The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Once there was some old man who was going to go grocery shopping in DePere and his wife told him not to forget to buy some more tripe. He remembered that he hadn't bought the tripe but he didn't know English so he was thinking over what he could say to call the tripe so the butcher would understand what he wanted to buy. He was standing there in the butcher shop a little while when another Oneida man came in. He told him what he wanted and his friend said, "I will translate for you." So the two of them went up to where the butcher was standing and right away he asked what they forgot. The translator spoke right up and said, "What he wants to buy is oxen belly."
