Making the first class appointments of the year, Warren Taylor, president of the junior class, announces a list of six committees to carry on the work of the class of 1922.

Although there has been some discussion in regard to abandoning the junior play this year as unpractical and unpopular, a committee headed by Robert E. KANELLOS WILL BE HELPED BY CO-ED DANCERS

Greek Receives Inspiration From Tomb of King Pyrrus

Six university women, chosen from Miss Margaret H'Doubler's classes in dancing, will take part in two of the dances in the classical division of the program to be presented by Vassos Kanellos tomorrow night.

Those chosen by Mr. Kanellos to take part in the dances are: Frances Ellen Tucker '21, Janet Epstein '21, Mira Bowles '23, Susie Fisher '21, Elizabeth Waterman '21, and Lillian Stupp, graduate. The numbers in which they will appear are a commemoration of the Spartan defeat at Thermopylae and a moonlight dance of the nymphs of Helicon at the fountain of Pegasus, the flying horse.

Mr. Kanellos gives an interesting account of how he received the inspiration for "The Faun of Arcadie" the dance which concludes his program.

During the war which wrested the northern part of Greece from the Turks, Mr. Kanellos, then a lieutenant in the Greek army, took advantage of a period of rest by excavating a great mound of stones at the town of Paramythia in northern Epirus in the locality of the ancient oracle of Godona.

Under this pile of stones, which had been built by Greeks at the time of the Turkish invasion to save ancient relics from the ravaging Turks, was found the sarcophagus, or tomb, of King Pyrrus for which German and French archeologists had long sought.

The tomb, which was made of pentelic marble, was carved with reliefs made at the time of the great sculptor Phidias. On one side was a double headed eagle with an incense bowl, the emblem of the king; on the other were fauns with flutes and dancing nymphs with a panther following.

The sight of this piece of classic art gave Mr. Kanellos the inspiration for his dance, "The Faun of Arcadie."

WHY THE UNIVERSITY ASKS $4,000,000 BUILDING APPROPRIATION

Of the $15,000,000 needed by the University of Wisconsin for running expenses and expansion in the next two years, approximately $4,000,000 will be allotted for building construction.

Expenditures for building purposes during the last three years have been comparatively small, but during the same time the university enrollment has grown from about 5,000 to more than 7,000. Indications point to an enrollment of 8,000 or more within the next few years.

Classrooms are overcrowded and additional room for equipment is needed. There has been no large classroom building constructed since the Physics and Economics building, completed in 1917. Student population has grown enormously since then. War conditions are said to have kept down building appropriations during the last few years.

Comparing Wisconsin's $4,000,000 appropriation with those being sought by other state universities for the next two years, it is found that Michigan needs $8,690,000, Ohio $3,142,000, Minnesota $3,240,000 and Illinois $2,760,000 for their building programs. In most of these institutions, and particularly at Illinois, building construction was kept up during the war to a greater extent than at Wisconsin.

MICHIGAN REPLACES OHIO ON BADGER 1921 GRID SCHEDULE

VARSITY HOLDS STIFF PRACTICE AGAINST FROSH

Meanwell Anxious to Have Large Crowd at Game Monday Night

Coach Meanwell put his varsity basketball squad through a strenuous practice yesterday afternoon and in a scrimmage against the freshmen quintet the Badgers displayed more speed and drive than they have shown in any practice this year. The defensive play of the varsity was especially strong and during the entire afternoon the regulars were only able to work the ball through the regulars for one goal.

Captain Taylor and "Rollie" Williams were in the forward positions, with Frogner at center, and Caesar, Tebell and Horne at the guards. Coach Meanwell is using this combination entirely in preparation for the first game against Knox college on Friday night. The Badgers are gradually acquiring an offense but it is not likely that Wisconsin will have a high scoring machine this season.

Chance to Watch Team

The varsity will line-up against the pick of the freshman squad in the first open practice game of the season next Monday evening. Chairs will be provided and Coach Meanwell is especially anxious that Badger basketball fans avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing the varsity five in action before the opening game on Friday. The student body knows nothing about the strength of the Badgers this year excepting for the pessimistic stories that have slipped out from behind the closed doors. There will be no admission charge.

