Shastri Honored At 'U' Memorial

By BARBARA KITCHEN
Assistant Night Editor

A memorial service for the late Lal Bahadur Shastri, prime minister of India, was held Tuesday night by the Indian Association. Mr. Shastri died Monday of a heart attack in Tashkent, Soviet Union, a few hours after he had signed a limited agreement with Pakistan to pull back their opposing forces.

The services were attended by a large, predominately Indian audience.

M.S. Poonian, president of the India Association, said, "India's traditions of democracy and peaceful solutions to problems have been the essence of Mr. Shastri's life as demonstrated during his talks 1904, in a poverty stricken mud hut in northern India. His father died when he was 18 months old and he was brought up by his grandfather, who started him on the path to learning by arranging for his early education.

The poverty which surrounded Mr. Shastri perhaps instilled in him a distaste for material things. Even after he became politically successful he continued to live with austere simplicity, said Elder.

Mr. Shastri started his political career when he joined Ghandi's Non Co-operation Movement in 1921. In 1951 Nehru called on Mr. Shastri to organize the Congress Party campaign. He was subsequently appointed to several important cabinet posts in the government.

On May 29, 1964, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru died and in the following days Mr. Shastri was named the new leader of India.

During his term of office Mr. Shastri met many crises. There was the primary job of continuity, holding the vast country of India together. Then came a food crisis, a language crisis, the dispute over the Rahn of Kutch and finally the quarrel with Pakistan over Kashmir.

Prof. Elder said, "In Shastri's career one sees the vindication for democracy; it does not depend on one man but on the ability of a people to govern itself.

A resolution will be sent to Mr. Shastri's family and to the Indian embassy in the United States. The resolution expressed the condolences of the members of the Indian community at the University.

Prayers were read by Romesh Kanujia, past president of the Indian Association, in English and Hindi. At the end of the service those present stood for five minutes of silence, in honor of India's dead leader.

EXAMS NOW

Today is the first day of the newly instituted "reading period" prior to examinations. The special Memorial Library hours during the reading period and finals will be 8 a.m. to 2 a.m. Normally the library closes at midnight.

at Tashkent. Even when the whole nation is grief stricken it is gratifying that the democratic process has continued to be smooth.

"In his constant search for peace and universal amity Prime Minister Shastri was scheduled to meet the American people early next month. Unfortunately this is not to be. However, I assure you, that the spirit of India and the ideals which Mr. Shastri stood for will continue to be represented in this country as well as all over the world," he said.

Prof. Joseph Elder, Indian studies, gave a short history of Mr. Shastri's life and political achievements.

Mr. Shastri was born Oct. 2,

Illinois' 80-64 Victory Ends Badger's Streak

By DIANE SEIDLER
Sports Editor

There's an Ohio State jinx in football--there's always been one. But more recently, thanks to a 6'3" forward named Don Freeman, there have been rumblings of a basketball jinx--Illinois.

The first time Wisconsin met Illinois this season the Fighting Illini won going away by 20 points, 99-70. Freeman had 27 points. Last night at Champaign, Illinois, the Illini won going away by only 16 points, 80-64. Freeman still had 27 points.

Unfortunately, however, the damage has already been done.

The Badgers followed up their upset victory over 7th ranked Iowa Saturday with an unimpressive display of shooting and ball-handling. Leading scorer for Wisconsin was Ken Barnes who made 7 baskets and a free throw for 15 points.

Tied for second behind Barnes were Joe Franklin, who fouled out of the game with 2:30 left, and Ken Gustafson with 13 points. All of Gus' tallies came in the second half.

The Badgers played good ball for the first fifteen minutes of the game. They jumped into an early 4-0 lead on baskets by Mike Carlin and Franklin. A basket by Rich Jones and two by Freeman gave the Illini a short two point advantage, but Franklin and Barnes put Wisconsin back in the lead.

The lead continued to change hands frequently, with neither side enjoying more than a three point cushion. The Badgers tied it at 27-27, but then Illinois began to roll. In the remaining five minutes of the half the Illini pushed through 12 points, while the Badgers could connect for only two points on a basket by Carlin from 20 feet out, leaving the score at halftime, 39-29.

Rothwell Receives Endorsement For Top State Education Post

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Contributing Editor

Angus B. Rothwell will be recommended to the post of executive director of the Co-ordinating Committee for Higher Education (CCHE) at the CCHE meeting today.

