MR. MINISTER: The National Bank of the Republic of Haiti has exceeded all bounds. It was not enough to have, disregarding the express terms of its contract, refused all assistance to the Government; to have, on December 17 last, taken from the Public Treasury the sum of $500,000; and finally, to have lured the Government with vain promises of agreement with the sole idea of gaining time, thus further to starve the impoverished people and to augment the embarrassments of the administration. It now makes known to the juge d'instruction, through a letter dated January 15 signed by Mr. Williams, that contrary to the formal declarations of its director, Mr. H. Desrue, there no longer remains in the Public Treasury one single centime of the sum of about $1,000,000 which had been deposited for the service of the withdrawal of the paper money in circulation. It clearly admits, therefore, that this considerable sum, which belongs not to its private funds but to the distinct funds of the National Treasury, has been removed in toto and exported to a foreign country. This removal has been perpetrated secretly, unknown to the Government, in contravention to the rights of the State, in violation of the penal law and the contract which binds the two parties.

But this does not appear to have been sufficient. It dares to pretend that the value which, on the word of its director Desrue, has recently been put under seal as funds of the State, a value which its director himself has represented to the juge d'instruction as a part of the funds of the retrait, is the private property of the National Bank! The vault of the Public Treasury would therefore be empty! The funds deposited in this vault as guaranties of public contracts and special functions, the sums of which the presence in this safe is established by the two laws of the 18th and 23rd of December last and by other official documents, all these sums would therefore have vanished.

An attitude so violent on the part of the Bank does not permit the Government to remain for a longer time inactive. Before the admitted criminal act of the complete taking of the funds of the retraits and in the presence of the disguised menace to seize (accaparer) the funds of the State recognized as such by Director Desrue, a measure imposes itself, that of safeguarding the funds of the Republic by taking them from a dishonest Treasury, unworthy of the confidence of the country. The Government could not hesitate. Respectful of the law, it has requested justice to act.

In bringing these facts to your knowledge, the Department of Foreign Relations does not intend to renounce its contractual right, already several times affirmed, to reject diplomatic intervention. It intends simply to fulfill a duty of courtesy towards your Government in declaring its firm determination to submit to arbitration, provided for by the contract with the Bank, all the differences raised by the parties.

Moreover, I advise your excellency that the Haitian Government, in the presence of a profound and general emotion produced by the open hostility, by the unheard-of conduct of the National Bank, sees itself constrained to submit to the country, without delay, all the documents, diplomatic and otherwise, which bear on the subject.

It is of importance to the Republic that the public be informed. It is of the highest importance that it be known that this country, which scrupulously pays its exterior debt, is not, as an interested press pretends, a country in bankruptcy; that the financial difficulties of the present situation arise primarily from the European war and that the campaign of calumnies carried on against us by certain subsidized or deceived newspapers, is the odious work of the bankers without conscience, without honor, whose principal object is to injure our national independence.

To defeat this maneuver the Government of the Republic firmly counts upon the cooperation of your Legation and upon the cooperation of your Government fully and loyally informed.

I beg [etc.]

LOUIS BORNÉ.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE FOR FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Port au Prince, February 3, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: By a note dated January 29 last,^s the Legation of the United States notifies my Department that the American Minister has been instructed to say that the Government of the United States cannot consent to the removal of funds belonging to the Bank without which it is impossible for it to live up to its contractual obligations, and to advise the Haitian Government that any attempt to remove the funds of the Bank will compel him to consider means of preventing any such violation of the rights of foreign stockholders.

This note is the exact repetition of the verbal statement which your excellency had made to me the same day, of which I had had the honor to request of you written confirmation.

It referred to the amounts placed under seal on December 28, 1914, by the juge d'instruction by virtue of the affirmation by the Bank itself that the said amounts belong to the Haitian Treasury as representing a portion of the funds of the retraits. The Bank had affirmed at the same time, by word of mouth and over the signature of its director, that there was held in addition, in its branches, the sum of $221,180 belonging to the same fund of the retraits, i. e., to the Haitian State. The Bank, in defiance of all these affirmations, later believed it had discovered that the amounts belonged to its private funds and, so that they might be used, demanded the lifting of the seals; the Haitian Government, which affirms and has irrefutable reasons to affirm its right of ownership of the funds, hastened to approve of lifting the seals, but demanded that the amount seized be deposited in the hands of third parties instead of being in possession of the Treasury, whose conduct had removed all right to the confidence of the State. The Bank refused to allow the lifting of the seals.

The amount seized is therefore up to this hour on deposit at the National Bank, where the Government has never had intention to go to take it by violence.

When a judicial decision, regularly obtained, shall have recognized the evident rights of the State, the National Bank, then brought back, it is hoped, to the normal conviction as to its duties and to a more just appreciation of its interests, will voluntarily submit itself thereto and thus avoid the forcible execution which the law sanctions in every country.

NEW YORK, February 9, 1915.

SIR: We beg to advise you that we have been informed by the acting manager (Mr. Williams) of the Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti at Port au Prince that the Haitian Government has taken from the Bank the entire Treasury service of the Haitian Government; and we have been further advised, through cables from the American Minister at Port au Prince transmitted to your Department, that the taking of this service from the Bank is in pursuance of an official decree published in the official journal of the Government, ordering this removal of the service of Treasury from the Bank, and basing this action upon the alleged refusal of the Bank to receive in settlement for certain accounts the new gourdes, which the present unrecognized Government of Haiti is now about to issue to the extent of 16,000,000 gourdes.

The Directors of the Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti desire hereby to enter with your Department a most formal protest against the action as above recited of the Haitian Government, as the withdrawal of the service of the Treasury from the Bank is a direct violation of the contract existing between the Haitian Government and the Bank for the performance of such Treasury service, and is not in any way justified by any overt act or any act of omission or commission on the part of the Bank to the best knowledge of its Directors.

Throughout the recent political disturbances in Haiti, the Directors of the Bank have taken great pains to see that the Bank observe in every detail the obligations of its contract, and the Directors have every reason now to believe that the recent unfriendly attitude and actions on the part of the Haitian officials of Government toward the Bank are due solely to the refusal of the Bank to advance money upon demands which had been made for loans without any adequate security.

The directors of the Bank have in their endeavors to maintain the good will of the Haitian Government and their desire to assist that country as far as they legitimately can, permitted the Bank to assume an amount of indebtedness of the Haitian Government very considerably beyond the limits provided for either in the Bank contract or under the rules which would ordinarily govern a bank manager in the prudent conduct of the affairs of such an institution. A point has now, however, been reached where the demands have become a menace not only to the Bank but to its personnel in Haiti. The attempt of the present de facto Government to pass legislation (such as the issue of the proposed 16,000,000 gourdes) which is in direct and complete violation of good faith, assails the integrity of the existing agreements between the Bank and the Haitian Government.

SIR: Referring to our communication of the 9th inst., making protest against the action of the present de facto Government of Haiti in taking from the Banque Nationale de la République d'Haïti the function of Treasury of the Government, which the Bank has been performing in accordance with a contract existing between the Haitian Government and the Bank, we beg now to inform you that we have just been advised that the officials of the Haitian Government have ordered that customs duties be paid over to various merchants designated by the Haitian officials, instead of having these duties paid into the Bank as heretofore has been the procedure under the existing contract.

Our advices further indicate that in making this arrangement for the payment of duties to the merchants, the Haitian officials are ignoring all provision in respect of the interest and sinking-fund payments on the foreign debt, and only make reserve in respect of interior loans. All of this procedure is not only an absolute violation on the part of the Haitian Government of the contract existing between the Haitian Government and the Bank, but also a violation by the Government of its agreement with the holders of its foreign debt, most of which is held in Europe. This action is certain to result in serious complications in the final adjudication of Haiti's already very much involved financial affairs.

In this connection you are informed that the American Minister at Port au Prince, under date of February 11, reported by telegraph that at the request of the Bank he had on the 9th instant protested by note to the Haitian Government against the issue of Treasury notes and also against the taking of the Treasury service from the Bank, on the grounds of violating the contract between the Government of Haiti and the Bank.

AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: Referring to my cables of February 11 and February 13 with reference to the protest of this Legation in support of the protest of the Bank against the execution of the decrees of January 22 and 27, the one with reference to the emission of Treasury notes to the amount of two million gourdes, the other taking from the Bank the service of the Treasury of the State, I have the honor to enclose herewith copy and translation of a note^s from the director ad interim of the Bank, dated February 2, 1915, forwarding to this Legation copies of the protest of the Bank in this matter; and also copy and translation of another note^s under date of February 3, 1915, requesting the Legation to sustain the protest above mentioned.

* Not printed.

In pursuance of this request, this Legation on February 9 addressed a note to the Foreign Office, copy of which is herewith enclosed, protesting against the aforesaid measures as constituting a formal violation of the contract of the Bank and thus compromising American interests in that institution, as reported in my cable of February 11.

Under date of February 13, the Foreign Office addressed to this Legation a note in reply, in which, as you will observe, the Minister of Foreign Affairs lays particular stress, once again, upon the fact that the Bank is a French company, and on this ground repulses the protest of the Legation of the United States as not qualified, the French Minister being the only proper authority here to protest in favor of a French moral person.

After stating the above, the Minister adds as a matter of information for the Legation that the National Bank having violated Articles 12, 15 and 16 of its contract, having refused to the Haitian Government the financial cooperation which it had contracted to furnish, having removed from the Public Treasury a considerable amount, and obstinately retaining in its possession other sums belonging to the State, has added to the case of force majeure created by the European war a new case of force majeure which has placed the Government in the imperative obligation of providing for public administration and national existence.

He concludes, as you will further observe, by stating that if the Bank is not in accord with the Government, Article 24 of the contract provides a means of settling the differences by arbitration, and that the Haitian Government is ready to submit thereto the questions at issue.

The French Minister has received from the Department of Foreign Relations, in reply to his protest, a communication embodying the information furnished this Legation on the subject.

The Director of the Bank has been apprised of the contents of the note of the Department of Foreign Relations addressed to this Legation.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, February 9, 1915.

The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti has brought to the attention of the Legation of the United States, as violating the rights of the Bank and the American interests therein engaged, the decrees of January 22 and 27, one with reference to the emission of Treasury notes up to the amount of two million gourdes, the other taking from the Bank the service of the Treasury of the State.

The Legation of the United States protests against these measures, which constitute a formal violation of the contract of the Bank and thus compromise the American interests in this institution.

[Inclosure 2—Translation.]

*The Minister for Foreign Affairs to Minister Blanchard.*DEPARTMENT OF STATE FOR FOREIGN RELATIONS, Port au Prince, February 13, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: The Legation of the United States made to my Department on February 9 a protest against the presidential decrees of January 22 and 27 which constitute, according to it, "a formal violation of the contract of the Bank and thus compromise the American interests in this institution."

In response to this note, I see myself obliged again to call your attention to the fundamental fact that the contract which your Legation invokes to protest against the acts of the Haitian Government determines that the Bank is a company of French nationality. It is with this French company that the Haitian Government has contracted and it is absolutely incontestable, according to law, that this company could not cease to be French because of American interest therein.

My Department consequently rejects, as incompetent, the protest of the Legation of the United States presented for a French moral person, depending, in this respect, on the French Legation at Port au Prince.

The situation thus put in point, the protest thus set aside, the Department, always disposed not to refuse any useful information, does not hesitate to say to your excellency that the National Bank of the Republic of Haiti having violated Articles 12, 15 and 16 of its contract, having refused to the Government the financial cooperation which it engaged itself to furnish to it, having conveyed away from the public vault considerable amounts, and obstinately retaining in its possession other sums which belong to the State, has added to the case of force majeure already created by the European war a new case of force majeure which has placed the Haitian Government not only in the evident right, but in the imperative obligation itself to provide the service of the public administration and national existence.

The Government has the conviction to act in the fullness of its rights. If the Bank is not in accord with it, it has only to conform itself to Article 24 of its contract, which obliges the two parties to submit their differences to arbitration.

The Government of the Republic declares itself ready to submit to this arbitration the questions in debate.

FRENCH EMBASSY,
Washington, February 20, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: I repeatedly have had occasion to remind your excellency, as well as your predecessors, of the importance of French interests in Haiti and of the Government of the Republic's desire, assuredly a legitimate desire, that they be not imperilled.

The contingency of a financial reorganization of that Republic on the initiative of the United States was notably the object of several letters and conversations in the course of which I pointed out that France should naturally be taken into partnership in those measures not only because of the predominant importance of her financial interests in Haiti, notably in the Bank of that country, but also because of the ties of various kinds subsisting between my country and that land that was formerly French. In the opinion of the Government of the Republic there could arise no legitimate international rivalry on that point since no other nation holds the peculiar situation that France occupies toward Haiti.

By reason of the disturbed condition prevailing in the Haitian Republic and of the indications it has again had from Port au Prince as to the aforesaid plans, my Government desires me to recall to your excellency's mind the position it takes on that matter.

I am directed to remind you also that, in the course of the several conversations I have had the honor to have with you on the subject, you were pleased to assure me that in any event the finances, customs and various concessions would be maintained on a footing of strict economic equality and that no régime would be established discriminating against us in favor of the United States in a French-speaking country to whose development it is even so important that its relations with France be not impaired.

I am certain, from the intentions which your excellency kindly discloses to me, that the sanctioning of any such inequality does not enter your mind, and I shall be very thankful to you if you would kindly enable me so to assure my Government.

Be pleased [etc.]

The National Bank of the Republic of Haiti to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, August 7, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: According to reports published in the press of the United States, the American authorities have taken over the several public services of the Republic of Haiti at Port au Prince and Cape Haitien, in particular the collection of customs duties.

Now the terms of Article 14 of the concession contract of the National Bank of the Republic of Haiti explicitly state the rights and duties of that institution in respect to the collection and distribution of the said duties; it reads as follows:

The Bank will have exclusive charge of the service of the State Treasury both at home and abroad. Under that head it shall receive all moneys due the State when collected and in particular the customs duties on imports and exports. Likewise it shall effect, within the limits set forth in Article 15 hereinbelow, all payments for the account of the State including the service of interest and amortization of the public debt.

The greater part of customs duties have been pledged to holders of foreign and domestic bonds and also to the beneficiaries of certain debts incurred by the Republic in connection with railway, electric lighting, public works and other contracts.

In addition, most of the agreements between the Haitian State and its creditors provide that it will be the Bank's duty to pay over to those entitled thereto the part of the duties that is their due; for instance, in the case of the 1910 loan, by far the most important, Article 19 says:

During the whole life of the loan the duties hereinabove pledged shall be directly collected for the account of whom it may concern by the attorney of the National Bank of the Republic of Haiti designated by the Bankers as their representative to that effect.

Article 4 of the 1912 loan and Article 5 of the 1913 loan, which are identical, provide that:

The National Bank of the Republic of Haiti shall ex-officio credit the bond account with the amount pledged and, also ex-officio, upon a mere notice to the Department of Finance, distribute the proceeds thereof which will be used first for the payment of interest and next for the amortization of the capital.

Under the conditions and for the protection of the interests involved I have the honor to bespeak your high intercession, Mr. Secretary of State, with a view to having the requisite orders issued to turn over to our treasury all moneys collected on customs receipts, in accordance with the contracts and conventions.

Again, permit me to draw your attention to the particularly grave turn for the creditors of the State taken by the situation since the late events that have taken place in Haiti.

There is no longer any government at ports that are not occupied by the forces of the United States; customs duties are collected by the local authorities; since those moneys have ceased being turned over to us in violation of the pledges which I have had the honor to recite to your excellency the said authorities use them as they see fit and avail themselves of them to subsidize revolutionists whose access to power they are interested in favoring.

Such a condition of affairs not only injures the interests of the National Bank of the Republic of Haiti, it also, as I have just had the honor to explain to your excellency, is very harmful to the other creditors of the Haitian State.

I beg [etc.]

Memorandum submitted by the National Bank of the Republic of Haiti to the Department of State.

According to the Monitor, the official newspaper of Haiti, there had been received by the Haitian Government, by July 10, 1915:

20 cases of 2-gourde bills, numbered 1 to 20. Cases 1 to 11, and 13 had been opened and submitted for signature, making ----- 1, 200, 000 gourdes.
There remained in deposit cases 12, and 14 to 20, making---- 800, 000 gourdes.

Notices from Port au Prince dated July 17 announced the shipment to New York of $16,000, representing the cost of 1,000,000 gourdes in 2-gourde bills, which were to be shipped immediately; these same notices stated that the board of supervision of the issue was signing about 40,000 gourdes a day, they being absorbed by the current service and the expenses incident to the revolution.

It is impossible to tell the exact amount of bills placed in circulation. The Monitor of July 14 publishes a notice stating that the bills bearing numbers 35,001 to 35,500 were signed by mistake by another supervisor than the one who should have done it.

Generally speaking, the following procedure was followed:

The cases containing the bills were delivered sealed, just as they arrived, to the board of verification, which inserted in the Monitor a record of receipt of the cases. As fast as the cases were opened for delivery for signature, this board drew up a memorandum of the number of bills found in the open cases. This memorandum was likewise inserted in the Monitor.

According to the latest information, 1,200,000 gourdes had been submitted for signature.

It would be well for the American Government to take charge of the cases of unsigned bills. Each case should contain 50,000 2-gourde bills.

In reply I have the honor to inform you that, according to the reports received from the American Chargé d'Affaires at Port au Prince, Haiti, after consultation with Admiral Caperton, the Commanding Officer of the American forces in Haitian waters, the Bank was instructed to collect customs revenues in Port au Prince, the branch office having already performed that function in Cape Haitien.

PORT AU PRINCE, August 9, 1915.

43. Last January the Treasury service, by an arbitrary act, was taken from the National Bank of Haiti, the National Treasury, and given to private banking firms, the principal one of which is Simmond Frères. Simmond Frères is under no control that will safeguard public interests. They merely make collections of the revenues, receive a certain percentage as their fee, and turn the rest over to whomsoever may exercise sufficient force or persuasion in the name of a government or revolution to obtain it. The result is that considerable money is being thus forced from Simmond Frères by the so-called revolutionary committees in various towns, and this money is being used to actively support revolutionary activity. On account of military necessity, therefore, I this day informed the committee in Port au Prince, Simmond Frères, and the National Bank of Haiti, that the Treasury service would be resumed by the National Bank of Haiti. This bank is under legal and exacting contract for the handling of the Treasury service for the country.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 22, 1915.

Your September 21, 4 p. m. Aside from the question as to the advisability of the issuance of so large an amount of paper money, the Department understands that the law passed by the Haitian Congress for this purpose violated the contract with the National Bank of Haiti, whereby the Bank was given exclusive privilege to issue bank notes, and also contravened the stipulations of the 1910 loan contract. It was therefore a matter of considerable satisfaction to learn through your cable of September 14, 8 p. m.,¹⁸ that it was the intention of the Haitian Government to obtain the repeal of this law; moreover, the Department consented to use its good offices to arrange for the temporary loan desired by the Haitian Government for $1,500,000 on the express understanding that there would be no further emission of these gourdes. The Department likewise undertook to obtain an immediate advance of $100,000 for the pressing needs of the Haitian Government, upon ratification of the treaty.

The Department believes that a further issue of this paper money would be unwise and further complicate the financial situation and render still more difficult efforts for the rehabilitation of the finances of Haiti contemplated in the treaty signed on the 16th instant.

The Department, therefore, desires you to consult with Admiral Caperton to the end that the cases of gourdes be held for the time being and should their delivery be requested by the Haitian authorities, you may bring the foregoing to the attention of President Dartiguenave and obtain his consent to their retention either in the manner suggested in the Department's instruction of August 12, or in some other way which would ensure their safety.

Admiral Caperton to the American Forces in Haiti.

PORT AU PRINCE, September 6 1915.

LETTER OF INSTRUCTIONS: CUSTOMS AND CIVIL ADMINISTRATION.

1. In order to relieve the detachment commanders from the duty of disbursing funds, and in view of the fact that the Navy Department has detailed sufficient bonded disbursing officers for duty with the forces in Haiti and Haitian waters to provide one for each port occupied, the following instructions are substituted for those contained in reference (b) [Issued August 24, 1915⁸].

CUSTOMS ADMINISTRATION.

2. The Squadron Commander will administer the customs through an administrator of customs, who will be established at Port au Prince. The administrator of customs will have general charge of the collection of customs duties at all ports and the depositing of receipts, in accordance with instructions given by the Squadron Commander and in accordance with the Haitian law not inconsistent with these instructions. For the purpose of insuring uniformity of administration, the administrator of customs is authorized to issue directly to the local collectors such detailed instructions as may be necessary relative to the customs collection, depositing of receipts, keeping of accounts, rendition of returns, and such other administrative matters as come within his province.

3. The collector of customs at each port will administer the customhouse and captain of the port's office at the port where he is stationed, under instructions from the administrator of customs. He will also act as disbursing officer for all payments made at the port where he is stationed.

CIVIL ADMINISTRATION.

4. Detachment commanders will have charge of such other civil affairs as may be assumed within the limits of their respective commands, and will control the disbursements of funds allotted by the Squadron Commander to meet obligations incurred thereby.

DISBURSEMENTS.

5. Disbursements will be made under the following heads:

Constabulary: for the organization and maintenance of an efficient constabulary.

Public Works: for conducting such temporary public works as will afford an immediate relief through employment for the starving populace and discharged soldiers.

Military and Civil Government: for the maintenance of such military and civil governments as the United States may establish.

Customs Service: for expenses of maintaining the customs service, including captain of the ports' offices.

6. Detachment commanders will submit to the Squadron Commander by radio not later than the 25th of each month, confirmed by letter, estimates covering the funds desired under each head for each town for the coming calendar month. Collectors of customs will furnish detachment commanders with estimates for customs service to be included in above mentioned radio message.

7. Funds will then be allotted by the Squadron Commander from the funds on deposit in the local branch of the National Bank of Haiti in each town; and the funds so allotted will be placed to the credit of the collectors of customs in those local banks.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, September 26, 1915.

Following instructions your September 22, 500,000 gourdes which arrived on Friday are being held in customhouse. As a result of long interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Minister of Finance regarding same, I respectfully submit that Haitian Government should be allowed to issue this money for the following reason. The Haitian Government has less than 250,000 gourdes and is receiving no customs receipts. Payment of salaries and expenses has already begun, the Haitian Government having counted on this money without which payments will have to be suspended with great loss to Government prestige. Immediate placing of this money in circulation will greatly relieve suffering and will strengthen Haitian Government position before Haitian Congress. The Haitian Government is using its best efforts to secure treaty ratification but knowledge of intention of the United States to withhold delivery of gourdes is being used by opposition to embarrass the Haitian Government and to prevent ratification. Issue of this relatively small amount of money can not materially affect financial situation but withholding same may seriously jeopardize entire treaty negotiations. Haitian Government reiterates intention of no further issue and states that when this decision was taken the present shipment was already en route and paid for and not intended to be covered by repeal law, its use being contemplated to tide over interval until ratification was secured. Minister of Finance further states that knowledge of withholding delivery is being used for speculative purposes and would result in considerable loss to the Haitian Government if gourdes are not available. In view of extreme importance of conclusion of treaty at this time and the embarrassment of the Haitian Government due to above stated conditions, request an early reply.

PORT AU PRINCE, September 26, 1915.

It is the desire of the Haitian Government that the 500,000 gourdes, ex steamer Fauna but now in the customhouse, be issued; Paymaster Conard has devised the following plan: Notes to be signed by the National Bank, thus issuing the first installment of own circulation in accordance with its contract. From funds in hand the required reserve will be set aside. The notes thus signed will be turned over to the Haitian Government immediately after the convention's ratification. The rate of exchange of bank circulation being five to one, the delivery of these notes will constitute the loan of $100,000 by the Bank, mentioned in the dispatch from the State Department to the Chargé d'Affaires. This plan is approved by the Bank which has cabled its New York office for necessary authorization. The Bank in conference with Conard regarding further steps for retirement of Government paper and nickel currency to be promptly undertaken if the above plan is carried into effect. It is believed that the issuing of notes as above planned will satisfy the Government of Haiti since they really object to the loss of prestige resulting from the suppression of these notes. Will also indicate desire the Bank to assist in carrying out contract settling difficulties. There has been no discussion of this matter with the Haitian Government, and if the plan is approved, it is requested that the Chargé d'Affaires be given the authority from Washington to negotiate on that basis in conjunction with my representative, Paymaster Conard. No knowledge of the Chargé d'Affaires' despatch to the State Department was had on preparing this message.

In view of contents of your September 26, the gourdes may be made immediately available to the Haitian Government provided that some such arrangement as that proposed by Admiral Caperton in his telegram of September 26 be adopted, which will be to the satisfaction of the Bank and secure prompt ratification of the treaty.

The Department feels confident that shortly after ratification of the treaty and the conclusion of a modus vivendi, funds will be forthcoming to provide for every legitimate necessity of the Haitian Government.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, September 29, 1915.

Referring to the Department's telegram of September 27. Paymaster Conrad and I had an interview with Minister for Foreign Affairs and Minister of Finance this morning. The Haitian Government believes its relations with Bank should remain in statu quo until such time as all differences between them can be settled and therefore Bank guaranty of notes inadvisable and declares it unacceptable. However, the Haitian Government is seriously embarrassed by lack of funds with which to continue payments already begun. I am convinced that the Government is using its best efforts to secure ratification by Congress but its efforts are being seriously hampered and ratification endangered by the withholding of the gourdes. If the Department still thinks that gourdes now held should not be issued, respectfully submit that some other arrangements be made to provide the Government with funds with which to live pending ratification. I suggest that either immediate loan of $100,000 be arranged or authorization given for customs officials to deliver this amount in gold or its equivalent in gourdes as the same becomes available. In view of the importance of the above with reference to efforts of the Government to secure ratification, an early reply requested.

With regard to the issue of 500,000 gourdes the Haitian Government does not wish to enter into any joint agreement with the Bank and therefore no such plan can be accepted. At the same time having counted definitely on using the bills now withheld by me, the Haitian Government claims to be seriously embarrassed. Need for immediate funds seems to be real. Am I authorized to furnish Haitian Government such funds as can be spared from customs receipts if the State Department does not intend to release bills without condition nor to provide loan prior to ratification of treaty?

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 2, 1915.

Your September 29. The Department is informed Bank is telegraphing Reine that it is unwilling to accept arrangement proposed or make advances "as long as the situation is not regulated."

In order to assist the Haitian Government in obtaining early and favorable action by Congress, the Department agreed to lend its good offices to secure the loans necessary for the financial rehabilitation of Haiti and undertook to obtain advance by the Bank of $100,000 immediately upon the ratification of the treaty. As you have already been informed, the Department is constrained to believe that a further issue of this unredeemable paper money will only serve to make still more difficult efforts to place Haitian finances on a firm and stable basis. Any loss of prestige mentioned by you can be but transitory and therefore no ill-advised temporary measures should be permitted to jeopardize measures for permanent relief which are assured once the treaty is ratified.

As to your suggestion regarding customs funds, it is intended to make use of these funds for organization of the constabulary with least possible delay, so as to bring about the establishment of permanent peace and to protect coffee growers and farmers in the harvesting and marketing of their crops. It would seem as if the interests of all, except a few Senators, depend upon the prompt ratification of the treaty, which the Department has a right to expect in view of its unquestioned intentions towards the Haitian people. It should not be impossible for the Haitian Government with the 250,000 gourdes still in hand to tide over the short interval until ratification is obtained, when advances to the Government will be immediately procurable.

SIR: The Department is informed that, owing to the fact that no remittances of customs receipts from duties pledged to the service of the foreign loans of the Republic of Haiti, of 1875, 1896 and 1910, are being made by Admiral Caperton to the National Bank of Haiti at Port au Prince, the Bank is not purchasing coffee drafts on Paris, which are now said to be discounted at 12 per cent.

Desiring to assist Haiti in improving her financial status, and in order to furnish the Bank with funds to purchase drafts on Paris, to give confidence to the bondholders of the foreign debt of Haiti and to facilitate coffee exports, and thereby to increase customs receipts, I have the honor to request that you be good enough to inquire of Admiral Caperton, by telegraph, whether it would be possible to pay to the Bank any part of the duties now collected by him, pledged to the service of the foreign loans above mentioned, without substantially affecting the expenditures for constabulary, public works, et cetera, or curtailing the weekly advances to the Haitian Government.

In this connection it might be advisable to inform the Admiral that it is intended to commence active organization of the constabulary immediately a modus vivendi is entered into; that the plan under consideration contemplates an annual appropriation of some $500,000; and that provision should be made for an appropriation to meet initial expenditures for organization.

Early arrival at Washington of commission, armed with full authority to enable it to deal intelligently and definitely with the subjects mentioned in Department's telegrams of August 27, 8 p. m.,⁸ and September 15, 5 p. m., is earnestly recommended, particularly with a view to resumption of railway construction et cetera, at earliest moment possible, so as to afford employment to starving populace.

The commission should have power to arrange the details of the operation of the treaty, to settle all differences between the Government and the Bank, and between the Government and the railway, to negotiate a loan and to decide upon some plan for the comprehensive readjustment and rehabilitation of Haitian finances.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, November 18, 1915.

DEAR MR. LONG: Allow me to resume the conversations we have had about the present condition of things in Haiti in regard to coffee exports.

Out of the customs receipts, the American authorities turn over $25,000 a week to the Government of Haiti; in addition payments are still made out of the same receipts for the national palace, the street contract, electricity. Mr. Conrad would prefer to have the surplus used in purchasing checks on New York and that the money remitted in New York be used, if deemed necessary by the Department of State, in paying the foreign debt annuities. Our manager explained to him that most of our exporters could not draw on New York, that they had to draw on the consignees of their coffee. Besides Mr. Conrad's wish is met by the $151,000 advanced by the Bank to New York. Assuming that the exporter does draw on New York bankers for the account of European firms, the bankers would have to draw on those European firms to protect themselves, and complicated operations and much expense would be the result. As I have already told you, if we could have at our disposal a certain amount with which to meet the interest on the foreign loans, in whole or in part, it would be easy to finance the crops and it would help to improve the rate of exchange on the United States.

The surplus should be considerably larger this month; imports and exports should yield more than in October and the figure would be still larger if by buying drafts for the service of the foreign debt, the bank could help coffee shipments which would bring about correspondingly increased importations. Furthermore the credit of Haiti abroad is injuriously affected by this condition of things since, owing to the non-payment of the interest on the 1910 loan on November 15, a further fall of Haitian securities in the Paris exchange may be expected, which fall will be more marked if remittances for the 1875 and 1896 loans, whose coupons are due at the close of the year, are not made in good time.

Under the circumstances it would seem necessary to authorize Admiral Caperton to let the Bank remit the proceeds of the revenues pledged to foreign loans.

Commencing middle of August, Electric Light Co. is being paid by me $7,500 per month, contract price for light Port au Prince and Cape Haitien; P. C. S. Railroad has been paid $5,000 and later $2,500 more in order to maintain it in operation, a military necessity. Haitian Government owes both companies several months arrears. President Staude states that if amount now due railroad as balance of guaranty of interest, about $17,000, is not paid before December 1, the road will be forced into bankruptcy. Haitian Government acknowledges this debt but is unable to pay. Owing to peculiarity of contract under which Government guarantees annual interest at 6 per cent on bonds of road to amount of $688,000, I hesitate to recommend further payment by American authorities. Instead, I recommend that loan to Haitian Government of $1,500,000 which State Department has mentioned in its despatch to Legation, of which the Haitian Government has been informed be made immediately available after signing modus vivendi, in order that the Government may settle many revealed [sic] claims of which railroad is one. Now that the treaty has been ratified and with a view to show every respect for the legitimate contractual obligations of Haiti, the Navy Department was requested on the 18th instant to instruct Admiral Caperton that he might upon the request of the Haitian Government apply the remainder of the revenues collected by him after setting aside sufficient for the support of the Dartiguenave Government, for public works and for the organization of the constabulary, for the purposes of and in accordance with the pledges thereof which have been heretofore made or given by the Haitian Government. Such authorization was deemed advisable in view of requests of the Bank that service of foreign bonds be resumed and of the Central Railroad that Government of Haiti pay certain sums due it.

The Department is informed that the Admiral has found objections to proposed procedure and recommends immediate loan. The Department believes that this can be arranged as soon as modus vivendi has been entered into and commission arrives in Washington. In the meanwhile, should the Haitian Government so request as has been done according to the Department's information in the case of the Central Railroad of Haiti, the Admiral should pay if not the entire amount requested at least such proportionate amount or amounts as may be now or become in future available.

Referring to the Admiral's radiogram of November 19, the Department understood that present advances to the Haitian Government took the place of the $100,000 mentioned in the Department's telegram of September 15, 5 p. m. (see Legation's telegram September 29). But should the impression prevail that this Government's good faith was involved, the Admiral may make immediate payment of $100,000 out of funds in hand, provided that this would be satisfactory to the Haitian Government, which may prefer that this money be used as far as possible for the purposes to which it is pledged.

Of this amount the Haitian Government considers $500,000 to be urgently required to pay the balance of salaries, pensions, rents and indemnities of the months of October and November, 1915, and the full amount for December. Also the arrears on the budget for the year 1914-1915, notably salaries of September, 1915, which have not been paid in full in the provinces.

The Haitian Government attaches much importance to its being put in position to pay before Christmas arrears of 1914-1915, for which provision has been made in the loan now under negotiation.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: We have the honor to inclose to you herewith a copy of correspondence exchanged between the Minister of Finance of the Republic of Haiti and our establishment at Port

In taking cognizance of these two documents, your excellency will kindly observe that the Haitian Minister complains that the Bank has been in the habit of paying expenses, provided to be paid in American gold in the budget of the Republic, by means of American banknotes. Your excellency will find the answer which our establishment addressed to the Haitian Minister on a question which was the subject of instructions on the part of Admiral Caperton. Although this answer was given with the consent of Mr. Conrad and Captain Beach, we deem it our duty to communicate this correspondence to you for all proper purposes.

PORT AU PRINCE, December 11, 1915.

MR. DIRECTOR: I have been informed by the paymasters of the Departments of Finance and Interior, on the occasion of the payment of the remunerations of the President of the Republic and of the heads of the executive departments, that the Bank had been in the habit for some time of paying the expenses, provided to be paid in American gold in the budget of the Republic, by means of American banknotes.

I cannot allow this practice to continue without making the most energetic protest against it on the part of the Department of Finance. As a matter of fact it is not difficult to anticipate that when, at an early date, the countervalue in gold of this unauthorized issue has disappeared from the market, it will be impossible to go to the United States to obtain the means of discharging obligations contracted in gold. An exchange in favor of the metal will be established, which will burden the receipts of the Treasury which you will have taken the liberty to collect in American paper in violation of the financial laws. Your own establishment will probably not be the last to infer the consequences of this lack of foresight, for which it will not be likely to bear the penalty.

Being obliged by virtue of my office to prevent the disturbances which the novel fact to which I draw your attention is calculated to add to those which already affect the economic life of the country, I wish to remind you of the provisions of Art. 2 of the law for the enforcement of the budget of ways and means, which provides for the collection in American gold of the tax authorized by a special law in a money different from the national gourde.

I hold the Bank entirely responsible for the analogy which it has allowed to be introduced, in the public receipts and expenditures, between gold coin and American paper.

I likewise call your attention to the circumstance that the amount of the expenditures made with the proceeds of the sales of gold made in exchange for gourdes is transmitted to the paymasters of the Government departments in nickel coin which does not belong to the Treasury and which causes delays in the service and frequent losses owing to erroneous counting on the part of the Bank.

PORT AU PRINCE, December 13, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY: We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch No. 484 of the 11th instant.

In regard to the American banknotes which our establishment is said to use as American gold, we will state that these notes come almost entirely from collections made by order and on account of Rear Admiral W. B. Caperton, U. S. N., Commander of the American forces in Haiti and in Haitian waters. We will add that, in the beginning of September, there was at times a slight premium in our market on gold coin. This caused Paymaster Chs. Conard, U. S. N., collector of customs acting by order of Admiral Caperton, to give us formal instructions to accept, on the latter's account, gold or American banknotes indifferently.

The payments effected on this account, such as the remunerations of the President of the Republic and of the heads of executive departments, as referred to in your aforementioned letter, could therefore only be made in the money actually collected by this account, that is, in gold or American banknotes indifferently. However, it does not follow that our Bank windows ever refused to exchange banknotes for gold coin whenever so asked; this was notably done in the case of the remunerations of the President of the Republic and of the heads of the executive departments.

As regards the payments to the paymasters of the Government departments, the Paymaster of the War Department complained of finding differences (excesses or deficiencies) in the packages of gourdes coming from the Bank. Since then we have wished to require the paymasters to check at our Bank windows the sums paid to them, as is right; all refused to do so, saying they never found any deficiencies in the money paid them by the Bank, which assertion it will be easy for you to verify.

In our offices the nickel is counted, placed in sacks according to denominations, then weighed by way of verification, so that the differences can only be very slight, where there is any difference at all. We do not believe that, out of the payments made with funds arising from sales of dollars, we have given a larger amount of nickel than that of the deteriorated bills arising from these same sales and being in a condition which did not permit of their being placed in circulation. In this connection permit us to remind you that it was at your request that we exchanged, for Messrs. Roberts, Dutton and Co. and Simmonds Brothers, large quantities of deteriorated bills for nickel, which proves that the public prefers nickel to deteriorated bills.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 29, 1915.

Your December 18. Eliminating the appropriations for war, public debt and service of the Bank, contained in the Haitian budget for 1914-1915, that budget, although contemplating a large deficit, made provision for an average monthly expenditure of about $150,000 gold a month.

Inasmuch as the Haitian Government had to make no expenditure for war, public works, public debt and service of the Bank during the months of October, November and December, it should have needed on a basis of the 1914-1915 budget the sum of $450,000. During these months the Haitian Government has actually been in receipt of $385,000 advanced to it by Admiral Caperton. It should therefore require but $65,000 to cover the deficit. The Department believes that the law of December 2 contemplating the expenditure of nearly one million dollars for these three months is unwise, and is not prepared to consent to the use of an advance of $500,000 upon any loan to be made for the purposes contemplated in that law and will not under the terms of the treaty approve an increase of the foreign debt of the Republic of Haiti for any such purpose.

Commission informs Department that Minister Ménos has received telegram from President Dartiguenave instructing him to request Department to authorize Admiral Caperton to pay over all the funds in hand to be reimbursed by loan of two million, and stating that situation of Government is critical and ministerial crisis imminent.

The Department's opinion regarding such loan is stated above and it considers the funds held by Admiral Caperton to be in the nature of a trust fund as these moneys do not belong to the Haitian Government but to the holders of the different debts of that Government. In view, however, of alleged urgency, you will report immediately by cable the amount in your opinion absolutely necessary to defray salaries of public employees for months of November and December which, notwithstanding advances of $25,000 per week, the Department is surprised to learn have not been paid.

The Department has been informed by Mr. Farnham that the Haitian Government has served a notification on the National Railroad Company of Haiti of its intention to foreclose and take possession of the railroad property on the 27th instant under claim of non-compliance with Article 11 of the railroad contract.

You are instructed to inform the Government of Haiti that such method of procedure for foreclosure is, in the opinion of this Government, directly contrary to the provisions of Article 10 of the Cahier des Charges attached to railroad contract, which specifically provides for this contingency. If the reports are correct and the Haitian Government really intends to proceed in the manner first outlined as to taking possession of the property, you are instructed to inform the Government of Haiti that the United States will feel compelled to take such measures for the safeguarding of the rights of this company as it may deem necessary under the circumstances.

The Department's September 23. This morning I had an interview with Minister of Foreign Affairs by appointment and communicated to him the substance of the first two phrases of your telegram leaving a memorandum to which he will reply in writing. He stated that notification served on National Railroad Company of Haiti is to foreclose railroad property and on the 27th instant put it into adjudication, but not to take possession of the same, the proceeds of the sale to go to the concessionaire. The adjudication would not take place actually before September 28. The Haitian Government seems determined on foreclosure on September 28; but, in spite of difference in the Government and concessionaire interpretation of contract, the Haitian Government in a spirit of conciliation would favorably receive a request from railroad company for a stay of execution for sixty days if desired, during which time the company would make proposals for an understanding with the Government. Should these proposals now be accepted, the rights of the parties would be reserved. In that case the proceedings of foreclosure would be delayed until the expiration of the sixty days. I respectfully suggest to communicate with Farnham and if proposition is acceptable have him advise the railroad's representative here accordingly before the morning of 27th.

My telegram of September 25. The Haitian Government has today served notice of foreclosure on the National Railroad Company of Haiti for non-compliance with Article 11 of the railroad contract and given notice of the adjudication of the property on December 28. AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, September 30, 1914.

SIR: I have the honor to forward herewith copy and translation of a note received from the Minister of Foreign Affairs in reply to the memorandum which, at his request, I handed to him at the close of my interview with him on September 25.

As you will observe, the Haitian Government contends that the terms of the railroad contract forbid diplomatic intervention and provide, as the proper mode of procedure in case of disagreement as to the construction to be placed upon any of its terms and conditions, the appointment of a board of arbitration to render a decision as to the proper construction of the contract.

As to the method of foreclosure employed, the Haitian Government claims that it has acted strictly in accordance with Article 10 of the Cahier des Charges.

The Haitian Government further claims that the railroad company has failed to live up to its contract with respect to the delivery of completed sections of the road, setting forth the fact that there is a stipulation in the contract that five completed sections must be delivered every twelve months, while as a matter of fact, up to the present date, only six sections have been delivered, although more than four years have elapsed since the date on which this stipulation became effective.

On the 28th instant, no reply having been received to my cable to the Department of the 25th instant, and having ascertained from the representative of the railroad company here that he had been served with notice of foreclosure for non-compliance with Article 11 of the railroad contract, I availed myself of an opportunity, when calling upon the Minister for Foreign Affairs on another matter, without prejudging what might be the Department's views or those of the concessionnaire regarding the suggestion as to a stay in the proceedings, to point out that owing to the Saturday half-holiday followed by Sunday there was a material impossibility for the Department to communicate with the concessionnaire in season to have a reply reach me on the 27th.

The Minister then remarked that the proceedings had to be carried out regularly; but, as the suggestion had been made in a spirit of conciliation, the request for a stay in the proceedings, if made within a reasonable time, would of course be granted; and he assured me, in that case, of the best dispositions of the Haitian Government to endeavor to come to an understanding with the company. He felt confident that a satisfactory solution could be found by mutual concession through arbitration and suggested that negotiations for such propositions of agreement as the railroad company might make be carried on by me in the interest of the railroad company, under instructions from the Department, with him representing the Haitian Government.

The above views, which I believe to be in earnest and prompted by a sincere desire on the part of the Haitian Government to come to a mutually satisfactory arrangement with the National Railroad Company of Haiti, are respectfully submitted to the favorable consideration of the Department.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to Minister Blanchard.

FOREIGN OFFICE,

Port au Prince, September 29, 1914.

The Department of State for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Haiti received on September 25, 1914, the memorandum which the Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, by order of his Government, was good enough to communicate to it relative to the affairs of the National Railroad Company of Haiti, a corporation, having its principal office at Port au Prince. It states:

The Department of State at Washington has been informed by Mr. Farnham that the Haitian Government has served a notification on the National Railroad Company of Haiti, by an act of bailiff, of its intention to foreclose [its contract] and take possession on the 27th instant of the property of the said railroad company under claim of non-compliance with Article 11 of said contract.

According to the instructions of his Government, the American Minister has the honor to inform the Haitian Government that in the opinion of the Government of the United States such a method of procedure for foreclosure is directly contrary to the provisions of Article 10 of the Cahier des Charges attached to the railroad contracts, which article specifically provides for this contingency.

The Haitian Government upon receipt of this memorandum was greatly surprised at the criticisms made therein, and of the gratuitous intention which is attributed to it of desiring to take possession of the property of the National Railroad Company of Haiti.

The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Haiti begs the Minister of the United States of America to please to examine anew the contracts of the railroads of Haiti and the Cahier des Charges which accompany them; he invites particularly his attention to the following points:

A. "In no case and for no reason shall disputes that may arise as to the interpretation of the clauses of the present contract give occasion for diplomatic recourse." (Article 16 of the contract of April 16, 1910.)

The sense of this article is clear. Its text can not be misunderstood. It renders, therefore, inadmissible the intervention of the Government of the United States.

B. On the other hand, Article 7 of the contract of the railroad from Gonaives to Hinche, of which the National Railroad Company of Haiti is concessionnaire, stipulates that:

All disputes or all difficulties between the concessionnaire and the State as to the interpretation or as to the execution of one or more clauses of the present contract or of the Cahier des Charges shall be settled by a board of arbitration named for that purpose. (Contract of July 19, 1904.)

Article 7 of the contract of the railroad from Cape Haitien to Port au Prince, of which the same company in concessionnaire, contains the same clause and lays particular stress on the board of arbitration called to solve the difficulties which might arise between the Government and the Company. This article is worded thus:

All disputes or difficulties between the Company and the State as to the interpretation or the execution of one or more clauses or provisions of the present contract or of the Cahier des Charges, shall be settled by a board of arbitration named for that purpose. Each party will designate an equal number of arbiters who, if they can not agree, shall select an umpire to cast the deciding vote, and from whose decision there shall be no appeal.

Therefore, supposing that the procedure employed against the National Railroad Company of Haiti was irregular or contrary to a stipulation of the contracts which bind the parties, the company could only have recourse to arbitration, the only means of ascertaining these difficulties and settling them.

C. These points having put in evidence the inadmissibility of the intervention of the Government of the United States in the litigation that exists between the Government of Haiti and the National Railroad Company of Haiti, there remains to have it recognized that the procedure followed in the present case is, for the Republic, in accord with all involved principles.

The procedure employed for the foreclosure and adjudication has even been provided for in Article 10 of the Cahier des Charges annexed to the contract of April 16, 1910.

(a) As to foreclosure or forfeiture, Article 11 of the contract of concession expressly states:

In the course of the first year after the promulgation of the law sanctioning the present convention, the Company shall deliver at least one section [of the railroad to be constructed], and every twelve months thereafter an average of five sections, except in case of force majeure duly verified, and this under penalty of foreclosure, so as to complete the whole system in five years or earlier.

(b) As to the procedure in case of foreclosure, Article 12 of the contract or convention of April 16, 1910, and Article 10 of the contracts of July 19, 1904, and September 12, 1906, state that—

At any time when the foreclosure or forfeiture may be incurred, there shall be no other formalities to be fulfilled for its execution than those provided for in Article 10 of the Cahier des Charges annexed to the concession-contract. [Article 12 of the contract or convention of April 16, 1910.]

If the concessionnaire incur a foreclosure, the Minister of Public Works, without further summons, shall serve on him a notification thereof by bailiff, and shall put in adjudication the concession, the existing property (material, rolling stock, etc.), and the construction completed and still to be completed. And the concessionaire or his assigns shall receive the amount of the adjudication, costs deducted, without right of claiming any indemnity. [Article 10 of the contracts of July 19, 1904 and September 12, 1906.]

The fact is that the Company has not delivered the sections which should be delivered in accordance with Article 11 of the convention of 1910. It has delivered only six sections designated as follows: (1) Cape-Grande Rivière; (2) Gonaïves-Ennery; (3) Port au Prince-Arcahaie, Arcahaie-Mont Bouis-St. Marc; and (4) Grande Rivière-Bahon.

At this date, September 27, 1914, it ought to have delivered 11 sections, since Article 11 says that it should deliver five sections, at least, every twelve months, the concession having commenced August 6, 1910, at which time it had to deliver one section.

For the other years—August 1911 to August 1912, August 1912 to August 1913, and August 1913 to August 1914—it should have delivered fifteen sections.

On the part of the Government there have been three successive extensions of time (total 11 months) which extensions permit the company to say that it has eleven sections to deliver instead of 16, but the fact is that there are only six sections in operation up to this date, September 27, 1914. No disputes can be raised on these extensions of time with respect to the sections already delivered, which are six in number instead of eleven. These are facts which can be materially proven.

The Haitian Government is sure that as soon as the Honorable Mr. Bailly-Blanchard shall have communicated to the Department of State the clauses of the contracts of concession and of the Cahier des Charges, the Government of the United States, in its high impartiality, will recognize that the procedure which has been followed with regard to the Company is well founded.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 2, 1914.

Your September 28. As result of conference by Department with representative National Railroad Company, you are instructed to request of Haitian Government that all proceedings against company which it has notified be extended or held in abeyance to December 28 as indicated by Haitian Government might be done, without prejudice to rights of parties, during which time the Department will endeavor to bring company and Haitian Government to an arrangement including readjustment of contract and possible shortening of route resulting in saving and advantage to Government, and for a commission in nature of arbitration to adjust all differences satisfactorily and to advantage of both parties. Say to Haitian Government that in dealing with interests of company Department thinks it should not overlook the general disturbed financial situation and might well consider consequences arising from summary action at this time in estranging available sources of financial assistance. It is best for all concerned that a satisfactory adjustment should be tried and arranged, if possible, previous to any final procedure by Haiti, thereby removing possible action by United States in pressing claims of company should it appear, as now appears possible, that company's rights may not have been afforded full consideration and due process of law.

Department thinks it well that this matter be brought to attention of President Zamor and Charles Zamor.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, October 14, 1914.

Your October 2. In aide memoire replying to my memorandum, Foreign Office confirms views as expressed to me in several interviews and concessions made as follows:

It insists that diplomatic intervention is inadmissible because such is the agreement of the parties in interest and because arbitration, the principle and terms of which are already provided for in the contract, has been adopted as the sole means of settling possible differences between them should there be occasion to have recourse thereto; but through international courtesy grants the request made in the name of the National Railroad Company for a stay of proceedings until December 28, rights of parties reserved. It hopes that during this time the company through authorized representative will make to the Haitian Government propositions for an understanding. The Foreign Office further notes the possibility of proposals tending to a readjustment of contract and possible shortening of route resulting in economy and advantage to the Haitian Government.

The Haitian Government seems to have every disposition to come to an understanding with the company on above basis and its proposals to that end are respectfully submitted to the favorable consideration of the Department.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, October 16, 1914.

SIR: Referring to your cable of October 2 and to my cable of October 14, I have the honor to forward herewith copy and translation of the aide memoire received from the Foreign Office in reply to this Legation's memorandum on the subject of the controversy between the Haitian Government and the National Railroad Company of Haiti.

As you will observe, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Haiti grants the request for a stay in proceedings up to December 28, as desired. He calls attention to the fact that, according to the terms of the contract, diplomatic intervention has been agreed upon by the parties to be inadmissible; and that arbitration, the principle and forms of which are provided for in the contract, has been adopted as the sole means of settling the differences, should there be occasion to have recourse thereto.

The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs further states that in granting the request for the delay, the Haitian Government has been promoted solely by the dictates of international courtesy and expresses the hope that the National Railroad Company will, through its authorized representatives, submit propositions for an understanding. He further stipulates, should there be no agreement arrived at within the time granted, that the rights of all parties are reserved.

The Foreign Office notes further that the railroad company is disposed to propose a readjustment of the contract resulting in a possible shortening of the route, and economy and advantage to the Haitian Government.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs and General Charles Zamor, Minister of the Interior, expressed themselves as highly appreciative of the action of the Department of State, which they understood at the time to be in the light of an offer of its good offices. Later, however, upon my presentation of the memorandum which embodied your telegram in its corrected form, the Minister for Foreign Affairs remarked at once that the terms suggested contemplated diplomatic intervention, which was inadmissible, and insisted that all of his former statements to me in previous interviews on the subject were expressions of his personal views and therefore unofficial, and that he rested upon his first reply in writing.

Notwithstanding this change of attitude due to an absolute objection to diplomatic intervention, in view of the terms of the contract, I am convinced, inasmuch as the Minister for Foreign Affairs has since that time again reassured me of his favorable intentions, that the Haitian Government has every disposition to reach a mutually satisfactory solution; and, inasmuch as upon the failure to arrive at any conclusion during the delay granted, the rights of parties will be reserved, it would seem to be to the interest of all concerned to attempt a solution of the differences by above means.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to Minister Blanchard.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Port au Prince, October 12, 1914.

The Secretariat of State for Foreign Relations of Haiti, in reply to the memorandum of the American Legation of the 6th of October, has the honor to recall to the American Minister at Port au Prince the formal terms of its preceding note, dated September 29, 1914, of which the first point indicates the inadmissibility of any diplomatic intervention in the affair of the National Railroad Company of Haiti:

- (a) because such is the agreement of the parties,
- (b) because the parties have adopted arbitration as the sole means of settling possible differences between them.

However, while maintaining the principles and reasons of this inadmissibility, the Secretary of State for Foreign Relations of Haiti accepts, through pure international courtesy and for the high consideration which he personally has for the representative of the United States of America at Port au Prince, the request for a delay made in the name of the National Railroad Company, that is, until December 28, 1914. By this it can be seen that the Government of the Republic of Haiti has never had the intention to dispossess, to its profit, the National Railroad Company of its rights and advantages. This acceptance of delay being made under the express reserve that, if in the interval there is no understanding between the parties in interest, they will resume their rights which will stay and will remain in the same and similar state.

Consequently, the Secretariat of State for Foreign Relations hopes that during that lapse of time the National Railroad Company will submit to the Government of the Republic of Haiti, through its authorized representatives all the propositions for solution of the matter in conformity with the interests of the parties.

The Secretariat of State for Foreign Relations of Haiti takes note that the National Railroad Company is disposed to propose to the Government of Haiti a readjustment of the contracts, resulting in a possible shortening of route and an economy and advantage for the Government of the Republic of Haiti.

The Secretariat of State for Foreign Relations thinks it useful to remind his excellency M. Bailly-Blanchard, in answer to the last part of the memorandum in question, that the principle and the forms of arbitration are already provided for in the contract which binds the parties, in case there would be occasion to have recourse thereto.

Port au Prince, December 26, 1914.

The Department of Foreign Relations has had the honor to receive to-day the memorandum of the 24th instant, by which [etc.]

In response, the Department of Foreign Relations has the honor to inform the American Legation that the Government of the Republic of Haiti, in order to give the Government of the United States a new testimony of its sincere spirit of conciliation, is happy to accept the good offices of the American Government and is willing to consent to a suspension, until a date to be fixed later, of the putting into adjudication of the concession of the National Railroad Company of Haiti, all things remaining as they are and without any prejudice in anything to the principle set out in Art. 16 of the contract of concession of April 16, 1910.

The Department of Foreign Relations thinks it ought to renew here the declaration that this acceptance of suspension is under the express reserve that if in the interval no understanding has been arrived at between the parties to the cause the procedure will continue in conformity with the contract which binds the Haitian Government and the National Railroad Company in Haiti.

The Department of Foreign Relations retains the hope that this company will present without delay to the Haitian Government, by its authorized representatives, all propositions susceptible of bringing about a just solution of the pending questions.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, January 18, 1915.

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 26, I have the honor to forward herewith copy and translation of the note from the Foreign Office under date of January 13, 1915, notifying this Legation that unless the basis of an agreement, at least, was arrived at before January 20, that day would mark the end of the suspension previously accorded.

It will be observed that the Minister of Foreign Relations explains this action on the part of the Government by the fact that, since October 6 last, no propositions of agreement have been submitted and that an indefinite delay would cause grave prejudice to the interests of the State.

It will be further noted that the Minister of Foreign Relations expresses the hope that before January 20 the National Railroad Company will have decided to yield to the efforts which "the Department of State . . . has not failed to make to bring it to an arrangement."

With reference to the above, I verbally reminded Mr. Borno that at the time that these negotiations were being had with the then Minister of Foreign Relations, Mr. Désert, he declined to accept the intervention of the Department of State in the settlement of this difference, claiming it to be contrary to the contract which, on its face, precluded diplomatic intervention, granting, on the ground of international courtesy, the request for a suspension made in the name of the National Railroad Company of Haiti—as reported in my telegram of October 14 and my dispatch No. 12 of October 16, 1914.

FOREIGN OFFICE,

Port au Prince, January 13, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: By its memorandum of October 6, 1914, the Legation of the United States requested from the Department of Foreign Affairs a delay up to December 28, of the same year, in the procedure of adjudication of the contract of the National Railroad of Haiti.

In granting, by pure courtesy, the delay requested, my Department declared, in its reply of October 12, 1914, that this assent was made under the express reserve that, if in the interval no understanding was come to between the parties concerned, they would reserve their rights in same and similar state.

On December 24 last, the Legation of the United States having expressed the desire of the American Government to obtain a new delay, my Department on December 26 decided to consent to a delay up to a date to be fixed later, but stipulating that all things should remain as they are and that, if in the interval no understanding was come to between the parties concerned, the proceedings would continue in conformity with the contract which binds the Haitian State and the National Railroad Company of Haiti.

For the reason that from October 6, 1914, up to this date no proposition of agreement has been presented by the Company, and as an indefinite delay would cause grave prejudice to the interests of the State, I have the honor to bring to your knowledge that, after January 20, unless, at least, the basis of this agreement has been settled, the Haitian Government will be forced to carry out the execution pure and simple of the contract of concession in that which concerns the procedure of adjudication.

I hope, Mr. Minister, that from now to January 20 next the National Railroad Company of Haiti will have decided finally to yield to the efforts which the Department of State, in conformity with the memorandum of October 6, from your Legation, has not failed to make to bring it to an arrangement "including readjustment of contracts and possible shortening of route resulting in saving and advantage to the Government."

In that legitimate hope, I beg [etc.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the 20th instant the Minister of Foreign Relations called at the Legation with reference to the notification of the expiration, on that day, of the delay in foreclosure proceedings instituted against the National Railroad Company of Haiti, with regard to which he has received no reply.

I stated that, up to that time, I had received no instructions touching on this matter. Whereupon he stated that in a spirit of conciliation he would be willing to further extend to a later time the date of foreclosure, should I address to the Haitian Government a note embodying this request. This I declined to do, stating that I did not feel authorized to make any request in the name of the above company. He then proposed that I have the representative of the railroad company here discuss in conference with us as to a future date. This I likewise declined, as the latter was not empowered to act in the premises, adding that, as he remembered, my Government had expressed a hope that the matter be held in suspension until such time as it could be settled in Washington. The Haitian Government had decided to delay such proceedings to a date to be fixed subsequently. On the 13th of January the Legation had been notified that this suspension would terminate on the 20th—a fact which had been communicated to my Government by cable, and to which no reply had been received. If, under these circumstances, the Haitian Government decided to further extend the stay in proceedings, I considered that it should be upon its own initiative, inasmuch as the date of January 20th had been fixed in a like manner.

He thereupon stated that the Haitian Government would extend the time limit to February 20, and that he would address me a note accordingly.

On January 23 I received the note above referred to, dated January 21, a copy and translation of which is herewith forwarded.

Port au Prince, January 21, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to confirm the conversation which we had yesterday morning in reference to my letter of January 13, by virtue of which the suspension of the adjudication of the foreclosure of the concession of the National Railroad Company of Haiti expired on the 20th of this month.

The Haitian Government—taking into account the great actual difficulty of telegraphic communications, appreciating the force majeure which makes it impossible for the National Company to present before January 20, 1915, the basis of accord between the parties—decides to suspend until February 20, 1915, the procedure of adjudication begun by the notification of foreclosure September 28, 1914.

It remains understood that—this delay to February 20, 1915, having passed without the basis of accord (which ought to embrace, without distinction, all pending questions) having been arrived at between the Haitian Government and the National Railroad Company—there will follow the execution pure and simple of the contract of concession in regard to adjudication, as well as to all actions whatsoever resulting for the Haitian State from violation of this contract by the National Company.

In the firm hope that the good advice of the Legation of the United States will make this company finally understand the necessity of a prompt and loyal arrangement,

I beg you [etc.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 2, 1915.

Admiral Caperton suggests that the Department use its good offices to induce the National Railways to begin work immediately. Those connected with the financing of the railway have explained to the Department certain acts of injustice on the part of Haiti and indicated that if the treaty is ratified these matters can then be adjusted and work renewed with a clear understanding regarding the extension of time to be granted in which construction under concession is to be terminated. That will, it is hoped, mean increased vigor in prosecuting the work and increased satisfaction on the part of the Haitian Government.

The Department regrets that the funds expected to be collected from the customhouses will not suffice to provide work to stop disorders of the men in the north. If this condition continues to exist after the remaining customhouses have come under American control, the Department will, looking to a maintenance of public order, provided Admiral Caperton considers it to be urgent, endeavor to arrange with bankers for an advance sufficient to employ the hungry and indigent citizens.

NOTE.—The message was read to the Congress on January 1, 1915, and transmitted to the Secretary of State January 7, 1915, by the American Minister. The following is the only passage referring to the United States.

[Translation—Extract.]

The commission appointed to prepare all the matters concerning our participation in the coming exposition at San Francisco, California, has continued with success and zeal its labors gathering, classifying and preparing all the objects and products by which Honduras will be represented at that great gathering.

For reasons of commerce, geographical proximity and other reasons, the Government of Honduras continues to cultivate the frankest, most cordial and friendly relations with the United States of America through the Chancelleries and respective Ministers. The one in this capital, Mr. John Ewing, like his predecessors, shows the greatest desire to maintain and make stronger the bonds of loyal friendship which unite the two Governments.

TREATY FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF GENERAL PEACE, CONCLUDED BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND ITALY.

Signed at Washington, May 5, 1914; ratification advised by the Senate, August 13, 1914; ratified by the President, March 17, 1915; ratified by Italy, November 29, 1914; ratifications exchanged at Washington, March 19, 1915; proclaimed, March 24, 1915.

Treaty Series No. 615.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Treaty between the United States of America and Italy looking to the advancement of the cause of general peace, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Washington on the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, the original of which Treaty, being in the English and Italian languages, is word for word as follows:

The President of the United States of America and His Majesty the King of Italy, being desirous to strengthen the bonds of amity that bind the two countries, and also to advance the cause of general peace, have resolved to enter into a treaty for those purposes, and to that end have appointed as their Plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States of America, the Honorable William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State; and

His Majesty the King of Italy, His Excellency the Marquis Cusani Confalonieri, Commander of the Order of Saint Maurice and Saint Lazarus, Grand Cordon of the Order of the Crown of Italy, etc., His Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at Washington;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

The High Contracting Parties engage to submit for investigation and report to a Commission, to be constituted according to the provisions of the following Article, all differences of whatever nature they may be which may occur between them which can not be composed by diplomatic methods or are not submitted to a tribunal of arbitration; they bind themselves not to declare war nor to open hostilities during the examination by the Commission and before the Commission has presented its report.

ARTICLE II.

The International Commission shall be composed of five members appointed according to the following rules:

Each country, by means of its Government, chooses two members, one from among its own subjects, the other from among those of a third State; the two Governments, after agreement, will name the fifth member, on condition, however, that he be not a citizen of either of these two countries. Each Commissioner shall hold his place during a term of four years; at the expiration of this term, or in the event of vacancy, the confirmation or the substitution of the Commissioner whose term may have expired or whose place may be vacant shall be made in the same manner.

Each of the High Contracting Parties shall have the right, before the investigation has begun, to substitute for one of the members of the Commission appointed by it another one chosen from the category to which the Commissioner to be replaced belonged.

When the Commissioners be actually occupied in the examination of a question they shall receive a compensation which will be mutually agreed upon by the High Contracting Parties.

The expenses of the Commission shall be borne by the two Governments in equal proportion. The International Commission shall be appointed within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty.

ARTICLE III.

In case the High Contracting Parties shall have failed to adjust a dispute by diplomatic methods or by means of a tribunal of arbitration, it shall at once be referred, either by common agreement or by one or the other party, to the International Commission for investigation and report.

The Commission must inform the two Governments of the date on which it will begin its labors, inviting them to furnish it with all the documents and to lend it the cooperation necessary for the investigation.

The High Contracting Parties engage to furnish all the documents and to afford all facilities for the investigation and the report, provided that in their judgment this does not conflict with the laws or with the supreme interests of the State, and provided that the interests and rights of third States shall not thereby suffer damage.

In the absence of an agreement to the contrary between the High Contracting Parties, the Commission will itself adopt regulations governing its procedure.

The report of the Commission must be presented within a period of one year after the date on which it shall declare its investigation to have begun, unless the High Contracting Parties may have shortened or prolonged by mutual agreement this term. The report shall be prepared in triplicate; one copy shall be presented to each Government, and the third shall be placed in the archives of the Commission.

The High Contracting Parties reserve to themselves the right to act independently on the subject matter of the dispute after the Commission shall have presented its report.

ARTICLE IV.

The present Treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and by His Majesty the King of Italy, and the ratifications shall be exchanged as soon as possible.

The Treaty will come into force, for a period of five years, immediately after the exchange of ratifications. It will thereafter remain in force for twelve months more after one of the High Contracting Parties shall have notified the other of its intention to terminate it.

In witness whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty and have affixed thereunto their seals.

Done in duplicate in the English and Italian languages at Washington this fifth day of May, in the year 1914.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN [SEAL.]
CUSANI [SEAL.]

And whereas the said Treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the ratifications of the two Governments were exchanged in the City of Washington, on the nineteenth day of March, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Treaty to be made public, to the end that the same and every article and clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this twenty-fourth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and [SEAL.] fifteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-ninth.

EXCELLENCY: It not having been found feasible to complete the international commission provided for in the treaty of May 5, 1914, between the United States and Italy, looking to the advancement of the general cause of peace, within the time specified in the treaty, which expires to-morrow, I have the honor to suggest for the consideration of your Government that the time within which the organization of

Your formal notification in writing, of the same date as this, that your Government receives the suggestion favorably, will be regarded on this Government's part as sufficient to give effect to the extension, and I shall be glad to receive your assurance that it will be so regarded by your Government also.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: By note of to-day's date your excellency, in view of the fact that it had not been feasible to complete the Commission provided for in Article 2 of the Convention of May 5, 1914, between Italy and the United States, for the prevention of international conflicts, and that, on the other hand, the time set by the Convention for the appointment of the said Commission expires tomorrow, was pleased to propose through me to the King's Government that the time within which the Commission may be completed be extended by an exchange of notes from September 19, 1915, to January 1, 1916. Your excellency added that my formal notification in writing, of the same date of to-day, that the said proposition is accepted by the Italian Government would be regarded on the part of the Government of the United States as sufficient to give effect to the extension.

I have the honor and hasten, for my part, to inform your excellency that my Government readily agrees to an extension of the time within which the above mentioned Commission may be appointed until January 1, 1916, and that it also regards the exchange of to-day's notes as sufficient to give effect to the extension.

MR. AMBASSADOR: With reference to your last note, of the 9th of December, No. 341, in regard to the Cassetta case,³ I have the honor to inform your excellency that the Minister of War has just advised me that the incomplete information as yet in the possession of that Ministry regarding Domenico Cascetta or Cassetta makes it necessary to still further delay a definite reply to your excellency's inquiries regarding him.

It has been ascertained, however, that Domenico Cascetta, the son of Anello and Gentilella Rosa, was born at Auletta, in the District of Sala Consilina, on May 30, 1878, and his present military status is perfectly regular, because the class to which all those born in the same year in which he was born has been enrolled in the Third Category.

The Prefect of Naples as well as the Under Prefect of Sala Consilina have been unable to furnish any explanation regarding the obstacles which are alleged to have been interposed to prevent Mr. Cassetta's return to the country of his adoption. On the contrary, those officials affirm that no demand has ever been made upon them for a passport by Mr. Cassetta.

Speaking generally upon this subject of the return to the United States of former Italians naturalized in that country, I have the honor to point out to your excellency that while the provisions of Royal Decree No. 803 of August 6, 1914, may have suspended the emigration from Italy of every one of military age, nevertheless a circular telegram from the Ministry of the Interior dated September 7 last, which circular was afterwards confirmed by the Ministry of War, with a desire of moderating somewhat the effects of that decree, authorized the prefectural authorities of the Kingdom, in all cases of admitted and proven necessity, to issue passports to those belonging to the Third Category and, generally speaking, to those belonging to the Territorial Militia as well.

In view of the foregoing, it would not have been very difficult for Mr. Cassetta to have obtained permission to return to the United States, whenever he made the proper showing that it was necessary for him to go there.

In order for him to obtain a passport it will be necessary that he apply to the Under Prefect at Sala Consilina, which is his recruiting district.

In conclusion, it should be pointed out that Cassetta, even if he had proved that his Italian citizenship had been lost in order for him to have obtained his American citizenship, could not be exonerated by this fact, from military service in Italy in view of Article 12 of the Civil Code, which was in full force and effect at the time he acquired his American citizenship, and at the time when he should have been in Italy performing his duties as a soldier.

uralized American citizens of Italian origin, have been received and read with interest.

In your despatch of November 3, you expressed your belief that, in view of the desire of the Italian authorities to encourage American tourists to visit Italy, it might be found possible to conclude a naturalization treaty between the United States and Italy. However, in your despatch of December 14, you said that the status had apparently changed, and that you had received a different impression from your last conversation with the Foreign Minister. The Department hopes that you will keep this very important matter in mind, and report when you come to the conclusion that the time is opportune for the reopening of negotiations with the Italian Government looking to the conclusion of a naturalization treaty. It is hardly necessary to say that the conclusion of such a treaty would be the only satisfactory way of settling the status in Italy of naturalized American citizens of Italian origin. It is hoped that the Italian Government, when it is fully convinced of the expediency of having a full and free intercourse between Italy and the United States, and when it is persuaded that this Government has no desire to protect Italians who have not obtained naturalization as citizens of the United States in good faith, or those who have expatriated themselves by protracted residence in their native land, under the provision of Section 2 of the Act of March 2, 1907, will come to the conclusion that a naturalization treaty would be of mutual advantage to the two countries.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,

SIR: I have the honor * * * to recall to the Department the Embassy's previous despatches on the subject of the detention in Italy of those American citizens of military age who are considered by the Italian Government to be still Italian subjects when in Italy.

The prospects of obtaining the desired permission to return to the United States for naturalized citizens of Italian origin liable to military service in the Reserves are, unfortunately, not very hopeful. The Ambassador has pointed out that the Embassy has especially directed its efforts to cases where the applicant was born in the United States of an Italian father naturalized subsequent⁴ to the son's birth; but even in these cases no definite satisfaction has been obtained, as, under the doctrine of dual allegiance and in the absence of a naturalization treaty, they are held to be Italian subjects when in Italy.

The phrases "detained by military authorities", or "refused permission to return to the United States", which are used by the applicants and in the correspondence between the Department and the Embassy should perhaps be briefly explained.

No Italian subject of military age, i. e., under 39, is permitted to leave Italy without permission; and in consequence the steamship companies generally refuse to sell tickets to anyone not provided with such permission. Moreover, the ship is searched at the port of departure and those bearing an Italian name, even if furnished with a foreign passport, are obliged to give proof that they are entitled to leave.

It will be seen, therefore, that the military authorities are only indirectly detaining the applicants, except in those rare cases where he is actually under arms, either performing his regular military service or serving in one of the few classes of First Reserves now mobilized.

MY DEAR MR. LANSING: I am much indebted to you for your telegram⁵ and also for your letter of the 2d.⁵ I enclose herewith certified copies of the court record of Antonio Da Prato's naturalization and of the birth certificate of his son Ugo. Their citizenship, therefore, is perfectly clear.⁶

⁶ See For. Rel. 1914, pp. 422-423, inclosure 28.

I note what you say in regard to the Italian law, which obviously does not apply to young Da Prato; but, speaking generally, I cannot assent for a moment to the proposition that such a thing as dual citizenship is possible. As you well know, we constituted ourselves the champions against the doctrine of indefeasible allegiance and have succeeded in compelling the acceptance of our view by all the nations with the exception, I think, of Russia and Turkey. The abandonment of indefeasible allegiance is in itself the establishment of the principle that there can be no such thing as dual citizenship, either in whole or in part, and to attempt to retain the right over a boy born in this country of parents not naturalized—which is not the case with Da Prato—for military service in the country of origin of the parents is absurd on its face and is something to which we should never assent for a moment. The German law, promulgated on January 1, 1914, is of course a denial of the doctrine for which we have successfully contended for three quarters of a century and carries with it the monstrous proposition that a man retaining allegiance in the country of origin is supported by that country in committing perjury by taking the oath of allegiance to the United States and becoming naturalized and renouncing allegiance to the country of birth while he retains citizenship there. The proposition is so preposterous that it is difficult to state it intelligently. Italy, for example, has no possible claim on the children of Italian parents, not naturalized, born in this country, especially if they have exercised all the rights of citizenship as they are entitled to do under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. Such a child has never been an Italian subject for one minute. Italy has no more claim on him than she has on one of my children or on one of yours. I believe that there is also something similar to this in French law. We shall find ourselves in a very awkward position with our large body of naturalized citizens and their children if we do not take the strongest position against Article 12 of the Italian Civil Code which you quote.

Very truly yours,

H. C. LODGE.

252. From affidavit of brother of Frank L. Ghiloni it appears that latter resided in Italy about ten years during childhood, returned this country at age of twelve and resided here continuously until last June, when he went to Italy for his health on advice physician, confirmed by physician's affidavit. His father naturalized when Ghiloni was less than one year old.

Call Italian Government's attention to fact Ghiloni was born a citizen of the United States under its law. As he was domiciled in this country when he attained majority, nearly nine years ago, has evidently made practical election American nationality, and visited Italy last June for a temporary purpose, it would seem just and reasonable for the Italian Government to permit him to leave Italy and return United States. It is hoped Italian Government, upon a full presentation of these facts, will grant this.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 9, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR LODGE: I have received your letter of June 5, 1915, in reply to my letter of June 2, concerning the detention in Italy for military service of Ugo Da Prato, who was born in Boston, August 25, 1895, and went to Italy in 1912 to study architecture, and whose father, Antonio Da Prato, a native of Italy, obtained naturalization as a citizen of this country in the District Court of the United States at Boston, March 19, 1892, that is, before the son's birth. Accompanying your letter are the birth certificate of Ugo Da Prato and the naturalization certificate of his father.

The Department has telegraphed to the American Ambassador at Rome, directing him to call the attention of the Italian Government to the facts mentioned above, ask for the immediate release of Ugo Da Prato, and report the result. As Ugo Da Prato was born in this country after his father had obtained naturalization as a citizen of the United States, it does not appear that he can be considered an Italian subject under Italian law, and I have no doubt that he will be released. I shall be glad to inform you of the Ambassador's report.

In the Department's letter of June 2 you were asked to forward not only the birth certificate of Ugo Da Prato, but the naturalization certificate of his father, and in this connection the following statement was made:

The Department is being called upon to take action in a good many cases similar to that of Ugo Da Prato. The Italian law concerning naturalization of Italians in foreign countries is peculiar. Article 11 of the Italian Civil Code contains the following provision:

Article 11. Citizenship is lost by the following persons:

1. * * *
2. He who has acquired citizenship in a foreign country.

Article 12, however, reads as follows:

Article 12. The loss of citizenship in the cases mentioned in the foregoing article does not work exemption from the obligations of the military service, nor from the penalties imposed on those who bear arms against their country.

Under the provisions of law mentioned, the Italian Government recognizes the naturalization of Italians as citizens of other countries, but holds them liable for military service in Italy unless they have been expressly excused therefrom. In view of Article 11, persons born in this country of fathers naturalized before their births are not considered Italian subjects or held liable for military service in Italy. It is very important that in each case of this kind the Department should be furnished with the best documentary evidence procurable of the naturalization of the father and the subsequent birth in this country of the son, so that necessary assurances may be given to the Italian Government.

In your letter under acknowledgment you make the following observations:

I note what you say in regard to the Italian law, which obviously does not apply to young Da Prato; but, speaking generally, I cannot assent for a moment to the proposition that such a thing as dual citizenship is possible. As you well know, we constituted ourselves the champions against the doctrine of indefeasible allegiance and have succeeded in compelling the acceptance of our view by all the nations with the exception, I think, of Russia and Turkey. The abandonment of indefeasible allegiance is in itself the establishment of the principle that there can be no such thing as dual citizenship, either in whole or in part, and to attempt to retain the right over a boy, born in this country of parents not naturalized—which is not the case with Da Prato—for military service in the country of origin of the parents is absurd on its face and is something to which we should never assent for a moment.

After making some observations concerning the provision of the German law of nationality of June 1, 1914, according to which Germans who obtain naturalization as citizens of other countries may, under certain conditions, retain their German nationality, and after observing that any alien who endeavors to retain his original allegiance when he takes an oath of allegiance to the United States and becomes naturalized as a citizen of this country commits perjury, you say:

Italy * * * has no possible claim on the children of Italian parents, not naturalized, born in this country, especially if they have exercised all the rights of citizenship as they are entitled to do under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution. Such a child has never been an Italian subject for one minute. Italy has no more claim on him than she has on one of my children or on one of yours. I believe that there is also something similar to this in French law. We shall find ourselves in a very awkward position with our large body of naturalized citizens and their children if we do not take the strongest position against Article 12 of the Italian Civil Code which you quote.

The argument contained in your letter is similar to that in an article which appeared in the June number of the Metropolitan magazine, in reference to the Department's letter of April 2 to Mr. P. A. LeLong, Junior, of Louisiana, concerning his citizenship.⁷ In the Department's letter to Mr. LeLong his attention was called to the fact that although having been born in this country he was an American citizen under American law it appeared that he was also born a French citizen under French law, because of the fact that his father was a French citizen. The Department therefore observed that he appeared to have been born with "a dual nationality."

As this general subject has been the cause of considerable comment, I venture to discuss the matter at some length.

Dual nationality is not a theory or doctrine promulgated by the Department, but is the unavoidable result of the conflicting laws of different countries. Under the American law of nationality, which is derived from the English law, American nationality is based primarily upon the fact of birth within American territory and jurisdiction, under what is known as the jus soli; whereas in the countries of continental Europe nationality is acquired primarily through descent, under the jus sanguinis. This follows naturally from the basis of jurisdiction which in the common law is the locus and in the civil law the persona. The Revised Statutes of the United States, however, contain the following provision in Section 1993 (Act of April 14, 1802):

All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be at the time of their birth citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States.

A provision substantially similar to the above was added to the original British law of nationality. Also the laws of some, although not all, countries of continental Europe contain provisions under which nationality is acquired, under certain conditions, through birth within their territory. The status of a person who is born a citizen of one country under the jus soli and a citizen of another country under the jus sanguinis is commonly termed "dual nationality." Whether or not this term is considered apt, the fact remains that many persons are born citizens or subjects of two countries under their respective laws. Thus a person born in Italy of American parents is born a citizen of the United States, provided his father has resided in this country; but under certain conditions he may also be considered an Italian subject. Also, a person born in the United States of Italian parents is born a citizen of the United States under the law of this country, and a subject of Italy under the law of Italy.

The fact of dual nationality has been recognized by the Department for many years. Secretary of State Fish in a report to the President dated August 25, 1875, said:

The child born of alien parents in the United States is held to be a citizen thereof and to be subject to duties with regard to this country which do not attach to the father.

⁷ See, under France: Liability to French Military Service, inclosure 2 with Mr. LeLong's letter of April 8, 1915, p. 387

The same principle on which such children are held by us to be citizens of the United States, and to be subject to duties to this country, applies to the children of American fathers born without the jurisdiction of the United States, and entitles the country within whose jurisdiction they are born to claim them as citizens and to subject them to duties to it.

Such children are born to a double character; the citizenship of the father is that of the child so far as the laws of the country of which the father is a citizen are concerned and within the jurisdiction of that country; but the child, from the circumstances of his birth, may acquire rights and owes another fealty besides that which attaches to the father. (Moore's International Law Digest, Volume 3, page 520.)

I desire further to call your attention to the following statement in the report of the Citizenship Board which was appointed during the administration of President Roosevelt "to inquire into the laws and practice regarding citizenship of the United States, expatriation, and protection abroad, and to report recommendations for legislation to be laid before Congress," which report was forwarded to the Speaker of the House of Representatives by Secretary of State Elihu Root, with a letter of approval and commendation, dated December 18, 1906:

Inasmuch as our Government declares that all persons born in the United States are citizens of the United States, and also recognizes, as well as adopts, on its own part, the rule that children of citizens resident abroad are citizens of the country to which the parents owe allegiance, there arises, as will be seen, a conflict of citizenship, spoken of usually as dual allegiance. (House Document No. 326, 59th Congress, 2d Session, page 74).

A full discussion of the subject of dual allegiance may be found in Moore's Digest of International Law, Volume 3, pages 518-551.

For the reasons mentioned above it is obviously important for the Department, in dealing with the case of a person who was born in this country and had a father of Italian birth, to ascertain whether his father had previously acquired naturalization as a citizen of the United States. This is especially important when it is a case, such as that which you have presented, of a person who has not yet reached his majority. The extent to which this Government may go and the arguments which it may use in the actual protection of persons who were born in the United States of alien fathers and who may be molested while temporarily visiting the countries of origin of the latter must necessarily depend upon the particular facts and circumstances of each case. In no case, in the absence of conventional arrangements, can the Department assure such persons in advance that they will not be held liable, under the laws of other countries concerned, for the performance of military or other public service attaching to citizenship. In the Department's letter of May 5 to Mr. P. A. LeLong, Junior, the following statement was made:

If at any time in the future you should find it necessary to visit France and should there be molested upon the ground that you are a French citizen, you should inform a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States, who would report the matter to the Department in order that it might take such measures in your behalf as would seem warranted by the peculiar facts and circumstances of your case.

The Department, having advised American citizens generally "to avoid visiting unnecessarily countries which are at war," did not encourage Mr. LeLong to choose the present time to make an unnecessary test of his political position in France.

The cases of persons born in the United States of alien parents should not be confused with the cases of persons born abroad who have obtained naturalization as citizens of this country. In the former cases the Department recognizes now, as it always has heretofore, that the persons concerned are born with a dual nationality. In the latter cases the Department does not recognize the existence of dual nationality in view of the fact that persons who obtain naturalization as citizens of this country are required to renounce their original allegiance.

While this Government holds that naturalized American citizens cannot rightfully be called upon to perform military or other obligations which had not actually accrued before their emigration, the Department has always deemed it advisable to call the attention of naturalized Italians to the position in which they will be placed in case they voluntarily return to Italy. During and since the administration of President Roosevelt the Department of State has accordingly issued a circular warning them to this effect, entitled: "Notice to American Citizens Formerly Subjects of Italy who Contemplate Returning to that Country," which contains the following statement:

Naturalization of an Italian subject in a foreign country without consent of the Italian Government is no bar to liability to military service.

Similar circulars have been issued during and since the administration of President Roosevelt calling attention to the status in their native lands of naturalized citizens of the United States born in France and other European countries. In the circular concerning naturalized Germans attention is called to the fact that naturalization of such persons in this country is recognized by the German Government under the treaties concluded with the German States in 1868, commonly known as the "Bancroft Treaties." In this connection I may say that the United States has concluded naturalization treaties with the following countries of Europe besides Germany: Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Great Britain, Norway, Sweden and Portugal.

With reference to your remarks concerning the status of Germans who acquire naturalization in this country, and particularly to the provision of the new German law of nationality according to which German allegiance may be retained under certain conditions by Germans naturalized abroad, I may say that it is quite true that no alien can lawfully acquire American citizenship through naturalization and at the same time voluntarily retain his original nationality; for the third section of the Naturalization Act of June 29, 1906, makes the following requirement of every alien applying for naturalization as a citizen of this country:

He shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly by name to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; that he will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and bear true faith and allegiance to the same.

It is obvious that any person who takes the oath just quoted and at the same time voluntarily retains or attempts to retain his original allegiance is guilty of perjury and dishonor. Moreover, the naturalization of such a person would be open to cancellation as fraudulent, under the provision of Section 15 of the Naturalization Law.

The Department of State has not been informed of any case in which a German has attempted to acquire American citizenship through naturalization and at the same time retain his German nationality under the provision of Section 25 of the German Law of Nationality.

In closing, allow me to say that this Government has not receded from the position taken many years ago as to the natural right of men to make a voluntary change of nationality, commonly known as the right of expatriation. Nevertheless the Department of State deems it proper to continue the practice which it has followed for many years of informing naturalized American citizens of the position in which they will find themselves in case they voluntarily visit their native countries. For the same reason the Department deems it proper to warn persons having a dual nationality of the claims which may be made upon them by the other countries concerned. It is believed that the Department would not be performing its full duty in this matter if it should fail to give this information.

Very truly yours,

ROBERT LANSING.

321. Department's 254, June 9. Embassy has made several urgent representations to Foreign Office on behalf of Ugo Da Prato during past few months. Foreign Office, May 4, stated military authorities after full investigation ruled that his father Antonio, now in Italy, reacquired Italian citizenship under Law No. 555 of June 13, 1912, because he had returned to Italy and resided here more than two years; further, that this citizenship had been communicated to the son and consequently the son is found to be an Italian citizen and must perform military service.⁸ Embassy is continuing to press for release, but decision of military authorities in all these cases has been adverse.

261. Your 321, June 10. Inform Italian Government Ugo Da Prato has been residing in Italy temporarily to study architecture. His father, Antonio Da Prato, has been there representing his firm, A. Da Prato Company of Boston, dealers in marble and works of art, and also preparing exhibit of company for Panama Exposition. As his stay in Italy has been in the interest of trade and commerce between that country and the United States, it seems manifestly unreasonable to apply to him the provision of Italian law mentioned in your telegram. For this reason and because Ugo Da Prato was born an American citizen and evidently had no intention to resume Italian nationality, it is earnestly hoped latter will be speedily released.

NAHANT, MASS., June 16, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have received your letter of June 9 in reply to my letter laying before you the case of Ugo Da Prato who has been held for service in the Italian Army. You very properly asked me for proof of his birth in this country subsequent to the naturalization of his father as an American citizen, and I sent you proofs both of the father's naturalization and of the son's birth in the city of Boston. These facts clearly took the case out of the provisions of the Italian Code, but your intimation, as I understood it, that if these facts had not existed and if young Da Prato's father had not been a citizen of the United States we should have had no claim for his release, led me to make some observations of a general character and in very general terms on the theory of dual citizenship or dual nationality.

As a matter of course I am familiar with the doctrines of the jus soli and the jus sanguinis to which you refer, and also with the conflict of laws, which has been the subject of much learned discussion and which exists in regard to other matters as well as in regard to citizenship. But the fact that there is a conflict of laws is very different from admitting that the law in conflict with our own is valid. Because Italy, or any other country, has a law which conflicts with ours it does not follow that we should fail to sustain our own law and our own doctrine. If we did so there would be no conflict of laws because we should then submit to the law of another country instead of maintaining our own. In a case like that of LeLong this conflict of laws would arise both with France and Italy, yet there can be no doubt whatever that under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution LeLong is a citizen of the United States and as such is subject to all the duties and entitled to all the rights of a citizen of the United States including that of protection by the Government. The fact that France or Italy, or any other country, makes a claim upon an American citizen, situated as LeLong was, does not alter the duty of the United States toward him under our own Constitution.

The report of Secretary Fish, which you cite, says that such children are born to a double character, which is no doubt true; but if the child acquires and exercises the rights of a citizen of the United States it does not seem to me that he can be deprived of the rights which we give him by the laws of another country of which his father happened to be a citizen.

Secretary Root, in the report which you cite, refers to it as a "conflict of citizenship," which is correct, and says it is usually spoken of as a dual allegiance, which, if I may venture to say so, is a loose and misleading phrase, for a man can have but one allegiance even if two countries by their laws make claim to him as a citizen or subject.

What I said in my first letter was due to the fact that it seems to me that the United States should never, and particularly at this time should not, abate in any way in its duty to those who under its own Constitution and Laws are American citizens, or fail to support their rights as we have established them or permit them to be in any way infringed. Under the German law, which was promulgated I believe in January, 1914, we have a different situation. That law does not create a conflict of laws, but establishes a dual allegiance, which, as you point out, is contrary to our laws and absolutely incompatible with our oath of allegiance.

Very truly yours,

H. C. LODGE.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegram No. 254 of June 9 and telegram No. 261 of June 14 in regard to the detention by the military authorities of Ugo Da Prato, I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of my last note to the Foreign Office upon the subject, which I have handed personally to the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon.

This case has been receiving the Embassy's most earnest attention since it was first brought to its notice in November of last year by the American Consul at Leghorn, and it has been the subject of considerable correspondence between the Embassy and the Foreign Office.

Recognizing the importance of the principle on which this case is based, I took occasion to discuss again with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, the entire subject of the detention in Italy of native-born American citizens, born after the naturalization of their father.

I impressed on him the fact that it has, for more than a hundred years, been a traditional principle of the United States to protect its citizens, and that it was one which he would, I felt sure, recognize as impossible to be waived. He promised to have the question studied carefully at once.

I beg to enclose also a copy of the last note of the Minister of Foreign Affairs regarding the case.

ROYAL MINISTRY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Rome, May 4, 1915.

Mr. AMBASSADOR: In relation to my note No. 6 of January 7 last,^o I have the honor to communicate to your excellency that the Minister of War has just informed me that, from the information he has been able to gather and from the communications received from the interested parties, it appears that Mr. Antonio Da Prato, the father of the young man Mario Ugo Da Prato (the said father having lost his Italian citizenship before the birth of his son, by reason of his having taken out naturalization papers in the United States), having changed his residence a number of times between the United States and Italy, finished finally by establishing himself in 1911 with his family in Italy, where he has resided continuously ever since.

Such being the facts in the case, the Ministry of War has been obliged to find that Mr. Antonio Da Prato, in accordance with the provisions of Article 9 No. 3 of the Law of June 13, 1912, numbered 555, has reacquired Italian citizenship, because of his having returned to the land of his nativity and resided therein for more than two years.

That Ministry is also obliged to maintain that this same Italian citizenship, in accordance with Article 12 of the above cited law, has been communicated to his son, Mario Ugo, now residing with his father.

For these reasons, young Mario Ugo Da Prato is found to be an Italian citizen, amenable to military service; that his name cannot be removed from the recruiting lists of the Kingdom; and that he must soon respond to the call to the colors and serve as a soldier in the Italian army.

authorities of Mario Ugo Da Prato, a native born American citizen, born after his parents had become duly naturalized American citizens, I have the honor to inform your excellency that I have just received from my Government the following telegram, expressive of the great interest which is taken by my Government in the case:

[Quotes Department's telegram 261 of June 14.]

Your Excellency will appreciate the point raised by my Government, namely, that the father's residence in Italy has been in the interest of trade and commerce between Italy and the United States and not, as has apparently been considered by the Royal Italian Ministry of War, by reason of a permanent change of residence.

Consequently, it would certainly seem that the Law No. 555 of June 12, 1912, which was quoted in your excellency's note of May 4, No. 25019/101, should not be applied in this case.

In fact, this case and the few other cases of native-born American citizens—born, like this youth, after their parents became American citizens—rest on a principle which is, I believe, recognized by Italy and by all other powers; and I feel confident that when the fact shall be realized, your excellency's Government will appreciate the earnestness with which the case is now presented, and the sanctity of the principle involved.

I therefore hope that your excellency will enable me to send a favorable telegraphic reply to my Government at the earliest possible moment.

SIR: With reference to the Department's letter of June 9 and other correspondence concerning the detention in Italy for military service of Ugo Da Prato, a native American citizen, I send you herewith a copy of a despatch No. 318 of June 17, 1915, from the Ambassador at Rome, and copies of its enclosure: a note of May 4 from the Italian Foreign Minister to the Embassy, and a note of June 16 from the Embassy to the Foreign Minister. It appears from the latest correspondence in this case that the Italian authorities contend that Antonio Da Prato, father of Ugo, has resumed his original status as an Italian subject, under Italian law, in view of his residence of over two years in his native land, and that his son has thereby been naturalized as an Italian subject. As you will also note, the Ambassador, under instructions from the Department, has protested against the application of the Italian law mentioned, in the cases of Ugo Da Prato and his father, since it is understood that they both went to Italy for temporary residence, the father to represent the firm of A. Da Prato and Company of Boston, and the son to study architecture.

The Department is telegraphing to the Ambassador to report by telegraph as to what reply, if any, has been received to his note of June 16 to the Italian Foreign Minister. Meantime it is suggested that it might be well for you to obtain and send to the Department such evidence as may be procurable concerning the temporary nature of the residence of the Da Pratos in Italy. In this connection it might be well to obtain from an officer of the firm of A. Da Prato and Company an affidavit stating his knowledge concerning the residence in Italy of Antonio Da Prato and his son Ugo, their present connections of property, business and family with this country, and their intention of returning to the United States for permanent residence.

It is considered by this Government that the principle of election of nationality should be recognized in cases of persons born with dual nationality, whether or not the municipal laws of the countries concerned prescribe definite modes of election. This Government has no desire to intervene in cases of persons who were born in the United States of Italian parents but were domiciled in Italy upon attaining majority, are still domiciled there and have evidently elected Italian nationality. It appears from this affidavit that Antonio Da Prato is still president of the A. It appears further that the father and son did not go to Italy to reside permanently, but intended, and still intend, to resume their residence in this country.

You will please present copies of the papers mentioned to the appropriate Italian authorities, and express the earnest desire of this Government that Ugo Da Prato's name be removed from the Italian military list, and that he be permitted to leave Italy and return to the United States. As stated in the Department's telegram No. 261 of June 14, it is not believed that the provision of Italian law mentioned in your telegram No. 321 of June 10 is applicable to the case of Antonio Da Prato, who evidently went to Italy for mere temporary residence, in the interest of the Massachusetts concern of which he is president. You may add that the case of the Da Pratos has been made public and discussed widely in the newspapers of this country, and that general dissatisfaction would result if the Italian Government should insist that these men are Italian subjects. Moreover, it is believed that such a decision on the part of the Italian authorities would not be propitious to commercial intercourse between Italy and the United States. It may be of interest to observe that Section 2 of the American Expatriation Act of March 2, 1907, provides that a residence of two years by a naturalized American citizen in his native land raises a presumption that he has ceased to be an American citizen, but that "such presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence to a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States under such rules and regulations as the Department of State may prescribe." Under circular instruction ¹⁰ of April 19, 1907, to American diplomatic and consular officers entitled "Expatriation," as amended by the circular instruction ¹¹ of May 14, 1908, a naturalized American citizen against whom the statutory presumption of expatriation has arisen may overcome such presumption by presenting evidence "that his residence abroad is solely or principally as a representative of American trade and commerce, and that he intends eventually to return to the United States permanently to reside." It thus appears that Mr. Antonio Da Prato is in a position to overcome the presumption arising under the law mentioned that he has ceased to be an American citizen. It would not be amiss to mention this phase of the matter to the Italian authorities.

NAHANT, July 29, 1915.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I am enclosing herewith an affidavit from Giovanni Da Prato, acting president of the A. Da Prato Company, showing, as suggested in your letter of the 12th, Antonio Da Prato's business interests here together with his property and real estate. Certified copies of these deeds and mortgages can be furnished if desired but I do not suppose that it is necessary. It is perfectly evident that Antonio Da Prato not only has not given up his residence here but that he always had and still has the animus revertendi.

I hope that this affidavit may enable the Department to obtain favorable action from the Italian Government.

Very truly yours,

H. C. LODGE.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Rome, August 4, 1915.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 221 of December 14, 1914, I have the honor to report that I have again taken up with the Minister for Foreign Affairs the subject of a naturalization treaty between the Governments of the United States and of Italy. In view of the numerous cases which have arisen, and of the conflict of laws of the two countries touching the calling under military service by the Royal Italian Government of American citizens of Italian birth and descent, and of the consequent misapprehension which appears to arise therefrom, and indeed of the friction which may be caused thereby, it has seemed opportune to me to bring this matter of a naturalization treaty again to the attention of the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

On Saturday last in presenting a note to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, asking for the release from detention for military service by the Royal Italian Government of the American citizen Agostine Modesto Berardini, I took occasion to go again over the whole subject of the detention of American citizens. Some of these were naturalized and others were born American citizens of naturalized parents of Italian birth. I presented to the Minister personally with the utmost earnestness the difficulties and, indeed, to some extent, the perils which the present status of the apparently conflicting laws of the two countries or at least of the conflicting interpretation of those laws on this subject contains. And I urged upon him the importance of having without delay a convention of naturalization which should eliminate what appears to be fraught with a real menace to the good relations existing between our two countries.

I pointed out to him the obvious fact that the protection of our citizens, especially of those who are citizens by birth, is, irrespective of any treaty, one of the fundamental rights of those citizens and one of the fundamental duties of every government; that the protection of naturalized citizens is equally fundamental both as a right and as a duty where it does not contravene some other fundamental law; and that it is the part of wisdom, where such dangers are apparent, to obviate them in time by providing against them in clear and unmistakable terms.

He enquired what our experience had been with Germany, which he said must have had many such cases to deal with. I told him I could not speak as to recent experiences, but I hardly thought Germany's attitude one which either of us could cite as quite applicable at the present time.

I feel that I made some impression upon him because our interview ended with his asking me to send him a list of all the cases for whose release I had applied, placing them in two classes: one, those of persons born in America after their fathers' naturalization, and the other containing those born previous to naturalization.

He said further that he would have the whole question relating to the detention and discharge of such persons carefully studied.

I informed him that his office was full of notes relating to these cases. He said he knew that, but would like to have a personal note from me segregating the cases into two classes and he would see if any distinction could be drawn between them.

I have accordingly sent a note relating to the cases, of which I believe there were nine in all, still unsettled.

In view of the foregoing I do not think it would be amiss to have a form of some convention which might be acceptable to our Government and also give promise of being reasonably acceptable to the Italian Government, prepared and sent me, so that I might bring to the attention of the Italian Government in a rather more definite way, though, of course, only by way of suggestion, our desires on this subject. This might serve as the beginning of negotiations which might lead eventually to the negotiation of a treaty reasonably acceptable to both Governments.

I could, of course, formulate such a draft myself, along the lines of our treaties with Germany and Austria-Hungary, but I fancy that it would be better done in the Department, where there is greater familiarity with such forms than I could pretend to possess. Moreover, I desire to have an expression of your views on the details of this important matter.

SIR: With reference to the Department's despatch No. 188 of July 29, 1915, I have the honor to state that information of Enrico Ajello was first brought to the attention of the Embassy by the American Consul at Naples, who enclosed me a copy of a telegram sent [April 16] to the Department asking for information regarding the American citizenship of Ajello. Following this I received a letter from the Consul, dated May 4, 1915, from which I give the following extract:

It is understood that the local authorities, now being satisfied that Mr. Ajello is a native-born American citizen, are willing to permit him to embark, notwithstanding the fact that he is not able to prove to their satisfaction that he was born after his father acquired American citizenship.

After this Mr. Ajello came to Rome and requested that this Embassy telegraph to his brother (see my telegram No. 332 of June 18, 1915) asking him to send him $100 with which to pay his passage to America, also stating at the same time that he felt sure that he would not be prohibited from leaving Italy if he had a sufficient amount to pay his passage. Since that time he has not been heard from.

I am today writing the Consul at Naples to know if Mr. Ajello has returned there and his present situation.

SIR: Referring to the Embassy's telegram No. 383 of this morning, reporting the release from military service of Mario Ugo Da Prato, I have the honor to enclose, herewith, translation of the Foreign Office note received this morning which gives this information.

I desire respectfully to draw attention to the second paragraph, which virtually states that Da Prato must return to the United States, or in any case leave Italy within two months.

It would appear to me that, from the point of view of international law, the Italian Government has not the right in this case to enforce the departure from Italy of a native-born American citizen, though I realize that in municipal law it possesses the right to deport any foreigner.

The Department will doubtless give the Embassy instructions by telegraph, should it desire any action taken upon this point. I may, however, express a personal opinion that it would perhaps be inadvisable at this time to raise objections, owing to the great difficulty which the Embassy has experienced in securing the release of American citizens now with the colors.

It will be recalled (see the Embassy's despatch No. 318 of June 17) that the Foreign Office in its note of May 4 (a copy of which was enclosed in the above-mentioned despatch) claimed that Da Prato had resumed his Italian nationality, or rather had become an Italian subject through his father's residence in Italy.

The Royal Ministry of War has added, however, that said concession has been made under the presumption that Da Prato intends to reestablish his residence abroad, as would appear from his petition, and for such expatriation a period of two months from the date of release has been fixed, which is similar to those rules regulating leave for temporary residence at home (in patria) of soldiers granted provisional exemption in time of peace.

SIR: Referring to Department's No. 194 of August 4, the Department is already in receipt of information that Ugo Da Prato has been released from military service by the Royal Italian Government, together with other Italian citizens, born of Italian parents after their father had become naturalized. This is in accord with a desire expressed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs to find some line of demarcation by which, according to his view, cases of American-born citizens whom Italy can release without change of her fundamental law may be segregated from cases in which release would require such change, which I understand him to consider impossible.

In this connection I have the honor to report that I have just received from the Foreign Office a despatch, of which I enclose a translation, relative to the cases of Francesco Ghiloni and Leroy Barsotti, both of whom it appears were born before their fathers became naturalized American citizens.

In the case of Leroy Barotti, the Ministry for Foreign Affairs replied by note verbale of July 19, forwarding the decision of the Royal Ministry of War relative to this Embassy's application for Barsotti's release, a copy of which is hereto attached.

In the case of Francesco Ghiloni, the Foreign Officer has repeated the decision of the Royal Ministry for War, maintaining its position that even if he had during his minority lost his Italian citizenship in consequence of the naturalization obtained in the United States by his father, that fact would not have exempted him from military service in Italy under Art. 12 of the Civil Code. A copy of the translation of the said note verbale of date May 16, 1915, is herewith enclosed.

NOTE VERBALE.

In reply to the American Embassy's note of April 28, The Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs regrets very much to be obliged to make known to that Embassy that according to a decision just received from the Royal Ministry of War Francesco Ghiloni belonging to the Class of 1885 cannot be considered as exempt from his military obligations in Italy.

In fact, even if he had during his minority lost his Italian citizenship in consequence of the naturalization obtained in the United States by his father, that fact would not have exempted him from military service in Italy, as is explicitly pointed out in Art. 12 of the Civil Code, which was still in force when he was called to the colors with the class to which he belongs by reason of his age.

This being the state of the case, the Royal Ministry of War has instructed the Prefect of Lucca to summon Ghiloni before him for personal examination, and for his enlistment before the Council of Recruiting of that Military District.

NOTE VERBALE.

In response to the esteemed note verbale of the American Embassy of May 28, concerning Leroy Barsotti, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs has the honor to communicate to that Embassy the following almost textual translation of the decision rendered by the Royal Ministry of War relative to the American Embassy's application for his release from military service:

The soldier Leroy Barsotti was included in the general mobilization of the Kingdom and obeyed the call to arms of the Class of 1894 to which he belonged without making any objections upon the ground that he was a foreigner.

Consequently, while not denying that this young man during his minority had lost his Italian citizenship because of the naturalization of his father in 1903, it is held that he has now reacquired that Italian citizenship according to the terms of Art. 3, para. 1 of the Citizenship Laws of the Kingdom now in force, and is therefore held to be definitely enlisted in the military service of the Kingdom.

The Ministry of War regrets therefore very much that it is not able to consent to the liberation of the said Leroy Barsotti.

In response to the American Embassy's esteemed note verbale No. 750 of September 13, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs has the honor to communicate to that Embassy the following information furnished by the Royal Ministry of War relative to the prohibition of emigration of Italian subjects:

By Royal decree No. 803 of August 6, 1914, the emigration abroad of all Italian subjects having military obligations, that is, from 18 to 39 years of age, was prohibited.

In pursuance of the terms of this absolute prohibition, however, there were allowed a few exceptions in cases of proven necessity, especially for those Italians whose military obligations were comparatively slight, such as those belonging to the third category and to the territorial militia.

However, in consequence of the Royal decree of mobilization, the said prohibition was again placed in full force and effect, absolutely without exception, by which no one having military obligations was allowed to leave the country for private reasons, even though he may belong to classes and categories not yet summoned to join the army.

NOTE VERBALE.

In response to the American Embassy's esteemed note verbale of September 4 last, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs regrets very much to be compelled to inform the Embassy that the Ministry of War has decided that Francesco L.

Ghiloni cannot be exempted from military service in Italy, for the reason that he was born an Italian and only afterwards took up his abode and citizenship in another country.

In so far as concerns the condition of his health, he must present himself before the proper medical officers of his regiment and request a medical examination which will, of course, be given him, after which he will be accorded the same treatment as his fellow-soldiers and in accordance with the rules and regulations now in force in the Italian Army.

ROME, November 18, 1915.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I reached Rome last Thursday evening, having visited the Consulates at Marseilles, Nice and Genoa on my way from Paris.

The passport work here appears to be well organized, and there are not so many citizenship cases presented as there are at London and Paris. Probably the most difficult cases arising from the war have already been settled, that is, as far as they can be settled. So long as we continue to have no naturalization treaty with Italy, it appears to be impossible to obtain from the Italian Government a solution satisfactory to our Government of the cases involving military service in Italy on the part of Italians naturalized in the United States. I understand that in a few cases such persons have succeeded in leaving Italy and returned to the United States; but that the Italian Government conceded nothing in principle, and, as a matter of fact, usually compels naturalized Americans of Italian origin, who are found in Italy, to perform the military service for which they are liable under Italian law.

I understand from the Ambassador, moreover, that the Italian authorities have expressed an unwillingness to consider negotiations for a naturalization treaty at this time, for the reason that they are too much occupied by the war.

As to persons born in the United States of Italian parents, the Italian authorities have released those born after the naturalization of their parents as American citizens, as in the Da Prato case; but refuse to release those born before the naturalization of their parents, as in the Ghiloni case, whether or not the persons concerned are domiciled in the United States or appear to have made a practical election of American citizenship.

The Italian Government insists upon enforcing strictly the Italian law governing nationality and military service. This law is peculiar and, from our point of view, inconsistent; for, while it grants that Italians naturalized abroad lose their Italian nationality, it nevertheless holds them liable for the performance of military service in Italy, if such service had not already been performed before emigration.

The Italian law differs in this respect from the French law, which does not recognize a change of nationality at all until the necessary military service has been performed or a special permission to cast off French nationality has been obtained.

In view of the very large emigration from Italy to the United States it appears to be important to obtain a naturalization treaty if possible. Perhaps, if the Italian Government becomes convinced that our expatriation law is being enforced and that our Government has no desire or intention to protect naturalized Italians who return to Italy to live, of whom there are many, a satisfactory treaty may finally be obtained.

Very respectfully yours,

R. W. FLOURNOY, JR.

SIR: Immediately upon the receipt of the Department's telegram⁵ No. 327 of September 23 instructing me to obtain if possible the release from military service in the Italian army into which he had been impressed of Benni Guerrini, I presented the facts in his case to the Foreign office and requested the good offices of that Ministry with a view to obtain his release.

I am today in receipt of the decision of the military authorities, a copy of which is herewith transmitted.

The decision sets forth that if Guerrini had protested against his enlistment such a protest would have received favorable consideration. The military authorities claim, however, that he voluntarily sought enlistment and point out that there is a specific Italian law to the effect that voluntary enlistment cancels foreign citizenship. It is therefore held that Guerrini must remain in the Italian army until the end of the present war.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

In response to the American Embassy's note verbale No. 765 of September 25, last, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs has the honor to make known to that Embassy that the Ministry of War, having given full consideration to the demand made by that Embassy for the release from military service of Benni Guerrini, regrets very much that it is not able to accede to such request.

The Royal Ministry of War points out, as a matter of fact, that Guerrini, having been born after the naturalization of his father, would have had the right, of his own accord, to have his name canceled from the military recruiting lists of the Kingdom; but that he did not elect to avail himself of such legal right.

On the contrary, at the time his class was called to the colors, far from desiring to be considered as a foreigner, he voluntarily requested and obtained, upon the presentation by him of the necessary documents, the privilege of being assigned to the second category, in which class he has been actually serving since February 7, 1915.

Upon the application to this case, therefore, of the provisions of Article 3, No. 1 of the existing Citizenship Law of June 13, 1912, No. 555, it results that this young man has re-acquired full Italian citizenship in consequence of his voluntary enlistment and must therefore remain unquestionably and fully amenable to the military requirements of Italy.

SIR: I have the honor to report that your telegram No. 415 of the 16th instant relating to the case of Enrico Ajello, held in Italy for military service arrived in the afternoon of the 17th, and I immediately sent an earnest note to the Foreign Office, pressing the case on the attention of the Italian Government, and asking for a response at as early a moment as possible. I endeavored to make an appointment to see the Minister of Foreign Affairs yesterday and called personally at that Ministry with regard to the matter; but as neither the Minister nor the Under Secretaries were able to receive me at that time, I called this morning again and had an interview with the Under Secretary (il Capo di Gabinetto), whom I have often found to have practical charge in similar matters.

I impressed upon him, with the utmost earnestness, our contention that this man, born in America, and having lived in America substantially all of his life continuously, could not be regarded as coming within the category of those liable to what may be termed the duties of dual citizenship; but was only an American citizen, although his father, who had lived in America since before his birth, had taken out naturalization papers only after his birth.

I pointed out to him the difficulties that might arise and appeared on the point of arising, should the retention of a man thus situated be insisted upon. In fact, I employed every argument which seemed to me possible, and, as you may imagine, my earnestness was not lessened, from the fact that I had from time to time, had to help Ajello with modest personal donations to relieve his necessities.

It is a fact, however, as you will readily recall, that hitherto, no one born prior to his father's naturalization has been formally released by the Italian Government from the call to military service, although in certain instances men thus situated have been allowed to return to America without such formal release.

In pressing this case, I took occasion again to present what appeared to me the necessity for a naturalization treaty between our two Governments, and in arguing how easy it was for the people of one country or another to become excited over the apparent injustice of unrecognized authority on the part of another power, over their fellow-citizens, I was able to present forcibly the danger of serious friction arising between our two countries over just such cases as this.

How far this will affect the desired result in Ajello's case I can not say, for I have gone over the same subject before with the Minister for Foreign Affairs himself; but I am ready to take as firm a stand in regard to these American born citizens as I may be authorized to take.

It appears to me, indeed, that the justice in these cases is entirely on our side and that it is archaic to claim, in this age of the world, that the rights of a government follow its emigrants to the second generation.

I shall continue to do all I can in this and similar cases, and stand ready to carry out your instructions as to these cases as firmly as you may feel the situation shall demand.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the formal accession to the Throne of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan duly took place as prescribed in the series of events scheduled in the "Imperial Ordinance Relative to the Accession to the Throne of His Imperial Majesty" which I have already had the honor of forwarding to the Department. The chief ceremonies took place upon November 10, the days following being filled with ceremonies of lesser importance. The representation of the United States was augmented by the presence of the Commander-in-Chief of the Asiatic Fleet of the United States and his suite.

On November 11 the vernacular newspapers all printed a despatch, in the vein of the following extract taken from the Nichi Nichi Shimbun of that date:

According to the telegram from Washington, President Wilson sent a congratulatory telegram to the Emperor of Japan, on the occasion of his Coronation, sending his heartfelt congratulations on that auspicious occasion, and at the same time sincerely hoping for the welfare of His Majesty the Emperor and of the Royal Family, and for the continuation of the friendly relations between Japan and the United States.

The latter days of the festivities were saddened by the very sudden death of his excellency Señor Francisco J. Herboso, the Minister of Chile, on November 17, at the Kyoto Hotel, where the American Representation was entertained by the Government together with the representatives of most of the Diplomatic Corps. His funeral, at which representatives of Their Majesties the Emperor and the Empress were present, took place on November 25.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that upon the occasion of the recent visit of the Commander-in-Chief of the American Asiatic Fleet and his suite on board the flagship Saratoga to Japan during the festivities in honor of the accession to the Throne of His Majesty the Emperor, the entire American Naval Representation was accorded marked courtesy, and their presence was manifestly a matter of great pleasure to the Japanese Government. Moreover the American Government was the only government which was honored by having a naval representation invited to take part in the accession festivities.

I took advantage of the occasion of a recent visit to the Foreign Office to thank Baron Ishii for the courtesies extended to Admiral Winterhalter and to the fleet during the stay of the flagship Saratoga in Japanese waters. He said he was himself greatly pleased by the visit and was satisfied that the presence of the vessel at this time had produced an excellent impression. Both his remarks and his manner in uttering them were exceedingly cordial in his expression of pleasure over the event. He himself referred specifically to the fact that ours was the only foreign navy represented in the review and in the accession ceremonies of which it was a part.

Upon the occasion of a recent entertainment at the Imperial Palace the Emperor made apparent his pleasure at the presence of Admiral and Mrs. Winterhalter among the guests by greeting them and personally expressing his gratification. The courtesy shown, however, was not restricted to the Admiral and the officers in his suite, but was extended to the sailors themselves by the authorities at Yokohama, in such ways as obtaining for them free admission to the local theaters, by providing free transportation in trolleys and by numerous similar acts of hospitality.

No. 22.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Tokyo, November 24, 1913.

SIR: The Department's telegram of September 25, instructing me to request the provisional arrest and detention of John Eills on a charge of perjury, pending arrival of the extradition papers, and instructing me to take special precautions for the protection of the defendant's infant daughter in the meantime, was duly received, and a formal application in accordance therewith was immediately made to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

On October 11, I received a letter from the Foreign Office advising me that the defendant has been located on information furnished by this Embassy, and would be arrested on the morning of that day, and requesting me to take proper steps for the protection of the child, as there would be no one to care for her but a Japanese maid, who it was feared might desert her through fright on learning of the arrest.

Presuming that the arrest had been effected in accordance with the above-mentioned advice from the Foreign Office, in the afternoon I sent Mr. Caldwell of the Embassy, accompanied by his wife, to Eills' home, and took the child under my own care. It turned out, however, that the defendant had not been arrested; and when he learned of my action, he called for his child, took her away, and, in pursuance of a promise made to me, placed her in the household of Baron Kanda, a gentleman of high character, who undertook to care for her, agreeing to keep her until extradition has been disposed of. This arrangement was faithfully carried out.

The defendant was finally arrested on the 13th of October, and kept in prison until November 7, when he was discharged on the order of the Minister of Justice.

The defendant was very anxious to be released on bail pending the receipt of the extradition papers, and as the Department of Justice refused to grant bail without my consent, he both personally and through his attorney and friends made a proposition to secure such consent, which was cabled to the Department under date of October 15. This proposition was that, if consent was given to the release of the defendant on bail, he would agree not to resist extradition, and would place his daughter with such temporary guardian as I might select. On the receipt of the Department's telegram of October 17, stating that the extradition papers had been found to be in proper form, and instructing me not to consent to bail, the negotiations were broken off.

On receipt of the extradition papers, they were promptly delivered to the Minister for Foreign Affairs for transmission to the Department of Justice.

On the 7th instant the request for extradition was refused and the defendant discharged, of which action I was duly informed by a note from the Minister for Foreign Affairs, dated November 8, a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

So far as I can learn, the consensus of professional opinion here is that the affidavits on which the warrant of arrest was issued do not charge any acts on which a person could be held for perjury in Japan.

This opinion seems to be based on two grounds: First, that in Japan a proceeding for the confinement of an alleged insane person is administrative, not judicial, and therefore an affidavit made in such a proceeding is extra-judicial and not covered by the law defining the crime of perjury; secondly, that in Japan a party in interest is not entitled to be sworn as a witness, and even if erroneously so sworn, a false statement made by him will not constitute perjury under the law.

The representative of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, after taking local advice, did not request me to file a protest against the decision with the Department for Foreign Affairs and accordingly I have not done so.

As there is no definition of perjury in the treaty and we could not therefore demand extradition, unless the acts charged would under the laws of Japan constitute that crime if committed in Japan, it seemed to me that the only possible ground would be a denial of the interpretation of their own laws by the Department of Justice. Accordingly, I thought it proper to await further instructions after a full report.

While as already stated I have not filed a formal protest, I have had two protracted interviews with Mr. Denison, Legal Adviser to the Foreign Office, in which the questions involved were fully discussed. Mr. Denison was positive in his approval of the position taken by the Department of Justice, saying that there was not the slightest doubt that the facts charged in the affidavits on which the warrant was issued would not constitute perjury under the laws of Japan.

Messrs. Dewey and Flynn, concluding that extradition could not be secured on the evidence contained in the present extradition papers, have left for the United States.

With a view to the possibility of securing the surrender of the defendant's daughter, by bringing an action in the Japanese courts, Mr. Dewey has entrusted Mr. N. W. McIvor, an American lawyer in Yokohama, and Mr. Akiyama, a Japanese barrister-at-law of prominence, to investigate the law on the subject.

MONSIEUR L'AMBASSADEUR: In reference to the request made by your excellency's Government for the extradition of John Eills, the fugitive from the justice of the United States, I had the honor to reply by my note dated the 28th ultimo that said Eills having been arrested, proper steps are being taken in the matter by the competent authorities of the Empire. As the result of their inquiry into the matter, the identity of the fugitive in question has been established and it has been made clear to their satisfaction that the copies of the depositions are duly authenticated, that a warrant had been issued when the request for his provisional arrest was made and that the request for the extradition was made through the proper diplomatic agent. In their opinion, however, the act committed by Eills does not constitute perjury under the laws of the Empire; in other words, under the laws of the Empire the present case cannot be deemed to afford sufficient criminal evidence to justify his examination; and accordingly, in view of the stipulation of Art. V., Clause 3 of the Extradition Treaty between Japan and the United States, the Imperial Government are not in a position to surrender Eills. Under these circumstances the Imperial Government regret that they are unable to comply with the request for the extradition of John Eills.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Boston, November 24, 1914.

SIR: The following is a statement of the facts in the Eills case, which I understand you wish to use in dealing with the representatives of His Imperial Majesty the Mikado of Japan.

Harriet and John Eills were married in 1904. In 1907 their only child, Olga, was born. Mr. Eills was engaged from time to time in various professions in various different localities.

In the fall of 1911 they settled in Chicopee, Hampden County, Massachusetts. For some time their married life had been unhappy.

Early in February, 1912, Mr. Eills, a woman doctor friend of his from Boston, and a Chicopee doctor, executed the necessary affidavits to have Mrs. Eills committed by the judge of the Chicopee police court to the insane hospital at Northampton. The hospital authorities, after a careful examination for about two weeks, found that she was not insane and had never been insane, and accordingly discharged her. The Chicopee doctor, a reputable physician, has since stated that he relied entirely upon the woman doctor and executed the papers as a matter of professional courtesy. The judge who committed her later signed the warrant for the arrest of Eills for perjury in connection with the commitment affidavit.

As soon as Mrs. Eills was released she petitioned the Probate Court of Hampden County (case 34221) for custody of Olga. This petition was allowed by the Probate Court April 2, 1912. Mr. Eills at once appealed to the Superior Court (case 3061). On February 21, 1913, the Superior Court affirmed the order of the Probate Court, except that the days on which Mr. Eills was permitted to have the child were specified.

At both trials there were introduced writings of Mr. Eills in favor of "free love," and other writings of his, tending to show that for some time he had planned the false imprisonment of his wife, so as to be free to devote his time to other women. Copies of the two decrees and a memorandum of the judge of the Superior Court are enclosed.

The day following the decree of the Superior Court was one of the days when Mr. Eills was to be permitted to have the child. He took her, left the Commonwealth in violation of the decree, and went directly to Japan, where he has remained ever since.

The mother left no stone unturned to find her child, and finally in September, 1913, after the police had given up hope, located Mr. Eills in Tokyo.

The District Attorney of Hampden County at once requested extradition on the perjury charge. A copy of the requisition is doubtlessly in your files. The Imperial Government of Japan refused to surrender Mr. Eills, for the reason that a false oath by the petitioner in a legal proceeding is not perjury in Japan; which ruling the Commonwealth did not feel inclined to contest.

The Eills case has had wide publicity and presents a particularly flagrant example of defiance of our courts. His apparent immunity, it is feared, will lead others to disrespect Massachusetts decrees. In accordance with my statutory duty to enforce the orders of our courts, in cases of great public concern, I have appealed to you to secure, if possible, through diplomatic channels, the enforcement of this decree.

Very truly yours,

THOS. J. BOYNTON.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your letters of November 24 and December 23, 1914, in regard to possible action by this Department looking towards the return to this country from Japan of the minor daughter of Harriet and John Eills.

After careful consideration of the matter the Department has reached the conclusion that it is without authority to take action at the present time.

As Mr. R. S. Hoar of counsel for Mrs. Eills was informed by telegrams of October 20 and 27, 1913, it appears that the question of the custody of the Eills child is for the determination of the courts and it would seem necessary for Mrs. Eills to employ an attorney in Japan in the event that she desires to bring the matter before the courts.

As the Department added in its said telegram of October 27, 1913, it "can not assume in advance that the question will not be justly decided by the Japanese courts. In the event of an unfavorable decision in the lower courts, before there would be any grounds for diplomatic intervention it would be necessary to show that the case had been carried to the Japanese court of last resort and that a denial of justice had resulted."

So far as the Department is informed, Mrs. Eills has instituted no such legal proceedings in the Japanese courts.

SIR: Referring to the previous correspondence in relation to the extradition case against Mr. John Eills, formerly of Massachusetts but now living in Japan, on a charge of perjury brought by his wife, Mrs. Harriet A. Eills, I have the honor to report that in an action subsequently instituted in the Tokyo District Court by Mrs. Eills against Mr. Eills for the custody of their daughter, the court on the 20th instant gave judgment in her favor.

There is enclosed herewith a clipping from the Japan Advertiser containing a report of the trial and explaining the reasons which guided the court in its decision.

It would appear that the court refused to pass on the question of the relative fitness of the parents, basing its action on the order made by the Massachusetts court, when all parties were before it, awarding the custody of the child to Mrs. Eills, and establishing a personal status by the judicial action of a court having jurisdiction, which status the Japanese court was bound to respect.

The defendant has appealed against the judgment of the lower court, and the case is now before the Court of Appeals.

[Inclosure—Extract.]

The Japanese court reached its decision without going into the question of the respective fitness of the parents to act as the little girl's guardian. The judges refused to consider this point of the case. They held that the decision of the courts of Massachusetts, from which Mrs. Eills has two decrees giving her the custody of her daughter, had created a legal status that ought to be recognized in Japan, just as the status of marriage performed abroad is recognized here. The decision was based largely on considerations of public policy, it being the attitude of the court that a judgment against Mrs. Eills would affect the validity of the law of Japan in similar cases in the United States.

DISCRIMINATION IN FREIGHT RATES AFFECTING EQUALITY OF

UNITED STATES.

File No. 893.773/7.

Vice Consul Hanson to the Secretary of State.

No. 25.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Dalny, June 17, 1914.

SIR: I have the honor to report that this office has been informed by the South Manchuria Railway Company that the authorities in Tokyo have decided that the reduced rates on the Mukden-Antung section of the railway will be extended to specific through imports into Manchuria via Dalny and Newchwang from Japan only and that the same rates will not be applied to through imports from Shanghai. The reduction is to take place on and after July 1, 1914.

With reference to local rates on goods despatched from the three sea ports, Dalny, Newchwang and Antung, a reduction of 15 per cent is to be made.

The first decision is a serious one for importers of American piece goods, as most of this class of imports enters Manchuria through Newchwang from Shanghai. Therefore, piece goods from Japan proper (practically all of Japanese manufacture) entering Manchuria via any of the three South Manchurian ports will have a decided advantage in freight rates over their American rivals, which cannot be classed as through goods from Japan unless they are shipped via Japan.

While no one can attribute unfair play to the Japanese for fixing freight rates in Japan proper, Korea or even in the Leased Territory, to suit the best interests of their nationals, it appears that the application of reduced rates on through goods from Japan only is a discrimination in favor of Japanese interests. This resolves itself, then, into an effort to add another advantage to the already natural advantages the Japanese cotton goods manufacturer has in the matters of cheapness of labor in the manufacture of piece goods, of cheapness in bringing his wares to the Chinese market (due to proximity), of cheapness in disposing of the stock in Manchuria (due to the elimination of the "middle man" and the presence of Japanese dealers on the ground), and of superior financing facilities offered by the Japanese banking institutions to Japanese merchants. These are advantages due to nature and to Japanese initiative in matters of finance and trade, and credit is due the Japanese in that they have made use of them. But the new advantage is not a natural one nor is it one that could be called fair in a territory where legitimate competition, as viewed by western standards, is supposed to exist. All legitimate competition in Manchuria would benefit the Chinese consumer and, as the policy of the "open door in Manchuria," if it means anything, surely means that trade in Manchuria should be subject to legitimate competition so that the Chinese consumer as well as the foreign merchant would benefit thereby.

So far as Dalny is concerned, trade in American cotton goods through this port is nil, and, consequently, at present the new reduced rates as applied at this port are only of interest as a matter of principle. Trade through Newchwang, however, is vitally affected and foreign objections to the new scheme of applying rates will undoubtedly be heard in that quarter.

SIR: I have the honor to request the particular attention of the Department to the despatch No. 25 of June 17, in which the Vice Consul in charge at Dalny reported to you concerning the reduced rates on the South Manchuria Railway Company's branch lines in favor of through imports into Manchuria, via Dalny and Newchwang, from Japan only.

Although apparently not in violation of the literal wording of the undertaking concerning equality of commercial opportunity given by the Japanese Government at the instance of Secretary Hay in 1899 (Rockhill's Treaties, pp. 194-6), such an arrangement would seem to be clearly contrary to the spirit of that undertaking and of the many similar assurances since given by Japan. I therefore beg to be instructed what attitude the Department takes toward the proposed arrangement in respect to freight rates, and what (if any) action in the matter it desires should be taken by this Legation.

Consul Pontius to Minister Reinsch.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Newchwang, China, June 30, 1914.

SIR: For the information of the Legation, I have the honor to report that the South Manchuria Railway announced in a recent issue of its official gazette published in Dairen, that a reduction would be made on specific through shipments from Japan over its railway to interior points in Manchuria. The new rates are to take effect on the first proximo, and in a recent issue of a Dairen newspaper direct mention is made of the fact that the reduction in railway freights does not apply to Newchwang, the import route via that port being entirely left out of account. The article also mentioned that the new rates were limited to the Mukden-Antung line and the import route through Dairen. The schedule of the new rates is quoted herewith as table No. 1, and the rates previously existing as table No. 2.

A careful examination of the two tables¹ will show that the reduction applies chiefly to cotton goods, the decrease in freight rates to distributing points such as Mukden, Tiehling and Changchun amounting to about 30%. Cotton goods is one of the chief staple articles of Japanese importation into Manchuria, and this new move on the part of the Japanese concerned appears a clever device to discriminate against shipments of foreign manufactured piece goods into Manchuria from Shanghai, through either the port of Dairen or Newchwang. This fact seems self-evident when it is realized that large quantities of American and European manufactured piece goods are continually imported by Japanese firms from Japan through the ports of Dairen and Antung.

What with the favorable treatment now accorded importations of foreign goods from Japan through the port of Antung in the shape of import tariff reduction of one-third duty, and the present preferential freight rates extended to goods shipped to interior points in Manchuria through Dairen, foreign firms interested in the import trade in Manchuria apparently have every reason to complain at the discrimination it is proposed to exercise against them. The purpose of the South Manchuria Railway is seemingly to hamper and obstruct further importations from Shanghai through Dairen, and confine the commercial possibilities of Newchwang to a still narrower sphere of activity.

In spite of the many efforts in the past to cripple the future trade possibilities of Newchwang by those interested in the diverting of commerce to Dairen, the former port has so far succeeded in holding a fair share of the trade of this region, and the renewed activity of those at present concerned in the additional tactics of discrimination make it imperative that the Liao River conservancy project, which means so much for the future welfare of the port, be instituted without unnecessary delay.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Tokyo, July 4, 1914.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to despatch No. 25, of June 17, 1914, addressed to the Department by Mr. George M. Hanson, Vice Consul in charge at Dalny, a copy of which has just been received by this Embassy, in which he states that from the 1st instant reduced rates will be enforced on the South Manchuria Railway, from Dalny and Newchwang to the interior marts of the three eastern provinces, these rates to be applicable to specified through imports from Japan, but not to similar articles imported from Shanghai.

The commodities entitled to the reduced tariff includes cotton goods, which constitute the chief article of competition between American and Japanese trade in Manchuria. Since the American goods are shipped almost entirely via Shanghai, they will not enjoy the preferential treatment accorded to their Japanese rivals. As Mr. Hanson points out in his despatch above referred to, Japanese piece goods already have several natural advantages over the American ones, the import of which has as a result suffered an extensive decrease since the close of the Russo-Japanese War. The additional benefit to be extended to the Japanese product in the form of lower freightage seems calculated further to handicap the sale of our goods in the Manchurian market.

