaxed or teased to eat. This only makes them the center of attention and encourages them to continue refusals. If a child is not hungry, the cause of lack of appetite should be discovered by means of a physical examination. With physical causes removed, he should then be left alone to eat what is put before him. If after 30 minutes he has not cleared his plate, it should be removed and no more food given until the next meal. This method consistently followed is more than likely to bring satisfactory results.

A doctor's experiment carried on with a group of children who from babyhood had not been forced to eat, showed that 170 of the 199 cases ate well, and that none of the children with poor appetites were underweight except those suffering from some chronic disease.

Joan Crawford Is Star of Exciting Talkie

"Dance Fools, Dance," which will open at the Midnight show Saturday night, perview of the Monday feature, at the Fox theatre, is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest talking picture starring Joan Crawford.

This is the most glamorous of Miss Crawford's recent roles, reflecting both the glitter of "Our Blushing Brides" and the tragic drama of "Paid," her last two screen offerings.

The story, with a Chicago locale, principally concerns the underworld and newspaper life of the metropolis. It is an original by Aurania Rouverol with screen continuity by Richard Schayer.

Harry Beaumont, who brought Miss Crawford to stardom in "Our Dancing Daughters," and recently added to this triumph with "Our Blushing Brides," again directed.

Lester Vail, a newcomer to the screen who recently made his debut in "Beau Ideal," is Miss Crawford's leading man in her new picture, and the supporting cast includes such film favorites as Cliff Edwards, William Bakewell, William Holden, Clark Gable, Earl Foxe, Purnell B. Pratt, Hale Hamilton, Natalie Moorhead, Joan Marsh and Russell Hopton.

Perhaps outstanding in the spectacular episodes is a nocturnal lingerie swimming party staged during a gay yachting cruise in the opening scenes.

JOAN CRAWFORD and CLARK GABLE in "DANCE FOOLS DANCE"

In this, scores of dazzling damsels strip to unmentionables and dive overboard with their boy friends. Another glittering scene is the night club dance number intriguingly executed by Miss Crawford, costumed in a clinging silver creation.

The story, despite lavish touches, is an intensely dramatic one, the plot motivated by murder on a wholesale scale. It is a daring theme from the society angle and a still more daring one from the viewpoint of exposing crime and racketeering. There is a wealth of newspaper atmosphere, realistically supplied.

Miss Crawford plays the part of a society girl, reduced to poverty, who turns to newspaper work for a livelihood. In her hunt for the gangster killers of another reporter, she discovers her own brother to have been involved in the brutal crime. The climax comes when she decides to give her brother up.

The settings are splendidly done and add vastly to the realism that strikes so predominant a note. The costumes by Gilbert Adrian strike new heights in splendor, Miss Crawford having fourteen different changes in the picture.

INSTALLMENT VI

There was a lunatic week preceding their departure from Wichita. Felice fought their going to the last, and finally took to her bed with threats of impending dissolution which failed to achieve the desired effect owing to the preoccupation of the persons supposed to be stricken by her plight. From time to time, intrigued by the thumpings, scurrings, shouts, laughter, quarrels, and general upheaval attendant on the Cravats' departure, Felice rose from her bed and trailed wanly about the house, looking, in her white dimity wrapper, like a bilious and distracted ghost. She issued orders. "Take this. Don't take that. It can't be that you're leaving those behind! Your own Aunt Sarah Monerief du Tisne embroidered every inch of them with her own—"

"But, mamma, don't you understand? Yancey says there's very little society, and it's all quite rough and unsettled—wild, almost."

"That needn't prevent you from remembering you're a lady, I hope. Unless you are planning to be one of those hags in a sunbonnet and no teeth that Yancey seems to have taken such a fancy to."

So Sabra Cravat took along to the frontier wilderness such oddments and elegancies as her training, lack of experience, and southern family traditions dictated. There were two wagons, canvas covered and lumbering. Dishes, trunks, bedding, boxes were snugly stowed away in the capacious belly of one; the printing outfit, securely roped and lashed, went in the other.

There was, to the Wichita eye, nothing unusual in the sight of these huge covered freighters that would soon go lumbering off toward the horizon. Their like had worn many a track in the Kansas prairie. Yet in this small expedition faring forth there was something that held the poignancy of the tragic and the ridiculous. The man, huge, bizarre, impractical; the woman, tight lipped, terribly determined, her eyes staring with the fixed, unseeing gaze of one who knows that to blink but once is to be awash with tears; the child, out of hand with excitement and impatience to be gone. From the day of Yancey's recital of the Run, black Isaiah, small descendant of the Venables' black servants, had begged to be taken along. Denied this, he had sulked for a week and now was nowhere to be found.

