CHARLES HARTLING STUDENT, KILLED AT RAIL CROSSING

Accident at College Hills Probable Result of Car Skidding

Charles Hartling, senior in the College of electrical engineering, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon as a result of injuries received when the Ford roadster he was driving was struck by the Milwaukee passenger train at the College hills crossing near the Timlin Lumber company yard. The accident occurred at 10:54 o'clock in the morning.

Hartling was returning to Madison after taking some Kodak pictures of the hills, and it is believed the car skidded when he attempted to put on the brakes. The car was headed diagonally across the track away from the train when it was struck.

Robert Timlin rushed the injured man to the Wisconsin General hospital, where, according to Dr. W. A. Mowry of the student health department, he suffered from fractured bones and internal injuries.

Hartling's home is in Rockwell City, Iowa, and his Madison residence was at 618 Stockton Ct.

The same train which hit Hartling's car before changing crews, met with a similar accident at 10:10 o'clock, when it struck the Star sedan of Dr. William L. Finnegan at the Russell Street crossing.

DEAN NARDIN TO ADDRESS WOMEN

To Discuss Future Work of All-Freshman Women's Convocation

"The Alchemy of the Four Years," will be discussed by Dean Nardin at the All-Freshman Women's Convocation at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Lathrop parlors.

This is to be a general vocational talk designed to help in planning work for next semester, for the coming school years, and for vocational years after school. In former years it has been made a compulsory for all Freshman women, but that plan has been abandoned as it is believed all women really interested will come of their own free will.

The talk is a part of the program sponsored by the Vocational committee, Viola Wendt '28, chairman. The big event of the year will be a Vocational conference to be held the latter part of April, at which time university women will have an opportunity of meeting a vocational expert in private conference.

PLAYERS TO PICK CAST THIS WEEK

"Captain Applejack" Selected for Wisconsin Players' Pre- Prom Production

Having selected "Captain Applejack" for its pre-prom production, Wisconsin Players will start tryouts for that play sometime on the latter part of this week, according to Harold Konnak '27, general manager of the presentation and president of the club.

The pre-prom play which will be given the afternoon and evening of Feb. 4 at the Garrick theatre, will inaugurate the festivities of the prom weekend. The evening performance will be the official prom function, the matinee being given in order to allow townspeople and unorganized parties an opportunity to see the play.

The admission to the play will be $1.50, $1, and 50 cents in the evening and $1, 75 cents, and 50 cents in the afternoon, Konnak explained.

"Players is particularly anxious to put the matinee over this year," Konnak said, "and hence we are cutting the prices below former standards. We want 2000 spectators at the two performances."

In order to acquaint those who wish to tryout with the nature of the play, W. C. Troutman, dramatic coach who has twice before supervised the play at the University of Illinois, has placed copies on reserve at the desk of the university library.

DEFINITE PLANS FOR EMBARKATION NOW COMPLETE

Principal European Cities Included in Itinerary for Coming Summer

BY GEORGE GALATTI
The Men's Glee Club will sing for Europe!

The completion of final preparations was announced yesterday by Carlton H. Johns '27, business manager, for a summer European tour by the university Men's Glee club which will include the principle cities of western Europe, giving Europeans an opportunity to hear the songs of Wisconsin and to feel at first hand the spirit of our university.

The receipt of three telegrams from the Glee Club's agent in New York City yesterday, confirmed the fact that passage had been booked and the dates of sailing established.

The plans as announced set the date of embarkation for June 25, 1927, on the Red Star line steamship, Belenland. After the completion of the tour the club is to make its return journey Aug. 10 on the S. S. Pennland.

Prof. Swinney, conductor of the club, in a statement yesterday said that it was his intention to choose the 32 best voices from the concert clubs of the past three years to compose the personnel of the club which will make the tour.

Definite arrangements have been made by the Glee Club's agents in London for the establishment of its European itinerary which is intended to include the principal cities of north-western Europe. The cities decided upon to date are: London, Oxford, Cambridge, Birmingham, Manchester, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Ostend, Brussels, Paris, and The Hague.

Arrangements are being made at the present time to book several concerts to be sung on the trip from Madison to the port of embarkation. These appearances will be made in Cleveland, Ohio; Rochester, N. Y.; and in New York City.

The establishment of the European tour by the glee club will not in any way alter the regular plans for the Club's annual mid-western tours to be held in the spring. Announcement of the spring itinerary will be made later.

FAMOUS SCULPTOR TO TALK TONIGHT

Lorado Taft to Supplement Lecture With Actual Demonstration

The lecture which Lorado Taft is to give tonight at Music hall under the auspices of the Arden club, promises to be one of the most entertaining and instructive of the year. Mr. Taft has a wealth of experience at his command from which to draw his material. This, coupled with the fact that he is an accomplished speaker, alive, full of humor and spontaneity, will no doubt please the most critical audience. As an added feature, Mr. Taft will have with him Carl Mose, one of his most capable protégés, who will demonstrate upon the stage the actual sculptural processes discussed. This will, in effect, bring a sculptor's studio right before the audience.

Mr. Mose will build up a bust, and bring out the problems of features, proportions and expressions. With deft fingers and sweeping strokes he will make rapid changes in the head and show transitions from youth to old age with occasional and diverting digressions.

OTTO SPEAKS FOR MORE NATURALISM

"Adventure of Detachment" Subject of Wednesday Afternoon Address

"The ability to take things in an unconventional way, and to turn them upside down and deliberately misunderstand them, is the most healing and most practical form of detachment we may find in our modern world." This was the argument which Prof. M. C. Otto of the Philosophy department developed in an inspiring lecture on "The Adventure of Detachment" yesterday afternoon in Lathrop parlors at the program of the University Lecturers committee.