The contention that manufacturers in the United States can avail themselves of the lower schedule by making Japan their point of transshipment instead of Shanghai is out of question. While the products of Japan are handled in Manchuria by Japanese merchants, our goods are at present handled by Chinese agents, who transact most of their business through the head hong in Shanghai, which we must under the circumstances make the centre of distribution for our commodities, until American firms become convinced of the desirability of having their own agents in Manchuria.

The action of the Japanese authorities in the present case would seem to be inconsistent with the principle of equal opportunity, and with their assurances of adherence to this principle.

Knowing that the British Government was interested in the question, I informally inquired of the Ambassador what action he had taken. He informed me that he had addressed a note to the Japanese Foreign Office, stating that while the railway order specifically applied the reduced rates only to direct imports from Japan, he presumed that British goods shipped from Shanghai would enjoy the same benefit.

If the benefit of the reduced schedule is extended to British goods, American imports will of course also become entitled thereto.

SIR: Supplementing my despatch No. 98, of the 4th instant, I have the honor to enclose a clipping¹ from the Japan Advertiser of the 16th, purporting to be a statement on the question by the British Consul at Dalny.

The Consul considers the reduced rates to be in contravention of the principle of equal opportunity, but is of the opinion that even if they are extended to through imports from Shanghai, foreign merchants at Dalny would not derive any material benefit, as very few piece goods other than Japanese are shipped through that port, while in the case of Newchang only the merchants of larger capital would profit, leaving the smaller importers at a decided disadvantage. The Consul also apprehends that the further application of the revised rates would decrease the prosperity of Dalny and Newchang, by changing them from ports of transshipment to mere points of transit. He therefore believes that the interest of both foreigner and Japanese would be best served by reinforcing the original rates.

SIR: Referring to my No. 21, dated July 21, 1914,¹ reporting concerning the reduction instituted by the South Manchuria Railway covering specific through shipments from Japan over its railways to interior points in Manchuria, I have the honor to transmit herewith information regarding new developments which have occurred in this regard.

The protests of the Japanese merchants in Dairen and Newchwang concerning the discrimination accorded import cargo from Japan other than that shipped via the Korea-Antung railway route, was productive of beneficial result so far as they were concerned. Early in August last it was unofficially announced that the Japanese Government had in mind the introduction of a new scheme to replace the existing reduced rates arrangement before the end of the present year, and that the new system would be found satisfactory by both the Japanese and foreign merchants in South Manchuria. The new system as now instituted seemingly constitutes as much as ever a discrimination against the port of Newchwang and its foreign merchants who are still precluded from enjoying the reduced railway rates on foreign importations from Shanghai by the regular steamship lines.

In the official gazette of the South Manchuria Railway, issue of the 4th ultimo, a new schedule of rates covering specific through imports from Japan via Newchwang was published. The figures agree in the main with the reduction applied to goods shipped via Antung or Dairen, but as none of the foreign merchants in Newchwang purchase their wares in Japan the reduction in the rates was of no benefit to them. The proposed introduction of a 15% reduction in rates for specific goods from Japan for transportation from Newchwang to interior points was also sanctioned, and it is now announced that the new rates will be effective from the 1st instant.

In the issue of the 30th ultimo of the Manchuria Daily News of Dairen, a semi-official organ fostered by the South Manchuria Railway, the announcement is made that the 30% reduction extended to through shipments of imports via the ports of Antung, Dairen and Newchwang has been made applicable also to through import shipments by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha steamers from Tientsin, Bombay, the United States, Australia and Europe. The Dairen merchants are to benefit also in the additional inclusion of the steamers of the South Manchuria Railway Dairen-Shanghai run in the above category.

The so-called impartial system of reduced rates which the Tokyo Government Railways Board recently intimated would be uniformly extended to the Japanese and foreign merchants in South Manchuria, is now apparently revealed as a discrimination in favor of Japanese shipping. While it is true that the Newchwang foreign merchant may avail himself of the 30% reduction by importing his cotton goods from the United States or Europe in Japanese steamers, still there is little likelihood under existing circumstances of his doing so. Shanghai will always be considered the entrepôt of foreign importations to China, at least so far as the local foreign and most of the Chinese merchants are concerned, and until the existing railway-rate reduction as now instituted includes foreign imports, however or from wherever shipped, the action of the Japanese Government in the present instance must be considered as a distinct departure from the equal opportunity principle so clearly expressed by it as regards Manchuria.

The complaint of the foreign chambers of commerce at Shanghai, Dairen and Newchwang in this connection was originally based on the fear that the preferential rates would be extended solely to goods of Japanese manufacture, and it remains to be seen with what attitude these commercial bodies will view the present system now apparently in force.

Memorandum by the British Ambassador.

On June 22nd, 1914, the South Manchuria Railway Company issued a notification with reference to the freight rates to be levied from July 1st on certain through goods passing from Japan into Manchuria via Dairen.

His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador thereupon addressed a brief note to the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs asking for an assurance that, as he presumed was the case, these rates apply equally to the same goods coming from other foreign countries, e. g. Great Britain or the Colonies.

On July 20 Baron Kato replied that "at present only through goods (either Japanese or foreign) from Japan via Dairen carried by vessels belonging to the Osaka Shosen Kwaisha or the Nippon Yusen Kwaisha are accorded the special reduced rates provided for by the notification in question; but that hereafter, in the case of goods from foreign countries, where application is made for through transport, the place of destination of the goods being given as Mukden or certain specified stations north of Mukden, there will be no objection to such goods being accorded the same treatment, as regards freight over the lines of the South Manchuria Railway, as goods coming from Japan."

On September 9th His Britannic Majesty's Consul at Dairen addressed a despatch to this Embassy enclosing a cutting from the Manchuria Daily News of September 5th showing the freight charges to be levied by the South Manchuria Railway Company on certain specific goods imported into Manchuria via Yingkou (Newchwang) from October. His Majesty's Consul observes that these rates are practically the same as those levied on similar goods entering the country by way of Dairen or Antung.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith this office's English translation of railway notice No. 46¹ which contains what is known as the local reduced rates on goods from the three seaports Dairen, Antung and Newchwang to the interior. The rates from Dairen and Antung to Mukden and Tiehling have always been identical; there is no special rate in this category on goods from Newchwang to these places. In the new special rates made in this order No. 46, these conditions are practically maintained, and the reduction amounts to 15 per cent except that to Tiehling from Dairen and Antung, where it is 17 per cent. Thus the old rate discrimination against Newchwang is continued and the extra distances to Mukden of 137 miles for Dairen and 66.4 miles for Antung are still wiped out by the rates.

This step has been taken by the railway and sanctioned by the national Government on account, chiefly, of the exertions of business men at Dairen who demanded some such arrangement in order to put them on more even terms with those shippers using the Antung route to the interior.

goods rate system so that through goods from countries other than Japan and Chosen (Korea) may receive equal treatment with through goods from those places.

But through goods, to obtain the special rates, must be shipped on Japanese vessels, and therefore this order No. 47 is a discriminatory one which places the merchant vessels of all countries plying to this port from Formosa, Tientsin, Bombay, America, Australia, European ports and Shanghai at a disadvantage vis-à-vis Japanese ships on the same run.

The action of the company, which is a semi-official organization under the control of the national Government of Japan is, I believe, due to murmurings among foreign merchants in the Far East, and perhaps to the protest of the Dairen Foreign Board of Trade to the former Governor General, Baron Fukushima, and was intended to place foreign goods (non-Japanese) on an equality with Japanese goods.

Its effect, however, is to give Japanese shipping an unfair advantage. It is made in contravention of Article VIII of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with Japan of February 21, 1911, whereby "all articles ----- may ----- be imported ----- in vessels of the other contracting party, without being liable to any other or higher duties or charges of whatever denomination than if such articles were imported in national vessels."

Whereas the advantage given by special rates to the trade with Japan and Korea might be defended as being given to a part of Japan's coasting trade, which is specially exempted by Article XIII of the said treaty, the granting of the special rates to Japanese vessels engaged in distinctively foreign trade destroys the availability of this defense and places the act on a par with an act granting a reduction in customs duties to imports brought to Japan in Japanese bottoms.

SIR: Referring to my No. 28, dated October 3, 1914, reporting on the apparent discrimination in the freight rates of the South Manchuria Railway against shipments from Shanghai destined for interior points in Manchuria, I have the honor to transmit herewith further information which only too clearly shows that a discrimination does exist not only against Newchwang as regards "local freights" but "through" cargo shipped from the United States or Europe as well. * * * Enclosure No. 1¹ gives the local rates as now in force from Newchwang to interior points in Manchuria as quoted by the stationmaster of the South Manchuria Railway at this port. The said quotation includes also the discriminating statement regarding shipments of through cargo from either the United States or Europe. Enclosure No. 2,¹ gives a specimen table of authenticated local railway rates in force from October 1, 1914, which clearly proves that shipments of cargo from Newchwang to interior points are discriminated against.

The 15 per cent reduction in the local freight tariff does not apply to cargo shipped from Newchwang to Mukden, and it will be seen from the table of figures on Enclosure No. 2, that the old rate of gold yen 0.3584 per 100 kin still obtains in this regard, while Dairen receives the reduced rate of gold yen 0.40 for a distance of more than double the mileage. It will be noted also that a 15 per cent reduction has not been extended to goods shipped from Newchwang to Tiehling or Kaiyuan, the discount granted being considerably short of that figure. A perusal of Enclosure No. 2 will show that the 15 per cent reduction is granted only to cargo shipped from Newchwang to Changchun; no discount is given to shipments to Mukden, and a much less figure than the announced 15 per cent reduction is extended to goods shipped to Tiehling or Kaiyuan. The last paragraph of Enclosure No. 1, conclusively shows the discrimination in favor of Japanese shipping:

Only such shipments are to be ranked as "through cargo" as are shipped through to stations on the South Manchuria Railway under Nippon Yusen Kaisha (South Manchuria Railway steamship) through bills of lading.

Merchants in Newchwang in order to secure the announced 30 per cent reduction in shipments of through cargo are compelled to ship their goods from the United States or Europe in steamers of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha line, transshipment from Shanghai to Dairen being also permitted via steamers of the South Manchuria Railway.

The small concessions made by the South Manchuria Railway in the recent reduction in railway freights cannot be considered satisfactory. The port of Newchwang is clearly discriminated against, and the local merchants have just cause for complaint in this more recent act of the railway in according the port of Dairen advantages denied Newchwang. The foreign merchants of both ports, however, suffer alike in the matter of "through" shipments from foreign countries.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Pekin, October 28, 1914.

SIR: In connection with the Department's instruction No. 140 of July 30 last, with respect to freight rates on the South Manchuria Railway, I have the honor to refer to the further correspondence of the American Consul at Newchwang—despatches Nos. 28 and 31, of October 3 and 17 respectively—copies of which he has forwarded to the Department; to a report¹ on freight rate reductions on the South Manchuria Railway submitted by Mr. G. F. Bickford, Vice Consul in Charge at Antung, on August 3, and to his letter¹ of August 20 to W. A. Reed, Esquire, Honorary Secretary of the American Association of China, at Shanghai, copies of which are enclosed; to the despatch¹ No. 189 of the Consulate-General at Shanghai, dated August 6, copies of which were sent to the Department; and to four unnumbered despatches of the American Consul at Dalny, addressed to the Department of State, dated October 9 and 10, of which extra copies are enclosed for ready reference.

I would also refer to the memorandum of the British Ambassador at Tokyo to the American Ambassador there, dated September 28, transmitted to the Department with the Embassy's unnumbered despatch of October 8. With respect to the latter memorandum, it is to be pointed out that the statement of Baron Kato, of July 20, does not contain the assurance that through goods brought to Manchuria in non-Japanese bottoms will receive equal treatment with those brought by the ships on the Osaka Shosen Kaisha and the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. In fact it appears to promise nothing further than that goods may receive equal treatment though shipped from abroad instead of from Japan, leaving untouched the arrangement that such equal treatment is confined to goods imported in Japanese bottoms.

The question with respect to the freight rates on the South Manchuria Railway has two aspects; the arrangement of the rate so as to favor the ports of Antung and Dairen, as over against the port of Newchwang, and the special reduction of thirty per cent (30%) granted to goods imported in Japanese bottoms. The reports of the Consulate at Newchwang deal more especially with the former, those from Dairen with the latter aspect of the matter.

The chief objection to the freight tariff, as between the port of Dairen and the port of Newchwang, lies in the fact that the latter is not given the advantage in rates which its shorter distance from Mukden and other stations on the South Manchuria Railway would seem to call for; thus the rate quoted from Newchwang to Tiehling, 156 miles, is the same as that quoted from Dairen to Tiehling, a distance of 293 miles. In other words, while the rates from Newchwang are placed on a per-mile basis, those from Dairen are specific. This method of rate-making, while it is not prima facie discriminatory against foreign merchants, does as a matter of fact discriminate against a port in which the interests of foreign (European and American) merchants are relatively more important than those in Dairen.

A far more serious situation is presented by the reduction of thirty per cent (30%) which, under notice of the South Manchuria Railway, has been extended to merchandise imported in vessels of the Japanese lines plying to Newchwang and Dairen. To this there must be added the special transshipment charges provided for by railway notice of September 3 for cargo brought in by the Japanese steamship lines. In the light of these railway notices it would appear that the equality of treatment to which foreign goods are entitled upon entering into Manchuria is being interpreted by the Japanese authorities as confined to goods carried in Japanese bottoms.

From the point of view of American trade in North China and of the most essential policy for which the United States stands in the Far East, it would seem to be of the greatest importance that a definite assurance should be obtained from the Japanese Government that equality of treatment is not to be thus limited, to the great disadvantage of American shipping and incidentally of American commerce itself. Not only is the levying of freight charges openly discriminatory against merchandise not imported in Japanese bottoms, in direct violation of one of the specific principles enunciated by the American Government in 1899 as a part of the "open door" policy, to which the formal adherence of Japan has been repeatedly given; but it is, moreover, in contravention of Article VIII of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between the United States and Japan of February 21, 1911, whereby:

All articles which are or may be legally imported into the ports of either high contracting party from foreign countries in national vessels may likewise be imported into those ports in vessels of the other contracting party, without being liable to any other or higher duties or charges of whatever denomination than if such articles were imported in national vessels. * * *

SIR: Referring to my No. 31, dated October 17, 1914, I have the honor to transmit herewith additional information¹ which clearly shows the facilities and reduction accorded "through" shipments of cotton goods to points in Manchuria from Shanghai via the South Manchuria Railway steamers to Dairen and thence onward over the railway line of the latter institution. * * *

It will be remembered that in my last despatch mention was made that the local South Manchuria Railway stationmaster in a written communication averred that "only such shipments are to be ranked as 'through cargo' as are shipped through to stations on the South Manchuria Railway under Nippon Yusen Kaisha (South Manchuria Railway steamship) through bills of lading." It was considered advisable to ascertain what special treatment would be accorded cargo shipped from Shanghai to Manchuria along the routes referred to by the stationmaster. It might be mentioned in this connection that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha maintains no regular steamship service between Shanghai and Newchwang, consequently "through cargo" would necessarily have to be shipped from Shanghai via Dairen.

What is now plainly apparent is that foreign shipping is discriminated against in that only Japanese steamship lines may be used in order to obtain the 30 per cent reduction quoted, and the port of Newchwang discriminated against owing to the fact that no Japanese steamers ply regularly between the ports of Shanghai and Newchwang. The discrimination against the port of Newchwang as regards "local freights" has also been conclusively proved in my No. 31, dated October 17, 1914, and there seems to be every justification for firmly protesting against the unfair tactics of the South Manchuria Railway in so plainly disregarding the principle of equal opportunity openly professed in the past by the Japanese Government.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 19, 1914.

SIR: Your unnumbered despatch of October 8, 1914 and its enclosure, a copy of a memorandum handed to you by the British Ambassador at Tokyo and relating to the subject of apparent discrimination against shipments from Shanghai in the freight rates of the South Manchuria Railway, have been read with interest.

According to this memorandum the British Ambassador was promised by the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs that—hereafter in the case of goods from foreign countries, where application is made for through transport, the place of destination of the goods being given as Mukden or certain specified stations north of Mukden, there will be no objection to such goods being accorded the same treatment, as regards freight over the lines of the South Manchuria Railway, as goods coming from Japan.

The Department will be glad to be informed whether or not the words "foreign countries" used in the memorandum are meant to include China, which is "foreign" as regards Japan, but not as regards Manchuria. If China is included, then the Department presumes that goods belonging to Americans shipped from Shanghai into Manchuria may under the conditions specified obtain the same freight rates over the South Manchuria Railway as goods from Japan.

The context appears to show that China is not one of the foreign countries to which reference is made and that American goods to obtain the favored rates must be shipped through Japan and on steamers either of the Osaka Shoshen Kaisha or of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. Railway Notice No. 47, however, enclosed in the unnumbered despatch of the Consul at Dalny of October 9, 1914, dealing with the extension of reduced rates on through goods system to foreign trade of Japan, declares that the Shanghai line of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha is included in the list of those whose shipments may have the reduced rate.

American goods are usually transshipped at Shanghai and if the Department's understanding of Railway Order No. 47 be correct such goods will not suffer discrimination if forwarded to Mukden or points north of Mukden by steamers of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

The Department notes further that American goods shipped to points south of Mukden can not enjoy the favored rates unless they are shipped from Japan over the steamship lines mentioned.

You are instructed to consult with your British colleague and endeavor to obtain his cooperation in representing to the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs the injury that will be done to American and European trade in Manchuria by the restrictions imposed. You should call attention to the repeated pledges given to the United States by Japan in support of the principle of equality of commercial opportunity in China, particularly to the note of Viscount Aoki to Mr. Buck under date of December 26, 1899 which gives the assurance asked by Secretary Hay that there shall be "no higher railroad charges over lines built, controlled or operated within such 'sphere' on merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of other nationalities transported through such 'sphere' than shall be levied on similar merchandise belonging to their own nationals transported over equal distances."³

If it should be replied that American and European goods have only to comply with the conditions mentioned to receive the same rates as Japanese goods, it should be pointed out that to require shipment over one or the other of two Japanese lines and in certain cases from a Japanese port is not in accordance with the provision of the first paragraph of Secretary Hay's note to Minister Buck, which was agreed to by Japan and insures equality of treatment within the limits of China for navigation as well as trade.

The discrimination mentioned, moreover, appears to be opposed to the understanding reached by Secretary Root and Baron Takahira in November, 1908, in an exchange of notes which declares it to be the desire of the two Governments to encourage the free development of their commerce in the Pacific Ocean and to be the policy of both Governments to support by all pacific means the principle of equal opportunity for commerce and industry of all nations in China.⁴

You are instructed that, failing to obtain the cooperation of your British colleague, you should bring the subject informally to the attention of the Minister for Foreign Affairs and endeavor to obtain assurance that the railway orders issued by the South Manchuria Railway Company will be so modified as to remove the discrimination against American trade to which attention has been called above.

It would seem advisable to emphasize the necessity of insisting, for the protection of Newchwang trade, that the same treatment—viz 30% rail rate reduction instead of only 15%—be conceded goods landed at Manchurian ports and afterwards railed to inland points, as is accorded "through" goods coming in from overseas to inland points, under through bills of lading which enjoy the 30% reduction.

Assuming that the through bill of lading facilities were made available to all steamship lines instead of only to Japanese lines as at present, the discrimination against non-Japanese ocean shipping would become eliminated; but the difference between 15% on "local" and 30% on "through" cargo, would still militate against import goods to Newchwang, stored there temporarily until sold, and then railed to an inland point. Considerable stress should be laid on the importance of the principle of equal treatment to goods, whether billed "through" from over seas, or only railed "locally" from the Manchurian port of import. In all cases where goods are railed to interior points from Newchwang, a practical arrangement would be for the South Manchuria Railway to accept a copy of the steamship bill of lading covering ocean shipment of the goods in question, as bona fide evidence that the goods are entitled to the 30% reduction extended to "through" cargo, a fair time limit being allowed for local storage.

Since my last report to the Legation dated November 28, 1914, copy of which the Embassy has received, I know of no further developments which have occurred. The port of Newchwang is icebound during the winter months, and any pronouncement of the railway with regard to this question as affecting this port would very likely be delayed until just previous to the opening of navigation in the coming Spring. In the sentence quoted by the Embassy "assuming that the through bill of lading facilities were made available to all steamship lines instead of only the Japanese lines as at present," etc., by the use of the words "assuming that" was meant "in the event of" or "even if," and there was no intention of giving the impression that the 30% reduction was to be extended to goods coming from Shanghai by other lines than the Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

In a despatch to the Mukden Consulate General dated December 2, 1914, certain information was transmitted with regard to this matter, and a quotation of the salient points embodied in that communication will more or less clearly acquaint the Embassy as to how imports of American goods from Shanghai for distribution to interior points are likely to be affected.

In the last sentence of my despatch to the Legation dated November 28, 1914, equal treatment asked for is but fair and should not be considered in the light of a special favor. By "all cases where goods," etc., is meant such commodities as are shipped, say, from Shanghai to Newchwang for later distribution to inland points, the cargo shipped to correspond in all cases with the bill of lading shown to the railway as evidence of a right to the 30% reduction. The shipper at Shanghai could easily apportion each cargo shipment so that several or more bills of lading would be issued, and shipment to an inland point within a reasonable time limit—say four months—of any part of the cargo covered by one of the bills of lading could thus conveniently be effected. Most of the cargo received from Shanghai and shipped to inland points is contracted for locally after arrival in the port, and often several months must elapse before the sale is arranged. Such cargo should in all fairness be accorded the 30% reduction applicable to "through" shipments, and not the 15% reduction supposed to apply on "local" shipments. It is thus evident that most of the cotton goods shipped to Newchwang from Shanghai could not be sent under a "through" bill of lading to an inland point, and under existing conditions such cargo is only granted the discriminative "local" rate reduction.

I do not know of one Chinese or non-Japanese local firm which imports cotton goods from Japan, such importers invariably using Shanghai as their base of supply. The Japanese importer takes especial care, as is to be expected, that the cotton goods of Japanese manufacture occupy first thought, and the supplying of any local demand for the American article of manufacture, from Japan, is considerably handicapped under the circumstances. The attempt to regain any part of the large American cotton goods trade previously had throughout Manchuria, cannot well be effected through Japanese firms, and as no other firms in Newchwang will import cotton goods stocks from Japan (owing to connections and affiliations being at Shanghai) it requires no stretch of the imagination to perceive the trade set-back the present existing condition of affairs is likely to cause. It is, therefore, important that an effort be made towards securing similar treatment on goods shipped from Shanghai to Newchwang, stored there temporarily until sold and then railed to an inland point, as is at present accorded through cargo shipped from Japan through the latter port.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 76 of November 19 last, relating to the subject of apparent discrimination in the freight rates of the South Manchuria Railway against shipments from Shanghai.

I have recently had several consultations on this subject with Sir Conyngham Greene, the British Ambassador here. On December 29 he told me that he had received no complaints or instructions in this matter since his receipt, on July 20 last, of a note from Baron Kato, a portion of which he later gave me in the shape of the memorandum enclosed in my despatch of October 8. He said that some time ago he had transmitted to his Foreign Office a complaint from Newchwang reciting that that port was being discriminated against, and in reply had been advised that the Board of Trade did not consider the amount involved sufficient to justify further action at that time, and that he had, therefore, taken no further steps in the premises; he had understood, too, that the British Minister at Peking had made some representations to London, but he himself knew no particulars.

I explained the attitude of our own Consul, calling his attention to the reports of the Chinese customs authorities on the trade of Newchwang, Canton, and Dairen, pointing out that the Consul's representations were not so much on account of discrimination against Newchwang as on account of interference with established lines of trade through Shanghai; his idea being that, under the present regulations, trade coming through Shanghai was greatly discriminated against in violation of the policy of the "open door" in China, and that if this discrimination continued, not only American trade but British trade also through Shanghai would be driven out of North China.

Sir Conyngham asked me to give him in written form a résumé of the points I had touched upon, and two days later, on the occasion of his last call upon me, I handed him the memorandum, a copy of which is enclosed herewith.

He said he would write immediately to the British Minister at Peking asking him to communicate with the British Consuls at Shanghai and Newchwang, requesting that they, after consultation with the American Consuls at their respective ports, send him a report; if they took the same view of the situation as our Consul at the latter port, he would take the matter up with the Foreign Office at London, and if authorized to do so would very gladly join with me in a representation to the Japanese Government in an effort to secure favorable action.

MEMORANDUM.

It is the opinion of the American Consul at Newchwang that American commerce is injuriously affected by four facts, as follows:

1. That the order made in pursuance of the assurance given by Baron Kato on July 20 last to the British Ambassador that through shipments to Newchwang from "foreign" ports would be given the same rates as shipments from Japanese ports, has not been construed to apply to Shanghai, which is not a foreign port as regards Newchwang, both being Chinese;
2. That the order extending to shipments from Shanghai to Newchwang by vessels of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha the benefit of the 30% reduction to points north of Mukden, constitutes a discrimination against all other lines of shipping;
3. That the restriction of the reduction of 30% to goods from Shanghai consigned directly to points north of Mukden puts such goods, destined to points south of Mukden, even when they are shipped from Shanghai by Nippon Yusen Kaisha vessels, at a disadvantage as compared with goods shipped from Japanese points to points south of Mukden;
4. That goods landed at Newchwang and temporarily stored there before being forwarded are not given the same discount as goods consigned directly to points beyond. It is urged that the same discount could easily and safely be granted in this case, as the bills of lading would have to be produced as proof of the origin of the consignment.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge herewith the receipt of your communication of the 6th instant,^a on the subject of apparent discrimination in freight rates instituted by the South Manchuria Railway on foreign importations.

I have before me a letter written by the British Consul at Dairen to the British Ambassador here, which states as follows:

I asked the railway company if it would be correct to assume that goods shipped along the routes specified in the notification (i. e. the specific local freight charges on goods shipped into the interior of Manchuria from the ports of Antung, Dairen, and Newchwang) but in foreign bottoms and not on Osaka Shosen Kwaisha or Nippon Yusen Kwaisha boats, would not benefit by the new specific through rates but be liable to the specific local rates—which are higher. I am pleased to be able to report that * * * in a letter which I have just received from the railway company, it is stated that the specific through rates are applicable to the specific through goods carried by any steamship line, whether under a foreign flag or the Japanese flag, who have entered into special arrangements with this company concerning the transportation of through goods.

This would seem to contradict the information which you have received upon this point. I shall be glad if you will let me know whether you have had any conversation directly with the railway people touching this particular question.

On page three of your letter, acknowledged above, you speak of the 15% reduction "supposed to apply on 'local' shipments." Does not this 15% reduction in fact apply?

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Newchang, China, January 28, 1915.

SIR: In reply to the Embassy's instruction of January 14, 1915, I have the honor to refer the Embassy to this office's despatch No. 31, dated October 17, 1914, to the Legation in Peking on this subject. A copy of this despatch was forwarded to the Embassy under the same date.

At the bottom of page 1, of this despatch, the statement is made that "The said quotation includes also the discriminating statement regarding shipments of through cargo from either the United States or Europe." So far as I can learn from the records of this office, the basis for this statement was a letter dated October 14, 1914, written by the local stationmaster of the South Manchuria Railway Company to the local office of the * * * firm * * *; this communication states explicitly that "only such shipments are to be ranked as 'through cargoes' as are shipped through to stations on the South Manchuria Railway Company, under the Nippon Yusen Kaisha-South Manchuria Ry. through bills of lading."

This does not seem to be in accord with the information on this point received by the British Consul in Dairen.

In this connection, there is quoted below a passage from a letter received from the local office of * * *, discussing the phase of the question bearing upon the application of the specific through rates "to the specific through goods carried by any steamship line, whether under a foreign flag or the Japanese flag, who have entered into special arrangements with this Company concerning the transportation of through goods."

I consider the whole point lies in the meaning of the misleading or ambiguous wording: " * * * who have entered into special arrangements with this company concerning the transportation of through cargo." In my opinion, what this really amounts to is that the facility would—or could—be applicable to any non-Japanese line which might have entered into special arrangement with S. M. Ry concerning the transportation of through goods, but I am not aware that any non-Japanese line has actually done so, or has ever been made acquainted that it could do so, or that if it were made so acquainted, it would find practicable the conditions which it would most probably be asked to comply with. The Manchuria Daily News of 30th September and 1st October last only mention N. Y. K. and O. S. Kaisha, and no notification to the effect mentioned by H. B. M's Consul at Dairen, as having been advised to him by letter, has, as far as I am aware, been made public. If not, why not? That is the unsatisfactory point.

As the local stationmaster of the railway company here is a very subordinate officer and must refer questions of importance to the head office in Dairen, it might be advisable for the American Consul in Dairen to apply directly to the South Manchuria Railway Company for information in regard to the nature of the "special arrangements" necessary to be entered into, and endeavor to discover whether or not these "special arrangements" are the same that Japanese steamship lines have entered into with the railway company.

With regard to the application or non-application of the 15% reduction on local shipments from Newchwang, the Embassy is again referred to this office's dispatch No. 31, of October 17, 1914, to the Legation. Enclosure No. 2, of that dispatch gives a table, based on old rates found in the railway company's tariff book in operation prior to October 1, 1914, and new rates, effective after October 1, 1914, as quoted by the local stationmaster of the company. Here it is clearly shown that the 15% reduction does not apply in all cases.

SIR: With reference to my despatch to the Department No. 184 of January 6 last, I have the honor to state that since the date of that despatch the British Ambassador has informed me that in view of all the circumstances, and considering the smallness of British interests involved, he does not feel disposed to join in any representation to the Imperial Government on the subject.

I have found through correspondence with the Consuls at Newchwang and Dairen and by communication from the British Consul at the latter place (copies of which have been given me by Sir Conyngham), that a discount of thirty per cent on the specific rates is now allowed on cotton goods shipped by Japanese lines from Shanghai to Newchwang and consigned to points north of Mukden. I have also learned that the railway authorities assert that a similar discount will be allowed on such shipments by British lines making suitable arrangements with the railway company. I can not find, however, that any British line has entered into such an agreement.

As the matter stands at present, it will be seen that American cotton goods shipped from Shanghai in Japanese bottoms and consigned to points north of Mukden via Newchwang, are allowed the thirty per cent discount on the specific rates; but such discount is not allowed on goods shipped by other lines or on goods consigned to Newchwang and subsequently reshipped from that place to points north of Mukden. It is only on these two points, therefore, that claim of discrimination was made by me.

While the former Consul at Newchwang was of the opinion that an effort should be made to induce the railway company to grant a similar discount of thirty per cent on goods shipped from Newchwang to points south of Mukden, I do not understand the instructions of the Department to authorize me to raise this question, as no discrimination is involved in it.

In view of the decision of the British Ambassador not to join in any protest to the Imperial Government, I have filed a representation on behalf of American trade, a copy of which is enclosed herewith. I have taken this action at the present time for the reason that the established rates now enforced, expired on the 31st of this month, and it appears from the newspapers that a conference is now going on in Tokyo between the boards of the Government Railways, the Chosen Railway, and the South Manchuria Railway, at which the fixing of the rates for the next year is under consideration.

I am just informed that there are no American merchants now carrying on business at Newchwang, all of them having withdrawn some time ago except one who has since died.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Tokyo, March 6, 1915.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: Pursuant to instruction from my Government, I have the honor to call the attention of the Imperial Government to an alleged discrimination in freight rates charged by the South Manchuria Railway Company on cotton goods of American manufacture, shipped from Shanghai to consignees at Newchwang, and from there forwarded to purchasers at various points in Manchuria north of Mukden.

It is stated that a discount of thirty per cent on established rates is allowed on Japanese cotton goods shipped through from Japanese ports, while the full established rates are required on American cotton goods shipped from Shanghai, unless carried in Japanese bottoms and consigned directly to points in Manchuria north of Mukden. I am informed that notice has been given at Newchwang that a similar privilege will be extended to such British lines from Shanghai as entered into the same arrangements with the South Manchuria Railway Company as do the Japanese lines; I am not aware, however, that such arrangements have yet been made by any British line, nor, so far as I have been able to learn, have the specific terms been announced on which arrangements could be made. At present, therefore, cotton goods shipped from Shanghai via Newchwang, can secure the discount allowed on such goods from Japanese ports, only when shipped in Japanese bottoms and when consigned directly through from Shanghai to points north of Mukden.

The established course of trade in American cotton goods intended for points in Manchuria has been to ship them to Shanghai, from which point they are consigned to Newchwang, where the consignees reship them to the purchasers at various points in the interior. Under the regulations complained of, goods so shipped are not allowed the discount of thirty per cent on established rates granted to cotton goods from Japan; and even if consigned from Shanghai direct through interior points without the intermediate delivery to consignees in Newchwang, the discount it at present allowed only when these goods are shipped in Japanese bottoms.

American shippers assert, and their claim seems not without justification, that owing to the character of the trade and the manner in which the goods are handled at Newchwang, it is practically impossible for them to change the mode of shipment and instead of consigning their goods in the first place to Newchwang, to consign them direct to the purchasers at the final points of destination in the interior. It is asserted too, that to require them to do this as a condition on which the rebate on railway freights would be allowed, can be of no benefit or advantage to the railway company. The goods under any circumstances must be transhipped at Newchwang, where the presence of a consignee to receive and care for them relieves both the shipowners and the railway company of labor and responsibility in handling them.

It would seem, therefore, that no reason exists which would justify any greater charge by the South Manchuria Railway Company for the transportation to interior points of goods consigned from Shanghai to Newchwang in this way than for goods shipped from Japanese ports through Newchwang and directly consigned to the same interior points. And it seems at the same time apparent that such greater charge cannot but impose upon the trade a heavy burden which is incompatible with the principle of equal opportunity.

I have been instructed to bring this matter to your excellency's attention, pointing out that the regulations to which exception is made appear to discriminate against American trade, and to this extent to be inconsistent with the policy of the open door—a policy which has so long been mutually upheld by our two Governments, and Japan's adherence to which was again stated in the address of the Premier on the 27th of last month, in his excellency's declaration that "our Government does not help our merchants to contend with foreign merchants in China."

In view of the clear understanding in regard to this wise and beneficent policy which has so long been followed by both Japan and the United States, the Department of State has full confidence that the regulations pointed out in the above were adopted by the local authorities without a full appreciation of their effect upon American trade. I therefore have no hesitancy in calling your excellency's attention to the dissatisfaction thus caused, in the hope that the situation will be carefully considered, and that if the facts be found to militate against that principle of equal opportunity under which the trade of our two countries has up to this time developed, an adequate solution will be found by the Imperial Government.

SIR: My despatch No. 234 of the 8th instant transmitted as enclosure a copy of a representation made by the Embassy to the Foreign Office on the subject of apparent discrimination in freight rates on the South Manchuria Railway against shipments from Shanghai.

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of a note from the Foreign Office received in reply.

In a recent conversation with the Minister for Foreign Affairs he told me that the above-named company had desired to promote the commerce of Dairen and to favor it even at the expense of Newchwang, for the reason that at the latter place part of the trade to Mukden and beyond went by the Chinese railway, whereas by Dairen the whole went by the South Manchuria road. He said that as the matter had been explained to him the regulations did not discriminate between the trades of different countries at all, American trade being able to take advantage of the regulations just as Japanese trade had. I pointed out that while this was theoretically true, practically it was not correct; that American trade all went by way of Newchwang, where it was very much discriminated against by this regulation; that while theoretically goods going from Shanghai by way of Newchwang could get the benefit of the discount on through rates provided they were billed through, the only steamship line which could issue the through bills was composed of the South Manchuria Company's own ships. Baron Kata admitted that this point should be corrected and arrangements made to permit other lines to send goods through.

As to the regulation providing that only through goods could be entitled to the discount, he seemed convinced that American trade had no just cause of complaint thereat. He said that as a matter of fact Japanese merchants at Dairen had complained bitterly of the same thing, alleging that insistence upon this point must drive them out of the trade. In spite of this, however, the company had adhered positively to the regulation.

It will be noted by the communication from the Foreign Office that the railway company expresses its willingness to form a connection for joint transportation with any foreign steamship company so desiring, and to allow to such foreign company the same reduced rates on through goods which are now given to through goods carried by the railway company's own steamers, and that this regulation applies both at Newchwang and Dairen.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Tokio, March 19, 1915.

MONSIEUR L'AMBASSADEUR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note under date the 6th instant, relative to the reduced freight rates on the South Manchuria Railway.

I beg to state that having referred the matter to the authorities concerned, I am now in receipt of a reply therefrom to the following effect:

The special reduced rates at present in force are allowed to certain goods which are sent direct through Dairen, Newchwang, or Antung to Mukden or specified points north of that city; and it is intended that the same treatment shall be accorded whether the port of export and place of origin of the goods in question and the nationality of the vessels carrying them be Japanese or foreign. If, however, the said goods are, instead of being sent direct, first landed at Newchwang, Dairen, or Antung, and then forwarded to Mukden or specified points north of that city, such goods are, even if they are Japanese, charged somewhat higher rates than those allowed to the above-mentioned through goods. On this point also, no special protection is given to Japanese goods against foreign, and they are all treated, whether Japanese or foreign, in the same manner with absolute impartiality. It may be added that for effecting the through transportation above referred to, it is necessary that a connection for joint transportation should be first established between the steamship company and the South Manchuria Railway Company, and at present the steamship companies having such connection with the Railway Company are the Osaka Shosen Kaisha and the Nipon Yusen Kaisha. But if any foreign steamship company desires to form such connection for joint transportation, the Railway Company is willing to comply and will certainly allow the above-mentioned reduced rates to the through goods carried by the steamers belonging to such company. Indeed, the Railway Company lately received from the American Consul at Dairen a letter inquiring whether it was willing to make an arrangement for joint transportation identical with that in force with the two Japanese steamship companies above named with an American steamship company for the transportation of through goods from San Francisco; and it is the intention of the South Manchuria Railway Company to comply at any time with the request and make an arrangement for allowing to American goods the same reduction in rates as in the case of Japanese goods.

In the same connection the Ambassador gave me a copy of an unofficial letter which he had sent to Sir John Jordan, the British Minister in Peking, suggesting that the latter instruct some British company in Shanghai to make an application for the benefit of these through rates and to advise him at once when this had been done so that he could call upon Baron Kato for the latter's promised assistance, and consummate the arrangement as a precedent.

SIR: Your despatch No. 234 of March 8, 1915, relating to the subject of apparent discrimination in the freight rates on the South Manchuria Railway against shipments from Shanghai, has been read with interest.

The representations made by you to the Imperial Japanese Government on behalf of American trade through Newchwang are approved by the Department.

It appears, however, that discrimination exists not only on shipments through Newchwang but on shipments through Dairen as well in cases where the goods are not carried in Japanese vessels. The Department has received recently a number of protests against the alleged inequality of treatment accorded American goods. It is hoped, therefore, that your representations will lead to a removal of the discriminations charged.

A telegram from the Consul at Dairen dated April 7 reports that American vessels are still denied most-favored treatment, from which the Department infers that the conference to which you refer in your despatch under acknowledgment decided to continue the practice of which complaint is made.

You are instructed, therefore, to bring the matter once more to the attention of the Japanese Foreign Office and express the hope and confident belief of this Government, that the Imperial Japanese Government will require the authorities of the South Manchuria Railway so to modify their published rates as to secure that equality of commercial opportunity for all nationalities in Manchuria, to the maintenance of which both our Governments are pledged.

With respect to the trade through Newchwang, attention should be called to the fact that the discrimination is the more marked for the reason that no line of Japanese steamers appears to be engaged in carrying goods to that port, while all other lines are denied the reduced rates so that shipments through that port are practically without any relief.

You will also repeat your endeavors to obtain for shipments to Newchwang which are subsequently forwarded to points north of Mukden, the same reduction as is granted to those sent through Newchwang direct to points north of Mukden.

The Department trusts you will spare no effort to obtain a satisfactory settlement of these matters which appear to be of considerable importance to American trade.

SIR: Since the writing of the Department's instruction No. 140 of April 17 last, on the subject of apparent discrimination in the freight rates on the South Manchuria Railway, the Embassy's Nos. 242 and 253 of March 29 and April 6, respectively, have informed the Department of later developments in the question.

On receipt of the Department's telegram of April 17, I at once took up the matter with the Foreign Office, on the basis of Baron Kato's note No. 98 of March 19 (enclosed in our dispatch No. 242, above mentioned), stating that I was confident that the continuance of the old conditions at Dairen was due only to the failure of the local authorities to receive instructions from the central office, and that I hoped the sending of these instructions need not be long delayed. The vice minister for Foreign Affairs promised to telegraph at once to Dairen and to ascertain where the trouble lay.

On May 5 the Consul at Dairen telegraphed me that the railway authorities informed him that a draft of agreement was being prepared there which would be submitted to the Imperial Government for their approval. On my next call at the Foreign Office I inquired regarding this draft, expressing some surprise that it should be thought to be necessary, since all that was desired in the case of shipments by American vessels was that rates and agreements be applied to them which were already operative as regards shipments in Japanese vessels. The reply was made that the local authorities at the port involved, knowing how to deal with Japanese companies, had not in the past gone very deeply into the question, but that now that arrangements were to be made with foreign companies, they felt the need of giving the matter more careful study and employing a more regular form of contract.

I have the honor to enclose herewith copies of more recent correspondence between myself and the Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs on the subject. The Embassy is not as yet in receipt of a copy of the "draft contract" said to be in preparation.

The Department's instruction No. 140, above referred to, states that "no line of Japanese steamers appears to be engaged in carrying goods to that port" (Newchwang). According to the report of the Commissioner of Customs for the year 1913 (the latest report on file at this Embassy), clearances and entries of Japanese steamers at Newchwang totaled 298, as against 177 British and 114 Chinese vessels. What proportion of these ply between Newchwang and Shanghai, these statistics do not show; I am informed, however, by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha that this company maintains a regular service on that route.

DEAR MR. The Board was next desired to urge the Railway Company to accede to the proposal of your Consul at Dairen and bring the negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion as soon as possible; and accordingly the Board instructed the Company by telegraph on the 6th instant to frame the draft contract at an early date and open negotiations with your Consul. The Company has sent a reply to the Board, expressing its compliance with these instructions.

DEAR MR. MATSUI: I beg to thank you most sincerely for your note of the 18th instant, respecting the matter of transportation connection between the South Manchuria Railway Company and American vessels.

It is my understanding—from the declaration of the South Manchuria Railway Company as quoted in his excellency Baron Kato's note, No. 98 of March 19 last, to the Ambassador—that the reductions in rates and the treatment provided in the draft contract now in preparation for application to American vessels at Dairen, will be the same as in the case of Japanese vessels; and that it is the intention of the Railway Company to make with American vessels at Newchwang and Antung similar agreements which shall grant the same reductions as in the case of Japanese vessels.

Inasmuch as your note does not describe the nature of the draft contract referred to, may I ask you to be so kind as to confirm my understanding of these points?

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Tokio, June 8, 1915.

DEAR MR. WHEELER: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 20th ultimo, relative to the transportation connection between the South Manchuria Railway and the American steamship company. Having at once referred the matter to the Railway Board, I am now in receipt of a reply to the following effect:

The freight rates to be charged upon formation of the direct transportation connection between the American steamers and the South Manchuria Railway at Dairen, Newchwang, and Antung will not, as a matter of course, differ from those chargeable in case of a similar connection with Japanese steamers; and in regard to the handling of cargoes and other matters, the treatment accorded in the case of a connection with Japanese vessels will be generally followed. As, however, the two companies intend to enter into a voluntary contract after consulting their mutual convenience, the Board is unable, pending the presentation of the draft contract for its approval by the Railway Company, to give a definite answer with respect to matters of detail.

Yours very sincerely,

K. MATSUI.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, as per list at the end of this letter, copies of correspondence between this office and the South Manchuria Railway Co., which I have not previously sent you.

I am now willing and desirous of dropping this matter until the arrival of some American ship brings it up in concrete form.

You will notice that I have been careful to state that I did not admit the necessity of an agreement with the South Manchuria Railway Co. The semi-governmental character of this company makes its acts more or less those of the Japanese Government; therefore rates granted by it to one class of goods are officially discriminatory unless granted to another; and, in my opinion, goods of the special class coming here in any American vessels must receive the special rates, agreement or no agreement. Indeed, in my opinion, there is discrimination whatever the means by which American goods arrive—whatever the nationality of the vessel—if Japanese goods are granted cheaper rates. The importing-vessel scheme is, to me, simply a subterfuge which does not affect the fact of discrimination one way or another.

I should be glad to have the Embassy's opinion in regard to this matter.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt through Mr. Secretary Y. Kubo, of your excellency's letter of yesterday's date, informing me that your excellency's company is "now preparing the draft of an agreement to submit to the Imperial Japanese Government for sanction," and that later on I will receive a copy and form of application.

While thanking your excellency for the communication under acknowledgment, I take the liberty of pointing out that your excellency's letter seems to imply that a new—and therefore different—form of agreement is being prepared. As I did not understand that simply an agreement was desired, but an agreement identical with that now in operation with at least two Japanese shipping companies, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, I should be grateful for any information your excellency can give me as to why a new form of agreement is necessary. I feel confident that your excellency's expected reply will help greatly to clear up this point.

Y. Kubo, of the South Manchuria Railway Company, to Consul Williamson.DAIREN, May 18, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note addressed Baron Nakamura of this Company, under date of the 5th inst., regarding the specific through goods on the South Manchuria Railway.

In reply to the query contained in your note why a new form of agreement is necessary, I am instructed to state that, with a full regard for the principle of equal opportunities in South Manchuria, we feel it necessary to take into consideration the differences that exist in the practices re the transportation business in vogue in the United States and Japan, the dissimilarity in the currency systems of both countries, etc., in our task of drafting the agreement and the form of application as referred to in our reply to you under date of the 4th inst.

I beg to make mention of the above in order to explain to you that, whilst a wholly different agreement is not under preparation from the existing one, there are circumstances which render a literal translation of the existing agreement not exactly answerable for the purpose.

We trust that this explanation will be found by you satisfactory.

We have now a great favor to ask of you. As we have taken up the study of the subject under notice, we have become extremely desirous of learning through your kind offices for reference sake the following:—

(1) Names of American steamship companies which are desirous of entering into the specific through goods traffic arrangement with this Company.

(2) What classes of steamers will be used, and on what schedule these steamers will be run to engage in the specific through goods traffic arrangement?

(3) Chief articles of specific through goods to be carried by these steamers.

(4) Ports of call for these steamers, if any.

(5) Information on other matters which are to form the contents of the agreement in view.

We are sorry to trouble you with all these questions, but as a matter of fact information on all these questions is considered by us as essential in drawing up the draft agreement, etc., in question.

Thanking you [etc.]

Consul Williamson to Mr. Kubo.

Dairen, May 19, 1915.

DEAR MR. KUBO: I beg to acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date in reply to mine of the 5th. I note the reasons why a change in the form of agreement is deemed necessary, and thank you for the trouble you have taken in making the explanation.

You also state that certain information is desired relative to the American firms desirous of entering into an agreement, contemplated ports of call, cargoes, etc., under 5 heads.

In reply, I beg to state that as the desirability or not of entering into an agreement with your company depends a great deal upon the nature of the agreement, none of the American shipping firms yet wishes to have its name mentioned in connection therewith; at the same time, all are desirous of learning the requirements and of securing a sample copy of an agreement form. I refer more particularly to Pacific Coast companies, although if anything comes of this matter and it appears that trade can be worked up, it is very likely that trade with the Atlantic and Gulf ports would also be interested, now that the Panama Canal is open. Indeed, the all-water route to Chicago has possibilities in this connection.

Hence, with the best desire to help you in every way I can, I am unable to give you specific information on the points mentioned in your letter. I may say, however, that other China Coast ports would probably be included in the voyages of these vessels, such as Tientsin, Tsingtau (Seitou), Lungkou or Chefoo, etc.

Perhaps, if you will send me a blank form of agreement for use with Japanese steamship companies, we might be able to make such alterations as would meet the difficulties you have encountered and thus simplify matters.

A. A. WILLIAMSON.

[Subinclosure 4.]

Mr. Kubo to Consul Williamson.

DAIREN, June 5, 1915.

DEAR SIR: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated May 19.

I note from your letter that none of the American Shipping firms yet wishes to have its name mentioned in connection with the subject of the specific through goods under notice and also that you are unable to favor us with specific information on the points mentioned in my previous letter dated May 18.

In this connection we beg to remind you that, in your first letter addressed to me dated February 12 last, you stated that you were then making arrangements with an American steamship company to make Dairen a port of call; and also that, in your second letter, addressed to Baron Nakamura, our President, you hinted at your intention to transmit such information on the subject as you might obtain from us to the American steamship company at San Francisco at present contemplating opening a line to Dairen.

As stated in my last letter, the differences that exist in the practices re the transportation business in vogue in the United States and Japan, the dissimilarity in the currency systems of both countries, etc., make up circumstances which render a literal translation of the existing agreement in operation between this Company and the Japanese shipping companies concerned not exactly applicable to the case under discussion.

Since we have failed to obtain the desired data from you, we have pleasure in submitting to the consideration of yourself and the parties directly interested in the matter the chief items of the proposed agreement as hereafter mentioned, in addition to a Japanese copy of the existing agreement with the Japanese steamship companies, as requested by your good self:

(1) The transportation zones shall be between the American coast ports and points on the South Manchuria Railway via Dairen, the through traffic stations to be left to mutual agreement separately.

(2) The American steamship companies which are to be parties to the agreement under consideration shall open and maintain a direct regular steamship route between the United States and the port of Dairen. How often the service shall be operated shall be fixed by agreement.

(3) The American steamship companies shall keep each an agency or an agent at Dairen to look after the general business related to the specific through goods traffic.

(4) Each contracting party shall have its responsibility limited to within the railway and/or steamship routes under its own control, that is to say, neither side shall be held responsible for aught conjointly with the other side.

(5) The specific through freights shall be the sums of the stipulated tariffs of the railway company and the steamship company. The exchange rate for each other's currency shall be fixed separately by agreement.

(6) The conditions to be included in the through bill of lading, together with its form, shall be fixed by agreement.

(7) Any disputes that may arise between the contracting parties shall be dealt with by arbitration.

(8) Matters other than above mentioned shall be determined by agreement.

We are inclined to think that the above will be found sufficient as the basis on which the new agreement under contemplation may be framed, and in submitting the same to you we hope that you will be so good as to exercise your influence to ask the American steamship companies that may be interested in the matter to draw up a draft agreement for us to consider with them, as mentioned in my letter dated May 4, on condition that the same take effect subject to the sanction of the Imperial Japanese Government.

Hoping that we shall hear favorably from you this time,

Y. KUBO.

[Translation of inclosure with the above.]

Contract between the South Manchuria Railway Company and Japanese steamship companies for through goods traffic.

Article I. The articles to be handled and the districts of origin and/or destination for this traffic shall be determined by special agreement.

Article II. Through goods shall invariably be delivered and received at the Dairen wharves.

Article III. With regard to damage to through goods, when it cannot be determined which party is to blame therefor, both shall bear the loss (indemnity), each in proportion to the freight received by it for carrying the goods.

Article IV. The party with which the cargo originates shall, by the end of each month, make a report for the preceding month to the party delivering the goods, allotting and setting the account.

Article V. Should either party desire to examine the books of the other party at any time, such books must be thrown open for examination as requested.

Article VI. Freight and other charges on through goods shall be made in accordance with the rates made by each party, and shall be added and collected together.

Article VII. Customs formalities at Dairen on through goods shall be performed and duty and other charges paid, in the case of exportation, by the Japanese steamship company; and in the case of importation, by the South Manchuria Railway Co., each for the other.

Article VIII. Special arrangements shall be made regarding processes for putting in operation this contract, and with regard to shipping documents, bills of lading, etc., for through goods.

Article IX. This contract may be abrogated by either party on 60 days' notice.

N. B.—In addition there is a supplementary agreement, containing articles which the contract stipulates are to be specially arranged, as well as detailed rules of procedure.

Furthermore, the three following conditions are contained in the Japanese steamship companies' through bills of lading, which are specially agreed to by shippers in regard to transportation:

1. Although claims arising from transportation can be collected and the diversion of securities and rights may be made by one company as representative of the other, yet each will take charge of transportation over its own lines independently and make itself responsible therefor.

2. The responsibility of a company which has engaged in transportation ceases as soon as its business is handed over to a successor. In regard to this, the right to demand freight or other rights arising from transportation are not affected, whatever circumstance may occur even before transportation be completed.

3. This transportation contract is subject to Japanese law.

Consul Williamson to Mr. Kubo.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Dairen, Manchuria, June 7, 1915.

DEAR MR. KUBO: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, with inclosure.

In reply, I beg to say that certain new shipping laws, which have not yet gone into effect, have caused American steamship owners to give considerable thought to the future. I refer to the new Seamen's Laws, or the La Follette Bill, which was made law by the American Congress. This has upset all previous calculations and left plans for the future uncertain.

Without admitting in any way the necessity, from my point of view, of an agreement with your company, I simply wish to assure you of my desire, by this correspondence, to discount future difficulties by doing everything I can to keep active the equal-opportunities principle by securing equal treatment for American ships with Japanese vessels, before possible definite cases can occur.

I thank you for your courtesies, and beg to remain dear Mr. Kubo,

Very respectfully yours,

A. A. WILLIAMSON.

The Embassy's unnumbered despatch of June 23 transmitted a copy of a letter from the Consul at that port, carrying as enclosures copies of correspondence between himself and the President and Secretary of the Railway Company.

RICHARD C. BUNDY.

[Inclosure—Extracts.]

For several years past a state of unrest has characterized the Kru coast in Sinoe County, occasionally manifesting itself in sporadic outbreaks. In September of the present year, taking as a pretext the rumor that the Government intended to send tax collectors among them, they commenced hostilities by blockading with war canoes the port of Greenville and firing upon the town, by seizing and robbing the boats of peaceful foreigners trading on the coast, by capturing and destroying mails despatched to Sinoe and Cape Palmas in open boats, by threatening and ill-treating missionaries and their dependents, and by setting up a farcical government with all the appurtenances of cabinet officials. As soon as your Executive heard of the first of these movements, we despatched messengers to the chiefs of the several communities reported to be involved, but without results.

With a sincere desire to exhaust every reasonable resource to settle this trouble by peaceful means, our situation was made fully known to the Government of the United States coupled with a request that a war vessel be despatched to Liberian waters, the commander of which might act as an impartial mediator. Further, a special commission was appointed to investigate and settle peacefully the questions between the Krus and the Government. That commission was composed of the following gentlemen: Honorable B. W. Payne, Secretary of Education, a native Liberian of the Bassa tribe; Reed Paige Clark, Esq., a citizen of the United States and General Receiver of Customs; Mr. B. J. Davis, Governor of Monrovia Krutown, a native Liberian of the Kru tribe; and Mr. J. F. Cooper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Your Executive felt assured that with a commission so composed, any real grievance which might be brought before it by the Krus would have sympathetic hearing and investigation, and any wrong proved, redressed.

The United States Cruiser Chester arrived at Monrovia on the 8th of November, and proceeded the next day to Sinoe with the above commission on board. The good offices of Captain Schofield of the Chester had been requested in the attempt to adjust these difficulties, and I may state that he was most painstaking and persevering and did everything in his power to bring about a settlement.

The efforts of the commission have so far proved of no avail in achieving peaceful conditions, notwithstanding the fact that every just and honorable overture was made the Kru to accomplish the end of the Government without bloodshed. These were all scorned; the Kru wanted to fight; the Government was challenged in a noisy and insolent manner by a show of their war power. In view of the efforts which have so often been made to impress the world with the idea that Liberia is disposed and takes every opportunity to ill-treat and oppress the native population, the commission has been able to produce this good effect, namely: that the citizens of the United States who acted in connection with the commission, and other foreign residents, are now satisfied, or should be, that the Kru have no real grievances, that this revolt was initiated for the purpose of subverting, if possible, the Government of Liberia, and that it is not without foreign sympathy and encouragement.

I feel that your Honorable Body will share the sincere disappointment caused by the departure of Major Charles Young, Military Attaché of the American Legation, who has rendered such unselfish and constructive service in his capacity as Military Adviser to the War Department. Major Young has worked with unflagging zeal to assist in the bringing of the Frontier Force up to a remarkable state of efficiency and system, in the rehabilitation of the Militia and along other lines converging towards the perfection point of the defensive arm of the State. The counsel and cooperation of a man representing as much optimistic energy and work as Major Young does, will most assuredly be missed.

On October 12, the Secretary of State replied on behalf of the President expressing his sincerest thanks and most grateful appreciation for the prompt response to Liberia's appeal for aid in dealing with the difficulties which at present confront the Republic.

Although the Chester has not yet arrived, her expected visit has gone a long way toward relieving the strain under which the Government has been laboring for the past few months in its endeavor to preserve the neutrality it proclaimed at the beginning of the war in Europe. It is generally felt in Government circles that the presence in Liberian waters of an American warship will have great value in relieving the tense situation that has been created by the unfriendly attitude of certain foreign elements as well as by the disorders on the Kru coast.

Monrovia, December 18, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report for the information of the Department that the Chester left Monrovia on December 6, 1915, for Freetown, Sierra Leone, to secure coal and provisions. She was gone eight days and returned to Monrovia on the morning of December 14, 1915.

The next day, December 15, there was a conference at the Legation at which President Howard, the Secretary of State, Captain Schofield, and myself were present.

The situation on the Kru coast was discussed at length and it was decided that the Chester would proceed to the disaffected area again and lend whatever moral assistance was possible in the circumstances.

On December 16 the Chester sailed for Sinoe. She transported fifty more frontier soldiers as reinforcements to the troops already on the Kru coast. One hundred men were desired to augment the force on the coast, but fifty were all that could be reenlisted, up to the time the Chester sailed. Recruiting will continue, I am informed, until fifty more are obtained. With the despatch of these to the coast the Government will have about three hundred and fifty soldiers at the scene of disorder. It is not unlikely that this number will have to be still further increased before the uprising can be put down.

The General Receiver is anxious to keep the Frontier Force down to the smallest number that will permit it to effectively cope with present conditions in the country because its maintenance is a heavy charge on the uncertain revenues of the Republic. He assures me, however, that he expects to see the Kru campaign through to the end since he has satisfied himself that their rebellion against the Liberian Government is not based on substantial grounds. The Krus have some grievances, the General Receiver thinks, that are well founded, to which the Government ought to pay attention. But nothing has come to light of a serious nature to justify their taking up arms and organizing a widespread revolt in the present instance.

As previously reported the Krus have persistently sought the aid of the British in their rebellion against the Liberian Government, and confidently expected to receive it. On November 13, 1915, nine of the disaffected chiefs addressed a letter to the British Consul General at Monrovia, earnestly begging him for his assistance and that of the British Government.

It is stated in this letter that the Chester aided the Liberians "with his cutter and use machine-guns on us who have nothing in the way of arms." Of course there is no truth whatever in the statement that the Chester used machine-guns on them. When the actual fighting took place at Sinoe I am informed that the Chester was not even there but had moved on down the coast.

The British Consul General replied to the Kru chiefs through the Liberian Government on December 11, 1915 (see enclosure). It will be observed that this is a strong letter and should go a long way toward correcting any misconceptions, however acquired; that may have lodged in the minds of the rebel chiefs. The letter of the British Consul General was given by the Liberian Government to Captain Schofield to be read and delivered in person to the Kru chiefs.

From a wireless message through the Chester to Conakry and from there cabled to Monrovia, December 19, President Howard was advised that Bluebarra, the point dominating the port of Sinoe, was again attacked by the Krus on December 17, 1915, but the attacking party was driven off. One frontier soldier reported killed. This message also stated that Major York and one hundred and sixty men left Sinoe on December 11, presumably to push the campaign against the Krus at other points on the coast. The removing of this one hundred and sixty men from Sinoe so weakened the garrison there that the Krus apparently thought it an opportune moment to attack Bluebarra again. The Chester arrived at Sinoe the same day of this last attack, December 17, with the fifty men before mentioned and these will doubtless strengthen the Government forces at Bluebarra sufficiently to prevent any more assaults at this point by the Krus.

The question of ammunition is still a grave matter for the Government, and it is looking forward anxiously to a reply from the Department to the Legation's cable of December 1, sent to ascertain whether the Government of the United States would lend Liberia 500 Krag carbines and 250,000 rounds of ammunition for them. Captain Schofield stated to me, at the time of his leaving Monrovia for Sinoe, December 16, that if he found conditions on the Kru coast were sufficiently grave he might feel called upon to take up this matter directly with the Navy Department before returning to Monrovia.

BRITISH CONSULATE GENERAL,
Monrovia, December 11, 1915.

To the Kru Chiefs of Fishtown, Grand Nefoo, Barto, Warpe, Settra Kru, Blue Barrow, Booter Sanguin, and Rock Cess:

I have received your letter of the 13th November. You have been told by me before, and also by Mr. Parks, to live peacefully and do your duty to the Liberian Government whose subjects you are. You have been told that the Liberian Government wish to do what is right by you, and I have told you that when trouble or misunderstanding came you should come to Monrovia quietly and respectfully and ask the Liberian Government to put things right for you and that they would do it. Instead of that you have foolishly and wickedly begun to fight the Liberian Government, and have used the British flag, which you have no right to use, to deceive other people into the belief that you are British subjects, and have no claims upon the British Government for protection or anything else.

I now tell you one and all that if you want the British Government to think well of you, you must never again use the British flag; you must give up fighting with the Liberian Government, make your submission, and repair all damage you have done. It is no use writing letters to me and I will receive no more letters from you nor will I give you any more advice since you do not follow it when you receive it.

A telegram has been received from the American Minister at Monrovia as follows:

While the Department appreciates the importance of adhering to the loan agreement by the contracting parties thereto, it is to be noted that for the proper collection of the Liberian customs the maintenance of an adequate frontier force is most necessary, and the Department would be pleased to know if in view of the serious and lamentable situation brought about in Liberia on account of the European war, the payment of a minimum Frontier Force could be chargeable before the payment of interest.

With your familiarity with the steps this Government has taken in assisting the Government of Liberia in the work of arranging for the new loan, you will readily appreciate the gratification which would be felt could the bankers arrange in any way to lessen the dilemma which now confronts the Republic.

*The General Receiver to Minister Buckner.*MONROVIA, March 18, 1915.

SIR: For the information of the Department of State, I would say that some time ago the Excelsior Mining Co. Ltd., a Liberian company financed by British capital, of which Chief Justice Dossen appears to be the Liberian attorney, deposited with the Liberian Government as an evidence of good faith some $8,000 in coin. I am informed unofficially that this sum has been borrowed by the Liberian Government for the purpose of paying certain Government officials. I have in fact personally seen a letter from His Excellency the President in which the President states that this loan has been made. I am further informed that Mr. Justice Dossen gave oral consent to the loan, there being no written document to show that the capitalists behind the Excelsior Mining Co. assent to the expenditure of their deposit. The deposit, as I have said, was made as an evidence of good faith, to be returned to the company if work is commenced on their concession within the time limit set. It is to [be] forfeited to the Liberian Government, I am told, only in the event that the company fail to commence operations within the time limit, three years after the conclusion of the European war.

The Financial Adviser was at no time advised of the Government's intention to make this loan from the Excelsior Mining Co., and has had no opportunity to protest against what appears to be (apart from other considerations) a wholly unauthorized charge against future revenue.

SIR: The Department has received the Legation's No. 91, of March 19, enclosing copy of a note addressed to the Minister by the General Receiver of Customs, relative to the action of the Liberian Government in borrowing $8,000 from the Excelsior Mining Company, Ltd.

If, after consultation with Mr. Clark, it would seem expedient officially to take up the question of this loan with the Government of Liberia, the Minister for Foreign Affairs should clearly understand that the United States has no wish or intention to interfere with the operations of the Government of Liberia.

You may then, in a most careful and discreet manner, intimate that in view of what this Government has done in assisting Liberia to rehabilitate its finances and to place itself on a sound basis, enabling the country to maintain a position of importance and respect among foreign powers, it would be most natural to expect that under Section 4 (d) of the loan agreement the General Receiver of Customs would have been consulted before negotiating the loan.

And you may say further, that if the Liberian Government continues to make such unauthorized charges against the revenues of the country, it cannot expect the cordial support it has heretofore received from the bankers or the confidence of this Government.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, May 11, 1915.

SIR: For the information of the Department I have the honor to make the following report with respect to financial conditions in Liberia and certain emergency legislation remedial in nature passed at the extra session of the Legislature in March last called by the President for that purpose. * * *

It will be perfectly evident from an inspection of the figures representing the receipts for the war period that only the most rigid economy and careful management could meet administration and collection charges, pay interest and sinking fund as promptly as possible, and provide funds sufficient for the upkeep of a frontier force of approximately 600 men. This latter charge was not however assumed by the Receivership until after the bankers had declared it to be their understanding that the Frontier Force constituted one of the first liens against the assigned revenues. The interpretation put on Article 4 by the bankers respecting the Frontier Force must be regarded as a most salutary action and prevented what might easily have been a real calamity to the country. For the Receivership had definitely decided that it did not have the power under the loan agreement, by any interpretation it was privileged to make, to provide funds for the maintenance of the Frontier Force so long as interest was in arrears. * * *

Great credit should be given the Receivership for the economy and skill with which the funds collected by its [omission] have been managed since the war began. When it was apparent that there would be a great reduction in receipts the Receivership on its own initiative pruned the personnel of the customs service to such an extent that only those were retained who were indispensable to the conduct of business reasonably to be expected. Under ordinary conditions the monthly expenses for cost of collection, administration, and application of the assigned revenues were approximately $7,291. The Receivership is now paying against these charges about $4,227 per month. Some arrears are therefore necessarily accumulating under these heads. * * *

While the Receivership early in the war period released all employees it could do without, the Government made no move in this direction. And a full civil list has been carried right along although it was evident there was but very little money with which to pay public employees. In normal times the civil list is much too large and now, when the Government's business is greatly reduced due to the war, even greater reductions in the number of Government employees could be made without in the least degree impairing the public service. At the same time the accumulation of large arrears would be prevented. This question never claimed the serious attention of the Government until March at the special session of the Legislature. * * *

The Government is undoubtedly very hard pressed. How far it can drag along, in its present manner of going, drawing behind it a burden that increases rapidly as the weeks go by, is an indeterminate question.

In conclusion I feel that I can not omit to emphasize the fact that the present financial condition of Liberia is due entirely to the lack of ships to carry away her produce and bring in the goods required. Relief to this country could take no better form than a line of direct American steamers calling at Liberian ports.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, July 13, 1915.

SIR: In My No. 95 of May 11, 1915, I had the honor to report somewhat at length concerning financial conditions in Liberia. * * *

I now have much satisfaction in informing the Department that the General Receiver has advised me that since the date of the above report interest payments have been made as follows:

February interest paid May 14, 1915; March interest paid May 24, 1915; April and May interest paid June 18, 1915 (by cable); June interest paid July 7, 1915. At this time, therefore, there are no arrears of interest and I am informed that the outlook is sufficiently favorable to warrant the anticipation that interest for July and perhaps August will be met promptly as it falls due.

The Receivership has not been able to give the Government anything on account of residue, but the General Receiver is of the opinion that the emergency tax levied on all imports should have put into the Treasury on an average of approximately $4,000 per month for the past three months. From these facts it can be gleaned, therefore, that present financial conditions in the Republic, while still far from what is desirable, are very much better than they were three or four months ago. Accordingly more hopeful views are held both by the Government and the Receivership concerning the finances of the country in the immediate future.

AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: I have the honor to report for the information of the Department that the Liberian Government has concluded and signed on October 29, 1915, an agreement with the Bank of British West Africa, Limited, which provides that all moneys collected by and/or paid to the Government, including taxes, fines, licenses, surtax on import duties, residue of revenue received from customs receivership, and in fact, all revenue of whatsoever nature, excepting postal revenue, accruing, or that may hereafter accrue to the Government shall be paid into the bank at its nearest branch or agency and there be placed to the credit of an account in the name of the Liberian Government.

The conclusion of this agreement is regarded as a most important step in the efforts that are being made to bring about reforms in the internal finances of the Republic. The agreement has the sanction and approval of the Financial Adviser. In fact, I understand, that he was freely consulted about its terms and provisions. Personally I expect material benefits to come to the Republic as a result of an effective operation of this agreement. A verbatim copy of the agreement is herewith enclosed.

[Enclosure.]

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA AND THE BANK OF BRITISH WEST AFRICA LIMITED.

An agreement entered into this 29th day of October, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen between the Government of the Republic of Liberia (hereinafter styled "the Government") of the first part and the Bank of British West Africa Limited (hereinafter styled "the Bank") of the second part.

1. NOW IT IS HEREBY AGREED that from and after the 1st day of November one thousand nine hundred and fifteen all moneys collected by and/or paid to the Government, including, taxes, fines, licences, surtax on import duties, residue of revenue received from the customs receivership, and in fact all revenue of whatsoever nature accruing or that may hereafter accrue to the Government shall be paid into the Bank at its nearest branch or agency and there placed to the credit of an account in the name of the Liberian Government.

2. Revenues collected in kind, i. e. ivories, horses, cattle, animals of any description, or anything else that may be accepted in lieu of cash, are to be listed on arrival by the sub-treasurer at ports other than Monrovia and in Monrovia by the general treasurer, and one copy of such list shall be furnished to the Bank and one to the Secretary of the Treasury. As and when any or all of these revenues in kind are disposed of, account sales, duly certified shall be furnished to the Bank, and the proceeds of such sales paid into the Bank. Revenue in kind may be disposed of only in one of the following ways (a) sold for cash or (b) debited to the account of a Government officer or employee at an agreed price.

3. Pending further legislation, when an amendment may be added to this clause, all indebtedness certificates received by the Government in payment of those fines and taxes and licences prescribed by law shall be paid into the Bank together with cash collections. No credit, however, will be passed to the credit of the account of the Government in connection with these indebtedness certificates, but they shall be entered in a register to be kept by the Bank, and thereafter cancelled by the Bank, subsequently being handed to the Secretary of the Treasury against his receipt.

4. Liberian silver and copper shall be received from the Government by the Bank, when forming part of the Government revenues at the fixed rate of $4.80 to the pound sterling. At the request of the Bank, however, the Government will take back the whole or any portion desired by the Bank when drawing from its account with the Bank.

5. The account of the Government will be kept at the Monrovia branch of the Bank, and will be operated upon solely by the Secretary of the Treasury. Revenues paid in at branches or agencies other than Monrovia will be transferred by the Bank to Monrovia, and if desired by the Secretary of the Treasury, and provided safe transport facilities be available, will be transferred thence to any branch or agency in Liberia in order to meet the drawings of the Secretary of the Treasury. The Bank will be previously advised of all cheques drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury for payment at branches or agencies other than Monrovia.

6. The Bank will render to the Secretary of the Treasury a quarterly account of the operations of the Bank under this agreement and settlements will be made quarterly. As remuneration for their services under this agreement the Bank will be paid as follows:

For keeping the account of the Liberian Government and for transferring the Government revenues between ports on the Liberian coast as stipulated in Section 5 of this agreement, a commission of three quarters per centum ($\frac{3}{4}\%$) upon all moneys paid into the Bank by the Government. This rate applies to all revenues in kind however disposed of.

For keeping a register of indebtedness certificates and cancelling same, a commission of one quarter per centum ($\frac{1}{4}\%$) on the face value of all such certificates paid into the Bank.

7. It is distinctly understood and agreed that the Liberian Government during the term of this agreement will confine the whole of the Banking business of the Government except that of the Postal Service to the Bank of British West Africa Limited.

8. If at any time during the term of this agreement the Bank shall be desirous of disposing of the whole or any portion of their business in Liberia this agreement shall thereupon immediately terminate.

9. This agreement shall remain in force for the term of two years certain from the 1st day of November one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, to and including the thirty-first of October one thousand nine hundred and seventeen.

10. This agreement may be amended at any time by mutual consent of the contracting parties hereto.

IN WITNESS whereof we have affixed our hands and seals at the city of Monrovia in the County of Montserrado and Republic of Liberia the day and date first above written.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, December 20, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report for the information of the Department that the Customs Receivership met, as provided in the loan agreement, for its annual session at Monrovia, on December 6, 1915. * * * the British Receiver who was delayed because there were no steamers from his port of residence, at Bassa, to Monrovia. On December 9, however, he arrived and thereafter all members were present at each meeting.

I am informed by the General Receiver that * * * no new budget has been passed since the outbreak of war in Europe; the continuation of the old budget was resorted to last year as the best means to deal with the then existing situation; and, since there has not been any material change in conditions in the last year, the same expedient will doubtless be tried again.

The General Receiver also informs me that interest for the months of October and November has been paid and that there are sufficient funds in hand and in sight to warrant the statement that December interest will be promptly paid when it falls due. This will clear up all arrears of interest and enable the Republic to start the new year with a clean sheet.

The relation between the Receivership and the Government have been quite harmonious during the past year, and there are no questions on the horizon in that quarter at present of sufficient importance to arouse any concern.

After a series of meetings more or less perfunctory the Receivership adjourned December 16, 1915.

The President of the Convention, Gonzalez Garza, to Confidential Agent Llorente.

My Government, which emanated from the Sovereign Convention, has received offers from private citizens to take up arms in defense of the city and of the Convention. It has not, however, been deemed necessary to accept such offers, for the reason that the situation in the capital is sufficiently safeguarded with the force already at hand, belonging to the Convention and to the Divisions of the North and South. General Villa has control over the entire North after having defeated the Robles Brigade and the column of General Elizondo. General Villa is now in Querétaro with 25,000 men and will march against San Luis and Tampico, by which movement all the central part of the Republic will come under the control of the Convention Government. The greatest part of the troops which evacuated Mexico City on Saturday have now returned and placed themselves at the orders of the Convention and the Commanders of the Division of the North. The Convention proposes to follow a policy of conciliation with all desirable and useful elements.

With this end in view, the Convention has proposed [to] General Eulalio Gutierrez that the capital of the Republic be declared neutral in order that preliminary peace parleys may be initiated, simultaneously agreeing to grant an armistice throughout the Republic. The Convention likewise intends to address General Venustiano Carranza in this sense.

The lack of cohesion on the part of these elements, Carranza and Gutierrez, will facilitate the military operations of this Government.

MEXICO CITY, January 20, 1915.

The late Provisional President [Gutierrez] left Pachuca yesterday taking a northerly direction. He has with him several thousand well armed men but no considerable ammunition. He issued a manifesto enumerating and denouncing various acts of Villa and removing him from his position as commander in chief; also he removed Carranza and Zapata and called on the various chiefs to support him.

*Manifiesto by Eulalio Gutierrez, deposed Provisional President.*²

[Extract.]

The Constitutionalist Revolution thought that its victory had been consummated when General Alvaro Obregon entered the City of Mexico after Huerta, the usurper, had fled from the country. Nevertheless it was soon observed that a victory of purely military character did not mark the end of the struggle and all the troubles that have ensued grew principally out of the fact that Señor Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Revolution, declined to condense in a definite program the aspirations of the country, refused to define the time of his incumbency as First Chief and fix the date for elections; and he also refused to give guaranties and freedom for holding in the capital a really national convention for deciding all problems of an urgent character for the welfare of the country.

[Review of political affairs from the inception of the Aguascalientes Convention to date.]

The moment has now therefore arrived when the civic standard of all Mexicans should be put to the test. They are at liberty to choose between a dictatorship offered them by the leaders from the North and South and even by Señor Carranza, and a democratic organization undertaken by the Government proposed by the Aguascalientes Convention which I am sworn to maintain.

I have hesitated to assume this attitude because material force is on the side of those who have not respected the Government which they themselves formed. But, acting in accord with the members of the Cabinet and with the feelings of many honest patriots whom I have consulted, I have decided to take a road which, although it may not be that of victory, is the one that honesty points out, asking all Mexicans to do their duty.

Supported by this decision, adopted by the nation's Government, I have seen fit to resolve the following:

First. General Francisco Villa shall cease from his command of the Northern Division and of all the forces that may have been under him; and with him shall also cease Generals Tomás Urbina and Rodolfo Fierro.

Second. General Emiliano Zapata shall cease from his command of the forces loyal to the Convention which may be under his command.

And it is hereby made known to all military chiefs and armed forces loyal to the Government emanating from the Aguascalientes Convention that they shall obey the orders brought to their attention directly or indirectly by the War Department.

Commissions shall at once proceed to bring the above decisions to the attention of such forces as have declined to recognize the Government because they demanded the retirement of General Villa, and to request their assistance should it be necessary to enforce the above decisions.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, February 3, 1915—5 p. m.

303. Carranza has changed the capital to Vera Cruz closing all Government offices here, including public schools, for the purpose of humiliating this city and reducing it to the insignificant situation of a capital of a new State called by him Valle de Mexico. It is ascertained his aim in so doing is to force the transfer to Vera Cruz of the Diplomatic Corps whose existence here he feigns to ignore and to whom he has not addressed any communication so far.

British Chargé d'Affaires sent yesterday following telegram to his Government, and the French, Spanish, German, Italian, Austrian, Japanese, Guatemalan, Chilean have done the same and probably the others will also do so:

I have had the honour to report to you the numerous changes in the Cabinet of Occupation of this capital as they occurred, and in my telegram of yesterday I reported to you the decision of Señor Carranza to transfer the capital to Vera Cruz as well as the fact that all the Ministries here were now closed and that the municipality was the only civil authority left. Thus the Diplomatic Corps is left without any one with whom they can deal. Foreign representatives have on the whole been treated with all proper respect by the chiefs who have followed in such quick succession, though they have made little if any secret that they found them an embarrassment and the Corps has thus been of real use. But with the increasing anarchy their position has become increasingly difficult and even precarious. It threatens to become ridiculous if they are left subject to incidents at any of the military changes of authority and entirely en l'air, having, as I said, no one with whom they can deal. On the other hand they clearly cannot establish themselves at Vera Cruz as this would be tantamount to a recognition of Carranza, and though he appears to have for the moment the strongest following yet there is not the slightest ground for trusting in his stability; and it may be taken as certain that the interests of any country whose representatives took such action would be a butt for the malevolence of the other parties.

Under these circumstances I believe it is my duty to warn His Majesty's Government to consider while there is still time the advisability of withdrawing their diplomatic representation from Mexico leaving their interests to be protected locally as well as may be by the Consuls each of whom might, following the example which has been set by the United States, be appointed as special confidential agent to the most successful chief in his district.

I do not say that the moment has yet absolutely arrived for such a step but I firmly believe it is very near and it may come any day. It is, of course, of great importance that unanimity should prevail in anything that may be decided.

If I may venture to express an opinion, best course to be adopted is that we should be furnished with instructions to leave but be given latitude as to the moment for carrying the instructions into effect.

The situation grows worse every day. The Zapatistas are making frequent attacks on several points at short distances from the center of the city. The cutting off by them of the water supply, the scarcity and high prices of food on account of lack of communication and the indescribable uncertainty of the paper money which one day is given forcible circulation and next day is declared of no value creates for banks, commerce and the people in general a condition very near to despair. Considering the kaleidoscopic rapidity with which unexpected situations are created and again changed here and the possibilities of this capital being recovered by any one of the numerous factions now contending for the supreme power, I think as a temporary and conciliatory solution it would be advisable for the American Government to intimate to Carranza but in a strong and decisive way the imperative necessity of leaving somebody in the Foreign Office here to deal in his representations with the [omission] leaving the telegraph open for the transaction of more important matters with himself or his Foreign Minister at Vera Cruz, every diplomatic representative here being, of course, free if he feels the need to deal with Carranza personally.

Please let me know your views on this.

You will inform his excellency the Secretary of State of the United States that by reason of lack of communication between the Provisional Government of Mexico, sustained by the Sovereign Convention, and the forces under the command of General Villa, the latter, as Chief of Military Operations, has for the time being, and only for the period during which communication is impossible, assumed political authority, and has created, in order that public business be not retarded, the administrative departments to be located at Chihuahua, attached to General Headquarters: the first, Foreign Relations and Justice, of which I have been placed in charge; the second, Interior Affairs and Communications, of which Dr. Luis de la Garza Cardenas is chief; and the third, Finance and Industry, under the direction of Mr. Francisco Escudero. You will invite the special attention of the Department of State to the fact that the Convention, under date of January 18, last, ratified the appointment of General Villa, all of whose acts will be regarded as those of the Provisional Government. Be good enough to present my personal respects to Mr. Bryan, and communicate to him, in brief, the text of the manifesto and decree of General Villa which I am sending you.

You will discretely represent to General Carranza that this Government deprecates his action, which the Department is advised by reliable sources is creating a most unfortunate impression abroad. Foreign governments are forced to the conclusion that the Carranza Government is acting without deliberation or regard for the established conventionalities of international intercourse. Perhaps the most harmful impression abroad is that of doubt as to the ability of General Carranza to maintain himself at the capital of Mexico although he represents himself as its provisional constitutional president. If this action on the part of Carranza should result in the withdrawal from the Republic of the diplomatic representatives of foreign governments a situation will be produced the grave result of which it is believed Carranza has not duly estimated.

WASHINGTON, February 15, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. BRYAN: I have the honor to transmit to you, herewith, copy in translation of a circular letter issued by Mr. Carranza to all military commanders of the Constitutionalist Army, which has for a purpose to preserve perfect unity in all the acts of our government in its relations with foreign representatives now in Mexico.

By having all matters brought directly to the attention of the First Chief, who, on account of the fact that he is the depository of the Executive Power of Mexico, is really the only person with whom diplomats and consuls can deal, many misunderstandings and deficiencies will be averted.

With assurances [etc.]

[Inclosure.]

CIRCULAR.

To all Military Commanders of the Constitutionalist Army:

The First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army has been apprised of the very frequent cases in which persons of various nationalities, styling themselves confidential or consular agents of foreign governments, without they really being so, and other persons styling themselves representatives of foreign colonies or large foreign interests established in Mexico, pretend to make representations, address notes and treat directly about matters of international importance with different commanders of the Constitutionalist Army. This action, even in cases in which it is taken by persons really accredited, produces the inconvenient effect of breaking up the unity which should prevail in all the acts of the Constitutionalist Government and tends to belittle the authority of the First Chief of the aforesaid army, giving room to disorder and lack of cohesion in governmental decisions, with much danger for our cause.

The defection of General Francisco Villa and other officers of the Northern Division affords a painful experience from which we must profit to prevent in the future any breach of political discipline by inexperienced leaders.

This Government is determined to comply with its international duties by affording just and lawful protection to foreign persons and interests, and this can only be properly done by the appropriate authorities, due to the fact that any representations made in behalf of foreigners directly to military chiefs who depend from this headquarters may not be efficaciously attended to, in detriment of the cordial relations which this Government desires to maintain with foreign countries and governments. Moreover, it being the exclusive province of the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army to direct all kinds of diplomatic negotiations and to treat all international matters, receiving the agents of foreign governments and deciding all affairs relative thereto, I consider it imperative, in view of the above-mentioned facts, to remind all commanders of the Constitutionalist Army that they are not authorized to receive or admit, and much less to pass any decision upon, notes involving complaints, representations or any action taken in behalf of foreigners, no matter what the character of the representations may be, whether they proceed from consular or confidential agents or from persons styling themselves representatives of large interests, whose action near military commanders affects or may affect the diplomatic relations of Mexico or the duties or rights of the Constitutionalist Government with regard to foreigners living in this country. Military commanders to whom representations may be made shall confine themselves to informing the representatives of foreigners that they should treat such matters directly with the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army.

With regard to suggestions, insinuations or promises of mediation in matters of our internal policy, which some foreign representatives may make with the good intention of assisting us to decide our difficulties, military commanders shall always discourage such interference, declining invariably any promises of political assistance made by foreigners, even though such assistance would seem beneficial, as it should always be borne in mind that all matters of our interior policy are of the exclusive province of the people and government of Mexico. This Headquarters, therefore, recommends to military commanders under the First Chief to abstain from admitting by their side any confidential agents or representatives of foreign governments or interests, to the end of avoiding all possible danger of a breach of discipline, inasmuch as the latter is of the greatest importance in the present moments of revolutionary struggle.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,

380. I have been earnestly requested by the International Committee of Relief to transmit to you the following telegram which was impossible for them to send in clear on account of Vera Cruz censorship.

An International Committee consisting of forty members and representing seventeen foreign colonies resident in the City of Mexico held a meeting to-night and passed a resolution to the effect that the following be sent to you:

For three days every business house in Mexico City both large and small has closed its doors and the entire commercial traffic of a metropolis of over half a million inhabitants has been completely paralyzed. This has been due to the request of the military authorities here that a special tax levy of twenty million pesos be paid for the ostensible purpose of relieving the poor whose situation has become really desperate due to the shortage of foodstuffs.

We think in all fairness not only to the various colonies represented but to the business men of Mexican nationality that the fact that this shortage of foodstuffs is due to the deliberate campaign of military leaders desirous of starving the working classes into enlisting should be given as wide publicity as possible. This committee composed of the leading business and professional men of the capital has amassed indisputable evidence pointing to a definite order forbidding the importation of cereals and other foodstuffs for the reason above stated. Furthermore all food possible to secure has been shipped out of the city in furtherance of the scheme. This evidence will be placed at the disposal of the various members of the Diplomatic Corps here.

At all times the foreign and native business interests have been willing and anxious to subscribe to a fund for the relief of the poor but when a representative of this committee approached General Obregon last night relative to the disposition [omission] already collected for this purpose he was met with the following answer:

"The Mexican people do not need gratuitous help from foreigners. The sons of Mexico will work actively to mitigate the pains from which they suffer but they will do that work themselves."

On the following day General Obregon made the following statement:

"At the first attempt at riot I will leave the city at the head of my troops in order that they may not fire a single shot against the hungry multitude, as the merchants did not accept the invitation which was made to them to assist the people and prevent violence."

This we consider as an open invitation on the part of the authorities for the mob to loot our places of business which we are prepared to defend as best we may should the occasion arise. Three thousand employees local street railways left their cars today, held mass meeting, decided join Carranza. After meeting paraded streets joined by rabble. All places of business, hotels, cafés, banks, theaters closed. Men authorized remove trolleys take same Vera Cruz. General exodus expected begin tomorrow. Street car system has over two hundred miles track, two hundred and fifty cars, carries million passengers monthly, is Canadian corporation, head offices Toronto but been operated by Government for some time. Condition city desperate, without water, insufficient food and no police protection. Obregon said again this morning:

"I will not fire single shot into any mob who may attempt get what hunger has driven them to seize. Rather than fire upon my people I will evacuate city leaving selfish merchants who refused contribute their relief manage their own defense."

Tonight business men been summoned meet local theater where Obregon will make address. These same men refused pay extraordinary tax recently levied. Nearly two hundred empty box-cars stand ready to take away Carranza sympathizers when evacuation becomes fact. Up this time no looting though fear generally expressed mobs may attempt destroy property. For past four days foreigners everywhere generously contributed relief funds but Obregon refused receive these contributions. Likewise Catholic clergy offered donations cash which refused. Priests still imprisoned in Palace and Obregon says will carry them away when city evacuated placing available ones in army. Mobs bearing red flags are now parading streets.

Chairman International Committee, and sixteen others including representatives colonies France, Germany, Great Britain, Russia, Italy, etc.

Military trains on the Mexican Railway will be diverted from Ometusco via Pachuca to Tula. This means the complete closing of all considerable sources of supplies for the city, its possible isolation and its occupation by the Zapatistas. These people cannot be expected to relieve the distressing economic situation now prevailing except as to water supply unless there may be other source of relief promptly. I can see nothing but increased hardship and suffering for the foreign representatives and their nationals. Mr. Cabrera said that the diplomats would be advised of evacuation. If the Carranza Government carries out the plan outlined by Cabrera and conveyed to the Department in my March 3, 4 p. m., I would consider the Mexico City situation which is already very serious as extremely dangerous, much worse than ever before. Headlines in Mexico papers of yesterday are most discouraging. Labor union publicly inciting to anarchy and the guillotine. Douglas and I conferred at length at noon. He thinks possibly an agreement can be reached to consider the city a neutral zone. In view of the failure of previous efforts this is quite doubtful and difficult. The Constitutionalists themselves declined it when proposed by the Conventionists.⁷ If it should fail, and if the Department does not feel assured of the prompt opening of the line north, then I respectfully suggest, in view of all the circumstances, strong demand by the Department that railway and telegraphic communication with the city of Mexico must be maintained regardless of whether the place is evacuated by the Constitutionalists or occupied by the Zapatistas. I believe that Douglas would support the demand and that it would be opportune to make it.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, March 4, 1915—5 p. m.

383. I beg to transcribe the following sentences from a speech made by Obregon yesterday in reply to one of the chairmen of a meeting of more than three hundred Mexican merchants and proprietors called by him to deal with the question of the modification of the special tax decree requested by Mexicans:

Every authority good or bad must make itself respected and I am resolved to do this at any cost.

The Constitutionalist army does not come to beg good will, it comes to impart justice according to the Constitutionalist criterion and without worrying as to what the morrow may bring forth.

Understand well that it was not I who excepted foreigners from paying the tax but our laws, which are very deficient. But I call to your notice that true equality and democracy will exist only when we Mexicans no longer have to defer to those who smoke opium and chew tobacco. Our territory is immensely rich; our miseries should not pass beyond the frontiers and here is where we should do everything to relieve our poverty.

You call my attention to the moral force and influence of foreign capital but I warn you that I am resolved to do justice above everything else. I thank you for the lessons of your wise men which you wish me to learn. I can have no wise men at my side but I respond for my acts with my blood. You need not be alarmed over this decree for others soon will be published which will alarm you more.

⁷ See Mr. Llorente's January 20.

I repeat that you refused to pay the tax taking the decree as a political arm but once more I will say to you that I have no intention of letting myself be outwitted and I am determined that my orders shall be obeyed without caring for what may happen afterwards. I have said and I repeat that I will not punish hungry people who try to get bread and do justice to themselves. If my children had no bread I would go out and look for it with a dagger in my hand until I had found it.

After this speech he declared them all to be his prisoners, the building had been previously surrounded by troops. They are yet detained. Your attention is called to part in which he states that more decrees more alarming will follow.

386. My 383, March 4, 5 p. m. I am informed that foreign merchants are unwilling to open their shops, sure as they are that the purpose of the decree is not only to force them to accept Carranza's money lately issued at Vera Cruz amounting to several million which money will be of no value when other factions occupy the city, but with alternative that if decree is not complied with it would be considered as a rebellious act and subject to punishment which will be made effective probably in the way of authorized looting. That the city will be evacuated soon and consequently occupied by other factions is now proved by the following reply from Carranza to a telegram sent day before yesterday by the Diplomatic Corps in which they requested the adoption of some measures beneficial to the merchants here:

By direction of the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army I beg to advise you, requesting that you so inform the Diplomatic Corps, that the City of Mexico will be evacuated soon by the Constitutionalist forces. The Diplomatic Corps will be duly attended in Vera Cruz if it should resolve to go to the capital of the Republic. Accept my distinguished consideration.

URETA.

This [omission] second invitation for the transfer of the Diplomatic Corps, which of course cannot be taken. Later consideration only indicates Constitutionalist intention to get rid of all responsibility for what may happen here to foreigners and Diplomatic Corps. However, their responsibility will be the greater since if the feared catastrophe should take place here it will all be due to their machinations and avowed purpose to punish the city. Besides the wild rumors which already circulate continually, I have just been informed by a reliable person that an emissary came expressly from Vera Cruz bringing verbal orders, which they would not trust to telegraph or ink and paper, to destroy the light and power plants and the water works, make a general looting before the evacuation takes place.

Say to General Carranza that we are very much alarmed at the reported interruption of communication and traffic between Vera Cruz and Mexico City especially in view of the statements issued and speeches made by General Obregon against foreigners. Have Judge Douglas join you in impressing upon Carranza the necessity of keeping the way open so that in case of necessity residents of the capital may reach the seacoast. A very serious situation may be created if harm should be done the foreigners at the capital.

391. Carranza has confirmed the coming evacuation of Mexico City and sent today through his Foreign Office a third invitation to the Diplomatic Corps to transfer to Vera Cruz or any other town under his actual domination, stating that this would not be considered by him as an act of recognition. Even so, it was considered by the Diplomatic Corps that such transfer would be very greatly resented by other factions and place the Diplomatic Corps and foreign interests in very bad shape in the territory under their power. The Dean of the Diplomatic Corps will answer Carranza not accepting the invitation for the same reasons stated when the first invitation came in last November.⁸

We have been anxious and perplexed over the statements in your dispatches and have concluded that the best course at present is for you immediately to see General Obregon and present to him a most earnest and emphatic note in the following sense:

The Government of the United States has noted with increasing concern the reports of General Obregon's utterances to the residents of Mexico City. This Government believes they tend to incite the populace to commit outrages in which innocent foreigners within Mexican territory, particularly the City of Mexico, may be involved. The Government is particularly impressed with General Obregon's suggestions that he would refuse to protect not only Mexicans but foreigners in case of violence and that his present decree is a forerunner of others more disastrous in effect. In this condition of affairs the United States Government is informed that the City of Mexico may soon be evacuated by the Constitutionalist forces, leaving the population without protection against whatever faction may choose to occupy it, thus shirking responsibility for what may happen as a result of the instigation to lawlessness before and after the evacuation of the city.

The United States Government is led to believe that a deplorable situation has been wilfully brought about by Constitutionalist leaders to force upon the populace submission to their incredible demands and to punish the city on account of refusal to comply with them. When a factional leader preys on a starving city to compel obedience to his decrees by inciting outlawry and at the same time uses means to prevent the city from being supplied with food, a situation is created which it is impossible for the United States to contemplate longer with patience. Conditions have become intolerable and can no longer be endured. The Government of the United States therefore desires General Obregon and General Carranza to know that it has, after mature consideration, determined that if, as a result of the situation for which they are responsible, Americans suffer by reason of the conduct of the Constitutionalist forces in the City of Mexico or because they fail to provide means of protection to life and property, the Government of the United States will hold General Obregon and General Carranza personally responsible therefor. Having reached this determination with the greatest reluctance, the Government of the United States will take such measures as are expedient to bring to account those who are personally responsible for what may occur.

EXCELLENCY: For the information of the Department of State, I have the honor to enclose herewith translations of the manifesto of General Villa, dated January 31 last, giving reasons for his assumption of political power in the zone occupied by his forces; the ratification of his appointment as General-in-Chief of Operations by the Sovereign Convention; and his decree creating three temporary departments of government.

MEXICO, January 18, 1915.

The President of the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention, charged with the Executive Power of the United Mexican States, by virtue of an Act of the same, taking into consideration the usefulness and patriotic services rendered by you on behalf of the revolutionary cause at times of great moment, has seen fit to ratify your appointment as General-in-Chief of the Convention's forces in its military operations, and hopes that the country may always rely on your valuable and efficient aid in carrying to a happy conclusion the redeeming principles of the Revolution and such dispositions as the Sovereign Convention may see fit to decree.

This I have the honor to communicate to you for your information and consequent effects.

R. GONZÁLEZ GARZA.

[Inclosure 2—Translation—Extract.]

*Manifesto to the Mexican Nation by General Francisco Villa.*HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF OPERATIONS, Aguascalientes, January 31, 1915.

The lamentable obstinacy of Venustiano Carranza who, violating the Plan of Guadalupe, and attempting to usurp for an indefinite period the office of First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, clothed with an array of powers never before assumed by the most absolute dictator, gave cause to his repudiation by the Division of the North, and the determination of the latter that the governors of states and generals of the army who had fought for the restoration of constitutional order, suspended through the treason of Huerta, should constitute themselves a Sovereign Convention, to meet in this city, to which place its deliberations had been transferred from the capital of the Republic where it had begun its labors by virtue of the summons issued by Carranza, but without participation of either the generals of the Division of the North or that of the South.

Among the first acts of the Convention was to declare itself sovereign, as well as to give to the assembly at Aguascalientes the character of being a "continuation," as a political entity, of the Convention of Mexico City of October 1 last. * * *

The First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army charged with the Executive Power of the nation, acknowledged the authority of the Convention, to whom he submitted his resignation, and some of whose orders he obeyed. * * *

The Sovereign Convention decreed the dismissal of Carranza as First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army charged with the Executive Power, as well as of those generals commanding the army corps and divisions. In place of the latter, brigades were created as subdivisions of the army, and it was determined that they should be directly under the orders of the Minister of War. It also proceeded to elect a provisional president, to remain in power until the Convention, united with the Army of Liberation [Zapatistas] and meeting at the capital of the Republic, might designate the person to discharge the duties of Chief Magistrate during the preconstitutional period.

These acts of the Convention, including the elevation of General Eulalio Gutierrez to the office of Provisional President, were dictated almost unanimously; notwithstanding this, and in spite of their oaths of honor, some of the military chiefs, foreseeing the end of their personal ambitions because of the selection of General Gutierrez, abandoned the Convention and, in accord with Carranza, conspired to disavow its acts and made preparations for armed resistance. The obstinacy of Carranza and the disloyalty of these generals caused the Convention to declare the First Chief and those who followed his banner to be rebels, and inspired Gutierrez, pursuant to the authority vested in him as President of the Republic, to appoint me General-in-Chief of the Convention, for the purpose of commencing operations against them. In that character, and with public opinion throughout the country supporting the Sovereign Convention as the only legitimate authority, I led my troops in a veritably triumphant march from this city to the capital of the Republic, which we now hold in fraternal union with the Army of the South [Army of Liberation].

* * * Unfortunately, within the Provisional Government there arose political ambitions prompted by intriguing politicians, who, taking advantage of the weakness of character of the Provisional President, and of the youth and inexperience of the Minister of War, persuaded them to disavow the Convention, the supervision of which seemed alarming, or which they feared might not ratify the designation of General Gutierrez as President, thus depriving them of their influence in the political affairs of the nation.

The history of Mexico will bitterly censure the flight of Provisional President Gutierrez, who, in disavowing the Convention and abandoning the capital of the Republic, left it undefended and exposed to disorder and pillage, inspiring its inhabitants with panic. Furthermore, he left it without funds with which to pay the troops and public employees, taking funds from the national Treasury to the sum of 10,500,000 pesos. Fortunately, the troops of the Convention who, being deceived, had evacuated the city of Mexico, returned upon discovering the disloyalty of the ex-President and the ministers who had followed him.

Under these difficult circumstances, the presiding officer of the Convention, General Roque Gonzalez Garza, assumed political and military charge of the Federal District, and, efficiently aided by the loyal military chiefs, succeeded in restoring order and afforded guaranties to the inhabitants, of all of which he gave an account to the Convention, which thereupon determined to reassume the executive power of the nation, and to exercise it through its presiding officer, ratifying also my own appointment as Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Operations against those in rebellion.

The defection of the generals who refused to obey the orders of the Convention preferring the weak authority of Carranza, who permitted them to satisfy their unrestricted ambitions, and the disloyalty of Gutierrez and his following, compelled the Provisional Government created by the Convention to concentrate its forces in the North, in order to secure a base and safeguard the extensive lines of railway communications.

It has been deemed necessary to concentrate the forces of the South in the States of Morelos, Mexico, Puebla, and Guerrero; and General Gonzalez Garza, present Chief of the Provisional Government, has therefore resolved to evacuate the capital of the Republic and to transfer his headquarters to Cuernavaca, so that the Convention, free from all coercion, may carry on in that city the deliberation for which it was constituted, namely to organize the future constitutional government and to guarantee the fruits of the Revolution.

The mobilization of the Convention forces in the North and South has meanwhile temporarily interrupted the lines of communications, between the Provisional Government and the Army under my command, which renders it necessary for me to assume for the time being political authority in the States occupied by my forces, inasmuch as the existence of the National Administration should not be suspended and as the Convention forces are obligated to give protection to the lives and interests of nationals and foreigners.

For that purpose * * * I have determined * * * to create three sections attached to these headquarters, charged with political and administrative matters under my supervision, reserving to myself the direction of military operations.

These sections, or departments, will be located in Chihuahua, but always in communication with headquarters and, when possible, with the Government of the Convention. They will have under their charge: first, matters pertaining to Foreign Relations and Justice; second, Communications and Interior; and third, Finance and Industry. The acts of these departments shall be subject to the ratification of the Provisional Government.

* * * I declare my loyalty to the Government created by the Convention, and will endeavor, with the spirit that animates the Convention, to assist in the reconstruction of the nation in harmony with the national ideals.

FRANCISCO VILLA.

Decree of General Villa assuming political power and creating provisional departments of government.

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF OPERATIONS,
Agascalientes, February 2, 1915.

Francisco Villa, General-in-chief of the Army of the Convention operating in the North and Center of the Republic, by virtue of the extraordinary powers of a political character that he has been obliged to assume and does hereby assume by reason of the temporary interruption of communications between the Government created by the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention and the zone in which the army under his command is located, and considering that public administration cannot be suspended, has, as Chief of Operations, in accordance with the usages of war recognized by all nations, seen fit to decree the following:

First: That three departments are hereby constituted in the zone occupied by the forces of the Convention under my command, for the carrying on of official business relating to political and administrative matters: one of these departments to have charge of affairs pertaining to Foreign Relations and Justice; another, of affairs concerning Interior Administration and Communications; and the other, of affairs relating to Finance and Industry.

Second: Said Departments will have their offices, for the present, in the City of Chihuahua, from where they will communicate with Headquarters and, as soon as possible, with the Provisional Government.

Third: These Departments, in accord with Headquarters, shall organize the services assigned to them, and shall appoint the personnel of the offices and carry on pertinent business, it being understood, however, that the distribution of their duties is simply of an economic nature, or convenience, because in matters of prime importance they shall all proceed jointly as a unity.

Fourth: As soon as communication between the Convention Government and the Army under my command is again established, these headquarters will submit to the former, for its ratification, the acts of the above-mentioned Departments.

Fifth: The following appointments are announced: Miguel Diaz Lombardo, in charge of the Department of Foreign Relations and Justice; Luis de la Garza Cárdenas, in charge of the Department of Interior and Communications; and Francisco Escudero, in charge of the Department of Finance and Industry.

Sixth: Civil and military authorities within the zone under my command will obey all orders issued by said Departments within the scope of their jurisdiction, in accordance with the Federal law providing for the organization of the departments of government.

MEXICO CITY, March 9, 1915—11 p. m.

404. I have been requested by a committee of American citizens to transmit to you the following:

The American residents of Mexico City and vicinity in general meeting at the American Club in this city have considered carefully your cablegram to the Brazilian Minister¹² which reads, "attention is again called to the advice of the President that Americans leave Mexico until conditions become settled."

In reply we feel it our duty to explain why Americans generally cannot leave.

When the first advice came from Washington four years ago¹³ many throughout the Republic left, some at complete sacrifice of work of years. The first revolution was victorious and many Americans returned. Another revolution occurred; the advice to leave was repeated and a second exodus took place with its inevitable hardships, losses and sacrifices.

Optimistic reports published in the United States afterwards brought many back to their abandoned homes and neglected business where these had not been destroyed. Third warning to leave which was still obeyed by increased numbers and greater sacrifice immediately after the American military occupation of Vera Cruz.

After the Huerta régime and on encouraging advices as to peace prospects in Mexico many individuals and families again came back to resume the work that had been perforce abandoned and the evacuation of Vera Cruz brought still more.

A fourth exodus of our people is now impossible considering the large number here and demoralized conditions of public order and transportation. Financial difficulties are also too great for the average family to leave again on a voyage of thousands of miles. The Mexican pesos have dropped from fifty cents American currency to thirteen cents during eight changes of the Supreme Power at the National Capital since the overthrow of Porfirio Diaz in 1911.

Thousands of Americans and other foreigners scattered throughout the country find it quite impossible to leave their all or abandon positions of trust in charge of properties or business of owners in the United States and elsewhere.

The Mexican political situation is more chaotic and helpless than ever. The foreigners of other nationalities, our neighbors and friends are now asking what course is open for them if conditions are such as to render it necessary for Americans to leave and they look to Americans for counsel.

All foreigners—Americans, Europeans and others—came here under treaty and international rights by which our persons and property were assured of the protection common to civilized countries. By subscribing to certain treaties and international rights the Government of the United States assumed an obligation toward Americans as its nationals to the end that our persons and property be respected according to the letter of the obligation and international compacts by which the Mexican Government expressly agreed to give guaranties to foreigners residing in Mexican territory. We are engaged in lawful and useful occupations. We respectfully ask from our Government effective guaranties of those rights and no more. We quote from the platform adopted by the National Democratic Convention, Baltimore, in 1912: "Every American citizen residing or having property in any foreign country is entitled to and must be given the full protection of the Government of the United States both for himself and family."

If the foreigners should leave en masse it would be to repeat the late and sad experience of the Belgians. With many it means leave behind the savings and other interests of a lifetime and to arrive in United States or Europe virtually as charges upon public or friends. If all foreigners—business men, bankers, professionals—should leave at once it would cause paralyzing of what remains of the country's commerce and industry. Innumerable business houses, banks, and factories would close entirely; mines still working would suspend; oil production would cease; many of the most important public service utilities could not operate and the general suffering already severe would vastly increase. It would throw many worthy Mexican employees out of work and force them to choose between starvation or joining some one of the warring factions or plundering bands. The great majority of the fifteen millions of Mexican people unarmed and generally passive are victims of violent deeds committed under the guise of revolution and are praying for an end to the reign of disorder, bloodshed, rapine and destruction into which the Madero revolution has degenerated.

Owing to rigid censorship of mails and [telegram] we cannot communicate these facts to our relatives and friends in the United States, and we therefore request that you give this statement to the press.

Special Agent Silliman to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

VERA CRUZ, March 10, 1915.

The following communication in Spanish and English addressed to the President of the United States was received last night through the Secretary of Foreign Relations.

SILLIMAN.

General Carranza to the President.

I am in receipt of a communication of the 8th instant from the Honorable John R. Silliman, in which he transmitted to me the following from the text of his instructions from the Department of State:

"We have been anxious and perplexed over the statements in despatches from Mexico City regarding situation there and have concluded that the best course at present is for you immediately to see General Carranza and present a most earnest and emphatic note in the following sense.

"The Government of the United States has noted with increasing concern [and so on to the end of the text as printed in the Department's instruction No. 508 of March 6, 9 p. m., to the Brazilian Minister].

Although the terms in which this note is worded would afford me cause for not answering it, it is my wish, notwithstanding, that my silence be not construed as a justification of the charge contained in the same. I have tried to put aside for the moment the references which are made to my personal responsibility and, looking only to the good of my country and the benefit of the cause which the Mexican people have entrusted to me, I thought it my duty to answer it at once. On the other hand, in view of the unusual importance of the subject of the aforementioned note, I have thought myself authorized not to follow this time the customary channels but to address you personally concerning a matter which may involve the success of the Mexican revolution.

In the note that I am answering it is taken for granted that the imputations made against General Obregon by an international committee of foreign residents in the City of Mexico, the substance of which had been also communicated to me by Mr. Silliman in his note of the 1st instant, are true; and this assumption has been indulged in when the answer to those imputations was being prepared.

Reserving the privilege of answering more fully and in detail through the customary diplomatic channels the note last referred to, I take this opportunity to state, in an earnest and emphatic way, that General Obregon has never intended to incite the hungry populace of the City of Mexico to commit outrages of any character. He has not prevented in any way the entrance of food supplies into Mexico City, but on the contrary he has facilitated such importation. He has not created wilfully the distressing conditions which prevail at present in the City of Mexico, but he has done everything in his power to alleviate them. Such a situation is the consequence, painful but unavoidable, of the state of war in which we are and which for the first time has really reached the City of Mexico; but it has been aggravated by the conduct of the merchants, who openly, defiantly and with concert of action closed their commercial establishments in the moment of greatest public distress, as a protest against the humanitarian relief tax that General Obregon imposed.

In the face of the charges expressed by the international committee in their complaint to the State Department, I point out to you the fact that General Obregon has been in possession of the City of Mexico from the 26th of January until today, without mobs, assassinations, looting or any other of the outrages which are apt to occur and which frequently do in time of war. During all this time large amounts of food supplies have been taken into Mexico City, and large quantities of supplies have been distributed among the distressed people, and besides, other important measures have been taken looking to further relief which I will in detail mention at the proper time.

While it is proper to state to Your Excellency that the right to occupy or evacuate Mexico City or any other place in the Republic must at all times be reserved and be exercised when deemed by the responsible military authorities to be in furtherance of the cause of the revolution, the obligation on the Constitutionalist Army to safeguard the lives of foreigners is nevertheless fully understood and realized. You will therefore permit me to assure you that at the time of the evacuation of Mexico City, every facility within my power will be afforded to all foreign residents in that city to depart the country or to go to other and safer places in the Republic.

I have always tried to give, and have given, the largest protection that has been possible to the lives and interests of Americans and other foreigners, even during the most difficult periods of our struggle. I have the purpose of continuing the same line of conduct and have decided to take all measures possible to avoid all damages to foreign residents. With this purpose solely in view, I addressed a note to the Diplomatic Corps in the City of Mexico, which I have repeated twice to them, inviting them in case of evacuation to come either to this port or to any of the cities, for instance Puebla, Jalapa or Orizaba, which are under the control of the Constitutionalist forces, where they can be assured perfect protection.

It was only three days ago that the State Department at Washington directed the attention of American residents in the City of Mexico to your former advice that they should retire from the country until conditions should be settled.¹⁴ It is my most earnest wish that the other foreign residents will follow a line of conduct similar to the one suggested by you to the American residents, for the adoption of such a course would be the wisest measure that can be taken to avoid the consequences so much feared.

I wish I could adequately convey to Your Excellency the political and economic condition in the City of Mexico and their causes as they are understood and known here to be, concerning which representations by an international committee have been made to the State Department. Perhaps the last effort is now being made by the reactionaries to bring about complications which may cause the failure of the ideals of the Mexican revolution. After having encountered and disposed of other and much more difficult and embarrassing situations in the past, when there were large numbers of foreign residents scattered all over the territory of Mexico, it will prove to be most unfortunate if now, when the City of Mexico is alone involved, a situation shall arise that will destroy the hopes and purposes of the Mexican people.

Because of this consideration permit me to repeat the hope elsewhere expressed that the foreign residents may be induced to save your Government and the Republic of Mexico from embarrassments by temporarily leaving the City of Mexico.

Allow me to avail myself [etc.]

Please deliver the following message from the President to General Carranza.

BRYAN.

The President to General Carranza.

I thank you for your message of the 9th of March, for the assurance it conveys and for your kind personal words. I beg that you will understand that if our messages are occasionally couched in terms of strong emphasis, it is only because they concern some matter which touches the very safety of Mexico itself and the whole possible course of her future history.

We seek always to act as the friends of the Mexican people, and as their friends it is our duty to speak very plainly about the grave dangers which threaten her from without whenever anything happens within her borders which is calculated to arouse the hostile sentiment of the whole world.

Nothing will stir that sentiment more promptly or more hotly or create greater dangers for Mexico than any, even temporary disregard for the lives, the safety or the rights of the citizens of other countries, resident within her territory, or any apparent contempt for the rights and safety of those who represent religion; and no attempt to justify or explain these things will in the least alter the sentiment or lessen the dangers that will arise from them.

To warn you concerning such matters is an act of friendship, not of hostility, and we cannot make the warning too earnest. To speak less plainly or with less earnestness would be to conceal from you a terrible risk which no lover of Mexico should wish to run.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, March 11, 1915—4 p. m.

411. Beg to inform that Zapatist forces occupied city this morning in perfect order and amidst popular enthusiasm represented by all classes. I immediately went to see the Post Commander to try to arrange immediately for transportation facilities to bring in the much needed supplies to relieve the people and at this meeting they promised that everything in their power will be immediately done to that end. The Zapatist chiefs expressed their appreciation and gratitude to the Diplomatic Corps for trying to help the city. They promised that they would do everything to maintain order and give protection to foreigners and nationals. The Relief Committee will meet this afternoon and Zapatistas will send a representative to ultimate details to obtain transportation.

Unhappily in contrast with the above, I am requested to mention the following facts. French Minister informs me that Zapatistas this morning assaulted the house of a Frenchman in Coyoacan, tying him to chair where he was severely beaten; after they had violated his wife the house was entirely looted. German Minister reports that three days ago Zapatists [omission] into the house of a German subject in Coyoacan where everything was also looted. British Chargé d'Affaires informs me that last night Zapatists forcibly entered the house of a British subject and looting and other disorders took place. At the present moment the city continues quiet and more Zapatist forces are getting in.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, March 20, 1915—7 p. m.

445. I am requested to transmit to you the following resolution from mass-meeting of over 500 Americans:

The Americans resident in Mexico City in mass-meeting express their appreciation of the Secretary of State's message of March 12 as communicated to them by the Brazilian Minister.²⁰ However, they most respectfully submit that it is their fixed opinion derived from the past four years' experience that the time has come to accept the Mexican situation for what it is and not for what it might be hoped that it may become or what interested leaders or warring factions may try to represent it to be. The record is clearly written in facts which show the true value of the pretensions of contending groups.

They note the opinion of the President that he does not think it would contribute to their welfare to grant their request to make public their communication of March 9. They ask that it be made known to the President that it is their firm conviction that their duty requires them to take the people of the United States and of the civilized world into their fullest confidence and in the interests of humanity to lay before them the whole truth of the Mexican situation and in the performance of this duty they earnestly invite and ardently hope for the aid and cooperation of the administration. They desire in so far as they can to controvert the systematic representation of the Mexican situation to put an end to evasion and repression of the truth in regard thereto and especially as to their own situation and attitude. They are not surprised that General Carranza should renew his promise "to exert himself to the utmost to protect lives and property of foreigners" but they submit that the true value of this promise should be estimated by what General Carranza has done and decreed since his triumphal entry into the city of Mexico on August 15, last. The arbitrary taking from Mexicans and foreigners of property including houses, horses, automobiles, carriages, furniture, money and crops; the issuing of decrees so in contravention of right, fairness and justice as to be almost incredible; the deliberate, persistent and ill-concealed attempt to starve a city of half million inhabitants, depriving them of water, fuel and transportation; the shipping defenseless women in locked cattle-cars to Vera Cruz; the carrying away of the controllers of electric cars, thus paralyzing transit; the closing of the courts and schools; the holding of priests for ransom; the arrest and detention of 300 business men who had assembled at the request of the General in charge of Mexico; the persecution of Spaniards; the suppression of the mails and violation of sealed correspondence, both foreign and domestic; the removal of public archives and stripping of public buildings; the open invitation to riot and loot; the sacking of churches and desecration of images; the killing of men and the outrage of women, both foreign and Mexican—are events too recent and well-known to permit of their being overlooked in judgment. The wantonness of some acts renders it impossible to accept the professions of these factions or their counsels as to the course to be pursued by foreigners.

It is the earnest desire of the Americans in Mexico to assist the Washington Government to find a solution for the perplexing international situation that exists and to this end they request that their efforts be regarded as made in good faith and that their knowledge and experience of the Mexican situation be accorded full weight. They are willing to make sacrifices if through them any ultimate good may accrue to the Mexican people or American prestige but they feel that thus far the very opposite has been the result. They consider that American civilization is [omission] trial and has a duty to humanity which no longer should be postponed.

Mexico is drifting toward total destruction from which a mistaken altruism is powerless to save it. The present struggle does not represent the efforts of a people to secure liberty and civil rights so much as a clash of personal ambition and revenge.

Americans in Mexico look to the Administration for the protection which they believe it is their due to receive and the Administration's desire and unquestionable duty to afford; and they further respectfully express the hope that their views may be given such publicity as may effectively assist the American people in forming a sound opinion on the Mexican situation.

The American committee requests to transmit also following for your information:

An American newspaperman, correspondent of the Los Angeles Times, is now en route to the frontier for the purpose of making public an alleged reply to the President. The document he carries is spurious and it is suggested for this reason that it would be wise to publish the above.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, March 22, 1915—5 p. m.

451. International Committee requests me to transmit the following:

Four years of almost continuous fighting throughout the various parts of the Republic has produced a condition of affairs in the food supply situation so serious as to threaten a famine of such proportions as to necessitate world-wide aid. The fact that farm hands have everywhere been drawn into so-called armies; that farm animals have been utilized for like purposes; that leaders of roving bands of marauders under banners containing fantastic legends about "liberty and the rights of man" which they use as a blind to facilitate robbery, pillage, murder, has so reduced the crop acreage that by November, 1915, there will be an estimated shortage of thirty-nine million bushels of corn alone, not to mention the other absolutely necessary cereals, are now well known to those investigators who have made a careful study of this phase of Mexico's ills.

That the effects of this wanton destruction are only just beginning to be felt is due to the great general richness of Mexico's agricultural regions where it is said that the farmer has but to scratch the soil and drop his seed while God and sunshine do the rest. But selfseeking and self-appointed military leaders have for so long a time prevented the farmer from even scratching the soil over so great an acreage that Mexico is about to reap the whirlwind she has sown.

Corn is the staff of life of Mexico as is wheat or its products in other countries. The harvest of this cereal for the present year should be ready about the first of November, that is eight months from the date of the printing of this report. Upon investigation we find that but five States of Mexico's twenty-seven have a sufficient supply to carry them over this. Oaxaca, Morelos, Tabasco and Chiapas probably have enough corn to last them eight months if the strictest economy is employed in using that stored. This will take care of a population of 1,700,000. Yucatan with a population of 350,000 produces no corn but has the money to buy it in the United States. This leaves the rest of Mexico, with a population of approximately 13,500,000 with a visible supply of approximately 675,000 tons, enough to last but three months, about next July. Then the real pinch of hunger will be felt throughout the length and breadth of Mexico.

What will then be necessary to relieve the consequent distress and prevent, perhaps, the death of thousands from starvation? In normal times it requires 1,800,000 tons of corn to feed these 13,500,000 over eight months. With the visible supply but 675,000 tons, this leaves a shortage of 1,125,000 tons or 39,375,000 bushels. This corn must be purchased from the United States. The present market price laid down at points along the northern frontier is 90 cents a bushel. If we allow 15 cents gold a bushel for distribution costs throughout the various ports of the Republic, we have a charge of $1.05 gold per bushel, which will necessitate an expenditure of approximately one million dollars gold to prevent a devastating famine. By that time the purchasing power of the Mexican peso will have dropped to 10 cents gold. So, due to the unconscionable, ignorant and selfish attitude of the military elements of all factions, Mexico will find herself called upon to expend some 413,000,000 pesos to prevent the larger part of her population from starving to death. Where is this money to come from? With a bottom-scraped treasury and a white-bled country, Mexico must throw herself upon the charity of the world at a time when the world's supply will be short.

Not only has the taking away of the man and the farm animal from the land produced these dire conditions but many instances have been reported where the different military commanders have actually permitted their horses and mules to feed on the young and growing corn in some sections where it may have been planted, while droughts in the north and east have completed the work of ruin inaugurated by these men. Stored grain has also been burned in considerable quantities by these vandals and the records show that in the face of all this some selfish military leaders have actually exploited exported grain to enrich themselves. Due to the paralysis of means of communication throughout a larger part of the Republic such stores of corn and grain as were raised and saved could not be transported from the regions of production to those of consumption, causing a waste of the too small stock on hand.

That these conditions are the direct result of the wanton and selfish attitude of the military leaders of different factions who claim to be fighting for the liberty of the people has been made most plain of late by the conduct of General Alvaro Obregon acting under the direct orders of General Carranza. General Obregon entered the City of Mexico on January 29 last. On the following day the water supply of the city was cut. The price of foodstuffs, already very high due to the depreciation in the purchasing power of Mexican currency, rose to exorbitant figures because General Obregon acting under the direct orders of Carranza endeavored in every way to prevent the introduction of food into Mexico City. Not only did he refuse the City Council railway cars for transporting such stocks as were available in regions contiguous to the capital and controlled by his troops, but he ordered his outposts to confiscate such as were brought in from neighboring regions on the backs of animals. There is an abundance of evidence pointing to the fact that this inhuman conduct was part of a deliberate campaign to starve the populace into enlisting in his army.

When the inevitable consequences of the plan began to evince themselves and the people cried for food General Obregon addressed them through the press and by means of printed matter informing them that the shortage was due to speculators and to the selfishness of the rich classes. He immediately decreed a special tax levy of twenty millions to relieve what he had the effrontery to characterize the desperate situation of the city's poor. When the merchants refused to pay this tax he invited the rabble to take what they could get by looting, informing them over his signature that if this general looting began he would march out of the city with his troops, not firing a single shot to prevent the mob from taking what they wished. But the people were not deceived. They refused to be his tools and the merchants of the foreign colonies raised a relief fund of more than a half million in a few days' time by voluntary subscription and the acute stage of the crisis passed.

Prices of food in Mexico City are two and three hundred per cent higher than in normal times and still rising due to the very machinations of military leaders of the type of Obregon, which, unfortunately, includes practically all. What is true of the food situation applies also to the fuel situation. The spirit which will starve a people for personal gain or selfish military ambition does not make for liberty or democracy. Mexico must reap as she has sown, and unless the anarchy, chaos and desolation which prevail in all parts of the Republic under the guise of liberating armies is remedied the world will witness a spectacle which will be as a page torn from the history of the middle ages.

WASHINGTON, March 24, 1915.

SIR: Acting under instructions of President Gutierrez of Mexico, I have the honor to submit the following:

After the overthrow of Huerta, the Revolution in Mexico ended by forming a Convention in which all the chiefs and generals of the victorious army met together and elected a President. A new Government was thus formed with General Gutierrez as the head of it, and the Government of the United States was properly notified through its special agent, Mr. Leon J. Canova.

[Review of political and military events.]

The Convention of Aguascalientes that had elected Gutierrez President, came in a body to Mexico City with Gutierrez. At the last meeting celebrated in Aguascalientes it was decided that the Convention would reassemble in Mexico City on the first January, 1915, and that a previous call for the first meeting would be published, signed by a permanent committee, which committee was duly appointed. * * * At that time, President Gutierrez had no troops in Mexico City, and he was depending, for the execution of his orders, only on the troops of Villa and Zapata, with the result that President Gutierrez was never consulted and always disobeyed whenever Villa or Zapata decided to execute some one of their enemies, or to exact money from any of the residents of the country. In view of this situation, the permanent Committee of the Convention left Mexico City for San Luis Potosi, the headquarters of President Gutierrez' own troops. When the delegates to the Convention arrived at San Luis Potosi, they found that Villa was preparing to send troops after them. They then left for Vanegas, in the State of San Luis Potosi, and from there they issued a statement which was wired to all the delegates of the Convention, to all the authorities in the country, and I believe to the United States' press, declaring that the Convention of Aguascalientes could not reassemble in Mexico City the first day of January of the present year, as had been agreed upon, because the troops of General Villa and Zapata did not afford protection, as already two of the members of the Convention had been shot by the aforesaid Generals and many delegates had to flee to avoid the same fate. President Gutierrez therefore decided at the end of December to depose Villa and Zapata, and he began to send special agents to all the governors and military chiefs of the country, notifying them of his intentions.

In the meanwhile, Villa and Zapata called together a group of their personal friends and endeavored to organize with them a Convention, to substitute the Convention of Aguascalientes and if possible to take its name and legal capacity. On the first of January, 1915, this group of Villa's and Zapata's friends, headed by Villa himself, by Rodolfo Ferros, the murderer of Benton, and many others, met in the building of the Mexican Congress, and declared itself a Revolutionary Convention. This new convention did not contain more than twenty-five delegates from the original Aguascalientes Convention.

This group of men offered President Gutierrez the ratification of his appointment as Provisional President of the country. This offer President Gutierrez refused to discuss, as he did not want to acknowledge any rights in these men, who were trying to usurp the Convention of Aguascalientes. At the same time he did not want to protest openly against their acts until he was ready to carry out his plan of deposing Villa and Zapata, and to announce to the public the manner in which both of said generals had succeeded in preventing the Convention of Aguascalientes from continuing its work. On the 17th of January, 1915, President Gutierrez called a meeting of his Cabinet; Ministers Blanco, Robles, Felicitos, Villareal, Gama, and Vasconcelos were present. Gutierrez reported that it had become indispensable for the Government to dismiss Villa and Zapata from its service; that he counted on the support of Villa's own generals; and that he was sure that the Carranza generals would comply with their promise to recognize the Gutierrez government as soon as Villa and Zapata were deposed.

Mexico City, where this Cabinet meeting took place, was occupied at the time by 6,000 or 7,000 of the Zapata troops and about 7,000 of the Villa troops. General Robles, Minister of War, informed the Cabinet that he could count on the loyalty of some 3,000 troops, but as this was not enough to protect the Government, he advised that the seat of government be changed to the city of Pachuca, some 60 miles distant from Mexico City. General Robles further informed the Cabinet that he had received information that Villa had ordered the arrest and execution of President Gutierrez and his Cabinet the moment they tried to leave Mexico City.

At this meeting President Gutierrez, supported by all of the Ministers present, ordered the deposition from command of Villa and Zapata, and addressed a communication to the so-called Revolutionary Convention, stating that he refused to acknowledge it or its authority, as it did not represent even 20% of the Convention of Aguascalientes and had assembled without any proper call from the permanent Committee of the Aguascalientes Convention, and also because the delegates to the Convention of Aguascalientes had been unable to reassemble in Mexico City on account of the murders and atrocities of Villa and Zapata.

When the meeting ended it was 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning, and the President, with the other members of his Cabinet and some 3,000 troops, left for Pachuca. On his arrival at Pachuca, the President and his Cabinet were received by the Governor of the state, who placed all his troops under the command of General Robles, Gutierrez' Minister of War. General Victor Elizondo, Governor of Aguascalientes, immediately thereafter manifested his decision to support President Gutierrez and to receive orders only from him. General Villa promptly had him arrested and shot, and the government of the state was placed in the hands of one of Villa's officers. General Elizondo was the first victim of Villa in his rebellion against the Mexican Government.

In order to join the main body of his troops, which was located at San Luis Potosi, President Gutierrez left Pachuca on horseback, accompanied by his Cabinet and loyal troops.

When he arrived in the vicinity of San Luis Potosi, about 20 days later, he found that the city had been captured by Villa's troops. From that time up to the present, President Gutierrez has been organizing his troops and has established his Government in the City of Doctor Arroyo, State of Nuevo Leon. From this place he is directing affairs, and has under his command a considerable army, composed of the original troops of Generals Blanco, Robles, Benavides and others. He is also in close touch with General Carrera Torres, who has over 10,000 men in the southern part of Tamaulipas, and with General Cedillo, who has about 8,000 men in the eastern part of San Luis Potosi. Both of these last-named generals are also faithful to the Government of the Convention of Aguascalientes.

In presenting all of these facts to the State Department of the United States, which I have the honor to do, I am acting under the special instructions of President Gutierrez, he having clothed me with proper credentials, of which I enclose translated copies. I also avail myself of the opportunity to enclose a translated copy of the Manifesto²² issued by President Gutierrez, explaining the situation of the Mexican Government and its attitude toward Carranza, Villa and Zapata.

President Gutierrez, whose Government represents the will of the party of the Revolution of Mexico, is perfectly informed of the attitude of the United States Government towards his country. The fact that the United States' policy has been one of non-interference in Mexican affairs has reaffirmed the bonds of friendship which for many years have united the two neighboring nations.

President Gutierrez will at the first opportunity reassemble the Convention of Aguascalientes, and before that legal body he will offer to resign his power, in order to leave the Convention free to elect as President any man who may answer to the necessities and the rights of all of the Mexican people.

It is my duty to call your attention to the fact that President Gutierrez has a just claim to universal respect, inasmuch that during his administration in Mexico City and thereafter not a single complaint has been filed against him or his lieutenants, either from natives or foreigners. He has shown respect for the law and human life, and has tried to bring about peace by peaceful means, and not through war.

All of which is respectfully submitted to the American Government on behalf of the Government of Mexico by [etc.]

580. Information received from various parts of Mexico and especially from Mexico City indicates a scarcity of food and a great danger of famine, due in part to shortage of supply, in part to interruption of communication and in part to the withdrawal of large numbers from productive activity. You will please lay the matter before Garza and say that this Government feels it its duty to urge upon him the importance of making inquiry as to the present and prospective food supply. The present situation, deplorable as it is, will be greatly aggravated if the distress of famine is added to the horrors of war. General Garza will understand what the judgment of the civilized world must be if wholesale famine falls upon the land as a result of the inability of the factions to get together and form a government under which the ordinary occupations of life can be resumed.

which gives as its reason for the request the absolute lack of postal communication with Washington and the impossibility of telegraphing freely because of the strict censorship over telegrams by the Carrancista authorities at Vera Cruz, to transmit to you the following:

Joint Committee American Colony Society and mass meeting Americans preparing for submission Washington detailed report pertinent facts regarding conditions Mexico during past twelve months. This report they state once for all is based solely on their earnest desire aid their Government in getting true light situation here. Chapter on lack necessities and imminent danger famine forward verbatim separate telegram. Following is digest other conference.