The wagons, packed, stood waiting before the Venable house. Perhaps never in the history of the settling of the West did a woman go a-pioneering in such a costume. Sabra had driven horses all her life; so now she stepped agilely from ground to hub, from hub to wheel top, perched herself on the high wagon seat and gathered up the reins with deftness and outward composure. Her eyes were enormous, her pale face paler. Yancey had swung Cim up to the calico-cushioned seat beside Sabra. His short legs, in their copper-toed boots, stuck straight out in front of him. His dark eyes were huge with excitement. "Why don't we go?" he demanded, over and over, in something like a scream. He shouted to the horses as he had heard teamsters do. "Giddap in 'here; Gee-op! G'larnng!" His grandmother and grandfather, gazing up with sudden agony in their faces at sight of this little expedition actually faring forth so absurdly into the unknown had ceased to exist for Cim. As Sabra drove one wagon and Yancey the other, the boy pivoted between them through the long drive, spending the morning in the seat beside his mother, the afternoon beside his father, with intervals of napping curled up on the bedding at the back of the wagon.

Now, with a lurch and a rattle and a great clatter of hoofs the two wagons were off. They had made an early start. By ten the boy's eyes were heavy with sleep. Sabra coaxed him to curl up on the wagon seat, his head in her lap. She held the reins in one hand; one arm was about the child. It was hot and still and drowsy. Noon came with surprising swiftness. They had brought along a precious keg of water and a food supply sufficient, they thought, to last through most of the trip—salt pork, mince and apple pies, bread, doughnuts—but their appetites were enormous. At midday they stopped and ate in the shade. Sabra prepared the meal while Yancey tended the horses. Cim, wide awake now and refreshed, ate largely with them of the fried salt pork and potatoes, the hard-boiled eggs, the mince pie. It was all very gay and comfortable and relaxed. Short as the morning had been, the afternoon stretched out, somehow, endless. Sabra began to be horribly tired, cramped. The boy whimpered. It was mid-afternoon and hot; it was late afternoon; then the brilliant western sunset began to paint the sky. Yancey, in the wagon ahead, drew up, gazed about, got out, tied his team to one of a clump of cottonwoods.

"We'll camp here," he called to Sabra and came toward her wagon, prepared to lift her down, and the boy. She was stiff, utterly weary. She stared down at him, dully, then around the landscape.

"Camp?"

"Yes. For the night. Come, Cim." He lifted the boy down with a great swoop.

"You mean for the night? Sleep here?"

He was quite matter-of-fact. "Yes. It's a fine place. Water and trees. I'll have a fire before you can say Jack Robinson. Where'd you think you were going to sleep? Back home?"

Somehow she had not thought. She had not believed it. To sleep out of doors like this, in the open, with only a wagon top as roof! All her neat conventional life she had slept in a four-poster bed with a dotted Swiss canopy and net curtains and linen sheets that smelled sweetly of the sun and the air.

Yancey began to make camp. Already the duties of this new manner of living had become familiar. There was wood to gather, a fire to start, water to be boiled. Cim, very wide awake now, trotted after his father, after his mother. Meat began to sizzle appetizingly in the pan. The exquisite scent of coffee revived them with its promise of stimulation.

"That roll of carpet," called Sabra, busy at the fire to Yancey at the wagon. "Under the seat. I want Cim to sit on it . . . ground may be damp. . . ."

A sudden shout from Yancey. A squeal of terror from the bundle of carpeting in his arms—a bundle that suddenly was alive and wriggling. Yancey dropped it with an oath. The bundle lay on the ground a moment, heaving then it began to unroll itself while the three regarded it with starting eyes. A black paw a woolly head, a face all open mouth and white of eyes. Black Isaiah. He had found a way to come with them to the Indian territory.

By noon the next day they were wondering how they had got on at all without him. He gathered wood. He started fires. He tended Cim like a nurse, playing with him, sang to him, helped put him to bed, slept anywhere, like a little dog.

Yancey pointed out the definiteness with which the land changed when they left Kansas and came into the Oklahoma country. "Oklahoma," he explained to Cim. "That's Chotaw. Okla—people. Humma—red. Red people. That's what they called it when the Indians came here to live."