The basketball season has started off extremely disastrously. Stars who were expected to bear the brunt of the work will be out of the game for most of the first semester. Coach Meanwell has met with discouraging misfortunes and he does not look for a championship.

Smallest Badger Team

When the Badgers take the floor against Knox college on Friday night, Wisconsin fans will see the smallest varsity team that has ever worn the cardinal suits. The heaviest man weighs only 167 pounds, while Williams, who is the lightest, weighs 152. All of the varsity players are under six feet in height.

"Rollie" Williams who is Captain Taylor's running mate is rapidly developing Coach Meanwell's style of play. Tebell, another football man, is showing up extremely well at defensive guard. "Mike" Knapp has not been in a uniform for several days and it is doubtful whether the star will be able to get into the line-up in the opening game.

SENIOR SUMMARIES CAN BE CORRECTED AT BADGER OFFICE

The Badger printing contract necessitates that senior summary material be in at an earlier time this year than last, according to Margaret Chambers '21, in charge of the senior section.

Persons who for any valid reason have been unable to send in their summaries before this are urged to do so as soon as possible. Corrections may be made or thesis titles inserted by phoning or calling at the office in the Union building any afternoon between 3:30 and 5 o'clock.

Baseball Team to Meet Six Conference Nines in 12 Games

(Special to The Daily Cardinal)
Wisconsin will play Michigan in place of Ohio State in football next fall.

This change in the usual Badger schedule was one of the results of the meeting of conference coaches held yesterday in the Auditorium hotel, Chicago. Northwestern, Illinois, Minnesota, and Chicago are again on the schedule as in the past few years.

Although Wisconsin met Michigan in both baseball and basketball last year, the two institutions have not clashed on the gridiron since before the Wolverines withdrew from the western conference. Madison old-timers last night had different recollections as to when the last game was played, but all were of the opinion that it was in either 1905 or 1906.

The schedule follows:

Oct. 15—Northwestern at Evanston.

Oct. 22—Illinois at Urbana.

Oct. 29—Minnesota at Madison.

Nov. 12—Michigan at Madison.

Nov. 19—Chicago at Chicago.

In baseball the Badger nine will meet six conference teams in 12 games. The season opens with a two day series with Indiana at Bloomington and closes with Michigan at Madison June 6. Northwestern and Chicago are teams not on last year's schedule who will be played this season. Northwestern was not represented in baseball last year and the Chicago nine canceled its Big Ten schedule after athletic authorities had arranged a trip to Japan. As in football, Ohio is not on the Badger schedule.

Northwestern and Notre Dame will be met in dual indoor track meets. The annual Illinois relays and the conference meet will be held on March 5 and March 19 respectively.

Four dual meets are on the outdoor track schedule with Chicago, Minnesota, Illinois and Northwestern furnishing the competition. The annual conference event will be at Chicago June 4.

The Badger swimming team will meet Illinois, Northwestern and Chicago in dual meets.

The schedule follows:

The Curious Cub

Today's question: "What is the students' part in securing the $15,000,000 asked by the university from the legislature?"

Susie Fisher '21: The important part, of course, of this budget, is the $4,000,000 needed for building construction. At the present time, it is impossible for the students to know each other as they should, and simply because of the housing situation. So many of the students are scattered at such a distance from the campus that it makes co-operation almost impossible. By building dormitories this condition would be more centralized and the spirit of fellowship and mutuality more easily blended. But the students can't talk it too much. By their efforts the budget will be either won or lost.

William B. Florea '21: The money should certainly be granted to the university. The hardest part will be the collecting of the $4,000,000 for extension purposes. The students can do more than anyone else in helping the cause. The faculty would not push this—it is up to the students entirely. They should be notified of their importance in this matter through convocations or by the Council of 40. They should be informed of the necessity of such a budget and so filled with the idea that they will talk it up to influential men during the holidays. They in turn, can inform the legislature and the budget will be secured.

Ruth Storms '21: It would be practically impossible to raise this money without university influence. So it is simply up to the students to put it across. But they must be informed as to their importance in the work and the necessity of the budget through convocations and incessant drilling on the hill. It would be much easier to enhance Wisconsin spirit if we possessed dormitories to centralize the location and interests of our students. We are losing the community spirit because of the diversified housing conditions.