Taxation. Preexisting laws repeatedly stretched and misapplied without legislative, judicial, administrative or other sanction except military greed, whim or vengeance under transparent guise of public good or necessity. Also extraordinary and highly obnoxious duties imposed with summary payment and excessive penalties. Results this taxation do not further justify revolution, still less support stable government and provide means governmental protection, but rather stimulate personal rivalry and hunger for continued disorder. Taxpayers' money goes buy arms pay men and enrich officers, their followers, thus serving prolong present chaotic conditions.

Currency and stamps. Huerta commenced tampering with banking law and currency system authorizing reduction already small specie reserve required national banks and increase former large bank-note issue. Constitutionalists first, then various subdivisions revolutionists, and finally individual generals printed by force of arms put into circulation unsecured paper money almost unlimited amount. Various factions soon began declare null all issues except their own. This still continues. Naturally gold, silver and fractional coin even inflated, buying disappeared. All now fiat paper and what good and enforced today tomorrow void and forbidden. Poor and employee class suffer most. Foreign exchange rate fell during year forty to eleven, cost living increased nearly proportionally. Unlicensed manufacture bills proceeds, unrestricted amount now circulating incalculable; stamps, both revenue and postage, issued as freely as so-called government bills and as unconscionably repudiated.

Courts. August last year all courts Federal and [omission] forcibly dissolved and all pending matters suspended indefinitely. Provisional courts, with local jurisdiction for new business only and no appeal, established September dissolved January. No constitution remedies enforceable for seven months and no justice whatever dispensed during greater part of that.

Mail and telegraph. Periods of weeks even months have elapsed without mail service domestic or foreign although conditions communications made delivery possible. International Committee representing seventeen foreign colonies recently petitioned Carranza through Diplomatic Corps to have foreigners mail forwarded from Vera Cruz. Only answer was order close post office here. Correspondence violated and private telegrams unreasonably censored and maliciously altered at Vera Cruz. Press dispatches suppressed and falsified thus concealing facts and forcibly misguiding opinion abroad.

International protest. Due to the illegal and extortionate taxation imposed, leading foreign colonies organized committee to defend their interests against abuse and outrages. On recommendation this committee practically all foreign business houses including all banks closed for a period of eighteen days resulting virtual paralysis all commerce. Committee activities generally approved and it continues to act response public demand.

Miscellaneous. Aside from chapters specified, report will include general observations and describe details taking possession by authorities foreign owned or controlled railways, tramways, express, telephone; also outrages committed on foreigners and their property, on church and clergy; also removal government archives and despoiling government treasury including securities deposited in trust by foreigners; also deceit and political machiavellism practiced on working classes and deliberate attempts to incite riots and pillage.

The resolutions adopted at a mass-meeting of Americans and transmitted by the Brazilian Minister in his despatch of March 20 have been laid before the President.

This Government is doing everything in its power for the protection of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico City and will continue to do so. It will deal with each new situation as it arises and lend its most earnest efforts to the relief of hunger and suffering from whatever cause.

It is not willing, however, to increase the embarrassments of the situation or to bring new dangers upon those present at the meeting by giving publication to the language employed in the resolution concerning the leaders of the various factions.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, March 26, 1915—midnight.

459. Your 580, March 25, 7 p.m. Everything about coming famine as per my 451, March 22, 5 p. m.; absolutely true. For this reason and others—including my [omission] of finding a way to mitigate the situation for foreigners and noncombatants in regard to food guaranties, for life and property, means of transportation and postal and telegraphic communication with the outside world, so as to give them the benefits of civilization of which they have been so unjustly deprived for so long—I had conference yesterday with the President and mentioned to him the idea of neutralizing the Vera Cruz highways and the cable service and reminded him [of] that of Federal District, the last being an idea suggested by him some time ago. President warmly adopted these ideas promising to do everything in his power to push them up and have them realized as far as it depended on him. He today made following declarations to the press in which, after stating that this project was inspired by the noble principles of humanity and patriotism and had been under his consideration for some time, he said:

The study and consideration of the project I have taken up in the fervent desire that this capital no longer suffer the horrors of war. In case my efforts are fruitful neither this capital nor the Federal District will witness any hostilities between combatants. The struggle will continue in other sections of the country until a definite triumph has been attained. If the neutralization of the capital and vicinity is secured all factions will solemnly undertake that no troops of the respective sides will occupy this section. My Government, in case of the neutralization of the nation's capital and the Federal District, will be removed to a site chosen by the Convention. The city of Mexico in such a case will be placed in the power of a governor who will be strictly neutral and who probably will be designated in accord with both parties. The Municipal Council, if my plans do not go astray, will obtain ample facilities to manage the civil affairs of the capital. Should this important measure be brought to a successful conclusion the capital would in no sense be isolated from the rest of the Republic. Trains in every direction would be run regularly. This is a delicate matter. Perhaps my opponents may not be induced to collaborate with me to consummate the noble end in view. For my part I am disposed to sacrifice everything for the welfare of the fatherland. My earnest wish is that this struggle be terminated and that the Mexican people be enabled once more to take up a united labor for the aggrandizement and common good of the country.

I consider the scheme well under way towards realization and perfectly feasible if Department would only efficaciously urge upon Carranza to accept it along the lines suggested, excepting that the government of the Federal District be left in the hands of the City Council in accordance with the principle of autonomy of municipal bodies proclaimed by the Revolution, and never left to a governor appointed in accordance with both parties as mentioned by Garza, because this might cause such a hitch as to kill the entire project on account of disagreements between factions as to the person of the appointee. To avoid this I beg to suggest that the Department try to prevail upon Carranza to let [sic] the City Council in charge of the Government while I will use my good offices near Garza to the same end. This plan will greatly contribute to the peace of mind and well-being of the principal center of the Republic and therefore would be the first decisive step to facilitate the general pacification of the country by affording a place of refuge to all foreigners and non-combatants.

News published here, whether true or false, that the American Government is strongly urging Carranza to accept the neutralization of the Vera Cruz Railway, created an excellent impression on the public, the Diplomatic Corps and foreign colonies, all desiring very earnestly that the neutralization of said line and the Federal District be realized, so Diplomatic Corps could remain with guaranties of respect and comfort and, lines of communication being kept open, would of course address themselves [to] and treat with the different factional leaders in their respective capitals.

I anxiously desire to know if you approve of my views and steps and if you are disposed to cooperate in the execution of the plan as suggested.

464. Your 584, March 26, 4 p. m. The denial by Carranza of such true charges constitutes an insult to the Government of the United States, some colleagues and myself. I do not know how you regard it, but as far as I am concerned I would like to be urgently telegraphed the full text of Carranza's reply or at least the part which contains the criticism against myself. While waiting, what I can assert most emphatically is that the attitude of the Diplomatic Corps here and mine has been during such trying state of things as moderate, true, cautious and loyal to their Governments as that of any similar body in any country under similar conditions if ever any country found itself in such situation, probably unique in the history of the world in modern times.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, March 27, 1915—6 p. m.

465. The Convention, now composed in its majority of Zapatistas under the influence of extremely radical leaders, some time ago passed a resolution forbidding present President from being elected Provisional President at the elections which are to be held by them April 20. Without Villa's full representation to counteract such majority, said resolution would mean Garza's deposition and the election of some unknown Zapatista leader. And I have reason to believe that when this happens, or even before, the northern delegates now here will move to some place in the north taking with them President Garza. This would again leave Mexico City entirely to the Zapatista faction which is quite powerless to prevent a return of Carrancistas, now reported in the vicinity of city.

It is therefore greatly desirable that the plan contained in my 459, March 26, 12 [midnight], be accepted at once by Carranza inasmuch as Garza told me today it would meet no objection from Villa and Zapata parties.

471. My 465, March 27, 6 p. m. The crisis came to a climax sooner than I expected, the Convention having decided to move to Chihuahua with President Garza. The latter told me he will start in a few days leaving all departments including Foreign Office working in connection with him. He added that in so doing he thought to facilitate to a great extent the realization of his project of neutralization of the Federal District as his absence from here would overcome the pretext for a new occupation of the capital by Carrancistas. Once more he showed himself full of good faith towards United States and Diplomatic Corps. I am informed from other sources that some members of the Convention, dissatisfied with above-mentioned decision, had obtained an order from General Zapata for his forces, which are the only ones here, to prevent Garza's and Convention's departure.

In view of the embarrassments which Mexico City seems to present to those who attempt to hold it without being in control of the entire country, and also because of the great danger of international complications arising from the number of foreigners in the city, it has been suggested that the city itself be declared a neutral zone, its neutrality to be respected by all factions and the control of the city to devolve either upon a governor to be agreed upon or, preferably, upon the City Council, which is a local body. This recommendation is earnestly commended to the consideration of Carranza. Will you please present the matter at the earliest opportunity and let us know the impression that it makes.

It would be very desirable also to neutralize the railroad from Vera Cruz, to Mexico City, but this, while important, is not so imperatively necessary as neutralization of Mexico City.

VERA CRUZ, March 30, 1915—7 p. m.

Department's March 29, 7 p. m. It is respectfully deemed inadvisable to present recommendation to neutralize Mexico City, for the following reasons.

First. The Zapatistas being in possession, the Constitutionalists, while not at present affected or concerned, would almost surely refuse to anticipate their future action.

Second. In view of all the circumstances it cannot but be considered a matter of the utmost importance to secure uninterrupted mail and railroad traffic with Mexico City. This might possibly be undertaken with greater hope of success than neutralization for the city, which has been heretofore proposed at different times but each time given up as impracticable.

Third. Should the Department think otherwise, it is nevertheless respectfully suggested that it might be unwise to affirmatively state that neutralized travel by railroad is less important than neutralizing the city inasmuch as the Constitutionalists are at present powerless to help in the one instance but could contribute to the other because they control the greater part of the railroad.

Fourth. The instruction as now worded, minimizes the great importance of uninterrupted railroad communication and will therefore seriously affect the weight of the representations already in progress here through the British Consul at the instance of the British Ambassador at Washington as to returning the railroad property to its British owners.

Have consulted Mr. Richards in the preparation of this cablegram. Department's further instruction awaited.

Your March 30, 7 p. m. If neutralization of railroad is likely to be acted upon immediately, you may delay presentation of neutralization of the city, but it would be very unfortunate, after what has occurred, to have Obregon return to capital. Neutralization of city of Mexico has no necessary connection with neutralization of the railroad. In view of the number of foreigners in the city of Mexico, neutralization there would seem to be more important, but there is no reason why you should not urge neutralization of both city and railroad with the view of securing either or both. The foreign population of Mexico would be greatly alarmed by another transfer of authority.

VERA CRUZ, April 5, 1915—5 p. m.

Referring to previous cablegram the following is a résumé of the conferences in regard to the neutralization of Mexico City and neutralization of the Mexican railroad or its return to the company.

Position of the Constitutionalist Government:

1. The Constitutionalist, not being in the possession of the City of Mexico, are unconcerned as to the situation there, unaffected by it and indisposed at this time to commit their Government to any future policy in the matter.

2. Therefore and for military operations and because neutralization is considered by them as otherwise impracticable, reference being made to the clash between the neutral police and the military in August last and to the guaranteed neutrality of Naco, the Constitutionalists further disinclined to consider at this time the neutralization of City of Mexico.

3. While regretting the isolation and any other inconveniences or sufferings afflicting the foreign residents of Mexico City, it must nevertheless be remembered in so far as Americans are concerned that they persist in remaining after the repeated recommendation of their own Government that they retire from the country and after the expressed wish of the Constitutionalists, in order solely to avoid the consequences, that they comply with such. The Constitutionalists are ready at any time to afford such facilities as they can to any foreigners who may desire to leave Mexico City. If they choose not to leave they must endure the same condition endured by our own nationals.

4. The Constitutionalists deem the operation of the Mexican railroad for the purpose and in the manner in which it is now operated of more consequence than an agreement to resume and to maintain communication with Mexico City and that the one precludes the other.

5. Under the Mexican laws the Constitutionalists claim the right, as an exigency of the revolution and as subject to future reclamation, to take possession of the Mexican railroad with all its belongings and appurtenances and to operate it both for military and for commercial purposes.

6. Any interference whatever with the Constitutionalists in the exercise of this right by one foreign power or by a combination of foreign powers would be considered as an act unfriendly to the Constitutionalists cause.

On the other hand:

1. For the reasons given and pending definite instruction to the contrary, the further discussion of the neutralization of Mexico City at this time is waived.

2. The argument for the return of the Mexican railroad to the company is understood to be in support of the representation made to the Constitutionalist Government by His Britannic Majesty's Consul at Vera Cruz on the 29th day of March, 1915, in compliance with telegraphic instructions received by the Consul on that date from His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador at Washington.

3. It is suggested that the military plans of the Constitutionalists would not necessarily suffer by the return of the railroad to the company, for the company has expressed its willingness [omission] the Constitutionalists in their military operations. It is claimed by the company that, being the owners of the road and its equipment, and its general manager and other employees being professionally fitted for the business of operating railway and their long service and experience with the company peculiarly fitting them for the operating of the particular railroad, the company is therefore as well qualified as, or possibly better qualified than the Constitutionalists themselves to give efficient continued service to the Constitutionalists in their military movements.

4. In the representation for resumption of communication it is not contemplated or expected that complete service can be rendered but only such daily service as will offer the least interference with the military operations of the Constitutionalists and subject in the territory that jurisdiction to such regulations as they may deem necessary, it being understood that the service will receive the same protection as if it were under the direct operation of the Constitutionalists themselves.

5. It is respectfully suggested that it is not to be presumed, regardless of the circumstances giving rise to the fact, that the Powers, in view of the fact that approximately 24,000 of their nationals, including their diplomatic representatives, are at present living in the City of Mexico, can look upon their isolation and other possible distressing afflictions except with the greatest concern and the greatest desire to relieve them.

6. It is respectfully suggested that it is not to be presumed that the Powers would be willing, in the [omission] of one, or more than one, of the contending parties to a lamentable civil strife in Mexico, to silently consent to an indefinite prolongation of the present isolation and other possible distressing afflictions which their nationals including their diplomatic representatives in the City of Mexico are now suffering.

7. In view of all the circumstances, in view of previous verbal and written representations, in view of the great desire of foreign governments that communication with the City of Mexico be resumed, in view of the future interests of the Constitutionalists themselves, it is most respectfully but most earnestly suggested that the Mexican railroad be returned to the company for operation, that permission be granted for daily communication with City of Mexico and that an early date be named for the resumption of the service.

VERA CRUZ, April 9, 1915—7 p. m.

Referring to my April 5, 5 p. m. In the informal conferences the Constitutionalist rejoinder to the argument for a return of the Mexican Railroad to the Company and for resumption of communication with Mexico City may be summarized as follows:

First. The railway administration and service at present is entirely military. It is subject to strict military orders and discipline.

Should there be any unwillingness, neglect or disobedience or any suspected disloyalty, appropriate punishment can be immediately inflicted, even execution if necessary. This would not be practicable if the Company were operating the road with their own administration and their own service.

Second. Whether the Constitutionalists or the Company were operating the road, it would be wholly impossible in spite of every restriction to prevent the passing back and forth of spies and correspondence that would convey to the enemy a knowledge of the Constitutionalists' affairs, plans and military movements.

Third. Railroad service between points which are respectively within the lines of the opposing forces is entirely without precedent, and the Constitutionalists cannot consider it.

Obvious conclusions from the informal conferences:

1. The Mexican Railroad will be operated indefinitely by the Constitutionalists.

2. The discontinuance of train service with Mexico City will continue until such time as the Constitutionalists deem proper.

3. It is my opinion, in which Mr. West concurs, that if the road is to be returned to the Company at any time soon, or if railway communication between Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico is to be resumed at any time soon, neither the one nor the other is to be expected from the voluntary action of the Constitutionalists, even if they occupy Mexico City.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, May 7, 1915.

SIR: I have been requested by the American Society of Mexico and the International Committee to transmit to you the following document:

The American Society of Mexico and the International Committee of Foreign Residents unite in an expression of thanks and appreciation for the efforts made by the American Government and representatives, through which thirty-four sacks of foreign mail have just been received here from the accumulations at Vera Cruz, the first from there since February.

Urgent appeal is hereby made to the Washington Government that effective steps be taken to put the capital city of Mexico again into communication with the world by the reopening of at least one railway line for traffic to Vera Cruz or the northern border. Isolation has been almost complete since the beginning of the present year. The movement of passengers, freight and mails has been stopped and private cablegrams are unwarrantably censored.

The capital is suffering a lingering death. The indifference of those engaged in the present warfare of factions toward the necessities of the great majority of the people of Mexico, native and foreign, is daily bringing about greater complications, which will render a solution of the Mexican problem still more difficult.

The food situation is acute and there is much suffering in the city. Flour is selling up to one peso per pound (equal to the daily wage of a common laborer, who cannot indulge in such food); meat also up to a peso per pound, and corn twenty-five centavos a pound. Many articles of medical supplies in the city are exhausted and hospitals have been stripped of surgical instruments by outgoing troops. There is urgent need of carbons for street lamps and of other articles vital to public health and protection.

The Washington Government two months ago renewed its advice that Americans leave Mexico until conditions become more settled and followed it with the suggestion from General Carranza that other foreigners also leave Mexico City. Unfortunately there has been no way open to act upon the advice since it was given, even for those Americans and other foreign residents whose circumstances and responsibilities would permit them to leave.

Three travelers were shot last week while trying to get from this city to Pachuca, fifty miles away. A number of Americans who have attempted recently to leave by automobile or other conveyance have been turned back by armed men, regardless of passports some of which were signed by the Convention President, Roque Gonzales Garza.

The censorship of private and commercial telegrams by the Conventionalist authorities here, and also the Carrancistas at Vera Cruz, is so strict that residents cannot explain to relatives or correspondents abroad either their situation or their actions. Cablegrams cannot be sent if they refer to stoppage of mails or other abnormal conditions, although such interference with foreign service is in contravention of the cable company's franchise, while the country is not engaged in foreign war. Remittances cannot be made by mail and this interference with cablegrams renders difficult or impossible arrangement by telegraph of maturing obligations, such as life-insurance premiums and commercial paper. Foreign residents who are awaiting mail remittances from abroad are, many of them, dependent temporarily on assistance from friends here or from relief committees.

Fresh evidences of anti-American feeling are seen in proposed legislation, anonymous threatening letters, public speeches, utterances by delegates in the Convention, and in the Mexican press. This attitude toward Americans is justified by Mexicans here on the ground that the United States is showing partiality toward the Carrancista cause.

Attention must be called to the report that goods at Vera Cruz destined for the merchants of this city (on some of which the import duties have already been paid) and held for months in Government ware-houses at Vera Cruz because of closing of the railways, are now being removed without hindrance by the authorities there, and sold or used by persons having no right or claim to warrant such action; and this despite the assurances of protection given by the Carrancista Government when the American troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz.

The hope is expressed among foreigners here that the special representatives from the United States who are attached to particular chiefs may not be deterred, by an excessive desire to maintain agreeable relations with those leaders, from furnishing the Washington Government with complete, accurate, and impartial reports of what actually transpires in their locality.

With renewed assurances [etc.]

Mexico City, May 21, 1915.

574. General Garza appeared before the Convention yesterday and made sensational declarations regarding the approaching general famine in the Republic and the hunger already felt in this city as well as the great difficulty in finding a remedy. He made really discouraging utterances about the financial situation, stated that not a cent was to be found in the treasury, pointed out the great expenses of the southern army amounting to about a million and a half every ten days, and asked the Convention where the funds were to be found by him to meet them. He further confessed that to alleviate for some days the financial difficulties he was obliged to hypothecate for 400,000 pesos a gold deposit of 234,000 pesos kept as a guaranty of certain obligations.

With reference to the political situation he earnestly requested the Convention to confirm or reject the appointments of his Ministers which were submitted to it several weeks ago in accordance with a law recently declared by the Convention; and he emphatically declared that by no means would he keep General Manuel Palefox as Minister of Agriculture, as the latter continues to act notwithstanding his dismissal by Garza and the Convention several days ago.

General Garza even stated that he has his resignation already written to be presented to the Convention in case it will not meet his requests. He concluded his remarks by making a warm appeal for the unification of all revolutionary parties including the Carrancistas to save the country and form a stable government saying that it was time for the army to give up fighting and go to work.

577. Yesterday at a very stormy session of the Convention very hard phrases exchanged between the North and South delegates and even injurious phrases pronounced by the South leader against the President of the Convention. The affair ended by division of the two parties into two bands which threatened to clash. Finally the North delegates left the Convention, had a private meeting to take a decision and returned afterwards to protest. Happily at the same time the room was invaded by large crowd of the people clamoring for justice and bread, which made them postpone matter.

Zapata ordered headquarters of the South army removed to Morelos and it is reported that the South troops will leave the city.

DECREE NO. 7.

Francisco Villa, General in Chief of the Conventionist Army operating in the North and Center of the Republic, by virtue of the powers conferred upon me by the Decree of February 2 of the present year—

Whereas, the greater number of the persons implicated in the overthrow of the lawful government of Señor Madero, and in the crimes and offenses both of a political and military nature connected therewith, have sought asylum abroad in order to escape the action of justice, in so far as relates to the personal liability they have incurred as well as to the civil responsibility they are under toward the nation and to the persons who have been made victims; and

Whereas, the principal authors and accomplices have been joined abroad by many persons who sympathize with the reactionary cause, and who, while not guilty of active participation in the events of the coup d'état, yet favored and aided the administration of the usurper, thus hindering the triumph of the Constitutionalist cause; and

Whereas, for the purpose of preventing the enforcement of these pecuniary liabilities, or with the intent to foster openly abroad a counter movement of a reactionary character, all these guilty parties and their partisans are effecting operations, either genuine or pretended, for the transfer, lease, hypothecation, or other disposal of the properties they still retain in the country, by conveying their interests to private persons or corporations, foreign or domestic, whose violation of the laws cannot, owing to especial circumstances, be fully shown;

And lastly, whereas, if the Government of the Convention does not take steps to put an end to the evils above referred to, the civil liability in which these guilty parties have incurred cannot be enforced, and the conspirators will be left the pecuniary means of renewing once again the struggle between the Democratic Party and the reactionaries—

Now, therefore, I have seen fit to decree as follows:

Article 1. Until such time as the lawfully constituted authorities shall have issued an amnesty decree, the criminal and civil liabilities of all authors, accomplices and abettors of the crimes of rebellion, treason and usurpation of authority committed against the lawful government of Señor Madero and against the various State governments, from the 9th of February, 1913, to the 15th of August, 1914, and for the offenses of common or military order connected with the above-mentioned events, shall remain absolute.

Article 2. Similarly, the criminal and civil liability is absolute in the case of all persons who cooperated in the administrations of the usurpers Huerta and Carabaja—by serving either by appointment issued by the said persons or by virtue of so-called elections during the period above referred to—in the offices of Senators and Deputies to the Federal Congress or the State Legislatures, of Secretaries or Assistant Secretaries of Departments, of Governors of States, of Treasurer of the Federal Government, or of the various State Governments, Chiefs of the Treasury Department Bureaus, Postmasters, Telegraph Director, Federal or State Justices, District Judges, and in general, of any political office requiring the trust of the authorities or adhesion to the cause of the usurpers.

Article 3. Similarly, the criminal and civil liability of all persons at present engaged in fomenting, either within or without the Republic, conspiracies or rebellions against the lawful Provisional Government of the Convention, is absolute.

Article 4. In order to prevent that by means of pretended or genuine operations the persons enumerated in the foregoing articles may elude the civil liability created by the said articles, as well as for the purpose of preventing their disposing of elements with which to foment a counter-revolution of reactionary character, all transactions, whether pretended or genuine, are hereby declared null and void in so far as they relate to property, movable or immovable, of any nature whatsoever, either situated or at present within the Republic, belonging to the said persons or in which they may have any interest by virtue of usufruct, use, habitation, emphyteusis, partnership, or any other real or personal right in or to the said properties.

Article 5. For the purpose of the foregoing article all attachments shall have the force and effect of a tacit and preferred mortgage, even though no absolute attachment shall have been in reality made.

All personal property which shall not have been secured, but whose ownership cannot be proved at law, and title to which shall not have been conveyed in fact by the owners thereof up to the date of the present decree, shall be subjected to government liability, notwithstanding the fact that a sale or other transfer may have been subsequently made.

Article 6. All contracts entered into abroad by Mexican or foreign corporations shall require for their validity the approval of the Executive, whenever the said contract shall relate to properties situated within the Republic.

Article 7. The Executive shall be empowered to authorize the contracts referred to in the foregoing article, whenever the interested parties shall present satisfactory proof that they do not come within any of the provisions of Articles 1, 2, and 3 of this Decree, and provided also the transfer be bona fide.

Article 8. Whenever a corporation, organized according to the laws of Mexico, or according to foreign laws but domiciled within the Republic or owning property within the same, any one of whose members shall be comprised within the persons described in Articles 1, 2 and 3 of this Decree, shall attempt to convey its assets and liabilities, or to reorganize under new conditions, or to effect a merger with any other corporation, all shares pertaining to such persons shall be subject to liability in favor of the Nation, and only on this basis and with the approval of the Executive may any contracts be binding which relate to the organization or merger, etc., of corporations, in so far as concerns property situated within the Republic.

Article 9. All foreigners and Mexican citizens residing abroad who shall attempt to celebrate within the Republic any operation of sale, exchange, transfer, etc., of any property situated within the said Republic of Mexico, or to be there found, including shares of stocks, bonds, Federal or State debt certificates, or of companies domiciled in the Republic or with branch establishments therein, shall inform themselves as to whether said properties are subject to any liability.

Article 10. In order to prevent that persons resident in foreign countries may be deceived by the owners of properties to which this decree refers, this said decree shall be given due publicity by the Confidential Delegations or Commercial Agencies, Consulates, and by the Press, and it shall likewise, be brought to the attention officially of Foreign Governments, in order that their respective subjects and citizens may not be harmed or suffer any prejudice by reason of lack of knowledge, in the event of their entering into any of the said operations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 2, 1915—1 p. m.

741. You will please lay before the Mexico City authorities for their information the following public statement just issued by the President.

BRYAN.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT.

For more than two years revolutionary conditions have existed in Mexico. The purpose of the revolution was to rid Mexico of men who ignored the constitution of the Republic and used their power in contempt of the rights of its people; and with these purposes the people of the United States instinctively and generously sympathized. But the leaders of the revolution, in the very hour of their success, have disagreed and turned their arms against one another. All professing the same objects, they are nevertheless unable or unwilling to cooperate. A central authority at Mexico City is no sooner set up than it is undermined and its authority denied by those who were expected to support it. Mexico is apparently no nearer a solution of her tragical troubles than she was when the revolution was first kindled. And she has been swept by civil war as if by fire. Her crops are destroyed, her fields lie unseeded, her work cattle are confiscated for the use of the armed factions, her people flee to the mountains to escape being drawn into unavailing bloodshed, and no man seems to see or lead the way to peace and settled order. There is no proper protection either for her own citizens or for the citizens of other nations resident and at work within her territory. Mexico is starving and without a government.

In these circumstances the people and Government of the United States cannot stand indifferently by and do nothing to serve their neighbor. They want nothing for themselves in Mexico. Least of all do they desire to settle her affairs for her, or claim any right to do so. But neither do they wish to see utter ruin come upon her, and they deem it their duty as friends and neighbors to lend any aid they properly can to any instrumentality which promises to be effective in bringing about a settlement which will embody the real objects of the revolution—constitutional government and the rights of the people. Patriotic Mexicans are sick at heart and cry out for peace and for every self-sacrifice that may be necessary to procure it. Their people cry out for food and will presently hate as much as they fear every man, in their country or out of it, who stands between them and their daily bread.

It is time, therefore, that the Government of the United States should frankly state the policy which in these extraordinary circumstances it becomes its duty to adopt. It must presently do what it has not hitherto done or felt at liberty to do, lend its active moral support to some man or group of men, if such may be found, who can rally the suffering people of Mexico to their support in an effort to ignore, if they cannot unite, the warring factions of the country, return to the constitution of the Republic so long in abeyance, and set up a government at Mexico City which the great powers of the world can recognize and deal with, a government with whom the program of the revolution will be a business and not merely a platform. I, therefore, publicly and very solemnly, call upon the leaders of faction in Mexico to act, to act together, and to act promptly for the relief and redemption of their prostrate country. I feel it to be my duty to tell them that, if they cannot accommodate their differences and unite for this great purpose within a very short time, this Government will be constrained to decide what means should be employed by the United States in order to help Mexico save herself and serve her people.

603. On account of lack of direct communication Foreign Office earnestly requested me to ask you kindly to transmit the following messages:

To Citizen General VENUSTIANO CARRANZA,
Vera Cruz, or wherever residing:

I suppose that you have received a similar note from Mr. W. Wilson, the President of the United States of North America, sent under date of the second of this month to myself as well as the other revolutionary leaders in the country; and on the basis of this belief, in a manner most formal and solemn, I invite you, inspired solely by the welfare of our afflicted country, to give me frankly and categorically your opinion on this matter, in the knowledge that on the part of the Government which I represent there exists the strongest desire to evade a national evil because we understand that it is necessary to arrive at a unification of the revolutionary elements as the revolution has triumphed and there only exists, for the realization of its ideals, the extirpation of useless and unpatriotic personal considerations.

To this end I, as President of the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention in charge of the Executive Power, am disposed to deliver the executive power within twelve hours to the Provisional President who may be nominated by the revolutionists united.

I exhort and invite you to consider this question, inspired solely by the welfare of the nation, in order that an armistice may be decreed at once with the object that the commissions appointed may come and go with freedom.

Neither your party nor ourselves nor anyone will be able to deny that the principles we sustain are similar and in obedience to identical aspirations.

I attentively request you to forward an immediate reply.

MEXICO, June 3, 1915.

To General FRANCISCO VILLA,

I suppose that by this date you are acquainted with the declarations made by President Wilson, which constitute a demand on the commanders of forces in the Republic.

I request you by this means of communication to give me your opinion on this matter in order that I may know what to expect, as the inhabitants of the territory dominated by us, the City of Mexico and the Convention are inclined to favor the unification of the revolution. I wish to know your idea in this question in order to pursue a course and work as always in harmony with yourself.

I beg of you also to transmit my wishes to Governor Maytorena and General Angeles and the remainder of the revolutionary leaders.

CARDOSO DE OLIVEIRA.

THE HONORABLE JOHN R. SILLIMAN, Vera Cruz.

Purely as a matter of courtesy and without taking any responsibility or any particular interest in its contents I accede in begging you to deliver following message:

MEXICO CITY, June 8, 1915.

General VENUSTIANO CARRANZA:

I do not know why you have not been pleased to answer my telegram of the second²⁴ inasmuch as the same referred to a matter of vital importance for our country. I confirm said message in every particular and beg to add that the easiest way in my opinion to solve the great pending question would be, provided there is good disposition on the part of the principal leaders of the revolution, to arrange immediately for a general armistice, you controlling all the territory now occupied by our forces, General Villa holding that occupied by him and General Zapata the one he now holds. Railroad traffic being thus resumed in the entire Republic it would be very easy for the representatives of the several generals to come to the capital for the sole purpose of electing a Provisional President who shall conduct the national affairs while the constitutional order is restored. Said President will be made to appoint his Cabinet which will be composed of two ministers representing your faction, two more representing the Northern Division, two representing the Liberating Army of the South and the other three representing the civil part of the Republic; this with the idea that each faction may be represented and that the people in general may be guaranteed by the new President.

I believe the above conditions ought to be accepted, as my opinion is that there would hardly be a Mexican who would accept in any form the help of a foreign power to impose upon us as, if such a man should be living, he would deserve to be considered as a traitor to his own country.

Are you not disposed to make some sacrifice for the nation as we Conventionalists are disposed to make?

In case you should think that I am an obstacle for the unification of the revolution I beg you to kindly advise me so as to take some determination which would be no other but that of retiring immediately to private life.

Wishing from the bottom of my heart the coming of new era of peace and concord for all Mexicans I again pray you to answer me.

ROQUE GONZALEZ GARZA,
President of the Sovereign Convention in Charge of the Executive Power.

I would like to know what impression was made on Carranza by this message and the former one on the same subject as well as Carranza's answer to the American statement.

I regret to inform you that Convention has postponed discussion of the President's statement, and instead of getting down to do sane work for union and peace is pitifully losing its time in useless discussion relative to dissensions between certain groups of their own members and dissensions between the Zapatista leaders and President Garza. Delegate Soto y Gama, personal representative of General Zapata and the most influential leader in the Convention, amuses himself daily in making inflammatory speeches in the course of which the United States, President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan, Mr. West and myself are insulted in the most unwarranted, cruel and unbearable manner.

The PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

Your public statement regarding the Mexican situation has encouraged not only Americans here, but the foreigners and patriotic Mexicans as well, who appreciate the value of your accurate presentation of conditions in this country. A constantly growing majority of the Mexican people look to the United States as the only source from which effective relief can come. Your message of information to the American people and your note of warning to the factional leaders of Mexico we believe are most timely. If most people of Mexico lack faith in the possibility of voluntary and lasting combination of Mexican chiefs along patriotic and unselfish lines it is because of the many lost opportunities during the last few years of futile turmoil and the entire record of Mexican history. The forbearance of the American Government towards Mexico in the past, its disavowal of selfish motives and the many evidences of its friendship for the Mexican people are rightly appreciated by most honest-minded Mexicans and your declarations will be misunderstood and distorted only by the military and perseverant minority which seeks its own appointments at the expense of suffering countrymen.

It is the general prayer that the "very short time" which you warn Mexican leaders will be allowed in which to accommodate their differences will be given the minimum interpretation, that impracticable makeshifts be not allowed to postpone a settlement of the present intolerable conditions. While a year ago your statement would have caused deep resentment, today it evokes expressions of hope among Mexicans of all classes that your demand will not be evaded by empty promises from factional leaders but enforced to the end that anarchy and hunger in Mexico be terminated.

GOMEZ PALACIO, June 11, 1915—noon.

The following is General Villa's reply to the note of President Wilson:

The consideration and respect which the President of the United States of America has won, both in his own country and outside of it, due to his high sense of justice, and more particularly among the middle and lower classes in Mexico, a consideration and respect which I share, oblige me to make—in reply to his solemn and public declaration respecting the future policy of his Government concerning our present civil war and the entreaties which he has made to the armed factions to reestablish harmony among themselves—the following declaration, equally public and solemn. I believe that I am justified in making it also in the name of the faction whose political sentiments are represented by the Government of the Convention and supported by the army under my command.

The Mexican people recognize the fact that the American people observed with the same horror as ourselves the assassination of President Madero and Vice President Pino Suarez, and for this reason generously sympathized with the Constitutionalist movement which had for its principal object the deposing the usurper from power and the reestablishing of our Constitution in order to effect through the law the social betterment of the people, as was the aim of the Revolution of 1910.

Because of the moral aid which the people of the United States lent us in those circumstances, the usurpers charged the American Government and ourselves with giving and receiving, respectively, material aid in fomenting the revolution. The Mexican people feel a sincere gratitude toward the American people for that generous sympathy and moral support and it pleases me to note that President Wilson recognizes that the people and the Government of the United States have no wish to take any part in the settling of our internal affairs.

It is an unfortunate circumstance that after achieving our triumph dissensions arose between us, causing a renewal of civil war; but we should consider that while there may enter in part in this condition the ambition of certain men, there is also a matter of principle which should be understood in order that superficial judgment be not passed upon all as infamously ambitious, who in one or the other group seek to apply the triumph to the benefit of the people.

The false belief of certain "leaders" that within the constitutional order it was impossible to carry out the principles of the revolution—a false belief selfishly defended by those who in its name attempted to keep themselves in power indefinitely without laws, without tribunals, without any principle of discipline—within one month plunged us into utter anarchy in our own capital and in almost all the places occupied by the forces of the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army. So also the tactlessness of Señor Carranza brought us into strained relations with friendly nations. Surely these nations have not forgotten the insubordinate acts, perpetrated even yet, against the persons and property of diplomatic representatives by officers and soldiers serving under the banner of Señor Carranza, which he has never been in a position to check.

In view of the loss of prestige to the Revolution through such disorder—the indefinite postponement of reorganization of finances, credits and interior administration, the failure to return to constitutional government and to install fundamental laws based on revolutionary principles—the Chiefs of the Division of the North and of other corps, in accord with a large element of civilians, proposed to the First Chief that he assume the Provisional presidency of the Republic and form a respectable cabinet who would at once reopen the courts of justice and in a short time call general elections and organize civil constitutional government.

Those proposals, presented in the month of September last to Mr. Carranza by General Alvaro Obregón and by me as chiefs of the Corps of the Northwest and the Division of the North, were given no attention. The First Chief and his followers, in place of calling the people together, preferred to call an essentially military convention, claiming that in order to confirm the triumph of the Revolution it was necessary to have a long preconstitutional period during which to insert in the Constitution of 1857 the reforms demanded by the Revolution. We believed such a system would ruin the Nation and that constitutional reforms should be made by a congress, elected by the people. There was also in the background of our judgment something more lofty than a question of personalities and Carranza himself has now justified us, for in a manifesto which he issued at Vera Cruz, after the Convention of Aguascalientes had declared him a rebel, he agreed, if he was finally victorious, that he would call a national election of deputies to a constitutional congress.

Therefore no substantial differences exist between the parties. But we decline to admit responsibility for the blood that has been shed. Before this new hatred was engendered, we pledged ourselves to the principle of popular elections and proposed that they be called.

It is my duty as one of the leaders of the Conventionist party to refute the general charges in President Wilson's note. This note says that, "A central authority at Mexico City is no sooner set up than it is undermined and its authority denied by those who were expected to support it." Such a charge is not entirely just. The authority of Mr. Carranza was not recognized because he did not recognize the platform of the Revolution and its fundamental principle of reestablishing the force of the Constitution. Later, the Aguascalientes Convention proclaimed its sovereignty, which we all recognized. Since then we Conventionists have loyally supported the supreme authority of that Convention. Mr. Carranza and his followers, however, repudiated the Convention although they themselves had convoked it.

Another charge made against the parties at war is that, "There is no proper protection either for her [Mexico's] own citizens or for the citizens of other nations resident and at work within her territory. Mexico is starving and without a government." There is not, it is true, any authority recognized throughout the country. It is only in this sense that the statement is correct that Mexico is without a government. This happens, however, in all civil wars, in any nation. But as to there being "no proper protection either for her own citizens or for the citizens of other nations," I find it my duty to deny the charge as far as it refers to the territory controlled by the forces under my command; and as to the civil government annexed to my general headquarters, I myself need not speak, for Mr. Duval West, representing President Wilson, in a telegram of farewell dated March 10 last, among other things said to me: "I am glad to say that I have received an excellent impression of the prevailing quiet and order wherever I have been, and of the facilities and guaranties given to natives and foreigners in their work." And in a message dated March 17 sent by his excellency the British Ambassador at Washington to the British Consul at El Paso, he requested him to express to my Government his high appreciation of its prompt action in protecting British interests.

Representatives of the British and American Governments have recognized, therefore, that in the territory dominated by my forces guaranties and protection are afforded to native and foreigner alike, a fact that could be further proved by many telegrams from persons of various nationalities.

It is not extraordinary that the operation of the Government and its institutions is now not normal. The labor of reconstruction is always slow; but still slower when done with one hand while the other is engaged in battle. None the less in the midst of the struggle education has been encouraged, reorganization of the courts in almost all the States has been perfected, the Federal courts are already sitting, mining laws have been amended, free coinage effected, the principles of agrarian law and of fisheries and other natural resources have been amended upon principles of equity; the railroad, postal and telegraph services have been improved and arrangements made to send articles of the most urgent necessity to those sections where the war has produced the most suffering.

It is true that the abundance which existed in times of peace is lacking, but there has been great exaggeration, undoubtedly unintentional, in stating that "Mexico is starving" and "her fields lie unseeded" and "her crops are destroyed." It is true that in the capital, in Monterrey and in certain other cities there has been at times distress; but this has been due to military operations rather than to lack of foodstuffs in the country.

No, we have not arrived at such a degree of misery and despair that we need foreign assistance and our people do not "flee to the mountains," for they have faith that either faction of the Constitutionalist party will give them guaranties which they have not had during a century of independence, with the exception of the short administration of Señor Madero. This guaranty is freedom from forced service. The odious conscript system that filled thousands of homes with widows and orphans is now abolished. This is one of our greatest conquests and is engraved on the hearts of our people.

But there are loftier considerations, of a moral nature, which have always impelled us to urge harmony among revolutionists and pardon for those who do wrong through weakness, thoughtlessness or inertia rather than through ambition or wickedness. These moral considerations have served to placate the hatreds which result in civil wars, to prevent foreign intervention in our internal affairs, and to eliminate all danger of international conflict.

The Chiefs of the Division of the North and others faithful to the agreement signed at Aguascalientes therefore agreed to treat with our opponents in peace parleys arranged by the Convention of Aguascalientes. Unfortunately, many attended these parleys with the sole desire to blind us with false promises.

It was because of the patriotic moral considerations above mentioned that, when I assumed authority for the Northern Section of the Republic, I offered in my first manifesto to receive in brotherly spirit those who had strayed through error; and later, on April 9th, I authorized the return to the territory controlled by my forces of all Mexicans then refugees on foreign soil, excepting only those concerned in the uprising of Felix Diaz and in the crimes of February, 1913. It is therefore not the warning voice of President Wilson which suggests for the first time that we must seek concord nor is the motive of our resolve a belief that by submitting to foreign suggestions we might obtain the sympathy of a powerful nation.

We, Conventionists have not struggled to obtain power nor do we wish to obtain it except through the free vote of the Mexican people. And in view of the possibility of outside intervention in our national affairs we are willing to invite again to concord all the Mexican people so that we may united work for the establishment of the revolutionary principles, and especially for the solution of the agrarian question and for the dissemination of education among the masses. We except from such conference only those whom President Wilson describes as those "who ignored the constitution of the Republic and used their power in contempt of the rights of the people."

GOMEZ PALACIO, June 11, 1915.—noon.

At the request of General Villa and Miguel Diaz Lombardo, please forward the following to General Roque González Garza, Mexico City.

CAROTHERS.

The following is my reply to the note of President Wilson and will be delivered officially by Manuel Bonilla:

[Request to quote the note transmitted in the telegram next above.]

I have also and at the same time sent the following to Mr. Carranza:

GENERAL VENUSTIANO CARRANZA,
Vera Cruz.

In a note directed to the chiefs of the various factions and military forces now at war, President Wilson invites the revolutionary Constitutionalist groups to collaborate in reestablishing constitutional government and secure the rights of the people. In this note President Wilson says that if we do not succeed in effecting this union the American Government will be obliged "to lend its active moral support to some man or group of men . . . who can rally" a large part of the nation. "to ignore . . . the warring factions"; and that if this method is not efficacious, the Government reserves to itself to take other means.

In our opinion the declaration involves two perils which would frustrate the aims of the Revolution and destroy our sovereignty: first, that the party of the Científicos under some other name would return to power with American backing; second, that if the people should not follow this group, the American Government would have recourse to an armed intervention.

In the face of these two perils and without recognizing in the American Government any right to intervene in our affairs, we believe that we should seek the means whereby the Constitutionalist Party may reunite and reorganize, even at the expense of amour propre. We believe that this is made incumbent upon us by patriotism and the future welfare of the country. We therefore venture to propose to you that we take into consideration the aforesaid note of President Wilson; and that, if you are so disposed, you will kindly inform us to that effect for the purpose of discussing and agreeing upon the indispensable preliminaries for arriving at an agreement respecting the form and procedure for a reorganization of the national constitutional government.

We have written to the above effect to General Roque González Garza as Chief of the Conventioneer Government; also to General Emiliano Zapata as Chief of the Army of the South.

In the hope that your decision will be inspired by a wish for the welfare of the country, we remain [etc.]

FRANCISCO VILLA.

MIGUEL DIAZ LOMBARDO,
In charge of the Department of Foreign Relations and Justice.

I suppose that you and General Zapata have answered in similar terms; but in case you have not, I beg of you to do so, as it will show our unity of aim and the desire of the Constitutionalist Party for union.

Kindly transmit this same message to General Zapata in my name.

FRANCISCO VILLA.

MANIFESTO TO THE NATION.

At last, after five years of warfare * * * the revolution is about to end. * * * The struggle has been a long one because the impatience of the revolutionaries to attain victory in 1911 gave room to the compromise with the elements of the old régime. * * * Then I, as Governor of the State of Coahuila, in obedience to Articles 121 and 128 of the Constitution, assumed the representation of the Republic in the terms in which the Constitution itself vests me with this right, and supported by the people who rose in arms to regain their liberty. The above-mentioned articles provide the following:

Every public officer without exception, prior to his taking possession of his charge, shall make oath that he will sustain the Constitution and the laws emanating therefrom. This Constitution shall not fail in force or vigor, even though on account of rebellion its observance may be interrupted. In case that pursuant to a public disturbance a government contrary to the principles sanctioned by the Constitution be established, as soon as the people regain their freedom its observance shall be reestablished, and according to it and to the laws which by virtue of it may have been enacted, those who may have figured in the government emanated from the rebellion shall be tried as well as those who may have cooperated in the movement.

After the rebellion and usurpation of Huerta had been overthrown and before the Constitutionalist Army reached the City of Mexico, the reactionaries, faithful to their old procedure, began to mingle in our ranks and corrupt those who ought to have given their support to this Government; the result was the repudiation of this Government by General Villa and the formation of factions whose chiefs felt encouraged by the presence of the foreign representatives who were with them.

When our forces left the City of Mexico pursuant to a military and political plan, it was thought that the Constitutionalist Government had lost the support of the people and with it its prestige and force, and that it would follow the course of previous trespassers on public power. But the apparent victory of the reaction headed by Francisco Villa, was still more ephemeral than the one obtained by the usurpation of General Huerta; and today, after the greatest and most definite victories militarily obtained by the army of the people in various parts of the country, I can say to my countrymen that the Constitutionalist Government has control of over seven-eighths of the national territory; that it is organizing public administration in twenty out of the twenty-seven States of the Republic and in more than half of the other seven States; that it controls all the ports on the Gulf and the Pacific Ocean with the exception of Guaymas, and all the ports of entry on the northern and southern frontiers with the exception of Piedras Negras, Ciudad Juarez, and Nogales; that more than thirteen million of the fifteen which represent the population of the country, that is to say, nine-tenths of the total population of the Republic, are governed by the administration over which I preside; that day after day the factions are being routed and dispersed, their offensive action being limited at present to acts of brigandage; and that within a short time the occupation of the City of Mexico will contribute to make the action of the Constitutionalist Government more harmonious and efficient in all the territory of the Republic. Therefore, our country is nearing the end of its revolution and approaching the consolidation of a definite peace based on welfare and justice.

In the midst of the greatest difficulties the Constitutionalist Government has extenuated the hardships of war, either forbidding the exportation of articles of prime necessity or adopting measures of practical effect to facilitate the acquisition of the same for the benefit of the poor; it has afforded guaranties and given protection to the inhabitants within the territory controlled by the Constitutionalist forces, all of whom live a life of normal activity; it has prevented and punished the faults and abuses growing out of the state of social disturbance.

With regard to our foreign relations, notwithstanding that one of my first acts was to address a note by telegraph to the State Department of the United States of America apprising it of my situation in confronting the rebellion and usurpation, one of the difficulties which has retarded our labors has been the lack of understanding between the Government I have the honor to represent and the Governments of other nations, especially that of the United States.

The great interests of the old régime have created a system of falsehood and slander against this Government, spreading day after day through the powerful journals of the American "Científico" press which reach the ear of the press of the world, with the object of deforming before the opinion of other nations the procedure and the tendencies of the Mexican Revolution; the same interests have used their influence to have false reports rendered to the Governments of other countries, and especially that of the United States. The Constitutionalist Government has been deprived of the facilities to make any rectifications of such reports, because it has been denied the opportunity and the means incidental to diplomatic relations between one country and another.

We feel that we are at the present time in condition to overcome this last difficulty, because the Constitutionalist Government is now in de facto possession of the sovereignty of the country; and the legitimate army of sovereignty is the essential condition to be borne in mind when deciding upon the recognition of a government.

If, as we expect and desire in behalf of the Mexican people and of the foreign residents of this country, the Governments of other nations recognize the Constitutionalist Government, this act of justice will afford it an efficient moral assistance, not only to strengthen the friendly relations which Mexico has always maintained with those nations and to make possible the discussion of their common affairs but also to secure a more speedy consolidation of peace and establish a constructive constitutional government, supported by the reforms and the program of the revolution.

I am therefore of the opinion that the time has come to call the attention of the warring factions still in armed opposition to the Constitutionalist Government, to the futility of their attitude because of the recent definite victories gained by our army, as well as because of the conviction they must have of our sincerity and capability to realize the ideals of the Revolution. Therefore, I appeal to those factions to submit to the Constitutionalist Government in order to expedite the reestablishment of peace and to consummate the work of the Revolution.

With a view to realizing the above-mentioned purposes, I have deemed proper to inform the nation upon the political conduct to be observed by the Constitutionalist Government, in the performance of the program of social reform contained in the Decree of December 12, 1914.²⁵

1. The Constitutionalist Government shall afford to foreigners residing in Mexico all the guaranties to which they are entitled according to our laws, and shall amply protect their lives, their freedom and the enjoyment of their rights of property, allowing them indemnities for the damage which the Revolution may have caused them, in so far as such indemnities may be just, and which are to be determined by procedure to be established later. The Government shall also assume responsibility for legitimate financial obligations.

2. The first concern of the Constitutionalist Government shall be to re-establish peace within the province of law and order, to the end that all the inhabitants of Mexico, both native and foreign, shall equally enjoy the benefits of true justice and be interested in cooperating to the support of the government emanating from the Revolution. The commission of crimes of the common order shall be punished. In due time an amnesty shall be declared in keeping with the necessities of the country and the situation, which in no way shall exempt those under it from the civil responsibilities they may have incurred.

3. The constitutional laws of Mexico known under the name of Laws of Reform, which establish the separation of the Church and the State and which guarantee the individual right of worship in accordance with one's own conscience and without offending public order, shall be strictly observed; therefore no one shall suffer in his life, freedom and property because of his religious beliefs. Temples shall continue to be the property of the nation according to laws in force, and the Constitutionalist Government shall again cede for the purposes of worship those which may be necessary.

4. There shall be no confiscations in connection with the settlement of the agrarian question. This problem shall be solved by an equitable distribution of the lands still owned by the Government; by the recovery of those lots which may have been illegally taken from individuals or communities; by the purchase and expropriation of large tracts of land, if necessary; by all other means of acquisition permitted by the laws of the country. The Constitution of Mexico forbids privileges and therefore, all kinds of properties regardless of who the owners may be, whether operated or not, shall in the future be subject to the proportional payment of a tax in accordance with a just and equitable valuation.

5. All property legitimately acquired from individuals or legal governments, and which does not constitute a privilege or a monopoly, shall be respected.

6. The peace and safety of a nation depend on a clear understanding of citizenship; therefore the Government shall take pains to develop public education, causing it to spread throughout the country, and to this end it shall utilize all cooperation rendered in good faith, permitting the establishment of private schools subject to our laws.

7. In order to establish constitutional government, the Government over which I preside shall observe and comply with the provisions of Articles 4, 5 and 6 of the Decree of December 12, 1914, which read as follows:

Consul SILLIMAN,

As a matter of courtesy and without taking any responsibility or particular interest in its contents I acceded to transcribe you the following:

General VENUSTIANO CARRANZA, Vera Cruz:

I beg to advise you that in compliance with a disposition of the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention, in accordance with the law of parliamentarism decreed by said body, ²⁶ This decree is printed in For. Rel. 1914, pp. 632-633.

General Roque Gonzalez Garza turned over to me in a formal peaceful and solemn manner the office of the Executive Power, which I have assumed since the 10th instant.

As I know that my predecessor accedes to the spirit of revolutionary unity, which will be the only national salvation in the face of any possible foreign pressure that may threaten us and as I also know that no answer has been received from you, I beg to advise that I make as mine his cordial phrases, which are an appeal to bring into harmony the factions in which, unhappily, the revolution is divided.

General Carranza, the military and civil faction which regard you as their flag, and the great universalist party which is directed by the resolutions of the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention, give their support to the same principles, hope for the same triumph of social vindication, of justice for all, and radical punishment of all reactionary elements; and both factions also uphold the same tendencies towards the future national progress.

In consequence I also understand as did my predecessor that the moment has arrived when this tremendous war, which resembles an immense national suicide, should cease; and I expect patriotism from you and those around you, and that you will be pleased to make a reply to the two successive invitations tendered you on account of the statement made by President Wilson.

I doubt not that, preliminary to a saving unity, we will be able to begin with an armistice which will be the dawning of our interior and definitive peace.

In Charge of the Executive Power.

634. General Pablo Gonzales, commander of Carrancista forces now at Puebla, sent an ultimatum to the authorities here intimating to them to recognize Carranza and surrender the city within forty-eight hours to terminate tomorrow at 6 p. m., with the understanding that if they fail to do so the Carrancistas will invest the city. Convention replied to Gonzalez showing best disposition to complete arrangements by requesting an immediate armistice for said purpose. I am told that they are sending also a statement regarding terms for arrangements. One of the most influential Conventionalists informed me today that the forces will oppose the advance of the Carrancistas to the utmost and that if vanquished, as is most probable, will give themselves over to acts of despair and violence, even the probability of trouble in town against foreigners not being excluded. It would be a real blessing for everybody if some means could be found to prevent such evils.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Aguascalientes, June 15, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report that notwithstanding the boasted protection given to foreigners and foreign property which General Villa speaks of in his reply to President Wilson's note, he continues to issue confiscatory decrees against the merchants of this town, who naturally do not want to sell their merchandise for the depreciated Villa currency except at an apparently exorbitant price when computed in said money. For instance an article that costs the merchants, say, one dollar in the United States and which, when the Mexican peso was worth 0.50 U. S. Cy., he would sell for four pesos, he is now compelled to sell 120 to 140 pesos in order not to lose on it; and the authorities arrest him and he is insulted and called a thief and warned that his stock will be confiscated unless he sells at "reasonable prices," by which they mean a loss of 75 to 80 per cent on cost of goods.

Due to the fact that the Villa money of small denomination is accepted as currency in Guadalajara and the surrounding territory now controlled by Obregon, everyone in this city is hoarding the 25-centavo, 50-centavo and peso bills, and there is a dearth of small change, which makes it difficult and in some instances impossible for the merchant to make the necessary change.

Hilario Berlie, a French citizen, was arrested and spent the night under arrest for no other reason than that he could not change a Villa bill tendered in payment in his store for some small purchase. The day prior I had sent to the local post office to purchase two pesos of stamps but the postmaster refused to sell them unless I sent the exact amount of my purchase, as there was no change in the post office. On the same day I had a similar experience for lack of change at the telegraph office. Neither the postmaster nor telegraph operator was arrested, but for the same experience an honorable foreign merchant is arrested and abused and looked upon with suspicion.

Nicolás Allende, an Ottoman subject, had his stock confiscated because he failed to submit an inventory of his goods to the authorities.

Federico Straub, on a similar frivolous charge, was arrested for buying Mexican silver pesos. Yet all telegrams sent out of Mexico must be paid in Mexican silver or gold and it is a crime to buy silver or gold money. This is one of the government's decrees I am compelled to break every time I send a telegram to Washington.

A great quantity of freight and merchandise had accumulated in the local freight depot due to the interruption of railway traffic. Two days ago the military chiefs, going through the warehouses, noticed these goods and had them all loaded on freight cars and made the freight employees surrender the corresponding bills of lading. I understand that the approximate value of this freight was about $400 U. S. Cy.

General Villa has also issued an order compelling the surrender of all work and dairy animals on the various haciendas and farms. These animals are to be shipped up north as additional booty and loot and the farmers are to remain without an ox, mule or cow to assist them in tilling the soil or obtaining a means of scarce sustenance.

It is positively disgusting to read the expression of high moral ideals in General Villa's reply to President Wilson's note and to see the contemptible and hypocritical defrauding of the ignorant peon for his personal gain and greed and the tyrannical brutal oppression with which he treats all who are not willing to bow down servilely and obey his infamous and senseless decrees.

The United States will never be able to assist this unhappy country and its cruelly oppressed people until it puts aside all ideas of cooperation with such bandits as the man who calls himself the First Chief of the Conventionist Party of Mexico.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, June 15, 1915—noon.

638. For you information I transcribe below the terms proposed by Convention to reach an agreement as published in the Mexican Herald of even date:

1. That a general armistice be arranged covering the whole Republic for the period of a month counting from the date of the acceptance of this compact, during which time hostilities shall be suspended as well as all military movements in order that the military chiefs may freely adopt the line of conduct which they may deem best for the unification of the Revolution and the salvation of the Republic.

2. That in so far as principles are concerned there shall be accepted as the program of the politico-social reforms of the Revolution the principles contained in the additions to the plan of Guadalupe formulated in Vera Cruz by General Venustiano Carranza, the principles of the Plan of Ayala accepted by the Convention, and those of the Program approved by the Convention.

3. The preconstitutional government will be composed of a provisional president of the Republic and nine responsible ministers of whom three shall be chosen by the Ejército Constitucionalista, three by the Liberating Army of the South and three by the Army of the North, these being subject to the law of parliamentarism passed by the Convention and of this assembly as the legislative power, being duly made up of representatives of all the factions accepted under the conditions accorded in Aguascalientes, civilian representatives of the generals being admitted.

4. The provisional president of the Republic will be named by an absolute majority of votes of the delegates of the Convention and must come from civil life, military candidates of whatever rank being excluded from this post.

5. The provisional preconstitutional government will retain its functions until December 31 of the present year, on which date the powers shall be turned over to the constitutional government which shall have been elected as the result of a call for elections which shall be issued at the opportune time by the Convention.

6. In order to arrive at a military equilibrium in the whole Republic the various chiefs shall preserve the respective command of the regions which they now dominate, being subject in regard to their political functions to the dispositions of the provisional government.

7. In the event of one faction invading in a military or undue manner the territory dominated by another this act will be considered as rebellion against the compact founding the provisional government and it will be the duty of the other factions in support of this government to put down the rebellion.

8. At the end of the period of a month filed [sic] in the first article, the Convention will proceed to take the necessary steps for the election of a provisional president of the Republic with the elements which, in response to this call, are gathered in the place where the said assembly may be in session.

9. Full amnesty for all revolutionists shall be decreed immediately as well as energetic action by the committee of public health composed of equal elements of the three factions for the purpose of purifying these factions and punishing the enemies of the Revolution.

Additional. This resolution shall be communicated immediately to General Pablo Gonzalez by a special commission in order that it may be made known to the military chiefs of his command and that he may reply to the Convention in the manner he deems proper, it being brought to this attention that the City of Mexico will be defended and that he will have to take it by fire and sword if he insists on his advance and that in case of the city being captured it will be submitted to a rigorous siege; and that this resolution will be issued in the form of a manifesto to all the revolutionary chiefs of the Republic.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, June 16, 1915—11 a. m.

643. I beg to transmit following note delivered to me yesterday night.

CARDOSO DE OLIVEIRA.

MEXICO CITY, June 15, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: With respect to the declarations publicly made by His Excellency President Wilson as to the policy he will pursue in Mexican affairs, the Sovereign Revolutionist Convention has seen fit to authorize the citizen in charge of the Executive Power to make the following declarations in accordance with the basis approved by the said Sovereign Convention and most dutifully entreating you to be pleased to transmit them to the Washington Government.

The Revolution which overthrew a government born of murder and usurpation and which, as President Wilson declared, had all of his and the American people's sympathies at the very moment of its triumph and when selfish tendencies took shape that would forcibly and necessarily have prevented the achievement of the demanded reforms and the realization of the sought ideals, split into three great groups whose aspirations, while having many points in common so far as their ends were concerned, very deeply differed and now differ on the form and process of such achievement.

This split, which the great majority of the people did not look for but which to those who knew the openly selfish disposition of one high in the group that headed the Constitutional faction, was unavoidable; and the manifestly democratic tendencies of the other groups brought forth the idea of calling a meeting of the leading elements of the factions with a view to arriving at a harmonious adjustment of all their differences and thus warding off another strife that would again stain our country with blood.

Such was the origin of the Sovereign Revolutionist Convention whose labors, originally undertaken at Aguascalientes, were exclusively bent on bringing together within a broad democratic formula all the interests and aspirations of the several revolutionist groups.

Unfortunately, fusion could not be completed. One of the groups, the Carrancistas, refused without reason and in spite of the oath taken by the members of the groups to carry out the resolutions of the Convention to obey the decree confirming General Eulalio Gutiérrez in the office of Provisional President of the Republic; and that refusal started another war no less fierce than that waged to uproot the régime of the Huerta usurpation.

Notwithstanding the lack of excuse for the Carrancista rebellion, in spite of its representatives' promise on their honor to obey the resolutions of the Convention, notwithstanding the offensive conduct of its newspapers in striking contrast with the dignified and serene attitude of the Conventionist press, notwithstanding unlooked-for defections, the Convention persisted in its noble task of bringing together all the revolutionist elements; and recently, but prior to the note which gave occasion for these declarations, another appeal was made to that end to the leading Carrancista chiefs, to whom it was at once referred to arrange an armistice as the indispensable foundation for a satisfactory agreement.

There is no reason to believe that in the trying conditions now experienced by the country the Carrancista group will on this occasion stubbornly turn a deaf ear to the appeal now made to it; but if so, if it should once more refuse to listen to this call of fraternity and concord, upon that faction will rest the historic responsibility for the prosecution of a fratricidal war at the awe-compelling moment when the fatherland demands as its supreme hope for life that all those who confronted death that it might live prosperous and free, unite.

But whatever may be the outcome of the unification endeavor that has been undertaken and in so far as that end may be reached, the Conventionist Government will invariably aim at establishing the reign of law and restoring Constitutional order by setting up beforehand all those reforms which are the goal of the Revolution, which the Convention examined and proposes, to which the people are entitled and without which stable and organic peace can never be established. * * *

The Conventionist Government does not see, does not wish to see in the substance of the declarations made by His Excellency President Wilson anything more than an advice, a friendly suggestion to induce the contending groups to wipe out their differences and lead them into the path to the end pursued by the Revolution. Coming to the declaration that if we Mexicans can not settle our differences within a very short time the Government of the American Union will find itself constrained to decide as to what means it shall use to bring it about, the Conventionist Government can not understand how President Wilson previously declares in the same note that the United States does not desire or claim any right to settle the affairs of Mexico; and more to the same effect. The same chief of the American nation made at Indianapolis the following categorical declarations:

"I am proud to belong to a powerful nation which says that country Mexico which we could crush will enjoy the same liberty in the management of its affairs as we enjoy. If I am strong I should be ashamed to dictate to the weak in the measure of my strength. My pride consists in keeping my strength free and not in oppressing another people with it."

If, contrary to the interpretation which in the most friendly sense the Conventionist Government puts upon President Wilson's declarations, this closing part should signify a denial of the instinctive sympathy generously demonstrated to the Mexican Revolution and should further signify pressure or threat, the Conventionist Government, still harboring the consciousness of its sacrifice, will maintain the dignity of the Mexican people. We continue, however, to conjecture that the general idea of the Government of the United States is to help us in a friendly way to bring to an end our fratricidal struggle which would be for the greatest good of the country. The Government is ready to bring about by all means consistent with its dignity the fusion of all the contending groups, to initiate all the economic, political and social reforms aimed at by the Revolution and to establish a strong stable Government with which all tendencies and all legitimate interests will find the fullest favor and enjoy the guaranties which our fundamental law provides; and this course, which will invariably govern its acts, will be the fullest justification of the conduct of the Conventionist Government, in the hope that it will be duly appreciated by all the Governments with which it cultivates friendly relations.

FRANCISCO LAGOS CHÁZARO.

JUNE 14, 1915.

In compliance with the express order of the Sovereign Revolutionist Convention, I express to you the cordial thanks of this Honorable Assembly for the good offices tending to find a worthy solution of the present conflict

I renew to you for my part my most distinguished consideration and special regard.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, June 17, 1915—6 p. m.

650. One of the most influential members of the Convention gave me following information: General Pablo Gonzalez refused all proposals for armistice and his forces are quietly approaching the city; the Convention forces are not disposed to evacuate and will resist to the utmost going so far as to fight if necessary in the streets of the city with great danger to foreigners and non-combatants and even with personal danger from mob and soldiers outrages. Conventionists, besides denouncing Carranza for his intransigency, also blame the Government of the United States for not arranging an armistice in the course of which the situation could be calmly discussed and probably a satisfactory settlement reached as the result of which not only bloodshed and great danger to innocent could be avoided but perhaps the long sought for peace could be secured. On this account situation can be regarded as more dangerous than ever as, if the Convention should have to evacuate after the fight, they will carry out their threats of cutting water supply, light and power, prevent by siege the coming in of all supplies, now very scarce, and finally cut out the cable and telegraph service, which will entirely isolate this city from the world.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 18, 1915—7 p. m.

When an early opportunity permits, please say to General Carranza casually and in an unofficial and personal way that the Government of the United States is watching with the greatest earnestness for indications that the leaders of the principal factions in Mexico are assuming a conciliatory attitude toward each other with the view to finding in the near future some common basis for an understanding which will result in peace, order and reconstruction in the strife-ridden Republic. Emphasize determination of United States to adopt such measures as may be expedient to preserve Mexico for herself and the world. Intimate cautiously that it is within the possibilities to this end that the United States might recognize

General Carranza in view of the way in which things appear to be shaping themselves—at any rate the possibility of such recognition is not excluded by the policy of this Government—but that if General Carranza does not go the full length of conciliation and conference with all the principal factions, with the aim of adjusting differences and restoring peaceful conditions which the opinion of the whole world demands, the situation thus created may prevent the possible consideration of recognizing General Carranza, who need not in that event expect the Government to consider that course, much less adopt it. Impress upon him the utmost interest which the United States Government and the people generally throughout this country have in the early termination of personal jealousies and factional quarrels. They hope for and expect a unity of purpose on the part of the leaders to sink personal pride and aggrandizement and patriotically unite in an effort to rescue the Republic from the present conditions, which are causing poverty and famine at home and discrediting the Mexican people throughout the world. If the leaders are inspired with these motives the United States is hopeful that a new state of affairs may result, which will pave the way for sympathetic understanding and mutual confidence between the two great neighboring Republics. In this view General Carranza cannot overlook the advantage and possible duty of not insisting upon the establishment of his own dominion over Mexico until he has exhausted all reasonable means to unite the contending parties in a common movement which will bring peace and order to the entire Republic.

In your conversation with General Carranza mention that while the Buford was unloading 60,000 pounds of corn and beans consigned to the Consulate for charitable distribution to relieve famine conditions, and while meat, corn and other provisions are becoming more scarce in Vera Cruz, the Ward steamer Mexico loaded roughly 100,000 pounds of beans for export to New York. Such occurrences, presumably with the sanction of Carranza authorities, have had wide circulation in the United States, as well as similar acts by factional authorities in the north, and are producing an extremely bad impression as to the motives of leaders who allow such practices when it is well known that the food supply of Mexico is at the famine point and that the President of the United States has been under the necessity of appealing to the American people for assistance to satisfy the starving in Mexico. Such exportations ought to be stopped at once. The true situation in this respect is a fact which ought to be admitted, regardless of the question as to who is responsible for bringing it about, and which can be met by cooperation in relieving an appalling lack of the necessaries of life.

Brazilian Minister reports Gonzalez has rejected all overtures from Mexico City authorities looking toward peaceful entry into capital. His attitude aggravates already serious situation. Urge upon Carranza immediately that he order Gonzalez use great discretion in entering city to avoid killing pacificos and particularly to save foreign lives and property. Advices from Mexico City state owing to Gonzalez's intransigent attitude there is likely to be much bloodshed and great disorder. This Government is much concerned and keenly desirous that every consideration be given interest of city and its large foreign and pacific element. VERA CRUZ, June 22, 1915—5 p. m.

Department's June 18, 7 p. m. Situation discussed with Carranza at noon yesterday. He began by reading paragraph from his own proclamation exhorting factions to submission. He was asked if he could go beyond this and invite leaders to conference to discuss differences with a view to agreement if submission could not be obtained. He replied that under no circumstances would he treat with Villa; that there was no expediency that could induce him to make any offer whatever; Villa and his associates must submit to military trial or leave the country. He appeared somewhat perplexed that the Government of the United States should be concerned for adjustment, conciliation common basis since any revolutionary Government established upon such theories would inevitably and necessarily soon be found to be disappointing, ineffective and fruitless. The intimation of possible recognition did not in the least affect his impassive face. He did not want recognition conditioned on conciliation. The determination of the United States to adopt any other measures than the recognition and support of the Constitutionalist cause would be a regrettable injustice and great calamity for two friendly nations. If the Government of the United States will maintain neutral attitude the Constitutionalist cause will subdue the opposition and win recognition. Late yesterday evening a memorandum was sent for transmission of which the following is a summary:

First. The Constitutionlists cannot unite with the factions represented by the rebel chiefs, Villa and Zapata. History furnishes no example in any age or any country of civil war terminating by the union of the contending parties. One or the other must triumph.

Second. There is a fundamental reason for the present structure; it is not a question as to personalism. Villa represents the reactionary tendency which, without having achieved the ideals of the revolution, reserves for some future time the reformation of the laws. On the other hand the Constitutionlists represent the revolutionary tendency which proposes to obtain the reforms needed by the people prior to the establishment of constitutional order. Any combination of the two will produce only a temporary peace which could only result in new conflict.

Third. The most practical and quickest way to stop the civil war in Mexico is the triumph of that party which best represents the desire of the people, which is best in its morale and in its administrative organization. That party is the Constitutionalist party and through its recent victories its final triumph is sure. Therefore, the other revolutionists should submit, disarming their forces.

Fourth. Proper amnesty will be decreed at the proper time. All those who take advantage of it yielding their arms and the exiles being permitted to return to work and not to strife.

VERA CRUZ, June 30, 1915.

The Special Representative of the United States:

I have the honor to refer to your notes relating to telegrams sent to you by the State Department in regard to the protection of the interests and lives of foreigners.

In reply, I must state to you that it is a well known principle of international jurisprudence that every foreigner who leaves his own country to settle in another and create interests there ipso facto accepts both the good and the bad fortune of the country in which he has settled; notwithstanding this, no complaint or claim has ever been answered by an excuse based on this principle; on the contrary, the Commander in Chief, being anxious to preserve good order and enforce a respect for the law, has afforded guaranties to all foreigners and in particular to the Americans who, to tell the truth, have had the least ground of all for complaint.

If this were a normal period of our existence it would indeed be unusual for the facilities afforded by the Department of Foreign Affairs to the complainants not to yield a prompt remedy for the evils sought to be prevented; but, as the United States, the State Department and you very well know, we are engaged in a struggle for the establishment of a free Government and the necessities of the campaign have made it difficult for us to take care of small settlements and isolated ranches, owing to the large numbers of troops that have been required to fight the reactionaries, although even this has not caused any of the places for which protection was asked to be left unguarded.

I avail myself of this opportunity to state to you also that this Department has in turn observed with not a little surprise the unbecoming tone of the telegrams of the State Department which have called forth this reply; for so far from reconciling the common interest of the two Republics by bringing about as soon as possible a complete understanding, a better will and a closer relation of interests, the spirit of the messages appears very foreign to the harmony and good will which ought to exist between the two Governments. Of course, in making this remark to you I do so for the purpose of requesting you to make it known to the State Department in the manner which you deem most suitable, in order that our intention to honor these claims as far as they are just may be given the natural consideration due us, inasmuch as the Chief Magistrate is disposed to prevent any injury if unfortunately, owing to the struggle in which we are engaged, such may occur to foreigners, and to remedy it as far as the claim is just and reasonable.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico, July 4—7 p. m.

662. I beg to send you translation of the following letter just received from the French Minister, Dean of Diplomatic Corps:

MY DEAR COLLEAGUE: AS you know, at a meeting of the Diplomatic Corps held in my house yesterday, General Serratos, late Minister of War, who came as an interpreter of the views of the Conventionist Government, made before us some statements which are condensed as follows:

1. The feeling is growing among the people and the army that the Washington Government is openly in favor of Carranza; to him arms and ammunition are coming from the United States; to the Conventionists a few medicines are sent by the American Red Cross.

2. If the prolongation of the fight leads to another evacuation of the capital, the Government, owing to the excitement of the public mind, would assume no responsibility for the violences which may be committed in Mexico City and elsewhere either by mobs and [or?] the lawlessness of the soldiery, as [and?] in the midst of such chaos there would be scarcely any discrimination between Americans and other foreigners.

3. The Government of the Convention has given the best proof of its desire to reach an understanding with the enemy in order to promote an armistice between the factions which it is considered that even now would lead to the designation by the military chiefs of a Provisional President even should he be Carranza himself.

4. The intransigent and cutting way in which Carranza received the two peace commissions sent to him by the Convention throws upon him and upon the United States the responsibility of the consequences which will eventually arise from the prolongation of hostilities.

In the tragic crisis through which the Mexican nation is going such statements are of the highest significance. In the name of my colleagues and in conformity with our agreement I address you the above asking that you kindly transmit it to the White House with our wishes that every attempt be made in order to obtain the reestablishment of the peace so strongly wanted by the country and to avoid still greater calamities.

808. Your 662, July 4, 7 p. m. While regretting conclusions of Conventionist Government, Department must disclaim any responsibility for interpretation put upon this Government's acts by the Conventionists or for consequences intimated by General Serratos. The control of ports by factions regulates facility for importing arms. This Government favors no faction in this respect or otherwise. On June 18 Department telegraphed Silliman to say to General Carranza in part:

Say to General Carranza that the Government of the United States is watching with the greatest earnestness for indications that the leaders of the principal factions in Mexico are assuming a conciliatory attitude toward each other with the view to finding in the near future some common basis for an understanding which will result in peace, order and reconstruction in the strife-ridden Republic. In this view General Carranza cannot overlook the advantage and possible duty in not insisting upon the establishment of his own dominion over Mexico until he has exhausted all reasonable means to unite the contending parties in a common movement which will bring peace and order to the entire Republic.

On June 22 Silliman telegraphed in substance that, having taken up the matter, Carranza read him his proclamation exhorting all factions to submission, stating that under no circumstances would he treat with Villa; that the Constitutionalist could not consider treating with the rebel chiefs Zapata and Villa; that it is not a question of personalism, and that Villa and his associates must submit to military trial or leave the country.

In view of this inflexible attitude of General Carranza a situation of the gravest nature is forced upon this Government, prompted as it is by feelings of deep friendship for the Mexican people. This Government has used its best offices to bring about a peaceful solution of difficulties afflicting the Mexican people, but its efforts have not always been met with a spirit of cooperation by the Mexicans themselves, whom it has desired to serve.

You might use your judgment in obtaining from the authorities in Mexico City a statement of their opinion after they have full knowledge of these facts.

SIR: Immediately after I had the honor of having a conference with your excellency on July 7, I sent the following cablegram to Guatemala:

TO THE PRESIDENT OF GUATEMALA:

Secretary Lansing called me this afternoon to inform me that President Wilson has authorized him to invite the Ambassadors of Brazil, Chile and Argentina and the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala to confer informally with the Secretary of State as to when it would be opportune to recognize in Mexico, and in what form moral support should be given to, some party there in order to establish it. I said to his excellency that as Guatemala always seconds the United States with the greatest pleasure and earnest desire and both countries being Mexico's closest neighbors, I therefore was completely at his excellency's disposal and that I would greatly appreciate his advice while I cabled to you, who always receive all American initiative with the highest pleasure.

JOAQUIN MÉNDEZ.

The President of Guatemala was good enough to answer my cablegram last night, in the following manner:

You acted right. Accept the initiative absolutely and place yourself completely at the disposal of what the American Government may resolve. Undoubtedly one of the means which could be used would be to help quickly and effectively one of the different parties or one of their leaders recognizing their belligerence and placing it in a position to obtain arms and ammunition. Please let me know what is resolved as I am deeply interested.

Hoping to hear from your excellency at your excellency's convenience, I beg to state that it will afford me great pleasure to be of any service to your excellency in this case and in any other as far as it may be possible.

I have to inform you that after a prolonged resistance as far as their ammunition permitted them to make the Conventionists evacuated the city; and that, heeding the strong and continuous appeals of myself and the leading diplomatic colleagues not to carry out their threats of fighting in the streets, vengeance upon foreigners, etc., which would have hurt them for any future agreement, they have retired very quickly. Carrancists are this morning peacefully occupying the city and newspapers published a proclamation from Pablo Gonzalez and a decree of amnesty which will greatly contribute to calm spirits and preserve order.

I was informed that banks and stores will remain closed until a decision is reached as to the circulation of paper money. Water has been cut.

I have the pleasure to inform you that after several days of fighting, the City of Mexico was occupied yesterday by our forces, under the command of Major General Pablo Gonzalez, Chief Commander of the Eastern Corps of the Constitutionalist Army. BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, July 18, 1915—9 a. m.

677. Rather surprisingly, General Gonzalez and his forces, including the civil and military authorities lately appointed by him, have again evacuated the city and its surroundings. City Council has again assumed local government and appointed new chief of police. Mexican Herald says that 6,000 men were left here to maintain order, which seems not to be true. The pretext given in the press for leaving is the necessity of retaking Pachuca to prevent the union with the Zapatists of a column coming from the north to help them.

Gonzalez has advised as follows:

In view of the fact that the enemy recently expelled from this city has been committing outrages which cause uneasiness to its inhabitants, and wishing to find a remedy for such evils, I have decided to leave this city for a few days and go out personally to combat the enemy. In the meantime civil and military authority as well as sufficient garrison are left in the city and surroundings in order to afford proper protection to the people.

PAUL GONZALEZ.

Be that as it may, the truth is that we are every day further away from the end of our troubles and sufferings. Railway traffic with Vera Cruz is larger [sic] since yesterday and probably the cable will suffer the same fate again. Now the money question is worse than ever because no money is accepted by anybody and the conditions of life become really impossible. From all this and what you perfectly know besides, you may see that nothing good is to be expected. I really consider the situation hopeless in the true sense of the word.

678. My 677. Contrary to the official communication of General Gonzales the evacuation has been complete and the city left at the mercy of the first passing band. Zapatistas occupied city yesterday afternoon, appointed today some authorities and are therefore again in full power of the city. Happily they behaved well up to now but the whole situation remains as hopeless as before. It is expected President Cházaro and Conventionist Government will return soon, pending the next (seventh) evacuation.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, July 22, 1915—4 p. m.

683. I regret to inform you that the situation is growing worse every minute because, contrary to what was expected, President

Cházaro and his Government remained at Toluca leaving the city in the grasp of the band of Zapatistas which took possession of it after the evacuation. They are now indulging in violence, such as yesterday to have deposed and imprisoned all the members of the City Council. Last night they took possession of the Mexican Herald, an American property, and detained all its employees in the same building including its president, Mr. Paul Hudson; they used the machinery and supplies to publish their own paper, El Renovador. I immediately took every step to obtain the release of the Americans and the disoccupation of the offices but the Secretary of the Governor of the district, the only appropriate authority then available, answered that he had nothing to do with me or the American Government. I sent a telegram to President Cházaro at Toluca who answered immediately regretting the incident and stating that he had at once sent the necessary orders as desired. Up to now such orders have been quite disregarded and matters are in the same state as yesterday. This morning I sent a copy of Cházaro's message to the Governor and he answered that he could not execute it because he received orders from the Minister of the Interior to do what he had done. I am now trying to communicate again with Cházaro but with little hope of success because I anticipate that notwithstanding his excellent disposition his orders will not be obeyed.

In the midst of such chaos I confess my inability, which is likewise true of my colleagues, to obtain redress for any wrongs against our nationals, the more so when it seems that such wrongs are deliberately committed in order to create friction with foreign governments and especially the United States.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, July 25—11 a. m.

690. I have been requested to transmit to you the following message:

The American and other foreign residents of Mexico City are seriously alarmed by the recently increased disregard of troops and officials of this city for the lives and rights of peaceful residents irrespective of their nationality or position.

The acting Zapatista officials summoned the bankers of the city today and demanded the sum of 500,000 pesos on the ground that this amount must be supplied at once to prevent looting by their penniless and hungry troops. Later these officials secured 300,000 pesos from a government institution which had been previously overlooked and without reference to their demand on the bankers to 200,000. The latter promised them 60,000 pesos and the matter is in suspense. The dangers of looting are very grave; food supplies are nearly exhausted and unobtainable even by persons having money as nothing coming into the city. The violations of property rights are daily becoming more flagrant. Within the past 24 hours an American, a son of the Chargé d'Affaires of Chile, a Swiss citizen and Spaniard traveling in an automobile flying the United States flag and bearing despatches from an official representative of the United States were stopped by soldiers, the despatches and the flag torn into bits and the Spaniard taken away for execution.

For the past three days the American owner of the Mexican Herald, members of his family have been held prisoners on no specified charge and the repeated efforts made by the Brazilian Minister representing American interests here have been contemptuously disregarded.

The Herald, which is the only daily paper published in English here, was suppressed by the so-called authorities and its plant is being used to print El Renovador, their newspaper and political organ.

Daily recurring incidents demonstrate that the lives of men, women and children whom circumstances may place in position to thwart the caprices of the armed savages who terrify this city and its environs are in ever-increasing jeopardy. There is no recognized authority, nothing which by the extreme of courtesy may be called a government. The action taken against the Mexican Herald and its American owners is in open defiance of explicit orders from their own [omission] President, Lagos Cházaro, who unfortunately is in Toluca and to whom numerous appeals for protection have been made. We have appealed repeatedly to the Government for the protection which we feel to be our due and we again ask that effective and immediate measures be taken to afford us that protection.

It is certain that the representations so far made by the Washington Government to the factional leaders in Mexico have served only to increase their manifest contempt for that Government and to incite them to greater outrages against the foreign residents in Mexico.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF MEXICO,
J. D. HELM, Secretary.

The foregoing communication is unanimously indorsed for the truth of its statements by the International Committee of Mexico.

Villa's conduct and the demoralization of his organization (my various recent reports) which is merely the death struggle of his collapse, I think exclude the Villistas as a permanent factor. Yet they are a temporary menace to their own people, to foreign rights, and as possible tools for Huertistas.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, July 29, 1915—4 p. m.

692. I have been requested to transmit to you the following message:

The following was unanimously adopted in special meeting at Mexico City by the board of the American Society of Mexico on July 28, to be sent by any route possible to the State Department at Washington and to the press and people of the United States:

The American residents appeal once more to their Government and people in behalf of the suffering millions of pacific men, women and children in this country who are victims of hunger, cruelty and violence. These conditions put the gravest and most urgent responsibility upon the United States which not only has passively permitted them but has promoted them with arms and ammunition and by encouragement to political adventurers who have prostituted the name of liberty and the cause of human rights.

Americans and other foreigners stand aghast and wonder whether they can be living in the twentieth century and in a country bordering on the United States, which has made itself responsible to the world for protection of life and property here and yet does nothing more than send repeated warnings that are derided by half-savage men drunk with ill-gotten power and the spirit of graft and hate.

For many months the Americans here, driven almost to desperation, have tried to bring their Government to a realization of the awful situation and begged that the American people be informed. Their request, long denied, was finally conceded in part by the President in his own statement of June 2, reciting briefly the conditions in Mexico. These conditions, then hardly endurable, are much worse now and the apparent inactivity of the Government at Washington fills Mexico with despair.

There is not even a semblance of Government here at the capital and we are living on a smouldering volcano. The entire city council has been imprisoned without cause.

³¹ Similar communications were made to the Ambassadors of Argentina and Chile and the Ministers of Bolivia, Guatemala, and Uruguay. See the Guatemalan Minister's letter of July 10 and the accompanying notes.

³² Similar acceptances received from the other diplomatic representatives.

³³ Refers to the Secretary's message to him dated July 26.

We have seen three changes of armed government in thirty days. There is no communication with the world except by special messenger. Last week an American messenger was seized a few hours out of this city; the American flag torn to bits and an official mail packet from Vera Cruz for the Brazilian Minister in charge of American interests was rifled and destroyed by Emiliano Zapata in person. The son of the Chilean Minister, and attaché of the Legation in the party, was robbed and stripped. A wealthy and cultured Mexican, mistaken for a Spaniard, was bound and dragged for fiendish sport until nearly dead, then carried off to be shot. Two street cars were stopped in the city yesterday by soldiers and the passengers robbed of valuables and clothing and otherwise abused. These are only examples.

Unworthy Americans like Charles A. Douglas, Henry Allen Tupper and certain correspondents in the pay of Carranza try to convince the world that Mexico is not hungry and Red Cross work not needed, thus seeking to give the lie to thousands of their fellow countrymen in Mexico, including Mr. O'Connor, special agent sent here by the American Red Cross.

The suffering from hunger here and elsewhere has become appalling and the number of deaths from that cause, reported as ten to twelve daily in this city, is increasing rapidly. Mr. O'Connor has been here one month and has not yet succeeded in bringing a pound of food into the capital or to receive even a message from Washington regarding the work.

He has been requested by the International Committee not to try to purchase any of the little remaining foodstuffs in the city because that would raise still higher the present fabulous prices. He has bought here seventy-five tons of chick peas and some meat for making soup. That will last a very short time and unless relief comes meanwhile the Red Cross must suspend its efforts and close the headquarters almost before it has begun. There is no [omission] for the hungry babies of the poor. Hunger affects not only the poor but also the middle classes and those who were wealthy a year or two ago. The International Relief Committee with great difficulty secured an empty train and started it one hundred miles north a month ago to bring corn that was bought last March but which the committee has not been able to move. A Villa Conventionist commander would not allow the train to reach its destination. The [omission] of the committee finally gathered five carloads of food and arrived two days ago within forty miles of this city, when they were turned back by soldiers with the information that no one could bring food into the capital, although this was to be given free of charge by the foreigners to the starving Mexicans. Carranza, since he went to Vera Cruz eight months ago, has never sent nor permitted food to come to the capital from his territory. Nothing can be done except by bribery. It is the general belief the food supplies can not be brought in quantity into the city unless protected.

The Mexican Herald, the only English periodical left, was seized and suppressed last week by the pretended authorities here in contemptuous defiance of protests by the Brazilian Minister. The real reason for the seizure was made plain when the confiscators took possession of the Herald building and issued their own official organ there, using the Herald's plant; also paper and materials to the value of more than 30,000 pesos.

One of the largest stores in the city was burned last night. The fire engines failed to arrive in time because the outgoing troops had taken all the horses of the fire department. The Mexican paper peso, worth approximately fifty cents American money two years ago, is now worth less than five cents, and the Mexican finds it much harder to get that peso now than two years ago. Under such conditions and with food supplies practically exhausted the suffering can be imagined.

A messenger from El Oro brings reports that the soldiers have seized all the corn there and that dog meat is being sold in the streets. The few reports coming from outside the city nearly all show the same condition of distress.

If something is not done by the United States or other foreign governments to open communications, supply food, and stop the killing of men, outraging of women and destruction of property, there will be still graver complications for the world to settle in Mexico. The breaking point has been reached and foreigners who have long counselled self-restraint are becoming desperate because of what they see around them and what they suffer themselves.

CARDOSO DE OLIVEIRA.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, July 29—6 p. m.

693. I beg to inform you that on July 25, dominated by the fear of some approaching forces which afterwards proved to be Villistas, the Zapatistas again evacuated the city, including therefore the building of the Mexican Herald. Foreseeing their return, which occurred immediately, I caused the American seals to be placed on the building, Mr. Hudson its director remaining inside at his own request. Things are in such a state that publication of the paper is suspended notwithstanding the assurances and orders of President Cházaro and his Minister Quevedo. The Conventionist Government remains at Toluca and Cházaro fails to reply to my last communication relative to the Herald.

In addition I have been confidentially and very reliably informed that the Zapatistas are planning to make a search of the Legation for arms and food supplies which they suppose exist here in large quantities. As to arms there are a few in deposit belonging to Americans who had to turn them over to the Legation by virtue of previous decrees of all factions. As to food, we have nothing. All this and the horrible lack of effective authority, guaranties and food in the city cause great suffering and extreme irritation to every one including foreigners especially Americans even against me as if I were responsible, as they hold the United States for what is happening. It is really an unbearable situation for all. It is impossible to foresee what may happen shortly unless immediate steps are taken for the renewal of telegraphic and rail communication and the solution of this dreadful state of affairs.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,
Mexico City, July 30—noon.

694. For the past five days the city has been evacuated and reoccupied by Zapatistas three times. As soon as a small group of Constitutionalists approach, they run away in the most disorderly manner amidst unexpected and unnecessary shooting in the streets, which has caused the death and wounding of many noncombatants including the Secretary of the District Government who was killed yesterday. Looting in the suburbs has also been committed. The food situation is growing worse every hour and transportation and communication by mail or telegraph is nil. The so-called Government of the Convention continues Toluca, entirely inactive, unable to have orders obeyed in the city. Danger and hopelessness are proper words to sum up all that could be said.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,

699. Cable just opened. After some days of fighting in the streets which caused the death of several noncombatants, among whom was a British subject, the Carrancistas under General Pablo Gonzalez have again occupied the city. Gonzalez repeated the assurances of guaranties given in his previous manifesto but the situation remains unchanged for the moment on account of the lack of food and the restrictions put upon the circulation of Conventionalist currency. A decree has been published today ordering all inhabitants of Mexico City to deliver their arms and ammunition within five days under penalty of death. I am endeavoring to arrange that Americans be allowed to retain their arms as before.

701. My 699, August 3, 6 p. m. Last night I received a letter from General Gonzalez stating that in consideration of my request American citizens would be exempt from the order to deliver their arms and ammunition.

This morning I also received a visit from intimate friend of General Gonzales who came to say that Gonzalez was bringing several carloads of provisions to relieve the situation in the city and that he desired me to know that he came with the best disposition towards the inhabitants of the city and wished to prevent any violence or confiscations of persons or property.

The city is very quiet but nothing has been done to relieve the money question and as the only money available is the Villista and this is refused in all transactions, more suffering is added to the poor and middle classes for whom life is a true problem.

Your telegram of yesterday. Do not remember just now the details of your proposals to the White House Government, but our desire is that the country return as soon as possible to its normal life; that a legal government born of the popular will may be established; that the courts of the Republic may work regularly and free from all coercion; that the land be distributed; that the condition of workingmen be improved; that a lasting peace, which may guarantee the welfare and property of Mexico, be procured; that Carranza may not reach the executive office of the Nation only because of his personal ambition, but that the person to be elevated to that office be freely selected and appointed by the Mexican people.

We ourselves have not and do not request a peace conference from our enemy, but we do not oppose any peace parleys; on the contrary, we are willing to make all kinds of efforts and sacrifices in order to stop, in the shortest possible time, the calamities of war and thereby restore peace to the country. As a proof of this we point out the prompt action with which we met the friendly suggestions made some time ago by President Wilson to the principal factional leaders now under arms in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, August 10, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY: Upon the announcement of the conferences which were to be held between your excellency, as Secretary of State of the American Government, and the representatives of the Republics of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala, my natural impression was that their object would be to examine the Mexican situation from the standpoint of international law, in order to appraise the respective weight and attitude of the contending parties and factions, with a view to granting recognition to the one which should fulfill the requirements and conditions prescribed by international practice in such cases; but the insistency with which the press has been reporting that these conferences were for the purpose of adopting and had even already adopted a plan of pacification in Mexico, and the declarations which the daily newspapers ascribe to your excellency, have caused just alarm to the Constitutionalist Government, presided over by Mr. Carranza, who instructs me to tell your excellency that although he is not aware of the exact nature of these conferences, he has heard that Mexican affairs are discussed therein with the idea of determining a mode of settling them.

Mr. Carranza and the persons cooperating with him are thoroughly convinced that if the American Government were acquainted with the real Mexican situation it would realize that the only possible, just and acceptable solution would be to allow the revolution to take its natural course until the complete triumph of the party which represents the greatest needs and popularity.

The Constitutionalist Government, as represented by Mr. Carranza, refrains from expressing any opinion with regard to the conferences being held, for it does not know their character or the conclusions reached in them, and because it does not wish to furnish a pretext for the supposition that it tacitly consents to them; but at the same time it deems it its duty to make expressly known to the ⁵³ The same to the other conferees.

American Government the displeasure with which the Mexican Government and people would look upon any act which might have the effect or tend to frustrate the triumph, already practically attained, over the hostile reactionary factions by the Constitutionalist Army, which represents the ideals and hopes of the Mexican people.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 13, 1915—6 p. m.

You are instructed to translate and immediately deliver the following message to General Emiliano Zapata and to all other prominent military and civil authorities that you can possibly reach in central and southern Mexico whom our consuls may not be able to reach.

A communication, made severally and independently, to all prominent civil and military authorities in Mexico, from the Secretary of State and the diplomatic representatives at Washington of Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 11, 1915.

The undersigned, the Secretary of State of the United States, the Ambassadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Brazil, Chile, and Argentina, and the Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary of Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala, accredited to the Government of the United States of America, acting severally and independently, unanimously send to you the following communication:

Inspired by the most sincere spirit of American fraternity, and convinced that they rightly interpret the earnest wish of the entire Continent, have met informally at the suggestion of the Secretary of State of the United States to consider the Mexican situation and to ascertain whether their friendly and disinterested help could be successfully employed to reestablish peace and constitutional order in our sister Republic.

In the heat of the frightful struggle which for so long has steeped in blood the Mexican soil, doubtless all may well have lost sight of the dissolving effects of the strife upon the most vital conditions of the national existence, not only upon the life and liberty of the inhabitants, but on the prestige and security of the country. We can not doubt, however—no one can doubt—that in the presence of a sympathetic appeal from their brothers of America, recalling to them these disastrous effects, asking them to save their mother land from an abyss—no one can doubt, we repeat—that the patriotism of the men who lead or aid in any way the bloody strife will not remain unmoved; no one can doubt that each and every one of them, measuring in his own conscience his share in the responsibilities of past misfortune and looking forward to his share in the glory of the pacification and reconstruction of the country, will respond, nobly and resolutely, to this friendly appeal and give their best efforts to opening the way to some saving action.

We, the undersigned, believe that if the men directing the armed movements in Mexico—whether political or military chiefs—should agree to meet, either in person or by delegates, far from the sound of cannon, and with no other inspiration save the thought of their afflicted land, there to exchange ideas and to determine the fate of the country—from such action would undoubtedly result the strong and unyielding agreement requisite to the creation of a provisional government, which should adopt the first steps necessary to the constitutional reconstruction of the country—and to issue the first and most essential of them all, the immediate call to general elections.

An adequate place within the Mexican frontiers, which for the purpose might be neutralized, should serve as the seat of the conference; and in order to bring about a conference of this nature the undersigned, or any of them, will willingly, upon invitation, act as intermediaries to arrange the time, place, and other details of such conference, if this action can in any way aid the Mexican people.

The undersigned expect a reply to this communication within a reasonable time; and consider that such a time would be ten days after the communication is delivered, subject to prorogation for cause.

The undersigned, as well as the Convention Government, feel assured that they possess the power and resources with which to continue the present struggle in defense of the rights of the Mexican people and their institutions until such time as the realization of the high ideals of the Revolution shall guarantee a substantial and stable peace, but in view of the praiseworthy and fraternal attitude of the United States and our sister republics of Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala, and in order that peace in Mexico may become an early and accomplished fact, followed by the restoration of constitutional order, the undersigned, for himself and on behalf of the Convention Government, is disposed to accept, and does cordially accept, the good offices of their excellencies, for the purpose of bringing about a conference of delegates representing the recognized contending factions in Mexico, so as to reach, if possible, a mutually satisfactory agreement, and thereby save, with dignity, the national honor, in the accomplishment of which, be it well understood, the Convention Government will employ every effort to meet the benevolent desires expressed by their excellencies.

It is proper that the undersigned should add, by way of explanation, that all military chiefs and civilian officials affiliated with the Convention Government desire only to witness the reestablishment of a government in Mexico that will bind itself to hold popular elections by which the people may, with absolute freedom, designate their representatives in office regardless of any preference which such chiefs and officials may entertain in favor of any candidate or candidates.

The undersigned having now complied with a most agreeable duty, begs to assure their excellencies of his profound and respectful consideration.

WASHINGTON, August 27, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I had the honor to receive from the Department of State, on the 14th instant, a copy of the circular note dated August 11, severally, independently and unanimously addressed [etc.]

Patriotism dictates that the contending factions should reach a speedy and unselfish solution of their differences through a free exchange of views, putting aside all personalities, vain projects and prejudices.

It is for this reason, with singular satisfaction, that I recognize as most applicable and sound the suggestions and good counsel of your excellency and the ambassadors and ministers, and as far as my modest influence and position permit, I accept without hesitation the tender of good offices in the form mentioned, so that, in a duly neutralized spot within the national frontiers and distant from the armed camps of either faction, a conference between the parties can be held, which I trust may prove fruitful of a happy termination of the present wasteful and unnecessary struggle.

May I ask your excellency to be good enough to convey to their excellencies the Ambassadors of Brazil, Chile and Argentina and the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala each a copy of this communication?

Please accept [etc.]

MEXICO CITY, August 29, 1915.

SIR: With reference to the Department's telegram dated August 13, 6 p. m., in which I was instructed to translate and deliver immediately to General Emiliano Zapata and all other prominent military and civil authorities in central and southern Mexico a note [etc.], I have the honor to inform the Department that I sent copies [etc.].

There are enclosed the formal replies to the note of General Emiliano Zapata, General Francisco Pacheco, General Palafox and Licenciado Eduardo Baz, Governor of the State of Mexico. There is also enclosed the reply of Licenciado Ignacio Borrego, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Conventioneer Government at Toluca, who replies for the President of the Convention, Licenciado Francisco Lagos Cházaro.

General Zapata, in his acknowledgement to me, states, in reference to the information given in the latter part of the Department's telegram above referred to relative to General Villa, that he notes with satisfaction the attitude of General Villa.

General Emiliano Zapata's reply.

EFÉRCITO LIBERTADOR,
GENERAL HEADQUARTERS.

I have had the honor to receive the communication [etc.]

In common with the chiefs under my command, I cordially accept your fraternal mediation for the purpose of finding a basis of agreement between the contending factions in our country.

The Sovereign Revolutionary Convention has called upon the Carrancistas to lay aside all personal feeling and, inspired by the supreme revolutionary ideal, meet with us and our companions of the Division of the North for the purpose of working in common for the aggrandizement of the Mexican nation. But unfortunately our cordial advances have met no response, and this has compelled us to continue the struggle against the wilful group of compatriots who are trying at any cost to impose the personality of a man who, like Don Venustiano Carranza, seeks to become the dictator of the whole revolutionary movement.

Nevertheless we understand that it is our duty to come to terms with the real revolutionaries whenever they withdraw from all allegiance to a First Chief adorned with all the attributes of sovereignty and by his own will alone transformed into a military leader, political director, supreme legislator, and arbiter and guardian of the Revolution.

Therefore since we, and with us all the chiefs composing the Villa-Zapata union, are formally represented in the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention, to the decisions of which we have agreed to conform, I believe that it is this Convention which should participate in the pacifist conferences, in the name and in representation of us all.

I therefore most respectfully decline, in favor of the Convention, the kind invitation that is extended to me, and will have my representative in that body make one of the group of commissioners which it will send to the said conferences.

WAR OFFICE,
Huitztlac, Morelos, August 24, 1915.

I am wholly in favor of holding the conference mentioned, but only on the following bases:

1. The intervention of the representatives of the friendly Nations shall be limited exclusively to arrangements for the conference, without in the least touching our national autonomy.

2. The revolutionary ideals shall be assured of realization.

3. All personal considerations shall be absolutely excluded.

Desiring that this labor may be beneficial to my country, I repeat the assurances of my consideration.

FRAN'CO V. PACHECO.

Reply of the Conventionist Minister of Agriculture, General Manuel Palafox.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

In reply to the note dated at Washington the 11th instant, [etc.], I have the honor to say that I consider sincere the mediation that you offer in the affairs of my country for reestablishing peace and constitutional order, a mediation which I accept, if and when it has for its object nothing prejudicial to the national honor nor to the social principles for which the Mexican people engaged in the war.

Upon the formation of the Villa-Zapata union, it was considered that this union would have as intermediaries or mediators a high body made up of the principal chiefs of both revolutionary parties; and although it was sincerely desired that that body should comprise the principal chiefs of the Carrancista party, this was not realized, on account of the persistent opposition of Mr. Carranza, who endeavored at any cost to intrude his personality at the sacrifice of revolutionary principles in spite of the representations that were earnestly made to him. The high body—to which was given the title of "Sovereign Revolutionary Convention"—is the one that now guides all the acts of the social revolution, and it may now be said that it has unified all the revolutionary elements of both parties and is endeavoring to unify all the sane Carrancista elements.

Therefore I am obliged to decline, in favor of that high body, my representation, in order that that high body itself—taking into consideration the social principles now being defended and the national honor—may participate in the conferences to which you allude, in order to arrive at an agreement that will have for its object the unification of all the revolutionary elements and the establishment of the provisional or preconstitutional government.

Accept [etc.]

Reply of the Conventionist Provisional Governor of the State of Mexico, Gustavo Baz.

FREE AND SOVEREIGN STATE OF MEXICO,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR.

Carefully informed of the note dated at Washington the 11th instant, directed to the military and political chiefs [etc.] I have the honor to say to your excellencies that the writer hereof, as Provisional Governor of the Free and Sovereign State of Mexico—a Federal Unit which, in spite of all the circumstances of war, maintains in working order all its social institutions and in operation its important sources of wealth—sees with positive satisfaction and the greatest gratitude the philanthropic attitude of those American Republics which issue a humanitarian call to the contending parties and offers them their disinterested aid upon the ground of friendship. And the writer hereof believes that it is feasible to obtain the unification of the revolution, provided that the principles animating all the belligerent factions are harmonious; and believes that the factions are divided only by the personal ambitions of certain leaders in control of the policy of their respective parties.

These sentiments permit me to accept, as in fact I do accept, the good offices of the worthy Representatives of the above-mentioned Nations, to the sole end of acting as intermediaries in effecting the arrangements for a meeting, at a suitable place in Mexico, of the militant groups and for the conclusion of a strong and inflexible agreement preliminary to the creation of a provisional government which, without rendering nugatory the aspirations of the Revolution, shall, rather, unify the sentiment of the same and prepare for government under the Constitution.

For these reasons I venture in my turn formally to invite you jointly in the precise terms of our respective notes to arrange for the proposed conferences with the delegations of all the parties, to which conferences I shall have the honor, personally or by duly accredited representative, of participating, and I now offer to respect as neutral territory the place that shall be designated for that purpose.

Accept [etc.]

Reply of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Conventionist Government, Ignacio Borrego.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN RELATIONS.

TOLUCA, STATE OF MEXICO.

The Conventionist Government has carefully studied the note sent by the conduct of Mr. Charles B. Parker, in charge of American interests in Mexico, and I have the honor to send to your excellencies by the same honorable conduct the reply drawn up in accord with the Citizen charged with the Executive Power, Licenciado Francisco Lagos Cházaro, and in keeping with the bases approved by the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention at the special session of the 20th instant.

The Conventionist Government cannot ignore the call made in the name of American fraternity to end the present strife and establish peace and constitutional order.

This Government would abandon its openly unionist attitude, assumed from its beginning and maintained throughout, if on this occasion it should refuse to seek once more a means of solving the present difficulty and conciliating the principles, interests and aspirations of the contending groups.

And precisely because first of all it desires the union of the revolutionary factions, this Government considers that the good offices of the representatives of friendly nations, nearly all of whom have the same origin, speech, beliefs, institutions, interests and ideals as ours, would be of benefit to our country by facilitating a rapprochement between the contending groups and ending a war that threatens to continue indefinitely.

Therefore the Conventionist Government accepts the friendly and disinterested offer made to it, persuaded that neither the national autonomy nor the principles of the Revolution will suffer thereby.

It is with great satisfaction, therefore, that I inform your excellencies that the Conventionist Government agrees to participate, by its duly authorized representatives, at the peace conferences to be celebrated on Mexican soil at a place previously neutralized.

In the latter part of the note which I have the honor to answer it is intimated that your excellencies are disposed to act individually and collectively as intermediaries in arranging the date and other details relating to the conference. The Government emanating from the Convention fully appreciates this suggestion and accepts the disinterested offer made to it, and therefore I have the honor, in its name, formally to invite you jointly to proceed with all the arrangements relative to the conferences.

Acting Consular Agent Robinson, Oaxaca, to the Secretary of State.

VERA CRUZ, September 1, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a statement covering the views and attitude of the State of Oaxaca in relation to the note directed by you and the Plenipotentiaries of the Latin American nations to the armed and contending factions in the Republic of Mexico.

As the State of Oaxaca has been cut off from all mail and telegraphic communication since June 5, no copy of the note was received, and the first intimation of a note having been issued by the Powers was a translation in "El Mexicano" published in Mexico City on August 18 which was received in Oaxaca on the 23d. As I had nothing official to present to the Oaxaca State Government, they could not reply to the note officially; but at the request of Mr. José Inez Dávila, Governor of the State, and of Mr. Guillermo Meixue-riero, Commander of the State Forces, after several conferences with them, the enclosed statement was drawn up and in conformity with their wishes I am transmitting the same to you.

I am [etc.]

CLIFFORD K. ROBINSON.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

Statement by the Government of the Free and Sovereign State of Oaxaca.

In view of the note directed by the Secretary of State of the United States of America and the Plenipotentiaries of the Latin American nations to the chiefs of the armed and contending factions in the Republic of Mexico, it is with justice that attention be called to the State of Oaxaca in order to demonstrate that constitutional order has not been destroyed in all of Mexico, but that there exists one state in which the General Constitution of the Republic of February 5, 1857, still rules and is maintained in most perfect order with legislative, executive and judicial powers working in their normal condition in conformity with the General Constitution and in conformity with the local laws of the State.

The State of Oaxaca not having participated in the armed struggle that has caused such havoc to the Republic, greatly laments the unhappy condition of the country and, not believing it expedient to form a new element or armed nucleus to reestablish order and peace and because it considers it unpatriotic to give birth to a new element of discord and division, has decided that the best manner of serving the country is to try to conserve peace and constitutional order. The Government of the State of Oaxaca has therefore not antagonized anyone and when the Carranza faction tried to remove constitutional order in some of the districts of the State and clearly expressed their intention of dragging Oaxaca into disorder and anarchy, the State of Oaxaca issued by Act of Congress the Decree No. 14 on June 3, 1915, declaring that the State resume its sovereignty and be ruled by the General Constitution of February 5, 1857, the Reform Laws, its local political constitution and other State laws, until such time as peace and constitutional order should be reestablished and a government instituted that would operate in conformity with supreme constitutional precepts. In order to make its sovereignty respected they count on sufficient armed element composed of volunteers from all of the towns; all of the frontiers of the State are garrisoned by forces to repel any invasion and in the capitol and other towns of the Central District of the State there are other forces stationed to assist at any moment, at any point, when it may become necessary to defend the territory of the State.

Should the Powers desire a meeting-place within the Mexican Republic in which to hold the proposed conference, the capital of the State of Oaxaca offers every facility because its Government is not a belligerent faction but is working under constitutional precepts, the reestablishment of which in the rest of the Republic is precisely what is desired by the Powers that are interesting themselves for the peace of Mexico.

As the text of the President's note of June 3 and the note of the Powers directed to the armed factions in Mexico intimated that they desire that the Mexican people themselves should reflect on the disasters of the armed contentions and should proceed to harmonize and settle their own difficulties, supporting a man or group of men who will reestablish order, it would be only justice to take into consideration the correct attitude of the State of Oaxaca and give its representatives a hearing in any arrangements for the reorganization of the Mexican Union.

MEXICO CITY, September 4, 1915—6 p. m.

50. Department's 41, September 3, 5 p. m. General order in Mexico City good but considerable fighting between factional forces in vicinity. There seems to be a good disposition on the part of the higher authorities to afford ample guaranties to foreigners but they cannot always control their men.

Health conditions bad and growing worse. Typhus fever spreading rapidly. Some cases of beriberi. Cause of both is lack of food and sanitation.

Food situation bad. American Red Cross distributing more than 30,000 liters soup daily which does not meet demands.

Merchants are suffering from decree nullifying paper currency previously received by them, also decrees limiting hours of labor.

Railway communication with Vera Cruz uncertain, dangerous, and very unsatisfactory.

Probably 150 Americans have left city since arrival of Gonzalez of which about half were destitute and sent by this office.

The majority of Americans here now are either unable to leave on account of financial conditions or wish to remain by their homes and interests. Very difficult to estimate number here, probably not more than a thousand. Attitude of Americans now remaining seems to be that having endured the situation to this point they would not leave unless ordered to do so peremptorily by the Department, the order being based on important international developments which would jeopardize their safety.

I have no reason to believe that the attitude of American colony is other than one of helpfulness and friendliness toward me and am assured that such is the case.

There is on foot a movement towards the organization of defense leagues among the various important foreign colonies with the exception of the British and a growing idea looking to the concentration of all foreigners for mutual defense in case of international complications or mob rule. Have been requested by leaders American organization to approach diplomatic representatives of the other colonies here with a view to securing their sanction for internment Americans in their concentration camps in case of need but have made no move in that direction. It has been hinted that the underlying purpose of the organizations is one of offense as well as defense but I have no confirmation thereof. In case of international complications probably Americans would be in greatest danger and Spaniards next but I feel that all foreigners would share more or less the same fate. The situation is dangerous for the reason that in case of international complications the so-called authorities would very likely lead or incite mob rule instead of endeavoring to give guaranties to foreigners and other noncombatants.

VERA CRUZ, September 10, 1915.

I am requested to transmit the following:

REPLY OF GENERAL CARRANZA TO THE PAN AMERICAN NOTE.

CASTILLO DE SAN JUAN DE ULLOA, September 10, 1915.

YOUR EXCELLENCIES: Having acquainted Citizen Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power of the Union, with the considerate note⁴¹ in which you say that you signed in your official capacity the note⁴² you sent him under date of August 15 last, inviting him to a conference with the chiefs of the rebel party to consider the Mexican situation and establish peace, he has seen fit to direct me to address your excellencies as I now have the honor to do and say to you in his name that as First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power of the Republic he cannot consent to a discussion of the domestic affairs of the Republic by mediation or on the initiative of any foreign government whatever, since it is the imperative duty of all to respect the sovereignty of the several nations and inasmuch as acceptance of the invitation of your excellencies would deeply affect the independence of the Republic and set a precedent for foreign intervention [intromisión] in the settlement of our internal questions. This consideration alone would suffice to prevent this Government, in the legitimate defense of the sovereignty of the Mexican people and of the other American peoples, from accepting it. But besides this fundamental consideration there are others which I do not wish to pass over; I desire, rather, to bring to your minds the intimate conviction that the action of the First Chief in charge of the Executive Power in adopting this course is prompted solely by the highest duties laid upon him by his high office. I am sure that your excellencies do not doubt that Mexico is now stirred by a genuine revolution, which aims at doing away with the last vestiges of colonial times as well as with all errors and excesses of past administrations, and satisfying the noble yearning of the Mexican people for well-being and improvement. In the course of our civil strife the aspirations of our people have been refined and clarified, our men have made themselves known, and, under the guidance of the most pressing needs of the nation, the First Chief has proclaimed a complete program of reforms, which has served as the foundation of a new social organization that has begun to take root and of the constitutional government hereafter to be established.

⁴¹ See the telegram of September 3 to Mr. Silliman.

On the other hand, your excellencies may have noticed, from the replies made to your note addressed to the civil and military chiefs under the First Chieftainship, that the First Chief is the only authority that could and does pass upon the question that was submitted to the consideration of those who gave in their answers eloquent examples of discipline and solidarity and striking evidence of the First Chief's ability to maintain unity in the Constitutionalist Government in the face of a protracted struggle and the ignoble and persistent intrigues of our enemies with the object of relaxing discipline in the Constitutionalist Army and corrupting its leading commanders. On the First Chief, therefore, rests the immense responsibility of realizing the national aspirations; and he cannot, through a compromise [transacción], endanger the fatherland nor permit the enemies of the cause he represents to take direct part in the government. Neither does he deem it just or wise to let the blood spilt on the soil of the Republic go to waste by entering the path which your excellencies courteously and disinterestedly show to him but which, from the teachings of our experience, he believes to be wrong.

Started by Don Francisco I. Madero, the Revolution of 1910 could not be carried out because of the compromise [transacción] effected at Ciudad Juarez with the old régime. The treaties there concluded allowed the enemies of the people a footing and formed one of the main causes of the tragic events of February, 1913, which are surely known to your excellencies, and in the contriving of which no small part was taken by several foreign ministers accredited to the Government of Mexico. After the assassination of President Madero and the consummation of one of the most infamous treasons, the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, then Constitutional Governor of the State of Coahuila, took the position he was bound to take under the Constitution. Refusing to recognize General Victoriano Huerta as Chief of the Executive Power and issuing an appeal to the Governors of the other States and commanders of forces to second him in his endeavor to free the people from the ignominious dictatorship of the usurper of the public power, his call was enthusiastically responded to by the people, and long and bloody was the struggle. The Citizen First Chief conquered the usurper, who had at his disposal the largest army the Republic ever had. However, while that conquest was being completed, the reactionaries bribed one of the Constitutionalist generals, Francisco Villa, who made his appearance as chief of a new reactionary movement, availing himself of the powerful forces with which he had been entrusted by the First Chief and mainly aided by those who had supported Huerta the usurper. After the deplorable spectacle of the Aguascalientes Convention and through a renewed fierce struggle the cause of the people again won. The strife is now nearing its end and the reactionary faction, annihilated, is seeking refuge on the northern border, controlling only the State of Chihuahua, a small part of the State of Sonora, and, in the center, the State of Morelos, which the Constitutionalist forces will soon occupy. The First Chief with an army of 150,000 men now dominates the greater part of the national territory and in the vast region under his authority all the departments of public government have been reestablished, all the ways of communication have been repaired, connections have been restored for railway traffic, and in the fields and cities there is a renaissance of the activity and bustle of ordinary life.

I have no doubt that your excellencies will draw from the foregoing statement the conviction that by entering into agreements with the vanquished faction the First Chief would not only relinquish the victory won at the cost of so many sacrifices but also the First Chieftainship of the Constitutional Army and the Executive Power of the nation and thereby foil the faith and confidence reposed in him by the Mexican army and people.

Furthermore, your excellencies must not forget that the yearning of this people for freedom and democracy is entirely legitimate and that nobody has a right to prevent their enjoyment in the not distant future of the fruits of their trying struggle.

In view of the foregoing, the Citizen First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power directs me to say to you, as I now have the honor to do, that he regrets his inability to accept your courteous invitation under the conditions and for the purposes stated therein; but that, imbued with the sincerity and noble desires of the Governments of your excellencies to contribute to the restoration of peace in Mexico (soon to be restored by the forces of the Constitutionalist Government) and by way of responding to the courtesy of your excellencies and in evidence of the harmony and true friendship that must exist among the American Republics, he in his turn has the pleasure of inviting you to join—in person or by a committee appointed from among your excellencies—in a conference with him, which can be held at one of the border towns on the banks of the Rio Grande held by his forces which might be agreed on in advance, for the purpose of discussing Mexican affairs from the international standpoint, with the sole object of determining whether your excellencies consider that the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power, Citizen Venustiano Carranza, exercises a de facto government in the Republic with all the attributes for recognition as such, and, if so, of recommending to your respective Governments that he be recognized in that character.

This would afford a further occasion for drawing closer the relations of friendship between the people and Governments of your excellencies and the Mexican people and Government.

I have the honor [etc.]

The Confidential Agent of the Provisional Government of Mexico to the Department of State.

MEMORANDUM.

The undersigned, Confidential Agent of the Provisional Government of Mexico, has read in the public press what purports to be the reply of Mr. Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Forces, addressed by him on the 10th instant to the Secretary of State of the United States, the Ambassadors of Brazil, Chile and Argentina and the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala, in response to their note of August 11 last. The observations made by Mr. Carranza in the above-mentioned communication persuade the undersigned to comment on certain of the statements contained therein, which, by reason of the many personal responsibilities of Mr. Carranza and the trust imposed in him by certain of the military leaders of the revolution, may induce the public to accept those statements as true.

In an ambiguous and unworthy manner, Mr. Carranza accuses those who support the Provisional Government as endeavoring to attack the sovereignty of their country, merely because, in response to a suggestion in harmony with their peaceful desires, they have seen fit to accept a disinterested proposal that the contending factions meet and enter into a conference for the purpose of reaching an accord in respect to existing difficulties in Mexico, brought on through the ambitions of Mr. Carranza himself—a proposal that Mr. Carranza rejects merely because it is in conflict with his desire to continue to govern by means of a dictatorship, with reference to the wise and fundamental laws of the nation providing a proper check against abuses arising out of the unwarranted exercise of power by any one man or any group of men.

In announcing this purpose, Mr. Carranza's acting Minister of Foreign Relations has recourse to the same devices that many times have been announced by his inspired press, namely: that those who have revolted against the national authority, which he pretends to represent, have been aided by the reactionary element now in exile, a statement so flagrant and notoriously false that it is considered unnecessary to seriously deny it. In this connection, however, it may not be improper to allude to the fact that Mr. Carranza himself has not hesitated to receive into his military service many officers of the former Federal Army, which would seem to signify on his part an obsession that all those officers who favor his cause are patriots, while those who fail to join him are traitors—a mental process often identified with the character of those autocrats who endeavor to unite the pretended necessities of the State with their personal ambitions.

Mr. Carranza's gratuitous accusation of rebellion against those who oppose him is as unfortunate as it is inconsistent. He conveniently forgets that the Convention of Aguascalientes, composed of a majority of his own generals who ostentatiously bore the title of "armed citizens," declared him a rebel.

The title of "First Chief," with which he was invested by his own Plan de Guadalupe, became inoperative with the overthrow of Huerta, and the Convention of Aguascalientes recognized that fact. Carranza, consequently, possesses none of the attributes of provisional president, because he was divested of all power by that Convention; furthermore, he has never assumed the title. Under these circumstances, it is difficult to conceive how a state of rebellion against the authority of Mr. Carranza, a mere chief of a faction, can or could exist.

Mr. Carranza does not exercise exclusive control over a single state in the entire Republic, though it is to be admitted that, like the Provisional Government, he enjoys a partial sway in many of them, in some more and in others less, a sway evenly counterbalanced by that of his opponents. Meanwhile, attention is specially invited to the fact that in the states of the south the forces of the Provisional Government have been making steady headway, by the capture and occupation of points of strategic advantage.

It is painful, in a public correspondence of this character, to make accusations against a fellow citizen, but I am compelled by the declarations of Mr. Carranza himself, in support of his obstinate claims of recognition as chief of a de facto government, in reality a dictatorship, to point out that, according to the Carranza theory, it will be necessary for an indefinite period to maintain in Mexico a government opposed to constitutional principles. It is asserted that, during the lapse of lawful order in Mexico, he proposes to bring about the social reforms demanded by the revolution, which would thereafter, as he asserts, be sanctioned, modified or rejected by a constitutional congress. This remarkable idea of initiating provisional reforms sheds a true light on the qualities and vain ideas of Mr. Carranza as a statesman, and on his concepts of constructive administration, all contradictory and inconsistent with his motto of "Constitution and Reforms". This is brought out in bold relief when it is noted that Mr. Carranza declares his intention of disobeying Article 128 of the Constitution, which provides that immediately upon the restoration of peace the Constitution shall be revived in vigor. Thus it would seem that the Carranza faction is composed alone of Constitutionalists who oppose the Constitution.

Were Mr. Carranza and his supporters true Constitutionalists, they would long have accepted and proclaimed Mr. Manuel Vasquez Tagle as legal successor of the late President Madero. Mr. Vasquez Tagle, aside from his constitutional title to office, is eminently fitted to fill the presidency, not only in compliance with the requirements of the law, but because he has remained in dignified retirement and without identification with either of the contending parties. Indeed, I am gratified to add that his character, leaning always towards the side of justice, and possessed, as he is, of absolute respect for the law, would insure those guaranties which ought not to be dependent on personal favoritism. If Mr. Vasquez Tagle is at present residing within territory occupied by the Carranza forces, why is he not recognized and invested with the authority with which the Constitution endows him? This question is not difficult to answer. The Constitutionalist faction is, for the moment, blinded by a temporary success which inspires a complete indifference to all save the military dictatorship which has committed so many depredations wherever it has passed.

As an example of the anti-constitutional attitude of Mr. Carranza, attention is respectfully invited to his pretended exercise of the right of removal of José M. Maytorena and Felipe Riveros, respectively constitutional Governors of Sonora and Sinaloa, the only reason assigned being that they would not unconditionally obey his orders.

Many more accusations could be made against the régime of Mr. Carranza, demonstrating his absolute lack of ability to restore peace as well as law and order, but I prefer to confine myself only to a criticism of the points which he has officially raised in his note.

The Confidential Agency of the Provisional Government to the Secretary of State.

[The following communication was received at the Department of State on Sept. 17, 1915, in an envelope bearing the stamp of the Confidential Agency of the Provisional Government of Mexico.]

Mr. Miguel Diaz Lombardo, Minister of Foreign Affairs at Chihuahua, has wired the Confidential Agency the following self-explanatory communication :

MR. ENRIQUE C. LLORENTE,
Washington, D. C.

Referring to your telegram of the 11th instant. In my opinion Carranza is endeavoring to deliberately mislead the diplomatic representatives of the American republics who have sought to bring about the peace conference.

In the first place, Carranza boasts of an exaggerated patriotism, making it understood that the discreet and friendly suggestions of these distinguished diplomats constitute an offense against our national sovereignty despite the conclusive declarations made by the Governments of Brazil and Argentina. In reality what Carranza desires to do is to avoid any discussion which might reach the public knowledge, which would plainly demonstrate that justice and reason are on our side, proving also that Carranza is lacking in legitimate authority to assume the executive power of the nation, as he has pretended to do and which he still affects to exercise, without physical control.

Carranza omits to say in his note that precisely one year ago, with the object of putting an end to the disorder prevalent in the capital of the Republic, brought on by reason of his own weakness as a ruler, Generals Villa and Obregon proposed to him that, in accordance with articles 5 and 6 of the Plan of Guadalupe, he should assume the Provisional Presidency, appointing a cabinet as required by law, composed of ministers and not of mere subordinates. Furthermore it was proposed that he should reform the judicial problem and call election, inasmuch as the triumph over the reactionary régime was complete, the Federal Army dissolved, and the country in readiness to enter upon a state of peace. Indeed, there was nothing to oppose the restoration of legal order, as referred to in the above-mentioned Plan of Guadalupe. Had Carranza followed that Plan, which serves as a platform for the revolution, and endeavored to establish a constitutional government, the country would have been saved from the present struggle.

Carranza neglects to disclose in his note that the military convention of last year was called by him; that it met in Mexico City; that the Division of the North took no part in the deliberations; and that the Convention decided to transfer its deliberations to the city of Aguascalientes, where it would be joined by the delegates of that Division. Therefore what Carranza calls the "lamentable spectacle of the convention at Aguascalientes" was the result of a decision reached by his own generals, without being influenced by the chiefs of the Division of the North.

Carranza also omits to add that he presented his resignation as First Chief of the Constitutionalist Forces charged with the executive power of the nation, to the convention at Mexico City and afterwards to the Convention at Aguascalientes, expressly recognizing by these acts the sovereignty of the assembly to determine his status as executive.

Carranza also prudently refrains from alluding to the fact that his separation from the executive power which⁴⁴ assumed was resolved with practical unanimity by the⁴⁴ that is to say, by his own generals and governors.

It is plain, therefore, that Carranza⁴⁴ really the rebel, and hence lacks legal⁴⁴ govern the country. In respect to the⁴⁴

Abusing in this manner the benevolent sentiments entertained toward Mexico by the other American republics and their anxiety to see order restored throughout Mexico, Carranza invites their diplomatic representatives to journey to the frontier to meet him to discuss matters of an international nature affecting Mexico and other nations with no other object in reality than to create an impression at home and abroad that his government is a constituted government possessing genuine prestige. His conduct departs from established rules because on every occasion of a faction claiming to be a de facto government having appealed to any nations for recognition, it has sent to the latter an accredited representative as confidential agent or has availed itself of some other intermediaty [sic] to make suitable representations. But never has a faction had the presumption to suggest that the government from whom recognition was sought should itself, or by means of delegates, attend and confer with the faction seeking recognition. The proceeding of Carranza seems, therefore, most extraordinary, and I much doubt that the learned diplomats whom he has addressed will submit to a proposal reversing all rules of procedure, inasmuch as a conference of the character proposed would possess no other object than the recognition of Carranza; indeed, a reference to any other question would be regarded only as premature.

Will the Government of the United States and those of Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala consent to send representatives to an unrecognized faction claiming the attributes of government, whose existence is not based on the slightest semblance of legality and which has no assurances of support by the force of public opinion or by unchallenged military preponderance? I believe not.

M. DIAZ LOMBARDO.

SEPT. 16TH, 1915.

NOTE.—At the meeting of the Conference on September 18 (see next paper) the Conferees had before them, besides Carranza's reply of September 10, and the earlier ones of Villa, Zapata, Llorente, Pacheco, Palafox, Baz and Borrego, and the statement by the Government of Oaxaca (see ante), responses from the following:

Conference on Mexican Affairs, September 18, 1915.

[Stenographic report.]

SECRETARY LANSING. Gentlemen, we have received replies, as you know, from the different chieftains in Mexico. They develop the fact that there are really two factions: one that we may term the Carrancista faction and the other the Conventionist faction, more commonly known as the Villista faction, in which I would include the Zapatistas because they all practically hold the same views in regard to government in Mexico. All the Conventionists have practically accepted the invitation which we sent them. Mr. Carranza's reply has been handed you today, in the original Spanish. Now, Mr. Carranza's answer is a refusal to enter into a Mexican conference, but it indicates a willingness to meet with this Conference in regard to international affairs. I assume that that can only mean the question of recognition at the present time; that is purely an international question based on facts of which we are more or less the judges. I thought we might as well consider Mr. Carranza's answer to us to show that he does not reject the principle of a conference of some sort but does not wish to have a conference with the other Mexican factions. That presents a situation contemplated by the committee who drafted the first and second steps at the last conference, and Mr. Naón has very kindly taken up the matter from the point of view of the committee and I think he has a resolution prepared to meet the present situation.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. In case they do not accept our invitation we have decided to follow the policy of recognizing any provisional revolutionary government possible to guarantee the security of life and property both of nationals and foreigners. Now, a great number of answers do not agree to the idea of a conference for the constitution of a government—for the agreement of all the factions.

* Accepts as Conventionist, without referring the matter to Villa.

Then the first possibility that we have supposed is put aside and made impossible because of a lack of agreement on the part of a great number of those persons to whom the invitation was addressed. Then it seems to me that, logically, we have reached the second position we have supposed, that is to say, the recognition of any provisional government possessing the moral strength to guarantee the life and property of both nationals and foreigners. When we sent the telegram we had to know exactly what we would do after the answers had come, and with that in view I have prepared a resolution meeting that situation.

MINISTER CALDERÓN. Our appeal to the governors of the States was, in my mind, with the object of having the people of Mexico take part in this affair, because I supposed the Governors more or less represented the views of all the people they represent. It appears that the people of Mexico have not taken any notice, and the action seems to have been taken by the men in arms. Therefore the two different principles: First, to consider the answers of one faction sufficient and tell them to arrange a new provisional government else we will discredit them; second, to consider the answer of the other chiefs or factions who, without accepting our appeal, come with the suggestion of a conference in regard to international questions. I am inclined to accept [the latter]; to tell him [Carranza] we are willing, and, not interfering with the international [internal?] affairs of Mexico, are willing for them also to send their representatives to this Conference. But we will reserve to ourselves the right to determine which of the two factions has really met the condition we have put in our resolution—possession of enough power to maintain the freedom and security of the citizens, foreign and national. Each will contend it has the power. It is for us to discover which has really the greater strength and hope of imposing itself on the whole country. We could not leave the country without government; the government must be established, and these meetings have been called with the object of telling which government we could recognize. I am perfectly agreeable to Carranza's idea, because our object is simply to discuss international questions. We could say: "As you represent but one faction, you could not discuss with yourself; come and tell us what your ideas are in relation to the international conditions, and we reserve to ourselves the full right to recognize whatever faction we consider proper and who will give these guaranties for the life and property of foreigners and nationals."