Suddenly the land, too, had become red: red clay as far as the eye could see. When the trail led through a cleft in a hill the blood red of the clay on either side was like a gaping wound. Sabra shrank from it. Its glare seared the eyeballs.

It was a hard trip for the child. He was by turns unruly and listless. He could not run about, except when they stopped to make camp. Sabra, curiously enough, had not the gift of amusing him as Yancey had, or even Isaiah. Isaiah told him tales that were negro folklore, handed down by word of mouth through the years.

Often the days were gay enough. They fell into the routine, adjusting themselves to the discomfort. Sabra got out the sunbonnet which one of the less formidable Venables had jokingly given her at parting, and this she wore to shield her eyes from the pitiless glare of sky and plain. The sight of her in that prairie wilderness engaged in the domestic task of beating up a bowl of biscuit dough struck no one as being incongruous. The bread supply was early exhausted. She baked in a little portable tin oven that Yancey had fitted out for her.

As for Yancey himself, Sabra had never known him so happy. He was tireless, charming, varied. She was fascinated by his tales of hidden mines, of Spanish doubloons, of iron chests plowed up by some gaunt homesteader's hand plow hitched to a stumbling mule.

What Shall We Have For Dinner Today?

ICE BOX COOKIES

Placing dough in the ice box, or in the cold, is an old process for making cookies, biscuits and certain kinds of cake more tender. In other words, cooling ripens the dough. And so the finest bakers, both abroad and in America, use this old-fashioned method for producing delicious results.

You have done it, too, perhaps. It went something like this. It was your turn to have your club. An evening or two before the time, you went out into the kitchen and mixed a quantity of delicious batter for ice box cookies—"everybody likes them." The batter smelled so good you knew they were going to be "scrumptious," and you shaped the rolls of dough very carefully and firmly, and put them away to chill until next day.

When you were ready for baking next morning, you found your neat rolls had disappeared and you had in their stead more or less flattened and shapeless masses of dough which you tried to re-shape as you cut. By using the Dainty Dorothy Cookie Moulds offered you elsewhere in this issue, you not only get daintily shaped cookies, but you eliminate the tedious process of rolling and re-rolling dough and cutting each separate cookie with a cutter to get the shapes you want.

When using these handy moulds, all you have to do is to mix the dough, flour each mould well, pack the dough in, lock the mould with the three steel clips provided, and place in the ice box. To remove the dough, simply take off the clips and spread the mould a little, which will enable you to slide the dough out, slicing the cookies to any desired thickness. Brush with egg white and they are ready for the oven, unless you wish to decorate them before baking.

Add these recipes to your collection:

Butter Cookies

- 1 cup butter or substitute
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 egg yolks
- 3 cups flour
- 1 tsp. flavoring

Cream butter, add sugar, then yolks of eggs; mix well; add flavoring and flour. Pack in moulds, chill until hardened, slice to desired thickness and bake in oven at 350 to 400 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes.

Bohemian Butter Cookies

- Yolks of 2 hard boiled eggs
- 1 cup butter or substitute
- ¾ cup sugar
- Yolks of 2 raw eggs
- Rind of 1 lemon
- Juice of ½ lemon
- ¾ cups flour

Put hard-boiled yolks through ricer or sieve, cream with shortening, add sugar, cream again, then stir in uncooked yolks, flavoring and sifted flour. Pack and chill until hardened, slice to desired thickness and bake as above.

Frozen Cheese Cookies

- ½ lb. cottage, or cream cheese
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 2 cups flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg yolk

Cream butter and cheese, add egg yolk and then sugar, mix in flour and flavoring. Pack in mould. When sliced put a tiny dab of jelly in the center of each cookie.

Orange Wafers

- 1 cup shortening
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- Grated rind of 1 orange
- 3 tbsp. orange juice

Enough flour to stiffen for packing.

Vanilla, chocolate, or lemon flavor may be substituted for orange. After removing from moulds slice very thin and bake at 380 degrees for 10 or 15 minutes.

Dough in these recipes will keep indefinitely in a cool place. One teaspoon vinegar added to any dough where shortening is used, makes cookies more tender. Unsalted butter makes a sweeter cookie.

Cookie dough may be colored by dividing into several parts and using vegetable coloring. Two or more colors may be patted together in the moulds to get almost any desired effect.

For decorating angelica, candied cherries, blanched almonds, chocolate, colored candies, colored frosting, and almost anything your ingenuity suggests, may be used.

Oatmeal cookies, spice cookies, and the children's favorite ginger cookies may be shaped in these moulds.