CCHE is a body which co-ordinates and acts upon the decision of the University, State University and Vocational School Boards of Regents. Eight of its members represent these institutions, and the other nine are citizens, appointed by the governor.

The decision to recommend Rothwell, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was made Tuesday night by an executive subcommittee after an hour's discussion, from which the press was barred.

The subcommittee also recom-

he added. "I didn't apply for it at any point; it was prevailed upon me...I made up my mind to accept the position at the table tonight."

Rothwell said that he had wanted to check with the subcommittee before accepting the offer as to trends that he might be expected to follow.

One trend was that "we will maintain a strong and able staff," Rothwell said, including adding a deputy director to serve as a personnel officer for the staff.

Although the staff strengthening will make CCHE less reliant on the institution, Rothwell said he believed CCHE could "fulfill its requirements without assuming any of the internal positions of the institutions or its representatives."

Rothwell will spend most of his time working as the chief liaison officer between the higher education institutions and the governor

Lampman Prefers Research Position

By LYNNE ELLESTAD
Assistant Night Editor

Prof. Robert J. Lampman, economics, said Monday that he prefers to do research work than accept the top administrative position in the new poverty research center.

The University is expected to be named as the site for the research center by the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) sometime within the next few weeks.

Lampman has served as chairman of the committee which developed the plan for a research center on poverty here.

He also worked with Walter Heller, chief economic advisor to the late Pres. Kennedy, and with Sargent Shriver, director of the OEO to develop the War on Poverty program now in effect.

He is now chairman of the steering committee set up to launch the research center and attract a permanent administrator to head it.

Lampman has been particularly interested lately, in a guaranteed minimum income plan. Such a system would provide for federal funds to be given to a family until its income reached a minimum level, probably $3000 for a family of four.

"The values of this program," Lampman stated, "include an immediate end to poverty, increased freedom of choice for many low-income persons, and in many cases, a greater participation in community affairs by those who have been poor."

"I think it reasonable to assume that the poor would spend the money as constructively as they now spend their funds, and mended that the present temporary director, Carlisle P. Runge, continue to hold the post until June 30 to give Gov. Warren Knowles time to find a replacement for Rothwell.

Knowles has the option of holding an election or appointing another superintendent.

Rothwell told the press he would favor an appointment, but could not publicly recommend his successor. Rothwell's term in office has three years before expiration yet.

"As I see it, I can perform a service here and that it would be suitable to accept this," Rothwell said after the meeting.

"It is a very challenging job,"

No Books To Be Found

Sunday afternoon the reserve room of Memorial Library became overloaded with returned but unshelved books and with students who could not find the books they needed. By Sunday night the reserve room was literally cluttered. Books were stacked on every rolling cart, they occupied every bit of space on the counter surrounding the service area, and they were stacked on the shelves under the counter with more arriving all the time.

In the service area, four women and one small boy were working. The woman appeared unpanicked and helped students looking over the reams of unshelved books—usually to no avail. The boy, around age 11, was seen working the check-in clock behind the counter and retrieving stacks of books from the ground floor reserve book return.

Now, although some students do tend to put studying off until the last two weeks and more often the last week of classes, we feel that they should not suffer from not being able to locate the necessary books. Moreover, the majority of students do not leave the reading until the last moment, but during the last two weeks like to review the reading they did earlier in the semester. The purpose of the library is to serve the students. We feel that it could, in this most important part of the semester, do a better job.

Those in charge of the library should know by this time that there will be a rush on the otherwise well handled reserve room during the final weeks. Why the administrators can not anticipate this and adjust accordingly we can not understand. To us it seemed that perhaps two additional people in the reserve room throughout the day could have reshelfed the books as they came in. And although the boy working there appeared to be doing more than the other workers, we doubt if he was a qualified library employee.

We suggest to the Library administrators that they try better to anticipate the needs of the students during closed period.

Landscape Of Grandeur May Be Dammed

TO THE EDITOR:

I am a graduate student at the University, and would like to make this an open letter to the academic body here. I am writing to arouse interest in a letter-writing plan by students to their Congressmen and Senators concerning the possible damage of one of America's most awe-inspiring natural treasures, the Grand Canyon. Knowing the size of the Hoofers Club here, I am sure there are others equally interested in conserving our natural heritage.