"The only method of finding rest and peace," Prof. Otto explained, "is the ability to detach ourselves into another kind of life and to find satisfaction there." He outlined three methods of detachment from the material things of life before presenting his own conclusions.

Retirement from actual life at intervals to contemplate on the universal meaning of things and to get the light of life is a fine thing," he said, "but it is not practical for a great many of us. The permanent detachment from material problems of George Santayana to consider the three fundamentals, the good, the true, and the beautiful, is a worthy ideal; but it can only be that to the majority who must busy themselves securing the wherewithal of living.

"Detachment cannot be a walk in gaway from life, but detachment in life," he continued. "The suggestion of Emerson that we go to nature and relieve ourselves there of our knapsack of care opens to use entire world in which to find peace and rest."

Prof. Otto referred to Overstreet's volume on "Influencing Human Behavior," in which is developed in a charming way the medicinal power of laughter.

This is the last of the Wednesday afternoon programs before Christmas. On January 12th they will be continued when Profs. Vasilev and Gilen will repeat the recital which they presented to the seniors last year.

PROF. OGG CALLED TO EDUCATIONAL MEETING

FOREST PRODUCTS LAB PROVES ITS VALUE TO WOOD INDUSTRY

"Despite the fact that the present age is characterized as one of steel and cement," says a report on Commercial Forestry, issued by the department of Natural Resources of the National Chamber of Commerce, "wood retains its place of leadership in human economy . . . But to make way for agriculture and other land uses, the original area has been reduced to 47 million acres, . . . a small reserve if we continue to use it without adequate renewal."

The Forest Product Laboratory is a unit in the Branch of Research of the United States Department of Agriculture, though it is run in cooperation with the university. Its purpose is to conserve American forests by developing the most economical methods of converting standing trees to finished timber as well as being of instructional service to its students.

Although it is one of the least familiar departments of the university, as far as the "general campus" is concerned, it has already shown itself to be of remarkable efficiency, both in its work as a school and its research.

This is very practically attested to in a letter to the laboratory which reads "A man who attended one of these classes two years ago reported that his company, as a result of the information gained in the laboratory courses, has benefitted to the extent of $50,000." A student, an agent of a steering-wheel manufacturing company, estimated that the week-long Glue course will save his company the sum of $300 a day!

The laboratory manages a log yard, which receives the wood brought for experimental purposes, stores them until needed, and cuts them in an electrically-driven sawmill, into the proper sizes for testing. "This log yard," says the department bulletin, "has probably stored in it from time to time, more species of wood than any other log yard in the world."

Classes are conducted in various subjects such as Wood preservation, Fireproofing, Pulp and paper making, utilization of Waste and various other practical applications of the subject. The laboratory has done considerable work on coatings used on airplane propellers, and has developed several specifications which have been since adopted by the Army and Navy aircraft bureaus.

"The Forest Products Laboratory was established in 1910 by the University Forest Service at Madison, in cooperation with the university. For several years it was the only institution of its kind in the world, conducted with the object of research in wood and its uses, and making the information thus obtained available to public and individual uses."

ILLUSTRATION TO AID LORADO TAFT'S SPEECH

Mr. Taft will then take up the trials and perplexities of marble cutting, the use of the pointing instrument, and will introduce the audience to a few triumphs of the sculptor's art.

Tickets for the lecture are now on sale at the Bascom hall Rotunda, and will be on sale at the door tonight. The general admission is seventy-five cents, and reserved seats one dollar. Gressions.

He spent last spring in Washington working on the research, and after its completion it will be published by the American Council of Learned societies and the Carnegie corporation.

TRAINING TABLE TIPS

Who's Good?

Rollie Goes into Action.

Indiana in a Different Role.

The frosh and the varsity played a lot of basketball, not to mention boxing, wrestling and a few other indoor sports, in the Gym last night. The varsity won—they would—but they were at a time fully aware of the presence of the five yearlings who opposed them.

Say what you will about the brilliance of varsity newcomers, there was a notable change in the direction of battle when some of last season's veterans sifted into the fray. Charlie Andrews and Louie Behr, for floorwork and basket-shooting, are about all one should ask for this early in the season.

Doc Meanwell had a plan carefully worked out for running in new men every ten, fifteen, and twenty minutes, but the unruly frosh just wouldn't wait; they insisted on either leading the score or having the best Badgers in against them.

On his evening's work, Andrews rates an invitation to join the Hiking club. Charlie couldn't get away from shuffling his feet when he had the ball, and for this little illegality he paid numerous penalties.

Folsom, the blonde freshman forward, is a speedy boy. You could count the mir-ups he didn't get into on the thumbs of one hand, and he had the two varsity guards more than worried throughout the affair.

Likewise, the yearling guards were pretty crafty. They held up the Badger scoring works considerably during the first ten minutes of play and continued to guard their basket more or less effectively all through the scrimmage.

Rollie Barnum strengthened the varsity attack perceptibly when he entered the game. Rollie appears to be his old clear-headed self on the basketball floor, which is similar to saying that he will prove a valuable member of the Wisconsin quintet.

Not a Wisconsin man—in case you care—is included on the Big Ten all-American honor roll. We suspect treachery here, but maybe it's just another misunderstanding.

