ON GREEK POETRY

AND ITS RELATION TO ENGLISH POETRY.

LECTURE BY PROFESSOR SHOREY OF CHICAGO.

Large Audience—A Very Entertaining Lecture.

Prof. Shorey, of Chicago university, lectured on the Genius of Greek and English Poetry, in Library hall yesterday afternoon. The building was well-filled with an appreciative audience, when Prof. Smith, of the university, stepped on the platform to introduce the speaker. Prof. Shorey, in beginning, announced that his general subject would be a comparison of the Spirit of Ancient Poetry with that of Modern Poetry and which he would treat by comparing the elements and functions of poetry in ancient and modern times, and by contrasting the treatment of love, melancholy and nature as conceived by the Greeks and by our modern poets. English poetry is probably the most worthy of comparison with Greek poetry because it was most profoundly effected by the latter, and of all modern poetry most clearly reflects its spirit. The one touch of nature which makes the whole world kin is found in Shakespeare as well as Aeschylus. The elements of poetry are the rhythmic dress of the thought, the imaginative representation of the thought, and the thought itself; its functions are the portrayal, reflection and criticism of life.

Passing on to a consideration of the elements of poetry, the lecturer stated that the music of Greek poetry was unsurpassed and its form was perfect. The next element of poetry, imagination, is manifested in personification, metaphor, and suggestive epithet. In true personification, all poetry, except the works of Aeschylus and Shakespeare, is lacking. In metaphor, Greek is not so rich as modern poetry. The Greek did not borrow from the psychic to illustrate the physical. The professor then illustrated differences in the use of figures in ancient and modern poetry by a large number of quotations taken from the whole realm of literature. The number and aptness of these quotations gave evidence of thorough study, keen literary insight, and intimate acquaintance with the whole realm of literature. The epithets of Greek poetry are felicitous and true and unlike the hyphenated English epithets.

Ancient poetry looks at the more simple aspects of nature and life, and rests on the plain and obvious meaning of things. The Greek poet did not therefore, readily take to symbolism, though he did not oppose it. Even in the treatment of deep passion, he is reserved and temperate, and in spiritual things always limited himself to the possible and attainable. The whole Greek literature hints of the incapability of language to express thought; thus no effort was made to express the ineffable.

Prof. Shorey then took up the treatment of special topics by the Greeks and moderns, the first being love. Love holds a less dignified place among ancient writers than with us. It was not as now, the chosen theme of higher poetry, nor was it yet charged with the meaning given it by recent poets. Our chief source of treatment, the power of a pure woman's love, was sealed to the Greeks. They idealized love in but two ways: first, as a cosmic force, penetrating all nature; second, as a blasting demoniac power, ruining mankind.

As the Greeks were essentially a social people they treated nature only as a background, but did not conceive of the imaginative and fanciful treatment characteristic of the modern poet. This was due to the effects of mythology; for, since the gods, creatures of the imagination, had nature for their home, the latter transferred its right to imagination treatment to them. Another reason for difference in the treatment of nature is due to the fact that we see nature through a haze of literary reminiscence, while the Greeks saw nature as it really was. Modern poetry is also more precise and minute in the description of nature as a result of the growth of the scientific spirit.

Modern developments, isms, ologies, and the study of five great literatures have given a breadth and variety to poetry unknown to the Greeks, and have introduced the melancholy element growing out of man's feeling of impotence and poverty in the presence of our greatest and complex civilization. This melancholy was sometimes expressed but not ever present in ancient poetry as it is in modern. The modern poet unlike the Greek looks to the future; the latter never attempted to reform the world, and could never have conceived of "a vision of the world and all the wonders that would be."

The professor said that it is vain to attempt to revise the Greek ideals for we would prefer the pictures which Greek literature has given us to the real characters. The lecture was richly illustrated and reinforced at every point by epithets, verses, and quotations from the poets of every age and nation.

APPOINT A CANE COMMITTEE.

At the Freshman Class Meeting Yesterday Afternoon.

The freshmen class held its regular meeting in University hall yesterday afternoon. The following officers were elected for the spring term:

President,—J. E. Davies.
Vice President,—John W. Marshall.
Second Vice President,—Annie N. Scribner.

Secretary,—John B. Stearns.
Treasurer,—T. B. Wadsworth.
Sergeant-at-Arms,—J. P. Riordan.
Reports of committees showed the treasury to be in a good condition. The Badger cut was satisfactory to all present and it was unanimously adopted. The president was authorized and instructed to appoint a committee who duty it will be to select a class cane.