As unbelievable as it may seem, there are plans in the making which would do, in my opinion, great damage of an incalculable nature to the Grand Canyon. The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation has plans to build two dams along the Colorado River, one upstream, the other downstream of the park proper, in order to supply water to southern Arizona. It is the claim of conservationists that not only will these dams turn the mighty river into a placid lake through part of the National Park and all of the adjacent Grand Canyon National Monument, but it will completely upset the ecology of this unique area. There are very convincing arguments, also, that economically, this is not a good solution to the problem of water supply to southern Arizona.

To me the thought is chilling that these areas, which by Federal law are set aside in eternal preservation in their natural state, are subject to such ravaging damage. If these dams can be built, what protection can we be assured of for any of the national parks in this country? Where will man be able to go to witness the splendors of nature in solitude and peace in an age increasingly constricted, noisy, and crowded? I cannot begin to describe the terrible feelings the above mentioned possibilities bring to me.

So far the lower dam, Bridge

Canyon, has been deferred by the Bureau of the Budget because of public outcry. But the upstream dam, Marble Gorge, has obtained approval, and the decision is now up to Congress. This dam would permanently destroy the magnificent Marble Gorge, as Glen Canyon was destroyed a few years ago by another Colorado River dam.

The magnificence of what would be destroyed is eloquently portrayed in "Time and the River the bad in our country, it is our duty as students to preserve that worthy of conservation. If students here, who represent every state in the nation, would express their feelings to their representatives, perhaps the Marble Gorge dam can be forestalled, and finally eliminated as even a proposal. We cannot allow the disfigurement of such a sublime gift of nature to man. If we do, we hardly deserve the little which remains.

A Ghost Story

TO THE EDITOR:

It has come to my attention that there is a general understanding among many of the University community that the Wisconsin Players production of Hamlet, which I am scheduled to direct this spring, has already been cast from among the actors who played in my production of the first quarto Hamlet in the Compass Theatre this past November.

To set the record straight, I want to state most emphatically that there is not one shred of truth in that rumour. Not only would such a practise fly in the face of Wisconsin Players tradition, but in my own mind I see each of these productions as entirely independent.

For the information, then, of those who want to try out for Hamlet on March 14 and 15, but have become discouraged because of this false rumour, I have not publicly or privately cast any parts. Try-outs will be wide open.

Around the Nation

Notes on the Draft

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This column will present editorial comment from college and university newspapers around the country. It will appear weekly.)

THE DAILY IOWAN, JAN. 5

Gen. Louis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service, made an interesting observation regarding students who may be drafted because they demonstrate against the war or the draft laws: "The Government would be committing suicide if it defied students who defied the selective service laws."

It may be suicide to defer them, General, but it's murder to draft them. What kind of army would it be that was made up of soldiers who won't fight? It's dangerous enough to be in a place where people are shooting at you, but if you won't shoot back, you can be in serious trouble. And what kind of a job would an army of nonviolent types do? The war effort would probably be about as effective as New York's transportation network.

But even if one ignores the illogic of Hershey's Law, it still deserves a veto. His idea is for the government to send men off to fight its battles because if those men were left at home they would be a threat to domestic security. Somehow all this just doesn't ring like the Liberty Bell. That is, the forefathers had envisioned something else when they founded the United States.

Gen. Hershey's idea of government may be dissimilar from the founding fathers', or even, perhaps from that of the present U.S. citizenry. If the general doesn't agree with the views of the American public or any given segment of it, maybe he should elect a new public. This is a democracy, isn't it?

THE DAILY CALIFORNIAN, JAN. 5

Every month the Department of Defense is asking for 40,000 new men, and it may be requesting even larger numbers while the war in Viet Nam continues. As the war and the draft escalate, there is the ever increasing danger that college students may be drafted in large numbers.

Already, many college students have received I-A classifications, which label them available for military service. However, the classification system has been very uneven, depending on subjective decisions by local draft boards, which operate under sometimes arbitrary quotas set by Washington.

Both the unevenness of the system, and the I-A classifications given to college students are harmful to the students' education. However, if the draft is going to exist, it should be administered more fairly than is currently being done.

The harm to education under the present administration lies in the uncertainty which clouds the student's future. Education is a process which involves failure as well as success. The admonition that the "real students" who get very good grades will not be drafted does not take this into account. Many, and perhaps a majority of college students, face times in their college careers when their grades are low because they have experimented, either with difficult courses, or with other activities. With the draft hanging overhead, the rush is on for good grades, and the experimental aspect of education is lost.