Indiana may not be so much in a football suit, but when she rigs out in a set of Crimson shorts and poses with a round leather ball under one arm, the rest of the conference teams start feverishly digging up material. The Hoosiers have Beckner, Kreuger, and Sibley to make passes at the championship with this season. Unless something goes wrong, that four-cornered tie with Iowa, Michigan, Purdue and Indiana included, is going to undergo a lot of unification.

Michigan has another team that will take a lot of beating. The Wolverines always manage to get five giants together and teach them enough basketball to make them going tough for their opponents.

Four New Members Chosen to Act on Disciplinary Board

The new disciplinary committee which has been in process of selection during the past two months, now contains four of the five faculty members who will comprise its personnel. The 11th is to be appointed by President Glenn Frank, and inquiries yesterday failed to reveal when the appointment will be made.

The four members of the committee, W. H. Kieckhofer and N. Cameron, elected in October by the student body, and W. H. Twenhoorn and E. M. Fred, elected by the faculty last Monday,

WISCONSIN WINTER PROGRAM IS ONE OF MOST EXTENSIVE IN COUNTRY

Taking advantage of her strategic situation on the hill's bordering Lake Mendota, the university has developed during the winter months an outdoor athletic program as intensive and far-reaching as that of any other college in the country, and has unquestionably become the recognized leader of the Middle West in winter sports. King Winter has looked with favor upon the Badger northmen this year, as the lake has already frozen over, the earliest closing of the waters in the past 30 years.

With Lake Mendota a solid sheet of ice, and her sloping shores blanketed with a heavy snow, Wisconsin's Winter Sport program bids fair to assume greater proportions than ever before. Hockey has become the most popular of the cold weather activities, due chiefly to the three-cornered relationship between Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. The puck chasers of these three prominent members of the Big Ten engage in home and home matches each year, and the attendance is increasing annually.

Although Cardinal fans have gone wild over the speedy ice game, which has a natural environment at Madison, skiing, skating, tobogganing and ice-boating come in for their share of popularity. These sports are handled mainly on an Intramural basis, so that the benefits therefrom are gained by hundreds of men and women students.

Ice Carnivals are sponsored by the Badger athletic department each winter, and prizes awarded in such events as ice-boat racing, skating, skating sprints, and long distance skating. The Wisconsin Ski Club, a University organization, represents the Badgers in several meets each winter. They are already making plans to enter the tournament at Cary, Illinois, and Westby, Wisconsin, with tryouts to be held again for the Lake Placid New York Meet the first of the year.

The showing of the Wisconsin contingent at Lake Placid last winter was exceptional. Hans Troye was high-point scorer in the Harding trophy competition, while Leon Emmert won the half mile skating event. Knute Dahl topped the seven mile cross-country ski race, with Troye finishing second. The latter also won the ski jump and was largely responsible to the placing of the Badger team in a tie with New Hampshire University for first place.

The two high teams in each division will bowl in the finals which will start immediately after the Christmas vacation.

St. Louis to a meager thirteen last Saturday, are pointing for the Washash game here December 13 and the tilt with Notre Dame on the home court, Decembr 20.

Although the caliber of the opposition was not especially high, the Iowa squad executed floor plays with good early season precision and looped baskets from all angles. Coach Barry twice bench-ed his entire first team and sent in the seconds to carry the battle, Captain Hogan and McConnell, one of the smoothest pair of guards in the middle west, tied up the St. Louisans time after time. Indications are that the Hawkeyes will have a dependable center for Wilcox, sophomore, registered thirteen points and consistently won the tip-off.

To maintain the winning streak on the home court is the aim of the Iowans.

VARSITY QUINTET DEFEATS FROSH BY 46 TO 25 SCORE

Occasional Class of Yearlings Outshore by Experience of Regulars

Stronger than the first time they beat the Frosh, the Wisconsin varsity basketball quint, nevertheless, still showed some rough spots in their play in trimming the first year men in the second open practice game 46-25 played at the armory yesterday afternoon.

Coach "Doc" Meanwell demonstrated ably that he has several men fighting for each position on his team when he alternated forward and guard combinations frequently during the course of the contest with few hitches in the team play resulting.

At the forward berths he has a quartet of harping basketeers in Powers, Behr, Andrews, and Nelson. In the game yesterday Nelson and Behr showed better fighting form than the other pair in leading the varsity scoring with eight points each.

Tenhopen and Kowalczyk, the skyscraping rivals for the varsity pivot position, again gave a very even performance yesterday, leaving as they did the first games, doubt as to which is the better man. Both will see plenty of Big Ten work though during the course of the season. Kowalczyk rung a pair of field goals while his rival was snagging a lone goal in the game. Each of the men got the ball for their team off the jump and will both be able to well fill the weak spot of last year's team.

Merkel, Hotchkiss, and Barnum all had plenty of time to perform at the guard positions and each came through in a very creditable fashion. To place either one of these three men above the others would be dangerous as well as foolish as they rate just about on a par. Barnum, in the time he was in the game looped four field goals, and Hotchkiss three. While Merkel did not enter the scoring column he did as pretty a bit of guarding as could be desired.

In Stotts and Doyle, Coach Meanwell has an additional guard due of real ability, that should be easily capable of filling either of the guard positions in the event that Merkel, Hotchkiss or Barnum should be forced to the bench. In yesterday's games both these men, new to varsity competition, filled their places with ease. For the Frosh it may be said that they were a good deal stronger than the first time they played the big gym floor in open competition. They guarded closer and managed to get into positions for more shots at the basket. Only their weakness in making the shot after getting the ball in position kept them from keeping real close upon the scoring heels of the regulars.