SECRETARY LANSING. Mr. Minister, I should say that practically all the chieftains and governors within the territory which has been occupied by Zapata or Villa, or under their influence, have sent us a separate answer of acceptance. All the generals and governors in the territory which has been occupied by the Carrancistas have referred us to Carranza for an answer; so that Mr. Carranza's answer represents the united opinion of the chieftains, civil as well as military, within the districts which he occupies. There is probably only one case of a governor who may be said to be independent, and that is the Governor of Oaxaca, who has accepted the invitation. He is the only one. I do not think that on account of one man we can change the policy.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. I think you could. It would be for the principle. For when we set aside one of the factions, as we did when we did not send an invitation to the exiled people, we intervened in defining what was the representation of Mexico.

SECRETARY LANSING. I doubt very much whether we should have sent a communication to the Governor of Oaxaca, because he did not belong to the revolution. One of our policies was that the revolution was triumphant. The government must arise from the revolution.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. What is a triumphant revolution that does not impose itself?

SECRETARY LANSING. It imposes itself, unfortunately, in sections and not as a unit.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. So that it does not impose itself.

SECRETARY LANSING. Yes, I think it does everywhere. It is a question of fact as to whether they are in power. If they are in power then we can only consider them for recognition.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. Discussing the thing logically, by recognizing the triumph of the revolution we still intervene.

SECRETARY LANSING. I cannot agree with you there, for the reason that whenever there is a civil war in a country you must select from either one part or the other which one is the agent of the sovereignty. We have to determine that. To that extent we intervene in the domestic affairs of the country. We are bound to do that; otherwise we could not recognize any government. The question is, Which is the dominant power? We do not know; we have not the facts before us; let each side present its facts to us; let them present to us separately the facts on which they base their claim to represent the sovereignty of Mexico.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. Why not meet themselves?

SECRETARY LANSING. They decline to meet.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. At present the question is whether or not we will recognize a de facto government. We have absolute freedom to select any means to establish in our own judgment who is the government to be recognized. Then from my standpoint, I say: It seems to me that the information that the representative of Carranza will bring to me will enable me to form a judgment in some particular; the information that the representative of Villa will bring—any information we can get, from any source—will allow me to say to my Government, "In my opinion, you should recognize So-and-so." That does not mean that my Government will accept my recommendation. They will be the final judges of the capacity of the government to fulfill the guaranties of life of nationals and foreigners; they will be the judges also of the proper moment to recognize the government. But we have to give advice and information to our Governments.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. By that time, by receiving the representatives of the factions in arms that will come to plead their rights to be recognized, we shall have been intervening in Mexico. We are here as counselors or as advisors to the Government of the United States, because that was the invitation, not to decide or take any action; and it was understood there would be no joint action. But if we discuss here who would be recognized in Mexico, that would be an action.

MINISTER CALDERÓN. The point is very clear. The factions have not come together. Consequently we have been left in the position to select between the two factions that appear to remain and have control of Mexico—the Villa and Carranza factions. What right have we now to decide which of the two is the stronger? I do not think we are in a position to do that. We want to know what obligations, what promises toward foreign nations they will make in order to secure a guaranty of the rights and lives of nationals and foreigners.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. What authority have we to decide?

SECRETARY LANSING. Gentlemen, I think we are working at cross purposes. My idea is that we should have a separate conference with the two factions, as Mr. Naón proposes, in order that we may listen to their respective statements as to the facts which show stability of government and the purposes of the factions, in case they should obtain recognition. It is not for us, after we have heard that, to determine who should be recognized. We have no power to determine who should be recognized. We would meet merely to receive the facts, to discuss them among ourselves for the benefit that we get from an exchange of ideas; and each one would then report independently to his Government. One might report for Villa, another might report for Carranza. It is not joint or positive action by our Governments.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. We are here consulting, for the opinion of the world, by discussing or by hearing or by compelling, as judges, as to whom should be recognized in Mexico. But as a body we should not do that.

SECRETARY LANSING. We have no power as a body.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. We are consulting. When I speak, I speak for myself. I want to have as much information as possible in order to advise my Government what it should decide. I suppose my opinion should be as authoritative as possible in order that it may be accepted.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. I am making objection to the proposition in this, that we appear here as a body, and as a body we cannot act in relation to the recognition of a government in Mexico.

SECRETARY LANSING. We cannot, as a body; that is perfectly true.

AMBASSADOR SUÁREZ. I would like to say that I think I will need to consult my Government about the main part of the proposition, for we know we have nothing to expect from an agreement between these two factions. The appeal having failed, we have nothing to do but recognize one of these factions or not recognize anyone. The Carranza faction, which is doubtless the strongest one, in my opinion, does not give sufficient guaranties—the guaranties we asked for in our first resolution. That being so, I do not see what we can do, and my opinion is that the matter is not to be decided yet, not so quickly. About the first part of this resolution, I do not think it would be necessary to repeat the proposition adopted by us at the last session, and therefore I would consider sufficient the first paragraph of the proposition of the Argentine Ambassador, which is this one:

In view of the answers to the telegraphic appeal, the conferees believe that the time has arrived to carry out the policy which they agreed to recommend to their Governments in the event, etc.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. It seems to me the question is, whether we should invite these chiefs or not.

AMBASSADOR SUÁREZ. Therefore I say this first part is not a necessity. About the second part of the resolution, I frankly have to say I would not accept it, personally. I do not think we are engaged to invite anybody to come here. I am giving my first impressions as I feel them: that I do not feel able to give a definite opinion about the proposition now.

SECRETARY LANSING. I will say this, gentlemen. The situation in Mexico is becoming intolerable. We are agreed that it is time to recognize a government in Mexico. If this Conference cannot ask them to present their cases, the United States will have to do it alone. We don't want to; we want your advice and the benefit of your opinions. As soon as the government is recognized, it is possible that the United States may place an embargo on arms and ammunition to all factions except the one recognized.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. You have a perfect right to do that because you are the interested party. Your interests are stronger than ours, which are purely [omission]. You may do that and be charged with the responsibility of any fault or any good step that you may take. That is your affair. But for us to take that responsibility, our people, our countries would not agree to it.

SECRETARY LANSING. You are not required to do it.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. You could have recognized Carbajal; you could have recognized Gutierrez, Carranza, or anybody. You did not do it; then you can recognize anybody you want to. But why draw us into that recognition?

SECRETARY LANSING. We did it for the reason, as I explained at our first conference, that we thought you understood the character of the people better than we did, and we did sincerely wish your advice; and, if possible, we sought to obtain identical, though independent, action.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. My opinion has been perfectly clear from the beginning. I understood that we came here to consult. It seems to me that we have [consulted] with the exception of the action we took in sending the telegram to the military and political chiefs. At that moment we took action—a liberty we had not the authority for. Afterwards, consulting, we arrived at an opinion that has been a common opinion. We have examined what possibilities or what different situations will be applied after the answer to that action came to us; and we decided that in the first place, that is, in case every one of the persons whom we addressed accepted the offer and the organization of a government, we would recognize that government without any other analysis. In the second place, if they did not accept the idea of a conference, we decided to advise our Governments to recognize any de facto government with such and such conditions. The only new thing I propose is the action of inviting these people to come to us in the same way we have invited them to come together, in order to find a solution of the difficulties. It seems to me it is absolutely the same: at that time we invited them; at this time we invite them. At that time we said to them, "We are doing this and this"; at this time we say, "As international officers we would like to hear what information you have in regard to the possibility of an international recognition of your government."

AMBASSADOR SUÁREZ. In that case we invited them to unite, and in this case we invite them to come here and discuss with us.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. That is exactly what we want. We invite them to give us information in order to allow us to perform our duty as an international power. We must recognize a government and ask them to come and help us form our opinion. This is an action more or less of the same character that we took when we sent them the telegram. If the members of the Conference would not like to take that action without the authorization of their Governments, they can object; but they cannot object to establishing the fact that we decided so and so at our first conference.

SECRETARY LANSING. It seems to me, gentlemen, that when we sent that communication asking them to come into conference together, we interfered more with their internal affairs than when we ask their representatives to meet us and present their cases.

MINISTER DE PENA. I agree with the opinion of Ambassador Naón, because we have already addressed an invitation in a special document, drafted by the Chilean Ambassador, to the chiefs of the factions. We are to analyze the real conditions in Mexico, and the best information we can receive is coming from the representatives of those chiefs.

MINISTER CALDERÓN. We have made an agreement that if the factions in Mexico did not come together and name a provisional president, we would immediately proceed to recognize a faction. Now we invite them to tell us what are the elements they have for bringing about a government in Mexico. You [Ambassador Da Gama] object to that. But if we are going to recognize a government in Mexico we have a perfect right to know what kind of government to recognize, and that is why it is very proper to say, "Come and tell us." If you object to calling this last body, how will we decide which of the factions to recognize?

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. That is a different question.

SECRETARY LANSING. How would you obtain the facts as to what government should be recognized as having de facto power? What would be your suggestions?

[At this point there was general conversation and I was unable to get the Ambassador's response.—Stenographer's note.]

SECRETARY LANSING. Mr. Ambassador, would you object if I should invite those two factions, and after having heard them lay their statements before the Conference?

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. But by conferring with them with a view to recognition you are—

[The rest was lost owing to general conversation.]

SECRETARY LANSING. If the facts did not warrant it we would not recognize any faction.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. You to present us the facts leading to recognition. And of course you may [omission] correctly. But that will not be an international conference.

SECRETARY LANSING. I feel that so much depends upon the personal touch you get in a conference with representatives of that kind.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. I prefer you to confer and see what you find and after that we will recognize as a matter of fact.

SECRETARY LANSING. I have one regret in taking that step, and that is that it strikes a blow at Panamericanism.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN.

[Here, owing to general conversation, I was unable to take the Ambassador's remarks, but they pertained to Panamericanism.—Stenographer's note.]

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. In another draft I have put it in this way. [Reads from draft.] I emphasize that we have been taking free and independent action.

SECRETARY LANSING. Instead of having seven independent conferences with these factions we should have one conference and all hear them together.

MINISTER CALDERÓN. What would the Ambassador say to the position that we will agree to recognize any government the United States would recognize?

SECRETARY LANSING. My whole theory of Panamericanism is independent action. There is one thing I like about this attitude of the Brazilian Ambassador; it impresses me very strongly. And that is the independent action of each Government. That I believe in. That is the only substantial foundation of Panamericanism in a case of this sort. A friendly conference and, if possible, identical though independent action will give strength to the movement.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. We are consulting in order to inform our Governments that we have agreed to so and so.

AMBASSADOR SUÁREZ. I think this would be a formula to which I myself could agree:

In view of the answers to the telegraphic appeal sent to the political and military chiefs of the factions struggling in Mexico on the 11th of August last, the representatives who signed that appeal believe that the time has arrived to carry out the conclusions agreed upon in their last meeting in order to recommend to their respective Governments the recognition as soon as possible of a government in Mexico that shall have sprung from independent and exclusive action of the Mexicans and possessing the material and moral capacity to protect the lives and property of nationals and foreigners.

and then say the conference would be glad to receive individually and separately from the several factions in Mexico any statements they may desire to make for the solution of the matter.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. I would still prefer that the Secretary of State hear them. I would not accept even that because many people would come [omission] you would change the Mexican Conference into an international conference.

AMBASSADOR SUÁREZ. If they came voluntarily . . .

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. They would come because we opened the door for them to come.

AMBASSADOR SUÁREZ. What objection do you see to a man coming from Mexico, sent by Carranza, Mr. Ambassador? These are the facts we have disclosed to you.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. I am going to tell you my position. If there is any conference with the revolutionists and representatives of sovereign nations, here in the United States or somewhere else,
I * * *

[General conversation precluded getting the finish of the Ambassador's remarks.]

SECRETARY LANSING.

[Something about the successful revolution, but there was too much general discussion.]

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. Let them show you first, because they need your support; then recognize them if you deem proper, and then we follow.

SECRETARY LANSING. Your advice before recognition is what we want.

[General Spanish discussion.]

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. Now, I want to be absolutely clear. I don't want to inform my Government about anything more than what has been decided here. I can inform my Government that the resolution has been substantially this: [reads Señor Suárez's resolution, given above.] And at the same time we ask our Governments for instructions as to the advisability of inviting these people to give us as much information as possible, in order that the Governments can act when they deem proper.

[General discussion, mostly in Spanish.]

SECRETARY LANSING. Of course the question of stability, which is the essential element a government must have to obtain recognition, is a matter of which we ought to hear from the different factions. We hear them independently, only we sit together; and then we can discuss the conditions and see if we can reach identical opinions. The essential thing is to get the evidence. It may perhaps open the door to substantial agreement between the factions. The main thing is that we hear both factions so that neither can complain that it has not had opportunity to lay its case before us.

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. (Reads Señor Suárez's resolution for the purpose of getting it into the record.)

SECRETARY LANSING. Then what are we going to do?

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. We have to ask our Governments for an immediate answer whether we are authorized to invite the chiefs of the factions now strongest in Mexico in order to hear a statement that they may desire to make to our respective Governments in regard to the real situation as to the possibility of recognition. We will ask our Governments for an authorization of what they consider proper to invite these people to talk with us on—the question of the strength of the guaranties in order to establish whether any one of them can protect the lives and property of nationals and foreigners.

SECRETARY LANSING. The idea is to have a discussion in order that it may be determined what the facts are in regard to the situation, so that our Governments may act with full knowledge in dealing with the situation and the recognition of a de facto government.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. If I may be permitted a question, in case one or two of the Governments refuse the authorization to their representatives to tender that invitation, what would happen?

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. I think the Governments that want to hear them can do so, and afterwards . . .

[General Spanish discussion.]

AMBASSADOR NAÓN. We can do it in this way: ask an authorization from our Governments to look for any information we can get from the factions or from any other source, personally or in conjunction with the other members of the Conference, and report about the government that ought to be recognized.

SECRETARY LANSING. Of course there is another solution, which I dislike very much. It is this: I could offer the invitation and then if they do accept the invitation and send delegates, those members of the Conference who wish to attend could do so.

AMBASSADOR DA GAMA. It would be the same bad situation. Then I might tell my Government that I did not find it in my power to confer with the representatives of Carranza, Villa and Zapata, and that the Government of the United States and those of Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala think they should; and that I, being in a situation of embarrassment, ask leave of absence.

[General discussion, mostly in Spanish.]

SECRETARY LANSING. I think I should be disposed, in case that was done, to communicate with the different factions myself.

[Spanish discussion.]

SECRETARY LANSING. I should like sufficient time to communicate and hear the representatives from the factions. I should think it would take about three weeks.

Conference adjourned.

Since use of legation pouch has been discouraged we have not assured means of communication with families, friends or business connections in the United States or Europe.

Currency conditions grow more impossible. Carrancistas have nullified not only all currency of factions but also much of their own. This still continues. They force public accept their currency but refuse receive it themselves for important taxes. They issue decrees declaring invalid public and private business done under various previous régimes. Very limited food supplies have been brought to city but suffering among poor increase because of inability purchase. Deaths from starvation continue. Fuel famine is acute. [Inclosure 1—Extract.]

RÉSUMÉ OF THE MEXICAN CONSTITUTIONALIST REVOLUTION AND ITS PROGRESS.

The civil strife in Mexico now nearing its end, which grew out of the arrest and subsequent death of Francisco I. Madero and José Maria Pino Suarez, President and Vice President respectively of the Republic of Mexico, and was a consequence of the usurpation of power by General Victoriano Huerta, had its beginning on the 19th of February, 1913. On this date Mr. Venustiano Carranza, upon being apprised of the above-mentioned outrageous assault and of the infringement of the Federal Constitution, and acting in his capacity of Governor of the State of Coahuila * * * repudiated the aforesaid General Huerta as President of Mexico and initiated that which has been named "The Revolution of the Constitutionalist Party".

Mr. Carranza Carranza, obeying the provision of the Federal Constitution which his oath of office involved as Governor of the State of Coahuila, raised the flag of legality against the usurpation of federal power, at the same time calling all public officers in the country to do their duty and inviting all commanders of troops to repudiate and oppose General Huerta as President of the Republic; but in view of the fact that none of the secretaries in the cabinet of Mr. Madero, who by operation of law and according to their precedence were expected to punish the outrages committed against the Constitution, responded to the call to duty, Mr. Carranza was constrained to assume the leadership of the restoring movement because it was his duty to do so as Governor of the State of Coahuila and pursuant to the unanimous vote of the citizens who at that moment had rallied around him to defend the political Constitution of the United Mexican States.

Mr. Carranza is, therefore, in the light of the Federal Constitution of Mexico, the rightful successor of Francisco I. Madero in the exercise of the Executive Power, to the exclusion of any other public officer, because he is the only one who complied with his duty according to the fundamental charter of the Republic.

The nomination of Mr. Carranza as chief of the revolution took place in the Hacienda de Guadalupe, State of Coahuila, where the well-known "Plan of Guadalupe" was framed and enacted on March 26, 1913,⁴⁷ which was the rule of action to be observed and followed by the army which was then being organized with the sole object of opposing and overthrowing the power of General Victoriano Huerta and which was wisely named at that time "Constitutionalist Army".

After a revolution of a year and a half * * * Mr. Carranza made his triumphant entry into the City of Mexico at the head of the restoring army on August 19, 1914, taking immediate possession of the executive authority of the Republic of Mexico, in accordance with the Plan of Guadalupe dated March 26, 1913.

[Description of the organization of the Constitutionalist Government; the defection of Villa; the convocation by Carranza of a convention at Mexico City to make a provisional program of government; lack of representation therein of Villa's Northern Division of the Constitutionalist Army; Carranza's resignation and reinstatement by the Mexico City Convention; conference between certain Carrancista generals and Villa and his generals; consequent transfer of the Convention from Mexico City to Aguascalientes and the adoption there of the name "Sovereign Revolutionary Convention"; election by this convention of General Eulalio Gutierrez as Provisional President of Mexico; defection of Villa from Gutierrez; return of certain ex-Carrancista generals to their former allegiance; Villa-Zapata coalition.]

From the above it appears that the Constitutionalist Party headed by Mr. Carranza initiated the revolution against Huerta in February, 1913, and organized and equipped successively in various States of the Republic an army of volunteers which fought the usurpation of Huerta and finally threw him out of power, and has also fought and completely defeated the factions of Villa and Zapata, who had revolted against the authority of the First Chief.

At the present time Mr. Carranza controls twenty-four States of the twenty-seven which make up the Republic, and the Territories of Tepic and Quintana Roo and the Federal District, and has established in each of them a local government. [Names of governors.]

All of the above leaders of the Constitutionalist Army and Governors recognize the First Chieftainship of Mr. Carranza and his authority as the Depository of the Executive Power of the Nation, as they have recently stated when replying to the note addressed to them by the Secretary of State of the United States and the American Diplomatic Representatives, tendering their good offices as mediators, and inviting them to a conference for the purpose of solving in this manner the struggle in Mexico.

From the above-mentioned reply it is seen that, differing from the leaders of the Villa and Zapata factions, who made individual replies to the aforesaid note according to their own judgment, all the Constitutionalist leaders referred their replies to Mr. Carranza, thus recognizing his character of chief of all of them and reiterating their allegiance to him. This example of the cohesion and discipline of the Constitutionalist Party clearly manifests that it is not only a compact and organized group but a real government from the point of view of international law, able to demonstrate its ability to constitute itself and to gain the will and respect of the Mexican people.

WASHINGTON, October 8, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to transmit herewith a memorandum which the delegates appointed in response to the invitation of your excellency by the military chief of the forces under the command of General Francisco Villa, address to your excellency and the Ambassadors of Brazil, Chile and Argentina, and the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala, with reference to the present military and political situation in the Republic of Mexico, which memorandum we venture to hope will be considered by the Pan-American conferees in the meeting which will, as announced, take place tomorrow.

I have [etc.]

ENRIQUE C. LLORENTE.

[Inclosure—Synopsis of the Memorandum.]

This memorandum, dated October 8, 1915, is signed by Miguel Diaz Lombardo, General Felipe Angeles, General Roque Gonzalez Garza and Enrique C. Llorente, Conventionist delegates.

The delegates state that they in no way compromise the dignity of their country by their action, nor do they submit to Pan-American nations any essential attributes of their national sovereignty.

President Wilson's note to the Mexican people threatened intervention, and Villa and Garza, Conventionist leaders, proposed peace conferences to Carranza. A delegation was also sent to General Gonzalez by Garza from Mexico City proposing an armistice, etc. Both offers were rejected. Llorente in Washington endeavored to talk peace with Carranza Agent Arredondo, but was rejected.

Carranza's rejections, without doubt, prompted the holding of the first Pan-American Conference, on August 14, with its offer of aid and mediation. Conventionists were gratified, acquiesced in plan, and appointed delegates who sign this memorandum.

The delegates were surprised by the declaration of Conference, on September 18, that if it should be impossible to recognize a Government from the agreement of all factions, then the de facto Government seeking recognition must have material and moral capacity to protect lives and properties of nationals and foreigners. This changed plans to end revolution peaceably. As result of note of August 14, military operations were practically suspended, as was an attack on Monterey. The ends expected from policy in note of September 18 will be very different from what it is expected to attain.

It was practically impossible for one faction to establish within three weeks a positive military supremacy over the other. Any superiority was necessarily transitory. The Conventionists could have advanced their whole army on capital or toward Saltillo and Monterey, or sent out a number of flying columns, and thus sown discord; but there is difference between such movements and permanent superiority.

The Conventionists are in position to dominate the situation around Mexico City and prevent entrance of Carranza forces to establish a government. Numerous detachments of Conventionists in central States; Durango, Sinaloa and Sonora partially controlled by them. Great dissatisfaction against Carranza in Isthmus of Tehuantepec, Tabasco, Campeche and Chiapas. Upon ejection of Huerta, Carranza was asked by Villa and Obregon to assume provisional presidency and establish government. He refused to accept the title and called a meeting of generals appointed by himself. The convention assembled in Aguascalientes and saw fit to remove Carranza from position as First Chief and to recognize sovereignty of convention. Villa was disposed to eliminate himself if Carranza withdrew, and is still willing. He had withdrawn from active service but took the field again, as his services were indispensable to Convention. Sovereignty of Convention had been recognized by Carranza when he submitted his resignation to it as First Chief.

Carranza cannot demonstrate that he controls as much territory as General Diaz did in 1877 and 1878, when recognition was held up for nearly eighteen months after Diaz had proclaimed himself Provisional President. How can a military force occupying but a portion of the Republic, headed by a First Chief without a government, be accorded recognition as a de facto Government?

The delegates stand ready to furnish additional data if desired.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the peace negotiations between General Carranza and General Manuel Pelaez were a complete failure, and as a result, General Pelaez remains in entire control of the oil fields of the Tuxpam district. His forces have been demanding general loans and collecting taxes from petroleum companies. He controls completely the camps of the Compañía Mexicana de Petroleo "El Águila" S. A., the Huasteca Petroleum Company, and the Penn-Mex Fuel Company, the three largest oil producing companies in Mexico, and has between seven and eight hundred men, fairly well armed, under his command. The Carrancista forces control the city of Tuxpam but none of the surrounding oil fields. If General Carranza would send a force of about a thousand men into the Tuxpam district they would be able to get control immediately, as the Villista forces under General Pelaez are poorly disciplined, not good fighters, and are scattered over the entire district in bands of from 50 to 100 men.

EL PASO, October 16, 1915—1 p. m.

The following suggestions resulting from calm consideration are earnestly made:

The best immediate means of turning Juarez to Carranza was lost when Ornelas came to El Paso and abandoned control of the garrison. Villa's forces are disintegrating gradually but not as rapidly as they should.

The chief element of Villa cohesion is his commercial organization at El Paso and Juarez. The profits come from property stolen in Mexico and marketed through El Paso.

Villa can continue to operate after losing any number of officers so long as he is permitted in conjunction with American and Mexican grafters to market his loot here.

The port here should be closed outright, or, as perhaps would be less apt to provoke increased depredations by Villa, practically closed through the regulation of invoice or other means, thereby closing it to everything except baggage and the like, and such legitimate importations as come from original and bona-fide owners.

We must break up the band of commercial thieves operating here, who are now the root of the Villa menace, and who hereafter if not broken up will be conspirators, ammunition smugglers and managers of new revolts. We must force them to respect the power and laws of our Government.

This is a critical time for the border and not only for present results but as well for future effects. Therefore it is earnestly urged simultaneously with the recognition of Carranza that you put actions into effect here that will give the Villa commercial agency and the profit-seeking revolutionary adventurers physical demonstration that their activities will not longer be tolerated. In this connection I hope you may conclude to discontinue representations to Villa, or to any of the Villa chiefs, because of my belief that they do more harm, in the quasi-recognition and resulting encouragement of continued independent activities, than good in affording any actual protection. Furthermore the continuance of representations is in effect an invitation to such people as the smelting company, and any not in sympathy with you, to open up under Villa, which I fear they could be too easily induced to do, and thereby help support continued dissensions.

It is earnestly to be hoped that you may find it consistent to break things off short here, taking the chance of Villa retaliating with possible increased depredations for a while, but in all probability causing his complete collapse and a turn-over all along the line, excepting the comparatively few who are going to be bandits anyhow, to Carranza.

TORREON, October 19, 1915—noon.

General Carranza does not desire that he be considered President stating that many men have been recipient this title which was merely assumed. Prefers title "in charge of the Executive power of the Republic" the same as has always used; the title First Chief applies more to the interior. He does not know exact form recognition will be extended but expects same to be of de facto Government. States that he is only legal authority remaining from old régime, still retaining Governorship of Coahuila. Responsibility for property and lives of foreigners will be assumed throughout the Republic. Those districts not yet in control will be somewhat difficult for time being. Such guaranties given in proclamation more generally known. During fighting in north will not endeavor to call general elections, first calling municipal elections. After these will come elections for governors of states. The so-called pre-constitutional period will last a year more or less. Stated in interview with press today that there was no reason why he should not become a candidate for President. Has never had that character before; only First Chief of Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power, and Governor of Coahuila. No law prohibiting his being candidate. When asked whether he would be candidate he replied did not know; shortly might be, in event he was called. Trusts that foreigners will not in future intermeddle in politics; this will no doubt prevent much future trouble. Treating of religious question, stated that only Catholics that have meddled in politics have been punished. All religious toleration in Mexico will prevail as in past. He was asked by one member of press if he had choice as to who should be the Ambassador; he replied that the Ambassador should have a thorough knowledge of Mexico and conditions as they are today.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, a Joint Resolution of Congress, approved March 14th, 1912, reads and provides as follows:—"That whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress":

In several recent cases which Silliman, under instructions, brought to the attention of the de facto Government, he was told matters should be taken up with Governors of States in which they occurred.

The Department considers that diplomatic representations to officials of political subdivisions, such as states or provinces, are regular only in exceptional cases, but should be made to the central government, and that it is the obligation of the de facto Government of Mexico, in keeping with established usage, to entertain and act upon representations made to it by this Department, concerning matters occurring in the several states of the Mexican Republic.

Appropriately suggest this to General Carranza.

We have reason to believe friction exists between Gonzales and Obregon. Gonzales gone north to confer with Carranza. Currency situation continues to cause uneasiness. Mining tax decrees are a source of great criticism. The two most important features of criticism are that mining taxes are payable in Mexican gold worth some seven times the value of paper currency of forcible circulation and the injustice of increasing taxation on a business which for the most part is receiving entirely inadequate protection or no protection and therefore unable produce revenue. Equitable arrangement according to persons interested would appear to be entire exemption from taxes until protection afforded. Incoming mail arriving promptly. Railroad traffic very unsatisfactory. DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Washington, November 4, 1915.

SIR: The Department of State is anxious to have from you a ruling on the following points, with reference to the interpretation to be put on the term "munitions of war" within the meaning of the President's proclamation of October 19, 1915, prohibiting the exportation of such munitions into Mexico.

1. Can empty cars belonging to the National Railway of Mexico, or to other Mexican railways, brought over from Juarez, be detained at El Paso as munitions of war? These cars, if allowed to return, would afford convenient transportation to the parties in rebellion against the recognized de facto government of Mexico.

2. Can coal and coke destined for use by any faction in rebellion against the de facto government of Mexico, or for use in the territory of the rebellious faction and which could therefore be easily requisitioned by it, be classed as munitions of war? Such coal would be used to operate trains in the military movements of those in revolt against the de facto government, and the coke would be used to operate American-owned smelters which would probably be damaged beyond repair because of the inexperience of the revolutionary operatives.

In connection with the importation of cattle and other live stock from territory occupied by the revolutionists, the proceeds of which would be used to continue revolutionary activities, I have the honor to ask whether there is any authority of law that could be invoked to prohibit such importation. The ruling is desired to cover confiscated or stolen live stock, or stock that is shipped by or in the interest of those involved in the continuance of revolutionary conditions in the Republic of Mexico.

In further relation to this matter, I have the honor to state that Mr. Juan N. Amador, who is temporarily representing the interests of the recognized de facto government of Mexico in Washington, has called to the attention of the Department a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the United States against Sheldon, 2 Wheat., 119, which he seems to think has some bearing on the matter under discussion.

Hoping that the Department may be favored with an early reply, in view of the conditions existing on the Mexican border,

I have [etc.]

ROBERT LANSING.

File No. 812.113/3777.

The Attorney General to the Secretary of State.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, November 18, 1915.

SIR: I acknowledge receipt of yours of the 4th requesting an opinion with reference to the interpretation to be put on the term "munitions of war" as used in the President's proclamation of October 19, 1915, prohibiting the exportation of such munitions into Mexico. The request involves a reconsideration of several former expressions of opinion by the Attorney General.

Your first question is—

Can empty cars belonging to the National Railway of Mexico, or to other Mexican railways, brought over from Juarez, be detained at El Paso as munitions of war? These cars, if allowed to return, would afford convenient transportation to the parties in rebellion against the recognized de facto government of Mexico.

From the above I understand that these cars are ordinary railroad cars, owned by private corporations, and are not being claimed or used by armed forces operating against the de facto government of Mexico, but that they might be so used for transportation purposes in case they were allowed to return. They do not appear to be of a type adapted only to military use; or to have been collected in such a way as to indicate that they were intended for military purposes alone, or for military purposes at all; or to be destined to a military depot or organization of the parties in rebellion against the recognized de facto government of Mexico.

I am of the opinion that these cars do not constitute munitions of war, and I therefore answer your first question in the negative. The cases of United States v. Barber, 9 Cranch, 243, and United States v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat., 119, should not be treated as expanding the meaning of the phrase "munitions of war." In both of these cases the statute under consideration forbade the transportation to Canada of "naval or military stores, arms or munitions of war, or any article of provision." In the first case referred to, the Court certified its opinion that fat cattle were provisions or munitions of war within the true intent and meaning of the Act. In the second case the Court expressed the opinion that the cattle were "articles of provision and munitions of war." In either case it was sufficient to find that the cattle were articles of provision. Neither decision discusses the general scope of the phrase "munitions of war" and neither can be fairly treated as fixing an interpretation of that phrase.

Your second question is—

Can coal and coke destined for use by any faction in rebellion against the de facto government of Mexico, or for use in the territory of the rebellious faction and which could therefore be easily requisitioned by it, be classed as munitions of war? Such coal would be used to operate trains in the military movements of those in revolt against the de facto government, and the coke would be used to operate American-owned smelters which would probably be damaged beyond repair because of the inexperience of the revolutionary operatives.

The original Joint Resolution of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. 739), of which the Joint Resolution of March 14, 1912, was an amendment, prohibited the export "of coal or other material used in war from any seaport of the United States"; and in the debates (see 55th Cong., 2d Sess., Vol. 31, pp. 41-46 et seq.) in the Senate, the phrase "other materials used in war" was apparently deemed to be synonymous with "munitions of war." See the following colloquy in the Senate:

Mr. CAFFERY. I inquire of the Senator from Connecticut whether it could not specify the articles the exportation of which shall be prohibited?

Mr. HAWLEY. It would be very difficult. There might have been something more of description, but it is impossible to go into the minute description of fulminates and percussion caps and primers and ramrods.

Mr. CAFFERY. Suppose we say, "Coal and munitions of war."

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It does practically now.

Mr. CAFFERY. Then I should be satisfied with it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I suppose it is well known what war material is. It seems to me that discretion may be safely left to the President.

Mr. CAFFERY. Does the joint resolution say "war material"?

Mr. CHANDLER. Materials used for war.

Mr. HAWLEY. For war.

Mr. CAFFERY. Then I have nothing more to say.

When the Joint Resolution of 1912 was under consideration in the Senate (see Cong. Rec. 62d Cong., 2d Sess., Vol. 48, pp. 3257-3258), Mr. Root stated:

Mr. ROOT. This joint resolution eliminates coal. It does not apply to anything except arms and munitions of war.

Mr. SHIVELY. It really narrows the joint resolution that is the existing law.

Mr. LODGE. The existing law is broader than the joint resolution under consideration. The existing law covers coal specifically.

Mr. CHILTON. That is why I asked the question.

Mr. ROOT. The existing law is narrowed in every respect but one; and that is, it is applied not only to exportations from seaports, but from inland places.

From the above, it is evident that coal was not intended to be included, and I therefore answer your second question in the negative.

Your third question is whether—

“* * * there is any authority of law that could be invoked to prohibit” the importation of cattle and other live stock from “territory occupied by the revolutionists, the proceeds of which would be used to continue revolutionary activities.”

You state that this ruling is desired to cover confiscated or stolen live stock or stock that is shipped by, or in the interest of, those involved in the continuance of revolutionary conditions in the Republic of Mexico. I know of no present authority of law (other than the quarantine act) under which the importation of this live stock could be forbidden. The real owners could, of course, assert their rights to it in the courts which acquired jurisdiction over the property.

Respectfully,

T. W. GREGORY.

General Scott at Naco, Arizona, is informed that Maytorena had received no instructions from President Gutierrez up to December 31 and that it is believed, as the agreement affects only military operations, General Villa could authorize Maytorena to sign agreement. It appears that one of Maytorena's patrols fired upon Naco and several bullets again fell upon American territory, and that two of Hill's men who had left their trenches to catch a horse were attacked by Yaquis who killed one and chased another one thousand meters into American territory and when the American troops caught the soldier of Hill, the Yaquis fired on the Americans. A troop of American cavalry went out to apprehend the Yaquis, but the latter withdrew to the Mexican side and the Americans did not pursue them. In reply to General Scott's request that Maytorena be instructed to sign agreement with Hill, General Villa replied December 31 that while recognizing United States' right to defend life and interests of Americans in Naco, to sign the agreement would be greatly prejudicial to him and would prolong the situation in Sonora; that he had mobilized 8,000 cavalry under General Cabral who were now proceeding to Naco to take that town by assault; and that if General Scott would have patience for four days more Naco would be taken and the situation ended in a definite manner. It has been suggested to General Villa that the contemplated attack on Naco could not be permitted, as it could not be made without bullets falling on the American side. The proposed attack on Naco contemplated by General Villa would be extremely dangerous to the rights and property of Americans. The situation is regarded by the President as extremely critical and fraught with grave possibilities.

Please bring the foregoing to the attention of President Gutierrez and impress upon him most emphatically the necessity of preventing the mobilization of 8,000 cavalry at Naco, with a view to attacking the opposing forces which hold that town. An attack must necessarily cause bullets to fall on American territory and place in jeopardy the life and property of American citizens. Attempts to take Naco in these circumstances might force the United States to defend its citizens and their interests by force of arms. It is needless to point out to you the seriousness of such an event.

A communication in the sense of the foregoing has also been sent to General Villa through General Scott at Naco.

EL PASO, January 5, 1915.

I have great faith in Generals Scott and Villa reaching an agreement on Naco situation and at the same time probably arriving at the settlement of entire border difficulties. In order to facilitate matters I strongly recommend that General Scott be permitted to call upon Villa freely in Juarez and Villa be permitted to come to El Paso, Texas. This would not only strengthen good feeling already existing but would avoid humiliating Villa by forcing him to come to this side each time a conference is desired. Conferences on international bridge are not practicable. Villa comes here animated by keen desire to preserve existing friendly relations and if General Scott is permitted freedom of action he will secure everything he desires from Villa.

MY DEAR MR. BRYAN: It affords me pleasure to include hereinafter copy of a telegram received from General Elias Calles, who commands the Constitutional troops which recently evacuated Naco, Sonora:

Agreements entered into with Maytorena, due to friendly and impartial cooperation of General Scott, practically ended. My column evacuated Naco arriving here yesterday without trouble. I consider that the sacrifice we made by giving up Naco, which we were able to defend for three months, is a good proof of our wish to avoid difficulties with the United States Government, which has pursued an equitable and judicious policy. In our interchange with General Scott I found him gentlemanly and impartial. I beg you to express my gratitude to him for his mediation and the trouble he had to go through on this account. Regards.

Diplomatic representations are being made by the State Department to Carranza and Villa urging them to order their commanders to comply with the terms of the agreement of January 11, 1915, and under no circumstances execute an attack upon a border town that would endanger American lives and property. I will inform you as soon as I learn from the State Department that Carranza and Villa have actually received the diplomatic representations and will give you any further instructions that may then be necessary if any are necessary. You will take such steps as may be necessary to protect American lives and property in the event of an attack upon Agua Prieta provided that such steps do not include a crossing of the Mexican border by our troops. You will refrain, if it is at all possible, from taking any forcible action until you have heard from me that the diplomatic representations have been received by Carranza and Villa and they have had time to communicate their orders to their commanders. You will endeavor to communicate to the commanders of the Mexican troops along the Sonora border in the region about Agua Prieta that such representations have been made to Carranza and Villa and that forcible action, if necessary, will be taken to protect American lives and property. Urge upon these commanders compliance with the agreement of January 11 between Maytorena and Calles. PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OFFICIAL IN CHARGE OF FOREIGN RELATIONS AND JUSTICE.

CHIHUAHUA, March 27, 1915.

MR. GEORGE CAROTHERS,

Confidential Agent of the American Government.

VERY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND:

Referring to the conversation which we had this afternoon in regard to the difficulties which may arise in connection with the occupation of frontier towns bordering on the United States by belligerent forces of the factions now disputing with one another the supremacy, and realizing the just reasons which the White House Government has for trying to prevent fighting between these forces on the boundary line and especially in the vicinity of American cities, I have thought it suitable to submit to the consideration of your Government, through your worthy agency, the following propositions which I will undertake briefly to justify.

I repeat that I find your Government's attitude explainable, owing to the injuries and losses of lives that have already been caused on various occasions on the American side as a result of the attacks on Mexican towns made by some of the contending leaders. But at the same time your Government will surely take into account that the belligerent force cannot permit the troops of the enemy to remain undisturbed and indefinitely in possession of a frontier town which they may and actually do use in most cases as a base of military supplies.

If this practice were permitted unconditionally, the opposing factions would find themselves prevented from weakening their enemy, who could easily continue in possession of a customhouse without owing obedience to the Federal Government or to the local government of the State to which the customhouse belonged, which would of course make it impossible to pacify and regularize the commercial traffic between the United States and Mexico.

The right of any of the political parties in a civil war to reduce the adversary to impotence, to dislodge him from points which he may occupy (especially his base of military operations) and to deprive him of any source of supply is incontestable in theory; and only in special cases, such as that with which we are dealing, does the desire to avoid international complications counsel refraining from an armed attack on the frontier cities.

But this does not mean that the contending parties lack other permissible means from the standpoint of the law of war for attaining the ends referred to in the foregoing paragraph, these being means which the bordering countries cannot consider as infringing upon their rights.

Among other means, there is that of establishing a genuine blockade on the national territory in order to prevent the arrival of reinforcements, pecuniary aid, provisions, etc., of any kind.

Such an operation would, however, prove useless if the American frontier port continued nevertheless to remain open unconditionally so that the blockaded forces might supply themselves freely with provisions, arms and ammunition.

And I not only consider that any effort on the part of the besieging belligerents would prove useless, but that it might even perhaps be regarded as a violation of neutrality on the part of the American Government if it failed to order the closure of the frontier port, for it would practically be rendering at that point material aid to one of the parties as against the other.

At the same time there would appear to be a lack of international reciprocity, for if an attack on these places is not carried out owing to the possible risk to the lives and property of the residents on the American side, it seems natural that the Government of that country ought in turn to abstain from acts which would favor the besieged to the detriment of the besiegers.

Under these circumstances I believe it is possible to apply to the case of a blockade by land of frontier ports or places, principles in some respects similar to those of maritime blockade. And thus, as a supplement to the agreement concluded by General Scott, it might be arranged that whenever either of the belligerents effectively blockaded an American frontier port—that is, with sufficient forces to prevent any access thereto of persons, pecuniary aid, arms, ammunition, etc.—the President of the United States should temporarily decree the closure of the port in question, in order that the Government might preserve strict neutrality in the case.

If this action were taken, the blockaded forces would be obliged to give battle outside the city and away from the boundary line in order to break the siege, or else they would have to surrender or intern themselves in the United States, where they would be disarmed if they were permitted to enter.

Of course, just as in a sea blockade, the necessary notice would first have to be given and the blockade would have to be effective.

I beg of you, Mr. Carothers, to do me the favor of submitting these reflections to the consideration of your Government, which I hope will find them just and equitable, inasmuch as their provisions would be applicable to any of the political parties who might happen to be in the situation contemplated.

I remain [etc.]

MR. SECRETARY: I am just in receipt of telegraphic instructions from Mr. Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army and Depositary of the Executive Power of Mexico, directing me to bring to your excellency's attention the contents of a letter received by General Plutarco Elias Calles, Commander of the Constitutionalist forces at Agua Prieta, from Colonel C. M. O'Connor, commanding the American troops at Douglas, Arizona:

In compliance with instructions from the Secretary of War, you are urged to injoin upon all your forces a strict compliance with the terms of the agreement of January 11, 1915, between Governor Maytorena and yourself and prevent the recurrence of conditions such as existed at Naco, Sonora. You are further advised that in the event that an attack upon a border town takes place, that would endanger American lives and property, forcible action, if necessary, will be taken to protect them. WASHINGTON, July 21, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I consider it my duty to invite the Department's attention to the circumstances attending the capture of Naco, Sonora, by a large military force composed of partisans of Carranza led by General Elias Calles, in direct violation of the agreement entered into, at the instance of Brigadier General Hugh L. Scott, U. S. A., between Governor Maytorena and General Calles, provided [providing] that the place should be thereafter regarded as neutral by both parties. To this agreement the forces under Governor Maytorena have given absolute adherence.

When, however, Governor Maytorena recently despatched a portion of his troops to the south for the purpose of affording protection to foreign residents in the locality from violence at the hands of the hostile Yaqui Indians, General Calles took advantage of the fact to march on Naco with a large force and to occupy it after a brief resistance in which several civilians lost their lives. The crime committed by Calles in killing these men, whose lives were rendered sacred by the agreement above referred to, is nothing short of murder of the worst character. The town, by virtue of the neutrality border stipulations, was practically without military defenses and depended entirely for its safety on the obligations contracted by both parties concerned.

In view of this act of duplicity, by which General Calles will now seek to profit by using Naco as a base for the accumulation of munitions of war and as a rendezvous for the concentration of recruits, I respectfully suggest that the exportation of munitions of war from the American side of Naco be for the time being prohibited, authority for which can be found in the Joint Resolution of Congress, approved March 14, 1912. Such, I am sure, will serve to discourage military operations near the border towns, which my Government, like that of the United States, is so anxious to see avoided.

On July 19 General Calles assaulted and captured border town of Naco in direct violation of Calles-Maytorena agreement, signed January 12 [11] last, providing that "they will not occupy in any way the port of Naco."

It was also arranged between Roberto Pesqueira, representing General Carranza, and Maytorena, at that time, that Maytorena should be responsible for the civil officers of Naco. The Calles-Maytorena agreement also provided that Calles should hold Agua Prieta and Maytorena Nogales, and "that said places will not be attacked for any reason by either force, in order to avoid a struggle at any frontier occupied place which corresponds to an American occupied place, with the object of avoiding damage on American territory and thus expose the friendly relations with the United States."

It is reliably reported that General Calles is now moving against Nogales which he intends to assault.

In view of existence of the Calles-Maytorena agreement you are instructed to make strenuous representations to Carranza to the end that General Calles be immediately directed not only to desist in his designs upon Nogales, but to at once withdraw his forces from Naco, a neutral point. General Calles should be informed that he will be held personally responsible for any act which might jeopardize the lives and rights of American citizens at these border towns by reason of any campaign of his against such towns in direct violation of his signed pledge. This Government expects Carranza to act with great promptness in giving Calles appropriate instructions. Telegraph immediately.

But this restriction is imposed on account of the necessity of retaining in the hands of the authorities at Washington the final discretion of authorizing a matter of such importance as an invasion of Mexican territory. Referring Department's August 6th, 10 a. m., Calles replies:

In the attack which I made August 4 upon the enemy's outposts at Nogales no bullet crossed American territory and I can assure you that this danger will not exist in the future, since the firing of my troops is directed by the chiefs and officers and they have instructions to prevent injuries in foreign territory. With respect to the pact executed in January at Naco, this was nullified when Maytorena, failing in his promise, occupied Naco and made it his base of operations, opening it to international traffic against what was agreed upon. It is a rule generally accepted that obligations stipulated in a contract are binding on the contracting parties equally and that upon the failure of one of them in his promises the other is relieved of his. I entreat of you once more that all affairs of an international character be treated directly with the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army charged with the Executive Power of the nation, of whom I am a subordinate.

* * * It is impossible for detachments of United States troops when pursuing a particular band of outlaws to determine whether they are all residents of the United States or whether all or some of them are armed marauding bands who have crossed the border into United States territory for the purpose of running off cattle and possibly other property.

This being the case, I have deemed it my duty to continue using military to pursue and capture these bandits and feel that under the circumstances I am fully meeting restrictions placed by statutes upon use of military in suppressing lawlessness within a State.

Any other course would render troops practically useless in suppressing lawlessness and would limit their activity to the duty of acting as guards for certain localities.

Up to the present time troops of my command have had three fights with bands of outlaws in all of which outlaws were aggressors.

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEXAS, August 30, 1915.

If an uprising should occur without sufficient troops to put it down it will mean the murder of hundreds of defenseless people, the destruction of millions of property and a loss of prestige. These things we cannot afford to risk. The measures I wish to take are largely those of prevention. If there is an adequate force on the ground no uprising will occur or if it does it can be easily put down. If I do not have an adequate force ready for instant use a single act of indiscretion by a subordinate commander on either side may start a conflagration that will extend along the entire border and result in an international crisis. Owing to the great preponderance of the Mexican over the American population all along the border, to the excitable character of the Mexicans and to the vengeful feeling that exists among Americans due to the recent outrages committed by Mexican band of raiders well known to have been composed partly of Mexican soldiers, the situation as I see it now is likely to give rise to such serious consequences that further delay is dangerous. A reference to my official reports and recommendations will show that I have heretofore been very conservative in regard to calling for more troops largely because I wished to avoid unnecessary expense. The time for economy has passed, more troops should be supplied regardless of expense, and whatever action it may be proposed to take should be taken at once.

The Confidential Agent of the Constitutionalist Government to the President.

WASHINGTON, September 6, 1915.

YOUR EXCELLECY: I have to day addressed his excellency Robert Lansing the following note, which is self-explanatory:

MY DEAR MR. LANSING: On account of the recent local press dispatches respecting the border disturbances in Texas and in consideration of the fact that the public is given to understand that some of the Constitutionalist soldiers have taken part in such disturbances, I issued a statement to the press yesterday, which they did not publish in full, and copy of which I attach hereto.

In the name of the Carranza Government, which I represent in this country, I must protest before your excellency against the insinuations of the press, which tend to mislead public opinion and embroil the situation, involving the army of Mr. Carranza in the border disturbances in Texas. I most emphatically deny such participation or in fact even any continuation or toleration on our part of any such disagreeable acts. General Nafarrate, chief of the Matamoros garrison, has already offered his cooperation to the Texas authorities to the end of avoiding and suppressing such acts; but our efforts will not be altogether sufficient to quiet such agitation, for the simple reason that the promoters of these disturbances reside in Texas territory.

If the American Government carefully investigates the origin and real nature of these acts, as I have no doubt it is doing, it will be found that the Constitutionalist are not the authors of such stupid acts.

The Constitutionalist Army is devoting all of its energies to the pacification of Mexico and its only task now is to apply the "finishing touches" to the remnants of the Villa faction, in order to consecrate themselves later, as citizens, to assist Mr. Carranza in the reorganization of civil government and the reconstruction of the country; and it is absurd to suppose that in the execution of such a program they would attempt to embroil the country in international complications.

The American press in general and especially that of Washington, has been inventing all kinds of falsehoods and using every possible means to obstruct the work of Mr. Carranza and all those who cooperate with him in the civil strife of Mexico, which first began against oppression and which continues against the old reactionary enemies, often reaching a climax of insults and calumnies; and although this in itself is reproachable and unjust, it leaves room to suppose that it is due to carelessness and little scruples which the American press possesses, to accept and print any sensational news and which in this case usually comes from the enemies of the Constitutionalist Party; and now it is not only condemnable but grave and dangerous that the newspapers should impress upon the public mind the idea that Mr. Carranza or his followers endeavor to create a hostile sentiment towards the American people and bring about a conflict with the United States.

Unfortunately, it is not within our power to stop such work on the part of the press; moreover the difficult situation in which we find ourselves on account of there being no recognized government in Mexico from which may be derived a legal status so as to act in a legal capacity in the prosecution of such attacks, such conditions become more grave when we cannot even secure the impartiality of the press because they will not take our information even when it is official, or even the rectification of false reports in order that the public will be in possession of the true facts and thus form correct opinions.

On account of the foregoing obstacles and in view of the fact that I am unable to remedy such difficulties, in my extremity I find it necessary to direct this letter to your excellency in the hope that it will serve to inform the American Government, in my capacity as Representative of the Government of Mr. Carranza, that the insidious press dispatches referred to, which try to involve the Constitutionalist in the disturbances in Texas, are absolutely false and without any foundation, at the same time assuring you that we are the first to deplore such a state of affairs.

I trust that the wisdom and prudence of the American Government will triumph over the common enemy of our amicable international relations and I hope that the truth will soon be established.

BULLETIN.

SEPTEMBER 5, 1915.

Commenting on the reports in the press of today that some Carrancista deserters seem to be taking part in recent raids along the border, Mr. Arredondo, Confidential Agent of the Constitutionalist Government in this city, and authorized by it, emphatically denied these reports branding them as pure fakes, but he added that unfortunately the press did not go into the matter deep enough to ascertain the truth and indiscriminately accepted all alarming reports regardless of the source; that the enemies of the Constitutionalist Government and certain Texans, knowing this, availed themselves of the opportunity to put in circulation rumors of a sensational nature, tending always to prejudice the public against Mr. Carranza and his government. Mr. Arredondo said further, that he invited the press to withhold any opinion on the situation for a few days, when, he feels confident, the American Government will have satisfied itself as to the source of the present border disturbances. He also said that it is untrue that General Nafarrete has ten thousand men stretched along the border; he has sent about two thousand men and no more, he added, and in so far as General Trevino is concerned, he yesterday defeated the Villistas at Icamole, near Monterrey, which proves that he is very far from the frontier.

I transmit the present note to Your Excellency in order that it may also come to your knowledge with the least possible delay, and I avail [etc.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 10, 1915.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your letter of September 6, 1915, addressed to the President, in regard to the insinuations of the press which, you say, involve the army of General Venustiano Carranza in the disturbances along the Texas border.

In reply I quote below, for such explanation as you may care to make in connection therewith, the substance of a telegram which General Frederick Funston sent to the Secretary of War under date of August 27, 1915:

Mexican armed parties on Mexican side have fired on detachments United States troops every day since last Sunday. With exception of firing at international bridge, Brownsville, all other incidents of firing across river have occurred at or in vicinity of Progreso ferry opposite Mercedes, at which point Mexicans are entrenched firing American side. Casualties so far have been one soldier killed, one officer badly wounded, three soldiers wounded, two horses killed. Officer in command in Brownsville district reports this date he is convinced Carrancista soldiers are taking part disorders on border and that Carrancista commander of district of Matamoros either can not or does not desire to control his men. Carrancista commander Matamoros could easily stop these outrages if he so desired. I fear that if something is not done to prevent our soldiers being fired on from Mexican side, serious international consequences may result. Mexican armed bands continue to cross river at various points going into interior, robbing and terrorizing American citizens. Carrancista commander Matamoros has taken pains to leave impression that these bands are deserters from his forces. It is noted, however, that when pursued they cross river and rejoin their commands. Situation appears to be gradually growing worse and unrest is extending all along border up to and including Del Rio.

According to another telegram from General Funston, dated September 4, quoting a message from Captain Frank McCoy, it appears that on the morning of September 4 a sheriff, certain rangers and civil officials were fired upon by about fifty Mexicans at Cavazos crossing. The telegram adds that on the night before these same Mexicans raided Ojodelagua, a small Mexican village on the American side of the international line. Captain McCoy's message concludes with the following statement:

Certain business men of Ojodelagua inform me that the band was made up of well-known smugglers and horse thieves with about six Carrancista soldiers. From the volleys fired today and the Mauser carbines used as well as Winchester I would surmise that Carrancista soldiers were engaged. A detachment of Carrancistas has been stationed at Anzalduas, a small village on the railroad in sight of Cavazos Crossing.

It appears from telegrams received from General Funston that an American aeroplane has been repeatedly fired upon from the Mexican side of the line. The following is the substance of a telegram received from General Funston under date of September 4, 1915:

Following just received from Colonel Bullar, Brownsville: "Aeroplane now in air in vicinity of Brownsville has been fired on three separate times; some 100 shots in all were counted. It has been over United States territory all the time. Our outpost at international bridge and the one at Brownsville pumping-plant locate firing as coming from big bend in river just west of Brownsville, probably Mexican outpost, as the firing on aeroplane reported on September 1st was from same locality. The troops occupying south bank of river are Carrancistas. At same time that firing on aeroplane was going on our outpost at Brownsville pumping plant was fired on."

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEXAS, September 10, 1915.

ADJUTANT GENERAL ARMY,
Washington, D. C.

664. If approved by War Department I propose to issue following order: incorporating [in cooperation?] with Customs authorities to prohibit the crossing of live stock from Mexico into the United States except at regular custom-houses; to prohibit the crossing of individuals of whatever age or sex except at licensed ferries and international bridges and to seize and turn over to immigration authorities all persons caught in the act of crossing at prohibited points; to establish at all licensed ferries and international bridges in cooperation with the immigration authorities a system of military examining posts under charge of officers who will be instructed to prevent the crossing from Mexico into the United States of all male persons capable of bearing arms who cannot satisfy the officer in charge and the immigration officers that their intentions in coming to the United States are legitimate; also to prohibit crossing into United States of any armed persons of any age or sex.

All officers and enlisted men on border patrol have been warned to avoid exposing themselves any more than absolutely necessary for the proper performance of their duties, thus reducing to the minimum the danger of drawing fire across the international boundary from irresponsible parties on Mexican side.

Instructions have already been given directing officers in command along the river to warn state rangers and sheriffs' posses to keep from international boundary except in cases where they may actually be in pursuit of marauding bands; also directing that where state and county officers and United States soldiers may be engaged together in repelling fire from Mexican side the senior military officer or soldier present will assume absolute control.

It is believed that with the force now at my command the enforcement of the above orders will in course of a short time largely reduce if not prevent the activities of armed bands who may be either marauding bands or outlaws and horse thieves from American side. It is well established that heretofore many individuals composing bandit bands who have given us so much trouble have been made up of persons crossing from Mexican side and getting arms from concealed stores on American side and then starting on prearranged raid. When pursued and hard pressed either by sheriffs' posses, rangers, or soldiers the bands have broken up and recrossed into Mexico.

Approval by wire of above instructions is requested.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, September 15, 1915—3 p. m.

Raids into Arizona and thefts of American horses and cattle by bands of Mexicans are increasing. Raids are made by both Villa and Carranza troops, now camped near boundary. Calles refuses answer complaints, saying has orders Carranza hold no communication with Consuls. Maytorena apparently unable compel his subordinates to return animals stolen from American side, such animals being now sorely required by his army. More than thousand American soldiers now concentrated Nogales, Arizona, but understand they have orders leave policing of county to civil authorities. Result is Mexicans raid practically without opposition.

Respectfully urge that Department seriously consider giving military more authority with orders to station detachments at points on border east and west of Nogales. Driven by necessity, raiders growing bolder; and obviously civil authorities, lacking numbers and organization, cannot keep raiders out of Arizona or protect American property. Today Maytorenistas crossed border within four miles Nogales escaping with twenty American horses. Unless immediate adequate military action is taken possibly a situation may early develop not unlike that now existing all Texas border. This after conference with sheriff of Santa Cruz County, who says, if military does not patrol line to prevent depredations, he must organize civilian body for that purpose. Present situation is not critical but in my opinion may become serious unless military is given more authority.

Following is substance report just received Colonel Blocksom,

About 10 this morning sheriff Vann telephoned that employee of Gonzales Diego, Spaniard living between Brownsville pumping plant and city, had been fired on by Mexicans other side and one horse killed.

I sent Lieut. Glass with 20 men to investigate. Shot was fired just as he arrived. Glass left detachment under cover and appeared on bank alone with hat in hand. He saw a man in civilian clothes fishing on Mexican bank and called to him. Man in reply to Glass' question said he had heard no firing. Man then went back to levee picked up rifle; four others appeared and all opened fire on Glass, no shots having yet been fired from our side. Glass got under cover and had men open fire. Mexicans reinforced by another squad. Consul Johnston at 12.15 informed me American soldiers were firing at Mexican soldiers but that Mexicans were not returning fire and asked me to stop it. I sent word to Glass withdraw but he had already done so and reached camp about one. Major Wolf 4th infantry was with detachment before firing occurred and saw fresh bullet holes in Diego's house made at time horse was shot. Mexicans had one man wounded three horses shot; no casualties our side.

Following 8 p. m. from Major Anderson, Harlingen:

About 2 p. m. today outpost at Red House Ferry one mile east Donna pump fired upon from Mexican side returned by our outposts of 10 men. Estimated 50 men other side and about 100 shots fired by each side but no casualties our side. Mexicans withdrew and none now seen. 2 troops nearly able to handle situation.

It is evident that attack at Brownsville was made by Carranza soldiers and that commander endeavored to make it appear our soldiers fired first.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 1, 1915—7 p. m.

This Government is in possession of an affidavit that on the night of September 23 a Carrancista officer crossed the Rio Grande at Los Pelados Crossing with a detachment of troops which had recently arrived from Matamoros and, landing on American soil, attacked a small detachment of American soldiers stationed at the crossing, killing two of them, one of them being first carried across and killed on the Mexican side. His ears and head were then cut off and his body thrown into the river. The horses and the arms captured from these soldiers were taken and held in the cuartel of the Carrancista soldiers a quarter of a mile distant from the crossing.

You are instructed to represent to the Carranza authorities that this matter is so serious, coupled as it is with many others of a similar nature, and in view of the fact that General Carranza claims to be in control of this entire district, that this Government can not view these outrages other than as acts in which the Carranza troops in that vicinity participate either because of instructions from headquarters or of their own volition. In either case the responsibility appears to rest upon General Carranza. A shipment of a carload of ammunition from Monterey to the small garrison of Matamoros on September 13, when the movement of supplies has invariably been from north to south, is a circumstance which has serious bearing on the case.

You will also say to the Carrancista authorities that this Government expects them immediately to issue orders which will definitely stop these reprehensible acts. Failure to issue effective orders will imply total lack of authority in a section long claimed to have been under the complete domination of the Carrancistas.

Formal reply just received, usual heading:

In due reply I have the honor to inform you that the First Chief has read with surprise the contents of the note referred to. Inasmuch as he has received no notice whatever referring to the acts mentioned by you, the First Chief has issued the necessary orders to the General in Chief of the zone to the end that with the greatest brevity possible he order the necessary investigation for the clearing up of this matter and that he render the information he may obtain, in order that the First Chief's headquarters may take proper measures for the severe punishment of those found guilty, if, unfortunately, this deed should be confirmed. I will thank you at the same time if you will communicate to the Department of State that the First Chief's headquarters deems unjustified the supposition that it could be even possible that it had ordered the commission of the acts referred to, especially since the Constitutionalist Government has given numerous and eloquent proofs of the sentiment which animates it in preserving the frank and harmonious friendship in its relations with the United States.

The Confidential Agent of the Constitutionalist Government to the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, October 6, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. LANSING: I am in receipt of a telegram from Mr. Carranza relative to the complaint made by the Department of State that a Constitutionalist officer crossed the Rio Grande at Los Pelados, on September 23 last, with a detachment and attacked a small garrison of American troops, with the result that two Americans were killed, one of whom was mutilated and killed on Mexican territory. In reply to the Department's complaint, Mr. Carranza advises me that he has asked for a report on the matter from the commander of the military zone, because he has no information of the occurrence and in order to take such action, in view of the report, as the case may require. Mr. Carranza directs me, furthermore, to make it clear before the Department that it would be unjust to presume that the acts hereinbefore mentioned, if it is true that they occurred, met with the acquiescence of the Constitutionalist Government. It would seem absurd for the First Chief to cause any friction between the two countries, inasmuch as he has shown by positive deeds his sentiments of frank cordiality towards the American Government. Ever since the beginning of the disturbances in the frontier and with the purpose of avoiding any difficulties, the First Chief has been dictating orders tending to suppress any friction between American and Mexican forces and has omitted no effort to attain the object sought.

With assurance [etc.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 6, 1915.

SIR: Referring to your letter of September 1, 1915, in regard to a statement that American soldiers have been firing across the Rio Grande at Mexicans, the Department informs you that it is advised by the War Department that the commanding officer of the Southern Department and troops along the Mexican border reports as follows:

The firing complained of occurred at Progreso. An unlicensed ferry had been operated at the point and when marauding bands begun crossing the river into American territory a detachment of the 12th Cavalry was stationed there and ordered to prevent all crossing. In order to carry out their orders it was necessary to establish a patrol in the vicinity. This patrol was fired on by armed parties from the Mexican side on three successive days. Our patrols had to return the fire in order to prevent the detachment from being driven away from the crossing. The third attack was participated in by about 70 armed men, some of them evidently Carranza soldiers since 2 of the latter were wounded there. It was in repelling this attack that one soldier was killed and one officer and 3 soldiers were wounded.

Detachments of soldiers engaged in the performance of their prescribed duty of patrolling have been fired on at several other places along the river and in the city of Brownsville itself. In some cases the fire was not returned but in most cases it was returned because that was the only way by which the detachments could continue to carry out their orders.

In not a single case, however, have our detachments been the aggressors. They have returned the fire only in self-defense and firing has been stopped as soon as the object was accomplished.

All United States troops on border duty were instructed, in order to avoid the danger of drawing fire from the Mexican side, to locate their camps out of sight from the Mexican side and to avoid exposing themselves to view any more than was absolutely necessary to properly perform their duties.

General Nafarrate, the Mexican commander in Matamoros, has been requested on several occasions to cooperate with military authorities on the American side of the border, with a view to preventing the attacks on United States troops. He promised to do so but so far has failed to accomplish anything.

FORT SAM HOUSTON, October 21, 1915.

It becomes increasingly evident that we can expect no help from Carranza commander in Matamoros in preventing these raids. De la Rosa, who led attack on passenger train on 18th, was on streets of Reynosa yesterday morning and Carranza officials made no attempt to arrest him.

It is recommended that strong representations be made at once to General Carranza and that he be requested to give orders to commanding officer Matamoros district to break up bandit bands on Mexican side. If prompt measures are not then taken with that end in view, I recommend port of Brownsville be closed absolutely and that no intercourse across the Rio Grande be allowed at any point in Brownsville cavalry patrol district.

United States military authorities on Texas border complain against lack of vigorous efforts on the part of Mexican commander at Matamoros in preventing raids on American soil. They state that De la Rosa, who led attack on passenger train on 18th, was on streets of Reynosa on morning of 20th but that de facto authorities made no attempt to arrest him. Several Americans have been killed within the past few days as result of raids.

Immediately request Chief Executive to issue positive orders to commander at Matamoros to break up bands of bandits on Mexican side; also to arrest De la Rosa.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, October 27, 1915.

Mexican border troubles are growing more serious. A number of soldiers and a State quarantine officer murdered in last few days by robber bandits crossing from their headquarters in Mexico opposite Brownsville, Texas. There appears to be a well organized band who make unexpected raids into Texas and murder, rob and terrorize our people and quickly retreat into Mexico where they are not molested. If you can see your way clear to urge upon General Carranza to take prompt and vigorous action to suppress the conditions herein described, I am sure the situation will soon be much relieved and your help will be much appreciated. I make this request after full conference with Commanding General Funston who is patriotically doing everything within his power to meet this grave situation. However, on account of having to respect the border line, your army and our rangers find great difficulty in apprehending the invading bands who escape to Mexico. The cooperation of General Carranza is not only necessary for the protection of our citizens but the citizens of Mexico now residing in Texas.

The Department of State would very greatly appreciate your cooperation, with the view of quieting border conditions in the district of Brownsville. The Department feels assured that a solicitous word from you to state and county officials in that district would prove most efficacious in allaying race prejudice and in restraining indiscreet conduct, which the Department believes would not be indulged in if the officials and residents of that portion of your state should realize the responsibility they are unconsciously imposing upon the National Government by failure to give consideration to the seriousness of the situation.

The de facto government of Mexico has been urged immediately to increase its vigilance along that section of the border, so that the raids from its territory shall cease, and also to direct its officials and the residents in that district to eschew hostility toward Americans, to the end that peaceful and orderly conditions may prevail, to the mutual advantage of both countries and especially to that locality.

In a conference at San Antonio, General Funston expressed himself as particularly anxious regarding situation in Agua Prieta and the safe transportation of the Carranza troops; stated he had positive assurance that Villa intended to attack from American side; also felt so concerned that in addition to precautions already taken he expected to go to Douglas himself today. It can hardly be conceived that Villa would attempt an undertaking so rash and positively ruinous. Lower Rio Grande district continues to be extremely unsatisfactory. General Funston believes that if the two ringleaders can be caught disorders will cease.

Villa's troops made a serious attack on Agua Prieta about 1 a. m. lasting for 2 hours with great intensity; after that, intermittent artillery fire until about 4.30 a. m. Many bullets fell in United States territory resulting so far as known at present in wounding of 4 soldiers, 2 civilians. No fire was opened by United States troops for reasons as stated by General Davis, who was in command, that the losses were caused by infantry fire from the south and southwest and that it was absolutely impracticable to accomplish anything without crossing the boundary. While I believe that both sides are doing all in their power to prevent bullets falling in American territory I can not too strongly bring to attention War Department the fact well known to all officers familiar with situation that Agua Prieta cannot be attacked seriously without endangering the lives American soldiers and citizens and that it is absolutely impossible to stop or prevent such fire unless we have authority to cross international boundary and drive off the attacking Villa troops. Unless we have this authority in advance it will be too late when the necessity arises to prevent serious losses on American side. A message just received states Villa proposes to launch a determined attack as soon as a body 1,000 troops from Colonia Morelos arrives; head of column of reinforcements now in sight.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 24, 1915.

We are informed that General Carranza has closed the ports of Yucatan against the exportation of sisal. This is a very serious matter since Yucatan is the only source from which the manufacturers of this country secure material for binding-twine and this is the period of the year when the twine necessary for the coming summer must be manufactured. Please see Carranza at once and call his attention to the great embarrassment that the farmers of this country are likely to suffer if the shipment of sisal continues to be interfered with as it has been for nearly a month, and in addition to this emphasize the loss which is caused to the people of that country who derive so much revenue from the production of sisal. It is imperatively necessary that some arrangement be made by which this sisal can be released for export. We are informed that there are 200,000 bales now in Progreso awaiting shipment. Bring this to the attention of Douglas, Carranza's Washington attorney who is in Vera Cruz or will be there soon. It is difficult to overestimate the importance of this matter and you will therefore present it most urgently.

Binding-twine situation very critical. Unless sisal can be exported from Progreso in very short time, there will be shortage of binding-twine for harvest in this country and in countries for which we manufacture. Please present the matter most urgently to Carranza, securing Judge Douglas's assistance. See if some arrangement cannot be made whereby sisal can be exported and the price of same held in trust to be subjected to same action as could be taken in regard to the sisal itself. If Carranza is afraid that ships entering Progreso for sisal would carry food, this, too, might be arranged with American dealers who purchase sisal. Talk over situation fully with Carranza and secure agreement upon some plan whereby sisal can be exported at once. It is impossible to overestimate the urgency of the matter. If importation of sisal cannot be secured, price of binding twine will rise because of scarcity and a great and unnecessary burden will be imposed upon the entire farming section.

In case you are obliged to communicate the President's intentions, explain to Carranza that this is done in the interest of peace and amity between the two countries and with no wish or intention to interfere with the internal affairs of Mexico, which we shall carefully avoid. In case he enters into a discussion of the matter you may, upon your own initiative and not as if under direction from us, remind him that when Huerta attempted to blockade Tampico this Government informed Huerta that it could not allow the interruption of commerce at Tampico. In the conference yesterday the terms "closed port and open port" were used instead of the term "blockade". Therefore it is understood that in view of General Carranza's order closing the port his agreement yesterday to annul that order means that Mexican consuls will now be authorized to clear vessels for Progreso. An interesting feature of the discussion, in which Cabrera was the spokesman, was the point made by Carranza himself that in his opinion a request from the British Government to the American Government during our civil war to discontinue its blockade of New Orleans because British manufacturers needed the cotton would be an appropriate comparison.

EL PASO, June 27, 1915.

Generals Huerta and Orozco are now in Federal building. Agent Department of Justice, Beckham, has received instructions to detain them. Prior to the receipt of these instructions, by reason of your June 26 and urgency of situation, I insisted upon course pursued and assumed responsibility therefor. Late last night I learned through railroad of Huerta's plans to leave train at Newman Station, twenty miles north of El Paso. With Beckham, District Clerk, two deputy marshals, and Colonel G. H. Morgan accompanied by twenty-five soldiers that he carried to prevent disorder or any attempt at interference, we went to Newman Station this morning and found Orozco and Huerta's son-in-law awaiting train. We had prepared warrants to use if necessary, but found it unnecessary. Beckham invited Huerta and Orozco to accompany us to Federal building without arrest, which they did. Without display, we have treated them with consideration and every proper courtesy. Huerta is suave though Orozco is not suave. I am sure they had revolutionary plans and that the action here has been both right and timely. While I assume full responsibility for the course taken, I respectfully suggest and recommend that both Colonel Morgan and Mr. Beckham be commended by their respective departments for the discretion shown by them.

At request Mayor, El Paso, Huerta and Orozco were removed Fort Bliss, where the military authorities are permitting them to be held upon the responsibility of the Department of Justice. Huerta and Orozco were cheered vigorously by crowd Mexican refugees and sympathizers on street as they left Federal building. Huerta thanked me cordially for courteous treatment given him. * * *

The Confidential Agent of the Constitutionalist Government of Mexico to the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, July 1, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY: [Review of the overthrow of Madero and the assumption of power by Huerta; the overthrow of Huerta by the Constitutionalist Party led by Carranza; charges Generals Mondragon, Blanquet, Reyes and Felix Diaz with planning the overthrow of Madero, and Huerta with the execution of the plan; charges Huerta with ordering the murder of President Madero and Vice President Pino Suárez; refers to Huerta's public declaration of his intention to reside in the United States, his conferences in New York with Mondragon, Blanquet, Felix Diaz and others for the purpose of planning a new revolutionary movement against Mexico.]

The Department of Justice of the United States has been able to catch Huerta, accompanied by members of his family, on the banks of the Rio Grande, at the time in which, guided by Pascual Orozco, he was on his way to invade Mexican territory to continue disturbing order in that country and give occasion for prolonging the civil war.

The Government of my country having been informed of these events and being fully convinced that the purposes of Huerta, Blanquet, Mondragon and Felix Diaz are no other than to lead a new revolution into Mexico, which will undoubtedly result in greater evils and complications for both countries, and with a view to punishing in accordance with our laws and as demanded by Mexico's indignant conscience those who forced the Mexican people to resort to arms, has directed me through the Department of Foreign Affairs to request, as I now have the honor to do, that your excellency's Government kindly place Victoriano Huerta at the disposal of the Mexican authorities and order the detention of Generals Felix Diaz, Manuel Mondragon and Aurelio Blanquet, to the end that they be taken into Mexico, where the crimes they are charged with occurred and where they should be tried in accordance with the law.

* * * The principal charge made against Victoriano Huerta is contained in Article 2, Section 1, of the Extradition Treaty of February 1899, in force between the United Mexican States and the United States of America, and expressly defined in the final part of Article 7 of the same treaty as not of a political character.⁶⁴

The natural desire of my Government to punish the guilty parties has not been decreased by the circumstance of its not having so far been recognized as a perfectly established government, on account of the strife which is still raging in Mexico against the remnants of the reactionary elements. This very same circumstance may serve as an excuse for the non-compliance of the requisites and formalities [sic] which in normal conditions should attend every request for extradition. But even if, because of the absence of recognition, it may be thought that the above-mentioned extradition treaty may be accidentally in suspense, some allowance should be made for the indignation felt by the Mexican people due to the offense made to its dignity and the attack upon its conservation; and, because of the gravity and far-reaching significance of the crimes committed by Huerta against the integrity of the Mexican Government, this application seems justifiable, since the violations of the natural and immutable laws of human conscience must at all times and in all civilized nations fall under the discipline of the penal law.

Moreover, it [is] a well-established and sanctioned by practice principle of international law that the changes and internal disturbance of a sovereign state have no decisive influence upon its international consideration; they do not exempt it from any obligation, nor deprive it of its rights within the province of foreign relations; and in the present case our application is just, legally sound and emanates from a real government from the point of view of international law, and one controlling and exercising authority nearly over the entire Mexican Republic, which still holds its unity, its identity and its sovereignty, and whose international relations were interrupted only because of the usurpation of Huerta.

The surrender of Huerta by the American Government to the Constitutionalist Government presided [over] by Mr. Carranza would be in keeping with international usage and provided by an extradition treaty between the two countries; and would signalize, moreover, the moral justification of the policy of the Government represented by the Honorable Woodrow Wilson with regard to the Mexican situation, who first declined to recognize Huerta as the Chief Executive of Mexico, and now, that the latter has sought an asylum in American territory as a fugitive of Mexican justice, would [sic] deliver him to the government he betrayed, in order that he may be tried according to law.

This would be an act which would set in relief the loftiness of American justice and a proof to Europe of America's high sense of morality.

I trust that this application may be accepted in the spirit hereinbefore set forth and I confide in the eternal principles of justice and the welfare of the community, guiding the life and development of this great country, worthily represented by an honest administration, that the request of my Government may be granted.

EXCELLENCY: In reference to the request of the Governor of the State of Chihuahua, addressed to the Governor of Texas, for the arrest and detention of Victoriano Huerta, a Mexican citizen, now sojourning at El Paso, Texas, for the crime of murder, with a view to his extradition under the Treaty of April 24, 1899, I am instructed by Mr. Diaz Lombardo to state that the Provisional Government of Mexico will, in event of the surrender of the accused to the Chihuahua State authorities, guarantee to him a fair and impartial trial by a duly constituted civil tribunal of competent jurisdiction.

In any event, my Government entertains the hope that the Governor of Texas will find in the precedent by the arrest and detention of Castillo Brito by the United States authorities in 1913, pursuant to the request of the so-called government at that time in control of Mexico City, a sufficient justification for holding Huerta until the question of our right to procure his extradition, by means entirely lawful, can be properly determined.

Political conditions here generally continue to be the same as have been reported. Huerta expects to give bond the morning of July 6. He could give bond any time, as he has sufficient cash here. He is remaining in jail for political effect with Mexican people. New revolution seems to be going ahead; their partisans claim that Sonora is already for them and that they will have Juarez this week. Have conferred with District Attorney Camp. We agree that detention of Huerta without bond and his removal from border is urgently necessary. That would tend to break the spirit of the movement. Pinkney of the Department of Justice thinks Iturbide is here; the movement is very thorough and strong. If Immigration authorities could take Huerta, remove him from here and hold him without bond, it is possible that Huerta could be induced to return to Europe voluntarily, if Washington so desires.

CONFIDENTIAL AGENCY OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO,
Washington, September 22, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: The Conventionist Government, which I have the honor to represent, having knowledge of the promises made by Mr. Venustiano Carranza regarding the settlement of claims to be presented by foreign governments for damages incurred in the lives and property of their respective nationals during the period of civil war through which the Republic of Mexico has been passing, believes it pertinent to state, and I do respectfully so state in accordance with instructions received therefrom, that in conformity with Section viii, Article 72 of our Federal Constitution, it is incumbent exclusively upon our Federal Congress to acknowledge and order the payment of national debts. Wherefore, any obligation, even though of a moral nature, entered into by Mr. Carranza, who lacks authorization to represent the country, even in the capacity of simple Executive, would lack validity, and the claims be indefinitely postponed, since the preconstitutional period which the Carranza faction deems necessary in order that the revolutionary reforms may be carried into effect, is likewise indefinite.

The Conventionist Government, conscious of the international obligations of the Republic, admits and accepts as a fact the settlement of the said claims, but considers it necessary to restore previously and without loss of time the constitutional order, among other reasons, so that it may proceed in compliance with our laws to an immediate examination of the said claims.

PROTECTION OF AMERICAN CITIZENS AND INTERESTS. WITHDRAWAL OF AMERICANS FROM MEXICO.⁶⁶

NOTE.—In the absence of diplomatic relations between the two countries, the Government of the United States continued the practice observed in 1914 of instructing its consuls and special representatives, where action in behalf of American citizens was necessary, to make representations to the civil or the military chief in control in his district. Such action was taken in hundreds of cases, many of which involved the protection not only of citizens of the United States but also other foreigners. In the majority of the cases the representations were requests for the cessation of the abuses stated or for protection against threatened danger, eliciting only routine replies. The case of the Los Mochis colony of Americans, however, involves more than perfunctory responses, and extracts from that voluminous correspondence are here given; and the case of John B. McManus appears under another heading. In the cases involving protection of foreigners other than Americans, above mentioned, none but routine relations with their respective governments appear to have existed, except as shown under the heading, "Protection by the United States of British [etc.] interests in Mexico."

Where the danger of remaining was considered unavoidable, this Government repeated its advice of previous years, to leave Mexico. Instances of such advice are the following telegrams: to the American Embassy, March 2, 1912 (For. Rel. 1912, p. 731); to the American Consul General, Mexico City, August 27, 1913 (For. Rel. 1913, p. 827); to American consular officers in Mexico, August 27, 1913 (Id. 895); to all American consulates in Mexico, April 20, 1914 (For. Rel. 1914, p. 670); to all American consuls in Mexico, April 22, 1914 (Id. 671). Repetition of this advice during 1915 occurs, infra, under the dates September 11 and October 9.

Owing to disbandment of groups of Villa forces and to the scarcity of food, Indians are probably in larger numbers than heretofore. Because of the distance, we can do little more than afford refuge at the coast line. Settlers refuse to abandon their property, and I see only two solutions to afford safety to lives and property:

First. Sufficient pressure to be put on Mexican Government by our Government to compel the immediate garrisoning of the Yaqui Valley with large forces of Mexican troops.

Alternative: An expeditionary force of my command with discretionary orders to land as required by occasion.

Prompt action can be secured only by extreme pressure on the Mexican Government, as the local authority, General Dieguez, has his attention on operations to the northward and will not leave sufficient force in the Yaqui Valley unless he is forced to do so.

No indication any Carranza forces returning to Los Mochis. In my opinion, Carrancista campaign against Indians was a farce from beginning to end and had for its sole object to gather up the loot which the Indians had collected. When this was completed, the Carranza forces were withdrawn, as it appeared always to have been their intention to do, leaving the Americans in the vicinity to mercy of Indians. The Carranza authorities must have known that the withdrawing of his forces from Fuerte River would result in great Indian raids on the Americans, especially as the Carrancista Indian campaign from Los Mochis had embittered the Indians against all the people of the locality. The result has been a shameful loss of property and the terrifying of over one hundred American citizens. Under these circumstances it appears the least that should be done by way of reparation is for Carranza force to immediately re-garrison Los Mochis, so as to save the valuable American-owned property still left there, and to prosecute agitators and inaugurate real campaign against these Indians so as to remove all threats of danger from San Blas for very long time to come.

Mazatlan, November 19, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to advise that on November 18, 1916, I received wire from Acting Consular Agent at Los Mochis, Sinaloa, from Topolobampo, stating that Indians and Villistas had occupied the city, same having been abandoned by the Carrancistas; that American property had been destroyed and American colony compelled to flee to save their lives; that if assistance is not given at once, the colony will lose their all and become destitute.

I at once called the attention of the local military authorities, asking for protection; also wired to General Muñoz, military chief of this State, and to General Dieguez. I herewith enclose copies of these telegrams.

I have [etc.],

MAZATLAN, November 19, 1915.

I request protection for American property in Los Mochis. According to advices received, Americans were compelled to abandon their property and flee to save their lives.

I request the pursuit, capture and punishment of those responsible for the killing of American citizen Goldsborough, assassinated at Bateve on November 4.

I call to your attention your message of November 8. I am notified from Cocoyolitas Ranch that, in spite of your orders, nothing has been done to remedy the situation as to guaranties of foreign interests in that locality.

MAZATLAN, November 19, 1915.

I respectfully request protection for the lives and property of Americans in the State of Sinaloa.

On November 4, an American citizen was killed at Bateve; on November 6, an American citizen was assassinated at Quimichis Ranch; on November 4, the Cocoyolitas Ranch was raided; and on November 16, American property destroyed at Los Mochis, and the American families forced to abandon their property and to flee for their lives to Topolobampo.

Up to date I have no advices of anything being done, in any of the above cited cases, by the authorities to remedy the situation. I therefore appeal to you.

Immediately take up with General Carranza the urgent necessity of rushing troops to Los Mochis to protect American lives and property, as the troops promised by General Dieguez have not yet arrived and attacks are continuing. Telegram received this morning states that yesterday attacking party looted and burned American property and that these raids were becoming daily occurrences.

Say to General Carranza that if he is unable to send immediately sufficient troops to protect American interests, this Government expects him to permit the landing of an adequate force of American marines to furnish protection to American interests at Los Mochis. Another warship is being ordered to Topolobampo to meet any emergency that may arise. These representations are being made directly to General Carranza as the Department is unaware of the present whereabouts of Silliman and Acuña.

You may say to General Carranza that, in view of the fact that this Government, with an earnest desire to aid in the restoration of peace in Mexico, allowed the passage of his troops across American territory in order to reinforce General Calles, it would seem that General Carranza should have no objection to the landing of American marines, in case of his failure or inability to furnish protection to American interests at Los Mochis.

I thank you for the offer which the United States Government makes through you to land troops of the American Navy at Los Mochis and afford protection to its citizens, but I by no means accept this proposition, and you may state to the American Department that, if the lives and property of the residents of the region in question lack guaranties at present, it may suggest to the American citizens that they try to cross over to territory controlled by Constitutionalist forces, where they will enjoy every manner of guaranty, or else, if they prefer, that they embark upon some ship of the United States, in order to keep away from the danger in which they are now situated.

General Muñoz to Consul Alger.

SAN BLAS, November 19, 1915.

Referring to your attentive message of even date [Inclosure 1], allow me to inform you, that at all times every guaranty has been afforded the Americans at Los Mochis. The carrying out of operations has caused the temporary retiring of forces from that vicinity, where practically no protection was needed from us. For some time some Americans ably aided by the Company have been in accord with the Indians, their imprudence even going so far as to bring in on various occasions arms and ammunition, as is proven by original documents in my possession. Although they themselves have brought about the evils from which they are now suffering, you must admit the serious injury we are compelled to suffer by such acts, for, in addition to the lives of brave soldiers who have been killed, there have also been lost those of honorable laborers who have worked for the welfare of the same company, repaying thus, not only the guaranties that have always been given them but also the hospitality and riches which our country has bestowed on them.

Notwithstanding the foregoing I am disposed to grant them every protection that is without prejudice to exemplary punishment of those who have infamously exploited the lives of our brothers.

By wire I am giving most urgent orders to General Nájera to give the necessary protection to the Cocoyolitas Ranch, asking you to continue informing regarding same. I am resolved to give all and every protection.

SAN BLAS, November 20, 1915.

I have received information that the Commander of the American war vessel Annapolis, at anchor in the bay of Topolobampo, has landed armed men on Mexican soil without permission of the respective authorities, and after sending them to Los Mochis they took advantage of the circumstances to insult the force of Hernandez that I have at Topolobampo for the protection of the lives and interests, not only of Mexicans, but also of foreigners in that section.

I energetically protest against these acts and I consider it highly unlawful and against the national dignity, and I advise you that forces operating in that region, in case they meet with armed men not belonging to the Constitutional Mexican Army will meet with the same fate as enemies, for we will not permit foreign soldiers to enter with arms Mexican territory without previous consent of our superiors. The city of Topolobampo, justly indignant, has energetically protested against acts mentioned and the Mexican Government will not be responsible if an outbreak takes place between Mexican and foreigners at that place. I ask you to do all in your power to avoid a repetition of landing of armed men from the Annapolis.

In reply to your telegram [Inclosure 5, despatch 698] I would state that the entire city of Topolobampo indignantly complain to me of landing of armed marines from the Annapolis. If this complaint came from a single individual I might doubt it, but in the present case the abuses of the Commander of Annapolis can not be discussed. Also, the Commander of the Guerilla Hernandez, an honorable officer, notifies that he saw armed Americans in Mochis, which is proven by the fact that on his approach they threw away their arms and fled. I wish to know definitely if you, General Muñoz, refuse to give immediate protection, basing refusal on grounds of armed men having been landed from the Annapolis; or, if that is not the reason, then for what reason do you not send forces to protect foreigners?

Topolobampo, December 11, 1915.

M-3197, Raleigh, from Guaymas, reports:

Fighting in vicinity of Corral yesterday and this morning between soldiers and Yaquis. * * * No reply to telegrams to General Dieguez have been received. Dieguez now at Nogales. Railroad officials have wired their officials at Nogales to impress on Dieguez necessity for a larger garrison at Corral.

Attention of Department is invited to the fact that this force left Corral without warning, just as the force left Mochis; and if Carranza forces are for any reason suddenly withdrawn from Yaqui Valley, a raid may be expected on Americans in that district, and the marines I asked for could not reach me in time to take part in the early operations, and the present expeditionary force is none too strong. It is considered possible that under certain conditions Mexican authorities might grant permission for us, or even request us, to land and protect our own people.

M-3198. Denver, Guaymas, reports:

On information just received from American Consul, am sending following telegram to General Dieguez:

The following message has just been received from Esperanza:

"Yesterday afternoon, 9th instant, soldiers fought three-hours battle with Indians estimated 500 strong, along Porfirio Diaz Canal between Esperanza and Corcorit; 200 Indians now on blocks 31, 32, 33, are burning our harvests after carrying away 300 sacks rice and 20 mules, and moving toward unprotected Yaqui Valley experiment station at San Pedro. American colony entirely without military protection. Feel that it is imperative that energetic campaign be inaugurated immediately or Valley will be devastated."

Owing to the serious danger in the Yaqui Valley, it is now imperative that you send there immediately, and retain there permanently, sufficient military force for the protection of the lives and property of the American and other foreign residents; and acknowledgment of this message is requested, with information as to what action will be taken.

TRENCH.

I directed Raleigh to proceed Tobari Bay, where she will arrive in the morning, and have instructed Captain of Denver to inform settlers would be at Tobari Bay in case they desire asylum.

M-3204. I have been unable to get any answer to my telegram sent to General Dieguez at Nogales. The Yaquis will certainly invade the Yaqui Valley if ample protection is not immediately provided and maintained, and it is believed will not only destroy property but murder settlers, of whom there are a considerable number of American nationality. I consider the situation serious and urge the Department to bring pressure to bear on General Dieguez and General Estrada to compel immediate adequate garrisoning of Valley, or that authority be obtained from Mexican Government for forces under my command to be landed to protect American settlers against attacks of Indians only. That we would be justified in landing military forces in the event of sudden attack by Indians on unprotected American settlers was freely admitted by General Muñoz. It is possible that if Mexican Government wishes to use forces elsewhere, they may take same view of the situation in Yaqui Valley.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, Arizona, December 21, 1915.

Detailed telegrams from superintendent Richardson Construction Company in Yaqui Valley, report new Indian outbreak. I sent following to Obregon at Guaymas this morning:

After recent exchange of telegrams concerning continued Yaqui raids on American settlers in that Valley, and having in mind your recent generous assurances that General Estrada with ample troops had moved from Guaymas to garrison the Valley, it is today learned with dismay and alarm that hundreds of savages have again invaded the Valley and that looting and fighting is now going on. This news is causing my Government the gravest concern and on its behalf I am constrained to insist politely but with the most absolute emphasis that immediate effective action be taken by the de facto Government to drive these Indians out of the American settlements and keep them out. It is useless to point out, I am sure, that the Government of Mexico owes to Americans in its territory the same measure of protection to life and property which the American Government owes, and is giving to, Mexicans and their property in California, Arizona, etc. For the information of my Government, I respectfully and courteously ask that you please telegraph me what steps are being taken to give adequate, continuous and permanent protection to American interests in the Yaqui Valley.

It is noted with disappointment that although Obregon has thousands of unemployed soldiers in Sonora, within striking distance of the Yaqui Valley, and notwithstanding his fulsome assurances and the ample time he has had in which to act, he has failed to put and keep enough troops in the Valley to hold back the Indians.

Respectfully recommend that vigorous representations be made direct to Carranza, as Obregon may be playing politics here.

Reported that troops and people were deserting Ontagota and that General Obregon has ordered six hundred cavalry from Esperanza who should arrive at Ontagota between 8 and 12 tonight. Americans at Ontagota ordered out by local military commander on account his troops having deserted and refused to fight Indians. San Pedro and Cajeme ranches have been taken. When we left Ontagota, block 33 and 36 were fighting to hold out for help and help is needed quick.

Later telegram from Esperanza at 8.30 p. m. relates:

Yaqui Indians, estimated by military authorities on the ground at fifteen hundred, have attacked and taken San Pedro and Cajeme, 33, Ontagota and neighboring ranches; all of these places have been abandoned by soldiers and civilians. Reinforcements amounting to four hundred sixty have just left here. Military authorities advise that there still remain here and at Cojorit about four hundred with four hundred additional at Corral. American ranches at 66 and 90 are completely isolated.

I had conference with General Obregon and he directed General Madrigal to leave with small body of troops early this evening and upon arrival in Valley to take charge of operations. Another train with larger number of troops under General Estrada is being made up to leave in a few hours. Other troops have left Naco and Alameda on the way south.

Obregon showed me a list of orders issued to the troops in Sonora and the same figured up to 11,800 soldiers who are to pursue a campaign against the Yaquis immediately. Some are already on the road and the others have orders to start immediately. Some will be stationed in places where the Yaquis usually visit and others at water-holes, so that they can get no water. FLAGSHIP, UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET, Topolobampo, Sinaloa, December 11, 1915.

Report of operations: Embarking of expeditionary force of marines, and conditions at Topolobampo and vicinity.

1. In obedience to the Department's order * * * the First Battalion of Marines, under command of Major John T. Myers, U. S. M. C., were embarked on board the U. S. S. San Diego at San Francisco, California, on November 25, 1915, and at 9.10 p. m. the same day I sailed from San Francisco for Topolobampo. * * *

3. The Flag arrived off Topolobampo November 30. * * *

4. On the following day, in order to make a thorough investigation of conditions and to receive first-hand information, * * * I proceeded to Los Mochis via Topolobampo. * * *

6. The tour of inspection included the property and buildings of the United Sugar Companies and outlying farms, and the following conditions were found to obtain:

a. All American settlers were refugees in Topolobampo and their houses and properties in Los Mochis and vicinity were found to have been temporarily abandoned.

b-k. [Descriptions of wanton destruction of the property of these settlers: crops, residences, factories, offices, etc.]

l-m. [Descriptions of looting.]

n. The Commander-in-chief, after an inspection of the outlying districts, met Lieutenant Colonel Gutierrez, the Carranza official commanding the Los Mochis garrison. He stated that he had 700 troops at Los Mochis and between 150 and 175 at Aguila, but had not garrisoned the pumping station as no instructions as to this had been received by him from General Muñoz.

7-9. Just before the inspection party returned to Los Mochis, an armored train unexpectedly arrived, bringing General Mateo Muñoz, the Commanding Officer of the Carranza forces in the State of Sinaloa, and Colonel Escobar. The Commander-in-chief immediately took up with Muñoz the question of affording adequate protection for American citizens. Muñoz stated that the * * * principal reason for withdrawing the Los Mochis garrison to San Blas was because it was known that the Villista General Juan Banderas had joined the Mayas and that the strength of the combined forces was estimated at 1800 men; such a detachment could easily defeat the Los Mochis garrison and it was therefore decided to withdraw to San Blas where there was a force of but 800.

This explanation was not convincing as there was no reason to believe that the Indians and Villistas had a force of such strength.

Prior to the raid of November 16 the Carrancistas maintained a garrison at Los Mochis of about 500 men under Colonel Escobar, but for some reason, not satisfactorily explained, the garrison was withdrawn on November 15 and remained inactive at San Blas until after the raids had been accomplished by the Indians, when the troops again entered Los Mochis and continued the looting.

As stated in his telegrams to Consul Alger at Mazatlan, General Muñoz delayed in sending troops to Los Mochis because armed forces had been landed from the Annapolis; but as Colonel Escobar had visited Los Mochis and Topolobampo on November 19, which was between the first and second raids, and was aware that no force had been landed, there was no apparent excuse for Muñoz not promptly sending troops to Los Mochis and thereby preventing the second and most serious raid. (See General Muñoz's letter, translation appended.)

At this point the Department's attention is invited to the telegraphic intercourse between the American Consul at Mazatlan, Mr. W. E. Alger, and General Muñoz, commanding the Carranza forces in the State of Sinaloa (copy appended) and to an explanatory letter written by General Muñoz to the Commander-in-chief with answer to the same (copies appended).

10. The Indians were undoubtedly urged by General Banderas to make the raid, because when Chief Bachomo of the Mayas entered Mr. Johnston's house on the 16th and stole six rifles he informed the Americans present that Banderas had ordered him to get the arms. [Other reasons.]

11-14. The first raid was made on November 16. * * * The Maya Indians under Chief Bachomo were accompanied by a detachment of Villistas under General Juan Banderas. * * * The settlers immediately fled in automobiles to Topolobampo for refuge, so that when the Indians reentered the town on the 20th of November it was practically deserted.

15-17. [Entertainment of General Muñoz, General Sepulveda and fifteen other officers on board the flagship.]

18. The question of adequate protection was again taken up with Muñoz during this visit and all points clearly presented and emphasized, with the result that General Muñoz made the following promises:

(1) To maintain an adequate garrison at Los Mochis, Aguila, and at the pumping stations.

(2) To begin active offensive operations against the Indians.

(3) To recover as much stolen property as possible and to return same to rightful owners.

(4) To have all animals belonging to foreigners returned as soon as recovered.

(5) To permit the American settlers to retain arms purchased from the American Consul at Hermosillo and carry same unmolested.

(6) To endeavor to establish a feeling of harmony between the garrisons and the settlers.

19. Muñoz was informed that the United States and Mexico were on friendly terms and that there was no desire on the part of the United States to land troops in Mexico, it being the wish that peace and prosperity be established throughout the country.

20. The following hypothetical case was then presented to General Muñoz: "Suppose there is no garrison at Los Mochis and that the lines of communication between San Blas and Los Mochis have been interrupted; and further suppose that I, as Commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific Fleet, having a strong expeditionary force anchored off Topolobampo ready to land at a moment's notice in event of word reaching me that Los Mochis is being raided by Indians, receive information that an attack by savages is about to be made and that my countrymen are in danger of being murdered and my countrywomen in danger of being carried off by the savages (here we have a case where a band of barbarians are attacking an American colony of American men, women and children without protection)—What action would you expect me to take under the circumstances?"

21. After thinking over the problem, General Muñoz replied, "Under those circumstances, I believe you would be obliged to land and save them, and I believe the act would be considered unfriendly to Mexico. I see the point the same as you do and I wish to state that it was with profound indignation that I received information that the Indians had made their raid on the Mochis colony."

22. After further deliberation and at the suggestion of General Sepulveda, Muñoz reconsidered his former statement, saying that he did not have authority to authorize landing for the purpose of protecting American lives and property, and, as he was subject to the orders of General Dieguez, permission would have to be obtained from that official.

23. I then impressed upon him that in case a raid was being made on Los Mochis there would not be time to get permission from higher authority or even from my own Government. "In that case," replied General Muñoz, "you would have permission to land. I understand the situation, but, you see, I am under General Dieguez."

24. I then informed him that I relied upon him by his future actions to prevent a situation which might cause possible friction between two friendly nations and that I hoped he would understand my point of view. He replied stating that he realized it and thoroughly agreed with me.

25. The representatives of the Sugar Companies and settlers who were present at this interview and at the interview at Los Mochis expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied with the results and stated that they believed the situation would soon be satisfactorily cleared up.

26. It was not until after the arrival of the Commander-in-chief off Topolobampo and these same interviews held, that the Carrancista officials made any effort to cooperate with the settlers and garrison the outlying districts and pumping stations. The garrison at Los Mochis was lying inactive and merely aggravating conditions by looting the houses and property of, and commandeering animals belonging to, the Sugar Companies and the settlers.

27. On December 5, 1915, ten warrants were issued to the United Sugar Companies and ten to representative colonists, calling upon all military commanders in the State to assist in recovering stolen property and having it returned to the rightful owners. This work is now progressing, * * * 28-42. * * *

43. There can be little doubt that if the troops protecting American interests at Los Mochis or at other places are needed for military operations or are threatened by a large force of Indians they will be promptly withdrawn with little or no warning to settlers as to the impending danger, just as they were withdrawn at Los Mochis. For this reason I would strongly advise that permission be obtained from the Mexican Government to land our forces on Mexican territory in cases of great emergency when the lives of our own people are placed in serious jeopardy from threatened attack by hostile Indians. Unless action is taken in time, the raid will be accomplished, with resulting massacre. The Indians act too quickly to admit of the delay necessary to obtain permission as occasion arises to land a force.

C. MCR. WINSLOW.

CONSTITUTIONALIST ARMY,
3D DIVISION OF THE NORTHWEST,
Camp at San Blas, December 7, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor of addressing you the following, as I consider terminated the operations on the Fuerte River and contiguous territory, thus giving full guaranties to the lives and interests of Mexicans and foreigners residing in this region. I wish to explain to you the reason for recent events in order to destroy whatever bad impressions may have remained on account of the injuries which American citizens suffered at Los Mochis on the occasion of the attack of the Indians and Villistas on said locality.

For some time we have noted the necessity for a sufficient garrison in Los Mochis on account of its proximity to the region in which the rebels (bandits) referred to were operating, and with the object, moreover, of terminating in the least possible time the campaign which was going on, the mobilization of 500 men was ordered, which was sufficient to carry on the operations prepared by this headquarters; also to guarantee all interests in the region, although there was every reason to hope for prompt results, a group of rebels more or less numerous who came from the State of Chihuahua, compelled us to change our plans as they threatened to invade the State; and although they suffered a great defeat at the beginning in this district, they continued to be a menace to all the small garrisons which had been stationed in the vicinity of Los Mochis. To avoid the consequences and principally with the object of fighting them in their own localities, I was compelled to concentrate all these garrisons, principally that of Los Mochis, which was a good force, in order to reinforce the column which operated under my orders.

Now that this campaign has terminated with good results, I am pleased to inform you that in this region I have 3000 men, which will give guaranties to all the peaceful inhabitants; and as far as the interests of Americans are concerned, I have the greatest desire to furnish them the fullest guaranties, so much the more because such are the instructions which I have received from my superiors; and I have already established garrisons not only in Los Mochis but likewise in the Hacienda del Aguila and Los Tastes. Moreover, the United Sugar Companies of Los Mochis will recover, if not all, then the greater part of whatever was lost, since already they are beginning to receive some property and I am aiding them in recovering animals and other property abandoned by the Indians and Villistas.

Admiral Winslow to General Muñoz.

FLAGSHIP, UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET, Off Topolobampo, December 9, 1915.

MY DEAR SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of December 8 [7] and in reply I have to state as follows:

On October 26 I was assured by General Dieguez, through the Commanding Officer of the U. S. S. New Orleans, that every protection would be afforded foreigners and their property in the Yaqui Valley and at Los Mochis, and that General Dieguez was in command of the district in which you are operating. After this assurance from the general in command of the military forces in the region in which Los Mochis and Yaqui Valley are situated, I had reason to believe that protection would be afforded our settlers and their property. The fact that General Carranza had recently been recognized by the Government of Mexico [sic] would seem to have made it more necessary to have carefully protected American citizens in Mexican territory, as such recognition must necessarily have created animosity on the part of those representing the Villista cause.

It appears that on the approach of a by no means large force under the Villista General Banderas, associated with a force of Indians under command of Bachomo, the forces stationed at Los Mochis, over which you had control, were suddenly withdrawn to San Blas, leaving the American settlers without any protection whatever for their lives and property. This withdrawal was made without warning as to their danger being given to the American settlers at Los Mochis, and without notification to the Commander of the U. S. S. Annapolis at Topolobampo, that you intended to withdraw or that you had withdrawn all military protection previously afforded lives and property of American citizens at Los Mochis.

Had you informed the Commander of the U. S. S. Annapolis in time, he could at least, without possible offense to the Mexican Government, have directed his countrymen and their families to retreat to Topolobampo, where he could have afforded them safe asylum on board the Annapolis. That more, if not all, of the foreign residents at Los Mochis were not murdered when the place was raided by Villista forces and a lot of drunken Indians seems extraordinary, and the forbearance of the said Indians must be attributed to their lack of aversion to American settlers, due to the kindly treatment that has always been accorded the Indians by the said settlers, and not to any protection afforded them by the forces under your command.

I cannot see that the conditions as I found them to be or as stated in your letter warrant me in believing that the American community at Los Mochis was afforded the protection which should have been given them, and which I was assured by General Dieguez would be given them.

I am convinced, however, since receiving your letter, and since my personal conference with you, that you appreciate how serious the consequences might have been and that you are now doing what is in your power to render lives and property safe. This is particularly gratifying as it is probable that the Indians, having made two successful raids on Los Mochis, will have greater confidence in the future, and their depredations and outrages will, if not prevented, be correspondingly increased.

You must understand that the United Sugar Companies, as well as the settlers in the Mochis district, have lost a great deal of property, particularly livestock, which they must have returned to them to reestablish the industries of the valley and reemploy the poor Mexicans who depend for their sustenance on the wages which they receive from the American settlers. Some of the livestock has been restored, but only a small percentage of what has been taken away.

I thank you for your assurance that the greater part of whatever was lost will be returned; and since you have given me this assurance I confidently rely on you to have every effort made to cause the return to rightful owners of all property which can be identified as belonging to the settlers, especially animals, so that the industries of the valley may soon be in full working order; and I also accept with confidence your assurance that ample protection will be afforded in the future.

In reply to your excellency's note of the 13th instant relative to the killing of the American citizen John B. McManus. I have the honor to thank your excellency for the copy of the letter that you sent to General Amador Salazar.

I am glad to inform your excellency that, as requested, orders have already been issued for an immediate careful investigation for the purpose of placing the responsibility and duly punishing the person or persons who may be found responsible for the homicide.

At the same time I wish your excellency to know how greatly we deplore this sad affair, which the Mexican Government and people have heard of with profound pain, both on account of the deed itself and of the fact that it concerned an American citizen, since it is well known that a great sympathy exists in Mexico toward North American citizens, who have fraternized with us so intelligently.

We are not unaware of the moral obligation to alleviate the sad situation of the widow and minor children of Mr. McManus, and for this reason I wish to express to your excellency the readiness of the Government to aid them pecuniarily by means of a donation in keeping with the needs of those injured.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Mexico, March 26, 1915.

Referring to the correspondence and interviews relating to the death of the American citizen John B. McManus, I have the honor of informing you that the President of the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention, charged with the Executive Power—

Deplores the unfortunate event that caused the death of Mr. John McManus, and considering that the sad condition of the widow of Mr. McManus imperatively requires immediate relief for her distress;

Considering that the rarity and painfulness of the case justify the Government in acting promptly, efficaciously and of its own accord in order to make clear the respect due from it in regard to the lives and interests of foreigners;

And, finally, considering that the abnormal conditions in which the Republic is placed make it entirely impracticable for those interested to present their claims in any other form—

Has decided, with the proviso that such decision shall not serve as a precedent in any case whether identical or similar, that the sum of one hundred sixty thousand pesos ($160,000) shall be paid to the widow and children of the deceased American citizen John B. McManus, in full compensation for the material damage caused them by the violent death of which Mr. McManus was the victim, which sum will be delivered to the widow upon her express renunciation for herself and her minor children of all action in this connection to which she may consider herself entitled, such renunciation to be made through the agency of your excellency.

Orders have already been given to the foregoing effect, and the said sum is now at your excellency's disposition, and your excellency will please inform me whether Mrs. McManus will accept it on the condition stated, so that it may be delivered at once, and it is requested that your excellency will act in the matter as intermediary.

All the foregoing without prejudice to the continuation of the legal inquiry and the imposition of due punishment upon the person or persons who may be found responsible.

BRAZILIAN LEGATION,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th instant, relative to the payment of the compensation which the President of the Sovereign Convention, charged with the Executive Power, is ready to make to the widow and minor children of the American citizen John B. McManus on account of his violent death.

In reply, in the name of the Government of the United States of America, which I have the honor to represent here, as well as in behalf of the widow and children of McManus, and for myself, I hereby manifest to you the sincere gratitude that we feel toward the President of the Convention, charged with the Executive Power, for the promptness, liberality and efficacy with which the satisfactory settlement of this matter has been made.

In pursuance of the terms of your note, I communicated to Mrs. McManus the desire of your Government that she expressly agree as to the sum, and renounce for herself and minor children any action to which she might think herself entitled in this connection; in response, I have the honor to transcribe the answer of Mrs. McManus as follows:

MR. MINISTER: In reply to your letter of the 29th instant relative to the indemnity of $160,000 which the Mexican Government is willing to pay for the material injury that we have suffered by reason of the violent death of my husband, Mr. John B. McManus, I have the honor of saying to you that if the said payment is made today, in bills of forced circulation, for the present I accept said indemnity in my name and in the names of my minor children, preferring that the payment be made in the form of a check in my favor drawn by the Government of the Republic. In case the payment is made on this date, I consider for the present that I receive the sum of $160,000 as full indemnity for the material injury caused to us by the violent death of which my husband was the victim, renouncing for myself and in the name of my minor children any action to which I might have a right in this matter.

As foreigners operate most properties, he states their privilege to appeal to their governments for protection gives rise danger of international complications which would embarrass the Government in revision of oil laws. SIR: With further reference to my telegram to the Department dated January 11, 1915, reporting that several of the oil companies in Tuxpam had been ordered to close down on account of a new oil decree, I have the honor to transmit herewith a Spanish copy of the decree, and an English translation which includes the preamble which was not published with the decree in Tampico. * * *

If permission is refused to all of the oil companies operating in the Tuxpam, Panuco, Soto, La Marina and Topila oil fields, which so far has been the case, over one thousand American employees will be thrown out of positions; besides the Americans there will be a large number of foreigners and not less than 20,000 Mexicans. * * *

The Consular Corps met this morning at this office and discussed the local situation with Captain Rodgers of the U. S. S. Delaware and Captain McNamee of the U. S. S. Sacramento. It was the unanimous opinion that it would be wise for the United States Government to furnish transportation to all Americans out of employment, and especially to the destitute Americans now in Tampico. By getting them out of Tampico a serious element of danger will be removed. It would not be necessary to send a Government ship to Tampico or to pay the regular fare for passage; the oil companies that have steamers under the American flag would be only too glad to be allowed to carry their employees back to the United States on their tankers. * * *

Decree of January 7, 1915.

Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army. Acting Chief Executive of the United States of Mexico, and Chief of the Revolution, by virtue of the extraordinary faculties with which I am invested, and

Considering that it is necessary to revise in a complete and radical manner the oil legislation of the country, carefully establishing rules and regulations in regard to the matters relative to the exploration and exploitation of the oil and gas deposits existing in the territory of the Republic, so as to avoid the oil industry's continuing to be developed, as it has been up to the present, only as a benefit to oil enterprises, with great damage to agriculture and to the waterway communications of the country, without the nation or the Government having received from said exploitations the just profits they are entitled to;

Considering that several oil companies have been installing oil conduits, carrying out works of exploration and exploitation, well-drilling, and other construction without proper authorization from the legitimate Government of Mexico, and that said works, arbitrarily done, have reached a great development, especially during the troublous state of this country for the last four years, taking advantage of the lack of effective means of pressure that the Mexican Government could exercise;

Considering that it is necessary to stop this unlawful exploitation that would create more complications, thus embarrassing yet more the already difficult work of reversing the validity of such exploitation and of unifying the conditions of the oil property, which would constantly menace international conflicts because of the nationality of some of the oil enterprises, which apply with great facility to foreign governments for protection, notwithstanding that they do not comply with the just obligations that they have with the country from which they obtain immense wealth—

Therefore I have seen fit to issue the following:

Article 1. From this date, and until the compilation of specific laws governing the legitimate transportation of petroleum and its derivatives, works for the construction of oil conduits and drilling of wells, and in general all works in connection with the exploitation of petroleum, must suspend.

Article 2. Under no consideration may work be continued which is at the present time under way, even if they have permission granted by legitimate authorities, without first having special authorization from this Government.

Article 3. The violation of these provisions make the oil companies or their employees responsible for the damage resulting from these works when it is impossible to return matters to their original condition. The Constitutionalist Government may order the destruction of these works executed in contravention of the provisions of this decree at the expense of the company responsible for the construction, their administrators and managers, or any other person whatsoever who may be carrying out or directing such work.

The pools of petroleum encountered by virtue of operations executed in contravention of this decree will be considered the property of the nation.

MR. SECRETARY: I am directed by Señor Don Venustiano Carranza to inform your excellency that no confiscation is menacing foreign oil properties and that the only provision which was enacted refers to the general suspension of such works as were being conducted without authority from his Government; that oil wells under production are being operated without molestation; that several oil companies, taking advantages of our difficulties, were in all directions constructing pipe-lines, tanks, wharves, etc., and even attempting to sink new wells without permission from the Government. I am also directed to especially invite your excellency's attention to the fact that the above provision has been taken for another order, suspending shipments of oil, by two or three companies who declined to pay taxes already due and whose shipments amounted to something like a half a million dollars per month; but that this matter is now on its way to a satisfactory ending inasmuch as some of the companies have begun to pay the above-mentioned taxes.

I am transmitting herewith a copy of my letter to Señor J. Not only does the Government request that this company agree to conform with laws not yet enacted, but they desire strictly confidential geological information which costs thousands of dollars to obtain and which can be had only by actual drilling. The Government of the United States can not too strongly protest against such illegal procedure against American companies, for this would be a most dangerous precedent to establish.

All of the oil companies are awaiting developments. Practically all drilling and construction work of all kinds has been closed down and a large number of oil men have already returned to the United States.

OFFICE OF PETROLEUM INSPECTION,

In reply to your letter of February 1 in which, as representative of the Cortez Oil Corporation, you request permission to continue drilling operations at your well, located in the Juan Casiano Oil Zone, I advise you that permission of a provisional character is granted to you pending approval by the Department of Fomento, without which approval the operations shall again be suspended; and I caution you that this permission binds the company you represent to submit to the laws and regulations which the said Department will soon issue, and to waive the right to allege retroactivity. I further advise you that in order to exercise this permission it is necessary that you send to this office the following data:

General map of the district;

Conditions of lease entered into between the company and the land owner;

The present total depth;

Length and diameter of the casing now in the hole;

Map of the tract showing the location of the well, dams and tanks constructed for storage, auxiliary buildings and other structures, together with specification of completed construction, construction under way, and projected construction;

A geological chart, in a sealed and stamped envelope, bearing the inscription "Strictly confidential" in order to guarantee the interests of the company.

I am [etc.]

J. CABRERA.

[Inclosure 3.]

The Tampico representative of the Cortez Oil Corporation to the Chief of Petroleum Inspectors.

TAMPICO, February 4, 1915.

I have received your communication No. 43 of February 3, 1915, answering mine of February 1, wherein I, as representative of the Cortez Oil Corporation, requested through you permission of the Department of Fomento to place 6-in. casing in the company's well in the Juan Casiano district and to deepen it sufficiently to set this casing securely and properly cement it, the reason for this request being that we are unable properly to cement the 8-in. casing now in the well and that there is imminent danger that the well in its present condition will get beyond our control, causing great loss and damage to the company, the surrounding oil country and the farms in the vicinity.

I have carefully noted your answer and especially the part which says:

I advise you that permission of a provisional character is granted to you pending approval by the Department of Fomento, without which approval the operations shall again be suspended; and I caution you that this permission binds the company you represent to submit to the laws and regulations which the said Department will soon issue, and to waive the right to allege retroactivity.

The company at present has no representative in Mexico who has sufficient authority to accept these conditions and the manager here has had special instructions from the New York office to refer all important matters to the head office in New York for approval before acceptance. At the same time the company understands that it is operating in Mexico and must certainly respect and abide by all the laws of the country, and it has no intention of breaking or gaining any of the laws of the country.

The local management of the company is very anxious to do the work on the well; we have asked permission to do so because we realize the imminent danger of the well getting away from us at any moment, and we want to do everything in our power to avoid the losses and claims for damage that would undoubtedly come up should the well get beyond control. But we are afraid to start work on a provisional permission, for two reasons:

1. It is very dangerous to do anything to the well at all unless the work is to be finished, and we are afraid that before the work is finished word might come that the Department had not approved the provisional permission; and

2. Article 2 of the Decree of January 7 especially says that no legal permission will be recognized even if given by legal authorities unless approved by the Department of Fomento.

With regard to the date required, I am pleased to state the following:

General map of the district (attached);

Conditions of lease: Ten pesos per hectare per year rental until production, when rental ceases and 10% of the product is paid;

Actual depth of well, 2,065 feet;

Surface casing, 15½ in., 177 feet; 8-in casing, 2,065 feet;

The general map has the location of the well marked thereon; exact location of buildings we do not have but they are close to well on north side;

We have almost finished earthen storage of 75,000 bbls. capacity.

Geological information is in New York but will be sent to you as soon as we receive the same.

As the company is not asking for a permit to continue old work or begin new work but simply a permit to do some extra work on a finished well so as to make it safe and avoid losses to itself and others, again I beg you to please request by wire this permission from the Department of Fomento, assuring you that the company, when once they get the well secured, will keep it closed and await the new laws that are shortly to be enacted.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a decree and its relation stating that all construction work erected on the federal zone without government permission will be confiscated by the Government; also a copy of a notice published in the Tampico newspaper to all the companies occupying the federal zone to present within a period of three days the documents that cover their permits to occupy said zone.

The federal zone is a strip of land twenty meters in-shore from the high-water mark; it extends as far inland as the tide. The permits for construction of wharves and buildings on the federal zone obtained during the Huerta administration are not recognized as legitimate by the present de facto Government. Besides, on account of the political unrest and the impossibility to get in touch with persons authorized to give such permits, a number of the oil companies have erected buildings on this zone without special permits, with a view to obtaining them as soon as conditions settled. Such buildings were absolutely necessary and erected without permits because there was no Government representative in Tampico, and the telegraphic and railroad communication with Mexico City was cut.

If the dictates of this decree are carried out, all of the oil companies will be considerably damaged. * * * All action in regard to this decree is being held in abeyance while the companies are getting together what permits they have for use of the federal zone. * * *

Decree of January 29, 1915.

Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, in charge of the Executive Power of the Nation, and Chief of the Revolution, using the extraordinary faculties with which I am invested, and

Considering that on the lands of Federal jurisdiction in the maritime zones and on the banks of the rivers and, in general, on all lands belonging to the nation, there exist constructions and diverse works are exploited without concessions, contracts or legitimate privileges;

That, according to the provisions of the civil legislation of the Federal District, all works constructed on lands of the public domain without due authorization are the property of the nation by right of accession;

That even though contracts, concessions or permissions exist, they have almost invariably been based upon favoritism or lucre, without the nation deriving the benefit to which it has right;

That although in some cases the law allows the Secretary of Hacienda to grant permits or concessions for transient occupation of the federal zones, these should be a mere exception which will in no manner obstruct the common use of the common property; and

That the concessions made up to this date, especially in proximity to ports, have been granted in such number and with such lack of judgment that they have come to be true monopolies in some cases or, in other cases, extensive invasions of the federal zones for the benefit of individuals; whereby it becomes necessary not only to reestablish the public dominion over such property where the construction or occupation lack permission but also to revise the legitimately existing concessions and to take up such permits as do not have the necessary requisites and constitute advantages to individuals to the detriment of the common use—

I have seen fit to decree the following:

Article 1. From the date of this decree all works or constructions existing on lands of Federal jurisdiction without due and lawful authorization pass to the jurisdiction of the nation.

Article 2. The Secretary of Hacienda and Public Credit will at once prepare to take possession of the unauthorized works and will decide, in each case, whether the work is to be destroyed or otherwise disposed of.

Article 3. The contracts, permits or concessions considered by their possessors to be lawful will be subject to revision and revalidation by the Secretary of Hacienda and Public Credit, to whom the interested parties should apply within three months from the date of this decree. In territory not now occupied by troops under orders from this office, the said term of three months will be counted from the date on which such territory is occupied by troops of the Constitutionalist Army.

Article 4. The revalidation mentioned in Article 3 will not be conceded in cases where the said Secretary, on account of public utility, considers necessary the vacation of the premises or the expropriation of the works existing thereon.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Tampico, February 11, 1915.

SIR: With reference to my despatch No. 1354 of February 6, I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of communications between J. Cabrera, the chief oil inspector for the District of Tampico, the Cortez Oil Corporation, and this Consulate, in connection with an application for permission to continue special work to safeguard the company's well located at Tepatate in the State of Vera Cruz, which at the present time is in danger of coming in and flowing over the surrounding country, causing irreparable damage.

In answer to the protest of this office against American companies being expected to conform with prospective laws and regulations, the Chief Inspector, Señor J. Cabrera, advised this office in writing (inclosure 1) that permission had been granted the said company to continue this special work. I immediately conferred with Mr. Middleton, the Tampico manager of the company, and he advised me that he had received a letter from the Inspector (inclosure 2) stating that permission had been granted, but only on the conditions as expressed in the first letter, namely, conforming with laws not yet enacted.

Thereupon I acknowledged the letter of the Inspector and advised him that I had notified the Cortez Oil Corporation that permission had been granted to go ahead with their work (inclosure 3). As he had advised the company to the contrary, another letter (inclosure 4) was written by the company requesting a confirmation of the contents of the letter from this office stating that permission had been granted unconditionally. An answer was received stating that the permission granted was valid until the enactment of the new petroleum laws, which was all that the company had requested in the first place (inclosure 5).

The duplicity of this official may be clearly seen by this correspondence. He actually advised this office that the permission had been granted, and the company at the same time that it had not.

To make his statement to this office good, he issued the permit as it was requested in the first place.

Several other companies have requested similar permits, but he has referred them all to the Secretary of Fomento at Vera Cruz, who up to the present time has not even honored them with a reply.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Veracruz, January 8, 1915.

MR. CONSUL: The Governor of the State of Veracruz, General Cándido Aguilar, in a despatch of the 28th of December last, advises me as follows:

I have the honor to refer to your despatch No. 75 of this date, in which you kindly insert the note which Mr. William W. Canada, Consul of the United States of America in this city, addressed to your Department complaining that the authorities of Temapache are exacting of the foreign petroleum companies in the vicinity of Tampico the payment of a second tax; and you, for your part, ask me to order the proper authorities to give the companies concerned the guaranties to which they are entitled. I am pleased to inform you that this Government under my charge has always tried to give natives as well as foreigners residing in this federative unit such guaranties; but I am greatly surprised that the foreign petroleum companies in the vicinity of Tampico should ask for guaranties from this State when they are themselves the first to aid the rebels which are disturbing the public peace, such as Manuel Peláez and certain others. And not only this, but their stockholders go forth, arisen in arms against this Government, which is putting forth every effort to guarantee order and tranquility. In order that this Government might give guaranties to said companies, it would be necessary for it to exact responsibilities of, and severely punish, them, inasmuch as the conduct they have observed, aiding the revolutionists of that region directly, is a patent proof of the hostile attitude openly assumed against this Government.

And I have the honor to transcribe the same to you in reply to your note dated the 24th ultimo, reiterating assurances of my consideration.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Tampico, February 21, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of the land manifestation decree of General Carranza, and its English translation, which was issued on the 19th of September, 1914. Little attention was paid to this decree at the time. It was not officially published in Tampico until November 11, 1914. On the same day a decree was issued by Raul Garate, Acting Governor of the State of Tamaulipas, extending the time in which to present the manifestations to which Article 5 of the decree refers, until the 31st of December, 1914.

On account of the abnormal conditions existing throughout the State, General Luis Caballero, Governor of the State of Tamaulipas, issued another decree on the 28th day of December extending the time sixty days longer. This will make the time of expiration February 28, 1915. A number of foreigners desiring to comply with the requirements of this decree have applied at the Municipal Treasury where the special forms for manifestation were to be obtained and were told by the officials that the forms were not yet printed. Several people applied at this office four or five times with the same result. They were told, however, that they need not worry as the time would undoubtedly be again extended. On February 19 a notice was published in the Tampico daily paper advising that the Municipal Treasury had received a supply of the forms for manifestation of property, and that they were on sale at the said office.

As this is the only form on which the manifestation can be made, it was, up to the 19th of February, impossible for any one to comply with the decree. On the morning of the 19th, after the notification that the forms were on sale, I sent to the office for copies and was advised that only forms 1 and 2 were ready, and that form 3 could be obtained the following day. This would give the property holders barely eight days in which to make the manifestation, notwithstanding the fact that time for making the same was extended from September 19 until February 28, 1915. However, the time will most likely be again extended.

According to article 10 of the decree, those who do not make their manifestations within the term stipulated will be fined 5 per cent, and will be subject to the valuation put on their property by the Assessment Committee, which committee according to article 6 retains the right to purchase the property at their own figure. This amounts to confiscation pure and simple.

A number of the oil companies that own land in fee are deeply concerned as to the action of the Government in regard to this decree. The unproven oil land which was purchased years ago for insignificant amounts, on which taxes have been paid in proportion to the agricultural value up to the present time, may be valueless or worth millions of dollars. It is impossible to estimate the value of such land until wells have been drilled. This is the question that confronts the oil men. If they place a valuation too low, they stand the chance of expropriation by the Government; on the other hand if they fix a high valuation they will have to pay taxes in proportion.

I have [etc.]

THOMAS H. BEVAN.

[Inclosure 1—Translation.]

I, Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, in charge of the Executive Power of the Union, by virtue of the powers conferred upon me in accordance with the Plan of Guadalupe, and considering that it is of the utmost importance to reorganize the Tax List in the whole Republic, in order that the Governments of the States as well as the General Government may know exactly the true wealth of the country and so may rationally and equitably distribute the taxes on the tax-payers, have thought fit to issue the following decree:

Article 1. In order to form the Tax Office of the Republic, there shall be established in each district of the States of the Republic a committee which shall be called "Assessment Committee" the purpose of which will be to register the real estate, fix its value and the amount of the capital invested.

Article 2. The aforementioned Committee shall be composed of the Tax Collector, the Municipal Treasurer and three tax-paying citizens, who shall be chosen by the first political authority in each district.

Article 3. The Committee shall be organized within eight days after the publication of this law and shall proceed at once to elect among its members a President and two Secretaries; it being permitted to act when three of the members are present, in case the others are absent.

Article 4. After the Assessment Committee has been installed, it shall at once publish this fact in order to notify the inhabitants of the district, by means of the press and notices fixed on the walls along the streets, making this distribution of notices as liberal as possible, setting forth therein the place where the Committee meets and the hours in which the daily sessions take place, in order to receive and dispatch the matters they are to handle according to this law.

Article 5. Every proprietor or possessor of an usufruct, possessor or administrator of capital existing in the Republic, and invested in rural, urban and movable (live-stock) property, and mercantile, industrial, and manufacturing business, is obligated to present before the Assessment Committee of the district in which said property is located a detailed statement of all of the property, in conformity with the form, copy of which is printed at the end of this law, within a term not to exceed one month.

Article 6. The statements in question must set forth the location and size of the rural and urban properties, and with regard to the urban properties, the number of rooms and the material they are composed of. They must also state, in each case, the value of each one of the properties or businesses which constitute the capital of the manifestant; in the understanding that the Government shall have the right, in case of expropriation for the sake of public service, to pay to the interested parties as indemnity the value which is definitely fixed in the Tax List.

Article 7. Each statement shall be signed by the proprietor or his legal representative, setting forth in same the address of his residence.

Article 8. The presented statements shall be examined separately, the decision thereon being noted on the edge of the same, whether they be approved in full, whether they be reformed or whether any properties which might have been omitted be added. The decision taken in each case shall be authorized by the president and the secretaries of the Committee.

Article 9. The Assessment Committees shall obtain from the respective Tax Offices and the district treasuries the data which they may judge necessary for the prompt discharge of their duties, and they must listen to and take into consideration the denunciations which may be presented to them regarding the low assessment of properties and capitals.

Article 10. The tax-payers who do not present their statements within the term stipulated in Article 5, shall be fined five per cent of the value of the property they keep secret; they shall be subject to the valuation of their property to be made by the Assessment Committee, and to the provisions of Article 6.

Article 11. After the Assessment Committee has finished its work, for the consummation of which it will have sixty days, it shall at once make up a list in duplicate containing the register of the capital and property revised by it, determining the value in each case. A copy of said list shall be posted in plain view of everybody outside of the building where its work is carried on, for the information of the interested parties, and the Committee shall retain the duplicate.

Article 12. The tax-payers who believe themselves injured through the assessment made by the Committee according to the foregoing articles, can make, within fifteen days following the publication of the list mentioned in the foregoing article, a complaint in writing, so that the Committee may make a just decision.

Article 13. There shall also be formed a Board of Equalization in the capital of each one of the States, to which the Assessment Committees must remit the result of their work, and the principal object of which shall be to definitely decide the complaints or claims of the tax-payers regarding the assessment of their properties or capital.

Article 14. The Board of Equalization shall be composed of the Governor of the State, the Treasurer, and three members who shall be selected by the first named.

Article 15. When finishing this work, the Board of Equalization shall form three lists of the properties definitely revised, of which they shall retain one, remitting another to the General Treasury of the State with all of the papers, and the third to the Department of Treasury.

Article 16. The Governments of the States shall have as basis the assessments made in accordance with this law in order to fix the taxes of the State and of the District.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a notice ⁷² in regard to the payments on the stamp tax for petroleum, ordering that all future payments for this tax be made to the general director of the stamp office in Veracruz instead of in Tampico, where they have been paid heretofore.

This notice has already caused a great deal of friction between General Pablo Gonzalez, in command of the Army of the Northeast, who has his headquarters in Tampico, and the First Chief in Veracruz. General Gonzalez has appropriated all the money collected in the custom house in Tampico, and from the stamp office, for his own use for official purposes. A collector of customs appointed by General Carranza refused to turn over $27,000 U. S. Cy. to General Gonzalez and was immediately removed from office by Gonzalez for not doing so. Gonzalez obtained the money and appointed his successor.

It remains to be seen whether the order will be enforced by the local authorities. The oil companies are expecting trouble over the matter when the time comes on the 15th of March for making the payments.

DEPARTMENT OF PETROLEUM.