THE LIBRARY BILL

PASSED BY THE SENATE YESTERDAY.

A BILL FOR THE HISTORICAL LIBRARY.

University Left Out This Time but the Next Legislature May Do Something.

Bill No. 32 S., providing for a building for the library of the State Historical society, on the lower campus, passed the senate last evening. The following voted against the bill:

Conger. Pierce.
Putnam. Thayer.
Stebbins. McGillivray.

This bill is for the Historical society alone, the university being left out this time. Provisions will be made by which the university library can be accommodated by the next legislature if an appropriation can be secured. As they will probably not have as great a sense of economy the university library will probably secure aid in two years.

BASE BALL TICKETS.

Will be Issued for the Season—Good for Eight Games.

The base-ball management has decided to issue season tickets for the eight games to be played on the home grounds. The tickets will be sold for two dollars each and will be non-transferrable. As all the games scheduled are with strong teams and the price asked gives a discount of one dollar and a quarter in the season, there will undoubtedly be a demand for the tickets.

Tickets will be on sale at Moseley's book store.

The first game on the home grounds will be played next Saturday, with Beloit.

PHILOMATHIA.

Philomathia met last night with President Lucas in the chair and listened to two well prepared and closely contested debates. The first debate was on the question, "Resolved, that a system of cabinet government is preferable to the present system in the United States." It was won by Burgess, '98, who led the negative over Burgess, who led the affirmative. Vice President Schmidt, '96, was then inaugurated and made a short, forcible speech which was enthusiastically received. After the recess the second debate, "Resolved, that the policy of the United States in making land grants has been impolitic," was argued. Schmidt, '98, led the affirmative and Phoenix, '98, the negative. The decision of the judges was in favor of the negative. The next meeting, the Freshman Blowout, will be held in two weeks, April 26.

AGAINST ST. JOHNS.

The Team Goes to Delafield Today—Men Who Will Play.

A game has been arranged with St. Johns military academy at Delafield, for this afternoon. The following players accompanied by Assistant Manager Riley left today, to play in the game: Kummel, Falk, Gregg, Carroll, Wheelihan, Ford, Fowle, Freeman, Dudgeon, Hayden, McCabe.

The positions in which the men will play have not been decided as it is probable that they will be changed about somewhat during the game in order to test them in various positions. An interesting game is expected at St. Johns has a good team. The Wisconsin team has not played any regular game as yet but has had outdoor practice for the past week.

FOOTBALL AT HARVARD.

The Board of Overseers Goes Against the Faculty.

The board of overseers of Harvard university passed the following resolutions in regard to intercollegiate football:

I. The question of continuing or abolishing the game of inter-collegiate football is within the powers of the athletic committee under the standing rule of the corporation.

II. It is the opinion of the board of overseers that intercollegiate football should be abolished unless it can be shown that the serious evils and abuses connected with the game can be corrected.

This vote is identical with that of the corporation passed two weeks ago, but not given out at the time. It is in effect the same as the motion lost by one vote in the faculty meeting, in which it was moved to leave the question of the abolishment of intercollegiate football in the hands of the athletic committee.

The significance of the vote was a declaration of support of the athletic committee for its stand in the defense of intercollegiate football. Since the vote of the board of overseers is superior to that of the faculty, the continuance of football is probably assured, providing that certain reforms in the games are instituted. This latter clause, although appearing in the second vote of the overseers has no bearing on the actual meaning of their action, since the athletic committee has already agreed to make the required reforms.

The reforms in the game which have been agreed upon by the athletic committee, are chiefly those tending to check the publicity of future contests. The games hereafter are to be played on college grounds only. The admission tickets will be at the disposal of the students and their friends. By restricting the distribution of tickets to the students it is hoped to exclude the foreign element, through whom the present objectionable features in connection with the football matches, have arisen.

State secretary Kellogg will lead the meeting of the Christian associations tomorrow afternoon.

The freshman class has decided to tempt the fates by appointing a cane committee.The management of the naval department is to be congratulated on their efforts to raise the funds necessary to have the university creditably represented on the water this year.Why there should be such an utter lack of interest in the college daily as the subscription list to the Daily Cardinal shows at present is quite unanswerable. The very fact that it is the official paper of the University and prints all announcements of the faculty prior to their appearance on the bulletin boards ought in itself to carry it to every single student. But this term is as well one of unusual interest in athletics and very nearly everyone must be interested in some one of its departments. If for no other reason, those that are so interested ought by all means to subscribe and secure the paper for this term.COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor: Now at the beginning of the term when studies are being arranged almost everyone is annoyed more or less by the so-called "Synoptic Lectures." Perhaps therefore a word with regard to them might not be out of place.