You can serve butter in fancy shapes by packing it in the mould. When it hardens, slide it out and slice for the table. Decorated with a tiny sprig of parsley it looks very nice. Or it may even be colored to harmonize with your color scheme.

Keep ice box cookies in a stone jar. Some cooks place a slice of fresh bread in the jar occasionally to supply moisture; or a cloth wrung out of hot water is placed under the cover for a few hours. A small orange placed in the jar for a few days gives an unusual flavor.

Appleton housewives who have used the new set of moulds are very enthusiastic about them and the way they simplify and hasten the making of ice box cookies in neat, fancy shapes.

Ask for Children's Wading Pool in North Side Park

Children living in the north end of the city will be provided with a wading pool in Erb park if a resolution to be presented to the park board by the civic council is favorably acted upon. The playgrounds committee, of which T. E. Orbison is chairman, met at the city hall Thursday afternoon and adopted a resolution providing for a petition to the civic council to request the park board to establish a pool in the northern part of the city. It was the opinion of the committee that the installation of a pool in Erb park would afford many small youngsters in the northern section of the city an opportunity to enjoy this activity. Owing to the distance from their homes of the wading pool in Pierce Park and the municipal swimming pool, younger children are unable to enjoy these play facilities.

The approval of the wading pool at Erb park is the first step in a program that ultimately would provide wading pools at other points in the city.

The budget for the year's activities was adopted, $3000 of which will be used for playground activities and $1,000 for swimming pools. Six playgrounds are to be operated the same as last year, except that the Fifth ward playground will be transferred from the grade school grounds to the Wilson Junior high school grounds. Coach A. C. Denny, who has charge of the playground work, will have two assistants at each of the six playgrounds one lady and one man. He already has applications from a large number of trained workers, and has expressed his intention to give preference to local people who have had experience in the work. The playgrounds will be opened about a week after the close of school in June, and will be maintained for a period of ten weeks.

Holmes to Be Chief Speaker on Memorial Day Program

Dr. J. A. Holmes, pastor of the First Methodist church, will be the speaker at the Memorial day program at Lawrence Memorial chapel on May 30, according to arrangements made by the program committee at a meeting Wednesday.

This year's gathering at the chapel will be limited to one hour, according to plans of the committee, because of the time required for the parade and exercises at Riverside cemetery.

Music at the chapel exercises will be furnished by a chorus of school children under the direction of Dr. Earl L. Baker. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Lyle Douglas Utts, rector of All Saints church. Organ accompaniment will be used for the singing by the audience.

Members of the program committee are Erik L. Madisen, chairman, R. G. Sykes, C. B. Peterman, and Ben J. Rohan.

The Chicago Northwestern railroad company planned to commence operation of its Minneapolis to Chicago bus today. Officials and employes of the company met at the Conway hotel Tuesday night to discuss the matter. Schedules and routes are to be announced within a few days.

The group also held a round table discussion on the new freight service plans. Announcement was made that freight cars will be spotted on all cities along the line at 7 o'clock or earlier in the morning and will arrive here as late as 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

protected. Private fire protection is found in almost all the large plants and in one or two cases local manufacturing companies have their own specially trained fire brigades or companies.

Combustible roofing forms a greater part of the roofs in the residence sections of the community and also was noted in a few places in the business district.