This Department, in order to comply with the decree issued in Vera Cruz on the 8th [7th?] of January of the present year by the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, charged with the Executive Power of the Nation, and taking into account:

That it is absolutely necessary to favor the public interests, which are frequently deceived by companies or individuals who claim to be proprietors of lands in the development of petroleum and its kindred substances, in many instances the existence of such companies being imaginary, or not uniting the indispensable conditions to guarantee the people who buy oil shares;

That similar companies, of good faith, dedicated to the same purposes, suffer grave injury to their interests because of lack of confidence infused into the public, not knowing the status of companies or individuals who propose the sale of oil shares or stock;

Therefore the Government must remedy these evils, and, in order to apply all of the remedies which are at its command for giving due impetus to an industry of such national importance—

Has decreed the following:

First. Within the term of two months counted from the date of this order, all of the companies or persons engaged in the oil industry shall register in the office of this Department and present a declaration in duplicate containing the following data:

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ensenada, February 8, 1915.

SIR: It has come to my notice that mining titles in this district (and, I presume, in all Mexico) granted during the period in which General Huerta governed Mexico have been nullified by the succeeding authorities.⁷⁴ Most of the mining claims denounced in this district during that period were denounced by Americans and the decree means that the fee of 10 pesos per pertenencia (100 meters square) and the first year's taxes must be lost by them and the claims abandoned or redenounced. In a particular case which has come to my notice one man denounced 120 pertenencias in April 1912 and received his title on March 28, 1913. His title was declared invalid January 22, 1915, and he was given till March 31, 1915, to redenounce the property at a cost of 1200 pesos, though his fee had been paid by him when he made the original denouncement.

The above is for the Department's information and such representations as are deemed advisable.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, March 27, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to forward herewith for the Department's information copies of a decree reforming the mining laws of Mexico which has just been issued by the Villa Government from the office of the Department of Fomento. A translation is also enclosed.

This decree constitutes the most radical measure touching the mining interests that has been advanced by any faction engaged in the present revolution, and a close study of its provisions will reveal its character to be no less than a measure designed to bring about the practical confiscation of mining properties throughout Villa territory, since it is practically impossible for owners of claims and developed mines to comply with the requirements laid down. The action indicated realizes one particular of a prediction the undersigned has privately been making for more than a year past, and puts into a practical shape what he has believed to be and has pointed out as being the ultimate aspiration of the present movement in this country.

A further report upon the general effects of this decree will be made so soon as it is possible to give appropriate study to the question. In advance of this prospective report, I venture to call attention to the following paragraph from the Introduction to the Mining Laws of Mexico (Lic. Rodolfo Reyes: 1910: American Book Co.) page 4, which epitomizes the relation between grantor (the Mexican Federal Government) and grantee, which has formed the basis of all past transactions in ore-bearing properties (oil and coal excepted), the provisions of which are entirely abrogated now by this new decree. The paragraph indicated is as follows:

Once the mineral patent or title is issued, the grantee acquires what is known to the common law as a base, qualified, or determinable fee in the deposits. In plain language, he is the absolute owner of the mining grant so long as the mining tax is paid punctually. The nation, on the other hand, is the direct owner of all mineral deposits until actually granted; and upon grant, retains therein a contingent reversionary interest, conditioned upon a failure at any time to pay the mining tax.

It may be noted that the great majority of mineral claims held by foreigners—and principally by Americans, who are the leading developers of mining properties in Mexico because of their superior methods both in the technical operation of the mines as well as in systematic business management of them—have been bought from Mexicans at good figures; and, in addition, that large sums have been expended in the payment of what are known as "pertenencia taxes," the pertenencia, a hectare in extent, being the unit of mine grants. There are many Americans who have bankrupted themselves in the mere payment of taxes on their mining claims, and the application of [apparent omission] their claims at this time will work better [bitter] hardships upon them.

Mining decree issued by Francisco Villa at Monterey, March 19, 1915.

DECREE NO. 5.

LAW RELATING TO THE FORFEITURE OF MINING PROPERTIES.

I, Francisco Villa, General-in-Chief of Operations of the Conventionist Army, do hereby make known to the inhabitants of the Republic:

That by virtue of the extraordinary powers conferred upon me by the Decree of February 2, 1915,⁷⁵ issued in the City of Aguascalientes, and

Whereas the voluntary suspension of mining operations without sufficient reason therefor is prejudicial to the nation, since sources of wealth necessary to the general welfare are thereby withdrawn from use, and because the public revenues are thereby lessened through the nonpayment of taxes that would accrue in case of permanent exploitation; and

Whereas the payment of the present tax on mining claims should not, according to the Constitution of the Republic, imply a monopoly of the properties involved, which would be the case if the grantee of a mining claim were to base his title only on the payment of the said tax, since thus, merely by the payment of a small fee, a source of wealth could be withheld from the commerce of the world for the exclusive enjoyment of the grantee; and

Whereas the foregoing considerations are just now of an importance all the greater because, in view of the condition of the country, it is necessary, on the one hand, that the Treasury lose none of its income, indispensable to the discharge of its obligations, now increased by war, and, on the other hand, that the Revolution realize as far as possible its aspirations, one of which is the abolition of all monopoly; and

Whereas not only on account of the public utility—recognized by the mining laws—which the exploitation of the claims promotes or which is derived from the transactions arising from exploitation, should the Government endeavor to prevent the decay of the mining industry, but also on account of the notorious injuries resulting from a falling off of mining activity, which might at the present juncture cause fresh disorders in addition to the sufferings of the needy—

Therefore I have seen fit to decree the following:

Article 1. Article 51 of the Mining Law⁷⁶ is amended to read as follows:

Article 2. The terms "voluntary suspension" and "abandonment" shall be construed to mean cessation of mining operations for sixty days or more except in case of accident or force majeure, to be defined by the Secretary of Fomento. The maintenance of a watchman or a corps of employees in charge as caretakers of a property shall not be considered to be mining operations unless at the same time interior work is being done in the mine.

Article 3. Every individual or company at present holding a mining claim, or to whom in the future a mining claim may be granted, must maintain in activity at least one exploitation work within each five contiguous pertenencias or fraction thereof, it being understood that such an exploitation work is a shaft, pit, tier, tunnel or other works, whatsoever its name may be, which is required for the process of extraction, and not such as serve merely for access to the works.

Article 4. The provisions of the preceding articles shall not prejudice the maintenance in good order of the timbering and other necessary work to insure safety and health in the interior of the mine.

Article 5. In mines now abandoned, or in which work is now suspended, work shall be renewed in the manner prescribed by Articles 3 and 4 hereof, within one hundred and twenty days from the date of the promulgation of this decree.

Article 6. A period of one hundred and twenty days shall also be allowed to each person or company possessing a claim of more than five pertenencias ⁷⁵ See, under Political Affairs, the third inclosure with Mr. Llorente's communication of March 8, 1915.

Article 51. Mining property shall be forfeited by non-payment of taxes in accordance with the law pertaining to such payment; by voluntary suspension of working the mines, by abandonment of such works; and by inadequate exploitation.

which have not been exploited as abovesaid, within which to put them in working order in conformity with this decree, except in case of forfeiture of the property because of failure to pay the taxes thereon.

Article 7. If such person or company shall have failed to pay the taxes on such property, a period of ninety days shall be allowed, from the date of the promulgation of this decree, for the payment thereof and the initiation of work on said property.

Article 8. No individual may hereafter denounce more than fifteen contiguous pertenencias; and no company may denounce more than one hundred and fifty pertenencias in the same mining district; provided, that when the Secretary of Fomento, upon expert information, ascertains that the nature of the minerals or lands to be exploited is such as to require for their exploitation a greater number of pertenencias than herein specified, the number thereof may be increased.

Article 9. For the purposes of this decree that relate to forfeiture on account of voluntary suspension or abandonment whether recent or longstanding, or because of the inadequacy of the exploitation, the mining Agent shall inform the Department of Fomento of each case in which the aforesaid period of sixty, ninety, or one hundred and twenty days shall have passed without the prosecution, renewal or increase of work, as the case may be; and the said Secretary shall, upon expert information, declare the causes of such suspension, abandonment or inadequacy, and shall declare the forfeiture of the property involved, in the same manner as forfeitures for failure to pay taxes are declared in the Department of Hacienda.

Article 10. The Mining Agents, in order to comply with their duties as stated in the foregoing article, shall keep themselves informed of the progress of work in the mines within the district in their respective charge.

Mine owners, when prevented from working their mines, whether by accident or force majeure, shall immediately give notice thereof to the Mining Agent, who shall ascertain, through experts appointed by him for the purpose, the cause of the cessation or abandonment of work.

Article 11. Every resident of the Republic shall have the right to denounce, by application to the Department of Fomento through the appropriate Mining Agency, any mining property on which work has ceased, or which has been abandoned or is not being fully exploited by the individual or company that had denounced it, whether continuing to pay the taxes thereon or not.

Transitory Article 1. All provisions of law in conflict with this decree are hereby repealed.

Transitory Article 2. This decree shall go into effect on the first day of next April.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Immediately present following to Villa respecting decree relative to mining property issued Monterey March 19 last:

Provisions decree relating to forfeiture mining property because of : (1) voluntary suspension for ninety days working mines; (2) abandonment of work; (3) deficient exploitation; and (4) failure to maintain prescribed work in each five-hectar section—appear wholly unjust in view of disturbed conditions in Mexico which have led this Government to advise its citizens to leave Mexico, and continuance of which obliges Government to refrain from advising them it is safe to return there.

Many of these Americans and other foreigners, as result of such conditions, have already lost large amounts property. Many of them have undergone great sacrifices to pay taxes increased by such conditions and imposed on properties from which income was cut off. Moreover, it has been necessary in some cases to pay taxes on some properties to two of contending factions. Furthermore, destruction railroad facilities and scarcity labor, both due to conditions mentioned, greatly enhance difficulties of mine owners.

Last numbered requirement of decree seems particularly unjust as requiring great expenditures whether or not ore body known to exist and regardless of whether existing ore is of profitable grade.

In view, therefore, of conditions mentioned, which apparently render compliance with decree practically impossible so far as concerns large numbers of Americans and other foreign mine owners, this Government cannot but regard decree as confiscatory in its nature and therefore must urgently protest against application its provisions to property Americans and other foreigners.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Durango, April 11, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith as enclosure No. 2 a copy of the new mining law as published in "La Vida Nueva" the semi-official newspaper of the Convention Government in Chihuahua.

Mr. Harold McLeod Cobb has filed a protest against the confiscatory nature of this new mining law, which I take pleasure in forwarding to the Department as enclosure No. 1 to this despatch.

As a matter of fact if this law is put into effect and carried out according to its terms it will mean the confiscation or, at least, the loss of a great deal of mining property in this consular district upon which the owners have paid taxes for many years and which they believe they had good title to. The law is clearly a breach of faith with the mining interests.

I have [etc.]

HOMER C. COEN.

[Enclosure No. 1.]

Mr. Harold McLeod Cobb to Vice Consul Coen.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Durango, April 8, 1915.

MY DEAR SIR: The writer, an American citizen, the owner of mines and following the vocation of mining for the last 12 years at Guanacevi, Durango, Mexico, wishes to protest to you as United States Consul against the new mining law signed on the 19th day of March 1915, and dated at Monterey, N. L., that you may place my protest before the proper authorities of the State Department at Washington. This law works an injustice, is confiscatory, and in practice is absolutely impossible to comply with, no matter how much the foreign mine owner might desire to do so. All this will be explained by me in detail at another place, when the various articles of the law are analyzed. I might also point out that the U. S. Government has repeatedly warned its citizens to temporarily abandon the Republic of Mexico, until such time as conditions become normal and peace is restored, and life and property secure.

This new mining law makes it compulsory to actively operate all mines, naturally necessitating the return of foreigners owning mines; for in what other manner may a mine be actively operated unless the owner is present to arrange the financing and the thousand and one details incident to mining operations. To do this, American citizens will either have to disobey President Wilson's instructions, or lose their properties. But let us carefully analyze and study this new law, copy of which I hereto attach translated into the English language.

I respectfully call your attention to article 1 of the new law, reforming article 51 of the old mining law under which foreigners acquired their mining interests in Mexico and expended hundreds of millions of dollars of their capital; the only manner in which their mines could be forfeited under the old law, after once acquiring title from the Mexican Government, was by failure to pay the Impuestos Mineros or mining tax to said government on each hectare (equivalent approximately to two and one half acres). Now under the new law of reformed article 51, mines are to be forfeited for additional causes, as for example:

If work is paralyzed or abandoned voluntarily during a period of 60 days or more, and as I have said, considering President Wilson's instructions to foreigners, this new law, if complied with will force Americans to disobey their President's orders and return to Mexico. But what I regard as the hardest, I might say most unjust portion of article 1 of the new law, is that portion that states that all mines will be declared forfeited on account of insufficient work, no matter if we have complied with all other requisites of the Mexican Mining Law and have paid our taxes and are working our properties at the risk of our lives, and doing the very best we can, yet if we do insufficient work, our mines are null and void as far as the title from the Mexican Government is concerned.

Now the question arises, what constitutes insufficient work? This is a very ambiguous term, and it is left with the mining agents of the different camps to state what constitutes this insufficient work, or in other words, when a mine is to be declared forfeited. This seems to me to be placing very arbitrary powers in the hands of said mining agents, and should any of these mining agents be venal, it would be a very easy matter to declare a valuable mine, on which foreigners have expended hundreds of thousands, or millions of dollars, forfeited, so that friends of theirs (the mining agents) may subsequently acquire title to the same; it is this portion of the law that seems to me to be the hardest, and impossible to comply with. If a specific amount of work was stated, Mining Companies and mine owners could and would use every effort to comply with the law, but at the present no one knows how little work constitutes insufficient work and how much labor constitutes sufficient work.

I also wish to call especial attention to article 3 of the new mining law, where it says that each owner of a mine shall maintain in activity at least one work of exploitation for each five hectares of surface. Even assuming there be ore to extract, this is impractical as the Mexican Mining Law is one of vertical side lines, and mines having an ore body with a dip from the vertical to the horizontal take up additional hectares or pertenencias of surface to protect their veins on the dip from passing out of their territory as depth is attained; therefore these extra surface holdings can not possibly be operated until the ore body reaches these extra side line surface holdings, due to the further deeper mining operations necessitated by the company; which work may take six months or may take ten years to consummate. This portion of the law is absolutely impossible to comply with as may be seen at a glance.

The object of this new law has apparently the idea of stimulating mine owners to commence active operations on their properties. But mine owners do not need such measures; the main stimulant that they have and always have had is the desire to make money out of their properties. No mining company or owner would maintain watchmen and a crew of employees in idleness; pay mining taxes to the government which is a loss or drain on their resources, if by working they could by the extraction of ores pay these dead expenses. Why are the mines shut down?

a. For lack of mining supplies, due to poor transportation facilities.

b. For lack of cars or railroad facilities for the transportation of ores to the smelters.

c. For lack of smelting facilities.

d. Why are only 10 per cent of the smelting capacity of the smelters in Mexico in operation? For lack of coal and coke. Why is coal and coke lacking? For want of transportation facilities.

It will be readily seen that the basis of all mining stagnation is due primarily to the lack of railroad transportation for supplies, which should go directly to the mines, or to their allied industries "the smelters."

What is the cause of this lack of railroad transportation? The disturbed condition of the country due to the revolution; a condition that we foreigners are not responsible for, nor over which we have any control. Therefore it seems very unjust to me to make new laws that are impossible to comply with, due to the disturbed political condition of the country, and threaten our mines with confiscation if we do not comply with same.

Another cause of the shutting down of many mines having mills for the beneficiating of their ores, is lack of cyanide. This chemical is absolutely necessary for the treatment of the bulk of the low grade ores containing either gold or silver, or both of these metals, and the great source of supply of cyanide for Mexico has, in the past, been Germany. Due to the fact that Germany is at war and not exporting this article, many mines can not secure cyanide at any price and in consequence can not operate their mills, and without the mills in operation they have no way to treat the ores extracted from the mines.

Résumé: I will say in closing that if this new law is enforced, a large proportion of the mines of Mexico will become forfeited, as it is a physical impossibility to comply with same.

1st. For lack of transportation facilities due to the fact that railway service is intermittent and in some portions of the country, out of service entirely.

2d. Lack of cyanide for the mills.

3d. Smelters out of commission.

4th. Risk of life attendant to the operation of mines in isolated sections of the country.

I therefore request, that the State Department of the United States use its good offices to try and persuade the Conventionist Government of the hardship this new law will work on all foreign held mines, and request that the law be modified.

Respectfully submitted,

HAROLD McLEOD COBB.

Regarding new mining law, it is not intended to injure all legitimate mining industries, and each company or individual may make representations to Minister of Fomento in Chihuahua and secure exemption if justified. The law is intended to prevent the purchase by speculators of mining properties that are now dormant, to hold for sale at immense profit. It is my intention to go to Chihuahua as soon as possible and discuss matter with Escudero, in order that he change or modify the decree. I would recommend that mining men, especially those who have working properties, take matter up at once in Chihuahua.

Have examined the new order issued by Villa forfeiting mining property if not worked to the satisfaction of the Secretary of Fomento. In view of the fact that the law does not prescribe a certain amount of work but leaves the matter to the discretion of officials without right of appeal to any court, you will please bring the matter to the attention of Villa and say that it seems likely to operate as confiscation of property. Ask for a suspension of the order in so far as it affects foreigners, in order that we may more fully present the objections.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, April 15, 1915.

DEAR SIR: I desire to call the attention of the State Department to an order issued by V. Carranza, First Chief [etc.] with reference to a tax attempted to be levied and enforced against mining properties in Mexico.

I represent the American Consolidated Mining and Milling Company, a corporation duly incorporated under the laws of the State of Oklahoma, and am attaching hereto a copy of the order above referred to, which, if carried into effect, will mean the absolute confiscation of all of the property of the company I represent in the State of Oaxaca in the Republic of Mexico.

Our company owns 338 pertenencias, in perfecting our title to which we have been out a large sum of money from which we have had but very little returns; and an attempt on the part of the Revolutionary Government of Mexico to enforce the attached order against us at this time would render it impossible for our company to meet the demands of the Government, and would result in the absolute confiscation of our holdings. I would therefore respectfully request that the State Department's representatives in Mexico be advised by your Department to interpose its protest against the unreasonable and unjust attempt to deprive us of the use or benefit of our property by the enforcement of the attached order.

Respectfully submitted,

Mining decree issued by Carranza at Vera Cruz, March 1, 1915.

I, Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, in charge of the Executive Power of the Nation and Chief of the Revolution, by virtue of the extraordinary powers wherewith I am invested, have found it proper to decree the following:

Article 1. Articles 2, 5, 9, and 10 of the Law of March 25, 1905, relating to stamp taxes and mining franchise taxes are hereby amended to read as follows:

Article 2. Ores produced in the Republic or proceeding from a foreign country are subject to an internal stamp tax, with no exceptions other than those expressly made by this law. Said tax will be imposed in the future as follows:

A. Metals exported in the form of mineral rock or earth, cyanided or sulphurated, residuum of smelters, or in any other form in which they may be combined or mixed with other substances which are not metals, properly speaking, as follows:

Gold: At the rate of one hundred and ten pesos ($110) a kilogram.
 Silver: At the rate of two pesos, sixty centavos ($2.60) a kilogram.
 Copper: At the rate of three and one-half centavos ($0.03½) a kilogram.
 Lead: At the rate of six centavos ($0.06) per ten kilograms.
 Zinc: At the rate of five centavos ($0.05) per ten kilograms.

B. For metals which may be treated or smelted in the country to the extent that they are not alloyed or mixed with other metals, whatever may be the assay of the product, the imposts fixed in the preceding paragraph shall be reduced by 20%.

Article 5. No tax will be imposed, etc.

G. Nor will taxes be imposed upon copper when the minerals contain the said metal in the proportion of less than three per cent (3%); on lead when they contain it in proportion of less than ten per cent (10%); nor on zinc when they contain it in proportion of less than fifteen per cent (15%).

Article 9. The special stamp tax, which, according to the laws in force, must be fixed on titles of ownership of mines, will be ten pesos ($10) for each pertenencia protected by said titles, whatever may be the mineral substances that it is intended to exploit.

Article 10. The annual tax on ownership of mines shall be imposed in the following terms:

A. The quota will be twelve pesos ($12) annually for a mining pertenencia, or four pesos ($4) for each third of the year, whatever may be the substances which may be exploited.

B. If the number of pertenencias of a mining property or of different mining properties belonging to the same owner and situated in the same mining district shall exceed ten pertenencias, the quota of taxes will be imposed at the rate of twelve pesos ($12) for the first ten pertenencias, and for the excess up to twenty at the rate of fifteen pesos ($15); for the excess from twenty to fifty the quota will be eighteen pesos ($18); and from fifty-one on at the rate of twenty-four pesos ($24).

Article 2. Article 3 of the said Law of March 25, 1905, is hereby repealed.

Article 3. All sums which the Treasury must receive in conformity with the present decree and the said Law of March 25, 1905, must be paid exclusively in national gold coin.

Transitory Article 1. This decree will take effect on the date hereof.

Transitory Article 2. For mining properties which may have pending the payment of taxes, and in respect to which no forfeiture has been declared, a period is hereby granted until June 30, 1915, within which to pay in gold the amounts due in conformity with the quotas herein specified.

MEMORANDUM.

The intent of Decree No. 5 of the Provisional Government, dated March 19, 1915, providing for the forfeiture, under certain circumstances, of abandoned or unworked mining claims, is to require the owners of such properties to bear their just share of taxation, and to prevent the acquisition of valuable properties by those who, without contributing to the support of the State, seek nevertheless to enjoy the exploitation of those properties under conditions satisfactory only to themselves.

The provisions of the decree may be reduced, in a general way, to the following:

1. Mining claims may be forfeited when the owner either abandons or suspends operations, for a fixed period; but such must be a voluntary act on his part, attended by failure to pay the taxes established by law.

2. In case the abandonment of the property or the suspension of operations, followed by the non-payment of taxes, is due to vis major, then the circumstances will be examined into by the Department, which is vested with authority to grant equitable relief.

3. No person may hereafter possess the right to denounce more than fifteen mining claims, and no corporation or association is hereafter to be allowed to denounce more than one hundred and fifty mining claims, all in the same district, though the proper Department may make exceptions in certain instances.

In promulgating the decree, the Provisional Government entertains no purpose to employ or impose unreasonable or confiscatory methods, its sole desire being to place responsibility where it belongs, namely, on the owners of mining claims located in districts in which favorable conditions exist, and which afford every opportunity for a continuance of operations. While the profits might not be so great as in normal times, nevertheless there exists reason to believe that large numbers of the properties in the districts mentioned could be worked to advantage. Many owners, however, have exhibited a marked indifference to their obligations to the State and for the time being abandoning their claims have by one means and another sought to evade the payment of taxes.

No narrow construction will be given by the authorities to this decree; on the contrary, its provisions will be applied with such liberality as may be consistent with the rights and interests of all concerned.

Mine and Smelter Operators et al. to Special Agent Canova.

WASHINGTON, April 21, 1915.

DEAR SIR: Confirming our conversation at your office yesterday, I wish to say that as representative of the Mine and Smelter Operators Association in Mexico we have had many meetings recently with Mr. Escudero, Minister of Finance in General Villa's Cabinet, with the view of securing modification in the rate of export taxes which the Minister proposed to levy upon the mining industry in the Republic. As a result of these meetings we finally entered into a contract with the Minister of Finance of Mexico, representing the Federal de facto Government, and with Mr. F. Avila, Military Governor of the State of Chihuahua, copy of which we enclose herewith marked Exhibit A.

As a result of this contract, and based upon the terms set forth therein, the decree affecting export tax was issued on the 19th day of March, 1915, copy of which we enclose herewith marked Exhibit B.

On the same date the Minister of Finance issued a decree materially modifying the law under which titles to mining properties are held in Mexico and which is most drastic in its effect, copy of which we enclose herewith marked Exhibit C.

Upon receipt by us of the decree, on March 26, 1915, the Mine and Smelter Operators called upon Mr. Escudero at Chihuahua and discussed the terms with him very fully and addressed a letter to Mr. Escudero, copy of which we enclose herewith marked Exhibit D.

A committee of the Mine and Smelter Operators Association then called a meeting at El Paso on April 1, 1915, and made representations to the State Department at Washington as per copy enclosed herewith marked Exhibit E, and sent the Secretary of State a telegram as per copy enclosed herewith marked Exhibit F, to which we received a reply from the Secretary of State as per copy enclosed herewith marked Exhibit G.

We have been furnished with a copy of a telegram from Mr. Carothers to the Department, dated at Irapuato under date of April 16 [12], copy of which we enclose herewith marked Exhibit H.

This gives you a complete file covering negotiations with the de facto Constitutionalist authorities under General Villa.

We are filing an official letter addressed to the State Department in Washington in which we are urging upon the Department the necessity of insisting upon the repeal of this decree in its entirety, which letter will no doubt reach you in due course.

We only wish to repeat that under no circumstances do we consider it advisable to consider any modifications of that decree, which to the best of our understanding will result unquestionably in the confiscation of many, if not all, foreign-owned mining properties within the Republic of Mexico.

As per our statement to you, we discussed this entire matter at some length with Mr. Llorente yesterday, who in the course of his conversation with us, stated that he had been advised by General Villa that this decree would not be enforced at the present time, but he gave us to understand that it would be enforced when conditions had improved in Mexico and transportation facilities were such as would, in the judgment of the Minister of Finance, permit of the operation of the properties. We called Mr. Llorente's attention to the fact that this law was a very serious modification of the conditions under which titles to mining property were held in Mexico; that it was retroactive in effect; and that it imposed burdens upon the industry in general which in effect were equivalent to confiscation of vested rights in the Republic.

Llorente stated to us that it was not the intention of the Government to make the law retroactive insofar as it referred to the amount of property that could be held under the decree, but in all other respects, and particularly as to the conditions and sufficient operation, it would apply to every property within the Republic.

In our opinion it is positively necessary that our Government insist upon the repeal of this measure in its entirety, as we believe that the enforcement of the decree, even in a modified form, would surely result in an effort to confiscate foreign-owned property in the Republic of Mexico, which in turn would lead to serious international complications.

Yours very respectfully,

W. H. ALDRIDGE.
A. J. McQUATTERS.

Miners' Contract with the Villa Government, March 19, 1915.

In the City of Chihuahua on the 19th of March, 1915, there met, for one part, Citizen Attorney Francisco Escudero, in charge of the Department of the Treasury and Public Works, in representation of the Provisional Government of General Francisco Villa, Chief of Operations of the Conventionist Army, and the Citizen General Fidel Avila, Governor and Military Commandant of the State of Chihuahua, in representation of said State; and, for the other part, the three signers as representatives of the mining and smelting industries in the said State; with the object of celebrating the contract which is set forth in the following clauses:

First. The representatives of the mining and smelting industries voluntarily accept the increased taxes on precious metals in the terms of the decree of this date issued by the Citizen General Francisco Villa, and, for their part, propose the following conditions, which the functionaries above mentioned accept in all of its parts.

Second. No other decree or additional law will be promulgated during the term of six months to count from this date, whether it be of a general or special nature, which may have for its object the increase of the taxes affecting the mining and smelting industries, or any of their branches exempt to the present from said taxes.

Third. There will be no increase in importation duties on merchandise or articles for the use of the mining or smelting industries; neither will there be established a tax on said merchandise or articles which have been exempted to the present from said taxes.

Fourth. The State of Chihuahua, through the medium of the Governor, agrees that no new taxes which affect directly or indirectly the above-mentioned industries will be imposed, neither will those already existing be increased, and this during the term of six months counted from this date; neither will the municipalities or other entities of the State be permitted to establish taxes, whether general or special, that affect the said industries, exception being made of those which existed during the year 1914.

Fifth. The representatives of the mentioned industries agree to purchase from the State Treasury, or from the branches of the same, the legal money they may need for the operation of their business, in those cases where they find it convenient to do so, at the current rate of exchange in the market.

For the effects of this contract there is attached a copy of the decree which is referred to in Clause First.*

Villa's ore tax decree, March 19, 1915.

Francisco Villa, General in Chief of the Operations of the Conventionalist Army to the inhabitants of the Republic makes known;

That by virtue of the extraordinary powers conferred upon me by the Decree of 2nd of February of the present year, issued in the City of Aguascalientes, and

Considering that the army under my command has imposed upon itself the obligation of giving guarantees to Mexicans and foreigners, in order that they may dedicate themselves tranquilly to the peaceable exercise of their activities; and

Considering, that the same Army needs abundant pecuniary elements as well in order to carry to a satisfactory termination its patriotic duties as in order to insure the tranquility of the preceding consideration; I have seen fit to decree;

Article 1. The tax on the gold and silver that may be produced in the Republic, or which proceed from foreign countries, and which was collected by medium of the adhesion and cancellation of revenue stamps, will be taxed in future in the following form:

A.—Pure silver in bars, rich ore, cones, cakes and sulphides; ore in natural state or concentrates; mattes, smelter residues and any other substances which may contain it, destined for exportation, will pay seven and one-half per cent of the value of that metal, in Mexican gold or its equivalent in American gold, at the rate of two for one; with the understanding that, for the effects of this article, the office of the Secretary of Finance will make known, monthly, to the National Assay Offices, to the Departments of the Treasury and to the Collectors of Customs, the rate that will serve as a basis for the collection of the tax during the month succeeding the one in which the advice given.

B.—Pure gold, in bars, cones, or in the form of raw ore, fines, smelter residues, or in any other form in which it may be found to be combined or mixed, will also pay seven and one-half per cent of the value of that metal, in Mexican gold or its equivalent in American gold, at the rate of two for one.

Article 2. The tax on zinc ores that are produced in the Republic, or which proceed from foreign countries and which are destined for exportation, will be collected in the following terms;

When its content is 30 per cent., it will pay one peso Mexican gold per ton or its equivalent in American gold at the rate of two for one, this rate per ton increasing ten centaves Mexican gold or its equivalent in American gold for each one per cent of zinc contained in excess of that heretofore specified.

The expenses of assay and others which are provided for by the relative law are for account of the exporters, without prejudice to the tax on silver and gold which said ores might contain, to which will be applied the taxes marked in the preceding article.

Article 3. The payment of the tax should be made to the principal office of the Treasury Department of the State where said metals are produced, or at the Custom House or Customs Division of importation or exportation of same.

Article 4. The liquidation of the tax and its payment will be shown by a certificate that will be made in duplicate, which should contain in addition, in the case of exportation, all of the data necessary for the identification of the pieces or substances, the name of the Custom House through which the exportation should be made and the term within which it should be done. One copy of the certificate will be delivered to the principal and the other two will remain as vouchers covering the payment, one of them containing the liquidation and the conformity of the principal.

Article 5. Only upon the expressed approval of the office of the Secretary of the Treasury and in each case, under bond, will the payment of the tax be admitted by the medium of drafts, letters of exchange or checks on foreign countries, it being understood that, unless the interested persons obtain said approval, said tax should be collected in cash.

Article 6. With the modification expressed, the Law of the 25th of March 1905 covering taxes and franchises to the mining industry remains in effect.

Transitory Article: This decree becomes effective from this date and will remain in effect during six months; repealing the one of the 24th of December of 1914, issued in the city of Mexico by the Citizen Eulalio Gutierrez.

Given in Monterey, March 19, 1915.

Miners' letter to the Minister of Finance.

CHIHUAHUA, March 27, 1915.

SIR: We wish to again express most emphatically to you that it is absolutely impossible to comply with your late decree with reference to the mining industry, and that instead of supplementing or modifying the decree as published, we believe it is to the interests of the country at large, and that the mining industry would be better conserved, by repealing this law; and as you stated it was your intention to reach the unscrupulous and speculative class, the proper method would be the enactment of specific laws for that purpose against them, and not such a law as the one outlined, which would react upon the great mining industry at large.

We will again reiterate that the publication of this decree will be taken by the world at large as an important step toward the ultimate confiscation of all property held by foreigners, and regardless of any explanation that may be made as to the extent of the government in exempting various specific cases under certain conditions, it will be felt that the policy of the Mexican Government has radically changed as regards foreign investments; that in consequence the investments of foreigners are not looked upon with favor, and it is certain that foreign capital will not be encouraged by the radical decree just published in a local paper.

Respectfully yours,

Miners' letter to the Secretary of State.

EL PASO, TEXAS, April 1, 1915.

SIR: As a Committee appointed at a meeting of representatives of many of the principal American mining companies operating in northern Mexico, we respectfully bring to your attention the decree of General Francisco Villa, issued at Monterey, N. Leon, on March 19, 1915, as published in the Vida Nueva (of Chihuahua) dated March 25th ult., a copy of which we are sending herewith. We enclose also a translation of the decree in full, which is such an extensive modification of the terms under which mining properties may be held in the Republic of Mexico that forfeiture of the great majority of mineral titles is almost unavoidable.

In briefest terms, any of the following may cause forfeiture of mining property:

- (1) Non-payment of taxes within the prescribed period.
- (2) Voluntary suspension of working of mine for 60 days or more, excepting because of fortuitous circumstances individually approved by the Secretary of Fomento as being of sufficient weight to justify the non-operation of the property.
- (3) Abandonment of work.
- (4) Deficient exploitation (to be determined by the Secretary of Fomento).
- (5) Failure to maintain prescribed work in each five-hectare section (regardless of the practicability of such work or the irregular occurrence of the mineral deposits).

The enforcement of this drastic decree, which is about to be promulgated by the action of a dictator who has assumed the powers of legislation inherent only in a national legislature, will radically change an important fundamental property law, apparently without full knowledge of the serious consequences involved, and, so far as we know, without giving mining interests of the Republic a preliminary opportunity to be heard in this matter which so vitally affects their welfare. Regardless of the many legal questions that might be raised with reference to the enforcement of such a drastic measure, we beg leave to point out to you the injustice that would be worked upon the mining industry of the Mexican Republic at large, and upon the American and European investors in its mining properties in particular.

We maintain that the restrictions imposed by the new law are absolutely unjust and will work great hardship to American investors who, in good faith and at great sacrifice, have acquired mining property in the Republic of Mexico, chiefly during the period when the relations between the United States and the Mexican Republic were amicable and when there was reason to believe that their investments were welcomed by the Mexican nation, and that the security of the same was assured under international law and existing treaties between the two nations. The present decree is evidence that this confidence was misplaced.

As a result of the conditions existing in Mexico during the last few years, both this and the preceding administration of our government have felt constrained to advise foreigners to leave the Republic of Mexico until such time as conditions in the country should render it safe for them to return to their respective business occupations. As a result of this, we believe it is safe to assert that at least 85 per cent of the foreign-owned mining properties in the Republic of Mexico have been closed down and their owners have returned either to the United States or to Europe, feeling that their investments were safe so long as they continued to pay the tax upon their properties as fixed by law, which properties in a great majority of cases have been purchased from Mexicans in exchange for the payment of large sums of money.

American citizens who have withdrawn from Mexico at the urgent request of their own State Department and have been deterred from returning to Mexico by the published warnings of that Department, find themselves in this position: After losing in many instances large amounts of personal property as a consequence of the internal disorder in the Mexican Republic, but nevertheless having paid at considerable cost and sacrifice the taxes imposed by one, and in some cases by two, of the Mexican factions claiming to be de facto governments, these property-owning American citizens are now threatened with the loss of their properties if they do not expend further sums, regardless of profit, in the development and operation of the properties which they hold. They are required to do this, not in the most economical and systematic manner for the development of their property according as the occurrence of the ore dictates, but under an arbitrary and unscientific restriction which requires that for every five contiguous pertenencias of any group there must be an extraction working. From a technical standpoint this is absolutely absurd. The new decree requires such expenditures whether or not an ore body is known to exist and regardless of whether the ore is of profitable grade under prevailing conditions and metal markets.

The decree requires, also, that the scale of operations must be sufficient, and it is left to the discretion of the Secretary of Fomento in the last instance to rule whether or not the extent of operations is sufficient. If he decides that the scale is insufficient he is authorized to declare the title forfeited, and the property subject to denouncement by any individual residing within the Republic.

The mineral agents in the several districts are delegated to act as inspectors and to bring all cases of non-compliance with the new law to the attention of the Secretary of Fomento. This feature introduces opportunities for graft on the part of the mineral agents and opens up an unlimited field of annoyance to mining operators. In view of the fact that under present conditions even well equipped properties with complete operating organizations are unable to operate on a really profitable scale—because of the insufficiency of labor supply and of railroad facilities which render it extremely difficult to secure needed supplies and fuel or to ship the product mined to treatment plants—in the case of most properties, especially those which are isolated or in an early stage of development, it is clearly impossible for the owners to comply with the new decree, and consequently the enforcement of this decree is confiscatory in effect.

In case any developed mines should be forfeited, even temporarily, to the Mexican Government, and by it be delivered to some other individual, it is highly probable that immense damage would result to such mines before the same could be recovered by the original owners after a really constitutional government shall have been established.

This decree is so unjust and harmful to the interests of American citizens who have in good faith invested in mining property in the Republic of Mexico, that we hasten to bring it to your attention, and we beg to request that this matter be given the careful attention which it deserves. Unless the decree referred to can be repealed or annulled, great distress and financial loss will result to individuals and corporations who have already suffered immensely. We therefore trust that you will take appropriate steps under these conditions to safeguard our interests as American citizens.

Yours very truly,

A. J. MCQUATTERS, Chairman.

Miners' telegram to the Secretary of State.

EL PASO, April 2, 1915.

The undersigned, acting as a committee representing the principal American mining companies operating in northern Mexico, have mailed to you under date of April 1 a communication respectfully bringing to your attention a radical decree issued by General Villa which makes drastic changes in the law under which mining properties may be held in the Republic of Mexico. This communication embodies views of these operators regarding the scope of the decree and points out the great injustice and serious loss which will be inflicted upon American citizens if this decree is put into effect. We trust that the letter will reach you promptly and that after giving it the consideration which it merits you will take such action as you deem appropriate to safeguard the interests of American citizens and of foreigners who have acquired mining property in Mexico.

Reference your telegrams April 12 and 16, respecting mining decree. While Department appreciates assurances given relative to interpretation of decree, it believes that arbitrary power given official by decree will ultimately result in great injustice to many American mining owners who have acquired properties legitimately, under laws of Mexico, especially since terms of decree appear impossible to comply with from standpoint of economic mining operation.

So believing, Department considers that best interests both of foreign mining owners and of Mexicans themselves would be conserved by removing entirely menace of decree through its repeal.

If, as stated in your telegram April 12, intention of law is to prevent speculation in dormant mining properties, that end could of course be attained by law not embodying menace to present legitimate owners.

Bring above most earnestly to attention Villa and urgently ask that the decree be repealed.

I told him that it would be better to wait a little on this until he has time to properly consider it. You say that Mr. Harold McLeod Cobb has filed a protest against the confiscatory nature of this new mining law.

Under date of April 14 [15], 1915, Mr. George C. Carothers, a special representative of the Department of State, was telegraphically instructed to protest against the application of the provisions of this decree to American mine owners.

A telegraphic reply has been received from Mr. Carothers, saying that he is informed that it is not the intention of the authorities who promulgated this decree to injure legitimate mining industries but to prevent the purchase of dormant mining property by speculators for profit. Mr. Carothers added that it was his intention to proceed to Chihuahua as soon as possible and discuss with the appropriate authorities the matter of changing or modifying the decree and he recommended that American mine owners make immediate representations to the Minister of Fomento in Chihuahua and procure exemption, if justified, as provided in the decree.

tion, under date of March 1, 1915, the enforcement of which will greatly and excessively increase the taxes on mining properties in Mexico.

We desire to emphatically protest against the enforcement and the recognition of this decree, on the following grounds:

1. That it imposes a tax which is exorbitant and confiscatory.
2. That it is retroactive because it was not published in the State of Chihuahua (where the properties of this company are located) and because neither this company nor its subsidiary, the Sierra Mining Company, S. A., had any notice or knowledge of it until after the month of March, in which month the taxes covered by it were payable.
3. That the Carranza Government is not in control of the State of Chihuahua, and cannot give any protection to this company so as to enable it to operate its properties.
4. That this company was forced to abandon its operations in the State of Chihuahua, and that it has already been compelled by superior force to pay taxes to the local government under Villa, which is now in control of Chihuahua, and that therefore the enforcement of the Carranza decree will subject this company to double taxation.

* * * We respectfully petition that formal protest be made by your Department to the Carranza Government against this decree, and that that government be notified that the decree will not be recognized by the United States as having any application to mining properties owned by citizens of this country and situated without the territory under control of the Carranza Government. * * *

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Durango, May 15, 1915.

No. 27.]

SIR: I have the honor to report upon the recent decrees affecting mines and mining property promulgated within the past two months by the Chihuahua seat of government, copies of which are enclosed with this despatch. * * *

No information to date has been received at this office of any modification of the decree of March 19, 1915, as a result of the protests of the American Government and the English Government against the confiscatory nature of the decree, except the explanation credited to Manuel Bonilla and made by authority of the Secretary of Fomento, Licenciado Francisco Escudero, which appeared in the El Paso Morning Times of April 15, 1915, copy of which is hereto attached. * * *

The payment of taxes in Mexican gold and the payment of wages of employees in Mexican silver or gold (enclosures No. 2 and No. 3) are manifestly impossible, for such money is not of circulation and cannot be bought in sufficient quantities in the country. * * *

One possible motive for the decrees may have been that it was hoped that foreign interests could be forced to bring in outside capital and spend it within the country in order to save their property from confiscation, thus materially aiding the de facto government, which is moving heaven and earth to obtain gold with which to buy war supplies from the United States. This theory was tenable until the promulgation of the last decree requiring all mines to pay wages in silver or gold, or its equivalent in paper money of forced circulation. When this last decree of May 4, 1915, (enclosure No. 4) was issued, the motive for the entire series at once became evident, and the conviction clearly confirmed, that the intention and motive was confiscation by seeming legal requirements but which in reality are absolutely physically impossible to comply with.

The great amount of American capital honestly and in good faith invested in the mining industry in this consular district makes this subject of immense importance to American citizens.

Manuel Bonilla's explanation of Villa's New Mining Law.

[From El Paso Morning Times, April 15, 1915.]

I have been authorized by the Minister of Fomento to make a statement to the press for the purpose of dispelling the incorrect impressions which seem to exist in the minds of the people of the United States, as well as those of other foreign countries, in regard to the reforms decreed by General Villa's Secretary of Fomento, Licenciado Escudero. My ideas are in conformity with those of Mr. Escudero and I make this statement in pursuance of a conversation had with the Secretary regarding these laws.

The principal objection which most of the American periodicals and the people interested in properties in Mexico seem to have, and which upon its face appears to have some foundation, is the fact that on account of changed circumstances, such as the state of war and military operations existing in Mexico, it will be impossible or impracticable for some miners to work their properties for some time. There is, however, no foundation for any fear in this respect, because there is a clause or article in the new law which provides that any owner who for some just or plausible reason is not able to work the property owned by him in accordance with the requirements of said decree, may apply to the Government with a fair exposition of his case, and his reasons for not working his claim or mine, and in the event the reasons stated are reasonable from a business, economic or other standpoint, he will be afforded an extension or some concession, so that his rights shall be protected and in no way injured. It has been the policy of the Government and the Department of Fomento, and it will in future be their policy, to grant such privileges and extensions, and no bona fide application based upon fact will be refused, and no interest which in justice should be protected will in any way be injured.

The miner with means to work his property or a desire to work the same in a bona fide manner need have no fear that he will be unjustly deprived of his rights. However, the person who dreams about holding a property to the exclusion of others until someone with money comes along and pays him a royalty for that which he has not earned or developed, and the person who holds large tracts of pertenencias as a land owner, holds big tracts of farming land unused without developing the natural resources of the country, certainly would receive no encouragement of their dreams. (Let the mines be exploited by actual work,) and if you claim that some harm is done you because the law sets at naught the realization of dreams of becoming rich by exploitation of others and without work, think of the claim of these people whom you are depriving of their right to work and who are debarred from the inalienable right to live by the avaricious monopolies of land and wealth. * * *

The ancient mining law of Mexico provided that in order for one to keep his rights to a certain mine, the owner should not only file his claim as discoverer of a new ledge, or as willing to work some abandoned property, but he was also required to start and maintain actual work in the mine. The Government has eminent domain on each and every portion of its territory, and is sovereign to fix such conditions precedent or subsequent for granting the right to work or own a ledge as it may deem meet and proper.

Later on, under General Diaz's Government, his Minister of Finance, Mr. Limantour, changed the system, and the new mining law came into existence, providing that in order to maintain the right of property in any extension of mineral ground it was not necessary to work the fundo minero, and the only condition was the payment of six pesos a year for each hectare constituting the ground.

Since the Diaz Government seemed to have had the undisputed right to change and amend the mining laws, why should the right be disputed of the present Mexican Government to change or amend its laws by what amounts to a repeal of the Limantour amendment, and thus place the law in the status which from the standpoint of political economy was to the best interests of the people? The Limantour amendment or change in no way benefits either the Government or the country, and any speculator could, under that law, hold a promising ledge in his grasp indefinitely, provided he has the money to pay six pesos for each two and a half acres contained in his grant.

The man next to him who starts work and carries the same on in a bona fide way, pays salaries to the employees and increases the wealth of the country and the circulation of money is handicapped by the provision of the Limantour amendment, and he bears a larger burden economically than the man who merely pays the annual tax. The man who works his property provides for the payment of duties on exportation and other taxes derived from the production of ore and bullion.

Statement regarding General Urbina's order of April 14, 1915, relating to payment of mine employes in coin.

[From El Paso Morning Times, May 5, 1915.]

A drastic mining decree affecting the properties in the State of Durango, it is reported, has been issued by General Tomas Urbina R., which if enforced, mine owners declare, will force them to suspend operations. The decree is said to require the payment of all employees of Durango mining properties in Mexican silver or its equivalent in American gold, instead of the Villa currency which is now the medium of exchange in northern Mexico. The penalty for failure to comply with the provisions of the alleged decree is confiscation of the mining property by the State Government of Durango, and mining men declare that some mine owners have been notified by Urbina's officers that if they do not comply, execution will be the penalty.

In addition to requiring payment of employees in silver, Urbina's decree is said to make it obligatory for mine owners to give a thirty-day notice to any employee whom they wish to discharge; the provision applies to day laborers as well as other employees.

The decree, according to Americans arriving from Durango yesterday, was issued on April 14, at Auza, State of San Luis Potosi, where General Urbina was then operating with his troops. Copies of it were received here yesterday from mining men residing in Durango. Urbina, by virtue of his being military commander of the State of Durango, has power to issue the order.

American and foreign mine owners of Durango who are now in El Paso said yesterday that it is impossible to carry out the provisions of Urbina's decree. Silver is no longer in circulation in northern Mexico and to pay employees on a gold basis, they say, is beyond reason.

Villa decree of May 4, 1915, requiring payment of mine employes in coin.

Francisco Villa, General in Chief of Operations of the Conventionist Army, unto the inhabitants of the Republic, makes known:

That by virtue of the extraordinary powers contained in the Decree of February 2, 1915, issued in the City of Aguascalientes, with which I am invested; and

Considering: That the fluctuations of value to which the paper money of forced circulation is subject are not natural since the time when the changes in value became so rapid and extensive and lead to the supposition that they are chiefly due to speculation;

That such speculation injures all classes of society but very specially injures the laboring classes, who see the articles of prime necessity daily increasing and their ability to buy with the product of their labor daily decreasing;

That it is the absolute duty of the undersigned to look after the interests of the community, attacking the disease by which it is assailed in its most notorious symptoms;

That, finally, since the class of laborers employed in the mines is the one most exposed to the harmful effects of such speculation, and the paper of forced circulation with which the payment of this class of labor is made is the subject of such great fluctuations, in justice to the miners I am compelled to free the said wages from the effects of the rise and fall of the value of paper money;

I have seen fit to decree the following:

Article 1. The wages or salaries which the mining companies or individuals working mines have agreed to pay their workmen in that part of the Republic controlled by the Army under my command shall be considered to be upon a basis of silver or gold of the national coinage, or its equivalent in American money of silver or gold at the rate of two for one, the minimum daily wage to be one peso of Mexican silver or gold or its equivalent as stated above.

⁷⁸ See the text of the decree here discussed, post, inclosure with Inde Gold Mining Company's letter of May 20.

Article 2. The payment of the salaries or wages shall be made in coin or in paper money of forced circulation at the rate agreed upon between the parties, and in case of disagreement the rate of exchange on that day shall be used.

Article 3. Commissary stores, workmen's stores, or any other plan which may have for its purpose the obligation of the workmen to buy at a certain place articles of prime necessity and articles for his use, are strictly prohibited. Establishments, private or public, clearly philanthropic, and entrance to which shall be absolutely free and voluntary, are the only exceptions to this prohibition.

Article 4. This decree shall commence to take effect on the 5th day of the coming June.

Done in the City of Aguascalientes on the 4th day of May, 1915.

Department informed by Guanacevi Mining Company, said to be owned by Mrs. Phoebe Hearst and J. B. Haggin, American citizens, that its manager Guanacevi, Durango, has been notified by a military commander there that, on penalty severe punishment of owners and confiscation of mines, all foreign mine owners must pay employees in Mexican gold and silver coin or American gold, no paper money being allowed to circulate. Order said to have been signed by General Urbina and dated San Luis Potosi. Department also informed of order issued by Villa at Aguascalientes, May 4, on which General Urbina's said order perhaps based. Villa's order not entirely clear on question of money in which such payment must be made.

Immediately investigate and report on purpose of Villa order. If it was correctly interpreted by Urbina, point out to Villa what appear to be the facts, namely, that Mexican gold and silver not now circulating and that it would be practically impossible to import to many mines American gold or silver because of unsettled conditions and resultant certainty of robbery and perhaps murder of messengers carrying money.

Urbina's order in terms discriminates against foreigners and under existing circumstances is plainly confiscatory. Make most urgent efforts for its immediate withdrawal and for such interpretation of Villa's said order as shall not impose hardships, discrimination or confiscation on foreign mining property.

EL PASO, June 25, [received 26], 1915.

I refer to the various letters and telegrams that have passed between this Committee and your Department with reference to a decree issued on March 19, 1915, affecting conditions under which title to mining property is had in the Republic of Mexico, in connection with which law you have had your representative make representation to the de facto authorities in the State of Chihuahua and which law we understood would not be applied in so far as it affects the legitimately acquired property of foreigners in the Republic. We now beg to inform you that we have been advised by Francisco Escudero, in charge of the Department of Finance and Public Works, that the law is in effect and will be applied unless exemption is made in each specific case as provided therein. I desire to reiterate here our former statements to you that this appears to be the first important step towards ultimate confiscation of mineral properties owned by foreigners in the Republic of Mexico, and respectfully request that you take such further steps as may be deemed advisable to protect American interests.

For Committee:
A. J. McQUATTERS.

File No. 812.63/128.

EL PASO, June 26, 1915.

SIR: I telegraphed you yesterday as per confirmation enclosed herewith, which I now beg to confirm.

I have discussed the subject matter of this telegram, as well as our previous communications with your Department, at some length with Mr. George C. Carothers, your Special Representative in Mexico.

Mr. Carothers has advised me that the de facto authorities of the Villa government have assured him repeatedly that the interests of no foreigner in Mexico would suffer as a result of the decree in question. However, notwithstanding the fact that the above assurances have been given, the fact remains that it is now their intention to enforce the provisions of this decree, which are very detrimental to every foreigner who has money invested in mineral property in the country.

We enclose herewith translation of blank form of exemption that may be granted to the owners of mining properties by the de facto authorities, upon presentation by the owners of such mining properties of a request, in which request, we are advised by the Minister of Finance, should be set forth the reasons for asking for the exemption, and if necessary evidence will be taken by the said Minister to establish the correctness of the contention made, and if this in his opinion is sufficient, the exemption in question will be granted for a period of not to exceed six months, at the expiration of which time the same process would have to be gone through with again.

The conditions provided for the operation of mining properties as set forth in the decree in question are such as to render them positively impossible to comply with, even during a normal state of affairs in Mexico, and the effects of the measure are such as to render every mining property in the Republic liable to forfeiture and will, if enforced, without question create a condition which would probably lead to international complications, which all most earnestly desire may be averted.

For your information I will state that a great number of the mining properties in the northern part of the Republic, which belonged to Mexican citizens, have already been confiscated by the de facto authorities, and that at least one mining property owned by foreigners, located at Naica, in the State of Chihuahua, has been confiscated and is now being operated. A smelting plant located at Santa Rosalia, in the State of Chihuahua, belonging to Mexican, French and English capitalists, has been confiscated and put into operation for the purpose of smelting the ores that are being extracted from the confiscated mines. Therefore you can readily understand that these facts, which are well known to the mining industry at large, create a feeling of uneasiness as to the security of their own property or investments in the country, and we now most urgently request that you take such steps as you deem appropriate to secure from the proper authorities of Mexico such assurances as can be brought about only by the repeal or indefinite suspension of the decree in question.

Yours very truly,

A. J. McQUATTERS.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 30, 1915.

Department desires that you call emphatically to General Carranza's attention the deplorable status of foreign-owned mining properties. The owners of these properties have in many cases paid taxes to both factions, and recent decrees published by both factions impose conditions absolutely impossible to meet under the peculiar conditions existing in Mexico. The mine owners have employed every reasonable effort to continue the operation of their plants, but interruption and sometimes destruction of transportation facilities, disturbed conditions of labor, requisitions by armed forces upon their stores, supplies and output, have placed them in a position where further attempts to continue operations appear in the large majority of cases useless and inadvisable. Moreover, recent decrees have arbitrarily increased taxes and called for their payment in Mexican gold, a condition with which many mining companies cannot possibly comply.

You are instructed to state to General Carranza that this Government, in its desire to avoid grave complications and after serious consideration of this question, is of opinion that General Carranza should take immediate steps to guarantee these foreign interests in the titles to their properties and to permit such as are able to continue operations to do so, without imposing any taxes other than those fixed by the laws emanating from the Constitution; and hopes that due and immediate consideration will be given to the matter in order that this question may be definitely and satisfactorily settled.

You will also state that this Government wishes him to give earnest and weighty consideration to the rights of foreigners in general. The United States Government has at all times dealt fairly with the leaders of the contending factions in Mexico, and it expects reciprocal treatment of its citizens in that country, and that leaders who exercise power will mete out justice to American citizens and foreigners generally.

SIR: Referring to my telegram of this date, I have the honor to enclose herewith an English translation of the principal points of said decree, and to state that many Americans and foreigners have called at this Consulate General requesting me to ask the Department to please do all that is possible to do to have this decree amended as relates to mining properties belonging to Americans and foreigners, especially such properties as are not producing dividends but have for a long time paid to the de facto government the regular taxes in spite of the fact that the owners thereof have been losing money.

It is believed that if Americans and foreigners, as well as many Mexicans, are required to pay the greatly increased tax, many of them will decline to pay anything. It is probable that in the sum total the Government will not receive any more from this source than they now receive by collecting a reasonable amount.

The majority of the mining properties in this part of Mexico have either been closed down entirely on account of revolutionary conditions, or, where they have operated at all, they have operated simply as a matter of charity toward their former employees in order to give them employment from which they could live. I know of no mining companies in this part of Mexico which are even making expenses; but very few of them are operating at all.

This decree has a very depressing effect upon mine owners.

MY DEAR MR. CANOVA: As you possibly may not have received it, I enclose translation of a Carranza decree of June 19 which I have just received.

This decree, which was issued before the Department's telegram of June 30 on this general subject was sent out, shows a slightly favorable tendency. It, however, makes no change in the tremendously exorbitant and arbitrary rate of taxation which General Carranza decreed on March 1st last and still proposes to enforce. What his present decree is extending is not the payment of current taxes (as, for instance, those of the present tercio, which must be paid this month) but only the tax arrears for previous tercio which he has not yet been able to get hold of.

*The Acting Secretary of State to Special Agent Silliman.*DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 28, 1915.

SIR: The Department encloses a copy of a despatch from the Consul General at Monterey, transmitting an English translation of the principal points of the decree of March 1, 1915. The Consul General reports [etc.]

You are instructed to bring the information contained in the Consul General's despatch to the attention of the appropriate authorities in connection with representations previously made looking to the modification of the mining decree mentioned.

You will add, that the Department is convinced that the Constitutionalist authorities are not desirous of carrying into execution measures which will result in the confiscation of American-owned properties, and that upon having this feature of the operations of the mining decree in question called to their attention, they will promptly take the necessary steps to modify such decree in the interest of justice to the American citizens owning such properties who have already been subjected to enormous losses because of the disturbed conditions which have for so long existed in Mexico.

AMERICAN CONSULATE GENERAL,
Monterey, July 29, 1915.

Department's July 28. I understand the words "old tax to be effective for present quarter only" to mean that the mining tax shall be the same amount and paid in same kind of money as in past quarters, namely, in Constitutionalist currency such as in general circulation. As this is the only kind of money to be had in Monterey, with such understanding of the modification it is probable that all mine owners will pay on all mining properties; whereas if they were required to pay any other kind of money it could not be obtained and many could not pay and it is believed taxes on great majority of mining claims would go unpaid. Minister of Hacienda respectfully requested to please telegraph his Monterey collector accordingly.

SIR: Referring to the Department's unnumbered despatch of May 18, 1915, transmitting the protest of the Sierra Consolidated Mines Company, of Duluth, Minnesota, against the Carranza decree of March 1, 1915, increasing taxes on mining property in Mexico.

I have the honor to respectfully refer the Department to my recent cablegrams on this subject, in response to recent cablegraphic instruction from the Department. From this correspondence it will be seen that the Carranza Government claims that the increase is not improper, because it is equitable. Their position is that a product which is sold for gold, properly may pay its taxes in gold. This principle has for some time been assumed and enforced in the case of export taxes.

There was great opposition to the ruling at first, as the Department may remember, in the matter of taxes on oil exported from Tampico. This was, I believe, the first case in which the Mexican gold peso was used as a unit for calculating export taxes.

It is a fact, however, that an increase from six pesos Mexican currency to six pesos Mexican gold appears exorbitant. At the present rate of exchange, it amounts to the difference between 30 cents American and 3 dollars American per hectare. If 3 dollars appears exorbitant, it is also apparent that 30 cents looks and sounds insignificant. This is a matter which the mining interests might properly take up, jointly or individually, through the Secretary of Hacienda and see if, through the reasons they may present, some more equitable rate cannot be secured, taking into consideration the interests of all concerned.

The Government, in response to a representation made on instruction from the Department at the instance of Consul General Hanna, has agreed to suspend the enforcement of the decree for another three months. This will give time for those interested to make any representation they may deem proper.

In regard to the second, third and fourth points made by the Sierra Consolidated Mines Company, however they may theorize, it has not been the practice of the Constitutionalists to hold that their decrees are effective in territory not controlled by them. They have lately given public notice that they will not undertake to recollect taxes paid to other authorities. On presentation of receipts paid to other authorities, they agree to revalidate them; thus conceding the principle contended for by our own Government that taxes paid to de facto authorities must be recognized by other authorities.

SIR: I am in receipt of a letter dated July 28 from Mr. William J. Quigley, Manager of the El Potosí Mining Company, one of the members of the Mine and Smelter Operators' Association, in which I am requested to bring the following matter to the Department's attention and to request an opinion thereon for the guidance of the parties in interest.

On July 12 the executive committee of the Mine and Smelter Operators' Association was summoned before Sr. Francisco Escudero, Minister of Finance in the de facto Government of General Villa, otherwise self-styled the Conventionist Government, and a request was made of them, as coming from General Villa, to advance the said Government the sum of $300,000 on the understanding that loans made by the various companies having membership in the association, in pursuance of the request mentioned, would be credited to such companies in the payment of taxes and freight charges as these might become due in the future. The association in due time, through its secretary, advised Sr. Escudero, in effect, that it would be impossible for the operating mining and smelting companies to meet his demands, by reason of their foreign character, and the danger that making loans of the character proposed might be construed by adverse factions in the present civil conflict in Mexico as a hostile proceeding in so far as they were concerned, with the result that the companies guilty of these indiscretions might lay themselves to penalties in the future.

The mining companies are now fully expecting, either in the immediate future or more remotely, action of a more vigorous kind calculated to secure the results aimed at by Sr. Escudero, and in this understanding they request the Department to advise them as to what measures they should pursue to prevent the collection of forced loans that may be ordered against them.

At request of mine owners of this part of Mexico, I send following:

Meeting of mine owners both foreigners and Mexicans held this day in Consulate declare impossible to pay mine tax in conformity with Carranza decree of March 1. Enforcement of this decree would be equivalent to absolute loss of their properties. Although Secretary Lansing's telegram July 28, states mining taxes are to be collected at old rate, the tax collector in Monterey is demanding payment in gold at the increased rate according to March decree. In view of fact that he has not yet received instructions to accept payment either in gold or Constitutionalist money at old rate, we the mine owners ask that old rate be restored and Constitutionalist money, the only money in circulation, be accepted in payment. Conditions of country are such that but few mines can be worked and they are paying increased export taxes of 100 per cent on silver, over 200 per cent on gold, besides newly created export taxes on lead and zinc.

General Villa has demanded that accredited representatives of the Mine and Smelter Operators of Chihuahua present themselves at the Governor's Palace at Chihuahua August 9 to meet General Villa to receive a proposition of grave importance which will be submitted at the time. He threatens that properties which are not represented at the proposed meeting by fully empowered representatives will be closed. He stated that he would conclude with those present arrangements which would be binding on the industry although we have pointed out to Villa that the specific purpose of the meeting and the object for discussion must be known before necessary authority with proper limitation can be delegated by the principals to their representatives or agents; nevertheless he has flatly refused to state to us or even to indicate the nature of the proposition which is to be submitted. It is our unanimous opinion that Villa's purpose is to obtain money unjustly and coercively. We realize from previous instances the likelihood that coercive methods and intimidation will be applied by Villa at such a meeting. On July 12 Señor Escudero, Secretary of Hacienda, acting under instructions of General Villa, proposed that, because of the urgent needs of his Government, the members of this association each advance as large a sum as possible, such advance to be repaid by crediting same against amounts which would become payable for mining taxes and railroad freights. Total amount required was stated as $300,000 gold. We refused to contribute, on grounds that such advances would compromise us because open to construction as participation in the internal political affairs of Mexico. We are therefore apprehensive that Villa now intends to exact a forced loan or its equivalent. Hence we respectfully and earnestly request that appropriate representations be made to General Villa for the purpose of forestalling any demands upon us by him for a forced loan or any other illegal exaction. We believe that such representations are necessary to protect our rights and will avoid disagreeable and embarrassing complications in the present delicate situation.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Vera Cruz, August 4, 1915.

MR. REPRESENTATIVE: The Department of the Treasury and Public Credit, in a communication of July 29, informs me as follows:

Article 10 of the Law of March 25, 1905, relating to stamp taxes and taxes on mining franchises, says:

"The annual tax on mining property will be as follows:

"A. For each mining pertenencia, six pesos annually, or two pesos for each four-month period or tercio, regardless of the substances exploited.

"B. If the number of pertenencias belonging to a single mining company exceed twenty-five, and if these pertenencias are contiguous, the tax of six pesos will affect only the first twenty-five pertenencias, and will be reduced to three pesos for each pertenencia in excess of twenty-five."

By virtue of the Decree of March 1, 1915, Article 10 was amended to read as follows: "The annual tax on mining property will be as follows:

"A. For each mining pertencencia, twelve pesos annually, or four pesos for each tercio, regardless of the substances exploited.

"B. If the number of pertencencias in one holding, or in several holdings belonging to a single owner and situated in the same mining district, exceed ten pertencencias, the tax will be at the rate of twelve pesos for the first ten pertencencias; for those in excess of ten and up to twenty, at the rate of fifteen pesos; for those in excess of twenty and up to fifty, at the rate of eighteen pesos; and for those in excess of fifty, at the rate of twenty-four pesos."

As your Department will see, the amendment made in the Law of March 25, 1905, tends to comply with one of the promises of the Revolution, favoring the small property, since according to the original law a mine owner who had ten pertencencias paid annually the sum of $60, and another who had twenty paid $120; that is to say, he paid proportionally to the number of pertencencias. But according to the new provision a mine owner having ten pertencencias will pay annually $120, and a mine owner having twenty pertencencias will pay, not double the other amount, but $270, which is a little more than double. And the proportion is more and more accentuated as the number of pertencencias increases under a single proprietorship.

The product of the mines is sold abroad, and is naturally paid for in foreign money. As a result, and in view of the present depreciation of our money, mine owners who pay their workmen in Constitutionalist currency now obtain a magnificent profit. They will therefore suffer no injury whatever in paying their mining taxes in gold, as required by the Decree of March 1, 1915. They get gold abroad for their product, and are more than compensated by paying their workmen in our currency. Formerly there would have been no object in requiring payment in gold, because Mexican money enjoyed perfect legal parity with foreign money.

All the foregoing fundamental considerations influenced the issuance of the Decree of March 1, 1915, which is in every aspect more just and equitable than the former law. But this Department, taking into account the abnormal circumstances at the city of Monterrey, has telegraphically instructed the Tax Collector there, as a special favor, to extend the period within which mine owners may pay their taxes now due, to August 31, 1915.

Finally, I inform you that this Department is disposed to reduce the tax rate in the case of every mine owner who applies directly to this Department before August 31, on the understanding that the reduction will be made solely on considerations of equity in view of the circumstances of each case.

I have the honor to transcribe the foregoing to you for your information, and in order that you may communicate it to the Department of State in Washington, as a result of the action taken by you in pursuance of the instructions given you by Secretary Adee in the telegram of which you sent a copy to the Department of the Treasury and Public Credit, requesting a modification of the Decree of March 1, 1915, which fixes the annual tax on mining property.

FOREIGN OFFICE,

MR. REPRESENTATIVE: The Department of the Treasury and Public Credit, in a communication of August 4, informs me as follows:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of July 9, with which you enclosed a communication from Mr. John R. Silliman, Special Representative of the Department of State of the American Union, to which was attached a telegram from the Acting Secretary of State at Washington, Mr. Osborne, instructing Mr. Silliman to make representations to the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power, in regard to the injuries which are being complained of by foreigners who have mining properties in this country, from whom in some cases taxes are collected by the lawful authorities and also by other authorities acting for some one of the factions in control in certain regions; adding that because of the required payment of taxes in national gold, often an impossibility, and the various increases in taxation that have been decreed and which are considered to be arbitrary, and because of the interruption of communications, the abnormal labor conditions, and in general the absence of guaranties, the mining industry has become paralyzed; and the note concludes with a request that orders be given that will insure guaranties to the mining interests, and that mining taxes be collected according to the old rates.

In reply I have the honor to say to you that the first of the points above mentioned has already been satisfactorily disposed of by the Decree of June 19, 1915,⁷⁰ waiving payment of taxes in rebel districts, Conventionist or Villista, and consequently the double collection of taxes is no longer possible.

As to the provision for payment in national gold, it suffices to consider that the products of the mines are sold in foreign parts for foreign money in order to appreciate the motives for that provision, which in no way injures the interests concerned in view of the easy conversion of such foreign money into dollars, which are accepted at one for two, namely at the same rate as obtained during the period prior to the new law. I should add that the complaining taxpayers, in consequence of our present economic plight, are making big profits through the depreciation of our currency; with this currency they pay their workmen, and as this is their chief expense the result is that they are put to an extremely low outlay in the conduct of their business. And not only is the argument unacceptable regarding the alleged impossibility of complying with the law, but even the difficulty thereof is not apparent; because if it is true that there is a scarcity of national gold coin, it is nevertheless also true that provision has been made for payment of the taxes in United States money, in drafts on that country, or in national silver coin at the established rates.

With reference to the increase of the tax rates, which is one of the chief causes of complaint, according to the note under discussion, let me say that the only provision made on this point is found in the Decree of March 1, 1915, which amended the Law of March 25, 1905; the former contains only two modifications: first the tax on the title, provided for in Article 9, which tax is collected by means of stamps affixed to the instruments of conveyance of the mines; this constitutes no new burden nor is it a real increase of the former tax, as is apparent at first glance; for although it is true that the Law of March 25, 1905, reduced to five pesos the tax payable on each pertencencia, which is the same as the rate now fixed by the Decree of March 1, 1915. But even supposing that there has been a genuine increase of the burden, there is still no room for the complaint made by the mine owners, nor even by those who, having denounced new claims, are subject to the procedure governing the same; for the reason that this Department, taking into consideration the fact that the period of time consumed in the procedure is not the responsibility of the one making the denouncement, ruled that the tax in such cases should be paid in conformity with the rates in effect at the time of filing the denouncement, and so informed the Department of Fomento. Therefore, if mine owners are in no way affected by this modification of the law, there is, unquestionably, no reason for the objections that have been offered to it. The other modification above mentioned is the one contained in Article 10, relative to the tax on the property, which is slightly increased in comparison with the rates fixed by the Law of June 6, 1892. This law fixed the rate at ten pesos a pertencencia, whereas the present decree fixes it at twelve pesos for small holdings, and established the increase in the rates for larger holdings in direct ratio instead of the inverse ratio established by the Law of March 25, 1905. This modification is a benefit to the small holding and complies with one of the promises of the Revolution, stimulates the mining industry, prevents as far as possible the existence of very large holdings in the hands of a small privileged group, and augments the income of the national Treasury without injuring the interests of tax-payers, since even in view of the small increase decreed and the reformation of the ratio from inverse to direct, the new rates are really too low when one considers the importance of the industry involved.

I transcribe the foregoing in response to your note of July 1, last.

DEAR SIR: We enclose herewith confirmation of telegrams sent you under date of August 12, which we hereby confirm, and wish to reiterate our high appreciation of the satisfactory results obtained during the recent conferences with General Villa and members of his cabinet, and to state that we believe that the change of attitude on the part of the Mexican officials was due wholly to the prompt and energetic representations made at your direction by Mr. George C. It would be difficult for one not thoroughly conversant with the Mexican situation and particularly the individuals at the head of the various factions to appreciate the difficult position that a representative of our Government is placed in in dealing with them from day to day in such a way as to still maintain friendly relations and accomplish good results.

Mr. Carothers seems to be peculiarly fitted for this difficult position and has at all times acted with promptness and dispatch in making any proper representations to the de facto authorities in behalf of Americans interested in the country when brought to his attention.

Monterey, August 28, 1915.

The majority of miners have petitioned Vera Cruz in compliance with telegram from Consul Silliman. Up to the present only two replies have been received, both of them to Americans, conceding payment on the basis of ten pesos Mexican gold for each hectarea per annum for the period of July to October and providing future payments in conformity with decree of March 1. This is not in conformity with Consul Silliman's telegram quoted in the Department's July 28 [to Consul General Hanna]. It means practically taxes twelve times what was paid for the period of March to June. Americans asking what shall they do and also in case no reply received by the 31st instant, the last day to make payment.

Decree issued by Carranza, August 31, 1915, modifying the mining law of March 1, 1915.

I, Venustiano Carranza, First Chief [etc.], considering that the mining business in general has unavoidably been interrupted by the social disturbances of the country, especially in territory subject to the excesses of the troops opposed to the Constitutionalist Government, and for lack of materials of prime necessity that could not be obtained on account of the war, have thought it proper to decree as follows:

Article 1. During the terms hereinafter mentioned, the tariffs set forth in Article 10 of the Law of March 25, 1905, amended by Article 1 of the Decree of March 1, 1915, relating to the taxation of mining properties, are hereby amended as follows:

A. During the tercio between last July and next November, the tax shall be at the rate of Six Pesos ($6) annually for each pertenencia, whatever may be the number of pertenencias.

B. During the tercio between next November and February, 1916, the tax shall be at the rate of Eight Pesos ($8) annually for each pertenencia, whatever may be the number of pertenencias.

C. From March 1, 1916, the tax shall be the same as established by the Decree of March 1, 1915.

Article 2. Mining pertenencias on which taxes are due for a period previous to last July shall bear a tax at the rate of Six Pesos ($6) annually on each of the first twenty-five pertenencias, and of Three Pesos ($3) on pertenencias in excess of twenty-five.

Article 3. To all proprietors of mines who have paid the tax for the tercio beginning last July, there shall be returned a sum equal to the difference between the payment made and the amount due under this decree.

Article 4. The payments fixed by this decree may be made on or before September 30, 1915, without incurring any penalty for delinquency.

Article 5. The payments fixed by this decree shall be made in national gold coin or in its equivalent in silver coin in accordance with the Decree of May 8, 1915.

VERA CRUZ, September 13, 1915.

Department's September 11. Government's argument is:

First. Mining taxes have always been disproportionately low. With present depreciated currency they would be so absurdly low as to be entirely inequitable.

Second. In view of depreciated and fluctuating paper currency the only proper and equitable unit is the Mexican gold peso equivalent approximately to fifty cents American.

Third. It is not equitable that a product produced by labor, paid in depreciated currency and sold for gold should pay its Government taxes in gold.

Fourth. It is not unusual for paper currency to be of enforced circulation for the payment of public and private debts and at the same time be declared not legal tender for Government taxes.

Fifth. The Government's intention is to increase its revenue from productive mining properties but not to the extent of embarrassing them or of confiscating properties which are not productive or which are undeveloped.

Observation: Inasmuch as the Government has modified the decree of March 1 and has expressed its willingness to deal with the owners of mining properties upon representation, it is respectfully suggested that the owners of mining properties take up their cases directly with the Secretary of Hacienda either through a commission from a given locality or by individual owners in person or through correspondence.

MEMORANDUM ON MINING TAXES.

In conformity with the Law of March 25, 1905, mining properties paid taxes as follows:

Up to 25 pertencencias, $2 Mexican gold per pertendencia per tercio (period of four months), or one dollar per tercio, 1/4 dollar per month.

25 pertencencias and over, $1 Mexican gold per pertendencia per tercio, or 1/2 dollar per tercio, or 1/8 dollar per month.

The exchange on New York from 1905 to 1912 reached an almost invariable point very close to 1/2 dollar per peso.

The decree dated March 1, 1915, fixes the following taxes:

Up to 10 pertencencias, per tercio per pertendencia $4 Mexican gold, or $1 Mexican gold per month, 1/2 dollar per month.

Up to 20 pertencencias, per tercio per pertendencia, $5 Mexican gold, or $1.25 Mexican gold per month, 5/8 dollar per month.

Up to 50 pertencencias, per tercio per pertendencia, $6 Mexican gold, or $1.50 Mexican gold per month, 3/4 dollar per month.

Over 50 pertencencias, per tercio per pertendencia, $8 Mexican gold, or $2 Mexican gold per month, one dollar per month.

The decree dated August 31 modified the above taxes, temporarily, and only for the two tercios included between the months of July of this year and February next, as follows:

From July to October, per pertendencia, for any number, $2 Mexican gold, 1/4 dollar per month.

From November 1915 to February 1916, per pertendencia, for any number, $2.66 Mexican gold, 1/3 dollar per month.

From the 1st of March, 1916, the tax rate above mentioned as fixed in the decree of March 1 of this year will resume effect.

The law of 1905 favors monopoly, imposing upon the small interests, up to 25 pertencencias, double the tax paid by the large interests, over 25 pertencencias.

The law of March 1 of this year aims at a different purpose; that is, to favor the small interests, imposing lower taxes upon them than upon the large interests. This tendency is perfectly justified, and is sanctioned by the proceedings of all civilized governments.

The decree of March 1 of this year imposes upon the large interests, over 50 pertencencias, double the tax of the small property, 10 pertencencias. The intermediate properties between 10 and 50 pertencencias pay an ascending proportional rate.

In conformity with the income-tax law of the United States, the large interests in the United States pay taxes seven times greater than those paid by the small interests. In conformity with the Mexican mining law which will commence to operate next March, the large interests will only pay double the amount of taxes paid by the small interests. Thus the progressive increase in the mining tax is very moderate when compared with the income tax effective in the United States.

Comparing the tax fixed by the new law for the small interest with the old tax, it is seen that it is doubled, but this by no means indicates that it has been raised, because the old tax was excessively low. A tax of 1/2 dollar per month per pertenencia cannot be called high, and 1/2 dollar per month is the amount which will have to be paid beginning March 1 next year.

There are some concrete cases which may be cited of mining companies having more than one hundred pertenencias denounced in one mining district, and in some places they have been paying mining taxes during 15 or 20 years without doing one stroke of work on the properties denounced. The progressive tax tends toward eliminating these unjust and unproductive monopolies.

Some mine owners, attempting to show that the taxes are very high, argue by reducing to paper money the value of gold, and comparing this to the amounts formerly paid by them, when exchange was 1/2 dollar for one peso. This is not important, nor even worthy of consideration. The comparison should be made between an amount paid in gold, and another paid in the same kind of money.

The only weighty argument thus far presented by those interested in the reduction of the taxes is that the majority of mining interests have had to entirely or partially stop their work, due to the European war and the state of intranquillity prevailing in this country. But precisely because this reasoning was considered just, the decree of August 31 was issued, reducing considerably the taxes and ignoring the progressive increase, for the two tercios between July 1915 and February 1916.

The interested mine owners also find fault with the fact that the taxes are collected in gold, and not in paper money. They are not justified. For a long time export taxes, the stamp tax on oil, forest exploitation, etc., have been collected in gold, and gradually it will be decreed that other taxes be paid in gold, until all fiscal collections will be made in gold. This fiscal program of the Government, tending to consolidate the monetary system, can in no way be called unjust.

The concerns which produce articles for exportation can object less than any other to paying their taxes in gold. These concerns sell their products for gold, but, on the other hand, pay a great part of their running expenses in paper money. Therefore, they would be absurdly favored if they paid their taxes in paper money.

EL PASO, October 16, 1915.

In view of proposed recognition by United States Government of Carranza and probability that Carranza forces will be able in a short time to control affairs in northern Mexico, which have lately been under the dominance of the Villa faction, the entire mineral industry of this northern section of the country is alarmed over the various tax decrees which have recently been issued by the Carranza Government at Vera Cruz and Mexico City, covering payment of taxes on mineral lands and taxes on gold, silver, lead, copper and zinc in ores or bullion exported from Mexico. The decrees involve taxation upon the mineral industries so heavy that it will be difficult for many companies to operate under normal prices at a profit. It would appear that Carranza will endeavor to finance his government largely by these excessive demands upon the mineral industry, and thus in reality obtain his finances from American and foreign individuals and companies. Owing to the fact that, particularly in the northern section of Mexico, a large part of the burden of feeding the Mexican laboring class has been assumed during the past two years by American companies, many of whom have operated without any profit, it does not seem just that the excessive taxation proposed by the Carranza Government should become effective.

We respectfully call this to your attention, soliciting your consideration of this matter, hoping that you may see fit to have some satisfactory understanding with the Carranza Government prior to actual recognition.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES B. PARKER.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

Memorandum on the decree dated at Vera Cruz, March 1, 1915, referring to new taxes on the mining industry.

The Decree mentioned consists of two parts: 1. taxes on mining property; 2. taxes on mining output.

1. Tax on Mining Property. Since the promulgation of the decree in question, another decree has been published making a reduction, but only for the taxes during the period July 1915 to March 1916, on which latter date the full rates provided for in decree of March 1, 1915, go into effect. It is therefore unnecessary to take notice of the temporary reduction for the short period mentioned. In accordance with the decree the mining taxes are fixed as follows:

	Mexican gold.
10 pertenencias at $12.....	$120
10 pertenencias at $15.....	150
From 20 to 50 pertenencias at $18.....	540
From 50 to 100 pertenencias at $24.....	1,200
<hr/>
Total for the first 100 pertenencias.....	$2,010
Each additional pertenencia.....	24

Taking the ratio of the value of Mexican gold with that of government bills at 7 to 1, these taxes signify an increase of thirty times the tax previously paid.

The graduation made in the tariff seems to indicate that the idea of the authorities was as follows:

First. To favor the small property as compared with the large.

Second. To avoid the accumulation of a large number of pertenencias in the hands of a single person without the property being worked.

Is it possible to apply to the mining industry these principles, which have been considered as an agrarian problem?

Agriculture makes it possible for the isolated laborer to produce what he needs in a limited portion of ground, enables the State to furnish to entire districts irrigation improvements and to subdivide among individuals lands thus made usable. Mining conditions are with very few exceptions diametrically different. Land apparently propitious for mining gives no assurance that it will render returns, and when it does furnish them, almost always after heavy expense, the greater part contains ores of so low a grade that large extensions of land are needed to furnish a sufficient quantity of ores to justify a treatment plant. Enormous capital is required for the work of exploration and exploitation and for the treatment of the plant; and, even then, only the economies obtained by carrying on the business on a large scale guarantee a profitable return. Proof of this is found in the cases of many mines which work ores of from 300 to 500 grams of silver per ton, or of 10 to 20 grams of gold per ton—ores which have no commercial value whatever unless the same enterprise works them and treats them in amounts of 500 tons or more per day.

The districts of Pachuca, Guanajuato, El Oro and Zacatecas are composed almost entirely of this kind of mines. The same thing happens with almost all lead, copper and iron mines, whose ores are without value unless they are produced in large amounts and are tributary to or near some smelter. The expense of exploration is so high that the risk is seldom justified in small properties; for to do so would be to convert mining into a lottery rather than an industry, by limiting it to a search for bonanza ores. These bonanzas are very rare indeed and very uncertain, and an established industry can never be founded on them.

The second point as an apparent basis for the decree is the avoiding of an accumulation of many pertenencias in the hands of one person without the properties being worked. In order to appreciate clearly this point it is necessary to recall the manner in which mining enterprises are formed. In the great majority of cases the pioneers have no capital but are familiar with the districts wherein they devote their time, their labor and a little money to a provisional investigation of the ground and the denouncement of what appears to them as hopeful. These people generally look for capitalists to form companies for carrying on the exploration. For the reasons mentioned above, it is useless to look for capital for properties of a small area. These first companies are generally exploration companies with limited capital, which proceed in a modest way to carry on investigations. Years often pass with greater or less sacrifices until one of the following steps is taken:

1. In the majority of cases the mines are abandoned.
2. A reorganization is attempted by means of the sale of the properties to companies with large capital.
3. In a minimum of cases the first company obtains such results that it can continue to work the property.

The exploration companies first of all need a considerable number of pertenencias in order to carry on their investigations in different places so as to obtain the greatest chance of success. As a typical case, mention may be made of the many companies which explore from 100 to 200 pertenencias at an expense of approximately 4,000 pesos Mexican currency per month. For such a company the new decree would signify a tax expense of 4,400 pesos Mexican Gold (at 7 to 1 equals 30,000 pesos of legal tender paper), or more or less 60 per cent increase on the exploration expense.

The result is evident; that this class of companies cannot exist in the future and the system of original denouncements cannot be practiced, especially in view of the fact that Article 9 of the decree in question provides for a tax of 10 pesos Mexican gold per pertenencia for the issuance of the titles.

The tax is so high that only producing companies with heavy profits can pay it; but inasmuch as it is necessary to develop new mines to take the place of the old ones which are worked out, the impossibility of new investigations means slow death to mining.

The preceding logical arguments, although theoretical, can be substantiated by actual examples. * * *

2. Taxes on mining production. Regarding the export tax, it is to be noted that the taxes have been changed several times. During many years the tax amounted to 2½ per cent on gold and silver. The new tax is approximately 9 per cent on gold and silver, and that too, on the intrinsic value of the metals. If it is considered that the average grade in the majority of the mines does not exceed 500 grams silver and ⅓ of a gram gold per ton, or a gross value of 18 pesos Mexican gold per ton, out of which about 9 pesos Mexican gold per ton represent the cost of extraction and treatment, the result is plain: that the 9 per cent tax on the 18 pesos Mexican gold amounts to an impost of 18 per cent on the net value of the ores. If to this be added the State taxes, stamp taxes, etc., it results that at least 25 per cent of the net product of a mine will consist in taxes, and this in the favored mines which have the grades above mentioned, and without considering the innumerable mines of lower grades where the tax would increase in per cent in direct ratio with the decrease in grade. Where in the world could the mine industry tolerate such an imposition?

Another question, of secondary importance, remains. For more than a year, through lack of traffic, stocks of ores and metals which could not be exported have been accumulating in mines, railway stations, warehouses and smelters. These ores have already suffered a severe depreciation due to the fall in the price of silver of about 20 per cent without counting loss of interest and extraordinary expenses. Now it is proposed to increase the export tax; a part of these ores has already paid the old taxes, thus the original value will fall to about 50 per cent.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Guadalajara, November 5, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to say that it is the purpose of this dispatch to show the arbitrary manner in which mining interests are being treated by the present de facto government, and how foreigners, and principally Americans, are being made the sufferers.

First, I believe that at least ninety per cent of all investments in mining enterprises and their corollaries in Mexico, is the representation of strictly American capital.

Second, the great bulk of these investments were made under very much more favorable conditions than those which were begun to be put in vogue some five years ago, and they have since, and especially under the present government, been made almost confiscatory, and in most unjust, inequitable and arbitrary manners.

The tax, up to a short time ago, had been for several years six pesos per pertenencia—about two and one-half acres. The fiscal year begins July 1 of each year. Taxes could be paid for a whole year, or every four months, but always in advance. If not paid before the end of July, fifty per cent is added for that particular 4 months and then, if not paid before the end of August, one hundred per cent is superadded; and if not paid before the first of October, the property is forfeited to the Government. Said taxes were payable in the circulating medium of the country.

Now the above taxes have been doubled, and must be paid in metallic pesos. And this must be done whether you are, or can be put, in possession of the property or not, or whether the present government is in control of the territory wherein the property may be located, or not.

Moreover, these conditions are being maintained, notwithstanding the fact—which the Government very well knows—that for months—aside from not being able to be in possession of and work their properties—many American owners have not been able to get money from the States to Mexico so they could pay any kind of tax. Therefore—and for no fault of their own—such American investors must lose their properties.

This strikes me as both unjust, unfair and extremely arbitrary treatment, and if anything can be done to stay the operation of these confiscatory measures, I feel that it ought to be done, and the sooner the better.

Many individuals and companies of modest resources must let their properties be forfeited for nonpayment; others must apply to taxes funds provided for work-

All agree on the injustice of tax increase during times of sufficient [insufficient?] protection, general paralysis of mining operations, interrupted transportation facilities, and, in many cases, impossibility of getting access to the mines. Washington, November 18, 1915.

Department advised that, generally speaking, conditions in Mexico affecting mining properties are still very unfavorable so that operations are yet almost at standstill, with transportation interrupted and access to mines in many cases impossible.

In this view it seems particularly unjust to insist upon increase in mining taxes due this month, or to require payment in gold coin, said now to be worth seven times paper currency of enforced circulation.

Bring to attention of appropriate authorities and earnestly request reduction in taxes to fit existing disturbed conditions. Add that unless such reduction be made, many operators will apparently be unable to make payment.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 22, 1915.

SIR: Referring to your unnumbered despatch dated September 25 [18], 1915, with which you enclose a memorandum of the Secretary of the Treasury, presenting arguments in support of the claimed equitable nature of the mining decree of March 1, 1915, there is enclosed an extract from a memorandum entitled "The New Mexican Mining Taxes," and you are instructed to bring the statements therein contained to the attention of the appropriate authorities as a reply made by an interested American company to the said arguments of the Secretary of the Treasury.

You will further state that the Department considers it highly probable that the de facto Government of Mexico, upon further consideration of the matter, will perceive the inadvisability, from the standpoint of the future prosperity of Mexico, of imposing such severe burdens upon one of its principal industries and will likewise not be inattentive to the injustice of subjecting the large amount of foreign capital invested in that industry to the greatly increased taxes provided by the decree, which, as the Department believes, will, unless amended, result disastrously to much of that capital.

In conclusion you will request a careful and early re-consideration of the question of mining taxes in the light of the foregoing and of the statements contained in the enclosed memorandum.

THE NEW MEXICAN MINING TAXES.

[After quoting the argument in favor of the new law by the Secretary of Hacienda, forwarded to the Department by Mr. Silliman in his September 18, the memorandum continues:]

The [above] argument refers only to the property tax, and does not mention the tax on the product, which is by far the heavier burden on operating properties. In the argument every large business is considered a monopoly, and it holds that it is more just that the mining properties be divided into small units, because some large properties have not done work for a number of years. It calls the aim of the new decree to bring this about "perfectly justified, and sanctioned by the proceedings of all civilized governments." It therefore legislates against the principle of cooperation, association and concerted action. How a federal government promoting such principles can expect to promote modern industry, or even to maintain itself, is not indicated.

The United States income tax—a tax on net profit—should not be cited as a rule and guide for a tax on property, which is a totally different matter. Property may or may never produce income, and the income tax is not a tax on property, no more than is the inheritance tax.

It is hard to make comparisons between taxation in Mexico and taxation in other countries, say in the United States, as the systems of taxation are entirely different and as the yearly federal tax on mining property in Mexico is only a small part of the federal taxes which the miner has to pay.

The tax on production has always been excessive; it now has been made exorbitant and prohibitive; but this production or export tax is ignored in the argument of the Carranza Government. Together with the State tax, it would be 10% of the assay value of the gold and silver produced, which most mining companies are unable to pay. It would stop production.

The Carranza Government claims that the yearly tax on mining property was low, and that it can justly be raised; but it does not consider that in order to get the most revenue from the industry the first requisite is that mining be carried on and properties be worked. In Mexico the amount derived in taxes from mining is immeasurably higher than the amount derived from the tax on mining property, and unless mining property is held by private owners it will not be worked. Private owners are more active in obtaining results from their properties than the government can possibly be.

The lower the tax is made on mining property and on mining titles, the more will be acquired by individuals and the more will be done to make the properties productive. To raise the tax on mining property is to impede development. As the yearly federal tax on mining property in Mexico is only a small part of the federal tax which the miner has to pay—the tax on production being ever so much more burdensome—it is useless to compare this special tax with the amounts paid in other countries. In Mexico the miner pays for his mineral right according to the amount of surface by which it is covered, whether the ground is valuable or not, whether his work is profitable or unprofitable, whether he works or not. And, moreover, he pays on his gross production. In the United States he pays a federal tax on his profits. Corporations are charged 1% of their profits. But there is no federal tax in the United States with which the Mexican federal mining tax can be compared.

Mr. S. C. Neale to the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, December 22, 1915.

SIR: I am requested by the American Smelting & Refining Co., of 120 Broadway, New York City, through Mr. William Loeb Jr., a member of its executive committee, to bring to your attention certain facts in connection with the decrees of General Carranza, of March 1 and August 31 last, which decrees related to mining taxes.

My clients have been advised from Mexico City that the Treasury officials of the Carranza Government have informed the representative of the American Smelting and Refining Company that instead of the production or export taxes being restored to the normal tax under the general law, the taxes imposed by the decree of General Carranza will be even increased; and General Carranza has informed one of the representatives of the American Smelting and Refining Company that the pertenencia tax will be fixed at 9 pesos irrespective of the number of pertenencias.

It is apparent that such a scale of taxation would be most unjust and detrimental to American interests in Mexico and imposes more of a burden than the American mining and smelting industries in that country can possibly stand.

I learn that Señor Luis Cabrera, the Minister of Finance, will be in Washington tomorrow, the 23rd instant, and I indulge the hope that you will see your way clear to point out to Señor Cabrera the gross injustice which will be done to Americans who have invested their money in Mexico, if any such taxation is put into effect by the Carranza Government.

I trust it will be insisted that the Mexican Government collect only the normal taxes imposed by the laws and constitution of Mexico and that any change in these laws should be made by the Mexican Congress instead of imposing taxes by decree without the sanction of Congress.

The decrees heretofore issued by General Carranza have resulted in throttling the development of the mineral resources of Mexico, and even with the taxes restored to the normal basis it will require a very large expenditure of money on the part of American smelting and refining companies in Mexico to put their plants in order and to move supplies necessary for the resumption of operations.

I learn that this whole question of taxation is held open until the Mexican Government can consult with Señor Cabrera, and hence the desirability of Señor Cabrera being placed in possession of the facts in the case while he is in Washington.

I beg to enclose you a copy of the petition of the Mine Owners Association to General Carranza which was forwarded to General Carranza by Señor Amador, who was acting for Señor Arredondo while that gentleman was in Mexico. I beg also to call your attention to a letter addressed to the Secretary of State by Mr. William Loeb Jr., of October 19, 1915, a copy of which I have not upon my files, which very clearly and fully sets forth the situation in respect to the questions involved.

NEW YORK, November 10, 1915.

Your petitioners have the honor most respectfully to lay before you the following considerations:

[Extensive argument against the existing law.]

For the foregoing reasons your petitioners most earnestly appeal to you to suspend the effects of the Decree of March 1, 1915, at least during the period including from November 1 of this year to February 28, 1916, and to permit that the payment of mining taxes during the current tercio of the fiscal year be made according to the provisions of the Decree of August 31, 1915, as applied to the last tercio; namely, at the rate of six (6) pesos per annum; and that the normal constitutional taxes on exports only be collected.

File No. 812.512/948.

Mr. S. C. Neale to the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1915.

SIR: As you are aware, on March 1st last a decree was promulgated by General Carranza fixing certain pertenencia taxes which in the opinion of my clients, the American Smelting and Refining Company of New York, were most unjust and which if the payment of the same were enforced would prove most detrimental to American interests in Mexico.

A petition dated November 10, 1915, of the American Mine Owners Association was transmitted to General Carranza by Mr. Amador, who was acting as the representative of the Mexican Government in the absence of Mr. Arredondo, and the result of this petition was that the enforcement of the Decree of March 1 has been suspended until December 31 next.

It has been stated to certain officials of the American Smelting and Refining Company in New York by Mr. Amador that the effect of the suspension of the Decree of March 1 last until December 31 next, acts as a "stay" to the payment of all taxes until an official decision has been rendered by the Mexican Government.

In view of the fact that there may be some question as to whether the suspension of the Decree of March 1 last will act as a "stay" to the payment of all taxes until a decision has been rendered by the Mexican Government, and because it is most important that American investments in Mexico shall not be placed in jeopardy, I venture to ask, upon behalf of the American Smelting and Refining Company, that the Department will obtain from Ambassador Arredondo an official expression of opinion as to whether the payment of taxes, as set forth in the Decree of March 1 last, is "stayed" until an official decision is rendered by the Mexican Government upon this very vital question to American interests.

[Inclosure.]

The Mine & Smelter Operators' Association to the Secretary of State.

EL PASO, TEXAS, December 23, 1915.

SIR: Under date of October 16 we had the honor of addressing you by telegram as follows:

[Quotes the telegram; see ante.]

In answer to the above telegram we had the pleasure of receiving the following message from you:

[Quotes the Department's telegram of October 19; see ante.]

Under date of October 19, Mr. Wm. Loeb, Jr., on behalf of many of the American companies operating mining properties in Mexico, had the honor of addressing a letter to you supplementing the conference which he had just had with your Department.

A copy of this letter is hereto attached. [Subinclosure 1.]

On October 19 formal recognition was extended to General Carranza. Apparently, however, nothing that had any reference to the arbitrary and excessive mining tax decree was involved in the recognition extended him. We are led to infer, however, that it was your opinion that the best plan for us to pursue was to lay our case before General Carranza and his appointed Departments, requesting his consideration of the same, with the end in view of obtaining the abrogation of his decree and a return to the laws established by the last constitutionally appointed legislative branch of the Mexican Government. Therefore practically the entire mineral industry of Mexico, all of which is so vitally affected, has taken great pains to compile a statement of the situation as it affects the various parts of the industry in the various parts of the Republic of Mexico.

We attach hereto a copy of the petition presented by this Association to the Secretary in charge of the Department of Finance and Public Credit in Mexico [subinclosure 3]. We also attach a copy of the petition presented to General Carranza by the owners and representatives with headquarters in New York of many of the more important American and foreign-owned mining undertakings in Mexico [subinclosure 2]. We also attach a copy of the petition presented to the Secretary in charge of the Department of Finance and Public Credit by the many members of the International Mining Association with headquarters in Mexico City [subinclosure 4]. Besides the petitions above referred to, many other representations were made to both General Carranza and his department chiefs. Every petition, without exception, has involved the request for the abrogation of the excessive tax decreed by General Carranza and the return to the last tax laws legally enacted in accordance with the Mexican Constitution.

We regret to have to advise you that the Secretary in charge of the Department of Finance and Public Credit in Mexico has stated to us in reply to the petition that, with the possible exception of a slight modification in the rate of taxation on mining claims (a division of the total tax on the mining industry which is insignificant in comparison with the tax on the production of the mineral industry), it was his belief that no modification of the decree should be made; but that, on the contrary, the tax should be increased to an even higher extent. And we regret to state that General Carranza, in reply to the petitions, has stated to us through our representative who conferred with him at Monterey on November 26, that he would not change the decree.

In view of the desperate condition of affairs with which we are confronted because of the refusal by General Carranza and his Departments to abrogate his excessive tax upon the products of our mining properties, and in view of the kind consideration which you have given to our messages and to the friendly attitude indicated in your telegram to us of October 19, we appeal to you for your assistance in the endeavor to have abrogated the decree of General Carranza of March 1, 1915, and to have made effective once more the mining-tax laws of Mexico as established by the last duly constituted legislative branch of the established Government, which laws are referred to in our petitions as the laws in effect in 1905.

We on our part assure you, as we have already endeavored to do to General Carranza, that if the decree is abrogated and the constitutional laws made effective, we will bend every effort to effect the earliest possible restoration of the industry in all its branches, which will result in ever steadily increasing revenue and prestige to the present Mexican Government.

Very respectfully,

MINE AND SMELTER OPERATORS' ASSOCIATION.

[Subinclosure 1—Extract.]

Mr. Loeb to the Secretary of State.

OCTOBER 19, 1915.

SIR: With further reference to the position of this and other American companies in respect of mining interests in the Republic of Mexico, and as supplementary to the conference which I had the honor to have at your Department on the 14th instant, I beg leave to submit certain data in connection with the taxation of Mexican mining properties, present and prospective, and respectfully to submit for your consideration the suggestion that General Carranza, as a condition to the recognition of his government by the Government of the United States, may be brought to guarantee that mining interests in Mexico, pending the restoration of civil government, will not be taxed otherwise than in accordance with the constitutional laws of the Republic now in force. The occasion of the present representation is the fact of a mining decree issued by General Carranza under date of March 1, 1915. * * * By this executive or military decree, the taxes on gold and silver are raised 2-1/2 times above the taxes prescribed by law; and a tax is levied against copper, lead and zinc, whereas none exists against these metals under present laws; the pertenencia tax, or annual tax on mining claims, is raised from two to eight times above the tax lawfully imposed; and all taxes are further increased by the requirement that the same shall be paid in gold, whereas under the present law they are payable in Mexican currency. In view of the great depreciation in Mexican currency, this company is not disposed to question the inherent justness of requiring the payment of taxes to be made in gold, notwithstanding the departure from existing law in this respect; and, as a matter of equity, it is not unwilling to make payment of the lawful taxes in the latter specie. It is insisted, however, that changes in the amounts or kinds of taxes imposed cannot properly, justly nor lawfully be made by military order or executive decree, but must await the consideration and action of a duly constituted legislative branch of an established government. If taxes can arbitrarily be laid and collected by the autocratic decree of a civil or military chief, the services of a deliberative and representative body, such as a legislature, is likely to be permanently dispensed with. And if such a claim of authority is allowed in one instance, future exertions of authority in the same direction are likely to follow, with less and less restraint, until the point of confiscation is reached and passed. * * * The present mining taxes in Mexico as prescribed by law, compared with like taxes imposed on similar operations almost universally elsewhere, are in themselves burdensome, independently of the additions imposed by the decree of March 1, 1915. In the face of such burdens, we protest against the exaction of tribute by arbitrary and irresponsible authority, and the danger, inherent in such decrees, of the confiscation of private property through the exercise of essentially despotic power.

In conclusion, I beg leave to add that the matter here presented is in no way connected with the much misunderstood subject of Mexican "concessions." Such concessions are granted pursuant to law, and in the manner and under the rules prescribed by law (see law of Nov. 10, 1908). Foreigners may have the benefit of them not otherwise than natives may. They are not available to the mining industry except as they are available to every other industry. They are in the nature of franchises, analogous to our grant of a charter of incorporation, or of a license to engage in a certain business, and are granted to encourage the investment of capital in new enterprises and to aid in the development of new industries. They run for a limited term of years, and the exemptions they allow from certain minor forms of taxation are counterbalanced by the obligations they impose upon the concessionary, in respect of the amount of capital invested, the character of the development, and the subjection exacted to supervision by the state. Such mining concessions as this company and its subsidiaries have held have long since expired by limitation. Moreover, the tax exemptions granted under such concessions, have, and had, no relation to the taxes herein referred to.

Very respectfully,

WM. LOEB, JR.

The Mine and Smelter Operators' Association to the Secretary of Finance.

MEXICO, D. F., November 20, 1915.

H. M. Dieffenbach, in representation of the Mine and Smelter Operators' Association, formed of the principal mining and smelting companies in the north of the Republic, before you appears and respectfully states:

[Here follows an extensive argument for the abrogation of the existing decree and a return to the old law.]

From the foregoing it plainly appears that all governments have always endeavored to stimulate the low-grade mines, thus contributing to the prosperity that such mines now enjoy. This corroborates our contention that it is absolutely indispensable not to increase or overburden with further taxes these properties, for the reason that this would tend to annihilate the low-grade mines, which require for their existence considerable extents of ground wherefrom to extract ores in large quantities. And in this connection we repeat that this class of mines are valuable only under appropriate legislation, and upon the understanding that the taxes under which they are brought into existence shall not be increased.

In view of all the foregoing, I beg very earnestly to request that you give your attention to each and all of the points that I have taken the liberty of including in the foregoing paragraphs; that, acting in equity and justice, you kindly reconsider the Decree of March 1, 1915; and that, upon finding our petition justified, you abrogate the same in all its parts, in order that the laws governing the mineral industry during the constitutional administration of the late President Madero may be placed again in full force, with the sole exception that the taxes therein comprised be paid in Mexican gold.

MEXICO, D. F., November 20, 1915.

The undersigned, owners of mines and plants for the treatment of ores, or representatives thereof, as may be verified in due course, before you respectfully appear and state:

That the study embodied in the enclosed memorandum, which should be considered as forming a part of this petition, demonstrates, in our opinion, that the mining taxes actually in effect will result in enormous injury to the mineral industry at large, and will also impair the revenue of the National Government. In view of which, and for the reasons set forth in the said memorandum, we respectfully request that, taking into consideration our allegations and with the promptness and urgency the case requires, you will be pleased to declare that, for the best interests of the Government as well as that of the taxpayers, the Decree of March 1, 1915, with all its effects and consequences, either arising from said decree or from other decrees, orders, circulars, etc., recently issued in connection with this matter, be abrogated.

For the International Mining Association of Mexico:

MEMORANDUM.

[Argument against the existing laws relating to the tax on mining property and the tax on mining products.]

From the arguments hereinabove set forth, it is evident that the Decree of March 1, 1915, must be abrogated; that greater franchises be granted to the mineral industry; and that regular transportation service be reestablished as quickly as possible. With all of which, four things of vital importance may be achieved at once: furnish work to thousands of laborers in the various mineral zones of the country; spread liberally important sums of money, thus vivifying extensive regions now completely stagnant; increase exports, thus bettering the commercial balance; and, finally, provide the treasuries of the Federal Government, as well as those of the states and municipalities, with revenues of considerable importance which they now fail to receive and which will certainly continue to be missing if it is determined to leave in effect the decree hereinbefore repeatedly mentioned.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 28, 1915.

You are hereby instructed to proceed to San Luis Potosí and bring to the attention of General Carranza the Department's telegram of June 30 last in regard to mining taxes, copy of which you will take with you. You will point out strongly to General Carranza that the taxes imposed by the decree of March 1 last and by subsequent modifications thereof are not justified by laws emanating from the Mexican Constitution. You will also earnestly state to him that any collection of taxes from mining and smelting interests in Mexico which has been made by reason of the decree and modifications thereof above mentioned are to be regarded only as deposits, subject to liquidation when more nearly normal conditions have been restored in Mexico.

The Department is informed that some of the American mining interests, through inability to meet the increased pertenencia tax imposed, have been compelled to suspend payment on certain of their holdings. This, however, is not to be considered as any relinquishment of rights, and you will impress upon General Carranza the importance of his not taking any action that might cloud or endanger the title to such holdings, reserving to the owners thereof the right of redemption at the time stated in the previous paragraph.

Mining and smelting properties in Mexico have endured great hardships during the past few years, paying no dividends during that time and being a drain upon the companies; and the imposition of excessive taxes now, when encouragement should be given, would result disastrously. These mines employ more than five hundred thousand Mexicans, affording sustenance to five times that number. The resumption of work is desired by the companies and it is of great economic importance to the de facto government, because every laborer earning an honest wage is a factor in the restoration of peace and order.

SIR: I have the honor to advise the Department that the local government, headed by Colonel Esteban Cantú, of Mexicali, has recently become very active in the collection of taxes, both on real estate and on business, and that the financial situation in this district is causing much dissatisfaction.

Real estate taxes in the district have in the past been collected at the rate of 4 pesos per 1000 pesos assessed valuation. Last July 1 these taxes were paid in advance for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915; but three days ago an order appeared increasing the tax rate to 10 pesos per 1000 effective January 1, 1915. This means that property owners must pay an additional 6 pesos per 1000 pesos valuation for the half year January 1 to June 30.

The business or commercial tax of the district has been assessed on all mercantile houses according to the nature and size of their business. By law this tax is payable bi-monthly in advance, becoming due between the 1st and 10th of July, September, November, January, March and May of each year. The March payment has just been made by local merchants and now, on March 12, comes an order for the immediate payment of the May tax.

It is also announced that a poll tax of two pesos per month on all adult males in the municipality of Ensenada will soon be passed by the local municipal council at the order of Colonel Cantú.

As previously reported, Colonel Cantú is flooding this place with Mexican 50-cent pieces, which are not legal tender. This is the only kind of money coming into the town, being sent from Mexicali to pay troops' and civilians' salaries. In all government offices, however, tax, stamp and duty payments are accepted only in silver pesos or in American money at the arbitrary rate of one for two. As there are no silver pesos in the district, and as their importation is impossible because of the prohibitive duty, all payments to the local government must be paid in American money. So we have the Cantú officials doing an excellent business in sowing 50-cent pieces (worth about 32 cents to the peso) and reaping good American gold at one dollar for every two pesos. This procedure on the part of Colonel Cantú is slowly but surely killing what little industry and commercial activity is left here.

Threats of penalties and of confiscation are made by the local authorities if the extra payments demanded are not forthcoming, and I have advised those Americans who have made complaint to this office to pay under protest, as being the only possible course under the circumstances.

SIR: I have the honor to report that an arbitrary tax of ten per cent ad valorem has been placed upon all shipments of goods out of the State of San Luis Potosí. The tax is intended as a revenue measure and to keep foodstuff within the State. It falls heavily upon local importers whose market is in other States and places them at a disadvantage in their competition with other distributing centers. It will not affect imports which may arrive when importing is resumed, as jobbers will order such new goods sent direct to final destination and will not pass them through San Luis Potosí, but it prevents jobbers, especially in machinery, from reducing stocks already on hand.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ensenada, March 31, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's telegraphic instruction of March 26, 1915.

Cantú has stated to me, and his military representative here has lately reiterated, that he recognizes the Convention Government of Mexico—which I understand is the present de facto government in Mexico City—as supreme. From personal observation, however, I would say that he is "subject to its orders" only so far as suits his convenience. Lower California is relatively so unimportant in furthering the interests of either Villa or Carranza that the local dictator, acting with discretion, has practically a free hand, and Cantú, taking advantage of this, is more independent than a European monarch.

About a year ago when paper money—which had depreciated in value—was circulating here, mining taxes were doubled in order to offset the depreciation in paper currency. Now that paper is not accepted and all payments of taxes must be made in silver pesos or American money the increased amount demanded works out as a hardship, but naturally no move has or will be made to place the taxes on their former basis. Most American mine owners have paid their taxes for the ensuing four months (the time for payment expiring today) in silver; but two companies, desiring to test the order not to receive paper money, have today tendered payment of their taxes in that currency. Upon its being refused they have notified the tax collector that the money is deposited with local merchants subject to his order at any time he may produce a receipt for the taxes paid. When mining taxes are not paid upon falling due the owner must pay 50 per cent additional if he pays them within the next succeeding three months, after that he has three more months during which he can pay with 100 per cent added. If not paid at the end of the second three months the mines are sold for taxes. It appears that these two companies are doomed to fail in this attempt to force the acceptance of paper money for the simple reason that it is not legal tender. However, on account of the doubling of the taxes they will undoubtedly resist any move to nullify their titles.

Another unjust action in the matter of mines has been the decree nullifying all mining titles issued during the Huasteca. Americans here who obtained titles during that period were given until today to redenounce their mines. As they could have no assurance that in the future such redenouncement would legalize their holdings any more than the original titles, they have taken no action but will look to the United States to protect them against confiscation. This matter was reported to the Department in my despatch No. 328 of February 8, 1915.

With reference to the second part of the Department's telegram above quoted, mining taxes should be paid in Ensenada to the administrator of the stamp office, Julio Viderique, in the same manner as always. Mail payments are, however, insecure and unsatisfactory and all Americans owning mines should have—and nearly all do have—agents here to attend to the matter for them.

I have informed Colonel Cantú by mail that the American Government advises that, on account of existing confusion, no action should be taken for the forfeiture of mining title held by American citizens because of non-payment of taxes.

There are frequent cases in which Federal tax collectors inquire of this Department whether they should accept as valid the payment of taxes to the pretended authorities who without right had been occupying places that have since returned to the power of the Constitutionalist Army. Once for all, and by order of the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, in charge of the Executive Power, be it known by all tax collectors directed by this Department that they must not accept as valid any payment made to pretended authorities not recognized by this Government; and they will proceed to collect the taxes not heretofore collected by our authorities. Vice Consul Davis to Acting Governor Berlanga.

I have learned that both the Central Constitutionalist Government and the Government of this State will decline to recognize receipts issued for taxes paid during the occupation of this city by the Conventionists.

It would seem that this is not based on justice, and I will have to protest energetically against such a resolution in so far as concerns interests of foreigners under the protection of this Consulate.

Foreigners resident in the country, on subjecting themselves to this class of acts on the part of one or other revolutionary faction, would imply a recognition on the part of such foreigners of the legality of one or the other of the factions or governments, although not at present recognized by any foreign government.

I recognize that it is the duty of persons resident in a foreign country to submit to the laws and authorities resident at the time in such country, be the government de jure or de facto, and it is not for them to decide if such government is or is not legally constituted.

I will present to you the following concrete case: While the Conventionista forces occupied this city I received instructions from Mr. W. J. Bryan, Secretary of State of the United States, to pay the taxes of an American mining company, and to draw on him for amount so expended. I went to the tax office and made the payment, and drew on Mr. Bryan for the amount, attaching to my draft the receipts of the government I then found here.

I leave to your superior judgment whether it was incumbent on me to say if that government was legal or not, and if I should now make a second payment to the government that I now find in power, and again draw on Mr. Bryan.

Mr. M. J. Brophy to the Secretary of State.

BISBEE, ARIZONA, May 22, 1915.

DEAR SIR: I wish to place before you for your advice, and also in protest, the extraordinary situation we are up against in the payment of taxes on our copper properties in Lower California.

The control of this territory was seized in the early part of this year by a former Huerta officer, Col. Cantú. As must be known to your Department, he is acting in a very arbitrary manner, as evidenced by such actions as the seizing of the English merchant steamer Cetriana, whose cargo of bullion and merchandise he attempted to confiscate. He resides on the American side of the line, and is endeavoring during his tenure of office, by exorbitant impositions and taxes to squeeze every cent possible out of the country.

Col. Cantú in March demanded the payment of the double mining tax instituted by the Huerta Congress, in Mexican silver or American gold at an exchange rate of 2 for 1. By placing an impossible import duty on silver, he made payment in United States currency compulsory.

The Huerta Congress, which established the double mining tax to offset the depreciation in Mexican money, decreed that bank bills should be legal tender. For this reason, on the advice of our Mexican attorneys, we offered payment of the double tax through the American Consul in bank bills, and the same was refused.

We are advised that Mexican mining taxes are a federal matter; that the Congress of that country only, has the power to enact laws respecting them, and the interpretation of said laws can only be made by the Minister of Fomento.

We are endeavoring to effect payment of our taxes to the proper authorities and in accordance with the laws of Mexico.

Cantú in the official paper published at Ensenada admits his adherence to the Villa faction and publishes their decrees, etc. Consequently Villa is head of the de facto government of Lower California.

We placed the matter before his Secretary of Finance in Chihuahua, and were instructed to pay the single tax in Mexican gold or American at 2 for 1, with the privilege of payment in Chihuahua.

I am informed by other interests who are involved in the same confusion and who have acted along similar lines to ourselves, that Cantú now refuses to accept the Villa decree and demands double the imposition of March with threat of confiscation if not paid during the month of May. He takes this action in spite of Villa's decree that, because of the confusion, no penalty should be enforced.

We protest to you against the arbitrary acts of this local jefe político and request that you take such action as may lie in your power to protect our interests in Lower California and prevent the illegal confiscation threatened.

Yours truly,

M. J. BROPHY.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 21, 1915.

MY DEAR SIR: My client, The Cananea Consolidated Copper Company, has referred to me two circular notices received from Lic. Luis Cabrera, Minister of Finance of the Constitutionalist Government presided over by General Venustiano Carranza, with request for advice as to the attention to be paid to these circulars.

The whole object of the circulars, which I inclose herewith, is to lay the foundation for claims of the so-called Constitutionalist Government—in the case of its success in overthrowing the Villista, Zapatista and other revolutionary factions, also in control of territory in various parts of the Mexican Republic—that all taxes that have been paid to any de facto government in any state or district, under compulsion or otherwise, have been thrown away as pure contributions and will have to be paid again to the Constitutionalist Government. This, of course, is in absolute conflict with the principles of international law, or rather with the law as recognized and enforced by all nations in relation to dealings with de facto governments, and it is, of course, in violation of the rule established by our own Government and repeatedly asserted by the Department of State that its citizens will be protected in their dealings with de facto governments in Mexico and that payments of taxes demanded by such governments will be considered payment and satisfaction in defense of subsequent demands for payment of the same taxes. I quote from a letter, signed by the Hon. Robert Lansing, when Counsellor of the Department of State under date of May 18 last, addressed to The Sierra Consolidated Mining Company of Duluth, Minnesota, of which I am also counsel, as follows:

Under the generally accepted principles of international law, American citizens owning property in Mexico are entitled to pay taxes thereon to persons in de facto authority. It would appear, therefore, that having paid taxes upon your property located in the State of Chihuahua to the authorities exercising control in that State, you should be relieved of further payment of such taxes.

I am inclosing the referred circular in order that you may be advised of the evident deliberate intention of the Constitutionalist Government to exact payment over again of all taxes that have been paid during the past three years or more to de facto governments exercising control of territory in Mexico, other than the Carranza government. If this is enforced, it will be a great hardship and in many cases will result in confiscation of properties on account of the utter inability of Americans to pay again taxes which have already been so increased by all of the revolutionary factions in Mexico that they have become a burden, almost, if not quite, impossible to be borne. * * *

I sincerely hope that the Government of the United States will use its influence effectively to prevent this injustice and will take opportune steps to avoid it before it has ripened into execution.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ensenada, July 27, 1915.

SIR: Referring to previous despatches from this Consulate on the subject of mining taxes in Lower California, I have the honor to advise the Department that, seizing the opportunity of Colonel Cantú's presence in Ensenada yesterday, I threshed out the whole matter with him and have succeeded in having the tax of $2 U. S. gold per pertinencia reduced to its former dimensions of 2 pesos, or $1 U. S. gold. As the Department knows, this tax was doubled during the régime of General Huerta, and the law increasing the tax was among those Huerta measures later disavowed by the Convention Government. Although Colonel Cantú gives allegiance to the Convention or Villa Government and enforces its decrees, the tax officials continued to collect the double tax in this district. When it was ascertained by certain mine owners that this tax had been reduced in other parts of Mexico under the control of the Convention Government they made complaints which resulted in their being permitted to make payment to the central Villa Government. In their complaints, however, they unfortunately made charges against the motives and integrity of Colonel Cantú, causing him some embarrassment with his superiors and making it necessary to defend himself against the charge of being a Huertista. This had engendered on his part a very cordial animosity toward the mine owners of this district, particularly as he was entertaining the false impression that they were all leagued together to force him to reduce the tax, or failing this, to encompass his overthrow. After some difficulty, however, I convinced him that his understanding of the situation was faulty, and secured the issuance of an order to the tax collector to allow mine owners to pay their taxes on the old basis in force before the advent of the revolution, which, I am informed, is in accord with the decrees of the Villa Government. Colonel Cantú has also agreed to desist from any contemplated acts of retaliation against what he conceived were attempts of the mine owners to undermine his standing with his superiors.

I have notified as many of the American owners of mines in this District as I could reach.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, August 20, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report that an increasing number of requests is being made of this Consulate by American owners of taxable property in Sonora for advice concerning tax payments. It appears that in certain towns where in normal times tax collectors are stationed, such as Cumpas, Altar, Magdalena, Arizpe, and others, first one revolutionary faction and then another have lately been in control; there are intervals, too, when avowed bandits hold these places. This obviously interferes with the keeping of regular, permanent tax records, since it is often the practice to kill civil officials found holding office when a town is taken by a rival faction.

As a result of this condition, it is practically impossible, especially at Cumpas, to pay taxes due and now secure such formal receipts as would be adequate later on as proof that proper payment had been made when taxes were due.

Concrete cases in point are those of "The Transvaal Mining Co." (with offices at Cumpas, Sonora, Mexico, and Cincinnati, Ohio), and Mr. M. M. Sherman (who owns a large cattle ranch near Cumpas and who lives at Crawford, Kansas).

Mr. Henry Clay Beauchamp, manager in Mexico for the Transvaal Mining Co., and Mr. M. M. Sherman, have each represented to me that, owing to the fact that the tax office at Cumpas (where in normal times they pay their taxes) is now closed, they propose to pay no taxes until the Cumpas tax office is formally opened either by the agents of an established government in Mexico, or by some responsible and fairly permanent de facto government.

Such is the point on which these and other Americans ask advice: may they, under the conditions recited, refrain from paying taxes for the present, the same to be paid when order is restored—and all without prejudice to their titles.

My opinion is that no future Government in Mexico would seek to attack the titles of these Americans on the ground that taxes were not paid when due, provided such Americans appear promptly and offer payment when government is eventually re-established; but I have not so advised the American tax-payers in Sonora, and definite instructions from the Department on this question are respectfully awaited.

SIR: The Department has received your despatch No. 324 of August 20, 1915, reporting that a number of requests is being made of your Consulate by American owners of taxable property in Sonora for advice concerning the tax payments, and you request instructions in the matter.

The Department must leave it to the interested American citizens to determine in each case whether local conditions affecting the payment of taxes are such as to render it advisable to make such payment.

Obviously the Department can give no assurances to American citizens, who on account of such conditions may refrain from paying their taxes, that non-payment will not result in prejudice to their titles. However, in any given case in which the Mexican authorities should attempt to invalidate the title of an American citizen to land on which he had refrained from paying taxes for the reason that local conditions made it apparently inadvisable or impossible to make such payment, the Department would protest against such action of the Mexican authorities, provided it should be made to appear that the American citizen in question was justified in his non-payment.

Mr. Delbert J. Haff to the Secretary of State.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., November 19, 1915.

MY DEAR SIR: * * * I address this letter to you because of an inquiry addressed to me by various clients whom I represent, and particularly on account of an inquiry received yesterday from the Secretary and Treasurer of The Cananea Consolidated Copper Company in which he asks the question: "What is your opinion as to getting these payments recognized by the Carranza government?"; referring, of course, to the payments of taxes which had been made not only upon mining property but also upon exports of bullion and metals produced by the company, which taxes amount in the aggregate, I may say, to very many thousands of dollars.

The Department of State is aware of the fact that the rates of taxation to all kinds have been, in general, greatly increased by the de facto government of General Carranza during the past year or more by various decrees. This applies particularly to a decree of March 1, 1915, relating to the payment of mining taxes, which the First Chief promulgated and which, in general, increased the taxes upon mining property in the neighborhood of one thousand per cent; that is, on all claims in excess of fifty hectares, and from two to ten times the rate originally prevailing on claims of less than fifty hectares extension. This decree of March 1 was modified by a decree promulgated by the First Chief on the 31st day of August, 1915 which reduced the quota for the first and second terms of the current fiscal year, but provided that the rate established by the decree of March 1, 1915, would apply to all mining properties from and after March 1, 1916. Needless to say that if the taxes that have been paid during the past two years to other de facto authorities are not to be recognized as well paid, it will be a great hardship and will, I may say, in very many of the cases, perhaps result in the loss of the properties because the majority of Americans were obliged to leave the country, abandoning their properties, which in every case entailed great loss and in many cases bankruptcy.

This question is one, therefore, with which the new Constitutionalist Government will have to deal immediately, particularly in the case of mining taxes which are due this current month for the second third of the fiscal year which, if not paid during the current month, are penalized at fifty per cent. It becomes very important, therefore, to know whether the Department of State has any understanding with the Mexican government on this point for the protection of American citizens and, if not, what measures the Department proposes to take in that behalf.

As early as April of this year I addressed a lengthy communication and argument to a member of the government of General Carranza, in which I discussed this question as it then applied and protested against the ruling contained in Circular No. 8 of the 16th of February, 1915, that payments of taxes which had been made to authorities other than those of the First Chief would not be recognized as valid; and I endeavored to point out the injustice which would result if the Constitutionalist Government should exact payment of taxes from Americans upon properties located in territories which the First Chief did not control and in which he was unable to give the protection needed by all industries in order to operate successfully.

It may be useful for me to quote briefly from the aforesaid communication which I made to the representative of the First Chief in April last. Among other things, I said:

[Quotation from his letter of April 27, 1915, to Lic. J. N. Amador.]

The foregoing, I believe, well states the reasons for the rule of international law referred to by the Honorable Robert Lansing in his letter of May 18. [See ante.]

It seems to me that our Government owes a duty to American citizens in this dilemma even higher than that which ordinarily follows from the relation between a citizen and his government, for two reasons:

First, because in the majority of cases Americans have abandoned Mexico and their properties in pursuance of requests of the Department of State; and

Second, because of the moral and material aid which our Government has given and will find it necessary continually to give to the present de facto Constitutionalist Government of Mexico to insure the success which it deserves and which is necessary for it to enjoy in order to protect the lives and properties of American citizens and other foreigners who are looking to the United States for protection.

While this communication is addressed to you in behalf of the Cananea Consolidated Copper Company and other clients enumerated herein, I would much prefer that it be treated as a general communication and that the Department act in this matter on its own motion and in pursuance of its general policy for the protection of American citizens, in general, doing business in Mexico, in whose interests an early solution of this problem according to the well-recognized principles of international law is pressing and imperative.

Invoking your early attention to this subject and thanking you for a reply at your earliest convenience,

It is presumed that the de facto government in Mexico recognizes that the above statement correctly sets forth the rule of international law upon the subject in question.

In this connection it may be stated that prior to the recognition of the present de facto government in Mexico the authorities now constituting such Government were advised of this attitude of the Department and withdrew demands which had previously been made by them in certain instances for the re-payment of taxes already paid to other persons in de facto authority.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
San Luis Potosí, [undated.]

SIR: I have the honor to attach hereto copy of communication received from General Thomas Urbina, military commandant, and translation thereof, together with translation of my reply thereto. I ask the approval of the Department of the position taken in said reply. This correspondence followed much verbal resistance to demands.

After arresting and threatening many Mexicans and several Spanish subjects, and extorting money from them, a prominent English gentleman, Mr. Claude Stanhope, was taken early in the morning to the headquarters of General Urbina and detained for more than 24 hours, until money was paid.

Immediately following, and on February 16, 1915, the Chief of the Department of Hacienda, José Kasperowitz, cited four Americans to appear at his office, for the purpose of levying an extraordinary tax.

These Americans were A. S. Sharpton, H. L. Barkley (representing Pierce Oil Corporation), Gustave Von der Maden (representing Cia. Metalúrgica Mexicana) and F. S. Ulmer. I immediately visited Mr. Kasperowitz, and induced him to take these names off the list, with the understanding that the parties could voluntarily contribute if they wished, but without prejudice or consequences in any event. The Chief of Police (Jefe de Armas) the next day cited Rafael Aja for the same purpose; upon my intercession he was immediately released from the interview and from the demand. The next day, however, Kasperowitz cited Mr. A. L. Gonthier and Joseph Deutz. Then took place the correspondence attached hereto. The demands of the authorities upon Mr. Gonthier and Mr. Deutz are yet in suspense, and Mr. Deutz is now in this Consulate, fearing an experience similar to that of Mr. Stanhope.

The British Tranvía Company were called and paid 2,000 pesos; the French Brewery paid 2,500 pesos.

The British Vice Consul and American Consul joined in a protest, but the German Consul and French Vice Consul refused to do so, as they have business interests. It was thought the Spanish Vice Consul had best not join in the protest.

On February 19, in an effort to reach General Francisco Villa in the matter, I telephoned to Consular Agent Glenn at Guanajuato, asking that he telegraph an urgent message to George Carothers to secure an immediate order to stop the extortion.

General Urbina is probably known to the Department by reputation. I invite attention to the remarks in his communication regarding recognition of consuls. I do not know whether my telegrams in the matter have been forwarded. It is reported today that General Raul Madero will reach San Luis Potosi soon, and the subject will be immediately taken up with him.

HEADQUARTERS,
San Luis Potosí, February 18, 1915.

As this military headquarters has been obliged to impose an extraordinary tax, proportional to capital, upon all capitalists, manufacturers, merchants, landowners, and in general upon all persons who have property, through the Department of Hacienda, several persons belonging to the American colony have been cited, which colony you represent, and as the majority of them have not responded, and as I have to ask that you indicate to your citizens that it is convenient that they obey the citation, or we shall proceed to punish them with energy.

As an explanation, permit me to say that this tax will be imposed but once, and results from the unavoidable necessity of maintaining the army to give guaranties to the community and procure the pacification of the country, and as the American citizens form part of that community, it is logical that they should contribute equally, and that there should be no exemption for them, in view of the fact that the individuals of other nationalities have obeyed the citation of this military headquarters.

Furthermore, the Corps of the Army of the North is disposed to give guaranties, to make foreigners respected, and to recognize the persons of the various consuls and their acts which have been the subject of treaties, notwithstanding that we have the right to refuse to do this from the time during which the Governments which the said gentlemen represent have not recognized the legality of the Republic which in this zone I represent.

*Consul Bonney to General Urbina.*AMERICAN CONSULATE, San Luis Potosi, February 19, 1915.

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 18th of February, 1915, regarding an extraordinary tax and its relation to American citizens. The subject-matter has received the careful attention which it merits.

I have the honor to suggest to you that if American citizens should be requested to pay their regular lawful taxes for two months in advance it is believed they would be willing to do so, legal receipts being given to them, the receipts being based upon tax bills for the last bimestre. They are friends of Mexico, neutrals, and take no part in politics and pay regular taxes in the community. They have lost heavily by the war. Most of the American colony are absent. On account of the depreciation of the money, those remaining have retained as little as possible of it, only enough to pay current expenses.

For the small amount which could be secured from American citizens you can not afford to incur the criticism and protest of the American Government.

In no country is a tax collected under threat of personal punishment. You cannot afford to confess that the cause of the revolution is in such a condition of poverty that you must ask money from neutral friends.

It is true the citizens of some other countries have contributed. It is also true that many of them have appealed to me to assist them to avoid such action. It is true that your government is not yet recognized by that of my country, but you have scarcely had time and opportunity yet to organize your government, and I hope that your conduct towards our citizens will be such as to justify prompt recognition.

Therefore, in the most friendly manner and with the utmost confidence in your ability and disposition to observe and respect our neutrality, I must officially request you to desist from any suggestion of collecting money from American nationals for military purposes, or alarming or molesting them in any manner.

I wish to make a favorable report of your treatment of our nationals; it is important to you and to General Villa, and to Mexico, that I, and all consuls, shall be able to make a favorable impression regarding your attitude towards foreign interests; but I take the liberty of assuming that it is most important that my Government shall be able to commend your consideration for our people here.

I had another interview with the Governor yesterday after receiving your March 9, and he conceded an armistice until next week, even after having begun to embargo business houses of French citizens. The credit of having these embargoes temporarily raised was due to Mr. Grosvenor, an English barrister here, whom the French have employed as their attorney. No Americans were molested, nor any other foreigners without representation on the part of their governments, for I have included all the latter under American protection. I have [etc.]