Folsom, right forward, and Foster, center, on the Frosh played stellar ball. Both entered the scoring with a pair of field goals against the varsity. Folsom has speed along with an eye for finding the basket while Foster has a height that makes the ball readily accessible while near or under the basket. He did a big share in stopping the varsity offensive drives in addition to looping a field goal and a pair of free tosses.

Starting off in the opening minutes of the game the Frosh five rushed the ball up the floor for a couple of field goals, and shortly after scored with a penalty toss, bringing their point total to five. This was before the varsity got oriented though, as a moment later when the crimson side started its offensive the score was speedily run up to 14-6 in their favor, the first year men being held to a lone free throw while the regulars were scoring six field goals and a pair of free throws.

Bracing at this point, the frosh in the next fifteen minute period scored nine points against their opponents' two, following which the two teams played along about even, making point almost for point, until the game ended 46-25 in the Varsity's favor.</

A Lesson From Norway

Norway, after experimenting with liquor control for very near a century has abandoned the prospect of continued government control of prohibition.

At the outbreak of the war Norway was exposed more to the exactions of prohibition than at any other time in the history of the country. By a decree the sale of liquor having a content of more than 12 per cent was forbidden. From then on the smuggling and home manufacture evils grew to troublesome proportions. Two years later prohibition was established as permanent by federal law.

In 1924 more than 600,000 quarts of liquor were taken from smugglers attempting to get the liquor into the country. Estimates placed the amount of liquor actually admitted to the country by smugglers' methods at being nine times this much.

Family life, as a protest against what it termed to be governmental tyranny, distilled liquors at home in quantities, thus equalizing any efficiency shown by the measures taken against smuggling. The Norwegian people were evidently in error in their acceptance of the prohibition law, for in a nationwide vote taken this fall Norway voted itself in favor of unrestraint by a large majority. And in its stead the policy of local option is to be established. For the next five years liquor is to be sold only in those districts that voted wet in this referendum, and each three years local referendums will be held to determine what the will is for the next three years.

Norway's experience with prohibition has shown the evils of an enforced program of government regulation. That this regulation merely causes further disregard of law which is unbecoming to any country.

Norway's experiences might be given serious consideration in the United States. Certainly prohibition has earned a contempt from the masses; moderation might be reached by abolishing the much-disputed amendment and substituting local referendum and determination.

The Blacksmith Forges Another Shackle

As a very important part in his campaign against birth control, Premier Mussolini by a decree law, approved by the council of ministers, imposes a tax upon all bachelors in Italy.

With a charitableness not wholly characteristic of the despot, he states that the proceeds of the bachelor tax will be turned over to the National Institute for the Protection of Motherhood and Childhood.

In a statement given to the press Mussolini says in regard to the law, "The state intervenes in this matter because one of the most characteristic points of the Fascist state is to give judicial sanction to moral duties when the people refuse to accept them of their own free will."

This latest infringement upon the individual rights of the citizens of Italy carries with it a distinct international menace which suggests strongly the ulterior purpose behind the Premier's action. Not content with forcing prescriptions and limitations of a Fascist government upon the Italian people, he has sought to increase the birth rates by forced means.

Italy as she now stands evidently does not satisfy the adventurer when gauged in terms of man power. No doubt he has dreams of foreign conquest, of spreading the doctrines of Fascism over the world. He also realizes that to accomplish this end a great man power will be necessary.

Pitiable indeed is the nation or people which needs to rely on a government whose fundamental principle states; "... the government gives judicial sanction to moral duties when the people refuse to accept them of their own free will." Who, can anyone tell, are the officials of the Fascist government that they are so fitted as to prescribe for the needs of an entire people? What form of despotism is it that tells a nation what entertainment it is to partake of and whether or not the marriage state is fitted to the individual? The Italia citizenry can no longer vote for a person of its own choice nor can it voice its protest through the medium of economic strike or boycott. Just how long this practice of usurping individual rights can go on is a question not wholly of international disinterest.

Opera in Madison—and Elsewhere

And there shall be opera in Madison. Incongruous as it may sound, such was the case last Monday night when Mario Chamlee and Ruth Miller sang in the second Union Board concert of the season. The Union Board is to be congratulated for having secured Mr. Chamlee and Miss Miller on such short notice. And the artists are to be congratulated for their excellent program, which included three numbers from popular operas, one in costume.

Music lovers who braved the snow and the cold, thinking that they were to hear a substitute program, went away charmed and completely satisfied. Even the unpleasantness of the barnyard surroundings was forgotten at the beginning of the last number, the St. Sulpice scene from "Manon."

The lights were flashed out, and the stage, illuminated by spotlights, stood out like a classic theater. The rows of concrete benches on either side formed a part of the stage setting. We did not know a barn could be made so beautiful. Then Mr. Chamlee stepped out and began the famous aria. As his voice swelled and his acting indicated the mental struggle which this part portrays, the audience sat tense. And at the end of the duet Mr. Chamlee and Miss Miller were called back time and time again.

To those who have seen little opera this form of entertainment is a treat; and to the opera-goer it presents a tantalizing taste of the music and acting that make the opera one of the finest of the arts. The Chicago Civic Opera has been in full sway for several weeks. It will offer one of the most inviting forms of entertainment for the Christmas holidays. This weekend they will come to Milwaukee, which is even closer.

The concert brought back memories of the opera at Raynham, where the Chicago company holds forth all during the summer in the open air pavilion. Martinelli, Ina Bourskaya, Edward Johnson, Elizabeth Rethberg, Chamlee, and Raisa are only a few of the intriguing names that grace the programs. Just at dusk, with the Japanese lanterns swinging from rustic beams, and the shadow of the director reflected across the ceiling like a giant spider, the orchestra crashes, and the curtain goes up. Before the eyes of the audience all the pageantry of the ages; and the music an acting of the greatest singers in America prove the statement that "once an opera-goer, always an opera-goer."

