THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN
DIRECTORY
OF THE
SHORT COURSE IN AGRICULTURE
1886-1927

Entered as second class matter June 16, 1894, at the post office at Madison, Wisconsin, under the act of July 16, 1894.

WHEN THE FAMILY gets so big that most of the children wander far away from the home roof tree, it behooves Alma Mater to keep track of her numerous progeny so that at least the whereabouts of the family will be known. It is for this reason that the effort has been made to bring together a list of all the former students of the Short Course in Agriculture.

For over forty years the University of Wisconsin has been sending out into the world the youth of the state and the nation who have found in the Short Course in Agriculture an opportunity for their agricultural training.

At the outset when this course was started it was an educational experiment. It was scoffed at by the academically minded as beneath the dignity of a university to concern itself with the more practical aspects of agricultural training. But time has amply demonstrated the wisdom of the experiment. Since it was started, nearly every state agricultural college in the nation has adopted the idea in one form or another.

The 7,500 Short Course students who have come to the University are now to be found all over the world. Last year I found some of them in the far-off northern island of the Japanese empire, utilizing most successfully the principles they had learned at the University many years ago. Naturally the great majority of this group have found their life work here in Wisconsin.

The reputation of Wisconsin as a progressive agricultural community is world wide. To no inconsiderable degree, we are frequently told is this reputation to be ascribed to the young farmers of the state who learned the principles of a sound, safe and sane agricultural development here in the Short Course, and who put these principles into practical use as they went back to the farms of this and other states.

To all such students who have been with us in the past, we extend the heartiest wishes of the University for your continued interest in the further development of this educational work that means much to the prosperity of our state and nation.

H. L. Russell,
Dean.

June 14, 1927.

PREFACE

The Short Course Directory is the result of the efforts of the College of Agriculture and the University Alumni Recorders. Each of the 7,500 students was sent a letter at the last known address. The lists of those not responding were revised by the members of the faculty of the College of Agriculture who met many former students while away on their extension duties. Other letters were sent in an effort to find the present address of all former Short Course students.

The Directory is composed of two parts. The first is an alphabetical list of former students who responded to one of the letters and the address is as it was received by post card or letter from the former student. A symbol indicates whether the former student was graduated and, if not, the year of attendance. There are approximately 3,900 correct addresses in this section of the directory.

Part II is a complete list of the students by years. Under each year group are listed the graduates of that year and those students who did not graduate at any time but who were in attendance for the last time during that year. No attempt is made in this part to list all the students who attended during any particular year. Each year of this section is divided into two sections, the first giving the names of the persons of the year whose address may be found in Part I where correct addresses are given. The last part of each year list gives the names of persons with their last known address. In many cases the address is probably correct but a return was not received verifying it.

Persons whose names appear in Part I will receive notices of university functions such as commencement exercises and athletic events on the same basis as former students and graduates of collegiate courses granting degrees. They will also receive a copy of this directory. If your name appears in Part II with address we shall be glad to have you make correction or verify your address and upon receipt of this information we shall be glad to forward a directory to you.

In compiling the data we appreciate the fact that many mistakes and omissions may occur. We shall appreciate corrections. Write J. A. James, College of Agriculture, Madison, Wisconsin.

PART I

THE ADDRESSES in this section were correct as of April 1927. Corrections and changes of address are solicited. Send changes to J. A. James, Agricultural Hall, Madison, Wisconsin.

At its annual meeting in June 1895, the Board of Regents of the University provided that an appropriate certificate be granted students who have completed their work in the Short Course in a suitable manner. From 1895 on, the graduates, or those who have been granted certificates, are so designated in this directory.

The symbols used in this section are as follows:

- (1) The asterisk (*) indicates that the individual is deceased.
- (2) '23 indicates that the student was graduated with the class of 1923.
- (3) ex '16 indicates that the student attended the Short Course with the class of 1915-16 but was not graduated.

PART II

EACH CLASS is divided into two groups; the first giving the names of former students whose names and addresses are found in Part I, and the second group for which the last known address is given. We wish to find the present address of each of the latter group, and information verifying addresses or giving new addresses should be sent to J. A. James, Agricultural Hall, Madison, Wisconsin.

At its annual meeting in June 1895, the Board of Regents of the University provided that an appropriate certificate be granted students who have completed their work in the Short Course in a suitable manner. From 1895 on, the graduates, or those who have been granted certificates, are so designated in this directory.

The symbols used in this section are as follows:

- (1) The asterisk (*) indicates that the individual is deceased.
- (2) A dagger (†) indicates that the student was a graduate of that particular year.