Referring to Department's March 18, it is understood and declared to be the intention of the authorities that contribution from natives and foreigners is not a tax for war purposes but for relieving the destitute condition of the poor and is to be used entirely as a charity fund for buying food for them. Some were assessed heavier than others, they being accused of robbing the poor by charging high prices for the first necessities of life for such things as common food, ordinary clothing and articles necessary for the common people. In consideration of what the American people and the American Red Cross have been doing for the poor and what I am still doing on my own account for more than one thousand needy families, our people here were not taxed. On a few foreigners a high tax was placed but on the greater part of them the tax was either moderate, light or nothing.

The persistence of the authorities here in having foreigners contribute to the support of armed forces under one guise or another is growing distressingly annoying. In my opinion, matters are coming or have already arrived at such a pass that ordinary protests will prove of no avail unless the Washington Government puts an effectual stop to such attempted injustices against foreigners here. The facts are that this edict No. 68 has been issued especially with reference to reaching those who have not complied with edict No. 62, and by its terms makes the demands on foreigners more severe, if anything, than edict No. 62. I might say without much risk of misstating that this edict No. 68 is directed especially at foreigners, and is of a confiscatory nature.

The manager states the present conditions and brings to the Department's attention a question which often becomes necessary to be decided by American interests and individuals; that is, whether foreigners should pay or decline to pay forced contributions to one or the other of the contending factions. If payment is made to one, by compulsion or for expediency, if the other party comes into possession, such payments are held to be unfriendly and improper by the last arrivals.

Memorandum on conditions in oil fields.

At present all important oil wells in Mexico are in the hands of forces professing to be commanded by General Villa. All tanks except those at the wells are in the hands of the Carrancistas, who also control all shipping points.

The Villista commanders having control of the country at the wells are in a position to do untold and irreparable damage to the producing wells, most of which cannot be entirely shut in, and some of which must be allowed to run at least 20,000 barrels per day. Any attempt to close in these wells would result in their breaking through the ground and forming craters, like Dos Bocas, wasting the whole underground oil-measures. The Villa officers, through their control of the field, demand the payment of "taxes" or advance payments of taxes in large sums, and on refusal to make payment stop the pumps which are necessary to take the oil away from the wells. The Constitutional Government continues to collect the production tax, which legally is nothing today, since the tax law passed by the Madero Government was operative only for one year, to July 1, 1913, and the Huerta law, operative to July 1, 1914, was declared void.

On their taking possession of oil termini and shipping points, the Carrancistas, by decree of July, 1914, raised the 20-centavo tax (which had expired as above stated) to 60 centavos and made this payable in gold, also by decree. This tax has no sanction of any legislative body, exists merely by virtue of a decree of a First Chief, and is enforced only by the ability of said First Chief to stop shipment and otherwise interfere with the business. The companies are naturally paying the tax.

The oil-producing companies have no objection to the payment of proper legal taxes, but are subjected to extortion by reason of the situation above noted, and would appreciate the advice of their governments as to the proper course to pursue. Refusal to pay taxes on either side will surely result in disaster which, though possibly compensated by claims in the far future, will ruin the companies' stockholders, many of whom rely upon their income from the companies for their livelihood, and starve the companies' laborers. Payments to either side arouse resentment of and recriminations by the other side.

A claim the value of which is at best conjectural, and the payment of which is at best long delayed, is not to be considered against a present and immediate catastrophe which could result from a refusal to pay whatever either side demands.

The Government is respectfully requested to say whether, under the circumstances, payments to whatever party demands money should be made, or the demand refused.

Decree confiscating the Lagunera cotton crop.

I, Venustiano Carranza, First Chief [etc.], considering that in order to prevent the cotton textile industry of the country from becoming paralyzed it is indispensable that the Government acquire the harvest of this fibre gathered in in the region of La Laguna and place the same within the reach of textile manufacturers, inasmuch as they are confronted by serious difficulties in acquiring cotton directly, and because the importation of foreign cotton would bring grave economic evils; and considering that the urgent desire to prevent the paralysis of the cotton industry is in accord with the Constitutionalist Revolution and of the Government emanating therefrom in their purpose to favor the working classes, among whom textile workers occupy an important place; and considering that such workers would be left without a means of livelihood except for the measure herein contemplated—have seen fit to decree the following:

Article 1. The Government will acquire, by agreement with the proprietors, all the cotton proceeding from this year's crop in the region of La Laguna.

Article 2. In case no agreement is arrived at with the proprietors, the fibre referred to in the foregoing article is declared subject to expropriation for the public good.

Article 3. The expropriation will be affected by the Government according to the principles set forth in the Law of September 3, 1893, so far as they are applicable.

Article 4. The cotton acquired in pursuance of this decree will be distributed to the textile mills in the proper proportion, with the view that the mills may not cease operations; and at equitable prices, to be fixed by the Department of the Treasury.

Article 5. The Military Instructional Judges, acting as District Judges with jurisdiction in the cotton-producing sections, are the proper authorities to preside over such expropriation proceedings as it may be necessary to establish.

Article 6. All sale contracts or agreements which interfere with the rights of the proprietors over the cotton herein referred to, and which are made subsequent to the promulgation of this decree, will be null and void.

The Reverend R. H. Tierney to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, October 17, 1914.

HONORABLE AND DEAR SIR: Some three weeks [ago] you requested me to submit a statement outlining Mexican conditions as attested by reputable people of different creeds, interested in the cause of morality and religion.

I have delayed this work until the present time in order to give the various documents in my possession careful thought. After long consideration I have chosen the documents herewith submitted as the calmest and farthest removed from bias and passion of any kind.

Document A makes clear the whole contention of the Catholic Church in this unfortunate affair. In this regard I wish to impress upon you once again that the relentless war waged on Catholicism is not persecution of Catholicism but a war on religion as such. This, you yourself gathered from Caballero's official statements which you read in my presence. Were the Presbyterian or Methodist Church the dominant church of Mexico neither would fare any better. An assault is made on God.

Document B is the statement of a man who was a victim of the Guadalajara persecution. Bad as it is, it is not as harrowing as a dozen other accounts which are in my possession. These statements charge the revolutionists with the following crimes: 1. Confiscation of property. 2. Murder of priests. 3. Torture of priests. 4. Violation of Sisters. 5. Desecration of churches. 6. The use of the altars and sacred vessels for unspeakably base purposes. 7. Conversion of a convent into a brothel. 8. Attempts to discredit priests by dressing a soldier in the Mass vestments and photographing him standing by the side of a nude woman. 9. The garbing of a prostitute in a Sister's attire; this prostitute was sent into the streets to preach against Catholicism. 10. The injection of unworthy priests into ecclesiastical offices of dignity and responsibility. 11. The placing of a nude woman on the altar of a chapel attached to the Jesuit college at Saltillo (also of Puebla). 12. The continual interference with liberty of worship, such as the forbidding of confessions, the sacraments of baptism and matrimony, the prohibition of Mass save on Sunday and then only by a priest appointed by the Governor for that purpose. The extent to which religious liberty is denied varies in different places; vide the "Decree of Toluca" issued by Murguia, the decrees issued by Villareal and Aguilar respectively. 13. The official denial of God's existence, on the part of Caballero.

These and other outrages are authentic.

What, now, do Catholics ask? First, a sincere attempt to rescue the Sisters and priests marooned at Vera Cruz; the number in distress can be furnished at intervals by the American Consul, who is in constant touch with the situation; I cannot give accurate figures because the number fluctuates; some weeks there are more; some weeks less; this results from the departure of groups of refugees and the arrival of others. Second, recognition of no government which does not grant real freedom of worship. Lastly, I may remark that Mexicans are in despair; a prominent gentleman of Mexico City writes me under date of October 7: "Since the sending of those documents things have gone from bad to worse; we are in the last throes of anarchy and ruin." The only hope for Mexico seems to lie in a speedy, untrammelled election free from all restraint. This will hardly take place while the present element is dominant.

I am [etc.]

R. H. TIERNEY,
Chairman of the Committee of the Federation of Catholic Societies.

[Inclosure 1—Summary.]

Document A is entitled "The Catholic Church and the Mexican Revolution" and is unsigned; it states that—

The clergy have held aloof from politics and have preached obedience to constituted authority.

The revolutionists are enemies of all religions and especially the Catholic religion; unable to destroy Catholicism by legitimate means, they resort to persecution; the same is true of the Diaz régime; examples thereof.

The social as well as religious value of the Church is evidenced by its persistent maintenance of schools, hospitals, asylums and other charitable and constructive works, kept up in spite of continuous obstruction by the civil authorities.

It is untrue that the National Catholic Party is dominated by the clergy, who have confined themselves to exhortations addressed to the whole people, calling them to peace and union. It is this attitude of the clergy that causes the hatred of the carrancista and other revolutionary factions, since they do not want peace and union.

Extortions of large sums of money from the clergy have been attempted under the pretext that they have accumulated great riches, which is untrue; figures showing the income of the Church and its various charitable and educational institutions, an income far from sufficient to maintain these institutions as effectively as the Church keeps striving for.

Profanations of churches, the sacred vessels, and consecrated particles are so many that they would take too long to state in detail; a brief outline of them.

"From the statement of facts and the considerations which have been offered, any unprejudiced person can see for himself that the following conclusions are true. Neither the bishops nor the priests have had any part in the government of Mexico, nor have they attempted to take any part. They have not formed, directed nor influenced any party. They have placed no obstacles in the way of the administration or operation of the government. They have abided by the laws in force even though these are sectarian and they have not tried by any violent means to change them. They have advised the Catholic people to respect and obey the established government and the existing laws. They have not gone beyond the sphere of their rights and have not usurped those of the civil power. Their teaching and preaching have been confined to impressing upon Catholics the fundamental principles of religion and the application of these principles to the actions of life. The Mexican clergy lack the material means of opposing any governmental action and even of meeting the necessities of the Church.

"The Catholic clergy and laity of Mexico understand and recognize that social reform is needed which will better the condition of the Indian population and of the middle class. But it also knows that this reform will not be fruitful or lasting if it attempts to establish itself on the ruins of the ancient social edifice or if it is not founded on the only basis which will sustain society, namely, the family, property rights, the country, and religion."

Such is the platform of the Church authorities. What reason is there, then, for the persecution of religion, the clergy, and Catholics?

[Inclosure 2—Description.]

Document B is entitled "Religious persecution in Guadalajara; The expulsion by the Constitutionalist army of foreign priests and professors from Guadalajara, Mexico: An appeal to the American people." It is not signed; the subject outlined in the title is related in detail, with many examples of the cruelty, obscenity and sacrilege attending the entry of the troops on and after July 7, 1914. The final paragraph is as follows:

"We all protest against the unjust spoliation of our property, for which we will demand indemnity when a government shall be established. We protest against the barbarity with which they have expelled us. We protest against the savage manner in which they have driven us out of the country for which we have labored for so many years. We protest against the according to us of such treatment as would not be accorded the worst criminals. We protest against the indignity offered our flags and our consulates, against the illegality of the verbal decree by which we were expelled and against the execution of that decree, which was even more illegal and cruel. We trust that the American people, who are lovers of justice and civilization, will realize that they are in honor bound to defend us in the name of science and humanity, to demand satisfaction for the flagrant violation of the recommendations which were made by them to Carranza and his followers. If this be not done, then the declaration of the Carrancistas will be confirmed: that, whatever they do is done with the knowledge and approbation of the Washington Government."

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 27, 1914.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your letter of October 17, 1914, with which you enclose a statement outlining conditions in Mexico. You ask this Government to rescue the priests and nuns who took refuge at Vera Cruz, and also that this Government withhold its recognition of any government in Mexico which does not grant real freedom of worship.

In reply you are informed that the Department has carefully considered your letter and its enclosures.

With reference to the priests and nuns who had taken refuge at Vera Cruz, the Department would advise you that orders have been issued by the Secretary of War to General Funston to convey all priests and nuns who desire to leave, to the United States, and it is the understanding of the Department that this order has been complied with.

Regarding your request that this Government withhold its recognition of any government in Mexico that does not grant real freedom of worship, the Department informs you that it will defer final decision as to whether or not to accord recognition to a government in Mexico until the time shall have arrived for making such a decision. When that time arrives, the Department assures you that the question of religious freedom in Mexico will receive due consideration.

The Department has shown your letter with accompanying enclosures to the President, and it has received from him a written reply in which he says:

I am distressed that our Catholic fellow-countrymen do not more fully realize how frequent and serious our attempts have been to act in the interest of their people in Mexico.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Manzanillo, January 18, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report, in compliance with your telegraphic instructions dated January 14 [etc.] as follows:

The Catholic priest Santillana gives the following information.

When the Constitutionalist forces entered Guadalajara, the Saleciano priests, in charge of the School of Arts, and all other foreign priests who were in charge of charitable institutions, hospitals and college, up to the number of 47, and all the nuns who were in charge of the female college, were expelled from the country, leaving via Manzanillo on the British steamer City of Mexico. The priests and nuns were abused with vile language as they were marched to the trains. All Mexican priests who remained in Guadalajara including the Bishop from Tehuantepec who happened to be in Guadalajara at that time, were placed in jail, and they paid 100,000 pesos for their liberty. All churches were closed by order of the military authorities; the cathedral, residence of the Bishop, and the female college, were turned into barracks for the troops.

The priest Cano, secretary of the Bishop of Guadalajara, issued a circular addressed to all priests recommending that they be prudent and take no part in politics. Cano was arrested and placed incomunicado, since when nothing is known of him.

In San Luis Potosí the priests were persecuted so that they all left there; part of them arrived here in disguise and related their experiences to the priests here.

About ten days ago troops went to El Gruello, Jalisco, to arrest priest Simon Cobian; he escaped but in retaliation his house and its contents were burned by the troops; the reason given for this action was that the priest did not notify the Carranza forces that a Villa force had been in town.

About the same date, in La Huerta, Jalisco, the priest Santana had his clothes torn off on the street by the secretary of the local court; the people of the town came to the rescue and got him away; he has not been heard from since.

In Tonaya, Jalisco, the priest Adolfo Moto, from Platancillo, was arrested; also the local priest Cisto Mitchell; ropes were tied around their necks, they were then led through the streets and offered for sale and told they would be shot in an hour; they were made to dance jigs. The name of the Carranza officer is Tenorio. The people of the place finally persuaded the officer to release the priests.

On January 3 the priests Juan Quintero, Antonio Gómez, Antonio Salazar and Hilario Morales were arrested in Sayula and brought to Manzanillo in company with the priest Sixto Acosta of Chihuahua; they have been prisoners here for about ten days and were informed that they would be sent out of the country on the first steamer leaving here.

On the 16th instant the Captain in charge of the troops here called on me to inquire when the steamer Peru would leave, and if it was necessary for the priests to have money when they landed in San Francisco; I translated the immigration law; the Captain then remarked that he thought it was best to shoot the priests instead of paying out money for their passages. This afternoon two of the priests called on me and said that they had just been informed by the Captain that the military authorities would not pay out a cent to get them out of the country and that if they did not leave on the Peru they would be shot as soon as the Peru leaves the port. The people of the town are now raising the money to pay the fares of the five priests and they will leave for San Francisco tomorrow. The captain of the Peru, instead of leaving tonight, will remain until tomorrow so as to allow time for the priests to get away from the death that threatens them by remaining here.

The people who are now in charge of this district are as blood-thirsty as Apache Indians and their whole aim seems to be to kill and get money. On the steamer Peru there are being shipped 45,000 pounds of cow hides by General Dieguez to Dr. Felipe Valencia, the person who took the several million pesos to San Francisco last month. These hides are from the cattle on the properties that have been confiscated by General Dieguez.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Piedras Negras, January 19, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to comply with the Department's telegraphic instruction of January 14. * * * The church of St. Guadalupe was entered by order of General Murguia and the records of membership, marriage certificates, and other archives of importance were seized and carried to the outskirts of the city where a bonfire was made of them. The priests were permitted to cross to Eagle Pass without being molested. The church has since been closed and has received no further molestation.

The second offense was the arrest of three French teachers in the College of Our Lady of Guadalupe located at Durango, who passed through Piedras Negras en route to San Antonio. They were held up and searched; 1,900 pesos were found on their persons, which was seized by the authorities, who held that an order from General Carranza had been received instructing them to confiscate all the belongings of the priests of the Catholic Church and to place such money as confiscated to the credit of the Constitutionalist Government. * * * I immediately called on Colonel Castro, then commandant of the city, and requested that the money be returned, advising him that [the teachers] were not priests and that such instructions could not be applicable to teachers; that should he continue to hold the money, this Consulate would look upon it as a non-Christian act and of hostility to foreigners. * * * Colonel Castro returned the money to them and they are now safe in San Antonio.

These two instances are the only occurrences where outrages were committed upon the Catholic Church in this consular district that this Consulate has any information of, and I have made inquiries in all the towns of the district.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Aguascalientes, January 20, 1915.

SIR: * * * After the arrival of the Constitutionalist troops in Aguascalientes, when Alberto Fuentes was acting Governor, the Catholic churches were ordered to suspend all religious services and those of the Catholic clergy who had remained here were ordered to leave the locality. I have not been able to obtain knowledge of any official decree or legislation ordering their departure, but understand that the officials of the military government notified them in person that they must leave the State. One church, the San Antonio church, was absolutely confiscated and a large sign was placed over the door: "Legislative Palace," it being the intention of Governor Fuentes to use it as a state house. The private property of the Archbishop Ignacio Valdespina and that of the Spanish clergy and sisters was confiscated by these same officials and up to the present moment it has not been returned.

The local Spanish Vice Consul has an inventory of personal property amounting to about $8,000 U. S. c'y representing the value of the property looted by the Constitutionalist troops in July and August, 1914; [and] another claim amounting to about $3,800 for property confiscated from Sister Carmen López Ortiz. I have no figures in regard to the property confiscated from the native Archbishop and clergy, but believe it is much more than the amounts above noted.

Since the change in the State administration in November, 1914, the new military commander and governor, Victor Elizondo, has been more liberal. The Catholic churches are again open, except the church of San Antonio, which is still in the hands of the government authorities, and the church of La Merced, which belongs to the Spanish clergy.

Many of the priests and sisters have returned, but those of Spanish nationality, while now they are not molested, are not permitted to follow their religious vocations.

I regret that I am unable to obtain reliable information concerning the status of the Catholic clergy and religious orders in the State of Zacatecas but believe it is very similar to that existing in this State.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, January 26, 1915.

SIR: Referring to Department's January 14, 1915, I have the honor to report that I have made a careful investigation of all cases of indignities and molestations alleged to have been visited upon nuns, priests and other persons because of their avowal of the Catholic faith since the occupation of this city by the Constitutionalist military force under the command of General Villa on December 8, 1913, with the result that the following authentic concrete cases have been found, all of which in respect to the main facts can be substantiated by witnesses and proven by the testimony of persons of the highest credibility.

1. On December 11, 1913, written orders were sent to every priest in the city demanding the immediate payment by each priest of 1,000 pesos. Since this sum could not be got together on such short notice, the priests appeared before Villa to beg a reduction in the sum demanded of them; upon so appearing they were treated in the most insulting and abusive manner; one of their number, Father José Guadalupe Arriola, being borne to the penitentiary, probably for the purpose of intimidating the others. After a short detention he was set free, his persecutors apparently convinced that they could not secure the sum demanded. All the other priests, fearing imprisonment or even worse, finally after much effort raised the 1,000 pesos; from Father José Morales, a Paulist monk, rector of the seminary and Vicar General, they demanded 5,000 pesos, but when he could not raise more than 3,000 and carried the sum to the military chief he was treated with many indignities.

2. [Description of the expulsion of six Paulist monks on December 8, 1913, by Villa, and the closing of their seminary.]

3. [Expulsion on December 8, 1913, of nine nuns, devoted to nursing and other works of charity, and confiscation of their house which at the date of this dispatch was being used as a public brothel.]

4. [Flight of nine women teachers in the Sacred Heart school induced by a statement by the municipal president to the Mother Superior that all nuns and priests were to be driven out of the country. The school "was one of the best in the city and was attended by the girls of the leading families. The school has not been reopened and the building was occupied soon after the flight of the teachers by soldiers and is now being used as a barracks where prostitutes are allowed to live openly with the soldiers and officers.”]

5. It is stated that the bishop of this diocese is not allowed to return to resume his work, and that thereby has been caused the complete disorganization of all religious endeavor in the State.

6. Father Salvador Gambino * * * conducted an orphan asylum at Santa Cruz de Rosales, where fifty orphans were provided for. He had acquired the property through his own efforts and had greatly improved the land * * * In order to make these improvements Father Gambino * * * incurred heavy debts subject to his personal liquidation. He was everywhere regarded as a pious and most useful man. [Account of the confiscation of this property and expulsion of Father Gambino.] He fled the city on the 26th January, 1914, without having been able to make any appropriate provision for the disposition of the orphans or nuns under his care.

7. [Confiscation of the episcopal palace, the house of the Workingwoman's Friend, the seminary, etc.] Subsequently, however, it was arranged that the Church should be allowed to have the use of these several properties free of rent.

8. [Confiscation of a valuable property that had been willed to the Church, together with its movable contents.]

9. [Expulsion of three priests and four monks conducting a mission among the Indians.]

10. [Confiscation of two chapels, services being permitted.]

11. [Expulsion of three Spanish priests.]

12. [Occupation of a church as a barracks.]

13. As a result of molestations, indignities, or the fear of abuses of this character, priests have fled from the following parishes in this State, many of which still remain without religious guidance of any kind: Rosales, Saucillo, Villa Lopez, Rio Florido, Satevó, San Francisco de Borja, San Buena Ventura, Batopilas, San Pablo Balleza, and Casas Grandes.

14. [Confiscation of the house of Father Joaquin Holguin, Vicar General of the diocese.]

As supplemental to the foregoing and based only on rumor, which, however, because of its persistence seems to merit some consideration, the following is submitted: [That Rodolfo Fierro, Villa's inseparable companion, notorious as a ruthless murderer, had seized a handsome young nun from a convent at Zacatecas, sent her by special train to Chihuahua, and is holding her in the residence of Rodolfo Cruz, occupied by Fierro.] There is no possible means of substantiating the story, but similar acts affecting persons other than nuns have recently occurred, according to what should be regarded as fair evidence, and under present conditions the story does not appear particularly remarkable or extraordinary.

All the other facts set forth herein were secured from the highest possible sources of authority and can be substantiated by sworn affidavits if necessary.

Prior to said date, in 1913, while General Lucio Blanco was commander at this place, there were some things taken out of the church here and the priests were told that the atmosphere at Brownsville, Texas, would be more beneficial to their health than here, and they went over there and have not returned. Shortly after they left there were a number of things taken out of the church and since then the church has been closed. The nuns were permitted to remove all of their furniture to Brownsville and the building they occupied has been used for a hospital. I am reliably informed that the churches in Reynosa, Camargo, Mier, San Fernando and other towns in my district are closed and the priests and nuns are gone.

[The statement by Monseñor Antonio J. Paredes, Vicar General of Mexico, representing and acting for the Archbishop of Mexico in the Archbishop's absence from the country, declares:]

That between August 15 and November 26, 1914, thirty-two priests were arrested and held for periods varying from two to sixty days; ten of these were exiled.

That the Zapatista General Francisco Pacheco shot two priests: Conrado Navarro and Rosalio Zepeda.

That another Zapatista, General Everardo González, hung up and beat a priest named Domitilo Monroy.

"As to violations of nuns, I am certain that none within the Archbishopric has suffered an attack upon her modesty, and I have been unable to confirm the rumor that violated nuns have arrived at this capital from other places. Inasmuch as all religious affairs come to this office, of which I am in charge, I consider the above rumors entirely false."

Five attacks upon church property are specified, one of which involved the imprisonment of four sisters.

Only one profanation of a church had been reported; none in the capital; all churches in the State of Mexico had been closed from August 10 to November 30 by order of the Governor, except for mass on Sunday.

None of the Governors in the City of Mexico had demanded loans or contributions from the Catholic Church.]

343. The French Minister, the Vicar General and other respectable persons request me to inform you of the following:

The Mexican and foreign Catholic clergy, having failed to comply with an order from the military commander, General Obregon, to furnish half a million pesos within five days for the alleged purpose of helping the poorer classes, which amount the clergy assured [him] they did not possess, received an order to appear at the national palace this morning under caution that non-compliance with this last order would be considered a rebellious act and dealt with accordingly. About one hundred eighty priests of different nationalities called at the palace and are now held there under arrest, it being stated that the foreign clergy will be expelled from the country and the native held in prison until the amount requested is paid over. Same informants add that a mob concentrated around the palace, where there is a very heavy force of troops belonging to Obregon. This crowd asked for the immediate liberation of the clergy, and a small clash took place this morning. It is to be feared that this situation will grow worse later and be the beginning of very serious disorders and lawlessness.

In view of the above, I asked Silliman to put the matter before Carranza by wire.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,

SIR: I have the honor to say that your January 14 was received at this Consulate on the 15th of January, and the next day I put an American lady, a Catholic well known here to be devoted to her Church, on the job of compiling accurate data on the subject. She returned to me yesterday, with a few meagre notes, saying—

I do not think you will use these notes, for I found it impossible to have facts substantiated as you require. I can not get the people most interested to state facts, for they seem terrified even at the echo of their own voices. That Fathers Galvan, Navarro, Araiza, Ramirez and another priest were executed by the military here, there can be no doubt whatever; but as to the acceptable facts in each case you will have to wait until these people may feel they can talk about such things without being taken out and executed themselves the day after.

I must therefore beg further time as to reporting the execution of priests, except as to the case of Father Galvan, who was brutally murdered by Constitucionalista (Dieguez) soldiers on the 31st of January, 1915, while in the act of administering extreme unction to fatally wounded soldiers of either faction, in the street next the municipal hospital, this city, and after the fighting was over.

Before reaching Guadalajara last August, I heard many terrible rumors of outrages of the persons of Catholic nuns and sisters by the Constitutionalist officers and soldiers on their entrance into Guadalajara. I was so horrified at the accounts that I made a personal investigation of the matter as soon as I could, and found that there was absolutely no truth in one word of those rumors. All nuns, sisters, and foreign priests were banished, and that was all.

[Verification of the above statement by Mr. Kenneth Cunningham, an Englishman of Guanajuato, in regard to that city.]

* * * Both factions have systematically used the Archbishopric and all Catholic school buildings, convents and Catholic society homes for barracks, or any other purpose that might suit them while in military control of Guadalajara; and I was told that even the cathedral had been so used. * * *

Washington, February 21, 1915.

475. Remembering Carranza's orders that diplomatic representations should be made direct to him, I sent the following telegram to him through Canada yesterday afternoon:

Department is informed from Mexico City that about one hundred eighty priests have been imprisoned by General Obregon for failure to produce half million pesos. So far as we know, no American priest has been included and we are not sure that any foreign priests have been included. Please see General Carranza at once and secure from him instructions which will prevent the arrest of any American priests who may be in his jurisdiction and also every possible assurance of protection for any foreign priests. You will then use the good offices of this Government with him to secure the release of the native priests. Say to him that the employment of such methods for the collection of money are so unusual and so unjustifiable that they arouse world-wide disapproval. We are sure that General Carranza will, upon investigation, give the necessary instructions for the protection of all members of religious orders. Present this matter with all possible earnestness, for it is a very grievous mistake and will be sure to arouse resentment in Mexico as well as here and in other countries. It is possible that the necessary instructions have already been given to General Obregon for the release of these priests, but the matter is so serious that we are sending this telegram.

I repeat it to you for such use as you are able to make of it with Obregon. You will specially intercede in behalf of the Vicar General, and Canada will do the same with Carranza. It is a most inexcusable exercise of arbitrary power.

Father Kelley to the President.

[Extract.]

NEW YORK, February 23, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: First of all I desire to thank you for the long and very satisfactory hearing of a few weeks ago, in which you gave me an opportunity of expressing the views of the exiled Bishops of Mexico and of the Board of Governors of the Catholic Church Extension Society on the Mexican situation. * * * I promised that I would commit to writing some of the most important points touched upon. I do this now, with very great pleasure.

The point that I particularly desired to make was that the troubles in Mexico go deeper down than those which affect the agrarian question; and that any remedy offered for Mexico must reach the root if the cure is to be permanent. * * * Economic and agrarian questions [during the last year] were only side issues; the great issue of Mexican politics was that of liberty of conscience. * * * The exiled Bishops of Mexico do not ask, nor do they want, American intervention. What they want is a simple guaranty of liberty of conscience. * * * From the beginning the entire Constitutionalist move was, through the influence of such men as General Antonio L. Villareal, made antireligious and persecuting. This condition is an old one in Mexico. * * * You know that under such conditions peace cannot exist. An arrangement may be arrived at now, but if the canker is not cured the arrangement cannot last. The Mexican question will come up again. * * * To me it seems the most logical thing that you, as a representative of the American people and as one who has sympathy for Mexico, should point out to her the radical difficulty, in a friendly and kindly manner. * * * If you insist upon liberty of conscience for Mexico, in all respects as it exists in the United States, you are on absolutely safe and solid ground. * * * Such a declaration is all that the Catholic people want; but less than that would promise nothing for the future welfare of Mexico.

It is my sincere conviction that you will find the parties of Mexico, with the exception of Carranza, perfectly willing to listen and accept your suggestion. The leaders I have seen in the United States are already convinced that the best interests of their country require that Mexico should cast off the fetters of anticlericalism and pattern its conduct toward religion after its northern neighbor. I think Villa now realizes the mistakes that were made, and Zapata has never persecuted the Church or murdered her clergy. I am well aware that nothing is to be expected of Carranza, not even respect to the United States which helped him to success. But I do believe that Villa could be reached, and I know positively that Mexican leaders in the United States are favorable. A strong declaration on your part of your own position would be the first step toward giving Mexico that real liberty which it has not had for fifty years. Indeed, Mr. President, the destinies of Mexico are in your hands. * * *

Faithfully yours,

FRANCIS C. KELLEY,
President of The Catholic Church Extension Society.

Will you please make inquiry and ascertain, first, whether a native Mexican; second, if not, how long he has lived in Mexico and where; third, what connection if any he has had with those in authority and whether there is any reason to question the veracity of his statements either because of duress or for any other reason.

I am informed by reliable persons that Vicar General Paredes is a native-born Mexican; that he is reported as having been friendly with Carranza before his selection to the position of Vicar General and this no doubt was of advantage to him in securing his selection to the [omission] by the church electors; that he is able and shrewd; that many Catholics opposed to him who question his motives, and that others strongly support him and speak well of him; that his election seems to have been regular and confirmed by the Archbishop. AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, March 8, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's telegraphic instructions of January 14 and to transmit enclosed herewith a report of the treatment of the Roman Catholic churches, priests and nuns in this consular district. In the case of Vera Cruz the information is given from personal observance, and in the instance of cities of the interior the data come from sources considered reliable.

I have [etc.]

WM. W. CANADA.

[Inclosure—Extract.]

While the American forces were in the port of Veracruz the city was a refuge for priests and nuns from all parts of the interior. * * * Most of them were unkempt, emaciated and in rags. * * * With every rumor of evacuation of the port by the Americans there was panic among them, and when the certainty of the evacuation became known, the Spanish priests, especially, were willing to go anywhere, even penniless to a country whose language they did not understand, to escape before the entry of the Constitutionalists.

In September 1914 it had been published officially that the Governor and Military Commander of the State of Veracruz had ordered the definite expulsion of the foreign clergymen, permitting Mexican clergy only to exercise their functions, in the proportion of one priest in towns of 500 to 10,000 inhabitants, two priests in towns of 10,000 to 30,000, and up to four priests as a maximum in towns of more than 30,000. Nevertheless, after the entry of the Constitutionalists in November 1914, masses continued to be celebrated as usual in the three churches of the city of Veracruz. The confessionals were allowed to remain, and the Spanish priests were permitted to say masses.

However, on December 9, the second in size of the churches was seized and turned into barracks. [Details.]

The other churches in Veracruz have not been molested, and the Spanish priest of the parochial church is permitted to say mass in spite of the decree against the foreign clergy. In this port, in fact, the expressions of hostility against the Church have not been marked, probably because the Church has never exercised much influence in recent years over the people of the port. [Instance of an anti-clerical lecture, announced but not delivered; and of posters criticizing the clergy.] Some of the Catholics in Veracruz were vexed at the exceptional courtesies shown a Methodist bishop on his recent visit here; but this treatment was probably only natural considering the fact that a number of Mexican Protestant ministers and elders are connected with the higher executive departments of the Constitutionalists in Veracruz.

JALAPA.

In the interior of this consular district, where the Church has had more power than in the port of Veracruz, the churches and clergy have not fared so well.

[Instances of banishment of clergymen from Jalapa, limitation of services, imprisonment of priests for exceeding these limits.]

All church property, with the exception of the Virgen de la Piedad, was confiscated. [Details.]

ORIZABA.

[Confiscations of churches for use as barracks, and of various convents, and of the effects of priests and nuns.]

On September 6 the foreign priests, principally Spaniards, and even one or two Mexican priests, were given four hours in which to get out of the city. Most of their effects were confiscated.

Most of the books belonging to the churches and religious orders were burned, given away or sold at prices ridiculously low in view of their value.

COATEPEC.

All the church property of Coatepec was confiscated and some of the service stolen, but mass is said daily in one of the four churches, although under strict regulations.

[Arrest of a priest in December 1914, still imprisoned, and confiscation of his effects.]

EL TEJAR.

[Confiscation of a church, used also for school purposes, to be used as barracks.]

SAN ANDRÉS.

[Arrest of three Spanish priests, their release and refuge in Vera Cruz.] In this instance there are details of abuses, mockery, threats, the torture of being led to believe that execution was to be their lot, for the enjoyment of the soldiers; sufferings in their wanderings with the troops over the State, their journey alone to Vera Cruz, where they learned of the confiscation of their property and where they had to depend on charity. Yet this case is but one of many, and the incidents are nothing in comparison with the sufferings of other priests whose stories are being learned from time to time.

The Archbishop of Mexico to the Secretary of State.

NEW ORLEANS, March 12, 1915.

Before all, I am obliged to state that I left the City of Mexico May 11, 1914, on my way to Rome in order to settle some very serious and urgent affairs. For this reason I was not able to be a witness to what I tell you, but I have known it either from letters received from well-known persons or on the testimony of those worthy of belief. I have this to state:

1. That the Very Rev. D. Francis C. Kelley, D. D., holds the statement of a nun who, flying from Mexico for fear of such outrages, went to Havana—a statement made before his excellency the Archbishop of New Orleans, Monsignor Blenk.

2. I know, through persons who merit entire confidence, that in truth there were some nuns outraged, not exactly in the City of Mexico but in the northern part of the country ruled by the Carrancistas.

3. A lady of the Mexican White Cross assured a parish priest that in the Maternity Home of Mexico she had seen eleven violated nuns.

4. I have seen in Havana nuns of the order of Jesus and Mary, Servants of Mary, Little Sisters of the Poor, Teresians, Carmelites, Capuchins, and others, all of whom left the Republic of Mexico for fear of these savage attacks.

5. It is moreover known publicly that all these outrages are spoken of and commented on in public, although no names of persons are given.

6. I have been told with entire certitude of the violation of honest maids who have suffered this outrage.

7. I know, also by a person to whom it was told, that certain nuns were thrown out of their house in the city of Mexico, and taken to a barracks where they passed the night.

With all that goes above, if the great number of attacks by these revolutionaries is taken into account, I believe that in reality there have been many violations of nuns, perhaps not in the exact amount which some have assigned, but certainly enough to make evident the lack of shame on the part of these men, and their savagery.

It can well be that Señor Paredes was not a witness to these facts, but that does not hinder them from having taken place.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Durango, March 13, 1915.

SIR: * * * I have the honor to report that the records in this office show no incidents during the year 1914 strictly within the title of this despatch [outrages upon priests and nuns and desecration of church property]. In June, 1913, when the revolutionary forces took the city of Durango, there were desecrations of church property and some abuse of priests here, according to reliable information and the records of the office. However, during the year 1914 the following incidents happened, and as they were measures directed against the Catholic Church it may be well to make note of them.

1. On February 5, 1914, a decree was issued by the Provisional Governor expelling from the State all priests of the Jesuit order "for intriguing in favor of the Huerta government". * * *

2. On May 9, 1914, a decree was issued by the Government of the State of Durango prohibiting the return of any Catholic priest or of any member of the former volunteers known as the Defensa Social, on the ground that their emigration from Durango was proof of their enmity toward the revolutionary cause.

3. At various times during the year, property owned by priests or by the Catholic Church, including mortgages, was confiscated and the rents and proceeds taken by the authorities. [Instances.]

4. In May 1914 the Constitutionals took charge of the Colegio de Jesus Maria in Torreon and used the building and the grounds for a barracks. * * *

Personally, nor upon information, I do not know of any other incidents in this consular district during the year 1914 relating to the subject-matter of this despatch.

The Secretary of State to Father Kelley.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 20, 1915.

MY DEAR FATHER KELLEY: The President has referred to me your important letter of the twenty-third of February concerning the present distressing situation in Mexico, with the request that I tell you very definitely what the attitude and acts of the Administration have been in the matter of the protection of the rights of conscience and of worship there, a matter in which the Administration is, I need not say, deeply interested as all true Americans must be.

The question which has bulked largest in political discussion in connection with the present revolution in Mexico, and in connection with the revolution which preceded it, is the land question. * * *

But of course economic questions are settled, if the matter be thought through to its real heart, only in order to give leave to the deeper things that are spiritual. A democracy must be sustained by education * * * and above and beyond all, the full flower of democracy, lies religious freedom, the principle which the builders of our own Republic made the crown of the whole structure. * * *

The Administration has not felt at liberty to play any part in the internal affairs of Mexico except that of friend and adviser. It realizes that, by reason of geographical proximity and many historical circumstances known to all the world, it is in some peculiar degree charged with the duty of safeguarding, so far as it may within the limits of international privilege, the lives and rights of foreigners in Mexico, and it has again and again made the strongest possible representations with regard to such matters to those who have from time to time assumed responsibility for affairs in Mexico during the troublous months through which that country has been passing. At every turn of affairs there, moreover, and upon every report of persecution, it has advised and warned those who were exercising authority of the fatal effect any disregard for the lives or rights of those who represented religion or any attack upon liberty of conscience or of worship would have upon the opinion of the people of the United States and of the world.

[Quotations from instructions sent to diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States in Mexico during 1914 and 1915.]

These despatches, selected from those sent, illustrate the spirit in which the President and those associated with him have dealt with the Mexican situation in so far as it affects the subject of religion.

This Administration is, of course, the servant of the American people. It seeks to be governed by their convictions and by the principles which have governed their political life. It has felt it to be its duty to urge upon the leaders of Mexico, whenever an opportunity offered, the principles and methods of action which must underlie all real democracies, as they have supported ours. These principles will, in the same way, govern the Administration in handling every question that affects its relations with Mexico, including the final question of recognition of any government that may issue out of the present revolution and give promise of stability and justice. * * * The Mexican leaders will certainly know that in order to command the sympathy and moral support of America, Mexico must have, when her reconstruction comes, just land tenure, free schools, and true freedom of conscience and worship. * * *

The following appeared in one of the leading dailies this morning: To the citizen Venustiano Carranza, Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Authority of the Union:

The Catholic priests of the Archbishopric of Mexico, undersigned, have the satisfaction to declare to you that we have seen with pain and displeasure that certain Catholic refugees on foreign soil, wrongly counselled and directed by an association which under pretext of protecting the Catholic cause has been for years undertaking to meddle in our national affairs, have addressed themselves to a foreign government in order to seek protection for the Church of Mexico.

We assure you that no one of us has taken part in such measures, which we consider unpatriotic and unnecessary.

It is true that we have to lament some injuries to persons and to matters pertaining to the worship and service of the Church; we consider all this as a sad consequence of the revolution which has moved the very foundation of our country and which in its sweeping zeal to tear up by the roots the elements of evil has, along with things which are really evil, affected others which are not such; but we confess that, in so far as concerns the most distinguished persons of the revolution, we have received attentions which we appreciate and in many instances guaranties which appear to us meritorious in our position as Mexican citizens.

It is our hope, then, that without betaking ourselves to any foreign power we may be able to obtain all the guaranties and rights compatible with the laws under which we live; that we may be permitted, far from using any political effort whatever, to devote ourselves to the betterment of the poor and the pacification upon the basis of respect for the constituted authorities and the brotherhood of all Mexicans.

Please accept this manifestation of our respect, our gratitude, and our distinguished consideration.

MY DEAR MR. BRYAN: A formal reply to your very interesting and very important letter of the 20th ultimo should have been sent you some weeks ago; but [etc.]

How deeply this question of religious liberty in Mexico goes into the causes that brought the country into its present unhappy condition, you may realize by reverting to your reference to the land question. It may seem difficult to believe that this question is a direct result of the antireligious laws of Mexico; yet such is the fact. A very large majority of the people of Mexico are Indians. Under the wise laws made by Spain for the protection of the aboriginal people, they were wards of the State, just as our Indians are. The pueblos held lands for their Indian population in common, and these lands were worked in common. The law which dissolved communities—aimed chiefly at religious communities—dissolved also the Indian communities, and did away with the Spanish community-lands. These lands were divided amongst the Indians as individuals, but long before all were ready to assume responsibilities. As a consequence, most of the new Indian proprietors sold or bartered them off for what they could get. It was chiefly through this bartering that the lands fell into the hands of large proprietors, and the Indians became their employees. Had the same course been followed in the United States, we all know that the same result could have been expected. The problem in Mexico, on account of the large Indian population, was a larger one than ours, but it was the same problem. Mexico took the wrong solution. No student of the Mexican situation believes today that the redistribution of the lands, unless safeguards are thrown about the right to sell, would bring about a different result. If the land question is all-important for a settlement of Mexico's troubles, the utmost care alone can prevent it coming again later to inaugurate a new reign of terror. But the point I wish to emphasize is, that it was the antireligious laws which in reality were responsible for the land question, upon which you very justly put so much stress. * * *

Your mention of the need of education in Mexico is as interesting as your reference to a just and wise solution of the land question. There is no doubt whatever but that Mexico needs education; but again I desire to point out to you the fact, easily verified from the knowledge of those who are acquainted with Mexico's history, that the antireligious laws have been chiefly responsible for the said condition of education in Mexico today. Previous to the passing of these laws, Mexico had many schools for higher, secondary and primary education; and, even in the country districts and amongst the Indian tribes, schools existed, generously supported by offerings on the part of Catholic Spaniards and the wealthier Mexicans. The driving out of religious communities, whose one object was the conversion and uplifting of the Indians, closed the missions and the mission schools, for their foundations were confiscated by the State, or, by "denunciation", bought by private individuals for practically nothing. * * *

[Inclosures—Summary.]

[The first protest is dated in Mexico City, February 11, 1915, and purports to bear the signatures of eight hundred women. It is addressed to "Citizen Alvaro Obregon" and protests against the "unspeakable sacrilege" and "brutal outrage" committed through the confiscation of the parochial churches of Coyoacan, Atzacozalco, and the churches of La Concepcion and Santa Brigida and its annex the Josefino College. It asks that the churches and colleges be restored to the uses for which they were created.

The other protest is dated in Guadalajara, August —, 1915, and, though no signature is attached, is made by "the ladies of that city to the Provisional Governor of the State, Manuel Aguirre Berlanga." The protest "before the Governor, the Nation and the whole world" is against:

1. The blasphemies, profanations and spoiliations of Catholic churches, sacrileges therein committed and the persecution of Catholic priests.
2. The free rein given to anti-Catholics and the insults and calumnies heaped on the Catholics by the official and semiofficial organs of the Revolution.
3. The law which forbids them to give their children a Christian education, a right conceded to them by the Constitution of 1857 though it was made against the Catholics.
4. The numberless executions by shooting for offenses which, even if proven, would not be punished with death by any civilized legislation.]

MY DEAR MR. LANSING: I am sending you herewith enclosed the following documents⁷² on the Mexican troubles which I promised to have prepared for your files:

First. Decree issued by the Governor of Michoacan confiscating the property of Catholic priests. This decree was issued since the recognition of Carranza. Attached to this are some notes prepared by a Mexican.

Second. Extract from the sworn statement of Sister Elisa Maria del Salvador regarding the outrages against nuns.

Third. Affidavit given to me by an American citizen concerning the outrages against nuns.

Fourth. Extracts from private letters concerning the violations of the religious liberty pledge since recognition.

I am also sending you by registered mail a copy of "The Book of Red and Yellow" containing other affidavits and statements.

* * * You were good enough to ask what could be done by the Administration, and I promised to think the matter over and give you my ideas on the subject. Something can be done that would relieve the situation very materially. * * * If you can secure from the Carranza Government the following, I believe that criticisms will be turned into a great deal of satisfaction:

First. A formal invitation from the Carranza Government to all the expatriated Mexican bishops and clergy to return to their posts of duty, with absolute guaranty of safety and immunity from persecution and also prosecution. (N. B. I emphasize the word "prosecution" because if this invitation is not unconditional, drum-head courtmartial and trumped-up charges imperil the lives of the bishops.)

Second. The return of all the churches and all church property to their former uses.

Third. The guaranty that there shall be no restrictions on the rights of citizenship of the clergy as given by the Constitution.

Fourth. A guaranty that all the clergy of all religious denominations shall be afforded the protection of the law as it is on the books of the Republic.

⁷² Not printed.

I am sure you will find nothing unreasonable in these suggestions. It would be hard to ask for less, since it is only asking for what the laws of Mexico guarantee.

SIR: Referring to the Department's No. 298 of September 1, 1914,⁸⁸ I have the honor to report that certain portions of the ranch of the estate of the late W. S. Benton still continue to be occupied by inhabitants of the villages of Santa Maria de Cuevas and Santa Rosalía under the terms of General Villa's order of April 20, 1914,⁸⁹ and that it has been impossible to secure from the state authorities any satisfactory settlement for the occupation of the property during the past year. Following receipt of the instructions just indicated, I addressed a request to General Villa through the office of the Governor, Villa then being in the midst of a campaign, calling attention to the fact that the Los Remedios property had not been abandoned, as suggested to me in his letter of July 28, but had been continuously in charge of Mr. John Harvie as resident manager. In reply, in view of General Villa's preoccupation with military affairs, Governor Avila assumed responsibility for a proper settlement with Mrs. Benton for the use of her lands for the year 1914. After repeated subsequent correspondence with the Governor relative to the matter and after a purported investigation and report by the municipal president of Santa Maria de Cuevas to the Governor had been made, the latter offered payment to Mrs. Benton in the sum of 300 pesos, worth in U. S. currency at the present time about $30. This offer was communicated to Mr. Harvie, who refused it as ridiculous and absurd, stating that in excess of 2,000 acres had been occupied under Villa's order, in the cultivation of which 192 teams of oxen and horses had been used, and that, considering damages to fences, pasturing of cattle, free use of wood, etc., 5,000 pesos would even be an inadequate compensation. The Governor now states that he cannot consider any adjustment of the matter beyond the offer of 300 pesos,

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I beg to inform you that I have today received a despatch from the Spanish Consul at Vera Cruz, dated January 15, in which he informs me that, not being able to communicate either by post or telegraph with the Spanish Minister in the capital of Mexico, he is corresponding with me in order to call my attention to the critical situation of the Spaniards residing in the States of Vera Cruz, Puebla, and Tlaxcala.

A few days ago, the Consul reports, seven Spaniards were killed by the Constitutionalist forces at the station of Esperanza, on the Mexican Railroad, and another one lost his life at the station of San Marcos of the same railway.

Persons who have recently arrived at Vera Cruz from Puebla have reported to the Spanish Consul that there are more than fifty Spaniards imprisoned, whose ultimate fate there is every reason to fear for.

These reports are confirmed by the news which I received from the Spanish Minister, from the capital, and all of them reveal an extremely serious situation for the Spanish residents of the States I have mentioned and very specially in Puebla, where our large colony and important manufacturing interests have attracted the animosity and the cupidity of the various Carrancista and Zapatista faction which have held that territory under their control.

I venture to call your attention once more to this critical state of affairs, in the hope that you will exert all your influence to obtain an improvement in the situation.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Vera Cruz, January 26, 1915.

MR. CONSUL: Your note of the 24th of this month, personally informs Citizen Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army that:

The Department of State in Washington has been informed by the Spanish Embassy in said capital that seven Spaniards were recently shot by the Constitutionalist forces in the station of Esperanza, on the line of the Mexican Railroad, and that another Spaniard lost his life at the station of San Marcos; and also that news is had from Puebla, according to which fifty Spaniards are held as prisoners and that the properties and lives of Spaniards in the States of Vera Cruz, Puebla and Tlaxcala are menaced. At the request of the Spanish Embassy, my Government has given me instructions to bring the foregoing to your personal attention, pointing out clearly the utmost importance of rapid and effective action for the complete protection of the lives of Spanish subjects and the suspension of summary action against those who are said to be under arrest; and also that if the Constitutionalist adopt the measures which it is said they are disposed to adopt, they will no doubt provoke the indignation of humanity and those responsible will have to assume the consequence.

The First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, in charge of the Executive Power of the Mexican Republic, has sent to this Department of State your note which contains the representation of the American Government made at the request of the Ambassador of Spain at Washington; and, in accord with the First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army in charge of the Executive Power of the Union, I have the honor to answer you as follows:

This Department of State will request General Alvaro Obregon, Chief of the military operations of the States of Vera Cruz, Puebla and Tlaxcala, to state whether the reports furnished to the Department of State in Washington by the Ambassador of Spain, relative to the supposed execution of seven Spaniards by Constitutionalist forces at the station of Esperanza and the death of another Spaniard at the station of San Marcos, are true or untrue; inasmuch as from the text of your note, it cannot be seen whether the Ambassador of Spain affirms the action as being strictly true, since, in a vague manner, the Department of State in Washington only says that it has been informed of this supposed fact (I underscore in your note the phrase has been informed) without indicating the source from which this information originated, nor the slightest logical foundation which upholds it.

In your same note it is stated "news is had from the Puebla according to which fifty Spaniards are held as prisoners and that the properties and lives of Spaniards in the States of Veracruz, Puebla and Tlaxcala are menaced."

Notwithstanding that the origin of this news (I also underscore the phrase news is had) is not pointed out, and that not only is it not definitely asserted, but not even remotely indicated; notwithstanding that it is not stated how and why the properties and lives of Spaniards residing in those three States of the Federation are menaced—which gives rise to the belief that it is a matter of the so-called news of the yellow press and of the enemies of Constitutionalism, unworthy of belief because of their lamentable vagueness—reports will be requested of the Governors of the States mentioned, in order that this Department may know if really, as it is said, fifty Spaniards are under arrest at Puebla and the reason why they are; and when once concrete data are obtained, this matter, as well as all similar thereto, will be handled through the proper channels.

Lastly, I have the honor to answer the final portion of your note, advising you that Constitutionalism has not adopted, does not adopt, and will not adopt measures other than those inspired by justice, even when it is stated to the contrary by imputations without proof whatsoever, from a suspected and hidden origin; and justice, Mr. Consul, has never provoked the indignation of humanity.

Please accept [etc.]

MR. CONSUL: General Cándido Aguilar, Governor of the State of Vera Cruz, in a despatch dated the 28th of last January tells me the following:

Duly answering your note of the 26th of this month, relative to the representation made to that Department by Mr. William W. Canada under date of the 24, I have the honor to inform you of the following facts: With regard to the seven Spaniards who are said to have been shot recently by Constitutionalist forces at the station of Esperanza, on the Mexican Railroad, the Government under my charge has no notice whatsoever beyond that of seven Spanish subjects who were expelled from the country during the last days of October of last year, as prescribed by Article 33 of the Constitution. It is to be believed that this notice is the one which has given rise to the report received by the Department of State in Washington, as erroneous as it is maliciously distorted. With regard to the case of another Spaniard who is said to have lost his life at the station of San Marcos, as well as that of the fifty Spaniards imprisoned in Puebla, as affirmed in the note to which I refer, this (State) Government is without any data, since said places belong to a federal division outside of that which I represent. I should make special mention of the statement in the note alluded to relative to the properties and lives of Spaniards in the State of Veracruz being menaced, inasmuch as by every means at my command I have striven to give the most ample guaranties compatible with the present state of affairs, and I can assure you that, notwithstanding this state of affairs, Spanish subjects, with the exception of entirely accidental cases, have enjoyed all manner of safety, and are going about their business the same as in normal times. At the same time, I take the liberty of communicating to you that the (State) Government under my charge has decreed, in some cases, the expulsion of Spanish subjects because of having duly proved that their activity is very far removed from that in which every foreigner should engage in a country where he receives hospitality and facilities for prospering in his business, and further that it is proposed to continue applying the same penalty to all foreigners who perniciously mix in the politics of our country. Lastly, I beg to inform you, in order that you may kindly transmit it to his excellency the Consul of the United States at this port, that whenever it is proved that any civil or military authority fails to extend the necessary guaranties to any foreign subject, I shall energetically proceed to remedy the evil, duly punishing those responsible.

I have the honor to transcribe the above to you, answering your note of January 24th last, with the understanding that we are awaiting information that is to be rendered by the Governor of Tlaxcala and Puebla.

cisco Gonzalez, ordered all the dry goods merchants to appear before him and fined them each 1,000 pesos for selling goods at high prices. A number of Spaniards paid the fine under protest and closed their places of business immediately; and a few continued to do business, decreasing their prices. The only American among them was the manager of the Regal Shoe Store, who refused to pay the fine. He placed the whole matter in my hands, after having closed his place of business. The matter was referred by this office to the General, who has not yet answered my communication.

A delegation of Spanish merchants called on this office to know if the seal of said office could be placed on their doors in case of an attempt on the part of the commissary department of the Mexican army to commandeer their supplies without payment. I advised them I could not give them any positive answer, but would have to refer the case to my Government for instructions in case of such an event. The military authorities recently purchased a large bill of goods amounting to several thousand pesos from one of the Spanish firms, and gave the firm in payment an order on the military treasurer, which could not be cashed. It is for this reason that the Spaniards are unwilling to sell goods under those conditions, as they have little chance of even getting their money for them.

such objection is, in our judgment, very unjust. He cannot fairly complain of Spain for trying to secure through de facto authorities protection for Spanish subjects in those parts of Mexico over which Carranza exercises no authority and in which he can give no protection. We have been compelled to follow the same course and a failure to do so would have resulted in most serious consequences. Report of the special committee of the Municipal Council.

Honorable Colleagues: The undersigned, commissioned to pronounce upon the proposed decree relating to the expropriation of the Empresa de Agua of this city which was presented to you in compliance with the resolution of this Council of the 8th of February, now render our report:

* * * If we are bound by the Constitution, only two roads are open: a private transaction amicably arranged, or payment in advance. The first has not been attempted by this committee since it lacked authorization; the second we shall not attempt since we lack money.

We must renounce all legalistic scruples; we do not need to observe the law in order to act lawfully. If we know that our actions rest upon the purest foundation of justice, why trouble about a puritanism of form? The end justifies the means.

To argue about the constitutionality of the measure we propose to execute is to lose time in useless discussions, once we consider that this Municipal Council emanates from the Revolution and not from the Law, because we have put aside the Law in order to correct the vices which are precisely the cause of the Revolution. * * * Let us say with Madero: Perish the Constitution so the people may be saved. And let us adopt this resolution:

Art. 1. We decree, on the ground of public utility, the expropriation of the Empresa de Agua, S. A., of this city, its pumping-plant at Pena Hueca, its pipe-lines, installations, and all other properties of said Empresa.

Art. 2. Let the expropriation be effected immediately, for which purpose [etc.]

Art. 3. The rights of the expropriated company remain safeguarded, in order that upon the reestablishment of the courts of law they may make them valid.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: Referring to your call at the Department on the morning of November 24th last, when you stated that Spanish subjects were largely interested in the Banco Oriental, which was reported to have been closed by the Mexican authorities in Mexico City, and that a considerable amount of the stock of this bank is held by the American Tropical Development Company, I desire to state that the Department's representative at Mexico City, Mr. Charles B. Parker, telegraphed under date of December 2 that all banks of issue in Mexico would be required to have by December 10 a metallic currency equal to one-half of the amount of their paper issue, and that such banks of issue as are unable to meet that requirement would lose their concessions and be forced into liquidation.

As the Department's representative states that there is practically no American capital invested in the banks mentioned, I am of the opinion that representations through Mr. Parker in behalf of the banks would not be acceptable to the de facto Government of Mexico. Moreover, the de facto Government recently informed the Department of State that representations on behalf of foreign interests should be made by the appropriate diplomatic representatives of the countries whose citizens or subjects are concerned, and not by the representative of this Government.

Referring to the peremptory and most offensive order received by the Spanish Minister from the First Chief last night to leave the country within 24 hours beginning at midnight tonight. The Minister is charged with aiding, and harboring in the Legation, Caso who is wanted for punishment on a political accusation; also with disobeying the order demanding that the Legation be searched. The Minister positively denies both charges. On February 4, complying with Department's February 3 to the Brazilian Minister, I sent the following telegram to Carranza:

It is suggested by Secretary Bryan that I may be of some service in connection with the proposed arrest of Mr. Angel Caso, Confidential Agent of the Spanish Legation. The Department hopes, in view of his connection with the legation of a foreign government, that the arrest will not be made. In personal conversation with me about three weeks ago, this gentleman expressed the most favorable opinion of you. I sincerely trust that the accusation against him is of such a nature that some intimation may be made to him in regard to it instead of placing him under arrest. I understand that General Obregon, presuming him to be at the Spanish Legation, has given the legation until 6 p. m. this afternoon to deliver him. My understanding is that he is not at the legation.

I also on the same day telegraphed my personal sympathy on the death of his brother and two nephews. The personal message received prompt reply, the other remains unanswered.

Spanish Minister left this morning for Vera Cruz. Should arrive approximately 9 o'clock p. m. I understand the motives influencing the Diplomatic Corps in making representation to their various Governments are: the unfriendly attitude of the Carranza Government; the futility of representations to any government; the general prevailing condition approaching anarchy; and the possibility of the complete isolation of the city. The first reason does not appear as entirely sufficient because the Constitutionalists' occupation here seems indifferent to them and [omission?] for other reasons the other governments have given due consideration to the diplomatists though scarcely anything has been obtained in response to representations. If the diplomatists do decide to leave, could the Department devise some plan for me to remain as an observer only, making reports by code if permitted to use it?

SIR: I have the honor to advise the Department that the Consulate has been requested by Mr. L. L. Schofield, General Manager of the Cía. Carbonífera de Río Escondido, to certify invoices of coal consigned by the Constitutionalist Government to his company in Eagle Pass, Texas.

Mr. Schofield advises the Consulate that his company has entered into an agreement with the Constitutionalist Government whereby the Constitutionalists will deliver a limited amount of coal from the Río Escondido Mines to the Cía. Carbonífera de Río Escondido in Eagle Pass, Texas, in lieu of payment to the Constitutionals a normal sum for same.

I have agreed to certify the invoices in question provided Mr. L. L. Schofield, in his character as general manager of the said company, signs the invoices. I feel that I will be justified in taking this stand as it will enable the foreign company to get as much coal out of Mexico as possible, which would undoubtedly be burned by the Carrancistas upon the approach of the Villa troops who now are in possession of Monclova.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: The French Boleo Company has just informed me by wire that General Carranza's troops that entered Santa

I have, therefore, the honor to apply most urgently for your excellency's good offices and to ask that you kindly use your influence with General Carranza with a view to obtaining that the Korrigan III be left at the disposal of the Boleo Company and that the other boat, which was taken from it without any right whatever, be returned to it. MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: Under date of February 11 last your excellency to whom, under instructions of my Government, I had applied for such information as might be in your possession respecting the seizure by Carrancistas of French arms stored in the custom house at Vera Cruz and placed in the custody of the American authorities when landed, informed me that it appeared from a report of the Consul of the United States in that city that the said munitions of war had been confiscated in spite of a promise given to the Consul of France that they would be allowed to go back to France.

My Government, to which I had forwarded the information, informs me that it can not look unconcerned upon the abstraction of arms that belonged to it, had been landed with the assent of the American authorities and were intended to be used for protection in case of dire necessity, of which there is as yet no indication that there will be none.

The Government of the Republic would be very thankful to your excellency if you would, using the influence the Government of the United States enjoys with the Mexican chiefs, present to General Carranza the remonstrance which this unwarranted seizure in violation of promises received calls for and ask that the French arms thus confiscated be returned. AMERICAN CONSULATE, Durango, July 8, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. Chanel, a French citizen and civil engineer and long a resident of Durango, had been employed to look after and take charge of some properties of Mexican citizens who on account of conditions in the Republic two years ago had to emigrate to the United States. Foreigners generally disapprove of any foreigner attempting to protect or even manage any property strictly Mexican owned, unless the arrangements were made previous to the commencement of revolutionary activity. Therefore there is no particular sympathy with the victim, Mr. Chanel, to whom General Calixto Contreras addressed a very threatening letter, distributed as a handbill here in Durango, in which Mr. Chanel is told he will have his head cut off or be banished, as the General determines.

The significance of the letter is in its general accusation against all foreigners, and the fact that each military officer presumes to exercise complete sovereign authority over persons and property throughout the Republic. So far as known, General Contreras does not hold at present any military or civil position in this State, but is with his troops near Aguascalientes with the army of General Villa, where the letter is dated. However, he assumes to exercise authority in this State over persons and property. * * *

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that the Department deems it proper to advise you that it has received a mail despatch from the American Consul at Durango, in which it is stated that a Mr. Chanel, a French citizen, has had certain threats made against him by General Calixto Contreras. It appears that General Contreras' animosity against Mr. Chanel has been aroused by his taking charge of the properties of certain Mexicans at present residing out of Mexico.

The threats referred to have been contained in a handbill circulated broadcast, and in it the threat is made that if General Contreras receives one more complaint against Mr. Chanel he will have meted out to him banishment or "another penalty more severe."

The Department is informed that General Contreras does not appear to hold, at present, any military or civil position in the State of Durango but is with the troops of General Villa near Aguascalientes. It is stated, however, that General Contreras assumes to exercise control in the State of Durango over persons and property.

In this connection I have the honor to inform your excellency that the Department has information indicating that the foreign element generally in the State of Durango considers it very indiscreet for a foreigner to attempt to protect or even manage any property strictly Mexican owned, unless the arrangements were made previously to the commencement of revolutionary activity.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: Your excellency was pleased to tell me in your letter of the 24th instant, of the dangers besetting a French citizen, Mr. Chanel, at Durango, on account of the ill will borne him by one General Contreras of the Villista party who seems to have conferred powers upon himself in that region. The cause of that ill will and of threat that may even arouse anxiety for Mr. Chanel's very life is that he is said to have taken in charge property owned by Mexicans compelled to flee their native country.

This is considered imprudent and it is indeed possible that it is. Perhaps also it is generous rather than imprudent. At any rate it cannot warrant the attitude assumed toward Mr. Chanel by the improvised authority now existing at Durango. Appealing to the sentiments of humanity and good will which the American Government has evidenced more than once and which have not been brought into play in Mexico alone, I venture to express a wish that the American Consul at Durango be directed to use his influence to insure to Mr. Chanel's life and property that respect which may be legitimately expected.

Mr. Amador thinks that Mr. Ayguesparse should take up the matter with General Carranza, and he expressed his belief that they will arrange it to the entire satisfaction of the French Government. A prominent member of the Ottoman colony requested my good offices this afternoon in behalf of six of his fellow countrymen who had been arrested by the military authorities on reaching the Constitutional lines, and it was reported that they had been executed. He also showed me cables and other correspondence relative to American representation for Ottomans. The Brazilian Minister informed me that he was prevented from any action whatever on account of the relations of Brazil with Turkey. He considered it proper for me to make unofficial inquiry at military headquarters. I saw General Obregon personally. He stated that six Syrians had been arrested for coming through the lines. Four were placed at liberty, two executed as spies, along with two Mexicans. As foreigners, they should have had formal trial but this had been overlooked.

Since beginning this cable I have been reliably informed that positively four Syrians were executed; that they were coming here as merchants to pay debts; that they had in their possession some 20,000 pesos which is up to this time retained by the military authorities; that they were inoffensive and innocent; that they were executed without any notice, without any one plea or chance, trial or representation. Am informed that the officer in charge of the execution had a German name.

I am requested to ask that the Department inform the Syrians in the north to avoid this city for the present.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ambassador Morgenthau.

SUBLIME PORTE,
Constantinople, March 9, 1915.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs is informed by a telegram from the Imperial Embassy at Washington that the Government of the United States of America has consented, according to the Department of State's answering note of the date of January 13th No. 15, to instruct the officers of its service in Mexico to use their unofficial good offices in favor of Ottoman subjects who found need to have recourse to them conforming to the principles given in paragraph 174 of the Consular Regulations of the United States.

The terms underlined not being able to express effective protection which would follow from even the terms of article 174 of the consular regulation of the United States, thus given: "The diplomatic and consular officers become the agent of the foreign government by reason of the duties that he has filled regarding the citizens or subjects of it," the Ministry for Foreign Affairs asks the Embassy of the United States of America to please support with its Government the requests that the Ottoman Chargé d'Affaires at Washington has been told to make again to the Department of State in order that the officers of the United States might be charged with the official protection of Ottoman subjects in Mexico.

As the said Jacob E. Touche informs the Embassy that he has also written to the Department of State on the same subject and received a reply to the effect that action in the matter will be taken only on receipt of a request from this Embassy, the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires accordingly hastens to say that he will feel very grateful to the Secretary of State if he will be good enough to direct the United States representative in Mexico to investigate fully into the matter and act in accordance with the requirements of the case with the view of safeguarding the interests of the said Jacob Touche.

598. Referring your despatch March 10 urging protection Ottoman subjects in Mexico. Please bring to attention of Turkish Government following facts: This Government has no diplomatic representative of its own in Mexico, nor has it a consular officer in the City of Mexico at the present time, but is acting through the Brazilian Minister. The work thus imposed upon him is so onerous and exacting that we feel it would be an injustice to him to add to his burdens. We would, therefore, suggest that the Turkish Government request some other legation to act for it in diplomatic matters and for the protection of Ottoman subjects in the City of Mexico.

The Government of the United States, however, will be pleased to instruct its consular officers in other districts of Mexico to extend their good offices and protection to the subjects of the Ottoman Empire within their jurisdiction. We are sure that the Turkish Government will appreciate the situation and make the arrangements suggested. You will assure the Turkish Government that we would be pleased to act for it at the capital if we had a diplomatic representative of our own in Mexico.

SIR: In compliance with your recent oral request, I take pleasure in sending you enclosed a memorandum on the subject of the protection by diplomatic and consular officers of the United States of the interests of citizens or subjects of a third country at places where their own government has no diplomatic or consular representatives.

I am [etc.]

MEMORANDUM.

In a note dated December 7, 1914, the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires at Washington stated that his Government, pending the appointment of an Ottoman consular agent, was desirous of placing the interests of Ottoman subjects residing in Mexico in the hands of the United States diplomatic and consular representatives in that country, and inquired whether the United States would extend this courtesy to the Turkish Government.

On January 11, 1915, the Department telegraphed the Embassy at Constantinople that officers of the United States in Mexico had been authorized to use unofficial good offices in behalf of Ottoman subjects in Mexico.

On January 13, 1915, the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires in Washington was informed that this Government had instructed its officers in Mexico to use unofficial good offices in behalf of Ottoman subjects who might require them, in accordance with paragraph 174 of the Consular Regulations.

On March 10, 1915, the American Ambassador at Constantinople transmitted to the Department of State a note verbale from the Turkish Foreign Office dated March 9, stating that the use of unofficial good offices in favor of Ottoman subjects who found need to have recourse to them, in accordance with paragraph 174 of the Consular Regulations, did not express effective protection and that the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires at Washington had been directed to take the matter up further with the Department of State in order that the officers of the United States might be charged with the official protection of Ottoman subjects in Mexico.

Oral request has been made by the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires for an interpretation of paragraph 174 of the Consular Regulations. The paragraph mentioned reads as follows:

174. Requests have occasionally been made upon the Government of the United States to permit its diplomatic and consular officers to extend their protection to citizens or subjects of a foreign government who may desire it and who may be sojourning at places where there are no diplomatic or consular representatives of that government. This Government has from time to time, upon the request of friendly powers, given to its diplomatic and consular officers authority to take upon themselves, with the consent of the government within whose jurisdiction they reside, the function of representing those powers at places where the latter had no such officers. It has understood this authority to be restricted simply to the granting of the services and good offices of our representatives, with their own consent, to meet what has ordinarily been a fortuitous and temporary exigency of the friendly government. When this function is accepted—which must be done only with the approval of the Department of State—the diplomatic or consular officer becomes the agent of the foreign government as to the duties he may perform for its citizens or subjects. He becomes responsible to it for his discharge of those duties, and that government alone is responsible for his acts in relation thereto. He does not, however, for this purpose, become a diplomatic or consular officer of the foreign government.

The Constitution of the United States prohibits any one who holds an office of profit or trust under the United States to accept, without the authority of the Congress of the United States, any office of any kind whatever from any foreign State. Hence for the purpose of the protection of citizens or subjects of a foreign State diplomatic and consular officers of the United States cannot become officers of the foreign State, the intention of the Department of State in authorizing the exercise of such protection being merely the use, with the consent of the authorities of the countries where such officers reside, of their good offices in behalf of the citizens or subjects of such foreign country in their vicinity who might request them in the absence of diplomatic or consular representatives of their own country. As before stated such officers cannot become officers of the foreign government, and consequently they could not officially represent that government. They are agents of that government not in the sense of "officials," but only as persons who at the request of that government, and with the consent of their own government and the authorities of the country in which they reside, are permitted to speak unofficially and by way of good offices in favor of any interests of such third government or its citizens or subjects. And while such officers, when so acting, are responsible to the foreign government for the acts they perform in its behalf, and that government is alone responsible for their acts in relation thereto, they do not report to that government, nor do they take its orders, their communication with it being indirectly effected through the Government of the United States.

With respect to the particular case of the protection of the interests of Ottoman subjects in Mexico, the foregoing applies only to the consular officers of the United States, the United States having no diplomatic representative of its own in Mexico.

In accord with the Department [circular] instruction of January 9, 1915, to "use my unofficial good offices in behalf of Ottoman subjects in my consular district," I took the matter up with the local authorities and obtained the release of this cotton.

When the German Consul of San Luis Potosí was in Aguascalientes about a month ago, he informed me that his consular district included the State of Aguascalientes, and a few days later I saw a notice in the El Paso Morning Times which stated that the German Consul in San Luis Potosí had been appointed by the Ottoman Empire in charge of the interests of Ottoman subjects in his consular district.

In my despatch No. 312 of June 1st, 1915, I reported to the Department that I had read in the El Paso Times that the German Consul in San Luis Potosí, who includes Aguascalientes in his consular district, had been appointed to represent the subjects of the Ottoman Empire, but when I referred the Allende matter to him, he writes that he only represents the Ottoman subjects in the State of San Luis Potosí and not in his entire district.

Under these circumstances I would respectfully request the Department to instruct me as to my obligations towards subjects of

The order which warranted the officer you mention in entering the business house of Mr. Allende was signed by General Benito Diaz, Governor of the State, which official ordered the confiscation of the goods claimed by Mr. Allende, the reason being that he had them hidden because they belonged to an enemy of our cause who has expatriated himself to the United States; on the other hand, Mr. Allende paid taxes to the Government for the conduct of a dry-goods business, whereas what he had in stock was groceries, which fully verifies our assertion.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch dated June 30, in regard to protection for Syrians in Mexico, and with reference, specifically, to the case of the Syrians reported by you in telegrams from Mexico City in February last as having been executed by order of General Obregon.

A third person note covering the information contained in your telegram dated February 16, which information was substantially the same as that contained in the enclosures to your despatch of February 17, was sent to the Turkish Embassy in Washington on February 20. This third person note ended by saying that fears were entertained for the Syrians on their way to Mexico City from the north. It does not appear from the records at hand that the Turkish Embassy, upon the receipt of this information, made any specific request of the Department for protection for these Syrians, nor does it appear that the Embassy made a formal protest against the execution of the Syrians referred to in your February 16. The Turkish Embassy was also informed of the suggestion in your February 13, that Syrians in the north of Mexico should avoid the vicinity of Mexico City while there was danger of such untoward incidents as the summary execution of the Syrians mentioned by you at that time.

In your telegram of February 13, you stated that the Brazilian Minister had said to you that while he was prevented from acting in the matter of these Syrians on account of the relations of Brazil with Turkey, he considered it proper for you to make unofficial inquiry regarding the matter at military headquarters.

It appears from the records that the Department, on May 6, 1915, sent to the Turkish Embassy in Washington a long memorandum on the subject of protection for Ottoman subjects in Mexico, in which the Embassy was reminded that on January 13, 1915, the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires in this city had been informed that this Government had instructed its officers in Mexico to use unofficial good offices in behalf of Ottoman subjects in accordance with paragraph 174 of the United States Consular Regulations. In this memorandum it was further stated that this authorization applied only to representatives of this country having consular functions, on account of this Government's having no diplomatic representative of its own in Mexico.

You are instructed to use your good offices in behalf of subjects of the Ottoman Empire in any cases of grievances that may come to your knowledge, and to say that you are acting on instructions from this Department, given as a result of the action of the Ottoman Government in entrusting to representatives of this Government the care of Ottoman interests.

You are also instructed to lodge a protest, unofficially, against the summary executions of Ottoman subjects mentioned in your telegram of February 16, and to make a similar protest, in the future, should there be any likelihood of a repetition of such summary action as was taken in the case of the Syrians above mentioned.

The Turkish Embassy in this capital will be requested to designate some one other than the Brazilian Minister to look after Ottoman interests in Mexico City, but it does not appear to be necessary to inform the Carranza officials of this until the selection of some one by the Turkish Government.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Referring to the summary execution of three Ottoman subjects by General Obregon, Mexico City, on the 16th of February, 1915.

At the time, and at the instance of the Ottoman Colony in Mexico City, I spoke to General Obregon in behalf of these Syrians, who were brought in from San Juan del Río, charged with being spies. I was, unfortunately, a little too late in seeing the General, who informed me that just a short time previous to my call the men had been executed. He added that if he had known that they were foreigners he would have ordered a more formal examination, but that he only knew of their nationality through my representation and regretted that it was too late.

I have the honor to inform you that I am in receipt of a communication from the Honorable Alvey A. AMERICAN CONSULATE, Chihuahua, September 19, 1915.

SIR: Having reference to the Department's telegram of September 17, 1915, in which I was instructed to use my good offices in the interest of protection for the property of Mr. Jacob E. Touche, a subject of the Turkish Empire, I have the honor to report that I have now directed a note to Governor Avila asking that consideration be shown Mr. Touche in respect to his property interests in this city. I might note that Mr. Touche is a large holder of property here, but has been a refugee from this city since December, 1913, when he fled at the approach of the Constitutionalist troops, then under the general command of General Villa. In connection with the present instructions I venture to call attention to the correspondence regarding this case, going back now for several months, Mr. Touche having appealed to this office for aid in securing protection for his property soon after the occupation of Chihuahua by General Villa, which occupation was soon followed by the sequestration of all property owned by Mr. Touche. The complainant in this case was formerly a concessionaire of the gambling privilege for the State of Chihuahua, and it is understood that the present authorities found their hostility to him on the ground that he gained his wealth through the gambling privilege indicated, and certain vague charges are claimed to stand against Mr. Touche which warrant the action already taken by the authorities.

The particular act of destruction to which Mr. Touche's present complaint refers is the anticipated razing of a part of a valuable two-story building owned by him which is located in the principal business quarter of this city, for the purpose of widening the street upon which such building faces. It is true that the plans projected will result in very serious damages to the building referred to.

It is proper to observe that Turkish subjects domiciled in Chihuahua at the present time are having recourse to the honorary German Consul in cases requiring the assistance of consular officers, it being understood that an arrangement to this effect now subsists through the fact of the alliance existing between the Ottoman and the German Governments. Formerly, under instructions given this Consulate in 1913, this office frequently was called upon to exercise its good offices in the interests of Turkish subjects.

In view of the statements contained in the despatch in regard to Turkish subjects domiciled in Mexico having recourse to the honorary German Consul in cases requiring the assistance of consular officers, the Secretary of State would be glad to be advised whether the Turkish Government desires the representatives of the United States in Mexico to continue the exercise of their good offices on behalf of Turkish subjects.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, March 16, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the unjust and often outrageous treatment of Chinese by Mexicans continues in Sonora, in spite of all that this consulate can do in its efforts to secure protection for them and their property.

Recently a delegation of eight Chinese merchants of Cananea and Nogales, claiming to represent some 3,500 of their countrymen in northern Sonora, called at the consulate and requested that the attention of the American State Department be invited to their condition here; and that the Department, if consistent, unofficially suggest to the Chinese Embassy at Washington the advisability of sending an agent to Sonora to meet and consult with the Chinese here; these Chinese desire advice and aid in the preparation of claims covering a long series of property losses sustained by them during the past four years of revolution.

This consulate is constantly called upon by Chinese for aid and advice, but with its limited office organization, and by reason of the large number of Chinese in the district, it is physically impossible to give a full measure of attention to all such who find themselves in difficulties.

When the committee of Chinese called and raised the question of their claims, they were advised that any action at present would be premature; that no claims could be passed upon until political conditions in Mexico were materially improved, and possibly a joint claims commission appointed, or other customary arrangements made for the adjustment of such losses.

¹⁰ Similar telegram to the American consul at Ensenada.

They insisted, however, that it was their desire that their request be made known to their Embassy at Washington; my suggestion that they write directly to the Chinese Embassy and make their request over their own signatures was agreed to by them, but they also insisted that the consulate make known their desire to the American Government at Washington.

It then occurred to me that possibly the Chinese Government, considering the large number of its citizens resident in Sonora, if such an arrangement could be made without raising the question of recognition it would undoubtedly be of material assistance to the large Chinese colony here.

Representations have been made to Maytorena. To my knowledge outrages complained of in telegram to Chinese Minister have been scandalous and continuous for many weeks; and repeated requests have been made on Maytorena by this consulate in efforts secure protection for Chinese without success. See despatch 366, March 16. Not many Chinese have been killed but literally scores have been robbed and cruelly maltreated apparently with approval of officers. Correspondence filed this consulate demonstrates futility of appeals to Maytorena. Respectfully suggest that vigorous representations be made Villa that he issue sharp personal orders directly to Generals Trujillo, Soza, Morales, Acosta, and Urvalejo, now in Sonora, to end that this increasing persecution of defenseless Chinese be ended. SIR: Referring to the telegram dated March 18, 1915, from Douglas, Ariz., which was left at the Department on March 19 by the Counselor of your Legation and which related to certain alleged outrages against Chinese in Sonora, Mexico, you are advised that the Department has received a telegram from the American consul at Nogales, Mexico, dated March 22, 1915, stating that repeated requests have been made on General Maytorena by that consulate with a view to obtaining protection for Chinese in Sonora, but without success. Consul Simpich reports that not many Chinese have been killed but that scores have been robbed and maltreated. These appeals by Consul Simpich having proved futile, the Department telegraphed Special Agent Carothers on March 23 instructing him to make vigorous representations to General Villa, urging him to issue emphatic personal orders to Generals Trujillo, Soza, Morales, Acosta, and Urvalejo, now in Sonora, to discontinue the ill treatment and persecution of Chinese. Several thousand Chinese are said to be in Sonora and the condition of those in remote small towns is described as pitiful.

The newspapers daily contain inflammatory articles against the Chinese, and every attempt is being made to excite feeling against them; at any moment their stores are liable to be sacked and their lives imperiled.

I see but one method to be adopted—that is that either this consulate or Admiral Howard be instructed to make it known to the authorities here that the Chinese colony is under the protection of the United States Government, and that their lives and properties must have the guaranties to which all law-abiding people are entitled; this in order to be of value should be done without any delay, as the situation is rapidly becoming worse.

AMERICAN CONSULAR AGENCY,
Cananea, undated, received October 1, 1915—10.30 p. m.

One Chinaman killed last night and another wounded. Diéguez bandits robbed local liquor establishment and were intoxicated all night; no Americans were molested since last report, but two Chinese restaurants were robbed and other Chinamen assaulted and robbed. Bandits also robbed Mexicans.

As I have heard from no one about forces arriving to protect Cananea and as each day the tension becomes more critical, and further, as I sent out a messenger to see Maytorena's forces, said to be en route to Cananea to protect town, and as messenger returned without finding such forces, I am convinced that no protection can be expected from Maytorena or Villista forces, and therefore in absence of instructions from Department I am assuming responsibility for sending following telegram to General Calles at Agua Prieta:

For a period of nine days Cananea has been without civil or military protection, and bandits have been robbing and killing people and are still in the city. Last night they killed one Chinaman and wounded another and robbed others. When the mayor and your civil forces left Cananea I thought you were abandoning the town and I looked to the forces in Santa Cruz for protection. Now, as it seems that no protection may be expected from that direction, I respectfully request you to send competent officer with men to protect foreigners from abuse at hands of bandits, as conditions are daily growing worse, and unless protection is furnished very soon I fear that more serious disorders may take place with possible disastrous complications. Please answer at once and advise me whether I may expect protection from you.

There are about 2,000 foreigners in Cananea, of whom 1,500 are Chinamen. There is strong anti-Chinese feeling in Cananea, and if general looting starts without any semblance of authority to afford protection the Torreon disaster may be repeated here. All other foreigners much excited.

today signed the Protocol of the International Opium Convention of 1912, which signature puts the convention into effect with respect to the United States of America from this day. I enclose a printed copy of the protocol in the form in which it has been signed.

The delay of a few days in carrying out your instructions has been due to my efforts to secure the signatures of China and of the Netherlands to the protocol at the same time with the signature of the United States. I am glad to say that these efforts have been entirely successful. The Minister of China and the Netherlands Minister for Foreign Affairs signed the protocol immediately after your representative. These three signatures, which are the only ones so far inscribed, represent four hundred and seventy-five million people.

From conversations which I have had with representatives of various other nations, and from the course of the debate in the Opium Conference of July, 1914, I believe that there are many other countries which will be ready soon to follow. In order to forward this end I respectfully recommend that our diplomatic representatives, and especially those in South American countries, be advised to use their best efforts to promote the early signature of this protocol by the various nations to which they are accredited. It is my opinion that in this event, when the majority of the world is united to prohibit the vicious trade in opium as an intoxicant and to regulate strictly the legitimate commerce in opium as a medicine, a considerable forward step in a matter which is for the good of mankind will have been accomplished, and it will be rendered more effective by measures to exclude from the legitimate commerce those nations which finally refuse to check the vicious trade.

PROPOSED INTEROCEANIC CANAL TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND NICARAGUA, AND PROTESTS OF SALVADOR AND COSTA RICA IN RELATION THERETO.¹

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 28, 1915.

Have recently had a very pleasant exchange of views with the Costa Rican Minister in regard to the purchase of a canal option. It seems that the friction noticeable in Costa Rica was due to a misunderstanding. When we assured Costa Rica of our willingness to make a treaty with Costa Rica similar to that with Nicaragua we had in view only the purchase of an option but it seems that Costa Rica understood that such a treaty would include the Platt Amendment. Now that they find that we had no thought of including the Platt Amendment, and no desire to do so, all misunderstandings seem to have been removed and I am conferring with the Minister here in regard to the price to be paid and the terms. They have also suggested that they might be willing to sell Cocos Island which lies some two hundred miles west from Costa Rica in the Pacific. Costa Rica finds it impossible to protect the island or to make use of it and is willing to sell. We are willing to buy the island at a reasonable price and can include it in the treaty conveying the canal option. In purchasing the canal option we cannot pay Costa Rica more than we are paying Nicaragua. The three millions which we have agreed to pay Nicaragua covers the naval base in Fonseca Bay as well as the canal route and a much larger part of the canal route is in Nicaragua than in Costa Rica. The indications here are that all misunderstandings have been removed. Do you get the same impression there?

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 28, 1915.

Misunderstanding with Costa Rica removed. When we made treaty with Nicaragua for canal option we offered to make similar treaty with Costa Rica. We had no thought of including the Platt Amendment in the Costa Rica treaty but Costa Rica quite naturally assumed that we wanted to include that amendment because at that time it was included in the tentative treaty with Nicaragua. When the Nicaragua treaty was submitted to the Senate the Platt Amendment was omitted and we are now negotiating with Costa Rica for the purchase of an option on her part of the canal route. Everything seems to be moving along very smoothly with Costa Rica now.

You know that we have agreed to an amendment to the Nicaragua treaty to the effect that nothing in the Nicaragua treaty shall be construed to impair any rights that Costa Rica may have. We are perfectly willing to broaden that amendment so as to include Salvador or any other country, although we regard the amendment as unnecessary because no treaty between us and Nicaragua could impair the rights of any country not a party to the treaty. It occurs to me that Salvador may have misunderstood our proposal when we offered to buy from her a naval base the same as from Nicaragua. While the naval base which we expect to purchase from Nicaragua will be sufficient for our purpose, still, in order to show our impartiality and our desire to treat all nations alike, we are perfectly willing to purchase a naval base from Salvador and also Honduras if they desire to sell. These treaties, of course, would not include the Platt Amendment but merely the lease of a naval base similar to the lease provided for in the Nicaragua treaty. Make it clear to the Government that we do not ask for any such treaty but are perfectly willing to negotiate it if Salvador wishes it; and the same with Honduras. Report attitude of Government and feeling of officials on the subject.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San José, February 3, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Department's telegram of January 28, which reached me the next day. * * * Before I could take the steps necessary to enable me to answer Department's inquiry—namely, if I found the Government here to be in the same state of mind regarding the proposed canal treaty as the Costa Rican Minister at Washington—La Información of February 2 published a page of comment on the subject, which I enclose, with translation. It would seem from the President's reply to La In-formación's interviewer that he is now of the same mind as when I made known to him the contents of Mr. Bryan's letter to me of July 24. Please see my letter to Mr. Bryan of August 13, in which I made a report of my conversation with the President. * * *

In view of the article from La Información (enclosure 1), I thought it best to address an informal note to the Secretary of Foreign Affairs as in the copy enclosed (enclosure 2). Upon receipt of a reply from the Secretary, I will telegraph its substance to the Department.

[From La Información, February 2, 1915.]

In order to obtain accurate information upon this topic we paid a visit yesterday to the President of the Republic, who replied to our questions in a conclusive manner that there are no negotiations pending either to sell or to lease the section of the canal route which belongs to Costa Rica, and that the only thing there has been in regard to this subject is the hint of the American Government, given through its diplomatic representative here and directed toward opening negotiations for the purchase of Costa Rica's rights. To this hint the Government replied that the Costa Rican's attitude is at present that which it has always been; namely, that of being disposed to negotiate, not for money, but on condition that Costa Rica's rights should be appraised by a friendly nation, and that, once appraised, our country should acquire in the canal works rights in proportion to its cost; that is to say, that the country should be a shareholder in the canal route.

That is what the President informed us on the subject, and his words confirm in every respect the information which we had gathered from private sources.

SIR: The Department's cablegram of January 28, relative to the Nicaraguan canal treaty, arrived on the 29th ult., in a mutilated condition. The local office of the cable company was requested to have the same repeated and the corrected copy was delivered to this Legation February 2, 1915.

Having complied with the instruction contained in the cablegram under acknowledgment, I have the honor to report that the Fonseca Bay question is probably the most delicate now engaging the attention of the President-elect, the Acting President, and the Minister for Foreign Affairs; and, even in this group, there is a tendency to leave this matter entirely with the President-elect. I feel that with this indication the Department will realize the difficulty of obtaining expressions of opinion from officials. As yet the attitude of the Government has not been communicated to me but I know that the matter is receiving serious consideration and I shall keep the Department informed as to developments.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, February 11, 1915.

The purport of Department's January 28, has been faithfully communicated to President-elect, Acting President, and to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, none of whom have manifested the slightest desire to enter into an arrangement of the nature our Government is willing to make. The internal political effect of this country's protests against the Nicaraguan canal convention and the arguments used prior to the regular presidential elections have been to consolidate public opinion against the making of any such treaty at the present time. From an unofficial but reliable source I learn that the power guiding this Government would like to see public opinion modified now so that later on a different attitude might be assumed. To this end it might be well to begin by including Salvador in the amendment to the treaty with Nicaragua as suggested in the cablegram under acknowledgment. The President and the Minister for Foreign Affairs praised our sense of equity in dealing with Costa Rica as evidenced by the proposed amendment, thus indicating it would be acceptable but without asking that it be extended to Salvador. It seems to me that if Honduras should lease to our Government a naval base in Fonseca Bay it would have a mollifying effect upon this country. Such an arrangement if concluded as soon as possible would be well worth the effort for the effect that it would have upon this Government.

On the whole I see no disposition on the part of this Government openly to withdraw from its original position unless the extension of amendment so as to include Salvador, the securing of a lease from Honduras, and the advent of a new cabinet after the inauguration of the President-elect, should work such a change upon public opinion as to make it possible for Salvador to enter into negotiations.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
San José, February 6, 1915.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND: I have the pleasure to refer to the communication which, under date of the 3d instant, your excellency addressed to me requesting that informally but frankly I should tell you what my Government thinks about the canal concession granted by Nicaragua to the United States.

I have not the slightest hesitancy in complying with your wish; on the contrary, I feel especial satisfaction in so doing, because I can thus dispel from your excellency's mind certain erroneous constructions which for some days I have been noting in the cable despatches sent by the United Press.

Costa Rica's attitude in regard to this matter cannot at the present time be other than that stated by our Minister in Washington, Mr. Joaquin Calvo, in the note which he presented to the Department of State on April 17, 1913.²

In this document, which appears in the Report published the same year by this Ministry, Mr. Calvo, in the name of my Government, presents a formal protest to the American Government against the conclusion of the Chamorro-Weitzel treaty on the ground that the said treaty had been agreed upon without one of the parties, Nicaragua, having the power so to do, and that the other, the United States, was cognizant of this incapacity.

In fact, Article 8 of the treaty celebrated between Costa Rica and Nicaragua on April 15, 1858—a treaty the validity of which was declared by President Cleveland—stipulates clearly and definitely that the Republic of Nicaragua cannot conclude any convention in regard to canalization or transit without hearing previously the opinion of Costa Rica, and that this opinion would cease to be merely consultative if such a convention should directly affect the natural rights of the latter.

The conclusion, therefore, of a treaty of this nature can not be brought about without Costa Rica saying first what it thinks in regard to the question, and as long as this indispensable requisite has not been complied with, my Government can only maintain the same attitude of protest which it adopted in 1913.

The foregoing does not mean that my Government is on principle opposed to the idea of the construction of a canal through part of its territory. No; my Government understands perfectly the responsibility toward civilization that it would contract if it prohibited the opening of a new oceanic route to the service of the world's commerce.

My Government, on the other hand, is only too well aware of the impossibility it encounters of undertaking with its own resources an enterprise of such magnitude, and consequently is entirely willing that it should be another and more powerful nation which engages in accomplishing it.

My Government also takes full account of the interest which, for the United States much more than for any other Power, the building of a new route parallel to the Panama route possesses.

Now, granted the extremely cordial relations which at all times have existed between this and the powerful American Government, the thousand reasons whereby that great nation has won our gratitude, sympathy and esteem, my Government could look only with marked pleasure upon that nation being the proprietor of the work.

My Government, therefore, would never be opposed to negotiating a canal concession with that of the United States; indeed not. Only, what my Government desires is that this negotiation should be conducted in accordance with the stipulations of valid treaties and with what the very nature of the matter imposes.

That is to say: The treaty, if one is to be concluded, must be with the concurrence of Costa Rica and Nicaragua; its conditions will have to be discussed and approved by both countries; in this way, and only in this way, would the United States be able to acquire a canal concession clear from all blot.

Such, Mr. Minister, is the point of view from which my Government regards the question. I have set it forth with the frankness your excellency desired, congratulating myself very sincerely that the informal character of this communication, suggested by your excellency, should have permitted me to show you, with all clearness and without euphemisms of any sort, what, exactly, is our way of feeling in this matter.

This opportunity affords me [etc.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San José, February 12, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's courteous note of the 6th instant in reply to mine of the 3d.

Your excellency refers to the rights and obligations of the Republic of Costa Rica in relation to the Nicaragua canal route; but in view of the message which I brought to your excellency's Government when I presented my credentials in August 1913, namely that my Government desired that the relations between the two countries should be based on mutual advantage only, I have been at a loss to understand the friction which the subject under consideration has provoked.

It seems, however, from recent conversations at Washington between the Secretary of State and the Minister of your excellency's Government there, that the friction noticeable here was due to a misunderstanding. When my Government assured Costa Rica of its willingness to make a treaty with Costa Rica similar to that with Nicaragua, it had in view only the purchase of an option; but it appears that Costa Rica understood that such a treaty would include what is known as the "Platt Amendment." I am able to assure your excellency that my Government had no thought of including the "Platt Amendment" in its proposition, and no desire to do so.

My information is that all misunderstanding has been removed at Washington and that the only question remains as to the price and the terms of the option in question.

It is also understood that your excellency's Government might be willing to sell the island of Cocos, which lies some two hundred miles west from Costa Rica in the Pacific Ocean, in view of its uselessness to the Republic of Costa Rica. My Government is willing to buy the island at a reasonable price and to include it in the treaty conveying the canal option.

I will thank your excellency if you shall find it convenient, in accordance with the informal character of this correspondence, to make known to me the views of your excellency's Government on the subjects just mentioned.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a copy and translation of the reply, dated February 19, of the Secretary for Foreign Affairs to my note of February 12. A copy of the latter and of the previous correspondence was transmitted to the Department in my dispatches No. 63 of February 3, and No. 65 of February 12.

The note now enclosed was not received in time for translation and transmission by the last mail (February 22). Meanwhile, a study of the situation, as developed so far, caused me to withhold a reply until I could hear from the Department in relation to the new phase of the question presented by the Secretary. It appears that the Costa Rican Government regards the sale of an option in perpetuity of the right to construct a canal as a fundamental objection to the proposition of our Government. It holds the sale of such an option as equivalent to entering into a contract for the non-construction of a canal, and that in territory which nature has designed for the use of the commerce of the world and of which the sovereign State of Costa Rica happens to be possessor. It offers, however, a solution of the difficulty from its standpoint in its suggestion of a "prudential term—fifty years, for instance—for the inauguration of the works, and another, proportional, for their completion."

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to Minister Hale.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
San José, February 19, 1915.

MR. MINISTER AND DEAR FRIEND: With the attention which it deserves I have considered your important letter of the 12th instant.

I note with regret that, owing no doubt to my faulty diction, I was not able to make myself understood by your excellency when in my letter of the 6th I endeavored to explain the attitude of my Government in relation to the Nicaragua canal concession.

And I say that I was not able to succeed in making myself understood because your excellency, in the letter which I am answering today, expresses the idea that the entire question has been reduced to the point of our two Governments coming to an agreement as to the amount of the indemnification which Costa Rica is to receive.

And, unfortunately, this is not the case, Mr. Minister. If the entire difficulty were reduced solely to the question of a greater or a lesser sum, I can assure your excellency that my Government would not at any moment have adopted the attitude of protest which it has assumed; it would have contented itself simply with discussing the transaction from this one point of view, endeavoring, as is natural, that it should turn out the most favorable possible to the interests of the Republic.

But the matter embraces other considerations of much greater importance than the amount of an indemnification. In the first place, it is a question of an infraction of treaties in force, of a neglect of the rights of Costa Rica which has deeply offended national feeling. The form in which the negotiation has been conducted with Nicaragua, dispensing with the concurrence of Costa Rica, has been considered by the latter as wounding, as offensive to its dignity. It is a question of form, Mr. Minister; a question which does not in the least affect essentials—of that I am fully convinced—but which, for peoples small and for that reason suspicious, is invested with unusual importance.

Through the statements in regard to the subject which President Wilson and Secretary Bryan have been pleased to make to our Minister in Washington, Mr. Brenes Mesén, and your excellency to myself, in the friendly correspondence which we are carrying on in this connection, I have come to acquire the complete, the perfect conviction that there has not been in the mind of the American Government the slightest disrespectful intention towards my country, in the matter of its concluding, without notice to us, a canal convention with the Nicaraguan Government.

It is very pleasant and agreeable for me to point out, at this timely moment, that the sentiments of good will and exquisite courtesy with which at all times the great nation has distinguished us, have in no respect diminished because of the negotiation to which I have been referring.

This very just and true impression of mine will, I hope, little by little permeate public opinion, thus causing to disappear one of the motives which to the greatest extent would have attached unpopularity to the possible convention.

The second point, which would have rendered the agreement not only difficult but impossible, relates to the Platt Amendment; but this, as your excellency makes very clear, no longer appears in the new protocol and is therefore dismissed from the discussion.

There remains, then, only the sale pure and simple which the Government of Nicaragua is making to that of the United States of the exclusive ownership of the rights necessary and proper for the construction, operation and maintenance of an interoceanic canal by way of the San Juan River and the Great Lake of Nicaragua, or by any other way within Nicaragua territory, a work which will be begun when the United States may be pleased to set a date. In addition to this sale of rights in perpetuity, Nicaragua gives to the United States an option for a period of ninety-nine years, renewable for a like period, for establishing in divers islands and parts of its territory a naval base and other works in connection with the conservation and maintenance of the canal.

The conditions under which Costa Rica would have to negotiate could not differ greatly from those stipulated with Nicaragua, and I sincerely believe there would not be found any Legislative Chamber in Costa Rica that would approve it nor any Executive Power that would venture to submit it.

The reason is obvious. As I had the honor to set forth to your excellency in my former communication, Costa Rica would celebrate with inexpressible satisfaction a convention for the construction of a canal, but not one expressly for the non-construction thereof, and the one that Nicaragua has concluded with the United States may be considered as in reality of this character.

Costa Rica could not treat on these grounds. It fully understands that this is not the most opportune moment for the United States, which has just crowned the great Panama enterprise, to endeavor to achieve another no less costly.

But it is possible to arrive at a reasonable arrangement. I do not see what fundamental objection there would be to fixing a prudential term—fifty years, for instance—for the inauguration of the works, and another, proportional, for their completion.

Costa Rica, Mr. Minister, however small and reduced in circumstances it may be, figures in the world concert as a sovereign nation and could not, without intensely wronging the legitimate interests of civilization, conclude a convention capable of being converted into an insurmountable barrier against those who tomorrow may attempt to open a new route to the world's commerce.

I ask you, Mr. Minister, to sever yourself for a moment from your high position as Representative of the American Government and place yourself in the position of an absolutely impartial individual. I am sure that your impartiality would make you appreciate the matter in the same way that a Costa Rican views it.

As your excellency can see, therefore, the question is not limited merely to a greater or lesser sum of money; no; the question is very complex, very difficult to solve in a way which would fully satisfy the desires and aspirations of both sides.

Nevertheless, I do not believe it impossible to solve; far from it. Sufficient to render it not impossible of solution are the real and effective good will which the American Government displays for its solution and the very sincere desire to the same end which animates my own Government.

With the foregoing explanations, it seems to me superfluous to state to your excellency that, taking into consideration the present status of the affair, I am not in a position to reply to the question you are pleased to ask me, as to how much would be the amount that the Government of Costa Rica would ask for its rights. This point of the question I could not treat of without having arrived at an agreement relative to the others.

Nevertheless, and with the object of gaining time, I consider that perhaps it would be opportune for your excellency to make me—still in the informal way thus far followed—a concrete offer on the subject.

It will not escape your excellency's clear judgment that a liberal offer, in which public opinion might see the way to overcome in great measure the thousand financial difficulties through which we are passing, would perforce tend to mitigate to a notable degree the open hostility which, because of its form and because of the erroneous interpretations which were at first given to it, the negotiation encountered among Costa Ricans.

Purposely, Mr. Minister, I have not wished to refer before to the intimation which your excellency had been pleased to give me in regard to Cocos Island. The reasons which have so determined me are two; first, that my Government has not as yet had time to consider the matter and, second, that I do not wish to involve the one question in the other; they are perfectly distinct and have not any real connection.

Requesting that your excellency will pardon me for having so greatly trespassed upon your courtesy with the reading of this long letter, I take pleasure in again declaring myself [etc.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 4, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: Please express to your Government the deep regret which the President and I feel at the delay which has occurred in the ratification of what is known as the Canal Treaty between this country and Nicaragua.

We have no doubt that considerably more than two-thirds of the Senate favor the ratification of the treaty, but the rules of the Senate are of such a character and the pressure of domestic legislation of the greatest importance has been such that it has really been impossible to secure a vote on the treaty. The European war has created conditions which had to be dealt with at once.

For several days the President has revolved in his mind the advisability of calling a special session of the Senate but, as you know, this Congress has been in session almost continuously since its first assembling, much longer than any former Congress; and the members of both the Senate and House are greatly fatigued. The situation was not such as to make a special session advisable.

I share the President's confidence that the treaty will be ratified when Congress again convenes, and we hope that your Government and people will understand the situation here and not become impatient.

Accept, my dear Mr. Minister, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

There pertains to me the duty of informing your excellency that the Government and the people of Nicaragua regret that the canal treaty pending between the United States and Nicaragua was not submitted for the deliberation of the Senate in its session just closed. Relying on the opinion of President Wilson and of your excellency, that the treaty may count upon more than a two-thirds vote in its favor, they have no doubt that the Senate will ratify the treaty in its next session; and it has been a satisfaction to know that the real cause of the delay has been due only to the accumulation of work in the Senate and the expedience of not calling an extra session of Congress.

For my own part I can assure your excellency that I personally feel the same confidence, founded principally upon the expressions of your excellency in your note of March 4th, last, above referred to.

took place on the 16th to the 18th of this month. The party consisted of the President of Nicaragua and Dr. J. Andrés Urtecho, his Minister of War and Navy, together with myself and Mr. Wicker, the Secretary of the Legation, and Captain P. M. Rixey and Dr. Bobbitt of the Legation Guard. * * *

The President seemed delighted with the experience, and I may add that this was not only his first visit to that region but also was the first time he had left Managua for over four years; that is, ever since he became President; and I am of the opinion that the pleasure and success of this trip and the expression of confidence and friendly feeling toward the United States of the President in thus accepting the courtesy of the American naval officers, to say nothing of the importance of a personal acquaintance by the President with the geographical location and strategical position of the bay in question, will prove of greatest benefit to the future relations between the United States and this Republic.

Although the subject has been often reported upon and with great detail to other Departments of the Government, I have also the honor to express my opinion as to the extreme advisability at this present time of the Department's making definite arrangements with the three Republics fronting upon this Bay of Fonseca with a view to establishing a United States naval base there and particularly toward precluding any other nations from securing a similar foothold in this important region.

Fonseca Bay occupies a deep indentation some thirty miles broad by eighteen deep in the otherwise almost unbroken Pacific coast line of Central America. The entrance is marked by the two volcanos of Conchagua in El Salvador and Coseguina in Nicaragua, about 18 miles apart, with the island of Meanguera, belonging to El Salvador, almost midway between. The three Republics of Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador all border upon this bay, Nicaragua being to the southeast, Honduras to the east, and El Salvador to the north and northwest. The islands in the bay are divided among these Republics respectively. To the northeast of the island of Meanguera, and also controlling the bay and its entrance, is Tigre Island, belonging to Honduras, with an elevation of 2,500 feet as compared with that of 1,200 feet for Meanguera. This latter is composed of a number of shattered volcanic craters, and is uninhabited. Tigre Island is a perfect volcanic cone, on the northern side of which is the town of Amapala, the principal port of Honduras, guarded by a fort.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, March 26, 1915.

About a week ago the President unofficially and most confidentially expressed his personal desire that a course might be adopted by us which would enable all the countries of Central America harmoniously to join the United States in some alliance, possibly an offensive and defensive one, so drawn as to concede our desires for a coaling station in some form and manner calculated to assuage those fearful lest the naval base feature of the Nicaragua canal convention should involve their autonomy.

On March 23, the President added that "when the United States fully realizes that money for a naval station in Fonseca Bay is not attractive to Salvadorans in the light of present sensitive state, I hope it will consider the adoption of other powers to obtain its ends and of other methods for compensating Salvador. Central American countries sorely need many things which your Government can supply."

Replies to my efforts to elicit a clear statement of just what Salvador desires convince me that no definite plan exists but that this country's Chief Executive hopes, if his country enters into a treaty granting a naval station, that Salvador may receive in return as many as are obtainable of the following requisites to her future development: First, to have Salvador put on a gold basis; second, to have established here an American bank of large capital; third, to have established at the station an American school free to certain male students of Central America where the English language, industrial, agricultural, economic and business courses would be taught and possibly elementary military training given; remaining desires follow by mail tomorrow.

I then asked whether he thought it would be opportune, in case my Government was disposed to invite Central American countries to a naval-station conference, to hold the same at Washington during and after the Financial Conference in May. He thought the idea excellent. * * *

It would seem that the alliance, which it is thought would result from one or more conferences, might be made to include, freely given, the naval base desired and beneficent forms of compensation far more comprehensive in their future effect upon Central American development than mere payments of money; provided other Central American Governments can be brought to think as Salvador appears to be doing now. * * * President Meléndez believes officially the initiative should remain with the United States.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, March 27, 1915.

SIR: Referring to this Legation's cablegram of March 26, I have the honor to report that * * * it is safe to say that this Government has no fixed plan as to what it will finally expect in return for joining its neighbors in granting a naval base in Fonseca Bay; but to its desires enumerated in yesterday's cablegram should be added—Fourth, to have established, and maintained until railway lines connected at least three of the five countries, regular rapid small ship communication to convey mail, passengers, and their baggage between Pacific Coast ports of Central America; fifth, to have established and maintained along the coast of Salvador modern lighthouses; sixth, to have established and maintained in Salvador wireless stations of sufficient power to communicate with Panama.

I think it is not expected that all these desires should be granted without cost to the Government; some of them would undoubtedly be expected as compensation, but after a conference and a general understanding regarding the basic points the minor ones could be dealt with satisfactorily. * * *

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 4, 1915.

Your telegram in regard to the possibility of securing from Salvador the lease of land for a naval base in return for certain advantages to be afforded in the establishment of a university there has been considered by the President and you are directed to communicate with the Foreign Office and secure from them the outline of such a proposition as would be favored by them. This Government is disposed to give favorable consideration to the plan and appreciates the high purpose which actuates the Salvadoran Government. While we are not in a position to give financial assistance as a government, we hope that American financiers, when their attention is called to the matter, will be willing to furnish the capital necessary for the bank and for the reorganization of the financial system of the country. The President is disposed favorably to consider a treaty having in view the acquiring of the site for a naval base, this Government in return to establish a college or university open and free to the young men of Salvador. Please inquire whether Salvador would have any objection to our making the same provision with Honduras in case that country desired to enter into a similar treaty. Also as to whether there would be any objection to having young men from other Latin American republics admitted to the institution. We take it for granted that Salvador would not object to others being admitted provided accommodations were sufficient. We shall be pleased to receive an outline of the plan which the Government of Salvador has in mind.

No. 393.]

BRITISH EMBASSY,
Washington, October 28, 1915.

SIR: In 1912 an agreement was concluded by His Majesty's Government and the Nicaraguan Government by which the latter formally agreed to pay to His Majesty's Government the sums of £15,800 in settlement of outstanding claims of British subjects prior to that date, also of £4,000 for claims arising out of the revolution of 1912, i. e., a total of £19,800, together with accrued interest. These claims were all for compensation on account of illegal and arbitrary treatment or damage to property.

His Majesty's Government have hitherto forbore from pressing for payment of these sums in view of the assurances frequently repeated verbally and in writing by the Nicaraguan Government to His Majesty's diplomatic and consular representatives that the amounts would be paid out of the first money receivable by the Nicaraguan Government.

It would appear that in the course of the past 12 months agreements have been entered upon between the Nicaraguan Government and American bankers providing for the disposal of part of the three million dollars to be received by Nicaragua from the United States under the Treaty of August 5, 1914, when ratified. Amongst others, the Nicaraguan Official Gazette of August 26 last (No. 194) published the text of two contracts signed in New York on July 16, 1915, between the Nicaraguan Government and the National Bank of Nicaragua and Messrs. Brown Brothers and Company and J. W. Seligman and Company which contain clauses authorizing and commissioning the United States Government to pay certain liabilities direct to the interested parties out of the three million dollars in question. The amount of liabilities so far incurred for payments out of this sum is not clear, but it is thought that it may exceed three million dollars.

In view of the priority of the British claims above mentioned recognized by a formal agreement between His Majesty's Government and the Nicaraguan Government, I have the honor, under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to enter hereby a caveat against the payment by the United States Government to the Nicaraguan Government of the three million dollars provided in the American-Nicaraguan Treaty without any provision being made for the settlement of the British claims in question.

I should add that there are other claims for goods or money supplied by British subjects to the Nicaraguan Government which were not provided for in the Anglo-Nicaraguan Agreement of 1912, as they have never been disputed by the Nicaraguan Government and for the payment of some of which assurances have also been given by the Nicaraguan Government that they would be met out of the first money received by them.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND PANAMA DEFINING THE BOUNDARY LINE OF THE PANAMA CANAL ZONE.

Signed at Panama, September 2, 1914; ratification advised by the Senate, October 22, 1914; ratified by the President, January 4, 1915; ratified by Panama, February 8, 1915; ratifications exchanged at Panama, February 11, 1915; proclaimed, February 18, 1915.

Treaty Series No. 610.]

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama defining the boundary line of the Panama Canal Zone, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at the City of Panama on the second day of September, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, the original of which Convention, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

BOUNDARY CONVENTION.

Whereas, Gen. George W. Davis, then Governor of the Canal Zone, on behalf of the United States of America, and Messrs. Tomás Arias and Ramón Valdés López, then Secretary of Foreign Affairs and Attorney General, respectively, of the Republic of Panama, acting on behalf of that Republic, entered into an agreement on the 15th day of June, 1904, by the terms of which the Republic of Panama delivered over to the United States of America, the use, occupation, and control in perpetuity of the zone of land ten miles in width described and mentioned in articles II and III of the Canal Treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama, dated November 18, 1903, and the boundary lines of said zone, as well as those of the cities of Panama and Colon and their adjacent harbors, were subsequently located upon the ground and monumented:

And, whereas, the President of the Republic of Panama, by decree number 46 of May 17, 1912, delivered over to the United States the use, occupation, and control of the areas of land to be covered by the waters of Lake Gatun and all that part of the shores of the lake up to an elevation of one hundred feet above sea level, in conformity with articles II and III of said Canal Treaty:

And whereas, since the promulgation of said decree of May 17, 1912, the United States, in conformity with the said articles of said Treaty, have taken over the use, occupation, and control of the islands in said Lake Gatun and the peninsulas bordering on said lake to which there is no access except from said lake or from lands within the jurisdiction of the Canal Zone;

Now, therefore, the Government of the United States and the Republic of Panama being desirous to establish permanently the boundary lines of the above-mentioned lands and waters so taken over by the United States, to that end have resolved to enter into the following agreement, for which purpose the President of the United States of America has commissioned His Excellency William Jennings Price, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to the Government of Panama, and the President of the Republic of Panama has commissioned His Excellency Ernesto T. Lefevre, Secretary of State in the office of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Panama, who, having exchanged their respective full powers, have entered into the following boundary convention:

I.

It is agreed that the boundary lines of the zone of land of ten miles in width described in article II of the said Canal Treaty shall remain as defined and established by the agreement of June the 15th, 1904, above mentioned, and subsequently located on the ground and monumented as shown by exhibit "A" accompanying this Convention, with the modifications hereinafter set out in respect to the cities of Panama and Colon and their adjacent harbors.

II.

In conformity with articles II and III of said Treaty the rights of the United States to the use, occupation, and control of the areas to be covered by the waters of Gatun Lake and all that part of the shores of the lake up to an elevation of one hundred feet above mean sea level, and the islands in said lake, is hereby recognized, and in like manner the right of the United States to the use, occupation, and control of the peninsulas bordering on said lake to which there is no access except over lands of the Canal Zone or from the waters of Gatun Lake, is hereby recognized.

The one hundred feet contour line above referred to, as well as the peninsulas above mentioned, shall be conveniently monumented and marked upon the ground by the United States, with the intervention of a representative or representatives of the Republic of Panama designated for that purpose, and sketched upon a special map.

III.

It is agreed that the permanent boundary line between the City of Panama and the Canal Zone shall be as follows:

Beginning at a concrete monument located above high water mark on the shore of Panama Bay, south of the Balboa Road on the slope of the headland called "Punta Mala," and north thirty-two degrees and thirty minutes west (N. 32° 30' W.) and one hundred and fifty (150) meters from about the center of an island called "Gavilan."

From the above concrete monument (marked "A" on the map)

the boundary line runs north twenty degrees and two minutes east (N. $20^{\circ} 2' E.$) six hundred and thirty-three and seven-tenths (633.7) meters to a concrete monument (marked "B" on the map) located at the intersection of the easterly line of the Zone Boundary road, and the northerly line of the road leading from Panama to Balboa; thence north thirty-six degrees and forty-two minutes east (N. $36^{\circ} 42' E.$) nine hundred and sixty-six and eighty-five hundredths (966.85) meters to a concrete monument (marked "C" on the map) on the northerly side of the road leading to Ancon Hospital grounds; thence north three degrees and nineteen minutes east (N. $3^{\circ} 19' E.$) one hundred and forty-eight and forty-six one-hundredths (148.46) meters to an iron rail property monument; thence north eight degrees and fourteen minutes, and forty seconds west (N. $8^{\circ} 14' 40'' W.$) one hundred and fifty-one and thirty-three one-hundredths meters (151.33) to a point; thence north thirty-seven degrees and forty-five minutes east (N. $37^{\circ} 45' E.$) fourteen and thirty-three one-hundredths meters to a point in the road on the present boundary line; thence along said present boundary north no degrees and forty-seven minutes west (N. $0^{\circ} 47' W.$) sixty-six and forty-four one-hundredths meters (66.44) to a point; thence north seventy-six degrees and fifty-nine minutes east (N. $76^{\circ} 59' E.$) forty-two and forty-five one-hundredths (42.45) meters to a point; thence south seventy-two degrees and eleven minutes east (S. $72^{\circ} 11' E.$) one hundred and fifty-nine and twenty-seven one-hundredths (159.27) meters to a point near Calidonia Bridge; thence north three degrees and eight minutes east (N. $3^{\circ} 8' E.$) crossing the Panama Railroad Company's tracks, seventy-seven and three-tenths (77.3) meters to a point twelve and two-tenths (12.2) meters from the center line of the main track of the said Panama Railroad; thence parallel to the said railroad in a north-westerly direction, two hundred and ninety and five-tenths (290.5) meters to a point on the present boundary line; thence north forty-nine degrees, thirteen minutes and ten seconds west (N. $49^{\circ} 13' 10'' W.$) and one hundred and sixty-five and thirty-seven one-hundredths (165.37) meters to an iron rail monument, twelve and three-tenths meters from the center of the main line track of the Panama Railroad; thence north forty-six degrees, thirty-nine minutes and thirty seconds west (N. $46^{\circ} 39' 30'' W.$) two hundred and twenty and four one-hundredths (220.04) meters to a Panama Railroad Boundary monument twenty-two and one-tenth (22.1) meters from the center line of Panama Railroad main line track; thence north forty-nine degrees and fourteen minutes west (N. $49^{\circ} 14' W.$) and parallel with the Panama Railroad track two hundred and ninety and thirty-six one-hundredths (290.36) meters to Rio Curundu; thence following the course of Rio Curundu up-stream to a point (marked "E" on the map) where the said Rio Curundu is intersected by a straight line drawn through the point of intersection on the Canal axis (marked "Cocoli" on the map) perpendicular to that part of the Canal axis of A. D. 1906 which extends in a straight line southeasterly from the said point marked "Cocoli" to the point of intersection (marked "Bay" on the map) the former point of intersection being situated between Miraflores and Corozal, and the latter point in Ancon Harbor; thence from "E" north sixty-three degrees and thirty minutes east (N. $63^{\circ} 30' E.$) two thousand and eight and six-tenths (2,008.6) meters to a concrete monument (marked "F" on the map) on the present boundary between the Canal Zone and the Republic of Panama; thence along this boundary south twenty-six degrees and thirty-four minutes east (S. 26° 34' E.) about four thousand seven hundred and forty-four and five-tenths (4,744.5) meters to monument No. 99 and thence continuing on this line to the shore of Panama Bay at low water mark; thence following the mean low water line around the shore of Panama Bay to a point on the boundary line between Panama Harbor and Ancon Harbor; thence north seventy-two degrees, fourteen minutes west (N. 72° 14' W.) to a monument "A," the point of beginning, except that the entire area of the middle island on the map called Las Tres Hermanas shall be under the jurisdiction of the United States of America.

Points "A," "B" and "C," above referred to, are the same points mentioned in the original agreement between the Government of the Republic of Panama and the Canal Zone Government, dated June 15, 1904.

All bearings in this description and on the map mentioned above are referred to true meridian and all coordinates are in accordance with the Panama-Colon Datum.

The Government of Panama agrees that the portion of the roadway now existing between the Ancon Post Office and the Tivoli Dispensary and connecting the Tivoli Road with the roads leading to Balboa and the Ancon Hospital grounds, which will fall within Panaman jurisdiction as a result of the boundary lines established in accordance with the foregoing description, will be kept open and of the same grade as same now is and will be maintained in good serviceable condition by the said Government of Panama so that it will afford a free, uninterrupted and unobstructed permanent public thoroughfare, unless in the future provided otherwise by the mutual agreement of the chief executive authorities of the Republic of Panama and the Panama Canal.

IV.

It is agreed that the harbor of the City of Panama shall include the maritime waters in front of the City of Panama lying to the north and east of a line beginning at a concrete monument set on "Punta Mala" marked "A" on the map already referred to in this Convention, and running south seventy-two degrees and fourteen minutes east (S. 72° 14' E.) through the middle island of the three islands known as "Las Tres Hermanas," but excluding the said middle island, and extending three marine miles from mean low water mark at Punta Mala; and that the harbor of Ancon shall include the waters lying south and west of said line, but including the said middle island which shall be deemed to be within the harbor of Ancon. The said middle island hereby included within the harbor of Ancon is situated about south twelve degrees, thirty minutes west (S. 12° 30' W.) eight hundred and fifty-six (856) meters from the point of Las Bovedas and lies in latitude north eight degrees, fifty-six minutes (N. 8° 56') plus one thousand and fifty-eight and eighty-eight hundredths (1,058.88) meters and longitude west seventy-nine degrees, thirty-two minutes ($W. 79^{\circ} 32'$) plus three hundred forty-two and six-tenths (342.6) meters, the datum of said latitude and longitude being what is generally known as the Panama-Colon Datum. All bearings are referred to true meridian.

The foregoing description of the City of Panama and Panama Harbor conform to the accompanying blue print marked exhibit "B."

V.

It is agreed that the permanent boundary line between the City of Colon and the Canal Zone shall be as follows:

Beginning at a point on the western shore of Boca Chica (sometimes called Folks River) marked "A" on the map, and fifty (50) meters to the eastward of the center line of the main line of track of the Panama Railroad; thence northward and northwestward, always parallel with said railroad track, and at a uniform distance of fifty (50) meters from the center line thereof to the center of Bolivar Street (sometimes called "C" street), said point being marked "B" on the map; thence northerly along the center line of said Bolivar Street, to the center line of Eleventh Street, this point of intersection being marked "C" on the map; thence westerly along the center line of Eleventh Street, a distance of one hundred sixty-two and fifty-three hundredths (162.53) meters to a cross on the sea wall along Limon Bay, said point being marked "D" on the map; thence north seventy-eight degrees, thirty minutes and thirty seconds west ($N. 78^{\circ} 30' 30'' W.$) to the shore of Limon Bay at mean low water mark; thence following the mean low water line around the shore in a northerly, easterly, southerly, and westerly direction to the point of beginning, except that at the site of the old Colon lighthouse a detour is made, as shown on the map, to exclude an area of land to be used as the site for a United States battery, which site shall be deemed to be within the Canal Zone.

The site for a United States battery above mentioned, which is to be included within the jurisdiction of the Canal Zone, is described as follows:

The initial point is a tack in a stake on Colon point, situated with reference to certain prominent points as follows: South forty-one degrees, six minutes east ($S. 41^{\circ} 6' E.$) twenty-five and twenty-two one-hundredths (25.22) feet from the southwest interior corner of the upper pavement of the swimming pool; south eleven degrees, thirty-seven minutes west ($S. 11^{\circ} 37' W.$) one hundred twenty-seven and sixty-eight one-hundredths (127.68) feet from a cross mark on a bolt set in a concrete base thirteen and nine-tenths (13.9) feet to the northeast of the center of the northeastern edge of the swimming pool; south thirty-five degrees, eighteen minutes west ($S. 35^{\circ} 18' W.$), two hundred sixty-six and seventy-five one-hundredths (266.75) feet from the northwestern corner of the Hotel Washington; and north sixty-eight degrees, twenty-nine minutes west ($N. 68^{\circ} 29' W.$), five hundred forty-three and ninety-five one-hundredths (543.95) feet from the cross mark on a rail set in a concrete base at a point where the south building line of Second Street intersects the center line of Bottle Alley; from this initial point south forty-three degrees, no minutes west ($S. 43^{\circ} 00' W.$), two hundred fifty-eight and five-tenths (258.5) feet to a point; thence north forty-seven degrees, no minutes west (N. $47^{\circ} 00'$ W.) ninety and sixty-four one-hundredths (90.64) feet to a point; thence by a curve to the right with a radius of fifty-six and eighty-six one-hundredths (56.86) feet and a central angle of forty-five degrees, no minutes ($45^{\circ} 00'$), forty-four and sixty-six one hundredths (44.66) feet to a point; thence by a curve to the right with a radius of ninety-one (91) feet and a central angle of forty-five degrees, no minutes ($45^{\circ} 00'$), seventy-one and forty-seven one-hundredths (71.47) feet to a point; thence north forty-three degrees, no minutes east (N. $43^{\circ} 00'$ E.), one hundred seventy-seven and five-tenths (177.5) feet to a point; thence south forty-seven degrees, no minutes east (S. $47^{\circ} 00'$ E.), one hundred fifty-seven and five-tenths (157.5) feet to the point of beginning, containing ninety-one one-hundredths (0.91) acres, more or less. All bearings are referred to true meridian (Panama-Colon Datum).

VI.

The harbor of Colon shall consist of those maritime waters lying to the westward of the City of Colon and bounded as follows:

The southerly boundary of the harbor of Colon is in a line running north seventy-eight degrees, thirty minutes and thirty seconds west (N. $78^{\circ} 30' 30''$ W.), which begins at a cross cut in the concrete sea wall on the easterly side of Limon Bay and on the center line of Eleventh Street, Colon, produced westerly. This point is marked "D" on the map designated exhibit "C." Beginning at mean low water mark on Limon Bay on the above described line the boundary runs northwesterly along said line to a point in Limon Bay marked "E" on the map, and located three hundred and thirty (330) meters east of the center line of the Panama Canal; thence turning to the right and running in a northerly direction the line runs parallel with the above mentioned center line and at a distance of three hundred and thirty (330) meters easterly therefrom until it meets an imaginary straight line drawn through the lighthouse on Toro Point having a bearing of south seventy-eight degrees and thirty minutes and thirty seconds east (S. $78^{\circ} 30' 30''$ E.), this intersection point being marked "F" on the map; thence turning to the right and running along the above-mentioned line south seventy-eight degrees, thirty minutes and thirty seconds east (S. $78^{\circ} 30' 30''$ E.) to a point on the boundary of the above-mentioned site for the United States battery; thence turning to the right and running along the said boundary line of said site to the mean low water line of Limon Bay; thence turning to the right and running along said water line in a generally southerly direction to the point of beginning at the foot of Eleventh Street.

All bearings in this description and on the plan mentioned above are referred to true meridian (Panama-Colon Datum).

The foregoing description of the City of Colon and Colon Harbor conform to the accompanying blue print marked exhibit "C."

VII.

It is agreed that the Republic of Panama shall have an easement over and through the waters of the Canal Zone in and about Limon and Manzanillo bays to the end that vessels trading with the City of Colon may have access to and exit from the harbor of Colon, subject to the police laws and quarantine and sanitary rules and regulations of the United States and of the Canal Zone established for said waters.

The United States also agrees that small vessels may land at the east wall which extends along the shore to the south of the foot of Ninth Street and recently constructed by the Panama Railroad Company in the harbor of Colon free of any wharfage or landing charges that might otherwise accrue to the said company under the terms of its concessions from the Government of Colombia; and the United States further agrees that it will construct and maintain a landing pier in a small cove on the southerly side of Manzanillo Island in the northwesterly portion of the arm of the sea known as Boca Chica (sometimes called Folks River), to be used as a shelter harbor for small coasting boats of the Republic of Panama, without any wharfage or other landing charges.

VIII.

Inasmuch as the highway known as the "Sabanas Road" will come entirely within the bounds of the City of Panama under this agreement the authorities of the Canal Zone are hereby relieved of the duty to repair and maintain such road, or any part of it, and the same shall be done henceforth by the authorities of the Republic at their cost and expense.

IX.

It is agreed that the Republic of Panama will not construct nor allow the construction of any railway across the Sabanas or other territory hereby transferred to that Republic without a mutually satisfactory agreement having been previously arrived at between the two governments; and this shall be without prejudice to any right the United States may have to object to such railway projection under any of the provisions of the Canal Treaty of November 18, 1903.

X.

The contracting parties hereby agree that this Convention shall not diminish, exhaust, or alter any rights acquired by them heretofore in conformity with the Canal Treaty of November 18, 1903; and it is further expressly agreed that the United States, in the exercise of the rights granted to it under articles II and III of the said Canal Treaty and subject to article VI of said Treaty, may enter upon and use, occupy, and control the whole or any portion of the Sabanas land, or other territory hereby transferred to the Republic of Panama, as the same may be necessary, or convenient, for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, or protection of the Canal or of any auxiliary canals, or other works necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, or protection of said enterprise.

XI.

This agreement shall not be construed to modify the rights of the authorities of the Canal Zone to employ citizens of the Republic of Panama residing in the territory of the Republic as provided in section V of the above-mentioned agreement of June 15, 1904, and for which purpose the Government of the Republic granted the permission required by paragraph 2 of article 7 of the Panamanian Constitution.

XII.

The civil and criminal cases pending in the courts of the Canal Zone and the Republic of Panama at the time of the execution of this Convention shall not be affected hereby but the same shall be proceeded with to final judgment and disposed of in the courts where they are now pending as though this agreement had not been entered into.

XIII.

The exhibits accompanying this agreement are signed by the representatives of the respective governments for identification. This Convention, when signed by the plenipotentiaries of the high contracting parties, will be ratified by the two governments in conformity with their respective constitutional laws, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Panama at the earliest date possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention in duplicate and have hereunto affixed their respective seals.

MR. MINISTER: AS I had the honor to express to your excellency in days past, my Government was surprised at the news that the Government of Panama, making light of the unappealable judgment handed down by the Chief Justice of the United States in the boundary litigation between Costa Rica and its neighbor on the south, had arranged to locate various administrative authorities in places which, since the promulgation of the Loubet Award, undoubtedly belong to Costa Rica, as the parties solemnly recognized when they signed the Anderson-Porras Convention of March 17, 1910; which recognition was amply corroborated by the Executive Power of Panama in the Resolution (Document A), a copy of which I have the honor to transmit to you hereto annexed.

In view of this proceeding, my Government was arranging to take the necessary measures of repulsion, when the generous offer came which your excellency was adopted to make of mediating amicably in order that no attitude should be adopted which might break off the good relations existing between the two nations.

My Government gladly accepted the proposition, made as it was by the representative of the greatest nation on earth not only in its extent and power but also because of the perfect devotion with which in every epoch it has revered justice.

The matter, therefore, could not remain in better hands, especially as it was a question of a difference arising out of the promulgation of an award rendered by no less a personage than the Chief Justice of the United States, an award which, because of the undeniable equity which inspires it and coming from whom it comes, it is not logical to suppose does not merit all respect on the part of the Minister who so brilliantly represents among us the powerful Government of the United States.

But as the manifold occupations which daily claim the attention of your excellency and of your very illustrious Government have so far impeded the taking of the steps necessary for causing the anomalous state of affairs provoked by the Government of Panama to cease, I have considered it fitting to take some action directly on my own part, and to that end is designed the note, a copy of which your excellency will please find annexed (Document B).

It seems to me superfluous to state to your excellency that it has not entered my mind, even for a moment, to lay aside the invaluable mediation of your excellency; far from that, my Government trusts that your excellency will be pleased to continue using your good offices, certain as it is that they will contribute powerfully toward the disappearance of the difficulties which have arisen against the carrying out of the judgment handed down by Chief Justice White.