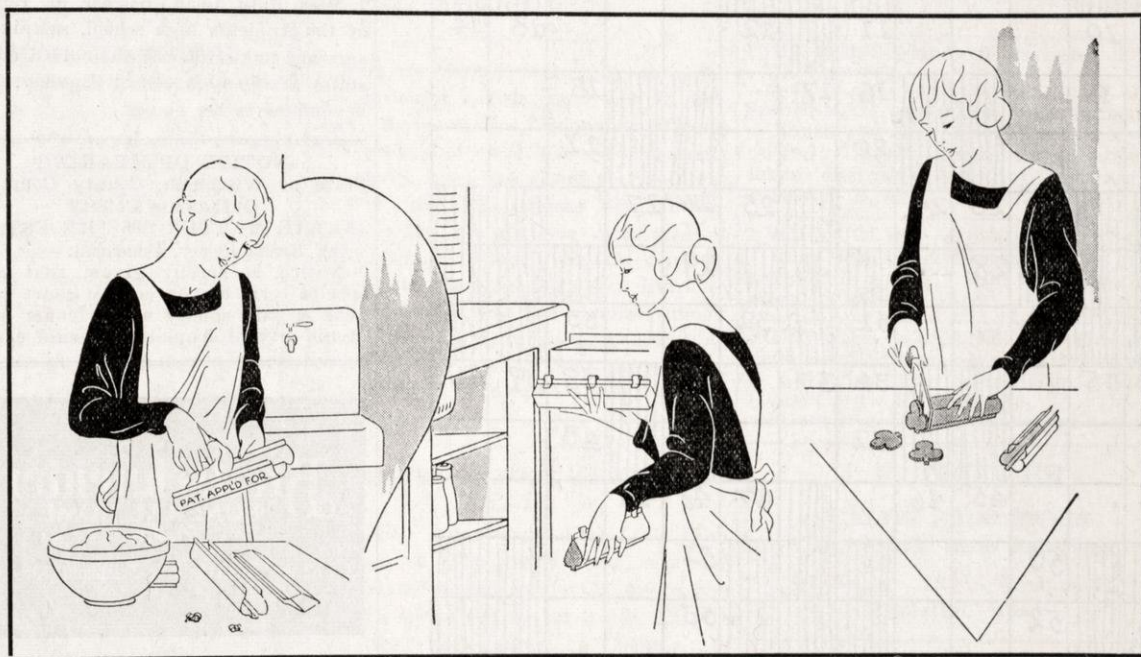

Good co-operation by the local police department is mentioned in the report. The matter of outside aid also was discussed. An informal agreement exists between mayors and fire chiefs of the Fox River valley whereby mutual aid in case of a serious fire may be extended without delay or further authorization.

After these meetings the pupils will take these books home and will talk over the prospective course of study with their parents. Following that each pupil will have a private interview with the principal before registering for a senior high school course.

The senior high school chorus entertained the student body at Roosevelt this morning from 9:15 until 10 o'clock. The chorus is under the direction of Mr. J. I. Williams.

Campus Comment

By Russell Davis

Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity entertained the college world with an informal fire Tuesday evening. Quite a crowd gathered for the event and all expressed appreciation for the diversion offered. The cause of the conflagration was a leaky feed pipe leading to the oil burner. Altho no flames were visible a great quantity of smoke served to keep the expectancy of observers at a high pitch. John Lonsdorf, '34, was of material aid to the local fire brigade. Lonsdorf, from a safe distance, directed the course of the chemical hose into the smoking interior.

The glee club is still away on its annual spring tour. The itinerary this season directs the group through the southern part of the state. The boys are expected to return to the campus in a week.

The other Lawrence tourists, the debate team, continues to meet with success on its eastern trip. The four debaters with their coach, Professor A. L. Franzke, are enjoying the schedule but will be glad to return to school according to word received from them.

With vacations over for the present school year the college has settled down to the last lap of its program. With the weather becoming warmer and warmer and with studies getting tougher and tougher it is apparent that something must give under the strain. Spring is in the air and the scholastic path is going to be a tough one to stick to until June.

Appointments of Highway Patrolmen Announced

The county highway committee has appointed its staff of county and state highway patrolmen. Twenty routes have been supplied and three more are to be filled this season. There will be six less patrolmen this summer than last year, Frank Appleton, county highway commissioner, announced. This is due to the use of more trucks and power graders than teams. However, Mr. Appleton declared that it may be necessary to add two more patrolmen during the summer, as the arrangement planned is an experiment. Seventeen of the patrolmen are already at work, and the others will probably be put into service within ten days. Nine teams, eleven trucks, and three power graders will be used in patrol work this year. Of the 500.5 miles to be patrolled this year, 184.5 miles are state trunk highways and 316 miles are county trunk highways.

The patrolmen recently appointed are Richard Bunkleman, Peter Blanshan, Julius Sassman, Glen VanStratten, Peter Mueller, Frank Surprise, Ed De Bruin, Chris Anschutz, Joseph Van Camp, Theodore Barbieur, Louis Booth, George Lucas, Herman Woldt, Art Tate, Steve McClone, Henry Jarvais, Lester Batley, John Kling, and Mike McHugh.

Burglars forced their way into the Checkerboard Lunch room 219 E. College Ave., early Wednesday morning and made away with about $51 in cash. The lunch room was closed for the night at 3 o'clock by Lawrence Noll, an employe. The robbery was discovered at 6:30 when H. Tonnell, another employe, opened the place for business. Entrance was gained by breaking a cellar window in the rear of the building and gaining access to the ground floor through the basement. Escape was made through the rear door.