Futile as it may be to praise the opera here in a mid-western town not large enough to support a civic orchestra, the fact remains that Chicago maintains one of the few large opera companies in the country. And Chicago is only four hours distant.

Thank You, Faculty

A petition, after being signed by some 700 students pleading for a change in the dates set for the annual Christmas recess, was submitted to the faculty body which met Monday afternoon. After much discussion in student circles in respect to whether or not attention would be paid to the plea, considerable doubt was rife in regard to the probable attitude of that body. The proposed change would necessitate the shearing off of one half-day of school sessions from the year's calendar. Yet in spite of this inconvenience the plea of the petition was granted. The student body has been spared the inconvenience of a tardy vacation.

Good morning, dear readers, here we are again. Thought we had left you, huh? Oh no, we just gave Little Boy Blue his chance last Thursday.

We heard a good riddle from the Sigma Pi boys the other day. What is it that stands in a stall, eats hay, has four feet, and sees equally well at both ends? Answer—a blind horse.

We've been seeing all our old friends of late, bidding them good bye for Christmas. For instance, we were with Hard Hearted Hannah the dernier Sunday. (My dear, surely remember her!) and she told us this one: "My I kiss you?" he asked. "No," she says, "I'm beautiful but numb." Nothing personal about this, you understand.

Poet: (Seeing for the first time a Rocketeer) "My God! Is this the face that launched a thousand quips?"

Benito is so funny, and so apt. He calls the Readers Say So column the University Shooting Gallery.

Sunday I called up one of the girls, and asked her if she would like to see a certain movie. "I'm sorry," she said, "but I've seen it."

"How was it?" "Not so good." "It's too bad you've seen it," I said. "I thought that maybe we could go and suffer together." "What?" she came back, "supper?"

A POEM
We needs must burst into poetry. Garibaldi offers a polyphonic prose poem entitled Kismet. "There was a simple country lad, whose name was Nicolaus. He came to collitch, and he learned, there is no Santy Claus. Now, when his little dream was cracked, he knew not what to do. Then the damful tried his hand at love, and now he's feeling blue." All of which proves that a woman is a darn poor substitute for Santy.

Readers' Say-So

HITS HOME EC "HELL WEEK"

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

As long as the spotlight of student opinion seems to be turned on the parts of the university that seem out of date, or that never were in date, I am going to write of something that I have not heard a good word for yet, and incidentally plenty of bad words.

There happens to be a course or two in the department of home economics where the students live for a week during the course in a practice cottage, where they are supposed to learn what the typical family does in its home life, and how to do things scientifically around the home. But if life were anywhere near like that cottage for married people, I am sure a home of my own is the last thing I should ever want.

It seems a pity that such an important subject as the scientific management of the home can not be taught in an interesting and useful way, and mos of all, making it a thing to look forward to, instead of making it appear as about the hardest work a person could do.

What kind of teaching is it in a progressive university when all the girls taking a particular course are required to wear themselves out at such a place, and go to school at the same time? It is not just a matter of keeping house in an economical way because that is possible. I have friends who are keeping house and going to school at the same time, and are thriving on it. But it is a question of rising every morning at 6:30 o'clock, getting all the meals during the day, keeping the entire house clean, changing the furniture around once or twice a week to see the effect, entertaining at a formal dinner on a school night, entertaining at tea on a school afternoon, washing and ironing all the house linen each week, doing the mending, and various odds and ends every evening until nine or after, and on top of that, being subject to a line of critta Claus—and more, one is as disappointing as the other.

Ah, yes, I'm a misogynist, but women have made me that way, despite the fact that I'm a self-made man.

We heard Chamlee sin out at the Cow Castle Monday night. Waiting all remarks about the program, one thing we can invariably say is that every time we go out to that big, bleak place we get cold feet.

May we offer for your delectation Benito's masterpiece? It is an ode to a stock pavilion that is trying to be an opera house. It has been brilliantly named "Tuxedo's Last Strand," or "Why Cows Leave Home." Hold your breath:

The undergrads come to the In tuxes and in spats. They wade thru aisles of sawdust, And sit down on wooden collars, As though it were a ball, Accounted like a Christmas Tree, In this odesiferous hall. Many of blooded heifer Has had its prizely dish, In this great hall, where now the boys Are draped in Soup and Fish. The white shirt fronts, the cut-a-ways, The studs, the silk, the lace, Have scared the bovine boarders From their exhibition place.

"Ah," said the fool to the king, "Life is but a jest, and we are merely gestures." And "Ah," says we, "that's jest it."

"S'no Lie." The snow is up within the trees, the snow is on the ground, The snow is here, the snow is there, the snow is all around.

The oldest gag the instructors have: "I haven't seen the exam, but—"

He: "What is the plural of octopus, octopuses or octopi?" She: (Surprised, but ingenious) "Octies."

GERIBALDI and BENITO.

icism at all times, particularly at noon when their notable dean honors them with her presence. Four girls have to do all this for themselves and the two instructors who live and eat there with them. And they are expected to keep all their school work during that week. The university is trying to make the "hell weeks" at the fraternities and sororities easier, but he is one of their own making that equals any that the students put on. The girls come out of this week all worn out. It takes some of hem a week or two to get back to normal again.

