PREFACE.

We herewith present to our patrons and the public generally our latest revision of the Madison City Directory. And knowing that the object it is designed for cannot be obtained without the utmost completeness. We have made it our earnest endeavor to fully attain all information necessary to make it complete in all respects, and now rest the work on its merits. We made every effort to procure the names, occupation and correct location of every citizen or person who would be supposed to merit recognition in its pages, thereby rendering a trustworthy guide to the public and strangers for all information that a Directory is supposed to furnish.

The general Directory contains 3500 names from which we estimate the population of the city to be 14000 based on the number of names with 4 as the ratio.

—We ask the indulgence of the public for such little imperfections or omissions as may occur, for notwithstanding the careful diligence we have exercised in compiling the large amount of promiscuous matter that it was necessary to obtain to bring the work to completion, we can lay no claim to infallibility. We only offer you our best effort in that direction and trusting it will receive the approbation we have endeavored to be worthy of, we submit it to your inspection.

MORRISSEY & BUNN.

MADISON.

The Capital of the State of Wisconsin and county seat of Dane County, lies beautifully nestled on a narrow strip of land or isthmus between two twin pearls of lakes respectively termed Third or Monona lake and Fourth or Mendota lake. Its location as a city in point of beauty is unrivalled in the state, and offers to pleasure seekers and lovers of nature attractions such as cannot be found elsewhere in the State.

The history of the City dates back to 1836 when the site was purchased with the view of locating a city here, and was laid out by J. Catlin and Moses Strong immediately after the Territorial Legislature had passed an act locating the Capital at this place. As the State advanced in population and wealth it added to its State Institutions here. A State University liberally endowed and possessed of all the facilities common to institutions of its kind, which has from time to time been the recipient of valuable additions and gifts from private parties prominent amongst which is the fine observatory, the gift of ex-Governor C. C. Washburne.

In 1860 the building of the State Hospital for the Insane was completed here and opened for the reception of the afflicted ones within the State precincts, where they receive the most careful and beneficial attention that science advises. The building is a massive structure of stone of elegant design and finish and is capable of accommodating six hundred patients, employing from 80 to 100 wardens, nurses etc.

Here too was located the Soldiers Orphan's Home which fell into disuse and was finally purchased by the Norwegian Lutheran church and is used by them as a Theological Seminary.

The Capitol occupies the most prominent position in the City, being centrally located and surrounded by a beautiful park that occupies four large blocks is plentifully shaded and laid out with graveled walks and drives. A beautiful fountain ornaments the southwest approach. The Capitol building as it now stands is an imposing structure of cut stone, three stories high surmounted by a magnificent dome and was completed in the year 1872.

In the basement is the artesian well from which flows the famous Capitol mineral water, possessing certain medical properties. The first floor is occupied by the Executive and State departments. The second floor is devoted to the two branches of the Legislature, the State Supreme Court, the State Library and the State Historical rooms, containing a valuable library and collection of antique curiosities and various articles of historical moment.

But not until one stands out on the parapet beside the massive pillars that support the dome can we realize what Mother Nature has done for Madison. The scene is of the most entrancing nature and the pen can give but a feeble description of so grand a scenic panorama as is spread broadcast before the eye. The beautiful lakes to right and left. An Eden to pleasure seekers, summer and winter dotted with spreads of canvass either sail or ice boats, rowers or skaters, all find in their season a most desirable field of enjoyment. Across the lake with the musical name—Monona—can be seen, the Lake Side Retreat, a favorite watering place where rest is sought from the hot pavements and close walls of the larger cities, during the summer months by numbers who spend their vacation here.

Across the other lake—Mendota—can be seen the Insane Asylum appearing at this distance a long gloomy line of stone walls, imprisoning such an amount of misery, that the contrast seems to pall upon the beauty of the scene. But on nearer approach, the imagination is brightened by the charming grounds and the art displayed to brighten the lives of the unfortunate inmates. It is liberally supported by appropriations from the State Legislature.

Around the Park are rows of substantial business blocks, denoting by their structure and design a healthy business growth, and with the present Railroad facilities the City bids fair to hold a high place in the rank of her sister cities in the State.

Being the Capitol of the state and possessed of the most extensive libraries in the state, it is naturally an assembling point for conventions, Literery, Scientific, Agricultural and Political. And the resort and home as a consequence of a cultured intelligent class of people. And as a city is not only the pride of its denizens but also of the whole population of the State.