Recount of Votes Shows No Changes in Results

A brief session of the common council, called specially to canvass the ballot of Tuesday's election, was held in the council chamber Wednesday evening. Aldermen Thompson, Groth, and Kittner were appointed members of the canvassing board, and with the exception of a few slight errors which did not change the results of the election, found the results of the election correct as reported by the city clerk.

Though the meeting was for the purpose of canvassing the ballot, a few minor business matters were discussed. Arrangements had been made last fall to establish water works service on Telulah street and residents on this street, through their alderman, asked that this work be speeded up because of the fact that many of the residents were now obliged to carry their water supply from wells a considerable distance from their homes.

Alderman Packard presented the request of the Kiwanis club for an appropriation of $250 for street decorating purposes during the state convention in this city next June. Debate on the question was engaged in by Aldermen Vogt, Thompson, McGillan, and Packard. Since economy was the paramount objective of the council in its activities this year, the speakers expressed the opinion that while conventions should be encouraged, an appropriation might establish a precedent which would involve considerable outlay of money before the year closed, especially in view of the fact that about eight conventions are scheduled for this city this year. Packard said he believed it was false economy to refuse an appropriation for decoration purposes, because the city would get back many times more than it spent for trimming up the street.

McGillan was of the opinion that in normal years it probably would be satisfactory to the taxpayers to appropriate money for decorating purposes, but that this year, with its unemployment situation, the sentiment of the taxpayers would be in opposition to all unnecessary expenses and that the economy program pledged should be rigidly adhered to. Alderman Thompson said the Kiwanis club was entitled to an expression from the council, and a vote should be taken so that it would know definitely what the city proposed to do in regard to the matter. It was further stated during the discussion that conventions are not dependent on decorations, but incidental to them, and that the convention city is chosen long before the thought of decorations arises, consequently the decorations planned do not influence the choice of a conference city. The vote indicated the council opposed to the appropriation.

A petition was received from property owners along Verbrick street asking that the paving project be deferred. It was cited that the traffic on this street is exceptionally light and that but one resident would be directly benefited. The petition was laid over, on motion of Alderman McGillan, until after the bids for the pavement, which are due April 9, are received.

An application for permission to plat a section of land to be known as the Glendale plat in the town of Grand Chute was referred to the city engineer and planning commission.

Four Aldermen Reelected to Seats on Council

Only one of the six aldermen from the city of Appleton who sought reelection on Tuesday was defeated, final returns on the general election show. W. H. VanderHeyden, Fifth ward, lost to Wenzel Hassmann by the small margin of 35 votes. Alderman Packard, First ward, declined to serve another term, and the contest in this ward was centered around C. O. Davis and Ray E. Giese. By the narrow margin of eight votes, C. O. Davis defeated Giese. Davis received 575 votes and Giese 567.

Oren Earle polled 419 votes in the Second ward against E. L. Williams' 323. Earle won his reelection by the majority he received in the second precinct having but one more vote than his opponent in the first precinct.

The closest race in the aldermanic election was in the Third ward, where Walter Gmeiner, incumbent, defeated his opponent Frank Schwanke by one vote. Gmeiner had a strong lead in the first precinct, while Schwanke maintained the lead in the second precinct. The vote was 596 for Gmeiner and 595 for Schwanke.

R. F. McGillan, candidate for reelection in the Fourth ward, had an easy victory over his opponent, John Doro. McGillan had 429 votes against Doro's 289.

A difference of 35 votes lost VanderHeyden's reelection in the Fifth ward. Wenzel Hassmann was credited with 689 votes while VanderHeyden got 654.

Philip Vogt, incumbent from the Sixth ward, won the easiest victory. He received 630 votes to 435 cast for his opponent, Fred Weise.

Mrs. Hildegard McNiesch and Mrs. Mabel O. Shannon were elected school commissioners without opposition.

Theodore Berg, who was reelected municipal judge, received his largest majority over his opponent John Lonsdorf in the city of Appleton, where Berg got 4,420 votes and Lonsdorf's 1,807. In several precincts in the county Lonsdorf led, but Berg's large majority offset these, and he won an easy victory.

Fred V. Heinemann, candidate for reelection as county judge, had no opposition.

Whiteman, King of Jazz Here May 6

Charles Maloney, proprietor of the Cinderella ballroom, has made arrangements for the appearance there on the evening of May 6 of Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. A floor show will be a feature of the entertainment, and Mildred Bailey, Paull Sisters, Jack Fulton, Jr., and the King's Jesters will be among the entertainers. It is planned to present a concert before the dance, and stage the floor show during intermission.