I wonder just what love and joy of home life such a course develops. It is a pity that the Department of Home Economics at the University of Wisconsin can be interested in that phase, even though they do disregard the physical well-being of their victims, the students. A little humanizing would probably be a good thing.

When this letter is read, I suppose the teachers responsible for this course will ask their students if they are being over-worked. They will probably say no, because they have to get a grade out of the course, but what they say when they are through, to each other, is a horse of a different color.

A FRIEND OF SEVERAL VICTIMS

DISAGREES WITH JACK '30
Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

I suggest that Jack '30 should change his description of co-eds from "My Impression of Co-eds" to "My Illusions About Co-eds."

Frankly, Jack, you have a bad case of homesick ataxia. You certainly cannot have been away from home before. You come here to the university and for the first time you are thrown into what seems an indifferent world. Immediately you begin to take out your spite on co-eds. You think that in your first few months at the university you should become as intimately acquainted with the better sex as you were when you left high school in Podunk.

But that is unfair. You are comparing a four year's friendship (Continued on page five)

Readers' Say-So

Don't worry, Jack, the co-eds are all right. When will you learn that human personality is too eternal to be changed by a short skirt, a fur coat, and a cocked hat?

Indulge in your homesickness, Jack, play "Home Sweet Home" frequently, and you may live through it all. You may even learn to understand the mystery of a co-ed's heart; but in the meantime don't work off your grudge on our Wisconsin women.

JACK IZZA PREVARICATOR.

YES, BISHOP BROWN; NO, BISHOP BROWN

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

Bishop Brown in his preaching of facts rather than faith is doing a great good. To the educated, it seems a pity that so many still "believe" and yet have the sufficient background to avail themselves of salvation—the salvation of clear thinking. Therefore, when men like Bishop Brown bring to the people a religion of sense rather than faith, it is a soothing balm to those who have already reached truth and profited by it.

This country needs, not a good five cent cigar, but a half dozen Bob Ingersolls. The Bishop Brown would have made a fine member of this mythical six had he started work in his younger days.

But Bishop Brown has a fly in his ointment of constructive skepticism, and that fly is communism. Had it not been for this, the Bishop might speak to larger houses—and do more good—in the interests of the fight against the many foolish superstitious beliefs now extant. The new religion—scientific humanism—might have been his big point—his big message to the people.

As it is, however, we must say "Yes" to his religion, and, on the other hand, "No" to his communism.

A PLEA TO THE FACULTY

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

Will the faculty decide in favor of the petition and the student body? That is the question that is being asked by thousands of Wisconsin students. There appears to be only two logical reasons for not giving the desired answer. They are: (1) that the required school hours would be shortened by a half day; and (2) that the old question of traveling on Sunday would be raised.

In regard to the first objection, I see no remedy except by making it up later in this semester or next. If we were asking for a day, or a day and a half off, our demands might seem unreasonable; but the loss of only a half day does not sound so terrible in comparison to the many advantages of these new dates. In answer to the second objection, I don't believe that many students would be held over in Madison because of poor train connections and religious reasons. If one only stops to figure it out, although these new dates are primarily to give us a more logical arrangement, they do add two extra days to our vacation (including three weekends). This being the case, if students are held over for a few hours or even a day, they would still have as long a vacation as the present dates now give them.

As I understand it, several years ago, an article was printed in this paper to the effect that if Christmas fell towards the end of the week, school would be closed the preceding week. This has been carried out within the last two years, when Christmas has come on Thursday and Friday, but is it being put into effect this year. The vacation ruling, as it now stands, states that if Christmas falls on Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, school will be closed the preceding Wednesday noon, if it comes on Thursday or Friday, school will be closed the preceding Friday noon. It hardly seems fair to the students and faculty, who are also anxious for a vacation, to expect them to go to school right up to within two and one half days before Christmas. Why not make an amendment to this present regulation to the effect that if Christmas falls on Saturday noon.

What are the advantages of these new dates? There are many, but the main ones are: that everyone is able to reach home several days before the Dec. 25, thus avoiding the arrival of some students the day before Christmas or even Christmas eve; that the students and faculty are given a chance to get rested and adjusted before the big day with its many gifts and big dinner; that the majority of students are permitted to reach home in time to do most of their Christmas shopping and package sending—what student has time to do these things up here and still do their school work justice?; that the students are given a time to help at home, help with the last minute details and purchases; that everyone arrives home in time to get into the Christmas spirit—the greatest and most inspiring spirit of the year; and that the students and faculty will be able to enter into the pre-Christmas festivities.

The failure or success of this petition now rests in the hands of the faculty; Oh, Faculty! Can't you see that the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages?

Alumni Briefs

Perhaps the most exotic task that has ever been assigned to an alumnus is the work of William Penn Collins '96, an attorney of Boulder, Colorado, who was recently appointed by Bishop Frank Rice of the Liberal church as the "bishop of righteous hell."

Mr. Collins' work will consist in locating and defining the region known as hell. Bishop Rice believes that "if hell can be located and defined it may be possible to make it a more comfortable place in which to exist." Collins has not as yet announced a plan of action in the hell crusade.

Restrict Corn Shipments To Check Borer Plague
At the request of the state departments of agriculture of Wisconsin, Illinois, and Iowa, several changes have been made in the regulations governing the shipment of corn from the states infested with the European corn borer.

Heretofore shelled corn could be shipped out of the infested area and stalks could be shipped after inspection by federal authorities. Under the regulation which has just gone into effect, ear corn and stalks cannot be shipped under any conditions and inspection and certification are required for shelled corn and the seed of broom corn.