Executive Resolution No. 96.

No. 96.]

MINISTRY OF FOMENTO,
Panama, November 23, 1912.

The executive administration which expired September 30, 1912, made various contracts for the establishment of agricultural colonies, and among them is one signed on August 12, in which there appears as concessionary, Mr. José Antonio Lara von Chamier, a Costa Rican citizen.

According to the terms of that concession Mr. Lara has the right to acquire possession, for the purposes of the contract, of a tract of 5,000 hectares of waste land, situated thus: on the north, the River Coto and waste lands; on the south, Punta Burica; on the east, waste lands; and on the west, the sea coast. The Nation binds itself to reserve for adjudication an equal lot of land which shall be given to the concessionary when the obligations which he contracts shall have been fulfilled.

This contract was submitted by the Executive Power to the National Assembly together with the other similar contracts which refer to agricultural colonies; but, it being now observed that the lands included in the concession granted to Mr. Lara lie outside the frontier line established in the Loubet Award and accepted, as regards the Pacific region, by the boundary convention agreed to in Washington between Panama and Costa Rica on March 17, 1910, it is clear that the Government, perhaps through inadvertence, fell into error in making the said contract.

The Republic, by means of its Foreign Office and its diplomatic representatives has maintained the principle that in territories over which a boundary dispute with a friendly nation is pending, rights of dominion, which emanate only from sovereignty, must not be granted by either of the parties, since it is evident that while litigation is pending sovereignty is in suspense, together with the powers inherent in it.

The Government of the Republic has adhered strictly to that principle, and in the present case it is imperative that it be observed, since by the boundary convention Panama has accepted as clear and undoubted the frontier line from Punta Burica to a point in the Central Cordillera above Cerro Pando, and this acceptance precludes the possibility of the decision of the arbitrator awarding to it the zone where the concession granted to Mr. Lara is situated.

The said contract, on the other hand, involves a contravention of national public law, since from the date on which the Porras-Anderson Convention was approved by the National Assembly there was implicitly accepted by the nation as a legal mandate the duty, which until then it had voluntarily fulfilled, of not giving concessions of dominion over any part of the lands in dispute.

For that reason the contract made with Mr. Lara should be considered as non-existent, and the National Assembly could in no case give its approval, since by doing so it would exercise an act of sovereignty contrary to a solemn pact approved by itself.

Consequently it is resolved: That the contract made by this Department with Mr. José Antonio Lara von Chamier, on August 19, 1912, with reference to the granting of a tract of land for the establishment of agricultural colonies, be declared of no effect.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
San José, January 14, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: Some two months ago there came to the knowledge of my Government news so grave in its nature that at the outset it was impossible to give credit to it. But later and repeated investigations obliged us to accept, with profound and well-justified surprise, the truth of the report.

This consists in the act, committed by the Government whose Chancellery your excellency so worthily conducts, of placing various administrative authorities at points situated north of Punta Burica.

This zone, as your excellency well knows, was definitely adjudged to Costa Rica since the promulgation of the award rendered by the President of the French Republic on September 11, 1900. Its adjudication was ratified by the Anderson-Porrás Convention March 17, 1910, and considered as absolutely foreign to the jurisdiction of Panama, among other things, by Resolution No. 96 of November 23, 1912, dictated by President Porrás and countersigned by his Minister of Fomento.

With your excellency's leave, I here transcribe some of the paragraphs contained in the afore-cited resolution, convinced as I am that they will controvert in a much abler manner than I am able to do the measure to which I am referring.

This contract was submitted by the Executive Power to the National Assembly together with the other similar contracts which refer to agricultural colonies; but, it being now observed that the lands included in the concession granted to Mr. Lara lie outside the frontier line established in the Loubet Award and accepted, as regards the Pacific region, by the boundary convention agreed to in Washington between Panama and Costa Rica on March 17, 1910, it is clear that the Government, perhaps through inadvertence, fell into error in making the said contract.

The Republic, by means of its Foreign Office and its diplomatic representatives has maintained the principle that in those territories over which boundary litigation with a friendly country is pending, rights of domain, which emanate only from sovereignty, must not be granted by either of the parties, since it is evident that while litigation is pending sovereignty is in suspense, together with the powers inherent in it.

The Government of the Republic has adhered strictly to that principle, and in the present case it is imperative that it be observed, since by the boundary convention Panama has accepted as clear and undoubted the frontier line from Punta Burica to a point in the Central Cordillera above the Cerro Pando, and this acceptance precludes the possibility of the decision of the arbitrator awarding to it the zone where the concession granted to Mr. Lara is situated.

The said contract, on the other hand, involves a contravention of national public law, since from the date on which the Porrás-Anderson Convention was approved by the National Assembly there was implicitly accepted by the nation as a legal mandate the duty, which until then it had voluntarily fulfilled, of not giving concessions of dominion over any part of the lands in dispute.

For that reason the contract made with Mr. Lara should be considered as non-existent, and the National Assembly could in no case give its approval, since by doing so it would exercise an act of sovereignty contrary to a solemn pact approved by itself.

After the above transcription I believe nothing can be said that more openly impugns the proceeding of the Government of Panama in exercising an act of sovereignty contrary to a solemn pact agreed to by it, thus contravening national public law and using powers of sovereignty in a zone in which the possibility has been excluded of its ever being adjudged to Panama.

The circumstance that so far the material delimitation of our frontiers has not been accomplished in no way changes the nature of the question. The Government of Panama, after the ratification of the Anderson-Porrás Convention, ceased to exercise the precarious jurisdiction which by virtue of the status quo it had for a time north of Punta Burica. From the reading of the Resolution of November 23, 1912, I believe that your excellency will entertain no doubt in that respect.

Furthermore, even admitting by way of pure conjecture such an assertion to be not strictly correct, the action of the Government of Panama would still be indefensible; it would then have violated the status quo by performing acts without precedent, acts which would necessarily have changed the nature of existing things, and which consequently it was inhibited from doing.

For the reasons set forth, and appreciating at its full value the declaration made by your excellency in the important communication which under date of October 17 last you were pleased to address to me,³ that "the desire and invariable purpose of Panama is not to seek for the solution of its international questions any other means than those indicated by law," in the name of my Government I present a formal protest before the Government of your excellency against the appointing of various authorities north of Punta Burica.

I trust that the noble and lofty sentiments of confraternity and justice of which at all times your Government has given striking proofs will impel it to proceed now in accordance with its traditional equity, revoking the appointments which I have mentioned.

I do not wish to close without stating to your excellency in the most solemn manner that the sentiments of high appreciation and cordial and sincere friendship which have always prevailed among the people and Government of Costa Rica for the people and Government of Panama have not diminished in the least with the arising of this incident, and that, sharing the opinion of your excellency, it is their most earnest desire not to use for the solution of their international questions any means other than those indicated by law.

The Minister of Costa Rica to the Secretary of State.

LEGATION OF COSTA RICA,
Washington, March 9, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY: On a previous occasion [November 7, 1914] I had the honor to deliver to your excellency a copy of the award of the Chief Justice of the United States rendered in the boundary dispute in which the Republic of Costa Rica and Panama were engaged, and expressly said on that occasion that I had explicit instructions from my Government to inform you that Costa Rica had accepted the award in its entirety, under the obligation assumed on signing the Arbitration Treaty of March 17, 1910.

I now have the honor to lay before your excellency the reasons which the Government of Costa Rica believes should actuate the Secretary of State to interpose his good offices with the Government of Panama, with the high purpose of bringing about the earliest possible execution of the award of the Chief Justice of the United States so that that treaty of arbitration may be faithfully adhered to, out of the respect it would imply—especially in our days so sorely tried by manifestations of force—for the loftiest principles of civilization. Those reasons are as follows:

First. The magnitude of the interests of the United States in the Canal Zone impelled that nation to conclude with the newly-born Republic of Panama a convention under which the United States, in the first clause thereof, pledges itself to guarantee and maintain the independence of Panama. Consideration of this duty of the United States was borne in mind by the Department of State when it used its good offices with the Government of Panama to induce it to enter into negotiations with the neighbor Republic of Costa Rica for the demarcation of the boundary between the two countries. For three years the Department of State labored with the Government of Panama for its assent to a definitive treaty and just as Panama was believed to be quite ready to carry it into effect the Minister of Foreign Relations gave notice to the Department of State of his intention to conduct direct negotiations with the Government of Costa Rica at the capital of that nation. Plain was the discontent of the Department of State, which found it advisable to send to its Legation at Panama the important note of January 23, 1909, with instructions to deliver a copy to the Minister of Foreign Relations, for the proper safeguard of American interests in the border zone in dispute. In it Mr. Root, then Secretary of State, says:⁴

For three years and more this Government has repeatedly and urgently shown its earnest desire and expectation that the conflicting claims of Panama and Costa Rica in regard to their common boundary should be set at rest. The interest of the United States in seeing the dispute settled has been continuously manifested and the grounds of our interest clearly set forth. At the time of Panama independence there were important American interests on the border, upon the Sixaola River, to which rival American citizens were claimants.

The determination of their conflicting claims was and still is dependent upon the issue of the question of sovereign title to the territory and sovereign jurisdiction over controversies arising therein. The situation thus arising has been from the outset most embarrassing and vexatious to the United States and this embarrassment and vexation must continue so long as the determination of sovereign title is in suspense.

This Government welcomed with gratification the institution of negotiations between Panama and Costa Rica looking to a final fixation of their common boundary. It put forward every friendly effort toward the ratification of the treaty signed by them March 7, 1905. The consummation of that treaty was indefinitely deferred because of the amendment introduced in the Panama Act of ratification. Again our efforts were put forth to effect a renewal of negotiations on conventional lines. Thereupon, Costa Rica proposed arbitration. The United States supported this proposal as having become apparently the only manner of bringing about the settlement of a controversy the continuance of which bore so heavily on American interests. The acceptance of the arbitration in principle by Panama on December 24 last was hailed by us with a feeling of relief, as a hopeful augury of a speedy disposition of the question. The communication now made to you by Señor Fernandez holds the Panaman acceptance in abeyance by contingently deferring the resort to arbitration to await the uncertain outcome of a proposal to reopen direct negotiations for adjustment of the dispute by mutual agreement. This step is disappointing, because tending to excite our apprehension that this fresh resort to direct negotiations may prove as ineffectual as previous efforts in that direction, and may turn out to have merely dilatory results so far as a final settlement is concerned, and that an agreement may be found as remote as at the beginning of the dispute.

All this constrains the Government of the United States to the conclusion that the conditions existing for years and still existing are such that they force the United States in justice to its own citizens to treat the de facto line as the line to the north of which Costa Rica has jurisdiction and to the south of which Panaman jurisdiction is recognized. In other words to hold that, inasmuch as the territory northward of the de facto line is left by Panama within the actual jurisdiction and control of Costa Rica, Panama is estopped by her own act from objecting to the United States treating it as Costa Rican territory and looking to Costa Rica to remedy the annoying and embarrassing situation caused to this Government and to its citizens by the absence of responsible jurisdiction in that quarter.

Second. On February 16, 1909, the Secretary of State, Mr. Robert Bacon, wrote to the Minister of Costa Rica to notify him that thenceforward, whether the adjustment of the controversy were delayed or no adjustment made in the near future, the Government of the United States, in justice to its own citizens, would be constrained to treat the de facto line as the line to the north of which Costa Rica has jurisdiction and to the south of which Panaman jurisdiction is recognized.⁵ And both that note and Mr. Root's previous note induced Panama to accept arbitration after the direct negotiations instituted at the capital of Costa Rica had failed as foreseen by the Department of State.

Arbitration was brought about, therefore, through the cordial and frank mediation of the United States.

Third. The fresh negotiations resumed in Washington through the ever disinterested and friendly offices of the Department of State had made good progress when it occurred to the Plenipotentiary of Panama that he was not sufficiently empowered to sign one of the stipulations contained in the treaty, which caused delay and even put into question the outcome of the whole negotiation. Mr. Knox, Secretary of State, carrying on with the same zeal as had been shown by his predecessor, Mr. Root, the work of defending American interests and of acting as friendly mediator between the two adjoining countries, in a telegram of March 12, 1910, in which the Government of Panama's attention was called to the difficulty under which its Plenipotentiary labored, asked that he be vested with the full powers that would enable him to attach his signature to the convention concluded on that date, as otherwise the United States would have to recognize as the boundary line between the two contending countries the status quo line or de facto line as described by Mr. Root in his note of January 13 [23] above quoted. Panama, yielding to the State Department's solicitation, conferred the required authority on its Plenipotentiary and the convention was signed on March 17, 1910, in the city of Washington.

⁵ Id. 782-783.

The Treaty was signed, therefore, through the effectual mediation of the Secretary of State of the United States.

Fourth. Not only was it in Costa Rica's mind to dispose for all time of its long standing boundary dispute in signing the treaty, but it was also the Department of State's most cordial and earnest intention. Hence when Article VII of the treaty expresses the will that the award of the Chief Justice, whatever it may be, shall be regarded as a perfect treaty binding upon both contracting parties, if we are to judge from the significant note of Mr. Root and the telegram of Mr. Knox above cited, it also expresses the unmistakable will of the Department of State, because the national interests so prompted.

Fifth. The award of the Chief Justice of the United States reveals a most painstaking study of the question in its most diverse aspects and the final decision can hardly be said to confirm the possession which had previously been recognized for merely practical purposes by the Government of the United States through its Secretary of State, Mr. Root, in consideration of the jurisdiction Costa Rica had already exercised for a long time over that territory.

Sixth. It follows that the line fixed by the award has not given Costa Rica any territory over which she had not exercised continuous lawful jurisdiction since the Republic was born, and if there were today any power of law on earth that could annul the validity of the award, Panama would find herself compelled to accept as the final boundary line in the region of the Atlantic, which has been the sole object of the dispute, the de facto or status quo line recognized first by Colombia, then by Panama and finally by the United States in the above-mentioned notes of Mr. Root and Mr. Bacon. If then the White Award does not grant to Costa Rica any territory over which she had not exercised complete sovereignty, one would naturally think that when Panama without any substantial ground rejected that award she did so not in pursuit of justice but in view of domestic politics. There is therefore no reason whatever for holding in suspense the dispute that has cost both contending countries as well as the mediating Government so many exertions.

And lastly, all the peace treaties recently concluded by the United States contain the important provision for resort to arbitration, and I believe that to support the arbitral award of the Chief Justice of the United States is to add an even greater moral value to those treaties, because the world at large will take Panama's rejection of the award to mean that the Government of the United States, which by treaty guarantees and maintains the independence of that Republic, did not bring upon it the influence of its brotherly good offices, and the nations will regard the United States and Panama as linked together in this portentous nonexecution of the award of the Chief Justice of those same United States.

Therefore I come to your excellency to request that you may be pleased to use with the Government of Panama those good offices which you have never stinted since the controversy began, in order that acceptance of the award of the Chief Justice in pursuance of the Anderson-Porrás Treaty of March 17, 1910, may remove forever the only subject of contention Costa Rica and Panama have had at any time. It may be expedient to represent to Panama that there is honor in yielding to the execution of a sentence pronounced by a high arbitral tribunal, for should Panama refuse to accept it, no real territorial advantage would accrue to her in the region of the Atlantic, which has been the sole object of the litigation which Costa Rica continues to regard as definitively and satisfactorily settled by the wise award of the Chief Justice of the United States; to represent to Panama, further, that from every point of view it is more honorable to abide by the decision of a judge above suspicion, and nobler to adjust herself to a form of law framed by a learned judge in one of the highest expressions of contemporary civilization, a form of the law of international arbitration.

Not doubting for an instant that in using its good offices with the Government of Panama your excellency's Government, in evidence of its sincere friendship equally for Costa Rica and Panama, will advise the latter to take that more honorable and noble stand, it affords me great pleasure to renew [etc.]

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to transmit to your excellency a copy of the communication which the Chancellery of Panama sent me under date of January 30 last, and a copy of the communication which, in reply, I sent back under date of March 1.

So clear and patent is the right on the side of Costa Rica in this affair, that I entertain all confidence that the Government of Panama must retrace its steps, adopting an attitude other than that which so far it has been maintaining.

Should the contrary be the case, I hope your excellency's fairness of mind will find justified the measures which, possibly, Costa Rica may see itself compelled to take.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Panama, January 30, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note No. 4, A., dated the 14th instant, the contents of which have caused me profound sorrow.

The Government of Costa Rica, in the first place, expresses surprise at the repeated news which it says it has received of the establishment of various administrative authorities at points north of Punta Burica. Your excellency will kindly permit me to state to you that you have been misinformed. Various administrative authorities have not been placed north of Punta Burica. Those authorities have always been in existence, and that which has been done is to renew them, as is done periodically with all the other authorities of the Republic.

Neither can this Chancellery agree to your excellency's asseveration that that zone was definitely adjudged to Costa Rica since the promulgation of the award of the President of the French Republic on September 11, 1900, ratified by the Porras-Anderson Convention, and considered as foreign to the jurisdiction of Panama by my Government's resolution No. 96, of November 23, 1912. The zone in reference, to the north of Punta Burica, was definitely adjudged to Costa Rica by the Loubet Award, as was the entire zone of the Sixaola Valley, on the Atlantic slope, between the Cordillera Central and the counter-range of the Cordillera; but, as Costa Rica did not accept the award referred to, notwithstanding the promise agreed upon in the treaty that gave rise to the same, and compelled Panama to accept a new arbitration, the result was that the zone on the slope of the Atlantic side, which includes all the Sixaola valley, does not belong to Panama; nor does the zone on the Pacific slope to which your excellency refers, to the north of Punta Burica, belong to Costa Rica.

The Porras-Anderson Convention was not a boundary convention nor a convention for territorial compensations, nor for cession of territory, but simply one of arbitration, precisely for the purpose of submitting to an arbitrator the boundary question, as follows: "What is the boundary between Panama and Costa Rica under and most in accordance with the correct interpretation and true intention of the award of the President of the French Republic made the 11th of September, 1900?"

In that convention, among other considerations, was expressed the consideration that "the boundary between their respective territories designated by the arbitral award of his excellency the President of the French Republic the 11th of September, 1900, is clear and indisputable in the region of the Pacific from Punta Burica to a point beyond Cerro Pando on the Central Cordillera"; but as Panama has not accepted, and will never accept, the judgment rendered in accordance with that convention, wherein that consideration was expressed, because it believes it null and void (in which it does nothing else, at most, than follow the example of Costa Rica, which did not accept President Loubet's former judgment, which adjudged the entire Sixaola valley clearly and unquestionably to Panama), it is evident that the aforesaid Porras-Anderson arbitral convention is of no value and of no effect and it is futile on the part of Costa Rica to refer thereto for the foundation of any claim.

So that, not having accepted Chief Justice White's decision, Panama has established itself in the same point of law which Costa Rica occupied when it rejected the Loubet decision, bringing matters back to the same status they held before the said decision, that is, to the line of the status quo.

The quotation of a resolution decreed by the President, Dr. Belisario Porras, and countersigned by the Secretary of Fomento, Mr. R. F. Acevedo, has, in the opinion of this Chancellery, no value in the matter. In it the President of Panama upholds the same principles of international law which he upheld in Costa Rica as Minister, by note of August 14, 1909, principles violated by Costa Rica when, because of not having accepted the Loubet Award granting to Panama the Sixaola valley, including the right and the left bank of that river, it resorted to the status quo, and, notwithstanding that the sovereignty and the sovereign faculties of both countries was in suspense in all the territory in dispute, sold considerable lots of land on the left bank of said river, in spite of the protests of the then Minister of Panama in Costa Rica.

In the presence of the above-mentioned quotation of the resolution in question, I think it to the point to recall to your excellency the answers of his excellency the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Costa Rica at the time of those protests, and it will be demonstrated that if Panama has acted consistently with the principles of international law on this point of the sale of land in a disputed frontier zone, Costa Rica has not done as much, for it seeks to apply to Panama what it did not apply to itself as regards dominion and jurisdiction in that zone.

Here is what the Minister of Panama stated to your excellency's Government on the date indicated:

My Government has instructed me not to accept that status quo; but, granting it valid and effective, the character that Costa Rica possesses in that territory (the left border of the Sixaola between the counter-range of the Cordillera and the left bank of that river) is that of a de facto sovereign in contrast with the de jure sovereignty which Panama possesses (because of the arbitral decision). This means that the character of Costa Rica is that of a mere holder and usufructuary of a territory until the award is put into effect; and the character of Panama is that of a non-occupying proprietor, a true owner thereof. As holder, Costa Rica has the essential duty of preserving the property, of not destroying it nor giving it up to any one, but of delivering it to the successor without committing any act which may impair the rights of the de jure sovereign, that is to say, the owner. Only the latter has the power to sell, cede, or transfer. Dominion includes among other rights, that of transformation and alienation, and such right of transformation and alienation includes in turn the power of the owner of a thing to modify it in whole or part, and to alienate or transmit to another the whole or part of his property, because such rights are inherent only in ownership and not in simple occupancy or mere possession.

So that, since in the resolution which your excellency quotes, the President declared that "in territories over which a boundary dispute with a friendly nation is pending, rights of dominion, which emanate only from sovereignty, must not be granted by either of the parties, since it is evident that while litigation is pending sovereignty is in suspense, together with the powers inherent in it," it is clear that the President thought the same as the Minister, and there is continuity and concordance of doctrine in both, and in the nation which the President represented in the first case and which he represents today in another and higher capacity.

With what great surprise, then, have I seen your excellency make the quotation in question for the purpose of basing a right thereon, since the fact is that when Minister Porras protested against the concessions and grants of lands Costa Rica was making on the left border of the Sixaola River, Costa Rica adopted contrary doctrines, like those it has since maintained, when it complained of the grants of land in Burica to which the resolution gave rise.

I, in my turn, am going to lay before your excellency the quotation of the doctrines of Costa Rica on this point of law. To Minister Porras' note of August 14, 1909, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Costa Rica replied as follows:

The question so stated by your excellency was debated at length between our Government and that of the United States of America in 1906, in the matter of the claim of H. L. McConnell, of which your excellency has cognizance. The Washington Government supported at that time the same theory as your excellency's with similar arguments. So that I cannot give a better reply to your excellency's objections than that which Costa Rica transmitted to the United States upon the occasion referred to.

When on November 23, 1912, the President of Panama promulgated the resolution which your excellency quotes, Costa Rica was complaining of the grant of land to Mr. Lara von Chamier which had been made in the zone to the north of Punta Burica, founded, among other considerations, upon the same doctrine that Panama had supported and Costa Rica assailed.

Upon careful study of that resolution, arguments cannot be derived therefrom to support the view that Panama has not the power to maintain authorities in the region to the north of Punta Burica, where it has always maintained them because it considers that territory its own by virtue of the frontier status quo and until it is definitely decided and established that that zone does not belong to it. By that resolution what was established was that which had already been accepted "implicitly by the nation as a legal precept—the duty which up to then it had been voluntarily fulfilling of not making concessions of dominion over any part of the territories in dispute."

Why has Panama maintained, and why does Panama maintain authorities in the zone north of Punta Burica? For the same reason that Costa Rica has maintained and maintains them on the left bank of the Sixaola although the Loubet Award adjudged that valley to Panama.

The matter has been decided by the Government of Costa Rica itself. Your excellency knows very well that in 1909, in a note of May 29, Panama made claim on Costa Rica through its Minister in San José, against the establishment on the left bank of the Sixaola of an Inspección de Hacienda and a Comandancia de Armas, considering that "that territory had been adjudged to Panama by virtue of a decision expressly sought by both nations and in the execution or fulfillment of which both also engaged their honor."

The Government of Costa Rica through one of the predecessors of your excellency replied (note of July 5, 1909) saying that "it has not the least doubt about the full right with which in this matter it exercised jurisdiction in the territories situated to the north of the de facto line, always respected by Costa Rica and Colombia as the dividing line between the two Republics since the boundary dispute between them was begun."

In a note of August 13, 1909, the Secretary of Foreign Relations of Costa Rica reinforced the opinion reproduced above with these others:

Notwithstanding the profound respect which every opinion of your excellency merits, I find myself obliged to state to you that the opinions cited here caused my Government profound surprise. Indeed, both prior to the Loubet Award and after it, Costa Rica has been in full possession of the territory of Gandocan and has exercised command over it in the same manner that Panama has done in Punta Burica. It is true that the execution of the award brought as a consequence the entering by Costa Rica into possession of Punta Burica and by Panama into possession of Gandocan; but it is also true that the award has not been executed and that while it is not executed each country maintains possession of and commands the territory which it has been in possession of and which by virtue of the Loubet Award has been adjudged to the other.

After the Loubet Award, Panama through a sentiment of fraternity agreed to submit to a new arbitration and signed a convention to that end; but the award having been pronounced by the new Arbitrator, Panama has formally declared that she does not accept it because she considers it null, and consequently matters return to the state in which they were before when Costa Rica did not accept the Loubet Award; that is, to the provisional frontier line, or the so-called status quo. That line, to refer only to documents of Costa Rica, is the same that was laid down by Secretary Fernandez Guardia in the said note of August 13, 1909, thus:

The frontier of the status quo * * * starts from the Golfito River, a small tributary of Golfo Dulce; follows from there the hills of Las Cruces, between the valley of the Coto de Terraba River and the Chiriquí Viejo River to the crest of the great Cordillera; and descends the north slope by the Yorquin [Zhorquin] and Sixaola Rivers.

So that, the White Award not having been accepted, Panama continued to maintain the possession and command of the territory which she has possessed, starting from the Golfito River and all along this river to Las Cruces, and then to the crest of the great Cordillera, along the whole extension of that line to the east—which is the line of the status quo which Costa Rica so stoutly defended when she did not accept the Loubet Award, in order to justify herself, not for maintaining authorities but for establishing them for the first time on the left bank of the Sixaola, where she had never before had them.

Although Panama, in accordance with her own ideas of international law, did not believe that she ought to grant lands in the disputed region, she did believe that she ought to have authorities in it, and she always maintained them and will keep them there until it is determined by good will or by indisputable right, without reserve or protest, that that region does not belong to her any longer.

For the reasons set forth, and appreciating at its full value the declarations of Costa Rica in authentic and incontestable documents and taking into account the truth of the facts, the Government of Panama expresses to that of Costa Rica the pain caused her by the protest which the latter has made and to which this communication is a reply.

At the same time she hopes that your excellency's Government, inspired by noble and lofty sentiments of confraternity and justice so appropriate between neighboring peoples, brothers by race, by religion, by language, history and traditions, will respect the right which Panama has in maintaining authorities in the zone to the north of Punta Burica along the whole eastward extension of the line of the status quo.

I cannot close without stating to your excellency that I appreciate at their full value the expressions of cordiality and sympathy which you are pleased to transmit in the name of the people and the Government of Costa Rica, nor without assuring you in turn that this incident has not lessened in the least the sentiments of sincere friendship which the people and Government of Panama cherish toward them.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs of Costa Rica to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Panama.

No. 12, A.]

FOREIGN OFFICE,
San José, March 1, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: I have been honored with the receipt of the note of January 30 last, which your excellency sent me in reply to the note of protest, which on January 14 I had the honor to transmit to your Chancellery.

In this important document your excellency informs me:

First, that the Government of Panama has not introduced anything new in locating in October last various administrative authorities in different places on the coast which runs to the north of Punta Burica, inasmuch as said authorities have always been maintained by that Government, and that the only thing which has been done lately is to renew them, as is customary periodically with all the others of the Republic.

Second, that the Porras-Anderson Convention was not a boundary convention, nor one of territorial compensations, nor a cession of territory, but simply of arbitration, and as Panama does not accept the White Award, therefore none of the dispositions contained in the convention that gave rise to the award have for her any value.

Third, that the conduct of Panama in this case is identical with that which Costa Rica adopted with respect to the Loubet Award, and that the same right which Costa Rica had to disregard the award of 1900 Panama has to-day to disregard the award made by Mr. Chief Justice White.

Fourth, that as Costa Rica did not wish to deliver to Panama the valley north of the Sixaola, adjudged to Panama in a clear and indisputable manner by the Loubet Award alleging that until an agreement was arrived at she would continue exercising temporary sovereignty over the zone which she was administering by virtue of the status quo, so Panama believes that she is entitled to retain in her power the zone which she has possessed de facto on the Pacific side.

Fifth, that the principles sustained by President Porras in Resolution No. 96 of November 23, 1912, are none other than those which as Minister he set forth in a note addressed to this Chancellery August 14, 1909, opposing the appointment by Costa Rica of a fiscal authority on the left bank of the Sixaola.

Sixth, that the Government of Costa Rica did not share the opinion of Minister Porras and on the contrary maintained and still maintains the authority in reference.

Seventh, that therefore the inconsistency of Costa Rica is evident in asking that the principles be applied in Panama which Costa Rica rejected in 1909.

Eighth, that according to a declaration of the Minister of Foreign Relations in a note of August 13, 1909, the frontier line between the Republics according to the status quo, started on the Pacific side at the mouth of the Golfito River.

Such, with difference of phraseology, are the reasons which your excellency sets forth for considering inadmissible the protest which I had the honor to present against the establishment of various administrative authorities in different places on the coast north of Punta Burica.

Knowing, as I do, the equity which at all times has inspired the proceedings of the Government of your excellency, I cherish the well-founded hope that the attitude that it to-day assumes with regard to this affair will be replaced by another entirely in conformity with the desires of my Government, as soon as your excellency has examined the reasons I shall now give as to the error of the premises on which the allegations of your excellency rest.

I.

The information received by your excellency that the locating in October last of Panaman authorities to the north of Punta Burica introduced nothing new in the administration of those places, since nothing more was done than to change the personnel in regions where Panama had always maintained these authorities, is erroneous. The data furnished to your excellency in this respect are not reliable, and I am going to demonstrate it, availing myself for this purpose of documents emanating from the contrary party.

The instructions given in Bogotá by the Secretary of Foreign Relations of Colombia to Minister Holguin on the 18th of July, 1880, in the official part say * * *

You will observe also that the 6th of the conclusions approved by the Senate says: "Costa Rica, it is asserted, has established a town on Golfo Dulce in the territory comprised between the Golfo River, the reputed international limit, and Punta Burica." This town has the name of Isola, and because founded and administered by Costa Rican authorities it has been stated to you that the jurisdiction of Colombia has extended to the Golfo River for a long time, since at the present time the Costa Rican Jefatura of Golfo Dulce, which before came only to the Golfo River, has extended its jurisdiction to the village of Isola, built some six years ago.

The Government of Colombia desirous of giving the matter a turn which will tend to a fraternal solution, has determined that you, instead of going directly to England, will proceed first to San José de Costa Rica and, after making the explanations contained in this instruction, you will manifest to the Government of that country that, as a measure previous to all discussion and every act which may put an end to this annoying subject, the Government of Colombia proposes that both countries respect the jurisdictional status quo, and that in consequence the Costa Rican authority placed in the cocoanut plantations of Burica should be immediately retired and the exploitations of the plantations of that district restored to the individual to whom it belongs by virtue of the grant made by Colombian functionaries in the district of Alanje. With respect to the town of Isola you will not make the same demand, because no protest was made in due time against the establishment of Costa Rican authorities in that place; and although this Government does not accept the territorial modification which that act implies, it leaves its settlement for the final agreement, because it considers that that tolerated occupation would not be voluntarily changed by Costa Rica except by virtue of agreements which shall put an end to the debate in all its parts; and a rupture for an act acquiesced in during six years would not be sufficiently justified.

Fourteen years afterwards the Minister of Foreign Relations of Colombia said in the Memoria which he presented to Congress in 1894:

On the Pacific side, the Government of Costa Rica admitted, as far back as 1880, that it could not occupy territory situated on this side of Punta Burica, at the demand of our Government it vacated that territory in a manner that may be called formal; nevertheless it has just become known from an entirely trustworthy source that in that territory, exclusively under the jurisdiction of Colombia, they are establishing colonies under the protection, it is alleged, of the San José Government and without the consent of the Government of Colombia.

The theoretical statement of our rights and the protests against their violation have not, therefore, had the desired effect; and in this situation the Vice President of the Republic has instructed me to direct a note to the Minister of Gobierno setting forth the state of affairs and the necessity of organizing in Panama two peaceful but active and efficient expeditions, to go, one to Punta Burica and the other to the Sixaola, for the purpose of making at the principal points of those districts an investigation of the state of affairs and make the rectifications which the rights of the Republic require. (Taken from Foreign Relations of the United States, 1894, pp. 194-195.)

As your excellency sees, the Republic of Colombia, even when it was alleging that its de jure jurisdiction extended to the Golfo River, agreed that it did not de facto reach farther than Punta Burica. This was the limit which it did not consent that the Costa Rican authorities overpass; where it exacted that the rights of the purchase of cocoanut plantations should be respected; and where it sent expeditions to verify whether there were certain intrusions of Costa Rica to the south of that place.

Colombia, then, never had authorities to the north of Punta Burica; on the contrary it respected those which Costa Rica had, provided that they did not extend to the cocoanut plantations of the Point. Panama could introduce no change in this policy, because when in 1903 she arose to a life among the nations she found herself with her northern limits those which the Loubet Award had fixed, the award to which she rendered such great homage that she even incorporated it in Article 3 of her Constitution and whose effectiveness did not come to be held in doubt until the 30th of January last, the date of the note in which your excellency sets forth the theory that our frontiers ought to be considered in conformity with the doctrine of uti possidetis.

If any doubt should yet remain to your excellency in this particular, I beg that to dispel it you ask for data from the Secretary of Hacienda and you will be convinced that the authorities which he located in October, personally, are the first which Panama has had there and not successors of others, as has erroneously been stated to your excellency.

II.

Evidently your excellency labors under an error when you consider that the Anderson-Porrás Convention was not a boundary convention but purely and simply one of arbitration.

If your excellency would read the convention you would find that it has two characters: one as a definite and perfect boundary treaty and the other as an arbitration treaty. The parties commence by declaring, in the most formal and explicit manner their acceptance of the frontier line fixed by the Loubet Award on September 11, 1900, as it runs from Punta Burica to a point in the Central Cordillera above Cerro Pando, near the ninth degree of north latitude; and they end by saying that as they have not been able to come to an agreement as to the rest, that is to say, from Cerro Pando to the Atlantic, they agree to settle their differences by submitting them to the decision of the Chief Justice of the United States.

This double nature of the treaty is so clear and evident that I cannot suppose that your excellency insists on considering it nothing more than a convention of arbitration.

If the Government of Panama believes—without any reason indeed—that the White Award has defects that invalidate it, it could, by following a criterion extreme and untenable after even superficial examination, refuse to accept that award and therefore hold as non-existent the convention from which it emanates; but only in so far as this convention refers to arbitration and never in regard to a formally established territorial boundary.

If the Republic of Panama should insist on considering itself empowered to hold as the frontier line on the Pacific side any other than that running from Cerro Pando to Punta Burica, then, Mr. Minister, we should have the profound regret of supposing that certain novel theories about the respect which treaties deserve are finding acceptance in republican countries.

Sincere and convinced admirer as I am of Panama and of her men, I am absolutely confident that the illustrious Government of your excellency will act in this case in conformity with its clean traditions, rendering full homage to the plighted word and to the honor and dignity of the nation, given in guaranty.

III.

The information which your excellency has received about the third point is equally unfounded.

Costa Rica never, at any time, disregarded the Loubet Award.

It could have had a thousand reasons for doing so, but it preferred to sacrifice the clearest rights rather than assume an attitude which might be interpreted as disrespectful of the sanctity of a covenant. And so great is the value which Costa Rica gives to its word that it let pass without protest an award that deprived it of one of the richest and most important regions of its territory, namely the Province of Bocas del Toro and Almirante Bay.

Well now, as the award was worded in a manner so confused, not to say incoherent; as it spoke of an imaginary counterfort and referred to the drainage basin of a river which all the Colombian maps make to appear as running in a direction contrary to that in which in reality it does run, my Government saw itself obliged to beg the Arbitrator to give a clearer explanation of the various obscure points which appear in the award.

The Arbitrator, through his Minister of Foreign Relations, M. Delcassé, stated that as he lacked the precise geographic elements he could not designate the frontier except by means of general indications and that, therefore, he believed it inopportune to mark it on a map; that, therefore, it ought to be drawn within the limits of the territory in dispute; and, finally, that he left it to the good will of the parties to settle between themselves whatever difficulties might arise in the execution of the award.

Costa Rica, then, authorized by such an explicit statement by the Arbitrator, negotiated, first with Colombia and afterwards with Panama, in order to come to an agreement as to the interpretation which should be given to the clauses which the Arbitrator himself found were no more than general indications, and for the correct interpretation of which the good will of the parties was necessary.

There was no difficulty in regard to the Pacific region. The parties were agreed in considering as clear and indisputable the frontier line designated by the Arbitrator in the part from Punta Burica to Cerro Pando. But as they did not succeed in arriving at the same understanding in regard to the part which follows from Cerro Pando to the Atlantic, they agreed to submit their differences to a third party.

Admirably chosen was the third party. No one less was sought than the Chief Justice of the United States, a man selected among a hundred millions to say the last word in the controversies which divide the parties; the Magistrate whose decisions the entire world surrounds with an aureole of respect and admiration.

The immense, the unspeakable satisfaction which Costa Rica experiences on seeing that the thesis she has maintained meets the approbation of a judge of the standing of Chief Justice White, has healed in great part the wound which she received at Rambouillet the 11th of September, 1900.

After the foregoing explanations, I hope that the rectitude of judgment which so greatly distinguishes your excellency will cause you to agree that Panama, in disregarding the White Award, is not following any precedent that Costa Rica has set.

IV.

In my humble opinion your excellency has suffered another error in considering that, as Costa Rica did not wish to deliver up the valley north of the Sixaola, adjudged, in the words of your excellency, in a clear and indubitable manner to Panama, alleging that until a definite arrangement was arrived at she would continue exercising over that zone the de facto sovereignty which until then she had exercised, so Panama believes she has equal right to retain on the Pacific side the regions over which she has exercised an analogous jurisdiction.

The error evidently results from the fact that the juridical situation of the two zones is absolutely different. As I have said before, the parties never succeeded in coming to an agreement in regard to the interpretation which ought to be given to the line established by the Loubet Award on the Atlantic. Costa Rica, which from time immemorial had possessed that region in fact and in right, did not share the opinion of your excellency that you consider it adjudged to Panama in a clear and undoubted manner. Far from that, she always believed that the Loubet Award declared it to belong to her, an opinion which, as your excellency very well knows, has the unappealable confirmation of the Arbitrator before whom we agreed to submit our differences.

Costa Rica could not, therefore, divest herself of a zone belonging to her for more than three hundred years of her history because Panama erroneously believed that the Loubet Award conceded it to Panama.

On the other hand, how different is the situation of the second region, that of the Pacific. There the parties did not find the least difficulty in coming to an understanding. Costa Rica, without reserve or protest of any kind, accepted gracefully a line which, ignoring the clearest and most conclusive proofs, deprived her of all the region comprised between Punta Burica and the Chiriquí Viejo River.

Panama had already most formally declared her acceptance of that line by introducing it into her Constitution. Later, in 1910, on her word of honor, she ratified this declaration, and the Executive Power was prompt to reiterate its adhesion thereto by promulgating Resolution No. 96 of November 23, 1912.

After all this, does your excellency believe that a hypothetical possession de facto is sufficient to authorize Panama to assume the attitude of violating her Constitution, a formal treaty, and the public and decisive declarations which her Chief Magistrate has made about this matter?

V.

I experience genuine satisfaction, Mr. Minister, in finding myself, in part, in accord with your excellency.

The ideas sustained by President Porras in Resolution No. 96 of November 23, 1912, are in principle the same that he held in 1909 when as Minister of Panama he gave us the honor of having him among us.

Only, in one case those ideas were correctly applied but not in the other, due to the error which Mr. Porras makes in considering the cases identical, they being, as I have had the honor to demonstrate to your excellency, diametrically opposed. But not for that reason does it cease to be true that he demonstrated in 1912 his adhesion to the ideas and general principles which he defended in 1909. Unfortunately, the attitude assumed by your excellency in the note under acknowledge would seem to indicate that Mr. Porras repudiates now what he has for so many years maintained.

VI.

It was not the ideas of Mr. Porras which my Government did not accept in 1909, but the conclusions which he sought to draw from them. It seems to me idle to repeat to your excellency that the opposition of Panama to the appointment of a fiscal authority of Costa Rica on the north bank of the Sixaola totally lacks foundation, since it was treating of a region which, de facto and de jure, Costa Rica had possessed from the middle of the 16th century and the judicial situation of which, in the opinion of my Government, afterwards ratified by the decision of Chief Justice White, did not suffer the least alteration from the Loubet Award.

VII.

With the foregoing I hope to have demonstrated the lack of reason there is for branding Costa Rica as inconsistent when she asks that measures be applied in the region of the Pacific which she did not consent to for that of the Sixaola. The absolute difference between the two situations has been explained to the point of satiety as a difference that logically requires distinct proceedings in its international treatment.

Consequently, we are once more forced to agree, Mr. Minister, that the allegations of your excellency in that respect lack foundation.

VIII.

Neither is your excellency right when you affirm that the Minister of Foreign Relations said in a note of August 13, 1909, that the boundary line between the countries commences, on the Pacific side, at the mouth of the Golfito River. No Minister of Foreign Relations of Costa Rica has ever recognized as the status quo line on the Pacific side that of the Golfito River. It is true that on different occasions Colombia proposed or sought to impose on us the adoption of that line; but the Government of Costa Rica invariably rejected all advances in that respect, as appears from numerous documents already published and particularly in the Costa Rican note of November 20, 1893, addressed to Colombia.

As I had the honor before of setting forth to your excellency, the Colombian Government, in the Memoria which the Minister of Foreign Relations presented to Congress in 1894, made a declaration upon this subject which involves the clear recognition of our possession up to the Punta Burica; and this declaration is the more valuable as it came immediately after Costa Rica had refused to recognize the line of Golfito as that of the status quo.

What caused the confusion in the mind of your excellency in referring to the note addressed to Minister Porras on August 13, 1909, is doubtless the citation from a study published by Mr. H. Pittier in 1892.

Your excellency should recall that the Legation of Panama in San José then held that the de facto jurisdiction of Panama had come to reach the north source of the Sixaola. To disprove so great an error the said note had recourse to the opinion of Mr. Pittier, demonstrating thereby and by citation of official Colombian documents how unfounded was the idea of Mr. Porras.

On this subject of the jurisdictional status quo on the Pacific side I could go much further in impugning with a great number of incontrovertible documents the Panaman theory which marks out the Golfito River as the de facto boundary. But that would be superfluous. The line of the Loubet Award having been formally accepted by the parties as to the part running from Punta Burica to Cerro Pando, no right could be deduced as to whether the boundary in this part reached this or that other point. We are treating of a question terminated, concluded, which has passed already to the category of a cause adjudged.

Thus I answer your excellency's communication. The argument is clearly on the side of Costa Rica, and the sentiment of justice which inspires the acts of the Government of Panama is so well known that I have not the least doubt that the matter will find no solution but that which right and equity impose: the retiring on the part of Panama of the authorities which in October last she located in various places to the north of Punta Burica, a retirement which I very respectfully ask anew.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 28, 1915.

SIR: Both Panama and Costa Rica have presented to this Department their views in regard to the award made by Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court, fixing the boundary line between Panama and Costa Rica.

After an examination of the papers the Department is convinced that no exception can be taken to the procedure followed, or to the findings of the Arbitrator, and that, therefore, there should be prompt and complete acquiescence in the award made.

This is an old dispute and the value of the territory involved is insignificant compared with the annoyance and ill-feeling that it has aroused. The United States could not, of course, be a party to anything which would cast discredit upon the Arbitrator, who is the presiding officer of the highest court in our land. Neither could we view with indifference the baneful influence which a rejection of this award by either party would have upon arbitration as a means of adjusting disputes between nations; and owing to the intimate relationship existing between the United States and Panama it would be a matter of deep regret if Panama should take any steps which would indicate a lack of respect either for the principle of arbitration or for the high tribunal to which this dispute was submitted.

If any hardship is caused by the award this Government will, of course, be pleased to use its good offices to bring the parties together upon some plan which will afford an adequate remedy, but this can not be taken up, of course, until after Panama indicates a willingness to accept the award.

In the fixing of boundaries it sometimes happens that citizens of one country find their possessions included within the boundary of another country, and it is possible that the boundary line as now drawn may leave Panamans in Costa Rica, and Costa Ricans in Panama. In such case it might be possible to effect an agreement by which Costa Rica would purchase at its market value the real estate of any such Panaman who does not desire to become a citizen of Costa Rica; and, in like manner, Panama might agree to purchase at its market value all real estate of any Costa Rican who does not desire to become a citizen of Panama.

This, however, is only made as a suggestion, to indicate this Government's desire to go as far as it can in aiding the two countries to reach a final and satisfactory settlement of all differences connected with the boundary dispute.

In presenting this communication to the Foreign Office you will accompany it by assurances of our good will and of our desire to be helpful in every legitimate way to our neighbors.

MY DEAR MR. Relying upon the unfailing kindness of your excellency, I beg that you will inform me whether, in view of these reasons, your excellency has decided to lend your support towards the carrying out of the Chief Justice's arbitral decision. MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: I am just in receipt of your favor of May 5 referring to your former note in regard to the award made by Chief Justice White, arbitrator in the dispute between Costa Rica and Panama. After a careful examination of the case this Government feels it to be its duty to lend such influence as it may properly exert toward the carrying out of the award made, and has sent to the American Legation at Panama a communication which will so inform the Government of Panama.

At the same time this Government ventures to express the hope that the Governments of Costa Rica and Panama will consider in a spirit of neighborliness and friendship such incidental questions as may arise in connection with the carrying out of the award. The boundary line, so long in dispute, being now definitely determined, it is of the highest importance that all animosities which have grown out of the controversy should be forgotten and that the countries act toward each other with liberality in respect to the rights of those of either country who now find their residence included within the territory of a government of which they are not citizens.

It is respectfully suggested for the consideration of the two Governments that it would safeguard from pecuniary loss individuals affected by the change in boundaries, if each Government would agree to purchase, at its market value, any property belonging to a citizen of the other country whose property has, by the change in the boundary, passed under the jurisdiction of a government different from that to which he owes allegiance.

Some weeks ago Panama reestablished its Legation in Costa Rica, which had been abandoned several years ago, and appointed Señor Santiago de la Guardia as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Republic. The new Minister is an able man; has affiliations in Costa Rica; in fact, I understand that some years since, when he lived there, he occupied high official positions, including that of a cabinet portfolio at one time. He has been a leader in law and politics in Panama since the establishment of the Republic, having at one time been Secretary of Foreign Affairs. Señor de la Guardia is and has been affiliated with the Conservative party in Panama and an opponent of the present administration.

The Panaman Foreign Office admit that his appointment was for the purpose of attempting to further a compromise settlement with Costa Rica following the rendition of the award of Chief Justice White.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I am in receipt of a communication from the Secretary of State of the United States of America, in which I am informed that both Panama and Costa Rica have presented to the Department of State their views in regard to the award made by Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court, fixing the boundary line between Panama and Costa Rica.

After examination of the papers the Department of State is convinced that no exception can be taken to the procedure followed, or to the findings of the Arbitrator, and that, therefore, there should be prompt and complete acquiescence in the award made.

The Department calls attention to the fact that this is an old dispute and is impelled to believe that the value of the territory involved is insignificant compared with the annoyance and ill-feeling that it has aroused. It is, of course, taken for granted that no action of either interested party with reference to said award could be of a character which either of them would be willing to have susceptible of the construction of casting discredit upon the Arbitrator, who is the presiding officer of the highest court in our land. Neither could my Government view with indifference, I am instructed to say, the baneful influence which a rejection of this award by either party would have upon arbitration as a means of adjusting disputes between nations. And, owing to the intimate relationship existing between the United States and Panama, it would be a matter of deep regret if Panama should take any steps which would indicate a lack of respect either for the principle of arbitration or for the high tribunal to which this dispute was submitted.

If any hardship is caused by the award, my Government will be pleased to use its good offices to bring the parties together upon some plan which will afford an adequate remedy; but this cannot be taken up, of course, until after Panama indicates a willingness to accept the award.

In the fixing of boundaries it sometimes happens that citizens of one country find their possessions included within the boundary of another country, and it is possible that the boundary line as now drawn may leave Panamans in Costa Rica, and Costa Ricans in Panama. This, however, is only made as a suggestion, to indicate my Government's desire to go as far as it can in aiding the two countries to reach a final and satisfactory settlement of all differences connected with the boundary dispute.

In presenting the foregoing views of the United States of America to the Foreign Office of the Republic of Panama, over which your excellency so worthily presides, I am instructed to express assurances of the good will of my Government and, also, of its earnest desire to be helpful in every legitimate way to all of its neighbors.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, July 28, 1915.

Mr. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note No. 184, of the 31st of May last, in which you declare that you have been informed by his excellency the Secretary of State of the United States of America that both Panama and Costa Rica have presented to that Department their views in regard to the award made by the Honorable Chief Justice White in the matter of boundaries between the two countries, and that, after examination of the respective papers, said Department is convinced that no exception can be taken to the procedure followed nor to the findings of the Arbitrator, and that, therefore, it is hoped that both parties would respect the award; and that your excellency's Government could not view with indifference the rejection of that award by either party, because this would imply a lack of respect for the principle of arbitration as a means of solving international disputes, or for the high tribunal to which this dispute was submitted; and in conclusion offering the good offices of the Government of the United States to the effect that both parties come to some agreement in order to regulate definitely and satisfactorily the question of boundaries, until after Panama indicates its willingness to accept the award.

In reply, permit me, in the first place, to dwell upon that which the Minister of Panama accredited to the Government of your excellency declared to the Department of State on making known the opinion of my Government with respect to the award made by the Honorable Chief Justice White; that is, our conclusions in no way signified any undervaluation of the institution of arbitration nor of the high official who presides over the highest tribunal of the United States of America.

The Republic of Panama has professed since its foundation the greatest respect for the principles of arbitration. This was demonstrated, first, by including in its Constitution the decision of President Loubet in spite of the fact that Colombia and Costa Rica had not been able to agree upon on this matter; it was also demonstrated at the signing of the Porras-Anderson Convention with Costa Rica which gave rise to the last arbitration, by its opposing the grant to the Arbitrator of powers other than those necessary to interpret the Loubet Award, because any course would have been equivalent to annulling it, thus undervaluing the principle of a binding arbitration. It was with this very purpose—not to impair the principle of arbitration—that Panama has declared that she does not feel obliged to accept the award of the Honorable Chief Justice White, since in place of interpreting the Loubet Award, as had been agreed upon, it has resulted in annulling and modifying it.

The declaration made by Panama does not, furthermore, imply any lack of respect for the high official to whom this dispute was submitted, since it does not imply any lack of respect for a tribunal to appeal from the decision rendered on account of a belief that the judge has exceeded his powers.

Having made this clear, it remains for me to say to your excellency that my Government is very grateful for the kind offer made by the United States of America, which goes to demonstrate again the interest always taken by the great Republic in matters referring to the well-being of the American nations and especially that of Panama.

As your excellency knows, my Government in order to demonstrate its good will to settle this matter in a satisfactory and definite way, and by making a real sacrifice considering the financial situation of all nations by reason of the conflict in Europe, has recently accredited a Minister near the Government of Costa Rica; and there is no doubt that, by means of the good will shown on both sides, the two Republics will soon be able to arrive at a complete settlement of their boundary dispute.

Unfortunately, the Minister referred to, Dr. Don Santiago de la Guardia, has had to leave Costa Rica for a few days, due to the bad state of his health; and direct negotiations can be renewed only when he has been reestablished in his post.

The Government of your excellency could in the meantime contribute to the solution of the matter by means of its good offices, and our gratitude would be lasting if it would abet us in the sense that in case Panama accept the award of Chief Justice White in the region of the Atlantic, due compensation shall be given it in the Pacific.

In transmitting again to the Government of the United States, through the worthy medium of your excellency, our sincerest thanks for its good will toward Panama, allow me [etc.]

LEGATION OF COSTA RICA,
Washington, September 27, 1915.

MR. SECRETARY: The courtesy with which the Department over which your excellency presides has always received the communications of my Government prompts me to encroach upon your valuable time with a matter of the greatest importance to my country, of such grave import, indeed, that it might well force a people of even such intense devotion as mine to the ways of peace to exchange their life of order and industry for the lamentable and hazardous condition of war.

I allude, Mr. Secretary, to the offensive and unjustifiable attitude assumed by the Government of the Republic of Panama in establishing their authorities on territory which has been recognized by that very Government in the most formal and positive manner as indisputable property of Costa Rica, namely the territory extending from Cerro Pando in the Central Cordillera to Punta Burica on the Pacific Ocean.

By the Convention of March 17, 1910, between the Governments of Costa Rica and Panama, entered into under the generous and fraternal mediation of the Government of the United States, both parties declared the frontier line fixed by His Excellency the President of the French Republic in the arbitral award rendered at Rambouillet on September 11, 1900, to be wholly free from doubt to be clear and unquestionable, with respect to the region on the Pacific; that is, the line that runs "from Punta Burica to a point beyond Cerro Pando in the Central Cordillera near the ninth degree of north latitude."

This formal agreement, this perfect and definitive boundary treaty was duly ratified, and from that moment Costa Rica stood inhibited from extending her sovereignty a single inch to the south of Punta Burica, and Panama, on her side, was equally inhibited from extending herself to the north. So clear, so clean-cut is that legal status that I am at a loss to understand, in spite of the closest study, how anyone can reach a different conception of the situation.

Nevertheless, the Government of Panama, not content with the White award, formally notified my Government of its positive and final determination to withhold its acceptance thereof; to hold, therefore, the Treaty of March 17, 1910, which was the basis of the said award, as null and of no value; and to continue to hold as the frontier with Costa Rica the line of the status quo claimed by Colombia prior to the rendition of the Loubet Award of September 11, 1900.

Proceeding at once from words to deeds, Panama dispatched one of her high functionaries—the Subsecretary of the Treasury—to locate various administrative authorities in different places situated to the north of Punta Burica; that is, in the zone which, under the guaranties of her good faith and her given word, she had declared in 1910 to be the indisputable property of Costa Rica.

I should here note that the Government of Panama took this step at the very moment when Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro was in Costa Rica as Special Envoy of her Government under instructions to notify my Government of her refusal to accept the White Award, and at the same time to assure us, in the most emphatic manner, that his Government would take no measures that would in the slightest degree depart from legality.

Imagine, therefore, how great our surprise when informed of the illegal step which the Government of Panama had just taken; so profound was the impression made upon us thereby that for the moment we could not give credence to the report. While awaiting the report of a commission sent to ascertain the facts, the United States Minister, apprehending that hostilities were imminent, generously offered his friendly mediation, under instructions from his Government, to the end that no violent measures might be taken, but, rather, that an effort might be made to ascertain whether an amicable adjustment might be brought about. That distinguished diplomat at the same time announced that similar instructions had been dispatched to His Excellency the American Minister at Panama, since the Government of the United States desired to do everything in its power to prevent a rupture between the two neighboring countries growing out of the boundary dispute that had existed for so many years between them.

It was with great satisfaction that my Government hastened to accept the generous offer of his excellency Minister Hale. So many and so oft-repeated have been the occasions in which the American Government has come to the assistance of our menaced rights, through its fraternal interest; so well-justified, so absolute and complete, has been the confidence of the people and Government of Costa Rica in the high sense of equity of the American statesmen, that the very opportune initiative on the part of Mr. Hale came as a charm to quiet the fears incited by the action of Panama.

Unfortunately, many and exceedingly delicate problems have arisen during these last few months to absorb completely the attention of your excellency's Government and have naturally prevented attention to our matter. For this reason, and also with the desire clearly to establish the facts, my Government addressed itself directly to that of Panama protesting against the unlawful occupation and asking for the immediate retirement of the authorities so illegally established.

The reply, as might have been expected in view of the attitude that had been assumed, was adverse, and from that moment my Government spared no efforts, of whatever nature, to vindicate our legitimate rights so deeply and gratuitously injured.

That, then, is the question, Mr. Secretary. As a final effort to arrive at a solution of that question without having recourse to the lamentable excesses of violence, my Government has instructed me to request your excellency to be so good as to interpose your valued influence with the Government of Panama to the end that it may be induced to accept fully and without reserve the award rendered by The Honorable Chief Justice White and to retire immediately the authorities illegally established as above stated, and to proceed to appoint a commission to mark out our frontiers.

If your excellency will consult the details of the steps initiated by this Legation in its note addressed to your Department on the 9th of March of the present year, you will find that the Government of the United States—the guarantor of the integrity of Panama's territory—in replying to that note on the 8th of May, over the signature of the Secretary of State, recognized the validity of the White Award and at the same time offered to exert all its influence to bring about its acceptance.

The kind reception accorded on a former occasion by your excellency to the suggestion of this Legation respecting the payment of the emoluments due the honorable Arbitrator, Mr. Chief Justice White, the exquisite tact and discretion with which your excellency brought that transaction to a conclusion, give me a sure ground for the hope that in this instance your excellency will take the same friendly interest that was demonstrated in the other, and that thus, at an early date, my country may add to its debt of gratitude to the noble American nation this further service which, perhaps, may prove to be the greatest of all.

In order that your excellency may form a clear idea of the question, permit me to send you herewith, under separate cover, a copy of the last Memoria presented by our Department of Foreign Relations to the Constitutional Congress, and a translation into English of several of the most important documents⁷ appearing therein * * *.

SIR: In the matter of our control of wireless telegraphy in the Republic of Panama and referring to the last communication between the Department and the Legation in connection with the subject, being instruction No. 79 of December 2, 1914, and despatch No. 366 of December 28, 1914, I have the honor to report that in the course of a conversation with Señor Lefevre, Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Panama, last week, he remarked that now since our radio station known as the Darien station located on the Panama Canal was in use, his Government felt that we should begin transmitting their messages over it to Bocas del Toro free of charge, stating that since we stopped the sending of radio messages from the Bay of Colon from stations on the ships of the United Fruit Company, Panama had been making use of the cable from Colon to Port Limon in Costa Rica, and the message would then have to go back to Bocas del Toro for delivery.

I have talked with Lieut. Crenshaw in charge of our radio service, and he tells me that ever since we took control of the ship station in Colon Bay we have been transmitting through our Colon land station messages for the Panaman Government; that a charge is made on such messages by the Fruit Company on account of use of the receiving station at Bocas del Toro of five cents a word; that he does not know what arrangement existed between the Fruit Co. and Panama prior thereto as to charges on messages sent through their ship stations. Lieut. Crenshaw says the Fruit Company charges our Government twelve cents a word on official messages between said points.

It is most likely that the Fruit Company charged Panama the same amount formerly and that in consideration of the control given us in said matter Señor Lefevre is soliciting that our Government assume all such charges. I understand Panama has free use of the cable aforesaid.

Señor Lefevre followed this conversation by transmitting a note on Saturday last a copy of which and of its translation is enclosed. He again takes up the matter of erection of stations in Panaman territory for their use, a topic he did not refer to in the conversation aforesaid.

The Minister of Panama to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PANAMA,
Washington, August 25, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: After a long exchange of correspondence between the Secretary of Foreign Relations of the Republic of Panama and the Minister of the United States, my Government issued a decree putting the Panama Canal authorities in control of the wireless communications of the Republic with the understanding that the Government of the United States assumed the obligation to build at least four wireless stations at various points of the Panaman territory to be agreed on later, with the object of keeping those parts in easy and constant communication with the capital of the Republic.

My Government has instructed me to say to the Government of your excellency that it is absolutely indispensable for the good of the public service that telegraphic communication be established with the distant Panaman regions known as San Blas and Darien, and as the wireless is controlled by the authorities of the Canal Zone, the Government of the Republic cannot build its own stations, I have been further instructed to ask that your excellency's Government issue appropriate orders to the Canal Zone authorities to build, on agreement with the Panaman Government, one or two wireless stations on the Atlantic coast called San Blas and one on the Pacific Coast in the Darien district.

These obligations stand in the convention proposed on February 16, 1914, to my Government by the Legation of the United States at Panama.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 9, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to the question of wireless telegraphy in the Republic of Panama. You will recall that this was long a matter of negotiation between the United States and Panama, and that, during August, 1914, a decree was issued by the Panaman Executive whereby the United States was given a permanent control of the wireless situation in the Panaman Republic, this control being "complete and permanent" of "everything relating to wireless communication in the territorial waters of Panama."

In October, 1914, William P. Cresson, the American Chargé d'Affaires in Panama, after a consultation with the Governor of the Canal Zone, reported to this Department that Colonel Goethals believed "no wireless stations whatever should be authorized in the Zone which are not under the direct control of the United States Government. Any such stations should be erected at the expense of the Panaman Government." "* * * no stations should be considered on the San Blas coast or near the frontier * * *" and, in the Colonel's opinion, "the whole matter had best be maintained in statu quo" until the end of the war.

In this connection there is transmitted herewith a copy of a translation of a note received from the Panaman Minister in Washington. Before replying to the note of the Minister this Department would be glad to know if the position of the Canal authorities is still such as was stated to Mr. Cresson by Colonel Goethals. The Department will be glad to have a statement of the reasons for the position of the Canal Zone authorities that no wireless station should be considered on the San Blas Coast, or near the frontier, and the reasons, if any now exist, why the whole matter had best be maintained in statu quo until the end of the war, since complete and permanent control of the wireless stations in Panama has been given to the United States.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, December 15, 1915.

SIR: Referring to your letter of September 9, relative to the question of wireless telegraphy in the Republic of Panama, in which you request a statement of the reasons for the position of the Canal Zone authorities that no wireless station should be considered on the San Blas coast, or near the frontier, I beg to inclose for your consideration the statement of the Governor of the Canal and the recommendations of the Superintendent of Radio Service of the Navy Department, which are substantially in accord with the views expressed by the Governor and which have received the approval of the Secretary of the Navy. The views expressed in the 7th endorsement thereon are approved by me.

Very respectfully,

LINDLEY M. GARRISON.

[Inclosure 1.]

The Governor of the Canal to the Adjutant General.

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Balboa Heights, C. Z., October 18, 1915.

The Republic of Panama has granted to the United States complete and permanent control over all wireless communication in that Republic. The only way in which such control can be exercised is to have the Navy Department approve the location and plans of the proposed installations and operate the stations after their completion. If the location and plans of the proposed station on the San Blas coast meet with the approval of the Navy Department and that Department is prepared to operate the station after its completion there is no objection to the establishment of such station by the Panaman Government. It is understood, of course, that any station so established shall be erected at the expense of the Government of the Republic of Panama.

GEO. W. GOETHALS.

The Superintendent of Radio Service to the Chief of Naval Operations.

DECEMBER, 2, 1915.

The Superintendent wishes to place before the Department the following correspondence connected with the matter of control of radio in the Republic of Panama:

- (a) Copy of the Joint Board's letter to the Secretary of the Navy under date of October 17, 1913.
- (b) Copy of Joint Board's letter to the Secretary of the Navy under date of November 19, 1913.
- (c) Copy of Secretary of Navy's letter to Secretary of State, dated November 20 (22?) 1913.
- (d) Copy of letter from Secretary of State dated August 17, 1914.
- (e) Copy of letter from Secretary of State dated August 31, 1914, with attached paraphrase of dispatch from American Minister at Panama.

The correspondence above referred to does not indicate that any agreement has been consummated involving obligations, as outlined in the Joint Board's letters, on the part of the United States, to erect radio stations in Panama at such places as are mutually agreed upon by representatives of the two countries; but that certain obligations on the part of the United States Government are implied, dependent upon the concession by the Government of Panama of one or all of the points outlined by the proposal of the Joint Board, appears unquestioned.

The extent to which the Government of the United States is obligated in the matter as a result of the decree of the President of Panama, dated August 29, 1914, giving this Government control over radio stations and radio communication in the Republic of Panama, should, in the opinion of the Superintendent, be governed by considerations of the mutual benefits derived by the two Governments as a result of the decree, and these considerations were evidently the determining factors in the proposed agreement drawn up by the Joint Board. The lack of any definite agreement as to mutual obligations, in the event of one or the other Government not engaging itself to concur in all of the proposals submitted, as is believed to be the present status, makes it necessary to outline what is considered, from the standpoint of the Navy, an equitable plan indicating the extent to which this Department should obligate itself in the matter of the supervision of radio in the Republic of Panama.

The location of radio stations on the San Blas coast and in the Darien section will be of little military value to the United States Navy, even if sufficient protection is afforded, and they would be of no military value if not securely defended against attack. If the stations are erected at those places it would devolve on one or the other of the Governments to furnish this protection if they are to be of any value to the United States Navy, or for that matter to the defenses of the Canal. The erection of such stations would, of course, furnish means of communication with the outlying regions where they would be located, but the same communication could be maintained by land telegraph or telephone. This feature is mentioned on account of the fact that the Panaman Government has adhered to the London Radio Convention, and the provisions of that convention require each of the contracting parties "to connect the coastal stations to the telegraph system by special wires, or at least to take other measures which will insure a rapid exchange between the coastal stations and the telegraph system." It would seem, then, that the Panaman Government is not strictly obligated to connect the radio stations with their telegraph or telephone system, and it is not believed that such connection would be made as, if it were, the necessity for the radio stations for Panama's purposes would disappear. The reason for the Panaman Government's desire to have the stations erected in the localities mentioned (viz., San Blas and Darien districts) is, it is believed, in order to communicate promptly by radio with the center of government, as those districts are more or less centers of unrest. The importance to the Panaman Government of having prompt communication with these districts is therefore considerable, but in any case the reliability of the radio communication would depend primarily upon the security of the radio stations themselves.

It will be noted that the engagements proposed by the Joint Board on the part of the United States contemplated the erection of such stations as might be demanded by the exigencies of the shipping in the vicinity of Panama, such exigencies to be determined jointly by the Governments of the United States and Panama. It is believed that no determination has been made in this matter and as outlined above the necessity of the stations being erected for communication with ships does not appear the primary, or in fact any reason advanced by Panama for their erection.

In view of that fact that complete control has been given the Government of the United States over radio in Panama, and also of the fact that Panama has signified her adherence to the London Radio Convention, thus in fact complying with all of the engagements proposed by the Joint Board as applying to that Republic, except that relating to establishment of land-line connections, the following is recommended as being just obligations on the part of this Government so far as relates to the establishment, operation, and control of radio in the Republic of Panama, it being understood that any interference from such stations as may be built could be eliminated through the proper control of their operation, which would logically rest with the Radio Officer of the Canal Zone:

1. That a representative of the Navy Department confer with the appropriate officials of the Panama Government with a view to deciding upon the location of the proposed stations.

2. That the plans for the location, erection, installation of apparatus, and protection of such stations be submitted to the Navy Department for approval before authority be granted to proceed with their construction.

3. That such stations as may be mutually agreed upon after final approval by the Navy Department, be permitted to be built by the Panaman Government.

4. That the stations be operated by United States naval radio electricians, and that their operation be controlled by the Radio Officer of the Canal Zone.

5. That the stations be erected and maintained at the expense of the Panaman Government.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 26, 1914.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose the summary of a part of a conversation held with President Porras on Thursday at which the Secretary of the Legation and I were present.

The summary is sufficiently full for me not to repeat or amplify it in this despatch, but I desire to call the attention of the Department to the fact that it makes it quite evident that President Porras himself expects an affirmation by the Supreme Court of the Criminal Judge's remarkable opinion, and that there may be expected little chance of any prosecution even being ordered begun in these cases.

I am following the instructions lately given by the Department in this matter.

Summary of a conversation with President Porras.

The President of his own accord made reference to these cases in the conversation, stating that he had been much interested in settling same to the satisfaction of our Government and that he had just in the last few days written the Secretary of Government and Justice in this matter. At this juncture he had the file in this affair brought in and showed us a copy of his letter, bearing date of Sept. 22, to the said Secretary. In this letter the President had instructed the Secretary of Government and Justice to write the Panaman Minister, Morales, at Washington to confer with the Department of State and to attempt to obtain the smallest amounts that the Department would be satisfied with for payment to the families of the men killed and injured in settling and closing this incident. He stated in the letter that the Secretary should do this in view of the possible upholding by the Supreme Court of the decision of the lower court, after the Supreme Court had completed its inquiry which they had recently decided to hold themselves.

I took occasion at this point to state to him that I was amazed at the decision of the Criminal Judge, and was in addition much disappointed over the decision recently handed down by the Supreme Court in this matter. I stated to him that I very much feared that the recent decision of the Supreme Court indicated simply another long delay contributing to a wearing-out process, and asked his opinion as to when a conclusion of their inquiry might be expected. He replied that it ought to be within a month and that he thought it would be. I expressed my appreciation for all that he had done and assured him of the gratification of our Government for all that he might do to press this matter and conclude it in a way satisfactory to our Government, including the prosecution of those involved.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to call your excellency's attention to the lack of further communication to this Legation since the date of your excellency's note No. 4479 of September 8, 1914,¹⁰ regarding the Cocoa Grove affair of July 4, 1912.

After the receipt of said note and before my leaving in October last on vacation I held a conference both with His Excellency, President Belisario Porras, and with the Honorable Judge Saturnino L. Perigault, regarding said important pending cases. I received the impression from Judge Perigault in this conversation on October 13 last that about three weeks thereafter the inquiry then being conducted by him should end, and the decision of the Superior or Criminal Judge should then be handed down, subject to being again passed on by the Supreme Court, in event of being adverse.

In view of the exceeding interest taken by my Government in these distressing happenings and the unceasing attempts on my part to impress your excellency's Government with the determination of my Government to be satisfied with nothing less than full and proper redress herein, I must confess a large disappointment in this another provoking delay.

¹⁰ Not printed.

I have again waited, since my return, hoping for voluntary and satisfying communication from your excellency's Government before reiterating the solicitude of my Government in these cases. Such communication has not been forthcoming.

I am therefore impelled to be insistent and emphatic beyond the degree that it is ever pleasant to reach, and, referring to the repeated demands firmly but courteously presented to your excellency's Government in this matter, respectfully to advise your excellency that further continued delays and replies of a like unsatisfactory character to those in the past can be susceptible of only the most regretful construction.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 18, 1915.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 389 of the 25th ultimo, in regard to the failure of the Panama Government to take any final action in the matter of the Cocoa Grove affair of July 4, 1912. You suggest the advisability of this Government issuing an ultimatum in the matter to Panama.

In reply the Department desires to refer to the memorandum of an interview you had with the President of Panama, as reported in your No. 286 of September 26, 1914, and especially to the statement made by the President that the inquiry of the Supreme Court ought to be and probably would be terminated within a month. You will, in the event that the result of that inquiry has not been announced to you prior to the receipt of this instruction, inform the Foreign Office that this Government has patiently waited much more than a reasonable time for the termination of this inquiry and is reluctantly forced to the conclusion that the inquiry is being deliberately delayed.

You will add, therefore, that, unless the result of such inquiry shall be announced within two weeks, this Government will be confirmed in that conclusion and assured that the Republic of Panama does not desire to do justice in the matter by inflicting punishment upon those guilty of the crimes committed upon American citizens so long ago as July 4, 1912.

There will remain then the question of having a suitable indemnity paid for the injuries inflicted upon American citizens on that date, and in estimating the amount of the indemnity it will be necessary for the Department to take into consideration the policy of delay pursued by the Panama Government in this matter and its failure to punish the perpetrators of the crimes.

In connection with your representations you will refer to the action of the main body of the police force in the affray of February 14, 1915, as emphasizing the importance of taking measures which would tend to discourage such action, and you will point out that appropriate punishment inflicted upon those policemen guilty of participation in the outrages upon American citizens on the first-mentioned occasion would doubtless have had a deterrent effect upon future activities of this character. In other words, needed measures in dealing with offenses of this kind are those of prevention as well as redress, and the Panaman Government, by its failure to adopt such measures of prevention, is charged with a large degree of responsibility for whatever excesses the policemen may have indulged in upon the recent deplorable outbreak.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 19, 1915.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 389 of January 25 last, I have the honor now to enclose a copy and translation of the response of the Panama Secretary of Foreign Affairs to my note. This was received on February 5. I have been waiting with patience but without avail for the transmission by Sr. Lefevre of the supplementary note promised in this one.

In the meantime the outbreak on last Saturday night in the same district has transpired.

In my note to Sr. Lefevre to which the enclosure herewith is a response it will be seen that I took occasion among other things to make the following statement:

I am therefore impelled to be insistent and emphatic beyond the degree that it is ever pleasant to reach, and, referring to the repeated demands firmly but courteously presented to your excellency's Government in this matter, respectfully to advise your excellency that further continued delays and replies of a like unsatisfactory character to those in the past can be susceptible of only the most regretful construction.

This last note is a fair epitome and illustration of the character of record made up by Panama against itself in these cases. The trouble between our soldiers and the Panama police last Saturday night emphasizes the dereliction of Panama in the 4th of July matter of 1912, and will do so even more clearly if the action that may be appropriate on the part of our officials in the investigation of the latter trouble is prompt and unbiased, as it bids fair to be.

I believe now even more strongly than before that after the natural arousal of feeling by this recent clash, a conviction by a jury of Panamans of any participant in the former affair could hardly be hoped for, however guilty he might be shown to be. Granting this, any prosecution now secured by us to be carried on by Panama would, it is believed, result in nothing more than to furnish them with an argument that an acquittal by court procedure justified them in insisting that their Government should not be held liable by our own to answer in damages herein. It is believed, too, that emphatic insistence even in general terms for action by Panama just at present in these cases might result in their instigation of prosecutions to obtain the benefit of the argument referred to above.

Without further demand for the time being for response by Panama herein, I believe their answer, when later made in their own good time, will be in keeping with the one hereby transmitted and, perhaps, equally self-incriminating.

Later on, however, I think the matter of recent clash and the prospective visit of our fleet for the opening of the Panama Canal in July next presented in connection with the exasperating dereliction of Panama in these cases, all can be urged most effectively supplementary to an ultimatum that will command compliance.

Awaiting the Department's further instructions, I have [etc.]

SIR: Referring to the Department's instruction No. 104 of February 18, 1915, regarding the Cocoa Grove riot of July 4, 1912, I have the honor to report that, being still without further response from the Panaman Secretary of Foreign Affairs than that transmitted with my despatch No. 415 of February 19, 1915, I found occasion late yesterday afternoon to elicit from Judge Saturnino L. Perigault, the Judge of the Supreme Court in charge of this matter on appeal, information as to the status of the legal proceedings herein. He stated that his decision had been rendered four or five days ago (declaring that he could not recall the day more definitely) and that it had gone to the Superior (or Criminal) Judge for his action thereon; that he (Perigault) was not permitted to divulge the purport of his decision; that if the Superior (or Criminal) Judge should now decide that a prosecution should begin, same would be instituted and follow the usual course of prosecutions under their criminal procedure; that if he should decide again there was not sufficient ground for a prosecution the case could then again come before the Supreme Court, as outlined in my despatch No. 304 of October 13, 1914; that the decision of this Superior (or Criminal) Judge should be rendered within the next ten days at the most.

The Superior Judge, to whom the case would naturally return, pursuant to this action of the Supreme Court is J. D. Arosemena, who gave the decision sent May 16, 1914. He has within the last week gone on a vacation and leave of several months. His duties are being fulfilled by Sr. Cervera, a young lawyer, and it is to him these proceedings are now referred. Judge Perigault claims that Judge Arosemena's absence should not cause a delay in action herein by his temporary successor, Judge Cervera.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that the Department of State of my Government having throughout the past closely followed the case of the Cocoa Grove affair of July 4, 1912, and continuing to take the earnest interest in same which the grievous events of that occasion would naturally inspire, and having duly considered the more recent notes exchanged between your excellency's office and mine of the respective numbers and dates of No. 119 of January 25, 1915, and No. S-5606 of February 4, 1915, now instructs me specifically to communicate to the Government of your excellency's Republic through your excellency that my Government has patiently waited much more than a reasonable time for the termination of the court inquiries in this matter and is reluctantly forced to the conclusion that same are being deliberately delayed.

I have the honor to advise your excellency that I have been reliably informed that an opinion herein by Judge Saturnino L. Perigault was delivered only about ten days ago for action thereon by the Superior Court Judge, whose decision pursuant thereto should in due course have been handed down within four days thereafter; that there exists after the delivery of the decision last named the possibility of another passing back and forth of decisions between these courts, with the final accomplishment of a successful prosecution of any one guilty of the crimes committed more than two and a half years ago even then still in doubt.

The Department of State of my Government is in possession, also, of this information, and further instructs me specifically to say that unless the final action of all courts concerned in said inquiry shall be announced within the next two weeks my Government will be confirmed in the conclusion reluctantly formed, as above stated, and will therefore be forced to the conviction that the Republic of Panama does not desire to do justice in the matter of inflicting punishment upon those guilty of the crimes committed upon American citizens so long ago as July 4, 1912.

While month after month was passing with this case suffering apparent neglect and seeming intentional putting aside by authorities of your excellency's Government, there have continued the insistent efforts of my Government, which the record herein so fully discloses, and there have been repeated more than once the warnings which the recent outbreak on February 14 shows were so pertinent. The investigation into this last deplorable affair has proceeded sufficiently to justify the Department of State of my Government to feel convinced that the main body of the Panaman police force involved on this last occasion indulged in excesses, and further to indulge the presumption that same might not have occurred if your excellency's Government had visited appropriate punishment upon the policemen involved in these 4th of July, 1912, outrages.

In this connection I desire to incorporate herein the following paragraph from my Foreign Office note No. 68 of June 9, 1914:

It is believed that it will be considered beyond debate, also, that the ability to maintain order consists not alone in the restoral of quiet after a debacle of passion, but also in the visitation of punishment upon those involved so swiftly and so severely that they themselves and others will be given such warning and restraint thereby that like violations of the laws of God and man will not be repeated, and intimate and affectionate feelings between two Governments wounded and subjected to strain.

In other words, needed measures in dealing with offenses of this kind are those of prevention as well as redress, and the Panaman Government, by its failure to adopt such measures of prevention, is charged now all the more heavily with a large degree of responsibility for whatever excesses the policemen may have indulged in upon the recent deplorable outbreak.

Respectfully solliciting the attention to the importance to which this communication attains, and to the firmness of resolve of my Government, which has given expression to the specific instructions herein which I have been charged so emphatically to communicate to your excellency's Government,

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, April 17, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on Wednesday last, Sr. Lefevre, Panaman Secretary for Foreign Affairs, asked me to come to this office for a conference. He began by stating when I arrived, that they were going to settle the Cocoa Grove riot of July 4, 1912, with our Government and pay damages and even before their Supreme Court acted in the matter; that before the week was over he would transmit to me a note to this effect. I responded to him that it would be advisable to make his note as full and satisfactory as possible; that our Government felt that if there had been an earnest prosecution in this affair, the last two deplorable happenings might not have taken place; and that my last note to him in the matter was at the express direction both by mail and cable from the Department of State. He made reference, as usual to their difficulty in controlling the action of their courts and again repeated that before the week was over he was going to send a note that he believed would conclude the whole affair. I have not yet received the note.

He then proceeded to say that they had concluded, for the purpose of avoiding further clashes between the soldiers and their police, to propose that the red-light districts of Colon and Panama, respectively, be put in charge of American policemen. He took particular occasion to say that they should be under the command of the Panama Commandante of Police and observe Panaman jurisdiction but would be placed directly under an American police officer who would be subject to their chief; that Panama would pay them the same salaries now being paid the Canal Zone policemen, and remarking that [as] all troubles arose in these districts they felt this would remedy the situation. He asked directly whether I did not think this would be the solution of the problem. I replied that I did not feel prepared to express an opinion until the Department of State might be consulted, and that the War Department, more directly concerned, would want to be heard in the matter. I expressed gratification that he and his fellow officials were giving serious thought to the situation and remarked to him that conditions at their police headquarters and in connection with their arrest and treatment of civilians (claims regarding which I reminded him I had before him now) should also be considered by them.

I asked him why the abolishment of these districts was not also considered and he replied that he did not believe it possible now. He remarked further that our police officer in charge of our men could also aid their police as an instructor and the example of our policemen's conduct would be helpful to theirs.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, April 26, 1915.

Minister for Foreign Affairs late Saturday transmitted six-page note in the matter of Cocoa Grove affair of Fourth of July 1912. He refers to the consideration expected by Panama from America; charges that our soldiers and marines began the trouble; that good faith in their court proceedings had been shown already when the criminal court last April held that a Panaman was subject to prosecution in the matter except for the fact of dying within a month after the trouble happened and that Panaman police acted throughout within their duty. He then offers that the [omission in transmission] Panama will continue to urge their courts to as prompt action as possible in the matter and that without waiting longer and in view of our insistence Panama will pay money indemnities. In view of the foregoing, however, he proposes that a disinterested party be selected to value the damages and requests this proposal submitted to the Secretary of State of the United States:

That one of the diplomatic agents of one of the friendly nations accredited in Panama, chosen freely by the Government of your excellency, shall be constituted and shall decide the amount of the indemnity which Panama should pay for each one of the murdered citizens and for each one of those who suffered wounds in the riot of July 4, 1912. If the Government of your excellency accepts the formula of settlement, which is equitable, it could be put in writing and the respective arbitral agreement signed binding the parties to respect and fulfill the decision which may be rendered.

Note and its translation will be forwarded by mail Wednesday.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, April 26, 1915.

SIR: Referring to my telegram of April 26, reporting the substance of a note received from the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, I have the honor to enclose a copy and translation of said note, transmitted on Saturday.

This note is the first and only formal response to my note No. 146, of March 12 last, copy of which was sent to the Department with despatch No. 440 of the same date. While it contains the first offer to be made in a formal manner to pay damages herein, it will be noted that its proposals in our favor do not go beyond those stated by the President of Panama informally to me, as having been decided upon by them as far back as September last. The summary of my conference with President Porras in this matter was transmitted with despatch No. 286 of September 26, 1914.

Contrary to a statement contained in the note of May 30 last, that the present administration in furtherance of a desire to retain the friendship and esteem of the United States had discharged all the policemen who were on duty on July 4, 1912, Señor Lefevre in the present note admits that some of them are still in the service. I very much suspect that this admission is made in the hope of thereby offsetting to an extent a charge anticipated from us in the same matter. I obtained, promptly after the mêlée on February 14 last, in the Cocoa Grove district, the names of all policemen on the rolls in this city at that time, and, as heretofore reported, have been promised from a reliable Panaman source for some weeks a list of those now on the force, who were connected with it at the time of the 4th of July, 1912, affair, and I doubt not that Señor Lefevre has heard of the efforts of the Legation along this line.

In looking over the file in this case there are found referred to here and there in the evidence the names of the following policemen bearing names of the same as among the present force, who were connected with the organization at the time of the said riot July 4th, the first named having been wounded on that occasion: Juan Muñoz, Manuel de J. Castro, Rafael Puga, Celestino Cubilla, Isaias Pérez. I doubt not that there are quite a number of others. In view of the foregoing and the vulnerable record already made up by Panama in its handling of this affair, it would seem that there would exist very meager reason for the Panaman authorities now to appeal for favor in the matter of arriving at the amount of indemnities to be paid. I would call attention to the likelihood of the selection of an arbiter to name the amount occasioning practically a rehearsal of the whole extensive case before him entailing undoubted delay, and that the proposal seems to be purposely prefaced with a recital of considerations claimed due to Panama, which in all likelihood would be insisted upon by Panama being considered by the arbiter.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, April 24, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: Entertaining a sincere and earnest desire that there may be no alteration of the cordial relations between the Government of Panama and the Government of the United States of America, existing since our nation started on its independent life and bound itself to your excellency's Government with ties of close friendship and interests of a permanent nature, the regret has been deep and the uneasiness genuine for the events of July 4, 1912, in the Cocoa Grove district of this city, where two American citizens, one a soldier from the Canal Zone, died, and others of the same nationality, as well as certain Panamans who formed part of our national police force, were wounded. I am able to make this statement with certainty in so far as it refers to the present administration, presided over by Doctor Belisario Porras, who most sincerely wishes to show on every occasion to the Government of your excellency the highest consideration and the very friendly feeling our country has for the great American nation.

Notwithstanding these sentiments, which I am glad to reiterate, the Government of the United States through your excellency has made very strong reproaches of my Government, accusing it of neglect of its international duties toward itself and of not giving due consideration to the claims arising out of the disturbances of July 4, 1912, affirming that the Panaman authorities have displayed neither activity nor zeal for ascertaining the principals and accessories responsible for the deaths and wounds caused in that affair and punishing them. These charges were made by your excellency in his note No. 146 of March 12 last, which I have not answered before because I wished to be able to communicate to your excellency some definite statement by my Government showing the purpose it always has had of ending this vexatious question in a way satisfactory not only to the Government of your excellency but also to the demands of justice.

I also desired to await the decision of the Judicial Power of the Republic, which has, according to the Penal Law, the right to follow up and punish the guilty ones.

But, as your excellency will not deny, judicial proceedings in every country are slow, especially when the case, like the one to which I refer, is full of complications involving many persons. The Government of your excellency has not interpreted this aspect with justice since it considers the delay intentional. On the contrary they have also made my own Government impatient and anxious to end this serious matter.

That is why, today, without waiting for the decision of the court in regard to the affair of the 4th of July, 1912, and in accordance with instructions from the President of the Republic, I communicate to your excellency the answer of my Government to the demands presented by the Government of your excellency in notes Nos. 249, 251 and 255 of August 23 and 31, and September 25, 1912, for damages received by American citizens in the regrettable affair. These demands are:

1. Dismissal of Messrs. Julio Quijano and of Franklin de la Ossa from their positions as Commandant and Captain of the National Police.

2. That the Government of Panama punish as they deserve the individuals proved criminally responsible in the matter.

3. That the Government of Panama pay an indemnity for the death of two American citizens and for the wounds inflicted on others of the same nationality.

4. That the Government of Panama formally express to the Government of the United States of America its regret for this deplorable matter, unless it is ultimately shown that the character of the incident is different from that which was attributed to it at the time.

I should say to your excellency that notwithstanding the conviction that the Government of the United States should now have that the fight of July 4, 1912, was not premeditated by the Panaman police, nor started by them, but by American soldiers and marines, as shown by the evidence presented in the prolonged investigation made by American and Panaman officials, my Government sincerely and deeply regrets these unfortunate occurrences, which cause damage to both countries and have an unpleasant effect on the excellent relations which unite them.

The payment of indemnity is an exaction which my Government thinks excessive and little conforming with the consideration which we might justly merit from a friendly and immensely powerful nation that prides itself on being our protector and counsellor; a nation that knows the limited resources at the disposal of this little nation, and which is morally affected, for that reason, by the obstacles and misfortunes which our Republic finds in the path of progress. Nevertheless, and in spite of the fact that the only substantial accusation which could be made against the police of Panama is that they perhaps were excessively rigorous in the repression which they had to use upon the American starters of the affray, my Government will agree to pay the indemnity if the Government of your excellency will not desist from that severe demand.

In the matter of the punishment of the persons who may be found guilty of causing the death and the wounding of American citizens, my Government will continue rigorously to apply the penal laws and will seek to hasten judicial action.

There is an important fact to which I desire to call the attention of your excellency as an example of our willingness to act justly in this matter. In the sentence of the court of first instance given on April 27, 1914, by the Superior Judge of the Republic, it was established that policeman Florencio Casiano had wounded a soldier, and that this policeman paid the penalty by being imprisoned and dying shortly before the sentence was pronounced.

Much time has passed since the events of July 4, 1912, and Messrs. Julio Quijano and Franklin de la Ossa are not members of the Panaman Police; the greater part, indeed, of those who were officers and plain policemen of that body at that time are no longer members. My Government considers that the Government of your excellency has been amply satisfied in the first of its demands, because anticipating his dismissal, Commandant Quijano voluntarily resigned from his post and Captain de la Ossa and the other officers who directly or indirectly were concerned were dismissed by the Executive Power on different dates during the previous administration or this one.

To determine the indemnities which are to be paid, supposing that the Government of your excellency will not change its attitude in this matter, and taking into account the evidence of the turbulent conduct of the American soldiers and marines on July 4, 1912, the duty which the Panaman police had of suppressing riots started by those Americans and protecting the residents of Cocoa Grove against them, the initiative taken by the American soldiers and marines against the Panaman police on duty in that district, the wounding not only of American citizens but also of Panamans of the National Police Force, and, finally, that for this reason the rights of both Governments are on the same footing, I request your excellency to transmit to the Secretary of State of the United States of America the following proposal:

That a diplomatic representative of some friendly nation accredited in Panama, chosen freely by the Government of your excellency, determine the amount of the indemnity which Panama should pay for each one of the citizens killed and for each one of the citizens wounded in the riot of July 4, 1912.

If the Government of your excellency accepts this formula of settlement, which I consider equitable, the arbitral agreement could be drafted and signed, binding the parties to respect and fulfill the decision to be rendered.

Your April 26, and despatch 484. In Department's opinion next to last paragraph Foreign Office note April 24 indicates Panama will expect arbitrator to entertain evidence and pass upon questions thus raised in considering indemnities to be paid by Panama. The question to be submitted to arbitrator if appointed should merely be amount of damages sustained by injured parties and it should clearly appear in agreement that Panama undertakes to pay indemnities without regard to circumstances affecting riot. If Panama now ready to pay indemnities, however, it appears appropriate to Department that the two Governments should first discuss amount of award, having in view an agreement, before the necessity of appointing arbitrator is considered. EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to advise your excellency, in conformity with our conference on Saturday afternoon, that my Government is considering duly the proposals submitted in your excellency's note No. S-6439 of April 24, last, in the matter of the 4th of July riot, and that, in view of the length of said note and to the end that there may be no occasion for either of our Governments to be laboring under any misapprehension as to the portion of same relating to the payment of indemnities nor a possibility for either of us to have misunderstood the other in said conference, it would seem prudent, if agreeable to your excellency, to resolve same into formal shape.

I am moved, therefore, to inquire of your excellency if you will be good enough to confirm the following as the correct statement of the understanding by my Government of the proposals of your excellency's Government in said matter, if same appears to your excellency as a correct statement thereof, namely:

1. Panama offers to pay indemnities for the injuries suffered by Americans on the occasion of the riot of the 4th of July, 1912, in the city of Panama, and agrees that the only question that will be submitted to an arbitrator, if the United States Government should agree to make the selection of one, would be the amount of damages sustained by the Americans who were killed and injured in said riot.

2. The writing to be signed, if the method of arbitration aforesaid is accepted by the United States, shall clearly state that Panama agrees to pay indemnities in said riot, and that the only questions to be passed upon by such arbitrator, if selected, shall be the amount of the damages suffered aforesaid measured in money indemnities.

3. The two Governments shall, if desired by the United States, first discuss between themselves the amount of the indemnities to ascertain whether an agreement can be reached before the proposition of selecting an arbitrator is considered.

In regard to the last paragraph of the note which I have the honor to answer, my Government consents, if it is the desire of your excellency, to discuss between ourselves the amount of the indemnities in order to see if we can reach an agreement before submitting the matter to arbitration.

My suggestion however related rather to attempting to settle all cases by direct demand and negotiation including the possibility of obtaining a lump sum covering all, than to submitting all of them together to arbitration unless we could obtain from Panama admission of liability as to all of them in same terms as in the Fourth of July cases.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 19, 1915.

SIR: On July 4, 1912, during the progress of disturbances which took place in the so-called Cocoa Grove District in the City of Panama, two American citizens lost their lives and about sixteen other American citizens received injuries of a more or less serious character.

After much diplomatic correspondence between the Governments of the United States and Panama respecting the responsibility for the disturbances mentioned, on April 26, 1915, the following proposal was transmitted from the Panaman Foreign Office to the American Minister to Panama for submission to the Secretary of State:

That one of the diplomatic agents of one of the friendly nations accredited in Panama, chosen freely by the Government of your excellency, shall be constituted and shall decide the amount of the indemnity which Panama should pay for each one of the murdered citizens and for each one of those who suffered wounds in the riot of July 4, 1912. If the Government of your excellency accepts the formula of settlement, which is equitable, it could be put in writing and the respective arbitral agreement signed binding the parties to respect and fulfill the decision which may be rendered.

The Department endeavored to make a direct settlement with the Panaman Government of the matter of the indemnity mentioned in that proposal but such effort failed, and thereupon, on August 7, 1915, the Department telegraphed the Minister to Panama to propose to the Foreign Office that your excellency constitute the arbiter in this case. A reply has been received from Mr. Price under date of August 13, 1915, in which it is stated that the Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs, by formal note, has agreed to your selection by this Government.

Accordingly the Department desires to express its earnest hope that you may find it possible to act in this capacity, and would be very much gratified to learn of your willingness so to do.

It may be said in this connection, that the only question which the arbiter will be called upon to determine will be the amount of the indemnity to be paid, and it is expected that arrangements can be entered into by which the evidence which the arbiter will be called upon to consider will consist solely of written documents, so that the demands which will be made upon the time of the arbiter would be reduced to a minimum.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note No. 121 of the 19th instant in which you kindly informed me of the controversy between the United States Government and Panama concerning the indemnities to be paid by the latter country for the death of two and the injury of about sixteen citizens of the United States, who were the victims of disturbances which took place in the city of Panama on July 4, 1912.

Your excellency stated that, after a long diplomatic correspondence between the two Governments which could not attain any satisfactory result, the Department of Foreign Affairs at Panama proposed that the diplomatic officer of some friendly nation accredited to Panama, and to be chosen by your excellency, be appointed as arbitrator to fix the amount of indemnity due from the Government for each of the American citizens killed and for each one injured. Further on I see that your excellency honored me by proposing me as arbitrator to the Panama Government, and that the latter saw fit to approve the choice, in consequence whereof you ask whether I am willing to accept the office. Your excellency added that provision might be made so that the evidence which the arbitrator has to consider will consist only of written documents, so that the arbitrator will be able to render his decision within a minimum period of time.

While thanking your excellency sincerely for the confidence which you showed in me by this choice, I have the honor to inform you that, having received the necessary authorization from my own Government, I hereby most gladly place myself at the disposal of the United States and Panama Governments, in consequence whereof I await the instructions which these two Governments may deem suitable to give me in order to enable me to fulfill the duties of arbitrator which they have done me the great honor to intrust to me.

Protocol between the United States and Panama concerning the determination of the amount of damages caused by the riot at Panama City, July 4, 1912.

PROTOCOL.

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Panama, through their respective Plenipotentiaries, His Excellency, William Jennings Price, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Panama, on the part of the United States, and His Excellency, Ernesto T. Lefevre, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, on the part of the Republic of Panama, being duly authorized thereto, have agreed upon and concluded the following protocol:

Whereas, the Government of the United States claims indemnities for the death and injury of American citizens in a riot which occurred in Cocoa Grove, Panama City, July 4, 1912, and

Whereas, the Government of Panama has agreed, in principle, to the payment of such indemnities irrespective of the circumstances affecting the riot; and

Whereas, the two Governments have been unable to agree upon the amounts of such indemnities, and have concluded to submit to arbitration the determination of the amounts to be paid by the Republic of Panama, it is, therefore agreed as follows:

ARTICLE I.

The High contracting parties agree to submit to His Excellency W. L. F. C. van Rappard, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary accredited by the Government of the Netherlands to the Governments of the United States and Panama, the determination of the amount of damages to be paid for each one of the American citizens killed and for each one injured as a result of the riot, and agrees that he shall award the amounts so determined against the Government of Panama.

ARTICLE II.

His Excellency W. L. F. C. van Rappard shall determine the amounts of such damages upon such papers as may be presented to him by the Secretary of State of the United States and the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Panama at Washington, respectively, within five months from the date of the signing of this agreement, but it is expressly understood and agreed that such papers shall relate only to the amount of damages to be paid.

The case shall then be closed unless His Excellency shall call for further documents, evidence, correspondence, or arguments from either Government, in which event, such further documents, evidence, correspondence or arguments shall be furnished within sixty days from the date of the call. If such documents, evidence, correspondence or arguments are not furnished within the time specified a decision in the case shall be given as if they did not exist.

The entire case of each Government shall be presented in writing.

ARTICLE III.

A reasonable honorarium to His Excellency W. L. F. C. van Rappard shall be paid by the Government of Panama.

ARTICLE IV.

The decision of His Excellency W. L. F. C. van Rappard shall be accepted as final and shall be binding upon the two Governments.

In witness whereof, the undersigned have hereunto signed their names and affixed their seals.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 665, of the 4th ultimo, in which you enclose a copy of a judgment of the Supreme Court of Panama, holding that there is no sufficient evidence on which to institute a prosecution growing out of the riot of July 4, 1912.

You will advise the Foreign Office as follows:

Having read with care the decision of the Supreme Court, the Department cannot refrain from expressing its keen disappointment at the signal failure of the Panaman authorities to fix responsibility upon any of the individuals of the Panaman police who were engaged in the acts of criminal aggression upon citizens of the United States in the disturbances of July 4, 1912, in which several American citizens were killed and a number of others wounded.

The several disturbances of a similar character, which have occurred since the tragedy of July 4, confirm the Department's belief that the lack of vigor displayed by the Panaman authorities to detect and punish those guilty in the first disturbances would lend encouragement to repetitions; and the Department gravely fears that the situation will not be improved by the decisions of the Panaman judges.

If, as found by the Panaman judges, no guilt can be traced to any of the police engaged in the outbreak of July 4, and if, as is said by the Supreme Court in the decision under notice, "since the unfortunate event of July 4, which was investigated in these proceedings, other similar ones have occurred in the cities of Panama and Colon, and now as then it has been impossible for the Panaman and American authorities to come to an agreement as to the underlying causes thereof," the wisdom of the stipulation in the Canal Treaty by which the United States Government may take over the policing of these cities is vindicated, resort to which treaty right the Government of the United States now finds it necessary to consider, to avoid further repetitions of these unfortunate occurrences.

II. FIGHT AT COCOA GROVE, FEBRUARY 14, 1915.

File No. 319.112C64.

Minister Price to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 14, 1915—7 a. m.

A fight took place this morning about 1 o'clock between an American soldier and Panaman police and civilians at Cocoa Grove red-light district of City of Panama resulting in two deaths, one a Panaman citizen and the other a Peruvian resident of Panama. About 21 American soldiers and 2 American civilians and about 21 Panamans were wounded also, most of them being now in hospitals but wounds apparently not serious. General Edwards and I with our respective staffs and in company with Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs and other high Panaman authorities have spent the night investigating the situation. Unable yet to place blame but a small quarrel seemed sufficient to extend to above results.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 14, 1915—midnight.

Supplementing my telegram of February 14, 7 a. m. It develops that only one was killed in the mêlée last night and that he was a Costa Rican negro resident of Panama; probably shot accidentally. Chief of Police of Panama who reported to me the two deaths cabled, admits he was misinformed. Four soldiers and several Panamans including a police lieutenant have bullet wounds which may prove serious to one soldier and to a Panaman boy fourteen years of age. Forty-odd others wounded are not in danger. Lieutenant Edgerly of the soldier patrol on duty was mistreated and bruised.

The trouble possibly originated from a small quarrel between a coachman and soldier in which a policeman interfered and the soldier resented it. The higher Panaman officials and police heads have been considerate. It is believed that but for the ignorance, excitability and lack of control of the body of the police force, trouble would not have occurred. Dissipation incident to first night of Annual Carnival was to a certain extent responsible for proportions the difficulty assumed.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 19, 1915.

SIR: Referring to my telegrams of February 14, 7 a. m. and midnight, and to the Department's telegraphic reply of February 16, I have the honor to report further regarding the mêlée in this city on last Saturday night, February 13, in which the National Police of Panama, Panaman civilians and American soldiers and civilians were involved.

The affray began about 1 o'clock Sunday morning in the red-light district of the city of Panama, known as Cocoa Grove, where the riot of July 4, 1912, occurred. There are naturally different versions of the origin of the trouble and it seems that perhaps several clashes took place within a short time of each other.

The account given in my telegram of midnight of the 14th, that a small quarrel began between one of our soldiers and a coachman, in which a policeman interfered, resulting in resentment on the part of the soldier is, so far, as reliable an account of the beginning of the difficulty as has been obtained.

The fighting spread rapidly over this district and then to other parts of the city, developing into an incipient riot. Americans, rather indiscriminately I am told, being jeered and hooted at and called "Gringos" and some of them being shot at and thrown at and otherwise abused. This was especially noticeable where a soldier's uniform came in view.

General Clarence R. Edwards, now in command of the military forces of the Canal Zone, and I both got on the scene as promptly as we could. General Edwards went at once to the central scene of conflict and quiet was gradually restored. A large number of our soldiers had been thrown under arrest quite indiscriminately by the police and had been incarcerated in what is known as the dungeon of the Central police station and were in a most crowded uncomfortable and unsanitary condition, one having a small knife wound across his back. Under my protest they were placed in better quarters. Secretary Lefevre, rather against the protest of certain other officials of Panama, agreed to start an examination, and, if it appeared that only suspicion and very indirect evidence was the cause of their arrest; that they would be placed under our guard, the higher officials agreeing to stand responsible for their production later, if wanted by Panama.

The examination soon resulted in all of the soldiers being turned over to us, and with these taken to the Zone, where General Edwards had already had all other soldiers who had been in the city that night dispatched, the situation was much relieved. I took particular occasion to express to Secretary Lefevre interest in as thorough and prompt an investigation as possible and the fixing of blame. I told him our investigation would be public and open and that a representative of the Panaman Government thereat would be welcomed; and that we should like to have the same consideration shown us at their investigation. Stating that their procedure required examination of witnesses in secret they would have to see later whether they could make an exceptional case of this. This feature is covered in Foreign Office notes passing between Sr. Lefevre and me, copies of which are enclosed, together with translation of his note, and attention called to the manner in which Secretary Lefevre attempted to make the record of what took place.

The military investigation began promptly Sunday morning at 9 o'clock although every one had been without sleep, and is still continuing. Secretary Lefevre, with Municipal Judge Guardia, attended the sessions that morning, but have not returned since. Several affidavits were taken by the Panamans and their investigation followed beginning on Tuesday morning last, with Lieut. E. G. Beuret present representing us. This, too, is still in progress. The Zone police are also getting affidavits and I am keeping in touch with all these.

There is one man dead, Benito Garcia, employed at Santo Tomás Hospital, Panama, as a painter. It now appears that he was a Nicaraguan by birth. Secretary Lefevre claims he had become a naturalized Panaman. However, today an American who talked with him at the hospital before this told me that the man claimed to be a Mexican. He was probably shot accidentally.

The dangerous and exasperating situation now and for several years existing here as the result of the conditions above characterized have been illustrated again by this outbreak.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt yesterday of your excellency's esteemed note No. S-5689 of February 17 formally noting that the presence was acceptable of a representative of the United States military forces stationed on the Canal at the investigation being carried on by authorities of your excellency's Government of the occurrences on the night of the 13th of this month in the city of Panama. I express to your excellency gratefulness for this consideration.

When on the night mentioned I gave assurance that the investigation to be conducted by our military authorities of the Canal Zone would be open and public and that representatives of your excellency's Government would be welcomed thereat both to hear and view the proceedings and to take part therein and expressed the hope that a like consideration might be shown them in the investigation held in Panama and when I repeated the same to the Honorable Secretary of Government and Justice of Panama on Monday morning last, who stated he would confer with your excellency regarding the matter, my action was prompted by the desire on the part of our authorities and myself that mutual considerateness might be evident in the investigation into this other deplorable happening between citizens of our respective countries. It was pleasing to us that your excellency on Monday afternoon indicated that our representative might be present and that said representative, Lieut. E. G. Beuret, was the recipient of the courtesies shown by your excellency in this matter.

Our authorities were most glad to have your excellency and Judge Guardia present on last Sunday at the investigation in progress at Fort Amador.

The matter of participation by representatives of your excellency's Government in our investigation and any and all suggestions agreeable to you to make has at all times, as I may repeat, been one of entire agreeableness to our authorities.

I am sure your excellency will concede the propriety of the insistent desire of my Government that the investigation by your excellency's authorities be thorough and that fairly and justly responsibility be fixed for this regrettable trouble.

I want to take this occasion to state again, what it gave me much pleasure to express heretofore, that my appreciation for the considerateness and courteous spirit already manifested by His Excellency the President of Panama and your excellency and certain other high officials of your excellency's Government in connection with this affair, is most cordial and that same has afforded me a pleasant opportunity to report it as such to my Government.

SIR: In continuance of reports upon the mêlée on February 14, 1915, between our soldiers and Panaman Police and civilians in the city of Panama, I have the honor to enclose clippings¹⁰ from the Panaman newspapers appearing shortly after the trouble.

It will be noted that the recommendation made by Generals Goethals and Edwards to the War Department that the policing of the cities of Panama and Colon be taken over by us under the Canal Treaty of 1903, became public a few days after the mêlée.

It will be observed, I think, that the objection to the recommendation was not as emphatic as might have been expected. Realization of the nearness to the exercise of this treaty right by us, to which the outbreak had brought Panama, pervades the editorials of the "Diario," an administration paper and owned partially by Minister Morales, the Panaman Minister to Washington. The recommendation made that action be taken by the National Assembly to provide for improvement of police conditions was not heeded before the Assembly adjourned.

I procured a list of the police force on duty in this city on the night of the trouble. It consists of 575 men, of whom 125 were added about two weeks before the Carnival. One Indolencio Franco appears on the force and I have been told by a leader of the opposition to the Porras administration that he was involved in the trouble with our sailors from the United States ship "Buffalo" in 1908, and that he ran away from Panama then to avoid prosecution. This same leader states that he has good reason to believe that quite a number of the policemen who were on duty when the riot of July 4, 1912, took place have been reinstated and were on the force on the night of February 14 last.

The copies of the reports of our authorities forwarded with despatch No. 461 of April 5, 1915, do not overlook the fact of a certain amount of blame resting upon some of our soldiers in connection with this affair. However, it seems quite well established that the soldiers were without arms, except the three Flobert rifles taken from a shooting gallery during the trouble; that the police were armed not only with pistols, but quite a number of them with high-power bayoneted rifles; that the first shooting was done by them and that there were evident quite early in the riot the loss of self-control and the exhibition of bad disposition toward Americans by the large body of them.

Panama, April 2, 1915.

A mêlée between American soldiers and Panama policemen and civilians took place late this afternoon in Colon resulting in Corporal Langdon of our Coast Artillery Corps stationed on the Atlantic side being killed by a Panaman policeman and three soldiers being wounded but not fatally. A slight scalp wound is the only injury to a Panaman so far reported. Policeman who killed Langdon was arrested by our soldiers.

It is stated that the trouble began between a soldier who had been drinking and a Panaman policeman neither of whom however seem to be among the injured. In addition to killing and wounding of the soldiers mentioned others were pelted with rocks. Good Friday holiday and a baseball game had drawn a number of soldiers to the city. As far as investigation now shows, shooting of Langdon was most unjustifiable. I shall proceed to Colon to-night.

Investigation of Colon mêlée is in progress by the military authorities. Testimony thus far indicates it was started from trifling cause and that killing of Langdon was reckless and unprovoked. Langdon was in charge of our patrol. Policeman under arrest was seen at a distance dodging back and forth from a blind and shooting at our soldiers generally, including Langdon.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, April 10, 1915.

SIR: Referring to my telegrams of April 2 and April 4, and the Department's telegram of April 6, I have the honor to report that investigations by our military authorities and by the Panaman authorities are still in progress, a representative of our respective authorities being in attendance at each other's hearings.

The investigation under charge of Col. Chamberlain, temporarily on the Zone on inspection duty, has continued from day to day, being now, since Thursday, when Col. Chamberlain left for the United States, conducted by Lieut. Goetz, Aide on staff of Brigadier General Edwards.

Lieut. Goetz was the one who arrested the policeman charged with shooting Corporal Maurice Langdon in charge of our patrol. * * * It seems now that up to this time no one has been found who can identify the policeman who shot Langdon, although there is good testimony that a policeman was seen dodging back and forth behind the corner of a building and shooting toward Langdon. Another Panaman policeman has been under arrest since Sunday, or Monday charged with participation in the riot.

I herewith enclose newspaper accounts of the affair.¹⁰ The one from Panama Morning Journal of April 3, and the small reference of April 7 in Star and Herald, are fairly accurate. The enclosure from Panama Morning Journal of April 5 was an account inspired by the Panaman officials.

As soon as I saw this last account I got in communication with the editor of the Morning Journal, Mr. Niemeyer, who lately came from the States to take charge of it, and he told me that this was written, including the item regarding the release of the policeman, pursuant to a report made to him by the Secretary of President Porras, and by one of Mr. Federico Boyd's sons, who proves to be Jorge, now sitting in place of his father on the Joint Land Commission. * * * I at once got into communication with the Panaman Foreign Office, protesting against the possible release of this policeman, and submitted a note, copy of which is enclosed. They declared he would not be released, and he is still in confinement.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to refer to the following paragraph appearing in the "Panama Morning Journal" in its issue of this morning in an article upon the mêlée in Colon Friday afternoon, namely:

Panaman government officials said last night that the policeman would be released today as it was absolutely proven that he could not have shot Langdon.

¹⁰ Not printed.

I am informed that the investigation being conducted by our military authorities has already brought forth strong evidence of the guilt of the policeman referred to and arrested for the killing of Corporal Langdon of our patrol of that afternoon and has so far disclosed a situation very different from that set forth in said newspaper article.

I am, of course, aware of the informality usually of accounts appearing in newspapers in cases of this kind, but in the name of my Government and out of all precaution I protest against the release of this man and represent to your excellency that my Government confidently expects a thorough and prompt investigation of this affair and such visitation of punishment and redress of grievances and conditions as a fair and impartial consideration of the whole affair may show to be just and proper.

The investigation by our authorities in this case has been and will be open to your excellency's representatives and an invitation through Governor R. S. Arcia was duly extended for your excellency's Government to have a representative present and the request made and, I understood, granted that we might have a representative present at the investigation by the authorities of your excellency's Government. For this purpose we should appreciate it to be given notice and opportunity to have our representative on hand at your excellency's investigations. I shall appreciate as prompt a response as possible and agreeable to your excellency to this note in this deplorable affair.

AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: I have the honor to report that the investigations continue by representatives of our authorities and those of Panama into the mêlée of April 2, 1915, in Colon. Lieut. Goetz, now in charge of our military investigation since the departure of Col. Chamberlain, confesses to me discouragement over inability to obtain direct evidence from any one as to the person guilty of shooting and killing Corporal Maurice Langdon and little identifying testimony as to the policemen guilty of shooting at a number of our soldiers on that afternoon. * * *

I enclose a copy of the report made by Captain H. D. Mitchell, Chief of the Canal Zone Police, to the Governor of the Panama Canal a few days after the mêlée. * * *

The next morning after the trouble I called upon Governor Arcia of Colon before returning to Panama and expressed earnest interest in prompt and thorough action by Panama and in the presence of a representative of our Government being permitted at their examinations; he expressed himself agreeably regarding these requests. I followed this with the note to Sr. Lefevre enclosed with despatch No. 469, and I now transmit Sr. Lefevre's response to same and its translation.

Both policemen are still in confinement.

There is no question that the Panaman authorities are more alarmed than they have ever been over the possible taking over of the policing of Panama and Colon pursuant to Article 7 of the Canal Treaty of 1903.

RIOT AT COLON APRIL 2, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report relative to the riot which occurred in Colon, Republic of Panama, April 2, 1915.

During the afternoon of the 2d instant, about 1,200 soldiers attended a ball game at Colon between the 5th Infantry and Cristobal teams. A special train of 17 coaches took the soldiers to Colon from their stations, and during the game was left on a spur track. During the game a number of soldiers left the ball grounds and visited the city of Colon. * * *

From the testimony given by a number of witnesses, it appears that the fight between the soldiers and police first occurred at the corner of 10th and Cash streets, about 5 p. m. It seems that the trouble arose through a quarrel between a civilian, Jamaican, and a soldier, caused by the negro trying to push his way through a dozen soldiers who were standing on the sidewalk. One of the soldiers shoved the negro aside and told him to walk around them. The latter took exception to the actions of the soldier and blows were exchanged until a policeman came along and took hold of the negro and pushed him across the street, where a number of negroes were standing. The negro returned and was again taken back by the officer, who was jeered by the crowd of negroes for his actions. In the meantime the controversy had attracted a number of soldiers, police, and natives. Testimony as to what immediately followed is conflicting and reference will be made only to that which appears to be verified by two or more witnesses.

1st. A policeman was accidentally struck by a swagger stick in the hands of a soldier, which the former resented, and he tried to arrest the soldier.

2d. The police tried to drive the soldiers away and the latter resisted.

The trivial affair with the negro grew complicated as the crowd increased and the police soon lost their heads and opened fire, without any provocation that would warrant such action on their part. I have been unable to find any evidence of intoxication among the soldiers such as one would naturally expect to find when looking for the causes of the riot. A number of witnesses have testified that at least four shots were fired by the police in endeavoring to compel the soldiers to leave this neighborhood. Privates Klimp and Riche-son were wounded as a result of this shooting.

After this affray had subsided, in which Governor Arcia and Commandante of Colon Police Catano assisted in restoring order, trouble broke out again near the corner of 11th Street and Broadway about the time the ball game terminated, which was about 5.20 p. m.

As the soldiers were leaving the ball grounds a number of small colored boys began throwing stones at them, and when the boys were joined by a number of colored men a general fusillade ensued, during which a number of soldiers, policemen and civilians were injured and several windows of buildings were broken. Just north of Hudson Alley and on either side of 11th Street several policemen opened fire, from the vicinity of two buildings located next to the vacant lots on 11th Street. Most of their firing was evidently directed at the soldiers on, and in the vicinity of, the special train. As the train carrying the soldiers pulled out of Colon rocks and clubs were thrown at the soldiers aboard by the crowd of negroes. Private Deloughery, who was standing on the rear platform of the train, was shot in the left side.

A squad of the guard, in charge of Corporal Maurice Langdon, was moving east on 11th Street from D Street, and as Langdon was standing on the sidewalk in front of a store on the southwest corner of 11th Street and Hudson Alley he was shot, and died while being taken to the hospital. On the afternoon of the 6th instant Capt. Carpenter removed a .38 caliber bullet from a door which was located about two feet to the south from the point where Corporal Langdon had been standing. After the latter had been shot, Privates Scott and Walsh, members of the patrol, who were standing in the street opposite the place where Corporal Langdon had stood, fired one shot each with their rifles at a policeman who was firing at them from behind the building located near the northeast corner of 11th Street and Hudson Alley. Private Hollan fired twice, and Private Keysanov once, at policemen who were firing from the rear of a building located on the southeast corner of 11th Street and Hudson Alley.

Two policemen are under arrest in the Colon police station pending an investigation relative to the shooting.

Three empty shells, caliber .38, were still warm when picked up by Capt. Carpenter in the rear of the building located at the southeast corner of 11th Street and Hudson Alley, immediately after the firing had ceased.

An investigation of the affray is being conducted by Colonel John L. Chamberlain, Inspector General, for the military authorities, and by Governor Arcia for the Panamans. Capt. J. M. Fulton, C. A. C., is representing the military authorities at the investigation of the Panamans, and Mr. Inocencio Galindo is representing the Panaman authorities at the military investigation.

In order to minimize any trouble that might arise between the soldiers and police in Panama City or Colon on occasions when a large number of the former are present, I would recommend that a strong military guard be detailed to patrol the city.

Respectfully,

H. D. MITCHELL,
Chief, Police and Fire Division.

BALBOA HEIGHTS, April 20, 1915.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE GOVERNOR.

With reference to the riot in Colon on April 2, 1915, I have to advise that of the two Panaman police officers who were in rear of the building at the south-east corner of Broadway and Hudson Alley during the riot between the soldiers and police, it is admitted by Governor Arcia of Colon and regarded as an established fact that one of the officers who were firing at the soldiers on the train was sub-lieutenant No. 3, who has been under arrest since that date. He answers the description of the policeman who shot Private Deloughery. The identity of the officer who was with him at the time, and who was also firing at the soldiers, has not as yet been learned.

From their position while in rear of the building they could not have fired the shot which killed Corporal Langdon. It has developed, however, that there were at least two policemen firing on Corporal Langdon's squad from behind a building located near the northeast corner of Broadway and Hudson Alley, but due to the fact that but one man exposed himself at a time in firing upon them, the members of the patrol were under the impression that but one policeman was shooting from that point. I have received confidential information to the effect that Miguel Navas, No. 1, was the officer who fired the shot that resulted in the death of Corporal Langdon.

Vigilante G. Gordon is said to have been on Broadway at the time of the riot, and to have positive knowledge as to the identity of the policemen who were at the location from which the shot, which killed Langdon, was fired. It has also been reported that Navas was armed with a 32-caliber automatic revolver.

In the statement made to Lieut. Callaway of the Canal Zone Police on April 3 by Inez Mose, brown Barbadian, female, 16 years of age, living in Colon on 9th and Cash Streets, and employed by a Mrs. Holderman as a servant, in concrete house No. 63, she states that Navas fired three shots at soldiers at the corner of 10th and Cash Streets, striking one soldier in the arm, a second in the chest and a third in the ear; but two soldiers, however, were shot at this place. Investigation is being continued in an effort to learn the identity of the officers who did the shooting.

[Extract.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,

Colon, May 3, 1915.

SIR: Referring to the riot which took place in Colon on April 2 last, I have the honor to submit the following report of the occurrence in question.

The main facts are well known, namely: a baseball game between the soldiers of the Fifth Infantry and the Cristobal baseball team was held at the ball grounds in Colon on the afternoon of April 2. A special train was run from Las Cascadas and Empire to bring the soldiers of the Fifth Infantry and the Tenth Infantry to witness the game. About eight hundred soldiers were concentrated in Colon for the above reason. During the game and subsequent thereto encounters occurred between the soldiers, Jamaican negroes, and Panaman policemen, which resulted in the shooting to death of Corporal Maurice Langdon of the Twenty-first Company, Coast Artillery Corps, the wounding by bullets of three other American soldiers, and injuries of a minor character received by one Panaman policeman and one Jamaican negro.

Besides the above facts, it is known that two distinct disturbances occurred during the afternoon; one in the city, at some distance from the ball field, while the game was in progress; and the other in the immediate vicinity of the ball field, at the conclusion of the game, when the visiting soldiers were entraining. The first affair was of comparatively minor importance, although two shots appear to have been fired by Panaman policemen and two soldiers to have been wounded. The second affair was a regular riot, characterized by fights between soldiers and Jamaican negroes, the stoning of houses by soldiers, the firing upon soldiers detailed as a provost guard while in the performance of their duty, and the firing upon the train containing unarmed soldiers by one or more Panaman policemen.

With respect to the immediate cause of these disorders and to the happenings in detail, neither the evidence brought out at the investigation by the United States military authorities nor at the investigation by the Governor of the Province of Colon appears to be clear or conclusive.

In regard to the first affair, the only facts which seem to have been established are that on or near the corner of Cash and Tenth Streets, in the restricted or red-light district, at sometime during the ball game, a fight occurred between two or three soldiers and some Jamaican negroes; that one or more Panaman policemen intervened; that two shots were fired by the policemen.

resulting in the wounding of two of the soldiers; and that one policeman was struck by a stick under the left eye.

With reference to the riot after the ball game, the facts appear to have been these: The Fifth Infantry team was defeated. An important decision of the umpire had gone against the soldiers, and their defeat left behind considerable soreness. In coming from the field to entrain, they were jeered at by a number of Jamaican negro boys. A soldier caught hold of one of the boys, and, without hurting him, apparently used him a little roughly. Some negro men in the crowd thereupon took part, throwing stones at the soldiers. This precipitated a general mêlée, in which soldiers, negroes and Panaman policemen participated, the latter using their revolvers and firing several shots into the crowd and at the train. In the meantime, word of the earlier trouble at Cash and Tenth Streets had reached some of the officers at the ball game, and orders had been given to detail a provost guard and get all the soldiers on the train, which was in waiting on a siding near the ball field. A company of the Coast Artillery Corps was promptly detailed as an armed guard, and upon its appearance, in squads of four men, the riot was quelled.

It was while Corporal Langdon was going to the scene of the trouble, in command of his squad, that he was shot down. The evidence as to who fired the fatal shot is very conflicting. It is not even certain that it was a policeman. There are indications that it may have been some person firing from the upper balcony of one of the neighboring houses.

It appears that five shots in all were fired by the soldiers, two by Corporal Langdon's squad at the time he was killed and three by other members of the provost guard. None of them took effect. * * *

It seems to me probable that if there had been a guard to patrol the red light district and to preserve order at the ball field, there would have been no trouble.

As to the future, I am of the opinion that similar disturbances are only likely to occur when a considerable number of soldiers from other posts, or sailors from visiting warships, are given liberty in Colon, and that this danger can be avoided if an adequate provost guard be provided in each case.

Another precautionary measure which would seem to me highly advisable and which I am inclined to believe might be practicable, is to prevail upon the Panaman authorities to disarm their policemen in Colon, except in the case of picked men detailed for special duty. Very few Panaman policemen, in my opinion, have the judgment and steadiness of nerve to be trusted with fire-arms. When any emergency arises, they are almost sure to become so excited as practically to be irresponsible. I doubt very much, for instance, if in the riot of April 2, the policemen intended deliberately and of malice to shoot down American soldiers. I think it more likely that owing to the excitement caused by the fights with the negroes and the stone-throwing they completely lost their heads, and, having firearms, used them without realizing fully what they were doing.

The facts set forth in the above report are not based upon direct evidence taken by me, but I think that you may safely accept the account given of the occurrences as substantially correct.

AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: Referring to the riot in Colon April 2 last, between our soldiers and police and civilians of Panama, I have the honor to report that there was loaned to this Legation last week by Brigadier General C. R. Edwards, Military Commander of the Canal Zone, a copy of the report of Colonel J. L. Chamberlain, Inspector General of the United States Army, made by him of an investigation conducted under his supervision between the 2d and 8th days of April.

I have had a copy made of said report and herewith enclose same. The last of the five recommendations made by Colonel Chamberlain in his report is as follows:

5. That, with as little delay as possible, the control of Panama and Colon and their environments be taken over by the Canal Zone authorities; such control to embrace regulation of the sale of liquor and "dope", as well as sanitation, prostitution, and police.

Colonel Chamberlain returned to the States along with Major General Leonard Wood on April 5 but since his departure the further investigation of the riot has been under the charge of Lieut. R. C. F. Goetz, Aide-de-camp on the Staff of Brigadier General Edwards. I am informed that he has just recently written his report and that same is being transmitted to the usual channels of the Department of War.

No. 642 IOED.]

HEADQUARTERS EASTERN DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR,
New York City, April 20, 1915.

INVESTIGATION OF DISTURBANCES, CITY OF COLON, PANAMA.

1. Report of investigation of trouble between enlisted men, U. S. Army, and Panaman police, and native civilians, which occurred in the city of Colon, Panama, on the afternoon of April 2, 1915, made in compliance with letter of instructions dated April 3, 1915.

2. Accompanying this report is the recorded testimony of about 225 witnesses, of whom about 30 are civilians; the remainder are officers and enlisted men of the U. S. Army. In addition to these witnesses many other persons were interviewed. * * *

CONCLUSIONS.

1. The immediate cause of the trouble in the first instance, which occurred at the corner of Cash and 10th Streets, was an accident which, had it occurred in a town under American control, would have amounted to nothing.

2. In the events which immediately followed, the enlisted men were not blameless, nor was their conduct all that could have been desired. Yet I believe that interference by the Panaman police was, under the circumstances, uncalled for, and resort to fire arms, resulting in the wounding of three men, wholly unwarranted.

3. The trouble at the close of the ball game on Broadway appears to have been brought about by one or more trifling events in which both sides were obviously equally at fault. That same became general in so short a time and assumed serious proportions, must, in my belief, be attributed to the intensely hostile feeling existing between the negroes and Panamans on the one side, and American soldiers and civilians on the other.

4. Resort to gunfire by the police, resulting in the killing of one soldier and wounding of another, while unwarranted, was under the conditions, a natural sequence of the events of a few moments before and of the general conditions already described.

5. The conduct of the soldiers at the ball park and about the street of Colon, prior to the trouble at Cash and 10th Streets, was excellent. After the trouble began, the prompt and energetic action of the officers and noncommissioned officers averted what might have been a disastrous fight. The men, many of whom were recruits, many of whom had been drinking to a greater or lesser extent, and all of whom were much wrought up because of the casualties, were quickly gotten under complete control. This, together with the self-restraint of the armed patrols when under fire, evinces on the whole a good state of discipline. The men are not angels, nor were their actions blameless—far from it. Yet, all things considered, it is believed that their conduct as a body was not open to severe criticism. Individuals were at fault, but there appear to be no instances calling for disciplinary action, except as hereinafter noted.

6. As set forth at length in this report, the trouble at Colon on April 2, as well as former troubles of a similar character, were due primarily to the intensely hostile feeling between American civilians and soldiers on the one hand, and the colored and native Panamans on the other, conditions which unless remedied, will lead to disastrous results. * * *

RECOMMENDATIONS.

* * * 4. The policeman who first opened fire, and those policemen whose shots resulted in the death of Corporal Langdon and in the wounding of Privates Klimp, Richeson, and Deloughery, should be duly punished by the Panaman authorities. Their identity is doubtless already known to the Panaman authorities, but as to their action in the matter I do not venture an opinion, since it is, among Americans, generally believed that the police, as a body, are political henchmen of the governing authorities. The Commanding General U. S. troops, C. Z., has this matter in charge, and pending his report no action is recommended.

5. That, with as little delay as possible, the control of Panama and Colon and their environments be taken over by the Canal Zone authorities; such control to embrace regulation of the sale of liquor and "dope," as well as sanitation, prostitution, and police.

AMERICAN LEGATION,

Panama, July 9, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to report further with reference to the matter of the prosecution of the Panaman policeman whose arrest, as heretofore reported by me, was accomplished at the instigation of our military authorities shortly after the riot between our soldiers and Panaman policemen and civilians in Colon on April 2 last.

Referring to my despatch No. 469 of April 10, 1915, and the Department's cables followed by instructions No. 134 of April 23, I enclose a copy of a note and its translation from the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama notifying me that he felt obligated to release said policeman from further custody. This note bore date of June 26, but was not delivered to this Legation until the afternoon of June 28 during the absence of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama in Colon and while I happened to be away from the Legation in conference with Acting Governor Harding of the Panama Canal.

As soon as I translated said note after its receipt I went at once to the Panaman Foreign Office, and though not finding Señor Lefevre in, I protested to the Subsecretary against the contemplated release of the policeman, and had them call police headquarters. They reported him still in custody. I communicated the matter to Brigadier General Edwards as promptly as possible by telephone, and later again visited the Foreign Office, this time finding Señor Lefevre. I protested to him vigorously against releasing said policeman. He assured me he was still under arrest, and asked me to withhold a formal note until he could look further into the matter, and promised me that he would continue to be detained and that he would transmit to me another note to that effect. On June 30 the subsequent note came, stating that his detention would be continued. A copy of same and its translation are also enclosed.

I enclose further a copy of a formal note sent by me in the matter, after consideration. This sets forth at length matters involved herein, and I refer to same and make it a part hereof rather than summarizing its contents.

It seems that the evidence connecting said policeman with the murder of Corporal Langdon is somewhat meager, but that accusing him of the shooting of Private Deloughery and wounding him is quite sufficient to justify not only a prosecution, but to uphold a conviction.

Panama, July 8, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to refer to the two notes of your excellency bearing dates respectively of June 26 and June 29 last, by the first of which your excellency indicated that you felt yourself obliged to place at liberty the policeman who has been under arrest growing out of the deplorable riot which occurred in Colon on the 2d of April last (which information was stated to be furnished as a matter of courtesy to this Legation and through it to our military authorities), and by the last of which notes your excellency was good enough to communicate that you would refuse to grant the petition of said policeman to be released and that he would be continued to be detained under arrest.

The latter note, following my vigorous protest to your excellency, made as promptly as was possible after the receipt of the first note, brought a sense of relief, for I must tell your excellency again that my surprise was complete and even more than surprise at the receipt of the first note.

I would refer to conferences which took place between your excellency and myself just subsequent to this riot and to my note No. 160 of April 5 last, protesting against the possible release of said policeman and expressing to your excellency the expectation that my Government indulged that a prompt and thorough investigation of said riot would be conducted by the officials of your excellency's Government and that a just and proper visitation of punishment and redress of grievances and conditions would be had.