Gladys Borchers '22: The importance of this budget system should be put squarely before the students. There are various means of doing this. The Cardinal, convocations, and societies should all do their bit in distributing these facts to all students. Public opinion on the campus should be aroused and I am sure when the students realize their importance in the work they will spread the news to influential men.

who in turn could influence the legislature. We have a university of 8,000, with a capacity of 5,000. When we realize these conditions the importance of the budget is obviously apparent.

Organizations not represented at Wednesday's gathering will not be admitted into the circuit, according to Dr. Meanwell. Another requirement is that the entrance fee shall also be paid by that date.

Circular letters have been mailed to all fraternities, announcing the plans for the season, and it is expected that at least 32 organizations will enter. At present the prospects are as bright as ever for a successful year, with a number of last year's quintettes practicing regularly at the gymnasium.

Teams will be able to secure the floor at any time when the varsity and frosh squads are not working. The varsity holds practice every afternoon with the exception of Tuesday, when they work out at night.

FEATURE ACTS AT HARESFOOT DANCE PLEASE AUDIENCE

In the first appearance this year members of the Haresfoot club scored a great success with songs, dancing, and comedy in their third annual Haresfoot dance at Lathrop hall last night. Four acts were given between dances.

Wells Carberry '23, leading man of the last Haresfoot play, and "Sunny" Ray '21, figured in a singing and dancing act, interpolated by clever comedy dialogue. They were responded to uproariously by the audience. Horace Carver '21, as the girl, and Phillip Reed '21, were similarly appreciated in their singing and dancing act. They were accompanied by Wilbur Goessling '21, Andrew Mailer '22, who was a member of the Rusty Hinge quartette, sang several of the latest song hits, among which were "The House That Jack Built" from "Cinderella," and "Sweet Sixteen," from the "Greenwich Village Follies."

"Sparks" Dodge '21, made a hit in his first appearance as a ventriloquist. Dancing followed the acts. "Red" Hawkins and "Mickey" McConnell of Thompson's first orchestra furnished the music.

ELSIE FERGUSON IS STAR AT STRAND

One of the late Mrs. Humphry Ward's popular novels of high-bred English life, "Lady Rose's Daughter," serves as the basis for the photoplay in which Elsie Ferguson is showing at the Strand theater for three days commencing today.

The story is told in three episodes, the star playing the heroine in each case. In the main plot she is Julie Le Gretton, who is a rather unwelcome companion of Lady Henry Delafield, a distant relative, at her country home. When the latter learns of Julie's affair with a Captain Warkworth, a man of loose reputation, she banishes the girl from the house. Julie goes to Warkworth's apartment, where Jacob Delafield, nephew of Lady Delafield, follows her.

In hiding, she hears him denounce Warkworth, and later she flees the captain's apartment. For several days she wanders about, contemplating doing away with herself, but the clouds soon lift and, by a sudden twist of fate, she is made happy.

The supporting company includes David Powell and Holmes E. Herbert.

There will also be shown a comedy cartoon, the latest news weekly and Luke McLukes Film-oscopy.

Checks Cashed

Some time ago we put up signs in our store stating that fee cards must be presented when cashing checks. We took this action after conferring with Dean Goodnight of the University and Mr. L'Hommedieu of the Branch Bank of Wisconsin. We want you to understand why we have taken this course.

Last year we lost quite a little money on FORGED CHECKS and most of these checks were cashed by people that used students' names and addresses, but were not students. By taking the action we have, it will be easier for students to cash checks but harder for others.

Carry your Fee Card with your check book and present it with your check. We want to cash checks for you, but we must have some identification to protect our business, and we WILL NOT cash checks unless you show your Fee Card.

This is for your protection as well as ours.

SPENDING $15,000,000

REQUESTS for sums hovering around the $15,000,000 mark are not likely to be looked on with favor by the forthcoming legislature unless it can be shown that they need, of vital necessity, be met to the last dollar. On that score the university's request for funds for the next biennium stands its best chance of success.

It has been pointed out that a university has three services to perform. First, there is the educating of men and women; second, the department of research, and in the third division, the extension service, the spreading of knowledge to the people of the state. The rendition of these services, vitally important to the welfare of the state, has already been hampered to too great a degree to permit of further curtailment. As the value of the respective services becomes more apparent there is a greater demand for them.