Provision is also made for the inspection of certain flowers and other plants and for their disinfection when such treatment will eliminate the risk of carrying the European corn borer.

This insect now exists in the states of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and West Virginia. The new quarantine greatly extends the quarantine area in order to include the districts found infested this past summer.

RADICAL TO TALK HERE NEXT WEEK

Scott Nearing to Speak to Student Forum

Scott Nearing, prominent radical lecturer who will speak in Music Hall, Thursday, December 16, has announced for the subject of his talk, "Whither America."

Mr. Nearing has long been associated with the Socialist movement and has been lecturing on progressive social and economic subjects ever since he was dismissed from Pennsylvania University as a professor of Economics there. It was largely due to his strong views on the capitalistic system, that he was asked not to continue teaching at that institution. Last year the University of Minnesota refused permission for him to deliver an address there. Partly because of his wide popularity among college liberals and partly to keep alive Wisconsin's reputation as a university of free ideas and untrammelled thought, the Student Forum is bringing him here this year.

Mr. Nearing is now taking a trip across the continent and speaking at nearly every stop. He started at Los Angeles and will end in New York sometime in January. Large-ly because of his interest in college audiences he chose Madison instead of Milwaukee for December 16, for he speaks in St. Paul the day before and in Chicago the day after. The financial remunerations from a trip such as this are not great, but the cause he speaks for, "Whither America," is his greatest concern.

The Nearing meeting in Music Hall will be the last meeting of Student Forum before the holidays. The Forum is hoping to bring more speakers of national fame to lead the meetings to be held next year.

Bloom Lectures on the Indian Lore of the Southwest

"Racial contact between the Spaniard and the Indian occurred four hundred years ago, and both have received benefits from the association. Each has contributed to the common culture of the southwest."

So declared Mr. Lansing Bloom in the course of an illustrated lecture on the "Indian and Spaniard in the Southwest," delivered under the auspices of the Archaeological Institute of America at 4:30 o'clock yesterday in Bascom hall.

Mr. Bloom is affiliated with a research school in Santa Fe where he dabbles in the lore of the southwest. He showed that where the Indian had tobacco and corn, it was not until the coming of the Spaniard that cereals and vegetables were farmed.

His lecture was interspersed with illustrated slides, some showing the locations he was discussing, and others indicating the expanse of country.

DEMAND FOR BOYS' LEADERS GROWS

University Y. M. C. A. Gives
Unique Training in Lead-

A growing demand for boys' leaders in Madison has caused the University Y. M. C. A. to take an active part in training and supplying them. Under a committee by Harry Parish '27, the university Y is enlisting interested men, and in cooperation with the city Y. M. C. A. and the churches of Madison, is doing commendable work for the boys of this city.

"The aim of the program," C. V. Hibbard, secretary of the university Y said, "is to provide the best leadership for the Madison boys, and to provide the best technique for university men."

who are engaged in this work meet under the supervision of Frank Cockrell, boy's work secretary of the City Y. M. C. A. to help perfect the "technique" of working with boys. Mr. Hibbard pointed out that no matter where the graduate who has done some of this supervised boy's work may go after graduation, he will find that it is an extremely valuable asset.

The course outlined for the training of these men has been undertaken with the advice of professors in the Department of Education. Those assisting Mr. Parish are Cecil Matlaf '29, and Walter Rogers '29.

ZONING STUDIED BY SMITH ABROAD

Professor's Investigation of City Planning in Japan
Proves Interesting

City planning and zoning methods in Japan are being investigated by Prof. Leonard S. Smith, of the department of highway engineering and city planning of the university, who is spending some time in the Orient during a semester's leave of absence.

Something of his findings is told in a letter, written from Nara, Shimonoseki, Japan, on Nov. 9, to Dean F. E. Turneaure of the College of Engineering. He writes:

"My trip is near at hand, on y three days more, as I sail on Nov. 13.

"The month's stay in Japan has been most profitable and pleasant. I have made detailed studies of town planning of Yokohama, Tokyo, Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto. Everywhere I have been received, much to my surprise, as a national guest. The Government Railroad Minister has given me a pass on all the railroads and the Tokyo Institute of Municipal Research has sent an expert with me on my trip around the country who has made all arrangements and introductions. I have lectured at Osaka, the largest city in Japan, and at Kobe besides two lectures in Tokyo. In every case I have had splendid interpreters and a most intelligent audience.

"Zoning here is as widely used as in U. S. and the widening of streets and the building of new streets very much more common than in U. S. In fact, city planning is on a much more expert and practical basis than in most American cities. I have secured a valuable supply of maps, pictures and lantern slides for my Wisconsin students, most of which I am expressing directly to the university as they are too heavy for me to carry.

"We return to Tokyo on Nov. 11. In the evening I give a round table talk to the staff of the Institute of Municipal Research composed of about 30 people. This Institute has been especially kind in compiling statistics of traffic and also vital statistics, showing the housing condition. I have been shown through the worst slums possible, always with a policeman conductor.

"I have been invited by the mayor and the Ministry of Education to give a lecture in Tokyo on Nov. 12, on Town Planning, with special reference to the city's reconstruction. I have a letter from the chief City Engineer of Tokyo saying he was to interpret my talk."

Builders of a National business

Operating more than three hundred stores, throughout the East and middle West, the Kresge chain constitutes a great national merchandising institution.

The remarkable success of the S. S. Kresge Company will be surpassed by still greater growth. New stores are frequently being added. These require experienced managers—competentmen, Kresge-trained.

There are now a limited number of openings in the Kresge organization for young men—college men—to learn every phase of this great national merchandising business, from the ground up. The men who start now will be in line for future managerships with excellent opportunities to make money for themselves.