Even those students classified II-S are uncertain of the demands the Department of Defense will make upon them, via their local draft boards. In some areas, the supply of I-A's who aren't students is more quickly exhausted than in others, and then the reclassification of students begins. In other areas, there is a large number of draftable young men, and the college students are safe. Although some college males are aware of their local situation, others are not. The uncertainty hangs over almost all.

As the draft escalates, its defects become more and more obvious. We hope that the student's situation will be reviewed and the uncertainty and unfairness in classifying college students be lessened.

As it now is, the students cannot plan his college education as he should; he is left little room for the failure he must experience on the road to becoming educated.

Retarded, Deprived Children Need Rewards for Learning

Many disturbed children, mentally retarded children, and culturally deprived children can be made to learn if the proper conditions of learning are used, a University researcher has found.

"By using an adequate reward system in the learning process, such children will show marked improvements in their learning as well as in their behavior," Prof. Arthur W. Staats said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, held in Berkeley. Staats is professor of educational psychology.

He has found from his research studies that all young children are also capable of a great deal more learning than has been previously thought possible, again under appropriate conditions of reward.

"Many rewards are learned rewards; a child must be taught in his early years of training that such things as his teacher's approval is a reward, as is learning itself," Staats explained. "If he hasn't learned these social rewards, then many learning situations will not be adequate for him and he won't learn much."

For the past six years Prof. Staats has studied conceptual learning in children--how a four-year-old child learns his original language, numbers concepts, writing and reading. A prominent feature of his study is a principle of reinforcement: rewarded behaviors are continued by the child, while behaviors not rewarded are discontinued.

By developing procedures for testing how children learn difficult tasks over long periods of time, Prof. Staats found "many problems of learning arise from the fact that conditions of learning are not maximal for the child, especially in terms of rewards."

In one study with mentally retarded children, the effectiveness of the reward system was again evident by the children's sustained attention and hard-work behavior.

Prof. Staats is presently conducting a study of young, culturally deprived children, including some with special learning problems. This research appears to be yielding a general theory of conceptual learning of children, as well as methods and principles for dealing with learning problems in children.

In addition, he has developed a remedial training method that has already proved successful in a study with a juvenile delinquent.

Prof. Staats now plans to apply his method in a school situation study in conjunction with the University's Research and Development Center for Learning and Re-education.

His research has been sponsored by the Office of Naval Research, National Institutes of Mental Health, and is now supported by the Wisconsin Research and Development Center.

NEUROLOGIST WINS AWARD

In an unprecedented ceremony at the Wisconsin Center Jan. 11 Dr. Hans. Reese received the first honorary degree ever awarded a foreigner by Kyushu University, Japan. Reese, emeritus professor of neurology, spent six months in Japan in 1959 helping to establish the first department of neurology at Kyushu. He also did research there on multiple sclerosis. As a result of his work in Japan, and of his efforts to initiate a research and training program in the United States for Japanese medical scholars, he was named an honorary member of the Japanese Society of Neurology.

Obesity and Mental Illness Are Primary Health Problems

By TERRI ZUEHLKE
Cardinal Feature Writer

Obesity ranks with mental illness as the number one health problem in the U.S. It is recognized by the medical profession as a chronic condition interfering with a person's health, happiness, and life expectancy.

For these reasons, the clinicians from University Hospitals departments of student health, clinical psychology, psychiatry, and nutrition are going to spend ten weeks working with obese University students, with the hope of helping them.

Dr. Carl Fellner, associate professor in the University's psychiatric department, and Dr. Herbert Levitt, of the psychology department, will be coordinating the program. One group session a week will be conducted over a period of ten weeks, Dr. Fellner said. Each group will consist of ten student volunteers.

The sessions will be based on group therapy rather than the individual approach. "A differential approach is planned in which different groups sessions will be conducted along major theoretical lines," Dr. Fellner said.

"There are many theories on the causes of overeating. That is why we will try different approaches based on different points of view," he said. "It is terribly difficult to lose weight. We want to help."

Dr. Fellner pointed out that only two percent of obesity is caused by glandular disorders. Most obesity is a result of too much food and too little exercise. It is often a symptom of underlying disturbances. (Obesity is defined as weighing 20 percent above the average according to the normal height-weight tables.

The first general session will be Saturday, January 15 at 1:30 p.m. in the medical school auditorium, Room 227 Service Memorial Institute. In this meeting the procedure and goals of the program will be discussed. Interested individuals will be provided with further details.

WAFC Requests Award Nominees

Nominations of people and organizations to receive 1966 Governor's Arts Awards must be made by mid-January, the Wisconsin Arts Foundation and Council (WAFC) announced today.