In the first place the time at which they must occur is such as to spoil an entire afternoon's work at any other subject. It makes one afternoon less in which a student can carry on library work.

But it is to the nature of the lecturer's themselves that the greatest objection is raised. And at the outset it might be said that the very fact that almost every student in the university is unalterably opposed to these lectures raises a strong presumption against them. In conversation with a large number of students who have taken these lectures I have yet to find one who did not consider the time spent in attendance upon them almost entirely wasted. The fact is that unless the work is made so hard as practically to amount to a full study with a credit of one-fifth, (as is sometimes done), the information gained from a course of this character is no more than could be gained from the reading of an elementary text-book upon the subject.

But it is when there is conflict between a regular study and one of these courses that the full ridiculousness of including them among the required work becomes apparent. When a person is asked to give up a full study in a branch which is essential to the completion of the work which he has undertaken in order to gain the merest smattering of information upon some subject of which he cares nothing, he is apt to feel that at the least, the time for which he is paying dearly is not well spent.

I might suggest in conclusion that if the faculty have any desire to ascertain the popularity of these courses among the students, they make them elective for one term. If they are not made to constitute a mere entertainment, as is the case with some of them at the present time, I will warrant that the most of them will be delivered to empty benches.

Respectfully,

Senior.

IN LAUREA.

The entertainment given by the members of Laurea last evening was very successful, there being a large attendance at the gymnasium at Ladies' hall, where the play was given. The members who took part in the play deserve great credit for the manner in which their parts were acted. A prettily decorated stage had been arranged. The performance lasted about an hour.

PRESS CLUB.

The University Press club will meet on Wednesday, April 17, in the State Historical rooms in the capitol. Miss E. H. Blair will read a paper to the club and the files of old newspapers in the historical rooms will be used to illustrate the paper.

ATHLETICS.

The freshman engineers are organizing a class base ball team.

The foot ball candidates in response to Capt. Richards call, are now practicing daily on the lower campus. The work consists of catching and kicking.

ADDRESS OF DEPEW.

At the spring convocation at the university of Chicago Chauncey M. Depew delivered the address. In the course of his remarks he said:

"The best use to which wealth can be applied is to assist these great universities which are educating the youth of our land."

"This institution, which owes its existence to the beneficence of Rockefeller, is in itself a monument of the proper use of wealth accumulated by a man of genius. So is Cornell, so is Vanderbilt, and so are the older colleges, as they have received the benefactions of generous, appreciative and patriotic wealth. But in view of the dangers which are about us, and of the difficulties which are before us, we cannot rely upon what the rich may do, or what philanthropy or generosity or wisdom may suggest. The state has already done well in the common schools; it has done better in the high school, and better still in the final opportunity which it gives in many cases for a liberal education."

"It would be a long step forward in popularizing higher education if the government should establish at Washington a great national university. As at Oxford or Cambridge there are historic colleges with foundation running back for hundreds of years and each having its own traditions, but all part of the university, so in every state there would be colleges, each having its own merits and traditions, and all of them belonging to the grand university which will represent the culture of the new world, the university of the United States."

BASE BALL AT CHICAGO.

The baseball team has had daily practice in Washington park during the past week, and although a great improvement is noticeable, it is not at all what it should be. There has been some complaint among the candidates of lack of systematic training. They say that no preference is given in coaching the strongest candidates for the places they are expected to fill, or are applicants for, but that two teams are picked out for practice without any particular regard to individual coaching, and as a consequence they lose the benefit derived from constant team work.

That this state of affairs exists, to some extent, was noticed in the game of last Saturday. This could hardly, though, be said to have been the fault of the coaches, as three of the prominent candidates for the team were absent from the field.

The pleasant surprise of the game was Gilchrist's good work in the box. Aided by Stagg's coaching behind the bat, the Reserves captured the game from the Regulars by a score of 16 to 11. Clark, on the other hand, seemed to be out of form, and the youngsters straightened out his curves for eighteen hits. The inability of the Regulars to find Gilchrist's delivery clearly shows that the team had better make the acquaintance of a left hander's pitching.—U. of C. Weekly.