This is an opportunity well worth considering. If you are interested, send today for an application blank. We will then arrange for a personal interview with one of our representatives who has already found success in the Kresge organization.

"I was graduated from Indiana University (1912) with the degree L.L.B., and practiced law for a period of two years upon the natives of the Hoosier State.

"Through the manager of the Kresge store in Muncie, I learned the history of the Company, its rapid growth, its prospects for future growth and the possibilities it offered to young men with ambition, energy and an earnest desire to succeed.

"I joined the Kresge Company because I found that a mercantile life appealed to me, that the prospects for financial remuneration were much greater than in the field I had previously chosen, that the opportunities for advancement would be limited only by the efforts put forth. I have never regretted the step made at that time.

"I am thoroughly sold on my company today. The opportunities now are greater than ever before, the field for advancement unlimited to those who earnestly apply themselves."

PUNKIN HOLLER TO STAGE PLAYS

Plan Presentation for Annual Celebration in Ag Hall Friday

The "Punkin Holler Celebration" will be held Friday, Dec. 10, in the auditorium of Ag hall. The program will consist of two one-act plays, "The Brink of Silence" and "The Trysting Place," both by Booth Tarkington. Music will be furnished by the Short Course orchestra, and the Short Course Glee club will give a number between plays. A special dance act will be staged by the Home Ec. girls. There will also be community singing and a dialogue and stunt with the characters taken from the Short group.

This celebration has been a yearly event for several years. It originated five years ago when the Agricultural triangl and the Eu-thenics club gave an entertainment, in connection with community extension work, for Punkin Hollow community near Toten Creek in this vicinity. The program was put on to show a rural community what can be done in the line of entertainment with minimum expenditure and little equipment. It was so popular that the celebration has been continued in the university.

According to the regular custom, the refreshments will be pumpkin pie.

Tickets can be bought Wednesday and Friday at the desks in the lobbies of Ag hall, the Home Economics building, and Bascom hall. Price of admission is 35 cents.

Initiation of 46 Members to Honor Fraternity Held

Initiation for the 45 undergraduate members and the initiation of Hans-Dreisch as honorary member into Phi Kappa Phi, honorary scholarship - activities fraternity, was held last night at the University club. A banquet preceded the initiation ceremony at which C. F. Roe, president of the society, presided.

Dean Roe explained the election of members to the fraternity as being based primarily upon scholarship. The members are chosen from the upper fourth of the senior class which necessitates a minimum average of 88 per cent. In addition to this the activities record of the student is considered, as well as his apparent ability and endeavor.

Prof. Dreisch contrasted the educational systems and the universities of Germany and of America in his address which was the feature of the evening.

"The two systems are totally different from the high school page through to the end of the university career. The graduate of the German high school or gymnasium corresponds in learning the American junior. Actually there is no comparison between the two as the German university, with its single purpose of particular scholarship, has no real undergraduates in the American sense. It is all a vast graduate school."

PROF. HIBBARD SPEAKS AT CHICAGO MEETING

"The Relation of the Farmer to the Tariff" was the subject of a speech by Prof. B. H. Hibbard, of the department of agricultural economics of the College of Agriculture, before a meeting of the agricultural editors in Chicago last week.

Professor Hibbard in his talk told how the farmer was taxed by the tariff without receiving any benefit. The tariff raises the price on the things the farmer wishes to buy, but when he comes to sell his products, he is not benefitted by the tariff on them because the tendency is to export farm products rather than to import them.

As a solution to this problem, Prof. Hibbard advocated either a gradual reduction of the tariff, or a bounty on exports, in order to increase the value of the farmer's products.

Joe Shoer's Band at Parkway Pleases Critics

By GARIBALDI

Rather than place emphasis on the main emphasis on the main picture at the Parkway this week, I should like to discuss the show as a whole. As a whole, to adopt our curricular lingo, the show averages good—the main feature being fair, the comedy good, and Joe Shoer's band excellent.

Concerning the comedy, which features Bobby Vernon, I have said enough for it is Joe Shoer who deserves the attention. His offering this time is short, snappy, and satisfying. Two numbers are especially good, "High Fever," and "Where Do You Work Now, John?". The first is all that its name implies—hectic, fast and febrile, and is a cacophonous creation of merit. (Cacophonous, you know, has recently been broadened in meaning to embrace jazz). The second is an addition to Joe's "Green Derby" repertoire. Some day I'm going to ask him where he gets all those songs, for they are clever, and always please. This new one is a medley of a dozen different airs, with a vocal addition carried on by Joe himself, and the band. It ends with the whole band saying, "Push, push, push, push," etc. It's a scream.

Although Joe Shoer has had his band only a few weeks he has done wonders with it. The fact that he is not only the conductor, but also cornet player has made his job more difficult.

"The Canadian" is a story of the wheat-fields of Canada, and is an adaption of one of Somerset Maugham's stories. I am sorry that I haven't read it, but I am sure that Maugham must have been much more deft in getting his point across than the picture is.

The acting is mediocre, especially that of the leading lady, a new one to me, Mona Palma. Tom Meighan hasn't improved upon himself of late. The directing misses out in a few places, especially in one scene in which Tom makes his first passionate advance towards his wife, with whom he has lived for weeks and weeks without the normal marital relations. The scene lacks intensity—although I am very much conscious of the fact that it may have been bowdlerized by some nincompoop censor. I may say that the picture has some possibilities, and won't bore you, and if you are a Meighan fan, you will without doubt enjoy it.