The legislature meets almost immediately after the Christmas recess is concluded. The university is in dire need of more buildings. The authorities will appear before the legislature to state their case and make their request. The legislators will then want to know the wishes of their constituents in the matter. If all of their constituents tell them, "this is what we want because we need it," the appropriation will become merely a matter of form.

That is the challenge to the fathers and mothers of the students at Wisconsin. The challenge to the students is even more important. For upon the way in which the students present the matter at home largely depends its ultimate success.

Obviously, direct contact with the legislators would be better, but in the majority of cases that will be impossible. Before the Christmas recess students will have ample opportunity to acquaint themselves with the needs of their university and how best to present them. It is an opportunity which means much to the students, the university, and the people of the state.

THE PROPER ATTITUDE

THE two quoted paragraphs noted below, taken from an editorial which appears in the Wisconsin State Journal this morning, should go a long way toward correcting a number of erroneous impressions about campus life which have been circulating about the state and nation:

... In themselves stories of the pranks and caprices of college girls are innocent enough, like the girls themselves, but the inferences which may be drawn from them may result in injury to the school and injustice to many people. In any group of several thousands of girls a small number, perhaps two or three per cent, are inclined to extremes of fashion and to daring practices. What is usual never makes a newspaper story. It is the exceptional which excites interest. And so the "co-ed" feature story is the story of the few odds and ends of girlhood which make up the conspicuous minority in any group. Tales about them, if taken as representative of school life, create a sadly erroneous impression about the average run of college girls and the discipline of the institution.

The University of Wisconsin does not claim to be a perfect institution, but it has made noble strides toward perfection, and is truly great. Its student body ranks high in scholarship and morale. It stands for the highest ideals of the times and represents the aspirations of the state for still finer and bigger achievements. It isn't a thing to measure with a flashy gown or a set of dice, and one candidly admits that print paper can be put to better use than peeping over the university's back fence. Soon we shall be heard of many New Year's resolutions. In advance ours is that for all time to come The State Journal will represent the University of Wisconsin by its professed standards, not by its occasional delinquencies; by its majority, not by its exceptional or eccentric minorities.

Communication

Editor Daily Cardinal:

I believe that it is time to call a halt to the campaign of propaganda against the university which is beginning to assume serious proportions. For the past two years, the student body as a whole has been obliged to endure being hailed as "damned Prussians" and "a mob" from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the institution as a whole has been subtly attacked at every opportunity, and now our co-eds are being featured north, south, east and west as exponents of the most exaggerated forms of dancing, as habitual smokers, and as crap shooters.

That some of the vicious news and feature stories libeling Wisconsin and its students have originated in the imaginative brains of metropolitan yellow sheet reporters is well known. Such was the case in the McElroy affair and in Professor O'Shea's country-famous "interview" in which "the professor stated that student girls were being engaged by the university to smoke for experimental purposes." Again, real news stories sent from here by correspondents of city papers are "doctored" and distorted by sensation loving, regardless-for-truth desk editors. Witness the Chicago Tribune's falsification of the Jandorf case story sent out from here and giving a true account of the affair.

But there are other stories which have their origin right here in Madison, and spread from here throughout the state and frequently farther, creating an impression among parents with children of near-college age that the university is an unfit place to send their children. Good examples of these were the Milwaukee Journal's recent feature on dancing here, and the calumnious article on smoking and crap shooting among Wisconsin women appearing in Friday's State Journal.

Such stories, particularly like the latter, make a person's blood boil. Those of us who have done newspaper work at one time or another recognize all the earmarks of an inspired (?) writer, vague insinuations, generalities, and the like. But the majority of readers do not look upon things that way. By Sunday, 30,000 people will say that they "read in the paper that all the U. W. girls shoot craps"; it is the type of story which sensational loving editors lift with great avidity, and by Sunday, it will have been reprinted by half the dailies in the state. And what will the reaction be? "I would not send my daughter to the university after what I have read about it," one mother told me recently. She is but one of many who has formed this belief, and in all sincerity.