The WAFC, designated by Governor Knowles earlier this year as "the official body through which the public interest in the arts and culture shall be maintained, encouraged and disseminated in Wisconsin," has invited nominations in a brochure sent to about 1,000 individuals and arts groups in the state.

Awards will be made for creativity, for performance and for support of the arts. Another category is "institutional and organizational achievements in the arts."

The awards may be given for achievements during the past year.

Graduating Engineers Have Record Number of Job Offers

Engineering students of the University of Wisconsin at Madison getting their degrees in 1966 have more job offers than any other engineering graduating classes in history.

Prof. James Marks, director of the College of Engineering's placement service, describes this year's engineering job demand as "breaking all records" and "absolutely unprecedented."

Prof. Marks says that over 300 companies have sent more than 500 job recruiters to the University's engineering campus so far this semester seeking engineers receiving their first or higher degrees in January or June. More than 3,000 job interviews have been held during the fall semester at the engineering campus in Madison.

More than 400 students will be getting their engineering degrees on the Madison campus during 1966, and about 275 of them will be accepting job offers. The rest will do graduate work or enter military service.

Starting salaries are up again this year for all graduating engineers, according to Marks. For students getting their bachelor's degrees they are ranging from $650 upwards towards $700 monthly, for those getting master's degrees from $750 to $850 a month, and for those getting Ph.D. degrees the average is about $1,100 a month.

Marks says that the big demand for engineering graduates by business, industry, and government is due to several factors. Foremost is that not enough engineers are being produced by colleges and universities to meet the demands of U.S. industries. Present-day technological advances in all fields also have greatly increased the need for engineers, he added.

Cagers Lose To Illini, 80-64

Following the break the Badgers again played even with Illinois, and part way through the fourth quarter an effective press brought them to within five points of the Illini. But Jones and Freeman put Illinois safely out of reach.

Although Freeman dominated the play, both offensively and defensively, Jones and Jim Dawson turned in fine performances. Jones, a 6'7" sophomore center, scored 12 field goals and a free throw for 25 points. Dawson had 6 baskets and 1 free throw for 13.

Franklin, who played the last two minutes of the Iowa game with a sprained ankle, was slightly injured when he landed on his back after a rebound, but he finished the game.

The victory gave Illinois sole possession of first place in the Big Ten with a 3-0 record, two of the wins coming on the road.

Grad Engineering Courses Offered

Wisconsin engineers who want to work towards the M.S. degree in mechanical engineering may enroll in one of three courses being offered second semester under the University's Articulated Instructional Media (AIM) program for graduate students. The three courses offered are Instrumentation and Experimentation (ME347), Nuclear Power Engineering (ME 350), and Advanced Kinematics of Machinery (ME342).

AIM students may complete University credit classes in their homes while they continue their full-time jobs. They may take up to 24 months to complete a regular semester's course work. Registration for the spring semester is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 29, 8:30 a.m. to noon in the Mechanical Engineering Building. An afternoon orientation session with professors who will be teaching the classes will be held from 1:20 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Students in the AIM program complete regular weekly assignments which they mail to their professors. Mid-semester and final exams are taken on campus with resident students in the same course.

For more information, write Prof. Edward Obert, Chairman, Mechanical Engineering Dept., University of Wisconsin, 1513 University Ave., Madison, Wis. 53706.

Grapplers Top Eastern Illinois

By PETER DORNBROOK

Coach Harold Pinther and Eastern Illinois found Big Ten wrestling to be a lot tougher than they had anticipated as EIU became the Badgers' fourth straight dual meet victim Saturday afternoon in the fieldhouse.

Pinther's Panthers could only muster nine points to Wisconsin's 24, and five of those nine points came after the issue had already been decided, as Dan Pernat was forced to default.

In the opening minute of the last match of the day Dan suffered a cut above the eye which later required six stitches when he bumped heads with Russ Benjamin, a 290 pound mastodon. Although the fans were greatly disappointed, Coach Martin and the team doctor felt that it would not be worthwhile to risk further injury to Pernat since Wisconsin had already won the meet.

Dave Monroe, the Badger midget man, set the trend for Wisconsin by jumping off to a quick lead against Ken Cummins and riding him relentlessly to an 8-1 verdict.

When time ran out in the 123 pound contest, Badger Erv Barnes and Panther Jim Mentz were tied, but Barnes received an extra point on riding time and took the match, 5-4.