Nothing can be done to curb the activities of yellow reporters from the cities, and it is next to impossible to check up on the feature writers among the student body who think more of getting the good will of some out of town editor and his $7.50 a column by dishing up a savory mess which he will take than they do of the good name of their alma mater. But it is possible to place a check upon local papers, as was demonstrated during the McElroy affair, when the then editor of the State Journal, although a member of the board of visitors, indulged in a series of wholly unwarranted attacks on the university.

Permit me to suggest that here is a field in which the senate, which has so frequently done great service to the student body and university as a whole, can very profitably employ itself. Who on the State Journal staff is responsible for the stories against students, and especially against our co-eds, with which we have been favored in past weeks? Is there any relation between the anti-university propaganda flooding the state and the fact that the legislature will meet shortly and will be called upon to pass a heavy university budget? Is this originating in Madison? Who are the irresponsible feature writers in the student body whose exaggerated accounts of conditions at Wisconsin are spread over the state in Sunday editions?

This is a matter of such immediate and vital concern to the university and to every student in it that it can no longer be ignored. It has become too serious to be merely scolded or cursed at. Action is necessary, and that at once. Let us, through our elected representatives, take the initiative.

Yours truly,

LOWELL J. RAGATZ,
L. and S. Grad.

COUNTRY MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER ON CAMPUS TOMORROW

Charles L. Hill Leading Contest—Home Beauty
Contest a Feature

Featuring an article on "The Business of Farming" by Charles L. Hill, the December number of the Country Magazine will appear on the campus tomorrow.

"Every student in the university would not only be interested but would profit by reading Mr. Hill's article," said Prof. A. W. Hopkins, of the agricultural journalism department after reading the advance proofs.

"Mr. Hill is a member of the State Board of Education and an alumnus of the university. In these days of unrest it is exceedingly wholesome to have a man with the experience and judgment of Mr. Hill correct an impression which has been gaining ground in the last few years that the average person in the city gets more out of life than the person in the country."

Another feature of this issue is the first annual Home Beauty contest. The contest has already aroused much interest.

The Home Economics department contains many Christmas suggestions. The story by Vangel Russell, "Grandma Compares Kitchens" is a picturesque contrast between the kitchens of pioneer days and those of modern homes.

MAN WELL KNOWN IN MADISON WRITES FISKE O'HARA SONG

The coming of the favorite actor-singer, Fiske O'Hara, to the Fuller opera house for his annual appearance on Thursday, Dec. 9, when he opens an engagement of three nights and one matinee, has a special local interest.

O'Hara's new songs, so dear to lovers of music of the Emerald Isle, were written by George H. Gartlan, who is not only a writer of note and an excellent musician, but who also occupies the important position of director of music in the public schools in New York city.

Mr. Gartlan is well known in Madison through his annual visits during the summer vacation. Mrs. Gartlan, nee Edna McGuire, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. McGuire, of East Gorham street, who, before her marriage four years ago, was prominent in Madison's social circles.

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN TO APPEAR AT GRAND TODAY

"The Point of View," starring Elaine Hammerstein, will be the feature at the Grand starting today. Edith Ellis is the author, and the story deals with a society girl's struggle to bring back the wealth that was lost by her father.

Miss Hammerstein is seen as Marjory Thorncroft, a refined and sensitive girl of 23 and the only member of her family who is not an idle dreamer. She assumes entire responsibility of the family in an effort to regain a fortune which was lost in a panic. She is forced to advertise one of the rooms in their modest flat for rent to help meet expenses. David Lawrence, a virile American from Alaska, answers the advertisement. He is greatly attracted by Marjory and tells himself that he will make her his wife. The family, however, is shocked by the coarse Westerner. Marjory also is also engaged to Dallas Henly, a young attorney, but she has noticed that his attitude toward her changed when he learned that her family had lost its money. A short time later their engagement is broken. David offers to help the family but Marjory scorns him, showing that he is an unwelcome suitor. Many complications develop and the story leads to a pleasing end.

Miss Hammerstein is supported

C. E. Drayer to Attend A. A. E. Banquet in City Y. M. C. A. Friday

C. E. Drayer, national secretary of the American Association of Engineers, has accepted an invitation to address the banquet of the student chapter of the A. A. E., which will be held at the city Y. M. C. A. on Friday, December 10, at 6 p. m.