The third bout matched Wisconsin's Steve Thacher, who was filling in for the ailing Mike Gluck, with Eastern's captain and best wrestler Jerry Nyckel. Pinther moved his ace from the 145 pound class down to the 137 pound level to avoid Al Sievertsen and pick up five easy points. Thacher had other ideas however, as he held Nyckel to a 1-1 draw.

From the opening whistle until the referee blew the miss-match to a close nine minutes later, Sievertsen put Gordy Quill, his 145 pound opponent, in one predicament after another, outwrestling him 13-1. But to the dismay of both the fans and Coach Martin, Al failed to pin Quill.

With his team ahead by 15 points, Lon Getlin started strongly in the fifth pairoff with a takedown and a reversal, but he seemed to run out of gas in the final minute and only managed to squeak by Lyle Honnold, 7-5.

Then Rick Heinzelman, a sturdy sophomore, came out on the mats and all but destroyed Panther

ELMER BEALE

Randy Richardson. Richardson never had a chance as Rick crushed him, 8-0.

In what was definitely the high point of the meet, senior co-captain Elmer Beale responded to a loud chorus of cheers from the crowd and pounced on Jack McGrath, pinning him in two minutes and seven seconds.

Finally in the 177 pound category Brekke Johnson, who looked as if he had not fully recovered from a bout with the flu, grappled to a 1-1 draw with Larry Kanke who spent the full nine minutes avoiding Johnson.

AFA, Colorado Defeat Fencers

By DIANE SEIDLER
Sports Editor

"The boys gave sub-par performances, that's all," disgusted Archie Simonson said Tuesday. "The scores in both meets should have been reversed. But the boys we count on didn't come through."

The fencers dropped two matches over the weekend, losing to the Air Force Academy, 16-11, and the Colorado Club, 19-8.

"We shouldn't have lost to Air Force," he explained between coughs, "something else that didn't brighten the trip to Colorado Springs. "The competition just didn't justify the loss."

Sabre took the worse beating against the Academy, winning only 3 of 6 bouts. Arnold posted the

Gymnasts Extend Streak

By PETE WYNHOFF

The Wisconsin gymnastics team ran its record to five straight as Indiana State, Minnesota and Ball State fell before Coach George Bauer's squad over the weekend.

Season victory number three was achieved Friday night as the Badgers trimmed Indiana State, 165.9-149.5. Leading the way was sophomore Bob Henneke who won three events which included an outstanding performance in long horse vaulting. Other Wisconsin winners were Jerry Herter in side horse, Bob Reinert on high bar, and Captain Bill Hoff on rings.

The Badgers won all but the trampoline event, completely dominating the evening, especially in long horse vaulting and the parallel bar.

Saturday the gymnasts extended their streak to five, winning their Big Ten opener in the process.

Ball State was humbled, 169.95-147.50, and Minnesota fell, 169.95-161.55, as Wisconsin swept both ends of the triple dual.

Wisconsin won all seven events against Ball State and took six from the Gophers. Again leading the attack was Henneke who captured first in three events. Hoff did an outstanding job on the rings, as did Mark Kann.

The most exciting performance from a spectator standpoint was Bob Reinert on the horizontal bar, his best of the year. Herter tied for first in his specialty, the side horse, with Ball State's Jim Brydon.

The Badgers looked better Saturday in both individual and team effort in comparison to Friday night's showing. "Much better" was all a happy Coach Bauer said Saturday, but it was evident that he was well pleased with his squad's weekend.

BOAC will leave you alone in Europe.

On a swinging BOAC Grand Orbit student tour you can explore the coast of Portugal, gaze at the Rif Mountains of Morocco, take an Adriatic cruise, visit the Islands of Greece, absorb culture in Spain, France, Italy and England, find yourself a Scandinavian viking, lift your stein in Germany, Switzerland and Austria, play roulette in Monaco, and have plenty of time to roam around on your own. The whole package will cost you $1921.30* round trip from New York. And that includes most meals, hotels and everything else. (You can also jet BOAC direct from Miami, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco, or Honolulu. And join the group in London.)

To be sure you get what you pay for we hired some young tour leaders from Oxford and Cambridge and told them not to bug you.

They were all for it. They said that's the only kind of tour they'd be interested in leading anyway. And that they weren't above a little freedom themselves while working their way through college.

So that's the kind of deal you'll get on a BOAC student tour of Europe this summer.

Clip the coupon for more facts. And cut out for Europe.