I am informed from the investigation conducted by our military authorities into this matter that proof has been produced of a strong and convincing character showing said policeman to be guilty of having shot and wounded Private Deloughery, the American soldier who, while standing on the end of the train awaiting to return to his home, was recklessly shot and badly wounded in the arm; that other testimony has been given indicating that he may also have been the man who cruelly murdered Corporal Maurice Langdon on this same occasion. I am informed further that the representative of your excellency's Government was present at least when a part of this testimony was given before our military investigation and that the guilty participation of said policeman in certain of the wrongs of that day, as proved by reputable witnesses, has been recognized and acknowledged by an official representing Panama.

The investigation carried on by our military authorities in this matter, as your excellency knows, was a purely voluntary one for the purpose of rendering assistance to the authorities of your excellency's Government in ferreting out and bringing to punishment the parties culpable of the grievous misdeeds committed on that occasion. No responsibility has been assumed by our authorities for bringing to justice those responsible for the crimes of that day, because, in fact, no such responsibility could be assumed. The whole affair occurred on Panaman soil and within Panaman jurisdiction and the sole responsibility rests upon the Government of Panama and its authorities to bring the criminals to the bar, to mete out justice and to make amends for those distressing events. The residents of the neighborhood where the troubles of this day occurred are more familiar to Panama authorities than they could be to any one else; there were considerable numbers of the national police force of Panama present during the disturbances and the shootings that took place; and, therefore, in addition to the responsibility that rests upon the authorities of Panama, there also exists the favorable opportunity for them to obtain information and convicting testimony such as are not accessible to anyone else.

More than three months have now passed since this riot and not even one prosecution, it seems, has been instituted by Panama authorities. The arrest of the accused policeman had to be accomplished, or at any rate was accomplished, by one of the American military organizations, Lieut. R. C. F. Goetz, Aid-de-camp of Brigadier General C. R. Edwards; and even in the face of incriminating testimony a rumor became current a few days after his arrest that he was to be released; and now again it would appear that a disposition of leniency toward the accused man exists somewhere which ordinarily might be construed to be out of keeping with the earnestness and diligence which my Government has been relying upon as animating the prosecuting authorities of Panama after the catastrophe which took place in Colon on the day mentioned.

Our military authorities ever since this happening have stood ready and now stand ready to extend such aid as they can to your excellency's authorities in the conduct by the latter of vigorous prosecutions in this affair; but again I call to the attention of your excellency that the initiative and burden and responsibility in the whole matter rests with your excellency's Government.

As one of the aids in attempting to place responsibility it was deemed some time ago that it would be helpful if a list could be procured with their corresponding numbers of the police force of your excellency's Government on duty on the occasion of this occurrence in Colon, and information as to the particular section or district to which the respective numbers thereof had been assigned and were on duty at the time. I must inform your excellency that although four or five requests have been duly made by our American consular representative in Colon for such list and information, they have all been without avail. I deem it proper further to inform your excellency that the rumor has come to our authorities that the accused policeman has for some weeks been kept in only technical custody and not under actual arrest and custody at all.

In view of all the foregoing I would respectfully solicit from your excellency on behalf of my Government information upon the following points, which for the sake of convenience and clearness are classified serially as inquiries, in the following manner:

First. Has any criminal charge been lodged against said policeman or any other person growing out of the riot of April 2, in Colon; and if not, the reason why?

Second. What has been the nature of the detention and custody of said policeman since the time of his first arrest, and at what different places has he been since that time, and what is the nature of the custody now being exercised over him?

Third. If no criminal charge has been lodged or prosecution begun against said policeman or any one else pursuant to said riot, what is deemed necessary yet to be done before such charge may be entered and such prosecution begun?

Fourth. How many Panaman policemen and residents of the vicinities of said disturbances and eyewitnesses thereto have been brought before authorities of your excellency's Government and made to testify regarding said troubles, and what are the names of them?

Fifth. What are the names and numbers of the National Police force serving in Colon at the time of this riot, and where were they assigned to duty and where were they actually on duty at said time?

Your excellency, I am sure, must know how very much these outbreaks, occurring from time to time and now twice within recent months and resulting in each instance in the wounding and maiming of American citizens, have hurt and torn the feelings of my countrymen and have exasperated my Government. Considering the privileges accorded my Government under its treaty existing with Panama, its patience and forbearance under these trying circumstances have been most kindly. Not only the ability of Panama to maintain order, but its proper inclination to do so and certainly its active interest in having same maintained and examples made of those (the infliction of punishment upon whom might serve as a deterrent as well as impose just retribution, as distinguished from, at least, an indifferent attitude in the matter), have now been put to the test as perhaps never before.

With the fullest respect for the motives that animate your excellency, I appeal to the exercise of the energies and powers of your excellency's office to the intent that such other departments of your excellency's Government as may be more directly charged with the fulfillment of duties arising out of situations of this kind may be stirred to an activity that may bring forth beneficial results.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of a letter from Brigadier General C. R. Edwards, Military Commander of the Canal Zone, with which there was forwarded to the Legation a copy of the report of 2nd Lieut. R. C. F. Goetz, F. A., A. D. C., accompanied by copies of the evidence taken by him and Col. J. L. Chamberlain, in the matter of the investigation of the Colon riot of April last between our soldiers and Panaman police and civilians. Attached to Brigadier General Edwards' letter was a copy of his letter of the date of July 23 last forwarding to Major General Leonard A. Wood, as Commanding General of the Eastern Department, the said report of Lieut. Goetz, in which letter Brigadier General Edwards makes reference to several matters connected with or incidental to the riots of February 14 and April 2 last, including an appreciated one regarding the work of this Legation in connection therewith. The letter to me of date of July 13, mentioned in the third division of the letter of Brigadier General Edwards to Major General Wood as giving his views regarding the police conditions in the city of Panama, is the letter a copy of which was forwarded by me to the Department with my despatch No. 568 of July 26.¹²

I shall forward a copy of said report of Lieut. Goetz (unaccompanied by the evidence) as soon as we are able to make a copy.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES TROOPS,
PANAMA CANAL ZONE,
Ancon, C. Z., July 23, 1915.

1. I enclose herewith a report of the Colon riot of April 2, 1915, made by 2nd Lieut. Robert C. F. Goetz, 1st Field Artillery, A. D. C.

* * * Lieut. Goetz's report contains no new statements by witnesses. It consists largely of a statement of facts concerning his participation in the riot, his observations and conclusions being based on this participation and the evidence submitted by the various witnesses.

2. * * * I will forward a copy of Lieut. Goetz's report with evidence as well as a copy of this letter to the American Legation. * * *

3. * * * My views regarding the police conditions in Panama City were quite fully expressed * * * in a letter dated July 13, 1915 to the American Minister, Mr. Price, copy of which is enclosed. What I therein said applies equally well to the City of Colon, remembering only that this city is not nearly so large as the City of Panama. It is hardly necessary for me to state here, since I have occasion to call attention to the matter many times heretofore, that I have established at Balboa Heights a provost guard company for the purpose of assisting the police in Panama City. This provost guard consists of one company of Infantry—E company of the 10th regiment, which I moved from Camp Ot's to Balboa Heights, and put in tents in which it is still living. * * *

4. There is one company of Coast Artillery Corps stationed in Colon, and the Commanding Officer of the Coast Defenses of Panama also is stationed and lives in Colon. He is charged with maintaining the necessary provost guard patrols in that city. The extensive fire which occurred in Colon in the first part of May, has rendered it somewhat unlikely that any disturbances will occur there in the immediate future, and the patrols in that city are quite small, though, of course small patrols are still maintained.

5. I was in Colon on the day the riot occurred, and from the reports that came to me shortly after the riot, I was inevitably led to the conclusion that Corporal Maurice Langdon came to his death by a shot from the revolver in the hands of a policeman. This policeman was arrested and confined during the riot; I therefore requested the Governor not to release him under any conditions until I had been informed that it was proposed to discontinue his confinement. From Colonel Chamberlain's report and also that of Lieut. Goetz, I am convinced that he could be found guilty of the murder of Corporal Langdon, were he tried for it. I am satisfied he could be found guilty of shooting Private Deloughery, and for this he should be brought to trial by the Panaman authorities without delay. And, inasmuch as the conditions were such that it could easily happen that he was also the man who shot Corporal Langdon, I think he should be brought to trial on the charge of murdering the said corporal. In this connection, I desire to state that the American Minister, Mr. William Jennings Price, has shown great interest in this entire matter and his good work has been of much assistance. He recently learned that it was the intention of the Panaman authorities to release the policeman and he immediately and vigorously protested, with the result that the man is still in confinement. I, too, personally had spoken to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Lefevre. I shall rely upon the interest of the American Minister, and trust he may be able to secure a speedy trial of this policeman, though it may not be possible to have him tried before the Panaman authorities have completed the investigation of the riot which they are making. * * *

* * * * *

CONCLUSION.

* * * In the investigation of the Colon riot there is no evidence to show that there was any firing by the soldiers or citizens either foreign or American and I do not believe there was any. There was firing by the provost guard, but in every instance it was a case of returning the fire of the policemen. To my mind it was a very deplorable state of affairs. Here were the officers of the law, hired by the Government of Panama to keep peace, and they were the very ones to sneak into the passageways of the buildings, accentuate the trouble, making it an affair of life and death by their wanton and promiscuous firing.

Their firing was unprovoked, not justified, and not to handle any immediate situation that called for drastic action, but with apparently one idea in mind, to kill. The whole police situation of the two terminal cities of the Canal deserves our immediate attention and action.

I would recommend that the entire police control of Panama City and Colon be taken over by our Government; that American policemen, with a speaking knowledge of Spanish, be put there; Panaman arrests to be turned over to the Government of Panama for punishment or their proper disposition; American and foreign citizens and soldiers to be disposed of the same as in our own territory.

SIR: Referring to the note enclosed with my despatch No. 552 of July 9, transmitted by me to the Panaman Foreign Office protesting against the release of the Panaman policeman, I have the honor to enclose copies of three supplementary notes in which I have insisted upon a response to the note first mentioned.

The conference referred to in the third of these notes was one in which I took occasion to express to the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama my disappointment and surprise at the seemingly indifferent attitude of Panama in this matter; to say to him it was making an unfavorable impression upon my Government and to remark that I was unable to comprehend the motives actuating them in this, even viewing the situation from their own standpoint. I made the observation again that I did not believe that if the positions of our respective Governments had been reversed during recent years, his own Government would have been as forbearing as ours, and I made reference again in passing to our treaty privileges. In responding, Secretary Lefevre said that he had written the Superior Judge twice without avail for information regarding the prosecution of this policeman, and indulged in the opinion that our Government would not think of taking over their national police force in the cities of Panama and Colon, saying that it would be a practical deprivation of their sovereignty. I warned him against feeling assurance on this line if energetic action and satisfactory settlement in the cases of the last three riots on their part continued lacking.

I have received no response to any of the four notes mentioned.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to refer to the courteous notes of your excellency, Nos. 196, 203, 206, and 210, of the 8th and 28th of July and the 9th and 18th of the present month, respectively, relating to the events in the city of Colon on April 2 last, which I have not answered before because I was expecting information from the Department of Government and Justice, who in turn had to solicit the same from the judicial officials who have the matter in charge.

According to information furnished me by said Department, the steps taken on the first few days by the Mayor of Colon were referred to the Colon Circuit Court on May 17. On May 20, having found the investigation defective because some offenses committed at the same time as that of the murder had been overlooked, the Colon Circuit Judge extended the time in order to cure this defect. On July 28 the report was made to the Circuit Judge, who says that it will pass this week to the Superior Judge, who must decide the matter on the merits of the statements of the report, which the law makes confidential.

In regard to the inquiries which your excellency made in your note, the Secretary of Government and Justice advises me that until the competent judge decides as above said, it will be impossible to give you a categorical response to each of the questions formulated by your excellency.

With respect to the detention of the policeman, I can advise you that that has been in effect from the beginning, and that during the preliminary investigations he was held in one of the cells of the jail. At present, in view of the condition of his health, he has been transferred to Santo Tomás Hospital, but he is duly in custody there in the department for prisoners.

SIR: Referring to the Department's instruction No. 163 of July 23 and to my despatch No. 599 of August 30, I have the honor to transmit a copy of my reply, sent September 4, to said note of Señor Lefevre.

About the time of the transmission of this note Señor Lefevre called me over the telephone, saying that a few days before he had had a meeting of a number of their judicial officers, their Attorney General and the Governor of the Province of Panama at the President's palace; that he had read to them two of my notes and had attempted to impress upon them the necessity of diligence in these matters and had stated to them that if their police control in the cities of Panama and Colon were eventually taken from Panama, they must consider themselves partially to blame for it.

He said that he had a stenographer present and would send me a report of the proceedings. He remarked that he believed one beneficial result had already been obtained as he had that day been informed that the Supreme Court had affirmed the sentence of the lower court against Juan Antonio Almangor for stabbing, Mr. E. L. Rahlin, of the U. S. S. Denver, nearly two years ago. * * *

I am convinced that the same dilatory tactics will be utilized by Panama as were followed in the riot of July 4, 1912, and that effective and earnest prosecution will not be had unless Panama is made to feel, in default thereof, a real danger of our exercising our rights under article 7 of the Canal Treaty of 1903 with reference to taking over their police forces in the cities of Panama and Colon.

I doubt exceedingly whether any sustained energetic action will result from the meeting referred to above, even granting that sincere efforts were indulged in there, unless forceful demands on our part are continued in conjunction with the threats, at the very least, as to loss of their police control.

I respectfully solicit the further instruction of the Department.

EXCELLENCY: Acknowledging the receipt of your excellency's note No. S-7796 of August 28, 1915, in response to my notes Nos. 196, 203, 206 and 210, having relation [etc.], I have the honor to express to your excellency much surprise and disappointment over the failure of said response of your excellency to furnish any but a small part of the information asked for and over the indefinite and unsatisfactory character of such as was furnished.

I most respectfully call to the attention of your excellency that I have been informed that, in accordance with the agreement made promptly after the occurrence of this riot, there could be nothing in connection with the investigation conducted by the authorities of your excellency's Government which could be of such a private nature as would prevent the information being furnished which was requested on behalf of my Government in my note No. 196 of nearly two months ago; that such information, too, would be available from other than the one particular source referred to in your excellency's said note.

The interest of my Government in this whole matter is so great and the importance of the results of an earnest and diligent and sincere redress of the whole situation by your excellency's Government or the reverse thereof is believed to be fraught with such potentialities for your excellency's Government quite as much as for my own, that I must refer specifically to each of the questions asked in my said note No. 196, and with all due respect urge and insist upon the transmission with proper promptness to my Government of the information sought by them.

In order for my Government to have official knowledge as to the official or officials of your excellency's Government upon whom the responsibility rests both directly and indirectly for the fulfillment of obligations and duties arising as the result of these riots, the following additional information is respectfully requested:

First: The name of the Mayor of Colon referred to in your excellency's note and by whom he was appointed to office.

Second: The name of the Judge of the Colon Circuit and by whom he was appointed to office.

Third: The name of the Superior Judge and by whom he was appointed to office.

Fourth: The names and by whom they were appointed to office of all other judges and of the prosecuting attorney or attorneys who have all had to do officially with the matters growing out of said Colon riot and also of the riot taking place in the City of Panama on February 14 last; and likewise the same information as to the judges and prosecuting attorneys, who under the laws of your excellency's Government may yet have official connection with said matters, if they have not already had such connection.

It is hoped that certain of the information requested will, when furnished by your excellency, explain why important witnesses among our American soldiers to the events occurring in Colon have not been thus far utilized by the authorities of your excellency's Government, although our military authorities stood ready to present them whenever notified, which willingness was at the inception cordially expressed to the authorities of your excellency's Government and again made reference to in my said note No. 196.

herein from the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama of a character at all satisfactory. I enclose a copy of same and its translation.

The comparatively small number of witnesses thus far examined by the Panaman authorities in the matter is noticeable. With reference to my request regarding the police force the response is most meager, and I shall again request the full list.

Señor Lefevre has stated to me that he was arranging so that a representative of our Government chosen from the military authorities may be present at the further investigations and any prosecutions which may follow, with right to take part therein. He requested me to have General Edwards, Military Commander of the Canal Zone, designate some one, and stated that within a few days he expected to have the Attorney General of Panama go over with us the proceedings thus far followed and submit their plans as to the future. Upon the return of General Edwards this week from Costa Rica I shall submit Señor Lefevre's proposition to him for his decision as to whether the military cares to share the responsibility with Panama in the matter of the prosecutions in order to obtain more definite assurance by representation therein of the good faith of the efforts of the Panaman officials.

I should be glad to have expression of the opinion of the Department upon the policy involved in the matter.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, September 30, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to refer to the courteous note No. 217 from your excellency, of the 4th instant, bearing on the events which took place in Colon last April 2.

Although, as I told your excellency in my former note, according to our judicial code the report ordered by the judicial authorities is of a private character, nevertheless the Superior Judge of the Republic has told me that, as a courtesy to your excellency's Government, he will submit to you all the information possible, and we are trying to find the way within our laws for the Government of the United States to have representation in those judicial matters in which her citizens play a part.

I have been able to obtain almost all the information necessary to reply to the questions of the last two notes of your excellency, which I now proceed to answer in the following statements:

1. No writ of procedure against any person has as yet been issued, due to the fact that this affair is in the stage of investigation; when this is concluded the Superior Judge will issue his writ of procedure, if there is occasion for it. As regards the tardiness of the whole case, it is right to take into consideration that it deals with fixing the responsibilities for various crimes; that is, not only for the death of Corporal Langdon of the American patrol, and for wounds to different soldiers, among them James Deloughery, but also for the wounds suffered by various Panamans and some foreigners, and other crimes in connection with these, such as the damage caused to the property of Benigno Palma. This circumstance, together with the delays required by our codes, justifies in part the delay.

2. The policeman is provisionally detained on account of the complaints against him made in declarations taken before the American military authorities. It is for the Superior Judge to decide about his detention.

3. As stated above, before the Superior Judge decides on a writ of procedure against any person, it is necessary that the investigation be concluded. The Attorney General has promised that this shall occur with the least possible delay.

4. I enclose a list of the witnesses up to date who have given testimony in the case¹⁰ and I shall be glad if your excellency will send me the names of the witnesses which the American military authorities have ready to testify before our judicial authorities, as you told me, in order that the prosecuting attorney may present them to the superior judge and they may be able to testify.

5. I also enclose a list of the members of the police force who served in the streets of Colon where the disturbances took place on April 2.¹⁰

6. The Mayor of Colon who held the first investigations is Manuel de J. Grimaldo; he was appointed to this position by the Governor of Colon, Ruben Arcia.

7. Miguel A. Grimaldo, as Judge No. 1 of the Colon Circuit, at the designation of the Superior Judge of the Republic, conducted the investigation at the start; but when he became Judge No. 3 of the Panama Circuit, the new judge of the Colon Circuit, Gerardo Abrahams, also designated by the Superior Judge, continued it. The Superior Judge is J. Demosthenes Arosemena; the Attorney General, Chief of the Department of Prosecution, is Alfonso Fabrega.

Under the terms of the Panaman Constitution, all the judges are named by the Supreme Court; the prosecuting attorneys by the President.

8. The judge of the case, as has been stated, is the Superior Judge of the Republic and, for the second instance, for appeal or consultation, the Supreme Court.

I shall not close without telling your excellency that when it has been settled in what manner the United States Government will have representation in the case, you will be convinced that everything is being carried on with all possible fullness and justice, and the prosecuting attorney, who not only has the duty to prosecute but also to show up the truth whatever it may be, has genuine interest to see justice given in this case, which my Government is the first to deplore; and we are all anxious to cooperate so as to avoid a repetition of such events.

SIR: Making reference to my despatch No. 634 of October 4, I have the honor to transmit a copy of another note sent to Señor Lefevre in response to the one with said despatch.

Señor Lefevre, Panaman Secretary of Foreign Affairs, has promised me that he will furnish me the balance of the information referred to in my note.

It is deemed important to obtain all the information originally asked for, for the purpose of ascertaining how much good faith Panama has shown in this investigation so far, to locate other eye-witnesses and residents of the neighborhood where the riot took place whom the officials of Panama have not yet examined; also, to attempt to place the responsibility upon that portion of the police force upon whom it properly belongs, and to obtain a full list for the purpose of finding out how many of the police force on this date were policemen who were involved in prior riots and whose reemployment on the corps would of itself be an indictment of Panama's good faith toward us in these matters.

Due appreciation is expressed for the information thus transmitted by your excellency. FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, November 30, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to refer to the polite notes of your excellency, Nos. 234, 253, and 260, of the 7th and 30th of October and of the 8th instant, relating to the happenings in Colon on April 2 last.

As additional information to that which I was glad to send to your excellency in my note of September 30, I shall have the honor to include, as soon as I receive it from Colon, a list of the policemen who were on duty in the city of Colon on April 2.

As I said in the above-mentioned note, this office, as an act of courtesy towards your excellency's Government and in order to give a proof of the impartiality with which the Panaman judicial power proceeds, has been studying, in conjunction with the office of the Prosecuting Attorney, the means by which your Legation can have representation at the hearing of the recent criminal causes resulting in riots in the cities of Colon and Panama, in which American citizens were involved; and now I am glad to tell your excellency that the Prosecuting Attorney of the Superior Court thinks that the only way of obtaining this end, in conformity to our law, is that your excellency appoint a representative who shall get in touch with him and who can ask questions and cross-questions during the progress of the case, through the Prosecuting Attorney, and acquire in this way the necessary information and bring into the case all the proofs he desires and which have not been recognized by our judicial authorities.

In virtue of which I beg your excellency, if you think it suitable, to appoint this representative, who should know Spanish and if possible have some knowledge of our laws.

I permit myself to remind your excellency that as yet this office has not received the names of the witnesses which the American military authorities hold ready to testify before our judicial authorities, according to the statement of your excellency, and I request you to please send it as soon as possible so as to avoid further delay in the hearing of the case.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, December 6, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt on Saturday of your excellency's note No. S-8533, in response to several late notes of mine relating to the matter of the riot in the city of Colon on April 2 last.

Your excellency will permit me to express regret that none of the questions seeking information respecting the investigation in this matter which were left unanswered by your excellency's note, No. S-8057, of September 30 last, is yet answered by the note now received, including the list of policemen on duty in Colon on the day mentioned, and as well the designation of which of the witnesses were eye-witnesses in the list of those submitted by your excellency's former note.

I note that your excellency states that your excellency's office in conjunction with the Prosecuting Attorney has been studying the means by which this Legation can have representation at the hearing of the recent criminal causes resulting in riots in the cities of Panama and Colon, and that your excellency reports that the Prosecuting Attorney of the Superior Court thinks that the only way of obtaining this end is for such a representative to get in touch with him, and who thus will be given the privilege of asking questions during the progress of the cases, but only through the medium of the Prosecuting Attorney, and thus to acquire information useful in bringing into the cases testimony which may not have been presented by the judicial authorities of Panama. Your excellency is kind enough to offer to suggest that this representative be appointed.

In reply thereto, I have the honor to advise your excellency that Brigadier General C. R. Edwards, Military Commander of the Canal Zone, has designated Captain Oliver Edwards as the representative of our military authorities in the Canal Zone to attend the prosecutions conducted by your excellency's authorities in said cases, provided this may be acceptable to your excellency's Government; but said representative under all the circumstances will not take part in the conduct of such prosecution. This Legation, while appreciating the courtesy of the offer of your excellency, in view of the whole situation will offer no one as its representative in a capacity described by your excellency.

It is presumed that in no sense will it be expected by your excellency's Government that any part taken by any one connected with my Government in these matters will be construed as any assumption of responsibility for the institution or outcome of any investigation or prosecution herein, and acting upon said presumption the designation of Captain Edwards is made.

There is further noted the reminder of your excellency's note that the names of witnesses which the American military authorities hold ready to testify before Panaman judicial authorities have not been sent in.

In view of the prolonged delay of your excellency's authorities in furnishing my Government information asked for in this matter, the tardiness of such investigation as has been made, the failure thus far to give any information as to which of the comparatively small number of witnesses having any direct knowledge of the happenings on said occasion, and the further fact that your excellency in your note of September 30 represented that you would later communicate the decision that might be arrived at with reference to the manner that my Government might have representation in these affairs in connection with the assurance that my Government would be thus convinced that the investigation is being carried on by your excellency's authorities with all possible decision and justice, it seemed the proper conclusion that your excellency did not expect the list of the witnesses examined by our military authorities, who have been available to your excellency's Government ever since the happening of this event, until my Government might have the additional communication proffered as aforesaid in your excellency's note above mentioned.

My Government would be pleased to know the present status of this investigation and what, if any, further steps have been taken since the receipt of your excellency's said note, No. S-8057, of September 30, beyond the reaching of the conclusion communicated by the last note of your excellency, regarding the manner in which a representation from our authorities might be permitted to take any part in this investigation.

Again I would respectfully request for my Government the balance of the information now so many times asked for and that the good offices of your excellency may be exerted so that all diligent and sustained efforts on the part of those having responsibilities in these matters without further delays may be put forth to remedy the wrongs committed on the occasions of these riots, and to search out those guilty and to impose penalties of a character that should be a deterrent in the future against a repetition of such events.

IV. PROPOSAL TO DEMAND DELIVERY TO THE CANAL AUTHORITIES OF THE RIFLES OF THE PANAMAN POLICE, FOR STORAGE.

File No. 419.11D29/87.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 7, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a despatch¹³ received from the American Minister to the Republic of Panama, containing his report upon a conference which he had with the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Panama, in which conference certain proposals were made by Panama regarding the control of the Panaman police by American policemen. A copy of the before-mentioned despatch is forwarded for your information, and it is requested that this Department may be favored with the views of the War Department concerning the proposal outlined by the Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs.

So far Minister Price does not seem to have received the note promised him by Señor Lefevre, the Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs, in which a formal proposal along the lines of the conference was to be made. This Department, however, would like to be informed as to the views of the War Department, in order that no time may be lost in acting upon Señor Lefevre's suggestions, once they are received.

For your information, the Department of State ventures to express its opinion, as a matter of policy, that the degree of control allowed the American policemen and their subordination to Panaman superiors which would result from the scheme as outlined by Señor Lefevre, does not meet with the approval of the Department.

It is also felt that should any control of the Panaman police be attempted by the American authorities it should be absolute in character, allowing a free hand to the American official who would be in charge of the American personnel and whatever Panaman personnel would seem best under the circumstances.

It is true that this Government has, in the past, failed to avail itself of the rights which it has under the terms of the treaty with Panama, to insist upon the control of the police on the Isthmus. The recent riots there, however, have again brought the matter to the attention of this Government and in order to take whatever action may seem best in the premises, it wishes to be in possession of such views as your Department may care to submit, regarding full American control of the police in Panama.

The Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, May 11, 1915.

SIR: On February 15, 1915, the Department received a report to the effect that in an altercation between enlisted men of the Army and Panama police, in the City of Panama on the morning of February 14, 1915, a number of enlisted men had been wounded or otherwise injured; and on April 3, 1915, a report was received to the effect that a disturbance somewhat similar in character to the one referred to above had occurred on the afternoon of April 2, 1915, in the City of Colon, Panama, during a ball game between a team of the 5th Infantry and a team from Cristobal composed of enlisted men and civilians, which disturbance resulted in the death of Corporal Maurice Langdon, 21st Company, Coast Artillery Corps, who was in command of an Army patrol, and in the wounding, more or less seriously of three other enlisted men of the Army, by Panama police.

In reporting upon these occurrences, the Commanding General, Eastern Department, within the territorial limits of which department the Canal Zone is located, recommended that representations be made to the Government of Panama with a view to securing the arrest and trial of those responsible for the death of Corporal Langdon, and for the wounding or injuring of the other enlisted men referred to above; and that the present uncertain status of the patrols maintained by the United States military authorities in the cities of Panama and Colon be placed upon a definitely established and well recognized basis, through an agreement between the Government of the United States and the Government of Panama, which agreement should define clearly the functions and powers of these patrols.

This Department concurs in the recommendations of the department commander as set forth above, and is of the opinion that the patrols should have general authority to arrest soldiers and sailors of the United States and other persons connected with the military and naval establishments of the United States, within the limits of the cities of Panama and Colon. I have, therefore, the honor to request that, if agreeable to the Department of State, representations in accordance with the foregoing be made to the Government of Panama, and to suggest that prior to asking the necessary concessions from that Government the United States diplomatic representative at Panama ascertain in conference with Major General George W. Goethals and Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards the exact powers and functions that should be vested in the military patrols.

Very respectfully,

LINDLEY M. GARRISON.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, May 15, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 7, 1915, transmitting the copy of a dispatch from the American Minister to the Republic of Panama containing the latter's report upon a conference which he had had with the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Panama as to certain proposals made by Panama regarding the control of the Panaman police by American police.

The Department of State expresses the desire, in the above letter, to be in possession of such views as the War Department may care to submit, regarding full American control of the police in Panama.

Before stating the views desired by the Department of State, I take advantage of this opportunity to express the full accord with that Department on the part of the War Department in the view—

That should any control of the Panaman police be attempted by the American authorities it should be absolute in character, allowing a free hand to the American official who would be in charge of the American personnel and whatever Panaman personnel would seem best under the circumstances.

Since the receipt of the Department of State's letter of above-mentioned date, I have conferred upon the subject with Major General George W. Goethals, Governor of the Panama Canal. I learned from him that prior to his recent departure from the Canal Zone he had three conferences with Señor Lefevre concerning the police situation in the terminal cities. The propositions made to him by Señor Lefevre were, apparently, the same as those reported in the dispatch from the American Minister to the Republic of Panama as having been made to him in conference with the same gentleman. General Goethals states that, after discussing the matter with the American Minister, he informed Señor Lefevre that in his opinion the proposed arrangement would not work satisfactorily, and for the same reasons which apparently led to the view expressed in the Department of State's letter of the 7th instant to this Department.

General Goethals states that Señor Lefevre then suggested that the former assist him in securing the services of two Americans as instructors of police, one for Panama and one for Colon. He replied that he hesitated to recommend Americans, who would probably be placed in the same embarrassing position as were Colonel Clark and Major Helfert, both of whom had been recommended by the Department of State as instructors of the Panaman police, but who were given no authority over the police.

There appears to be a general concurrence of opinion on the part of the War Department officials in the Canal Zone that assured safety can be attained only by assuming complete police control of the two terminal cities under the terms of the existing treaty.

In transmitting these views to the War Department, Major General Wood (within the geographical limits of whose department the Canal Zone lies) recommended that, as a tentative and possible preliminary measure, the exact status and powers of the American military patrols in the cities of Colon and Panama be defined in agreement between this Government and that of the Republic of Panama. This recommendation was made in the hope that such an agreement might make unnecessary the more drastic step of assuming complete control under the terms of the treaty. I concurred in this recommendation and communicated the views of this Department to the Department of State in my letter of the 11th instant. I renew my recommendation conveyed in that letter in the hope that should a satisfactory agreement be entered into, it may be unnecessary to consider the question of more complete police control.

Very respectfully,

HENRY S. BRECKINRIDGE.

SIR: Referring to the Department's instruction No. 146 of May 17 in which I was directed to obtain the opinions of Major General Geo. W. Goethals and Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards as to the "exact powers and functions that should be vested in the military patrols" maintained by the United States military authorities in the cities of Panama and Colon, I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received from Brigadier General Edwards pursuant to my conference with him and to my letter asking for definite expression of his opinion.

I conferred, also with Major General Goethals about this matter after his recent return from the States and filed with him a letter referring to Department's instruction and requesting expression of his opinion in the same matter. Major General Goethals states to me that in the absence of farther reaching measures, such as taking over the policing of these cities, being authorized by the Department, he concurs in the expressions given by Brigadier General Edwards, a copy of the letter aforesaid having been submitted by the latter to the former, and that, being most busy with his annual report which he is attempting to finish before going to the States next week, he would ask that the said letter of Brigadier General Edwards be taken as his response in this matter, with the prefatory remark just above related.

*General Edwards to Minister Price.*HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES TROOPS, PANAMA CANAL ZONE,
Ancon, C. Z., July 13, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th ult., and its enclosures relating to the question of reducing to definite written terms the functions and powers of the American soldier patrols in the cities of Panama and Colon. I have conferred with Governor Goethals upon this question, and he concurs with me in the following:

That it is not advisable to attempt any definite written agreement as to the functions and powers of the patrols; the present status is as satisfactory as any can be, short of absolutely taking over the police and sanitation of the two cities. No amount of preexistent written terms can meet abnormal conditions in time of riot, and it is believed the present working arrangement is as fully efficacious in the prevention of riots and the stopping of them when started as would be any agreement in definite written terms. I might add, however, that in this General Goethals also agrees, that if you could secure from the Panaman Government the disarmament of the Panaman police of high-powered rifles, it would be an essential precaution and the strict enforcement of the law against carrying of weapons which now is the general practice would be most wise.

I consider it not inappropriate to add in this letter the following regarding the conditions that now obtain in Panama and Colon: After the riot in Panama on February 14, 1915, the American patrols in that city were increased in size and later a company of infantry was brought to Balboa for station and took up the duty of provost guard in the City of Panama. There were, of course, no quarters for these troops and they have been and are still living in tents.

A small provost guard has been maintained in the City of Colon by the company of Coast Artillery Corps stationed at Cristobal. By informal conferences with the Panaman officials, the authority of these patrols has been quite definitely fixed, and there has been now for several months an absence of friction.

The power possessed by those patrols is practically the power of arresting of all soldiers and also sailors, except in the case of felonies and serious crimes, and the turning over of the soldiers and sailors arrested to the military and naval authorities for trial. It is the purpose of the military authorities to allow felonies and serious crimes to be tried by Panaman courts, and also to allow arrests of soldiers and sailors by the Panaman police in cases of less serious offenses when the disturbance occurs in the absence of any members of the American patrols.

At present the courts of both countries, military as well as civil, are open and by arrangement ample notice is given by either Government in order that a representative of the other may be present at any trial. I consider it very necessary that this arrangement be continued and ask you to pardon a suggestion this matter be kept in mind in any conferences you may have at different times with the Panaman authorities.

I may also add that the sale of deleterious drugs in the Republic of Panama is a serious danger to Americans, civilian as well as soldiers. General Goethals informs me that he will forward a letter requesting that as drastic action as possible to prevent the sale of these drugs be taken by the President of Panama by proclamation, with an added request that the Panaman Government shall undertake its best offices to secure at the next meeting of its Legislature the passage of a bill as drastic as our recent act (December 17, 1914) protecting the people in this regard.

I may add that in my opinion the Panaman Government or the municipal authorities should provide adequate shelter to take care of the patrols when on actual duty in the cities of Panama and Colon. Perhaps a request from you might accomplish this.

Very respectfully,

C. R. EDWARDS,
Brigadier General, Commanding.

The Secretary of State to Minister Price.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 25, 1915.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch No. 568, dated July 26, 1915, with which you transmitted a copy of a letter from Brigadier General Edwards, in reply to your request for the opinions of Major General Goethals and Brigadier General Edwards as to the "exact powers and functions that should be vested in the military patrols" maintained by the United States military authorities in the cities of Panama and Colon.

The Department notes that in the opinion of these officers it is not advisable to attempt any definite written agreement as to the functions and powers of these patrols, and that the present status is as satisfactory as any can be, short of taking over the policing and sanitation of the two cities in their entirety, by the American authorities.

The Department further notes in General Edwards' letter "that if you could secure from the Panaman Government the disarmament of the Panaman police of high-powered rifles, it would be an essential precaution and the strict enforcement of the law against carrying of weapons, which now is the general practice, would be most wise."

You are instructed to bring this matter to the attention of the Panaman Foreign Office, and to urge upon it the disarmament of its police personnel, and the strict enforcement of the law against carrying weapons, as suggested by General Edwards. You may communicate with the General, informing him of the reply of the Foreign Office to your representations.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 16, 1915.

SIR: In compliance with the Department's instruction of August 25 last directing me to urge upon the Government of Panama the disarmament of the National Police of Panama of large arms, such as rifles, and the strict enforcement of the law against carrying concealed deadly weapons, I have the honor to report that I held several conferences with the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama, in which he indicated that the request of the Department would be fulfilled. I transmitted a Foreign Office note in connection therewith, a copy of which accompanies this despatch. * * *

The practical carrying out of the disarmament of the police of Panama will require not only dispossessing them of the rifles, but, also, the disposal of said arms in a manner to preclude as near as possible their access to them, particularly in cases of outbreaks or riots such as have taken place. This would entail either the sale of them or their storage in a proper place and for us to be assured of good faith in the matter it would seem requisite that we have a representative to check up what was done with them. * * *

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 15, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to refer to our conferences upon the matter and in confirming same to present to your excellency's attention more formally, in justice not only to our military authorities most directly affected but also in justice to the subject both in the abstract and in the concrete, the following situation.

Within a period of a little over three years last past, three riots have taken place in the cities of Panama and Colon in which the National Police of Panama and American soldiers were most largely involved. As a result thereof one Spaniard and three Americans have been killed and a great many Americans wounded, some very seriously. The injuries on the other hand suffered by Panamanians have been comparatively slight, and the only other person coming to his death was an alien bystander, who seems to have been shot accidentally. The two cities named are thickly populated in a closely built up area with nearly all of their streets and avenues very narrow.

In each of these riots American soldiers almost to a man have been unarmed. The National Police of Panama contrariwise have very largely been armed with high-power rifles in addition to small arms, and have not failed to use them recklessly in the narrow streets of these closely built cities.

It is believed not only by our military authorities but by others, also, who have had experience and observation entitling their opinions to much weight, that the equipment by the National Police of Panama with anything larger than small fire-arms, constitutes a continued menace and serves no good purpose whatever; that even in cases of large disturbances such equipment has been, and will continue to be, a factor bringing about increased tumult and resulting in extremes of violence and in no way aiding to restore peace and order.

As your excellency well knows, there has been no settlement of the matters and issues growing out of any one of the three riots referred to; not a single person has been prosecuted or even a prosecution begun against any individual in the courts of your excellency's Republic for the murders and wounds inflicted on my countrymen; and not a cent of indemnity has been paid as a result thereof, though credit is awarded to Panama to the extent that within recent weeks she has agreed to pay money indemnities on account of the riot of July 4, 1912, upon condition that the amount thereof should be named by an arbitrator.

I shall not rehearse here the vexations that my Government feels that it has been subjected to in its patient demands to obtain a fair and just settlement of these troubles and a promptness and energy of action on the part of your excellency's Government in the visitation of punishment upon those guilty in a manner sufficiently decisive and admonishing to have a restraining and beneficial effect throughout future years. I beg leave to refer, however, to the various notes to your excellency's Government by this Legation through the Foreign Office over which your excellency so worthily presides, having relation to the matters now adverted to.

The rights possessed by my Government under Article VII of the Canal Treaty of 1903, with reference to the maintenance of public order in said cities of your excellency's Republic, have not yet been exercised by my Government because it has preferred to show the utmost consideration at all times to your excellency's Republic and to afford it the fullest opportunity to exhibit good faith with reference to the matters spoken of. I may say to your excellency that in the opinion of many people my Government has already displayed a patience and forbearance far beyond what the amenities even of such a situation might seem to suggest.

While the settlement of matters growing out of said riots are still pending and in view of the fact that no one knows from past experience what day or night serious trouble may break forth again in these cities, I am instructed by my Government, pursuant to the recommendation of our military authorities, to request at the hands of your excellency's Government the disarmament, without further delay than necessary for the prompt accomplishment of such a purpose, of the National Police in said cities of all except small fire-arms in the shape of pistols, and that any access by the said police to other than such small fire-arms be made as impossible as practicable. I am instructed further to make the additional request that energy and persistent watchful measures be carried out resulting in the strict enforcement of the law against carrying concealed deadly weapons by any one not authorized by law to carry them.

It may be well to say that this request on the part of my Government must not be construed in any sense to be any compromise of its right and authority possessed under the article of said treaty above named, nor as the slightest indication that my Government will not fully exercise its right and authority granted thereby and in accordance with its own judgment with reference thereto, if at any time, no matter how soon, it may appear to the judgment of my Government that the exercise of said right and authority should not longer be withheld.

While awaiting the response of your excellency with all interest

CITY OF PANAMA, September 4, 1915.

MY DEAR FRIEND: In accordance with a memorandum that was put into my hands by my friend Capt. Coleman, who had been talking to Señor Estripeaut, Chief of Police, I now, as before, reiterate to you and your agent. I have newly given orders for the terminating of carrying arms by people visiting Cocoa Grove. The licenses that have been given by the Alcalde to carry weapons such as revolvers, have been given in favor of owners of establishments who are of high standing in the cited district.

He has also given permission to some politicians, such as Dr. Mendoza, Dr. Filos, Dr. Agustin Argote, Mr. Turner, and to some other persons in exceptional cases, and moreover some of these parties are in the service of the Government. I wish to call your attention to the fact that I am an impartial Mayor. Some people, in all parts of the world, carry arms with malicious intent. Never have I given nor never will I give permission to carry arms of any description, since I am of the opinion that these elements are a menace to society. To carry razors, knives or daggers is not a practice in this District, nor have I given permission during my administration for the carrying of such weapons.

Your letter to me to establish greater vigilance in this respect, and which has been said before, the Chief of Police has offered to redouble the vigilance to help me remedy these points.

With relation to the stationing of the military police in the district of Cocoa Grove, the suffering humanity will continue unless a better assignment of the patrols can be made, which I cited to Captain Coleman yesterday, and if we can agree upon a place to lodge the patrols, to be paid for by the Panaman Government, the patrols will be more efficient in the district of Cocoa Grove, and more in harmony with the police of Santa Ana, established for service in the same district. The desired results will be obtained which we all wish, and which will prevent disturbances that might bring lamentable consequences.

God grant, dear General, that these things will contribute to a better understanding between the authorities of the United States, the Canal Zone and the Panamans, which has always been my earnest desire in the execution of my office as Mayor of the District of Panama.

I reiterate [etc.]

The Mayor of Panama to the Chief of Police.

PANAMA, September 4, 1915.

GREETINGS: Reiterating my previous statements relative to the registration and confiscation of arms, without any consideration of class, of the inhabitants of Cocoa Grove, I add that the same applies to the police not in uniform, and to all others in the said district not in the service. You know that the Mayor has given certain individuals, owners of highly respectable establishments, permission to carry revolvers in order to protect their places from scandal. The same has been granted to some few responsible persons, such as politicians, not a menace to society. The Alcalde has never given permission to carry revolvers to persons who are known bad characters nor has permission ever been granted to carry razors, daggers or knives; this appears on the books of the township.

You will take the necessary action through your agents to confiscate the above-mentioned arms in order to prevent scandal and lamentable consequences. I trust in the zeal and fidelity with which you have always distinguished yourself in the exercise of your delicate duties.

With my expression of very deep appreciation,

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 648 of October 16, I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter from Major General George W. Goethals, Governor of the Panama Canal, in response to a request of mine for such suggestions as he might be willing to make with reference to the practical manner for putting into effect our demands herein. I knew that a quantity of arms, in use, I think, before Panama became a Republic, were kept stored by the Canal authorities for several years. Same, consisting of old and out of date fire arms, were returned to Panama last year sometime, when they were disposed of at auction sale to a merchant here at quite a small sum.

General Leonidas Pretelt, former Chief of Police here, tells me that the Republic of Panama owns about 3000 rifles, of which 1300 are here in the city of Panama and 250 in the city of Colon. He states that they are kept in police headquarters and that 800 of those in this city and 250 in Colon are an older make of rifle and that 500 of those in this capital are of a most modern pattern.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note No. 567, dated October 19, 1915, with reference to disarming the National Police force of the Republic of Panama in the cities of Panama and Colon, of their high-power rifles, and the strict enforcement of the law governing the carrying of concealed deadly weapons. In response to your request I desire to submit for your consideration the following recommendations in the premises:

1. That a committee of two be appointed, one to be designated by the Governor of the Panama Canal and the other by the President of the Republic of Panama, or their representatives, to check the records of the Panaman authorities relative to the number and location of said rifles and the ammunition for same, and also to supervise their collection and shipment to a designated storehouse or building.

2. That the rifles and ammunition be stored in a building over which the Canal Zone Government exercises control.

3. That an employee of the Supply Department be designated to act for the Canal Zone Government.

4. That any high-power rifles in the possession of the prison guards be replaced with shot-guns.

5. That a copy of the Executive Order No. 68, under date of November 7, 1913, relative to the regulations for carrying firearms, be furnished the Panaman authorities, with the request that similar regulations be adopted by them, with a view of breaking up the general practice of carrying firearms by the public at large in the Republic of Panama.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 648, of the 16th ultimo, in which you report that you have held several conferences with the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama regarding the suggested disarmament of the national police of Panama of large arms, such as rifles, and the strict enforcement of the law against the carrying of concealed deadly weapons, and forward a copy of the note which you addressed to the Foreign Office regarding the matter.

The Department will await the receipt of the reply which may be made to your note by the Panama Foreign Office before further instructing you in the case.

The Department notes your comment that, in order to dispose of the rifles referred to above to prevent further access to them by the police, they should be sold or stored in a proper place where this Government could be assured that they would be kept in good faith. The Department is inclined to the opinion that the rifles should be sold. It will, however, be glad to have you discuss this matter with the Canal Zone authorities and then report further concerning it.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, November 12, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: In due course the polite note of your excellency, No. 247, of October 15, was received in this office, in which, after various considerations on the riots occurring in the cities of Panama and Colon between American citizens and Panamans or nationals of other countries in which the Panaman police intervened, and on the results of the riots, your excellency affirms that in the riots the police were armed with high-powered rifles in addition to small arms, and you conclude requesting from the Government of Panama the disarmament, with as little delay as possible, of the National Police stationed in the two cities, with the exception of the small arms in the form of pistols; and that the police may be prevented in any way possible from having access to any arms which are not of the last category. Your excellency also requests that energetic and persistent means of vigilance may be taken in order that the law may be strictly observed which prohibits the bearing of fire arms by people who are not authorized by law.

This communication was sent to the Secretary of Government and Justice, who states to me he supposes your excellency in making the request contained therein, thinks that our police generally use rifles in its service, and that they intervened with them in the riots which occurred between individuals, or that in such use there has sometimes been disastrous results, which were not justified or which should have been avoided; since otherwise it would be strange to suggest a measure already adopted as suitable and necessary, as I have verbally told your excellency.

At any rate the Secretary tells me that I may communicate to your excellency the complete assurance that the police will not use these rifles in municipal service, since they are its emblem in military use only; and that they will not be permitted, for any reason, to use this class of arms to establish order in the riots or fights which arise between individuals and much less when in these riots American soldiers off duty take part within the cities of Panama and Colon.

The Government is at present giving efficient civic instruction to the police force with the strictest discipline, so as to avoid at all cost the occurrences of events on which just claims of the American Government or any other government may be founded. Efficient measures have been taken to avoid all disturbances occasioned by drunkenness on national holidays, and orders that rifles be made inaccessible to the police who take part in stopping fights or riots will be most rigorously put into force.

As a result of the energetic and wise measures carried out up to now, the quiet in which the national holidays passed this year is evidence, and we are sure that the persistent application of these preventive police measures will maintain the greatest tranquility even on occasions that naturally draw crowds to the places of amusement.

As the Panama Government eliminated the military a few years ago, it is the duty of the police to receive military instruction in the handling of arms, in monthly parades for review, and in the official ceremonies on national holidays. Further, the police in the necessary military service acts as guard of honor in the Palace of the President of the Republic, and as guard in the principal jail in this city and in Colon, the same as the prison guards do, and in the custody of the prisoners on public works, in all of which the carrying of rifles is necessary as a suitable arm for these duties. In the secondary jails of both cities there is used and kept for use only a gun with bayonet with which the sentinel does his duty.

Relating to the prohibition of carrying arms by people not authorized by law, the Secretary of Government and Justice tells me that he has given to the mayors of the districts of Panama and Colon, who are the officials giving out such permits, an order that they shall cancel the permits already given out and shall abstain from giving out in future permits to people who do not enjoy good reputations, showing due care to take away the arms carried by people not authorized by law, as your excellency indicates. This measure has its basis in our laws.

Concerning the reference which your excellency makes to the rights which the United States of America possess in accordance with Article VII of the Canal Treaty of 1903, I must say that my Government does not give to that article the interpretation that your excellency appears to give to it. This is a point which we consider should be cleared up and for that reason I intend to address myself later to your excellency about it.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, December 1, 1915.

SIR: Referring to the Department's instruction No. 201 of November 5 and my cablegram of November 24, relating to the disarmament of the National Police of Panama of large arms and the strict enforcement against the carrying of concealed deadly weapons, I have the honor to report further upon said subject.

Preceding and since the receipt of the note from the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama, which was communicated to the Department by my despatch No. 680 of November 17, I held several conferences with Señor Lefevre, by which I attempted to get him into a conciliatory mood regarding this matter and to accomplish the disarmament aforesaid with as little friction as possible. In the first conferences Señor Lefevre repeated largely the arguments indulged in in his note, insisting that the orders given the police would absolutely prevent the use of the rifles in another riot, if one should ever occur, and declaring that he himself was taking a direct interest in the management of the police, which would bring about a discipline and a situation that could not but be satisfactory to us. On the day I sent the cablegram above mentioned, Señor Lefevre went much further than he had ever done in stating Panama's attitude, declaring that they would refuse either to sell or to deliver up the rifles.

In a conference with Señor Lefevre on Monday of this week he went beyond the line of arguments mentioned. Expressing the desire that I hear from the Department of State before making, at least, another formal demand for the disarmament, and that I not act upon requests of representatives of the War Department or the Army more generally stated, Señor Lefevre stated that he expected to call a meeting of representative Panamans of all political affiliations, if another formal demand were made, and lay before them our demands; that he felt that Panama was being imposed upon; that little by little their sovereignty was being usurped or appropriated by our Government; that if their dignity and rights would not be respected they would better yield up to superior power their entity as a government and make known their cause to the world; that they had given up their army several years ago and that the bearing of larger arms by their police was the only symbol of the military retained by them; that he did not suppose we would claim the right to forbid them to organize a small military force or army, who could carry rifles, if they should be taken from the police; that the attitude of their political opponents and the capital they might make of it should be taken into consideration by us, if they should yield to our demands; that Panama was willing to submit this matter and other important matters pending between our respective Governments to representatives of the A. B. C. Alliance for arbitration or determination. Perhaps other more incidental and unimportant observations and declarations were also indulged in by him which do not occur to me at present.

He remarked that he expected among other definite reforms to have at an early date an American instructor for their police. I know that he had been conferring with Canal Zone policeman McIntyre to this end, but believe that it is for the purpose of attempting to satisfy us short of carrying through the disarmament.

I did not fail to reply to these expressions of Señor Lefevre as tactfully and pleasantly, as I knew how.

I told him, of course, that, while the army and our military forces next door were primarily interested in the proper solution of the numerous troubles and continuing threatening danger incident to the situation now existing for a long time with their police force, resulting in the killing and wounding of unarmed American soldiers and some civilians, I, of course, acted only upon authority of the Department of State. I said to him among other things that it was my information that their political opponents considered favorably the proposition of their police giving up their arms; that this request on the part of my Government had seemed so considerate and reasonable in view of much larger and farther reaching rights and powers given us by our treaty with Panama that his attitude in this matter could hardly be deemed other than surprising and most unreasonable; that my Government was willing for the world to know in detail at any time of the record made between our respective Governments in their dealings with each other, confident of the judgment formed that the United States had ever been more than considerate, just and fair; that it had been magnanimous; that the suggestion of submission to the A. B. C. Alliance or any other power or powers of the exercise of rights so clearly and definitely granted my Government in a treaty of such recent date and for which such full consideration had been paid was, in my opinion, as unworthy of serious consideration as it was subject to the suspicion of not being made with serious intention.

I herewith transmit copies of letters from Major General Geo. W. Goethals and Brigadier General C. R. Edwards pursuant to my submission to them of copies of Señor Lefevre's recent note, and a report of his observation indulged in.

*Governor Goethals to Minister Price.*THE PANAMA CANAL, Canal Zone, November 24, 1915.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th instant, relative to the disarmament of the police of Panama, and can only state that I believe that this requirement should be enforced.

With reference to Señor Lefevre's note, it is well known that the Panamanian police on regular patrol duty are not armed with rifles, but in the case of emergency calls received at the central stations, to which the reserve respond, such as fire-alarms, riots, etc., the reserve responding is always equipped with rifles and bayonets, and for that purpose there is a stand of arms near the assembly room of central stations where the reserves remain during their tours of duty, and during the riots in the past these rifles have been used by the reserve responding to the emergency call. Notwithstanding Señor Lefevre's vague reference to an order prohibiting the use of rifles by the police, the Canal Zone Chief of Police reports that the regulation under which the reserves arm themselves with rifles and bayonets was still in force on Saturday last, and that on that date the stock of rifles not in actual use was also stored in the central stations. It is not necessary for the Panamanian police to receive military instructions in the use of rifles, nor is the use of rifles in guarding prisoners as efficient, judging from our experience, as the use of shotguns.

In regard to the prohibition against the indiscriminate carrying of fire arms, there is a law in effect regulating such practice, and it only requires enforcement of the law to secure the results desired. There appears to be no law regulating the sale of fire arms in the Republic of Panama, and such a law, if enforced, would materially assist in preventing the carrying of fire arms by the public at large.

Respectfully,

GEO. W. GOETHALS.

[Inclosure 2—Extract.]

*General Edwards to Minister Price.*HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES TROOPS,
Panama Canal Zone, Ancon, Nov. 27, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 19th inst. and its enclosure, which latter is signed by Señor E. T. Lefevre, Secretary of State, Republic of Panama, and relates to the disarmament of the Panamanian Police of high-powered rifles.

I notice three main points in Señor Lefevre's letter, as follows:

1st. That the police will not use high-powered rifles in order to quell riots, but the authorities do not consent to disarmament, since the police force constitutes the only armed body in the Republic that partakes in any way of a military force: thereby, I take it, making the point that the Panamanian nation can not consent to the disarmament of its national army.

2nd. That orders have been given to the two Mayors of Panama and Colon to be careful in regard to the issuance of permits to individuals to carry fire-arms.

3rd. That the Panamanian Government does not admit our interpretation of our rights under Section 7 of the treaty to be correct, and that the Secretary of State will address you later on the subject.

In regard to the first point, namely, disarmament, I am inclined to believe that the stated assurance that high-powered rifles will not be used in riots will amount to but little in time of trouble. What I particularly desired was that arms should be so secured that under conditions such as have obtained in recent riots by no possibility could they be procured. The fact that no riots have recently taken place is due in no manner to the actions of the police but results simply from the presence of an efficient United States provost guard. I feel that the agreement not to use the rifles will not stand in face of a riot and, with our provost guard maintained as it is, the next riot will be particularly bloody.

In regard to the issuance of fire-arms to individuals, the indicated action, even were the Mayors of the two cities energetic in seeking to carry out the spirit of the mentioned instructions, will in my opinion amount to little betterment. I believe that anything less than total inhibition is a mistake.

As to the non-concurrence in our interpretation as to our power under the treaty I am not surprised.

I note that you suggest a conference in regard to this matter and also mentioned it in your later letter of November 24. I will be pleased to talk the matter over with you at your convenience.

Very sincerely,

C. R. EDWARDS.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, December 7, 1915.

SIR: Supplementing my despatch No. 699 of December 1, relating to the disarmament of the National Police of Panama of large arms, I have the honor to report that in the course of my visit to the Panaman Foreign Office this afternoon in company with Captain Oliver Edwards, whom I presented as the representative of our military authorities in the further investigation of the late riots in the cities of Colon and Panama, I took up again with Señor Lefevre in the presence of Captain Edwards the matter of the disarmament aforesaid, requesting that the arms might be delivered up forthwith.

Señor Lefevre replied that I had not yet answered his last note (the one communicated to the Department with my despatch No. 680 of November 17). I stated to him that my note to which his was a reply was sufficiently clear and definite in its terms, in my opinion, to render a reply to his note really unnecessary. He then indulged at some length in a number of arguments heretofore used and reported to the Department, adding one to the effect that the rifles and certain military instruction of their police were both necessary for use at least in the outlying provinces in cases of insurrection or violence there, to quell which they would not feel like calling upon our military authorities. I replied that we were not asking for the disarmament except in the cities of Panama and Colon, and Captain Edwards offered the suggestion from General Edwards that the rifles might be held in storage along with reserve arms of our military in the Canal Zone for redelivery for Panama's use in the event that we or they should become involved in war with a foreign power.

No definite statement was obtainable from Señor Lefevre and, of course, while awaiting instructions from the Department herein, as directed to do by the Department's instruction No. 201 of November 5, I am unauthorized to present our demands in a more formal or emphatic way than I have done.

I feel quite convinced that if the Department will authorize a firm and unconditional demand to be made with all emphasis for the rifles, accompanied, if seeming necessary, by the threat to exercise on our part much farther reaching rights under the Canal Treaty, such as taking over their police force in these cities in the event of their refusal to give up the arms, Panama will yield.

SIR: Complying with the Department's instruction to obtain and report the views of Governor Goethals and General Edwards regarding the recent note of Señor Lefevre concerning the disarmament of the Panaman police, I have the honor to herewith enclose copies of my letters in this sense to Governor Goethals and General Edwards and also a copy of a reply thereto received this morning from General Edwards.

It will be noticed from the enclosed reply of General Edwards that he states "my views upon this matter are expressed in my letter of the 27th ultimo." I beg to state that a copy of this letter was sent by Minister Price to the Department in despatch No. 699 under date of December 1 last.

I am not as yet in receipt of a reply from Governor Goethals to my note of December 20.

SIR: With reference to the letters to you from Minister Price, under date of October 19 and November 19 last, with their enclosures, regarding the disarmament of the National Police of Panama of large arms, I have the honor to inform you that I am in receipt of an instruction from the Department of State informing me that before giving further instructions in the matter they wish me to obtain and report your views regarding Señor Lefevre's note, "particularly as to the claim made by him that the police are now forbidden to make use of large arms in suppressing disturbances in the cities of Panama and Colon." This note referred to was sent by Mr. Price as an enclosure in his letter, No. 601 of November 19, 1915, and I shall be glad to transmit any reply you may care to make or any suggestions you might offer.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 20th instant in which you request my views as to the attitude we should assume upon the question of the disarmament of high-powered rifles and the Panaman Police in view of Señor Lefevre's claim that the police are now forbidden to make use of these high-powered rifles in suppressing disturbances in the cities of Panama and Colon. My views upon this matter are expressed in my letter of the 27th ultimo in answer to Mr. Price's letter of the 19th ultimo. In Señor ¹⁴ The same to General Goethals, except the number, 638, and the number of the letter referred to, 602.

Lefevre's letter to Mr. Price great stress was laid upon the fact that the police constituted the only armed force of the Panama Government. I consider the objection to disarmament on the ground that the police constitute a quasi military force of the Republic of Panama a stronger argument against disarmament than the promise not to use the rifles in times of disturbance. Again, the Panama Government even if it were wise could not afford to have a military force. My idea is to say that the Commanding General has a large supply of small arms in magazine for emergency use to arm civilians, but not enough, and to suggest that their rifles be turned over to him to store for such an emergency to arm Panamans.

Very sincerely,

C. R. EDWARDS.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 3, 1913.

SIR: Referring to your Legation's No. 74, of January 30, 1911,¹⁰ in which was enclosed a copy of the report of the investigation held by the Panaman Government of the treatment of William T. Harrington, an American citizen, while he was serving a sentence imposed upon him in April, 1910, by the Panaman authorities for the larceny of a bottle of ginger ale, the Department desires to say that this Government has caused to be made a careful investigation of Mr. Harrington's case, with the result that it appears to be clearly established by trustworthy evidence that he was grievously tortured by the Panaman prison authorities by means of such a confinement in stocks and exposure to the tropical sun as resulted in his distressing physical condition at the time of his release June 2, 1910, when he came under the care of the Canal Zone medical officers. The testimony of these officers is to the effect that Mr. Harrington was then not able to walk unassisted from the dock to the dispensary at Porto Bello, a distance of about 400 feet, owing to the condition of his legs, which were greatly swollen and inflamed from knees to ankles and bore open wounds as well as well-marked depressed areas about 2½ inches wide all around. Mr. Harrington was at this time also suffering with dementia, a condition which in the opinion of the examining board could have been and probably was caused by the privation and treatment received while in the convict camp. While he was under treatment at Colon Hospital he was laboring under the delusion that he was still confined in stocks, according to testimony of the chief of the surgical clinic at Colon Hospital who states that he "several times heard the man scream 'Take me out,' 'Take me out of the stocks' * * * He repeatedly cried that the stocks were hurting his legs."

In respect to the death of Mr. Harrington, which took place at the hospital in the month of September following his release from imprisonment, it should be stated that the investigation of the case has not conclusively established the claim that his death was caused by the maltreatment above complained of. However, the medical testimony taken by the examining board indicates that the maltreatment of Mr. Harrington probably had an important casual influence in at least hastening his death. In this connection it is to be observed that when Harrington was given a physical examination on April 20, 1910, two days prior to his arrest, the examining Canal Zone physician at Culebra found him to be an average physical man capable of doing the work of a machinist.

The widow of Harrington, Mrs. William T. Harrington of San Francisco, an American citizen, has filed with the Department a claim against the Government of Panama for $50,000 as an indemnity for the injuries suffered by her husband at the hands of the Panaman police authorities.

While this Department is not disposed to demand the sum claimed by Mrs. Harrington, it does feel that a substantial sum should be paid her. From the testimony before the Department, Mr. Harrington appears to have been an efficient marine engineer. He was at the time of his arrest employed by the Isthmian Canal Commission as a machinist at the wages of 65¢ gold per hour.

You will present the case as stated above to the Foreign Office and say that the Department has confidence that the matter will receive sympathetic and equitable action.

The Department also directs your attention to another aspect of this affair. Reference is made to the Department's instructions¹⁵ Nos. 123 [125] of October 23, 1908, and 189 of June 24, 1909, relative to the police control of Panama and Colon and the territories and harbors adjacent thereto, and the possibility that this Government might feel it incumbent upon the United States to assume such control. The fact of the reinstatement in the Panaman police of certain police officers who were guilty of brutalities towards Americans in the U. S. S. Buffalo case suggests that similar reinstatements may have taken place in other cases where Panaman police have been dismissed for exceeding their authority by maltreating American citizens. You will discover, if possible, whether the officers guilty in the Harrington and Harrison cases (see enclosure in Mr. Marsh's No. 34 of August 10, 1910) have been reinstated and whether like action has been taken in any other such cases that may appear in the records of the Legation. Should it transpire that any such reinstatements have been effected, you will bring the instances to the attention of the Foreign Office and state that it is the expectation of this Government that steps will be taken by Panama to render such notices unnecessary in the future.

In presenting the Harrington case you will say that however possible it may be in some cases to make proper use of stocks for restraint of prisoners, it is incontrovertible that they can be, and in the Harrington case have been, made an instrument of torture, and that therefore this Government will not permit its citizens to be subjected to this treatment.

AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 107 of March 3 last, relative to [etc.], and to inform you that on March 14, the day following its receipt, I addressed a communication to Señor Lefevre, Minister for Foreign Affairs, presenting this case to him as stated in the Department's instruction. I have subsequently referred to it to Señor Lefevre on several occasions and although he has now promised that I will shortly receive his reply, I have not as yet received it.

Regarding the other aspect of this matter, namely as to whether any of the policemen guilty in this case, that of S. H. Harrison or the U. S. S. Buffalo case may possibly have been reinstated in the police, I immediately made a thorough investigation with the assistance of the Canal Zone police. The result of this investigation is that none of the policemen dismissed for exceeding their authority by maltreating American citizens in these cases are now serving in the Panaman police. The present employment of these men, so far as has been ascertained, is the following:

1. Police Lieutenant Luis Hernandez, dismissed in connection with the William T. Harrington case: now employed as a trader on the San Blas coast;

2. Policeman No. 125, dismissed in connection with the S. H. Harrison case; name not definitely ascertained but probably "Rodriguez"; whereabouts unknown but certainly not in police;

3. Policemen Paulino Macias, Abelardo Bustos, Indalecio Franco, Emilio Linares and Faustino Alverado, all dismissed in connection with the U. S. S. Buffalo case, three of whom I reported to have been reinstated, were subsequently again dismissed at the request of the Department; the first now employed in the office of the Minister for Public Works at Panama; the second, whereabouts unknown but not in the police; the third employed in the saloon "Flor Español," Panama; the fourth employed by Pinel Brothers, Panama; and the fifth employed by Brandon Brothers, Panama.

So far as I have been able to ascertain the three cases above mentioned are the only ones in which policemen have been dismissed for maltreating Americans.

SIR: With reference to your instruction No. 145 of June 20, 1913, and to previous correspondence with regard to the case growing out of the treatment accorded William T. Harrington, [etc.], I have the honor to inform you that I have received, under date of September 20, 1913, in response to my repeated requests for a report upon this matter from the Panaman Government, a note No. S-2105 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs giving the results of the investigations made by the Government of Panama with regard to this claim, a copy of which, with its translation, I have the honor to enclose herewith.

It will be noted that as stated in Señor Lefevre's note the evidence collected by the two Governments does not agree, and the question appears to have produced conflicting testimony with regard to the extent of the punishment inflicted upon Harrington by Lieutenant Hernandez, who was in charge of the prisoners at Porto Bello, as well as with regard to the mental condition of Harrington previous to his arrest. Emphasis is laid by Señor Lefevre upon the fact that the testimony given in behalf of the Panaman Government is corroborated by the sworn statements of Panamans and also of two American citizens. The note closes with a request that the Government of the United States, after having received the information given in the present note, may desist from demanding of the Panaman Government any indemnity whatever for the death of the American citizen, William T. Harrington.

FOREIGN OFFICE.
Panama, September 20, 1913.

SIR: Owing to the investigations which this office conducted concerning the claim contained in the note No. 307 of March 14 last, addressed to the undersigned by Mr. H. Percival Dodge, ex-Minister of the United States, I have been somewhat delayed in making reply to that note. I hasten to do so to-day, after having carefully studied each one of the records of the proceedings of investigation made by the Panaman and American Governments, in connection with this unpleasant case.

I have to inform you, first of all, that the evidence collected by the two Governments does not agree. The investigation made by the American authorities finds that William T. Harrington, respecting whom the claim is made, was cruelly maltreated by Panaman police officers stationed at Porto Bello and was placed in the stocks, in consequence of which he lost his reason and died in the hospital raving about the instrument of torture applied to him. But the investigation made by the Panaman Government proves everything to the contrary; that is, that Harrington—already demented when he came to Porto Bello—always did as he pleased in jail and outside thereof with the knowledge and permission of the police officers who guarded him; that he never worked, because he did not want to; that he was rude toward the guards and that, on a certain occasion when the Panaman Lieutenant of Police Luis Hernandez wanted to compel Harrington to occupy himself in some useful task, the latter vilely insulted him, whereupon Lieutenant Hernandez in his obligation of having the dignity of authority respected, took a small thin rod or switch and with it lightly punished Harrington, who was also placed in the stocks for a period of ten minutes while he was in a fit of rage.

Confronted with this conflict in the testimony, the just, the equitable thing to do, what the criminal law of all nations prescribes, is to place in the scales of justice the integrity of the persons who acted as witnesses, in order to agree with those which have the greater weight. To this end I am going to make an examination of each one of those persons, using for that purpose the record of the proceedings.

The witnesses who give weight to the investigation conducted by the American authorities are Samuel Douglas, Albert Brown, Melburn Watson, John Winte and Seimoure Jones, persons whose bad conduct also brought them to the jail at Porto Bello, as they themselves state in their frank declarations on pages 23 and 24 of the respective record of proceedings, declarations which—may it be said by the way—lack the requisite of being under oath which takes away from them a large part of their value. The Panaman witnesses are: Benigno Andrión, ex-Alcalde of the District of Colon, José F. Navas, Foreman of the prisoners at Porto Bello, Carlos Vetonti, police officer, Charles de Reuter and George Comiz, honorable American citizens who resided at Porto Bello during that period. The three first named, Andrión, Navas and Vetonti, are persons known for their integrity, industry and honesty; of the last two, Mr. de Reuter is a competent engineer engaged in his work, and Mr. Comiz is a sincere and honest man.

This fact established, I do not doubt that you, as would any impartial person, will place more credence in the statement of the Panaman witnesses, especially so when their testimony is corroborated, as it happens to be in the present case, by the sworn statement of two respectable American citizens.

I have the firmest confidence that after having given the detailed facts of the case as I have, the Government of the United States will desist from demanding of the Panaman Government any indemnity whatever for the death of the American citizen William T. Harrington, who as the reading of the various documents composing the record of the investigation shows, was demented a considerable time prior to the date on which he was punished for the offense of larceny.

You will request the Foreign Office to permit you to inspect the evidence which it has collected with regard to this case and to make a digest thereof, which, if you are able to obtain it, you will forward to the Department together with an expression of your opinion, as far as you may be able after investigation to form an opinion, as to the credibility of the witnesses who gave such evidence and par-

Should the Panaman authorities evince any unwillingness to comply with the above request, you will recall to their attention the fact that the Legation furnished them free access to the testimony collected by this Government in the so-called Cocoa Grove disturbance of July 4, 1912. AMERICAN LEGATION,

SIR: Referring to the case of William T. Harrington and answering the Department's instruction No. 4 of October 20, 1913, directing this Legation to request [etc.] I have the honor to report that on account of my lack of familiarity with the Spanish language I referred this matter to Mr. Wicker, Secretary of the Legation, for attention. Not having found the time before going on his annual leave of absence to procure the information which said instruction directed, I had Mr. Clausel, Clerk of the Legation, make a copy in full of the Spanish evidence in the case which the Panaman Government had collected and further to look up the witnesses themselves as far as possible and obtain information as far as possible as to their credibility and particularly as to the two American witnesses, Charles de Reuter and George Cornick.

The permission to read the file in the case possessed by the Panaman Government and to copy this testimony was given only after a delayed response to my request for same, and the copying was required to be done at the Foreign Office.

The full list of witnesses, whose evidence had been taken by the Panaman authorities, is as follows: Luis Hernandez R., Charles de Reuter, Carlos Vetonti, José J. Navas, George R. Cornick, Benigno Andrión, Marcelino Portela, Irene Edwards, José Baltam C., Juan Pacheco, Alejandro Henriquez, Samuel Flores, Graciano Galastica and Clemente Gomez. Copies of their testimony in Spanish are herewith enclosed.

De Reuter claims that the testimony given by him in this matter and in the files of the Panaman Government in this case, is correct and declares that he is willing to swear to it again at any time. The expressions of opinion as to his credibility vary.

George Cornick left the employ of the Isthmian Canal Commission in November 1910, and information received is that he had a good record with the Commission and bore a good reputation.

Luis Hernandez was a lieutenant of police at Porto Bello and the official who used the club and otherwise ill-treated Harrington; he was reported to have been a very inefficient officer and was discharged from the exercise of his duties by order of the Governor of Colon on account of this and other acts; but in dismissing him the Panaman officials claim that the punishment which he inflicted upon Harrington could not in any way have occasioned Harrington's death.

Marcelino Portela is proprietor of the same canteen from which Harrington was charged with having stolen the bottle of ginger-ale and he claims that his testimony now in the files referred to above is correct and says he is willing to verify same again if desired.

Mr. Clausel in the course of his investigation of these witnesses went to Colon and reports that as to the remainder of the witnesses whose testimony the Panaman authorities collected he has been unable to learn their present whereabouts or to find any one who could give an expression as to their reliability.

In further compliance with the directions contained in the Department's instruction, I have made an abstract in English of the testimony of each of the witnesses named hereinbefore, giving the substance of their testimony in full, and I transmit same herewith.¹⁰

[Extract.]

No. 58.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Washington, July 8, 1914.

SIR: The Department has received your despatch numbered 115 relative to the case of William T. Harrington, transmitting copies and a summary of the testimony taken by the Government of Panama concerning this matter. The Department observes that this testimony comprises none other than that previously furnished the Legation by the Minister for Foreign Affairs in his note of January 20, 1911, and forwarded to the Department with the Legation's despatch No. 74 of January 30, 1911, after a thorough examination of which the Department issued its instruction No. 40 of February 27, 1911.

Reverting now to the Legation's despatch No. 507 of September 26, 1913, and the copy of a note from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Panama enclosed therewith, the Department desires again to review the facts of this case for your information and guidance in taking the action indicated herein.

The Department observes that the Minister for Foreign Affairs in his note of September 20, 1913, above referred to, cites the conflict of the evidence obtained by his Government with that brought to the attention of this Department, and states that, in view of this conflict, the equitable procedure would be to "place in the scales of justice the integrity" of the respective witnesses. This he then proceeds to do with the result that, in his opinion, the evidence which this Government has received tending to show that Harrington's death resulted from maltreatment received by him at the hands of the Panama police authorities is completely outweighed by that of witnesses examined by the Panaman authorities, and therefore the Minister gives expression to his feeling of confidence "that the Government of the United States will desist from demanding from the Panaman Government any indemnity whatever for the death" of Mr. Harrington. Needless to say, this Government cannot acquiesce in this finding of the Panaman Government.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs seems to base his conclusion that Harrington's death in no way resulted from the treatment suffered by him at the hands of the Panaman police officers, while he was serving his term of imprisonment, principally upon the testimony of five witnesses; namely, Benigno Andrion, José F. Navas, Carlos Vetonti, Charles de Rueter and George Comiz. Without attempting to attack the credibility of the testimony of these witnesses, though given for the most part by persons whose interests in the matter were sufficient to have prejudiced their statements, it is, in the Department's opinion, of small value for the reason that it has but very little bearing upon the facts of the case, is not inconsistent with the evidence indicating maltreatment and is wholly insufficient to support the conclusions of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, above referred to.

An analysis of this evidence shows that: [etc.]

It will therefore be seen that in all of this evidence there is a total absence of any direct statement in contradiction of the allegation that Mr. Harrington was, while serving his sentence, subjected to cruel and inhuman treatment at the hands of the Panaman police authorities, and that, as a consequence, he suffered both mental and physical impairment of health and subsequently died. The Department is confident therefore that upon a reconsideration of this evidence it will be fully appreciated by the Panaman Government how untenable is its position in this matter.

The United States Government does not rely wholly upon the evidence of the witnesses pronounced incredible by the Minister for Foreign Affairs because fellow prisoners with Harrington, to establish the facts of the cruel and inhuman treatment complained of. That evidence is merely corroborative of facts otherwise indisputably determined. The Department has on file a copy of the medical certificate of a life insurance company with which the deceased was insured, together with affidavits of those who were co-workers with him just before his departure from the United States, all of which indicate that he was in perfect health at that time; also a copy of the medical certificate of the District Physician of the Isthmian Canal Commission, who examined Mr. Harrington after his arrival on the Isthmus. This latter certificate, dated April 20, 1910, states that there was at that time apparent in the applicant's condition no evidence of disease or abnormal functions of nervous system, cerebrospinal or sympathetic; that there was no indication of any disease of the heart, blood vessels, digestive system, or any of the abdominal organs, and that he was in fit physical condition to engage in work on the Isthmus of Panama as an engineer. This, therefore, when considered together with the evidence of Benigno Andrion, upon whom the Panaman Government relies, seems to establish beyond any reasonable doubt the fact that Mr. Harrington was, at the time he began to serve his sentence, in sound health, both mental and physical.

Just three days subsequent to this examination by such District Physician the deceased was tried by the Panaman authorities on the charge of "petit larceny" and sentenced to sixty days imprisonment. His physical and mental condition thereafter became such that on June 3, approximately forty days from the date of his sentence, he was admitted to the hospital at Colon.

It is admitted by the Minister for Foreign Affairs that during this time Mr. Harrington had been placed in the "stocks" for a period of "some ten or twenty minutes" and that on one occasion the Chief of Police "gave him two lashes on the shoulder"; that in doing so the official was excessive in his punishment and was consequently removed from his position. It is perfectly evident, however, that a confinement of "ten or twenty minutes" in the stocks could not alone possibly produce the physical injuries from which Mr. Harrington was suffering at the time of his admission to the hospital at Colon, for according to the superintendent of that hospital he was at that time "mildly insane and had a fever of 103.10 degrees. Both legs from knee to ankle were greatly swollen and inflamed, and on the right was an area of pressure necrosis 4" x 2½" on the anterior surface. On the left leg was corresponding necrosis, but not as severe. * * * The wounds on the legs could only have been caused by long continued and severe pressure, and the man's condition and high fever were apparently due to infection and suffering." This statement was corroborated by the District Physician at Porto Bello who attended Mr. Harrington before he was taken to Colon and who states that he was then "suffering with traumatic cellulitis, left leg; temperature 103 degrees. Left leg oedematous, oedema extending into foot; just above ankle was the mark of some constricting instrument, the skin at this point was broken and discolored, depressed below the surrounding oedema discharging a small amount of pus and serum. The wound had the appearance of having been under pressure for some time. * * * Mentally the man seemed mildly insane."

The fact that Mr. Harrington's condition when he was admitted to the hospital was due to the cruel and inhuman treatment to which he had been subjected, including his confinement in the stocks and exposure to the tropical sun, is abundantly supported by the statements of the other attending physicians and by those who came in contact with him while on his way to the hospital. The fact of this maltreatment was so well known that on June 2, 1910, a mass meeting of American citizens was held at Porto Bello to give expression to the sense of indignation felt by them concerning this case, and as a result a petition was drawn up and signed by 108 American citizens which stated that it was proved beyond a reasonable doubt, in their minds, that Harrington's dangerous condition was a "result of injuries received at the hands of the Panaman police while being punished by an instrument of torture known as 'the stocks.'" This petition, drawn up prior to the admission of Harrington to the hospital, relates to his condition while he was still in the custody of the Panaman police officials, being transferred from Porto Bello to Colon, and would seem to be sufficient to demonstrate clearly that during the interval of forty days since he had been found to be in sound health he had endured more than ordinary imprisonment and confinement in the stocks for a period of "ten or twenty minutes."

Moreover, at the instance of this Department the Secretary of War, who has jurisdiction over the Panama Canal Zone, directed that a thorough investigation be made concerning Mr. Harrington's condition while he was in the Government hospital at Colon and the causes of his death. As a result, a board of investigation composed of three reputable physicians was appointed for this purpose which, after taking voluminous evidence in the matter, stated in its findings upon the case that:

This testimony shows, beyond a doubt, in the opinion of the Board, that his physical condition was due to cruel treatment received by him while in prison. * * * Furthermore, the Board is of the opinion that such privation and inhuman treatment was sufficient to cause the mental disease from which Mr. Harrington was suffering. * * * The Board is of the unanimous opinion that the treatment received by Mr. Harrington, evidenced by affidavits and other papers in the file and borne out by the testimony of reliable physicians who treated him for injuries, * * * was the exciting factor in causing not only the inflammation and ulcers on his legs but his psychosis as well, and that there was a relation between such treatment and the diseases from which Mr. Harrington suffered. The Board is also of the opinion that such treatment, acting as a contributory factor, had an important causal relation to his subsequent death.

This Government cannot view complacently such cruel and inhuman treatment of its citizens by the authorities of any government. Neither can it admit that the mere discharge from his position of an official who is guilty of such shocking misconduct can atone for the suffering endured by an American citizen who was unfortunately for the time being under the authority of an official of this character. There is no doubt in the mind of this Department that, in the first place, the penalty imposed upon Mr. Harrington was excessive and disproportionate to the gravity of his offense; and that, second, the cruel treatment to which he was admittedly subjected, and which would seem to be sufficient in itself to lead the Panaman Government to proffer suitable reparation, was a factor which contributed very materially to the death of the prisoner and the consequent loss to his widow of the benefit of his support.

You are instructed, therefore, to present this case again to the Panaman Government in the general sense of the foregoing and express the feeling of hope and confidence which this Government entertains that the Government of Panama will recognize in this case an opportunity to demonstrate its abiding sense of justice and equity and its refusal to condone such acts as those complained of by acknowledging its duty to make adequate reparation for the suffering and losses consequent upon this unfortunate occurrence.

You will request a reply from the Panaman Government concerning this matter as soon as possible, promptly advising the Department of any further developments in the case.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 8, 1914.

EXCELLENCY: Under instructions from my Government I have the honor to bring to your excellency's attention certain conclusions reached by the Department of State with respect to the case of William T. Harrington, based upon an earnest consideration of your excellency's note No. S-2105 of September 20, 1913, and a thorough examination of the testimony in full in this case.

In view of the reference made by your excellency in said note to the conflict of testimony taken by our respective Governments and the expression of opinion that the testimony of the witnesses taken on behalf of Panama outweighed that developed in the investigation made by my Government in this case, my Government has taken much care in its review and examination made herein.

After this careful consideration the Department of State finds itself unable to agree with your excellency respecting this testimony and makes the following observations, which I respectfully submit to your excellency, namely:

[Here follows a complete quotation of the Department's instruction No. 58 of July 8, from the paragraph beginning "The Minister for Foreign Affairs of Panama seems to base his conclusion, etc.," to the end of the extract from the findings of the board of investigation.]

I am, therefore, directed most earnestly to represent to your excellency that my Government from its further investigation and consideration of this case is more than ever convinced that, in the first place, the penalty imposed upon Mr. Harrington was excessive and out of all proportion to the character of his offense, the theft of one bottle of ginger ale; and that, second, the cruel treatment to which he was admittedly subjected and which, would seem to be sufficient in itself to lead your excellency's Government to proffer suitable reparation, was a factor which contributed very materially to the death of the prisoner and the consequent loss to his widow of the benefit of his support.

I am also instructed to say that my Government cannot view complacently such cruel and inhuman treatment of its citizens by the authorities of any Government, neither can it admit that the mere discharge from his position of an official who is guilty of such shocking misconduct can atone for the suffering endured by an American citizen who was unfortunately for the time being under the authority of an official of this character.

My Government, therefore, desires me to express the feeling of hope and confidence which it entertains that your excellency's Government will recognize in this case an opportunity to demonstrate its abiding sense of justice and equity and its refusal to condone such acts as those complained of, by making all reparation as far as possible adequate for the suffering and losses consequent upon this unfortunate occurrence.

I feel sure that your excellency will, moreover, concur with my Government in its opinion, which I am directed to convey to your excellency, that in view of the protracted discussion to which this case has given rise it is highly desirable to the interest of justice that as early a completion of this matter as possible should be consummated.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, May 11, 1915.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to refer again to the polite note of your excellency No. 103 of September 8, 1914, relating to the case of William T. Harrington.

Subsequently your excellency in notes No. 122 of January 25, of this year; No. 143 of March 9, No. 161 of April 5, and in conversations with the undersigned, has insisted that the Government of Panama, after careful consideration of the arguments of the above-mentioned note, make the pecuniary reparation which the Government of your excellency demands for the cruel and inhuman treatment which it asserts was inflicted on said Harrington by the chief of police of the prison of Porto Bello, while said Harrington was serving his term of 60 days arrest and work on the construction of the road from Porto Bello to Colon. The arguments that your excellency transmitted to me in this note have for their object to show that Harrington was physically and mentally sound when he was arrested and sentenced by the police of Colon on April 22, 1910, and that, as a result of the mistreatment of which he was a victim in Porto Bello, he lost his reason and died months afterwards.

My Government being attentive to the interest taken in this case by the Department of State of the United States and to the minute study which it has made of the pertinent documents and data, I, in my turn, have considered it indispensable to make a full examination of the case in order to show to your excellency the sincere desire of my Government to establish the truth and to make due reparation for abuses or injustices of any kind when really committed in this country against citizens of the friendly nation so worthily represented by your excellency.

I have now the honor to communicate to your excellency the result of my examination and the conclusions which my Government has reached in the matter.

Taking into consideration the careful inquiries made in Panama as well as those which the Government of your excellency has made in the United States in relation to William T. Harrington, it is the unavoidable conclusion of a methodical, orderly and strictly logical reasoning that Harrington did not lose his mind on account of violence and physical suffering inflicted by the police and overseers of the prisoners in Porto Bello, but that already on April 22, 1910, the date of his arrest, he suffered from mental derangement.

The proofs of this assertion are given in the following statements of witnesses:

The testimony of Mr. Benigno Andrian, the alcalde who judged and sentenced Harrington, says in its pertinent part:

Harrington did not present any bondsman, nor did he name anyone to defend him, without doubt thinking the latter unnecessary, since his guilt was public and proven and confessed by himself. Question: Did you notice in Mr. Harrington any symptoms of insanity on being examined by you? Answer: I did not note any symptoms of insanity in Mr. Harrington, but on account of his filthy clothes and other signs I understood that he had been drinking too much the day or night previous. Question: Do you know anything about the mistreatment which Harrington is said to have suffered in the public works in Porto Bello? Answer: From the statement of Lieut. Luis Hernandez, chief of police in Porto Bello, I know that Harrington seemed demented, that he never worked and that when they noticed his lack of practical judgment they sent him to the hospital.

The testimony of Charles de Reuter, from which I copy the following:

After the arrival of Harrington at the working camp on the road above referred to, I was able to observe that Harrington was not in his proper senses; that he showed the beginning of dementia. That was the reason they did not give him any work of importance, and he did what he wanted until the time when it was noticed distinctly that Harrington was demented, and the warden and Lieut. Hernandez resolved to send Harrington to the hospital in Colon to be cured.

The testimony of José F. Navas, superintendent of prisoners, makes the following declaration:

Later I noticed that Harrington was suffering as if from mental derangement and then guessed why he had been sent to the hospital to be cured, which was accomplished before his sentence expired.

The testimony of José Tomás Baltam says:

I remember that this man would never work and showed by his actions that he was not altogether in his right mind, although not exactly crazy; one day they put him to work and as he wouldn't work, they put him again behind the bars. Question: Does the witness know anything more in relation to Mr. Harrington? Answer: The lieutenant of police stationed in Porto Bello, Luis Hernandez, seeing that Harrington would not work and that he gave indications of being demented, resolved to send him to the hospital, and on arrival at the other side to embark some Americans took him in order to send him on their own account to the hospital.

The testimony of Ex-Lieut. Hernandez, says as follows:

A little later I noticed that Harrington was not working at all and that he was throwing himself in the puddles in the road. Also, in the prison he frequently struck his companions without any cause, until at last we understood that Harrington was insane and I advised the warden to send him to Colon to be cured, notwithstanding that he had not completed his sentence.

Whatever the merits which your excellency may concede to these witnesses, their testimony almost amounts to undeniable veracity in view of the mental state of Harrington as shown by his own acts and those of other people in relation to him.

A man who has so cultivated his intelligence as to become a competent machinist and engineer, as it is asserted Harrington was, even to the point of being employed by the Canal Commission, is not only unbalanced but crazy if he goes dirty about Colon, steals a bottle of ginger ale in a saloon and, when pursued by the proprietor and a policeman, flees like a criminal. This is very significant because it is a repetition of a similar one in which, according to Irene Edwards, another witness, Harrington having stolen an orange from her the same day he stole the bottle of ginger ale.

It appears that after his arrest Harrington passed the night in prison and on being sentenced the following morning he made no defense, received quietly his sentence of 60 days, made no protest, nor request for changing his sentence to a fine, nor any request at all. Afterwards, without soliciting protection from any of his compatriots, very numerous in Colon, he was taken away in a tug owned by the I. C. C., manned by American employees; he arrived at New Porto Bello, the camp of the I. C. C. in Porto Bello, where all the chiefs and employees were Americans, and, without requesting intervention or protection from any of them, he was conducted to the Panaman jail at Porto Bello. So near to the town of Porto Bello and the American camp of New Porto Bello, constantly in communication with each other, it is remarkable that Harrington did nothing to free himself from his sentence and the violence and torture which it is said were inflicted upon him in prison. Any other American citizen, even if not an employee of the I. C. C. in the class of Harrington (and he too would have so proceeded if he had been sane), would have refused to pass the night of April 22 in jail but would have given bail and on the next day would not have acquiesced in a sentence of 60 days for taking a bottle of ginger ale without appealing to the protection of other people and would have taken legal steps to lessen his sentence.

This would have been easy for him in the city of Colon where so many of his compatriots live and are on the streets, many of them employees of every rank in the I. C. C. And if the measures taken in Colon had proved inefficacious something could have been done in New Porto Bello where he landed in a place composed exclusively of Americans and where he could defend himself and recover his liberty.

The acts and omissions of individuals show the exact state of their reason by comparison with the acts and words of normal people under the same circumstances. Thus Harrington's conduct showed conclusively that he lacked mental balance when he was arrested by the police and sent to the public works at Porto Bello. It is evident that the alcalde of Colon would not have given Harrington 60 days if he had not concluded from his clothes and manners that he was one of the many thieves and vagabonds who in Colon are a social menace.

The opinion of the doctor of the insurance company in which Harrington was insured does not constitute proof because the mental condition of Harrington was not to be discovered in a brief examination of his organs and viscera, but by observation of his actions. There are many cases of crazy people in which a cerebral disturbance does not show at the first glance.

The same observation is to be made in respect to the examination of Harrington by the district doctor of the I. C. C. two days before he was arrested. Recently arrived on the Canal Zone, and seen only once by his doctor, the diagnosis of his nervous condition by this doctor is not to be admitted as an indisputable scientific conclusion.

The affidavits of Harrington's fellow workmen in the United States, taken since his death and when there was a question of obtaining an indemnity for his widow from the Government of Panama, do not inspire the conviction necessary to admit the allegation, as it is recognized the world over that witnesses are inclined to be influenced by the hope or desire to help or damage somebody.

It will be said that in spite of the foregoing the fact remains that Harrington's legs were wounded and inflamed and that the wounds were undoubtedly caused by the stocks. This can not be effectively contradicted, but it is not proved that he was placed in the stocks more than once for a few minutes. His mental derangement admits the supposition that he himself caused the wounds in attempting in an access of rage to free his feet from the stocks. Moreover, in order to justify putting Harrington into the stocks it suffices to take into account the following remark of the predecessor of your excellency, Mr. H. Percival Dodge, who ended his note No. 307, of March 14, 1913, in this way:

In presenting this case to your excellency my Government instructs me to say that it has confidence that the matter will receive sympathetic and equitable action and that, however possible it may be in some cases to make proper use of stocks for the restraint of prisoners, it is incontrovertible that they can be, etc.

It suffices also to consider that Harrington's conduct in the prison because of his mental condition, not the mere cruelty of his keepers, made necessary the application of the stocks.

In case your excellency, convinced by my reasons, would argue that if Harrington was crazy he would have been sent to the hospital or an asylum instead of being submitted to the violence of the prison, permit me to say that according to all the proofs, the mental condition of Harrington, although evidently abnormal, was not such as could immediately be recognized; and the police of Porto Bello may be excused for noticing that neither the employees of the I. C. C. who ranked with Harrington as a machinist nor the doctors whom your excellency cites in his note discovered the mental derangement of this individual.

I particularly call the attention of your excellency to the fact that the conclusion arrived at by my Government agrees with that of Mr. J. P. Fyffe, Chief of the Police of the Canal Zone, in a report dated August 5, 1910, sent to Governor M. H. Thatcher, in which he says as follows:

From statements in the police report it appears entirely possible that Harrington was demented at the time of committing the theft of April 22, although there is no proof of his insanity, according to what I have been able to find out, up to the time of his arrival at Porto Bello. It appears very possible that this insanity may have been the cause of all that happened.

Corroborative of this point made by Mr. Fyffe is the short time that Harrington remained in prison at Porto Bello. Even admitting that the treatment given him was worse than that given to prisoners in Siberia, within 40 days he would not have lost his reason since none of his fellow prisoners lost theirs.

For all these reasons, Mr. Minister, my Government trusts that the Government of your excellency will not insist on making our nation responsible for the insanity and death of William T. Harrington, and that to the demands of the widow of Harrington your Government will oppose the arguments which justice will suggest when the truth in this matter is ascertained.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, June 10, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that the courteous note No. S-6626 of May 11 last, transmitted by your excellency in the case of the late William T. Harrington, has been read and considered with all due care.

It is noted that the response and argument of your excellency are almost entirely devoted to the attempt to prove that the unfortunate Harrington, now dead, was mentally deranged at the time of and before the passing of sentence upon him by the judge in Colon and his incarceration in the prison at Porto Bello.

I would call to your excellency's attention that the speculation indulged in by the Zone chief of police, from whose report a quotation was made, related to an explanation of the reason for the commission of the theft by Harrington, and that the following sentence in the part of his report quoted by your excellency, namely, "It seems quite probable that his insanity may have been the cause of the entire transaction," referred not to Harrington's experiences afterwards, but to the matter of the commission of the small theft, taking into consideration that the offense was not likely to be committed by a high grade employee of the Canal Commission, such as Harrington was. It is interesting to note in this connection the opinion which the Panaman alcalde who tried Harrington gave expression to regarding the condition in which Harrington was, out of which resulted his commission of the petty offense. Alcalde Andrian, being asked by the Governor in his examination of this case the following question: "Did you notice any symptoms of mental disorder in Mr. Harrington when he was examined by you?" replied thus: "I did not notice any signs of dementia in Mr. Harrington, but by the dirt on his clothes and other signs I understood that he had been drinking too much the previous day and night."

Both the statements of the Canal Zone police chief and of the alcalde of Colon are to the effect as to what may have been possible or probable, and as between the two, Señor Andrian had much better opportunity to judge and his opinion is likely very much nearer correct. It would seem undoubtedly to be, in as much as the record in this case shows, that physicians with their scientific training in such matters and others with an acquaintance and association with Harrington, which neither the Alcalde nor Chief Fyffe had, have stated that Mr. Harrington was at this time suffering from no physical or mental disorder. The latter character of evidence was referred to at sufficient length in the note of my Government in this case of date of September 8, 1914, to which your excellency's recent note was a response, to make repetition of it inappropriate, beyond reference again to the fact that the examination by the district physician of the Isthmian Canal Commission just two days before Mr. Harrington's arrest found him in sound physical and mental condition. It can not quite be believed that the statements of police agents and interested parties, which your excellency has seen fit to quote from extensively in your recent note, are really considered by your excellency as testimony of the same weight or grade of that referred to, nor as even approaching it in trustworthiness.

In averting now to the argument of your excellency that the conduct of Mr. Harrington at the time of his first detention and his trial furnished proof of existence then of mental disorder, it is pertinent to quote the following paragraph from your excellency's note.

Any other American citizen, even if not an employee of the I. C. C. in the class of Harrington (and he, too, would have so proceeded if he had been sane), would have refused to pass the night of April 22 in jail but would have given bail and on the next day would not have acquiesced in a sentence of 60 days for taking a bottle of ginger ale without appealing to the protection of other people and would have taken legal steps to lessen his sentence.

It will be borne in mind that Mr. Harrington had only been on the Isthmus twelve days preceding his arrest, having arrived at the Pacific terminus of the Canal from San Francisco. He had secured employment by the Canal Commission at the Atlantic terminus eleven days after his arrival, more than 40 miles away, and only one day before his disagreeable experiences began with Panaman officials. He was waiting to begin his work as a high grade skilled machinist at the wages of sixty-five cents gold per hour when these experiences fell to his lot. It must be true, therefore, that the acquaintances made by Mr. Harrington up to that time were very limited. However, experiences of numerous American citizens with the police and court officials of your excellency's Government have proven that no matter how long one has lived on the Isthmus nor how large may be the acquaintanceship he may have formed, nor how reasonably accessible these acquaintances may be, there exists no assurance that, even when charged with a small misdemeanor, as in this case, they will be permitted any opportunity to give bond or obtain proper means of defense.

It so happens, just now, that other claims in addition to this one, are pending against your excellency's Government, in which are involved, among other elements of damage, the mistreatment of citizens of the United States in these same respects. The system practiced in Panama of keeping American citizens "incomunicado," particularly when charged with the smaller degrees of offenses, and of refusing their insistent requests to communicate with friends who could go bond for them, and to give them proper opportunities to obtain witnesses and prepare their defenses, has been a source of severe irritation to the Government of the United States; it is on a par with the use of stocks, as in this case, in attempted discipline of prisoners; both are out of keeping with the practices of civilization and certainly with those considerations due for several reasons particularly from Panama to citizens of the United States.

The very proper admissions made by your excellency in the paragraph quoted above from your note are intended to be emphasized by the incorporation of same in this note. Said paragraph characterizes any American citizen insane, who would suffer incarceration first in jail over night and then a sentence to hard labor in a convict camp for sixty days for the miserably small infraction of "taking a bottle of ginger-ale," without appealing to the protection of other people and to legal recourses to lessen the sentence. It is represented to your excellency that said treatment of an American citizen by an official of the Panaman Government and the infliction of such a penalty under the circumstances are susceptible of the same argument that they are plain proofs of the insanity of said official and that if said official were not laboring under insanity, when visiting such abnormal and disproportionate exercise of his authority, then, in keeping with the cruel treatment by other officials of Panama later applied to said American citizen, there has been exhibited a lack of capability, or a reckless disregard of the rights of humanity, or both, on the part of officials of Panama, which no Government to which a sufferer therefrom may own allegiance can, with due regard to its obligations, countenance without proper reparation being made therefor.

The more carefully the evidence in this case is considered, the more reprehensible would seem to be the treatment accorded Mr. Harrington by the several officials of Panama involved. It is admitted that the proprietor of the saloon from which the bottle of ginger-ale was taken interceded with the policeman who arrested Harrington, to turn him loose, feeling the offense was so trifling that he did not care to take further notice of it, and feeling doubtless, too, that the offense was, perhaps, committed in a spirit of playfulness or when possibly under the influence of drink. Your excellency, very naturally astonished by the severity of the sentence adjudged against Harrington, in attempting to explain it states that it is evident same would not have been imposed had not the alcalde believed that Harrington was one of the many thieves and vagabonds infesting Colon. However, the alcalde claims no justification for his action on this ground. The reasons given by your excellency for the above supposition are given by the alcalde as convincing him that this high grade and skilled employee was simply under the influence of liquor when he committed this act. Usually such a fact is taken into consideration as indicating the absence of criminal intention on a charge like this and the sentence is made less, at least, instead of being more severe.

Now, for the sake of argument and for that purpose alone, let it be granted that Mr. Harrington was demented from the time he first fell into the hands of officials of Panama. Your excellency of course must concede that in such a case not only is a prison an improper place for keeping in custody such an unfortunate but that certainly labor as a convict under a tropical sun and whipping with a club and the clamping of heavy wooden stocks, and, according to testimony in the record, with face and stomach down on one occasion, would be more than highly improper; that in case of a man so afflicted, kindness and humane treatment, patience and forbearance, if lacking would convict those in custody of the unfortunate man of most guilty cruelty.

It is noted that in making the argument that Mr. Harrington was insane from the inception of this whole affair your excellency incidentally remarks that it is proper to suppose that the Panama officials did not perceive this condition because, to quote from your excellency's note, "neither the employees of the Isthmian Canal Commission nor the doctors whom your excellency cites in his note discovered the mental derangement of this individual." These employees and doctors make said statements not inferentially or as deductions, but with positiveness, as distinguished from the basis upon which your excellency argues. Moreover, the police agents of your excellency's Government do not claim for themselves this inability to discover Mr. Harrington's mental condition, but rather, as a justification for placing him in stocks and disciplining him, give as a reason that Harrington did and said things that showed him to be mentally deranged.

Your excellency seems to have labored under a misapprehension in quoting from my predecessor as having admitted the use of stocks to be proper with prisoners. The language used in said connection is of an argumentative character—granting for sake of argument, in other words. To make it more plain and to reiterate as a part of this note the balance of the same sentence of my predecessor there is incorporated the same herewith, namely:

In presenting this case to your excellency my Government instructs me to say that it has confidence that the matter will receive sympathetic and equitable action and that, however possible it may be in some cases to make proper use of stocks for the restraint of prisoners, it is incontrovertible that they can be, and in the Harrington case have been made an instrument of torture, and that therefore, my Government will not permit its citizens to be subjected to this treatment.

Wherefore it would seem incontestable that if Mr. Harrington was mentally deranged at all the times claimed by your excellency the fact could only aggravate the liability of your excellency's Government herein; that it could hardly be argued that the death of Mr. Harrington was caused by his insanity; and therefore this, at least, and the greatest of the two sad eventualities in his case, must be answered for. When your excellency is compelled by the facts to admit, as in the note to which this is a response, that it can not be effectively contradicted that the man now dead had wounded and inflamed legs and that these wounds were undoubtedly caused by the stocks, and it is further admitted, as it was in the report of investigation in this matter in 1910 by the Governor of Panama to the Department of Government and Justice of your excellency's Government, that the lieutenant of police, Hernandez, who was in charge of Mr. Harrington, had been guilty of other misdeeds in his office in addition to the accusation herein, and this poor defenseless prisoner is found at last in his custody in a condition where he could not walk as the result of the wounds inflicted on his limbs and presenting such an appealing and intensely distressing sight that 108 fellow Americans are moved by it to hold an indignation meeting and demand that such wrongs shall be redressed, and the remembrances of the tortures to which he has been subjected return to add to his sufferings, as testified to in this record, in his hours of dementia, then these facts would seem to add not only forceful proof to the other convincing evidence which the United States had taken much care to procure herein, but should, it is believed, elicit from your excellency's Government a response in keeping with the dictates of justice and humanity and of willingness cordially to right a wrong. My Government fails to find in the arguments presented by your excellency any reason to change its conviction, heretofore formed after most careful deliberation, as to the agencies responsible for bringing about the insanity and death of Mr. Harrington.

Nearly five years now having elapsed since the commission of these wrongs and the widow and family of the deceased as well as the representatives from their State in our Congress on behalf of them being very properly urgent that this matter shall be brought to a satisfactory conclusion, my Government in deference not only thereto, but to its obligations to its citizens in the abstract, and being unable to see that there can be any good reason for further protracted discussion herein, must insist upon prompt indemnification herein by the Government of Panama.

Suffering and loss of life, in such cases as this can never be fully compensated, but, measured as far as money damages may compensate and yet in estimating same due regard having been given to all that your excellency's Government has been able to present on behalf of itself herein, my Government instructs me to inform your excellency's Government that it deems the sum of five thousand dollars to be a most considerate and moderate indemnity to the bereaved ones in this sad affair, and to demand the payment of same, which is hereby respectfully done.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, January 30, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to refer again to the matter of anti-Chinese legislative restrictions on the part of the Panaman Government.

¹⁸ Continued from For. Rel. 1913, pp. 1105-1139.

In the agreed settlement of the differences arising as a result of the passage of Law 50 of 1913, the Panaman Secretary of Foreign Affairs obligated himself expressly to use his best endeavors to obtain from this session of the National Assembly a reduction of the registration fee from $250 to $125 for Chinamen within the Republic without valid cédulas and to have cancelled the notes given by them for this $125, in addition to their cash payments of $125 in complying with the face of said Law 50.¹⁷

It was my understanding that he also agreed to use the same endeavors to have the provision stricken from Law 50, which requires a re-registration every six months, though this part of the agreement was not put in writing on account of the position taken by him that, while the enforcement of same would not be carried out (as it has not been up to this time), if he should make a written assurance it would appear to evidence a formal refusal on his part to abide by a law of his country.

The President of Panama a few days since presented a message to the Assembly on this subject. A copy of same is enclosed (enclosure No. 1). He asks for the cancellation of the notes mentioned above. He also suggests the imposing of other restrictions. Following this message, Sr. Lefevre introduced a bill amending Law 50 in accordance with suggestions of this message. I visited Sr. Lefevre's office for a conference and he declared that the present Assembly was quite violently anti-Chinese; that the provisions of his amendment would only work out for the better enforcement of those provisions of Law 50 which met the sentiment of his people and which were not severe on the Chinese; that he had not agreed to have the article requiring re-registration every six months repealed but only not to enforce same, and that it would not be enforced; that he believed any effort to amend the law except along the lines of the President's message would cause the Assembly to be aroused to more stringent regulations than already proposed. He asked me if the Chinese Consul General had made any complaint to me, and as he had not, I so responded. Sr. Lefevre then declared the amendments proposed were satisfactory to the Chinese Consul General, who had conferred with him about them. On Thursday the Assembly took the amended bill up and went very far beyond even the added restrictions suggested by the President and Señor Lefevre. The latter tells me that he was present during the debate and did his best to stem the tide so adverse to the Chinese, but without avail, and that the added restrictions passed as far as the second debate.

In my visit to the President Friday regarding the bill authorizing the expenditure of the portion of the $3,000,000 loan for other purposes than railroad building, I circumspectly extended my good offices on behalf of the Chinese; but while the President expressed regret over the action of the National Assembly and stated it was contrary to his wishes, he was not reassuring.

Thinking possibly the Chinese Consul General was not aware of the situation, I telephoned him. It seemed that he was keeping informed; and later, making a visit to President Porras, he called at the Legation yesterday afternoon saying the President gave him assurance that if the bill became a law in the form in which it passed the second debate he would see that the article refusing passports to any Chinaman leaving the country was not enforced. Sr. Lefevre later told me that he was attempting to keep the amended bill off the calendar and thus prevent its going to third debate or reading before adjournment of the Assembly; that he felt it was about the only way to prevent the additional adverse legislation.

The Chinese Consul General stated he had cabled the Ambassador in Washington to obtain the aid of the Department of State. An interest expressed by Mr. Bryan through Minister Morales I believe would be most helpful.

The amended law as passed on second debate is enclosed with its translation. (Enclosure No. 2) and its severe restrictions are quite apparent.

MESSAGE NO. 52.

HONORABLE DEPUTIES: I have the honor to submit to your wise consideration a bill which modifies and adds to Law 50 of 1913, regarding the immigration of Chinese, etc.

Law 50 of 1913 answers the sentiments of the majority of the Panaman people, which has shown itself always adverse to the admission into the country of the above-mentioned races, and its provisions have in practice resulted very satisfactorily, having contributed to reducing immigration to a large extent, almost annulling it. However, in practice several deficiencies have been noticed which the bill I submit tends to remedy.

In the first place, there are many naturalized Chinese, or sons of Chinese naturalized in other countries, against whom the prohibition of ingress into the country should be extended, under Article 1. It is, I think, the race and not the nationality which is contemplated by the prohibition.

Articles 2 and 3 tend to restrict the issuing of passports to leave the country, which although great vigilance may be exercised, are always liable to frauds, taking into account the similarity of Chinese names and physiognomy. The provision making Panama the only port of entry may facilitate such vigilance and render contraband impossible.

The Secretary for Foreign Affairs in his report to you in the ordinary sessions of 1914, informed you that the Chinese, Syrians, etc., who could not prove their legitimate residence in the country, have obtained cédulas for temporary residence in accordance with Article 7 of Law 50 of 1913, each depositing in stamps of the fourth class the sum of 125 balboas and signing a promissory note for 125 balboas additional, cancellable on December 31, 1914. But, considering that sum rather excessive, he requested that you obtain its reduction and that the promissory notes be not enforced. All this has reference to Article 5 of the bill to which I hope you will give your approval.

BELISARIO PORRAS.

An Act amending Law 50 of 1913, regarding the immigration and association of Chinese, Turks, Syrians and North Africans of the Turkish race.

The National Assembly of Panama decrees:

Art. 1. The prohibition contained in Article I of Law 50 of 1913 includes all the individuals of the races mentioned in it, whatever may be their nationality or that of their parents.

Art. 2. Every foreigner of the above-mentioned races who leaves the country when this law goes into effect, shall lose the domicile acquired in it, and hence the right to return to the national territory; consequently the issuance of passports to the foreigners mentioned to leave the country is hereby prohibited.

Art. 3. Those having passports who are actually residing abroad, shall have a period of two years to return to the country after the publication of the present Law in the Gaceta Oficial, at the expiration of which they cannot return and the passports will be declared null and without value. The period mentioned will in no case be extended.

The Diplomatic and Consular Officers of the Chinese nation are not included in the provisions of this law.

Art. 4. In order that the foreigners mentioned in the present law may hereafter establish clubs in the cities of Panama and Colon, they shall be obliged to present a bond satisfactory to the Secretary of Government and Justice in the sum of five thousand balboas (B. 5000) and shall pay to the General Treasury of the Republic the sum of one thousand balboas (B. 1000) a month during the existence of the club, and the payments shall be made monthly in advance by each establishment.

Art. 5. The captains of ships who introduce into the national territory foreigners of the nationalities mentioned shall pay a fine of not less than five hundred balboas (B. 500) for each foreigner introduced, being obliged to return them to the place where they were embarked.

If any authorities or private individuals be found to be accomplices or to have aided in the clandestine introduction of the above-mentioned foreigners, such authorities shall suffer a fine of five hundred balboas (B. 500) and the loss of their employment, and such private individuals shall pay double the said fine. Said penalties shall be imposed and shall be made effective by the Governor of the respective province.

Art. 6. Popular action is granted to denounce before the authorities of the Republic the infractors of this law. The accusers, after proving their accusation, shall be entitled to twenty-five per cent (25%) of the fines imposed.

Art. 7. The foreigners included in the present law who by virtue of previous and present laws are prohibited from immigrating into the territory of the Republic, will not be allowed to become naturalized citizens of it.

Art. 8. This law modifies and adds to Law 50 of 1913 and the Executive Power is authorized to issue regulations relating to it.

My good offices were exercised courteously and earnestly and the assurances quoted in my telegram of February 2 were given by Sr. Lefevre. It is well, however, to advert that the fulfillment of said assurances will still leave Law 50 of 1913 without being amended, as represented by the Panaman officials in the settlement of matters last year. I called particular attention to this. Sr. Lefevre declared that the provisions of Law 50, which have been in suspense under said agreement, would be continued in suspense.

During the visit which your excellency paid me in company of the Chinese Consul General, to communicate to me that the Chinese Government had requested the United States of America through the medium of your excellency to extend its good offices in this matter to help the Chinese colony, I had the honor to show to your excellency, as I had indicated before to the above-mentioned consular official, that the information received about this proposed law was exaggerated and that there was no intention to adopt means of persecution against the said colony, but only to make more difficult the clandestine entry into the country of all individuals whose immigration is prohibited.

Even less does the proposed law contain anything affecting the rights or obligations arising from international treaties, as I assured your excellency, since Panama has signed no treaty with any of the nations from which such excluded immigrants proceed, and the Bunau-Varilla-Hay Treaty makes no mention of the residence, admission or exclusion of the Chinese of Panama, nor of the rights or obligations of the individuals of this race.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama May 3, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge instruction No. 107 of March 2 last, transmitting a copy of a note from the Chinese Minister in Washington expressing appreciation of the services of the Department and of this Legation in preventing the passage by the last National Assembly of Panama of additional and severe anti-Chinese legislation.

For the information of the Department I enclose herewith a copy of a note dated March 2 from the Chinese Consul General here, expressing his gratefulness for the efforts of the Legation in said matter, and enclosing a copy of a note he had filed with the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama along the line of my note to the last named, a copy of which went to the Department with my despatch No. 422 of February 25, the Department's approval of which in its instruction No. 115 of March 17th is gratifying.

I also enclose a copy of another note from said Consul General of date of March 24, conveying, pursuant to cable instruction, the thanks of the Government of Peking in the same matter.

A few days since a delegation of Chinese merchants called at the Legation and in addition to expressing their gratitude verbally for the extension of good offices and its successful result in said matter, presented to me a handsome silver loving-cup, bearing the following inscription: "To the Honorable William Jennings Price, presented by the Chinese Colony, Panama, R. P., 27th March, 1915." (Same in Chinese characters.) A note in Chinese and English, a copy of the latter text of which I enclose (enclosure No. 3), accompanied the presentation of the gift. The gift came as a complete surprise. Having no official character, but being the bestowal of individual Chinese—and the above details, including a copy of the inscription, are given that the Department may be fully acquainted with the facts—I perceived no impropriety in accepting it.

I did not fail, of course, properly to acknowledge the above communications.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note as well as the copy of the communication which your excellency had written and conveyed to Señor Ernesto T. Lefevre, the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Panama, dated February 25, 1915, pertaining to the anti-Chinese legislation [etc.]

It was apparent that a severe law would have been enacted if the good offices of the United States had not arrived in time, and words cannot express my gratitude for the effect of the skillful and amicable intervention of your excellency. And I hereby have the honor, in the name of the whole Chinese Colony, to manifest profound gratefulness to your excellency. I had also informed my Government at Peking in reference to the great service done by your excellency in protecting the Chinese citizens domiciled in the territory of the Republic of Panama.

As the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Señor Ernesto T. Lefevre, had verbally promised me emphatically during my visit with your excellency in the Secretary's office, that certain severe provisions of Law 50 of 1913 would continue unenforced as in the past, I have delivered to Señor Lefevre a note a few days ago in order to verify his words. I have not the pleasure to get an answer to it yet. Copy of my note is herewith enclosed.

Panama, February 27, 1915.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to thank your excellency heartily for your action in regard to the anti-Chinese legislation before the National Assembly.

Through the medium of Mr. William J. Price, the American Minister, who extended his good offices in the matter, your excellency said emphatically to us that the Chinese shall be no more molested, and assured us that while your excellency was Secretary of Foreign Relations the Chinese would enjoy entire liberty and rights.

There is no doubt, in view of your kind speech, that the provisions of Law 50 requiring the deposit of five hundred pesos of silver by those who have no "cédulas" and re-registration every six months, will be held in abeyance. I should be glad, nevertheless, if your excellency would kindly communicate to me your attitude upon the two above important points in a note with which, translated into Chinese, I may show the goodness of your excellency to the Chinese Government at Peking and to every Chinese here who may be in doubt.

With my highest consideration [etc.]

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I am instructed, by a cablegram recently received from my Government, to express deep gratefulness to your excellency for the good offices which your excellency used with an entirely satisfactory result in behalf of the whole Chinese colony domiciled in the territory of the Republic of Panama, in regard to the anti-Chinese legislation by the National Assembly of Panama, of which I had informed my Government.

In reference to the passports of those Chinese who might enter the United States, I am instructed by our Minister in Washington that my Government had already arranged with that of the United States that any Chinese who might have the right to go into the territory of the United States, and possessing a certificate issued by the Chinese Consul General in Panama, should have the visé of the American Minister or similar officials.

The President of the United States, His Excellency Daniel F. Mooney, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary; and The President of Paraguay His Excellency D. Manuel Gondra, Minister of Foreign Relations;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I

The high contracting parties agree that all disputes between them, of every nature whatsoever, which diplomacy shall fail to adjust, shall be submitted for investigation and report to an International Commission, to be constituted in the manner prescribed in the next succeeding Article; and they agree not to declare war or begin hostilities during such investigation, and before the report is submitted.

The International Commission shall be appointed within the four months following the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty; and vacancies shall be filled according to the manner of the original appointment.

ARTICLE III

In case the high contracting parties shall have failed to adjust a dispute by diplomatic methods, they shall at once refer it to the International Commission for investigation and report.

The International Commission may, however, act upon its own initiative, and in such case it shall notify both Governments and request their cooperation in the investigation.

The report of the International Commission shall be completed within one year after the date on which it shall declare its investigation to have been initiated, unless the high contracting parties shall protract the term by mutual consent. The report shall be prepared in triplicate; one copy shall be presented to each Government, and the third retained by the Commission for its archives.

The high contracting parties reserve the right to act independently on the subject-matter of the dispute after the report of the Commission shall have been submitted.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Peru looking to the advancement of the cause of general peace was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Lima, on the fourteenth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, the original of which Treaty, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

The United States of America and the Republic of Peru, with the earnest desire to strengthen their bonds of friendship and to contribute to the development of the spirit of universal peace, have resolved upon the celebration of a treaty containing the rules for the practice of these high proposals, and to that end have nominated as their plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States, Benton McMillin, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States in Peru; and

The President of Peru, Doctor J. Fernando Gazzani, Minister of Foreign Relations;

Who, after having examined their full powers, which were found in due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I

The High Contracting Parties agree that all disputes between them, of every nature whatsoever, to the settlement of which previous arbitration treaties or agreements do not apply in their terms or are not applied in fact, shall, when diplomatic methods of adjustment have failed, be referred for investigation and report to an International Commission, to be constituted in the manner prescribed in the next succeeding article; and they agree not to declare war or begin hostilities during such investigation and before the report is submitted.

ARTICLE II

The International Commission shall be composed of five members, two named by each one of the respective Governments and one named jointly by them. The designations made by each Government can only devolve one on a citizen of the State itself and the other on a citizen of a third country. The designation of the fifth member can not devolve upon a citizen of either of the two interested nations.

Each of the High Contracting Parties reserves to itself the right to withdraw its two Commissioners, or one of them, before the initiation of the investigations, and, within the same period, to withdraw its agreement to the joint designation of the fifth member. In these cases, they shall proceed to replace them according to the forms above laid down.

During the period of investigation the Commissioners shall receive such pecuniary compensation as shall be agreed upon by the High Contracting Parties.

The Commission, whose expenses shall be met in equal parts by the two Governments, shall be appointed a short time after the exchange of the ratifications of the Treaty; and to provide for possible vacancies on it, the same rules shall be applied as in the original designations.

ARTICLE III

The questions which divide the High Contracting Parties should they be incapable of solution by diplomatic means, shall be submitted immediately to the International Commission for its investigation and report.

The International Commission may, however, by unanimous agreement, spontaneously offer its services to that effect, and in such case it shall notify both Governments, and request their cooperation in the investigation.

The High Contracting Parties agree to furnish the International Commission all means and all facilities for the investigation and report.

The report shall be presented in the maximum period of one year, but the High Contracting Parties, by mutual accord, may shorten or extend this period. The report shall appear in three copies.

The Commission shall reserve one of the copies for its archives and deliver the other two to the Governments interested.

The High Contracting Parties reserve the right to act independently in the question dealt with in the investigations after the issue of the report.

ARTICLE IV

The ratifications of this Treaty shall be made by the President of the United States of America by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and by the President of Peru if the Legislative Power shall give its approval in conformity with the Constitution and the laws. The exchange of ratifications shall take place as soon as possible, and immediately afterward this Treaty shall take effect for a period of five years, at the end of which it will remain in effect until twelve months after the day on which one of the Parties advises the other of its intention of terminating it.

In witness whereof, we the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty, in duplicate, in the English and Spanish languages and have hereunto affixed our respective seals.

PROTOCOL OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA CONCERNING THE EXPORTATION OF EMBARGOED GOODS FROM RUSSIA TO THE UNITED STATES.

Treaty Series No. 618.]

In order to facilitate the commercial relations between the United States of America and Russia, in view of the embargo which has been placed by the Government of Russia upon the exportation of certain articles from Russia, the undersigned Robert Lansing, Secretary of State of the United States, and His Excellency George Bakhméteff, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Russia to the United States, duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, have agreed upon the following conditions under which American citizens or firms may secure release of shipments under special permission from the Imperial Russian Government, to-wit:

1.

Whenever an American merchant or firm desires to make importations from Russia he or they shall first file an application for such importation with the Commercial Agent in charge of the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce of the United States, which application shall set forth in detail information regarding the proposed importations, the commodities, the character of the goods, their quantities and values, the methods of payment, and the name of the Russian export firm, as well as any other details which may be required.

The American importer shall further state in the application his preparedness to file with the proper Russian official in the United States a bond to the Imperial Russian Government, to the amount of the value of the goods at the port of importation as of day prior to the date of the execution of the bond. This bond shall run for a period of at least three years or until the conclusion of the war; and the said bond shall guarantee that the commodities, raw materials, or products manufactured therefrom, which it is desired to import, shall not be exported from the United States to any country unless special permission therefor be granted by the Imperial Russian Government or its representative.

3.

Upon the American importer complying with the requirements of conditions numbered one and two, the Commercial Agent in charge of the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce of the United States shall then make inquiries as to the standing and responsibility of the American importer, and as to such other details with respect to him as may be deemed to be required; and should he find that such importer is satisfactory in all respects, he shall approve the application and forward it to the Imperial Russian Embassy at Washington or to its representative.

4.

Upon the said application receiving the approval of the Imperial Russian Embassy or its representative, the Imperial Russian Embassy or its representative will at once seek by cable the permission of the Imperial Russian Minister of Finance for the exportation of the goods in question, it being understood that the American importer will deposit with the Commercial Agent in charge of the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce a sum sufficient to cover all costs of cabling and incidental expenses. If permission for exportation be granted by the Imperial Russian Government, the American importer shall then submit his order to the Commercial Agent in charge of the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce for approval and the order shall be made out in such a way that the goods to be imported shall be consigned to the order of the Secretary of Commerce of the United States.

5.

When permission for the exportation of the goods shall have been procured from the Imperial Russian Minister of Finance, the American importer shall execute his bond and file it with the proper Russian official in the United States for approval. Upon the receipt of this approval by the Commercial Agent in charge of the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce the consignment may be released to the American importer.

Should it be found that the terms of the bond have been violated and that the goods in question have been exported from the United States either in their original form or in manufactured form, except with the specific approval of the Imperial Russian Government or its representative, the bond shall be forfeited to the Imperial Russian Government.

7.

The Commercial Agent in charge of the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce shall transmit to the Imperial Russian Commercial Attaché a statement setting forth the applications which have been made for importations of Russian goods into the United States and a statement of the actual arrivals of such goods, and these statements shall be made in triplicate on the first and fifteenth of each month.

8.

It is understood that in case the Imperial Russian Government does not approve an application it is not bound in any way to give an explanation of the reasons of its refusal as these might be justified by considerations of State policy.

9.

It is understood that this agreement shall go into operation on September 23rd, 1915, and shall remain in force during the continuance of the embargo. If, however, American importers desire to import goods which have been purchased prior to the date above mentioned, such arrangements may be made under the usual procedure but will be subject to the special approval of the Imperial Russian Minister of Finance.

In witness whereof the undersigned have hereunto signed their names and affixed their seals.

San Salvador, February 23, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of the Annual Message which the President of Salvador delivered at the opening of Congress on February 15. The attention of the Department is respectfully called to that part of the message which deals with foreign relations and particularly the protest of Salvador to the Nicaraguan canal convention.

I have [etc.]

BOAZ W. LONG.

[Inclosure—Translation—Extract.]

The Executive being jealous for all that intimately affects the important interests of the nation, and in view of the desire of the United States of America to establish a naval station in the Gulf of Fonseca, instructions were given to the Minister of Salvador in Washington to present a protest to the American Department of State, and this was done¹ under date of October 21, 1913, and was answered² by the Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, on February 13, 1914, in terms which will be furnished you by the appropriate office.

The reply made to this note by our Minister in Washington, Dr. Francisco Dueñas, was limited to the refutation in moderate and prudent terms of the allegations of the American note, and the clearer exposition of the justice of our cause.³

Animated by the spirit of Central American loyalty, and owing to the fact that the Nicaraguan treaty is now pending ratification by the American Senate, in which treaty a stipulation is made for an American protectorate over our sister Republic, instructions were sent to our diplomatic representative in Washington, Dr. Carlos A. Meza, to make a new protest after consultation with the diplomatic representative of Costa Rica. This was done on July 8, 1914, in a note to the American Department of State,⁴ which will be reported to you by the Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The reply⁵ of the American Government, because of its conciliatory tone, and the sense and scope which good diplomacy must give to the substantial recognition of our right to forbid any infringement of Central American law and order to our detriment, deserves to be given to you in full, as follows:

Our Legation wishing to conclude an understanding in which unequivocal form should be given to the recognition of our right to maintain inviolate the autonomy of Central America, another note of explanation was written, July 22 [21], 1914 which deserves reproduction here because of the importance of the question and the invulnerability of the position assumed by Salvador. It is as follows:

TREATY FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF GENERAL PEACE, CONCLUDED BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND SWEDEN.

Signed at Washington, October 13, 1914; ratification advised by the Senate, October 22, 1914; ratified by the President, January 4, 1915; ratified by Sweden, November 13, 1914; ratifications exchanged at Washington, January 11, 1915; proclaimed, January 12, 1915.

Treaty Series No. 607.]

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, a Treaty between the United States of America and Sweden looking to the advancement of the cause of general peace, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Washington, on the thirteenth day of October, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, the original of which Treaty, being in the English and French languages, is word for word as follows:

TREATY FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES.

The President of the United States of America and His Majesty the King of Sweden, desiring to strengthen the friendly relations which unite their two countries and to serve the cause of general peace, have decided to conclude a treaty for these purposes and have consequently appointed the plenipotentiaries designated hereinafter, to-wit:

The President of the United States of America, the Honorable William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State of the United States; and

His Majesty the King of Sweden, Mr. W. A. F. Ekengren, His Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington;

Who, after exhibiting to each other their full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE 1.

Any disputes arising between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of His Majesty the King of Sweden, of whatever nature they may be, shall, when ordinary diplomatic proceedings have failed and the High Contracting Parties do not have recourse to arbitration, be submitted for investigation and report to a permanent International Commission constituted in the manner prescribed in the following article.

The High Contracting Parties agree not to resort, with respect to each other, to any act of force during the investigation to be made by the Commission and before its report is handed in.

ARTICLE 2.

The International Commission shall be composed of five members appointed as follows: Each Government shall designate two members, only one of whom shall be of its own nationality; the fifth member shall be designated by common consent and shall not belong to any of the nationalities already represented on the Commission; he shall perform the duties of President.

In case the two Governments should be unable to agree on the choice of the fifth commissioner, the other four shall be called upon to designate him, and failing an understanding between them, the provisions of article 45 of The Hague Convention of 1907 shall be applied.

The Commission shall be organized within six months from the exchange of ratifications of the present convention.

The members shall be appointed for one year and their appointment may be renewed. They shall remain in office until superseded or reappointed, or until the work on which they are engaged at the time their office expires is completed.

Any vacancies which may arise (from death, resignation, or cases of physical or moral incapacity) shall be filled within the shortest possible period in the manner followed for the original appointment.

The High Contracting Parties shall, before designating the Commissioners, reach an understanding in regard to their compensation. They shall bear by halves the expenses incident to the meeting of the Commission.

ARTICLE 3.

Differences that may happen to occur between the High Contracting Parties and should fail of settlement by diplomatic methods shall be forthwith referred to the examination of the International Commission which will undertake to make a report. By a note addressed to the International Bureau of the Permanent Court at The Hague, which shall communicate it without delay to both Governments, the President may remind the Parties that the services of the International Commission are at their disposal.

ARTICLE 4.

The two High Contracting Parties shall have a right, each on its own part, to state to the President of the Commission what is the subject-matter of the controversy. No difference in these statements, which shall be furnished by way of suggestion, shall arrest the action of the Commission.

In case the cause of the dispute should consist of certain acts already committed or about to be committed, the Commission shall as soon as possible indicate what measures to preserve the rights of each party ought in its opinion to be taken provisionally and pending the delivery of its report.

ARTICLE 5.

As regards the procedure which it is to follow, the Commission shall as far as possible be guided by the provisions contained in articles 9 to 36 of Convention 1 of The Hague of 1907.

The High Contracting Parties agree to afford the Commission all means and all necessary facilities for its investigation and report.

The work of the Commission shall be completed within one year from the date on which it has taken jurisdiction of the case, unless the High Contracting Parties should agree to set a different period.

The conclusion of the Commission and the terms of its report shall be adopted by a majority. The report, signed only by the President acting by virtue of his office, shall be transmitted by him to each of the Contracting Parties.

The High Contracting Parties reserve full liberty as to the action to be taken on the report of the Commission.

ARTICLE 6.

The present treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States of America, upon his being authorized thereto by the American Senate, and by His Majesty the King of Sweden.

The ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible and the treaty shall go into force on the day of the exchange of ratifications.

Its duration shall be five years counted from the exchange of ratifications.

Unless denounced six months at least before the expiration of the said period it shall continue by tacit renewal for another period of five years and so on in periods of five years unless denounced.

In witness whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty and have affixed thereunto their seals.

Done at Washington this 13th day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and fourteen.

And whereas, the said Treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the ratifications of the two governments were exchanged in the City of Washington on the eleventh day of January, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen;

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Treaty to be made public, to the end that the same and every article and clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

The Department of State presents its compliments to the Minister of Switzerland and has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of his memorandum asking, in view of the situation in Turkey, that the American Ambassador at Constantinople be instructed to render Swiss citizens in that country all necessary protection.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, April 3, 1915.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegraphic instruction No. 450 [459] of March 5 [4], 1915, in regard to the extension of good offices to Swiss citizens in Turkey, I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of the Embassy's first note verbale on this subject to the Sublime Porte, and of its reply, in which it makes certain reservations with respect to the treatment to be accorded to Swiss citizens who reside in the Ottoman Empire. As soon as these reservations are accepted by this Embassy, appropriate instructions will, it is stated, be issued for the recognition of American diplomatic and consular officers in their protection of Swiss interests.

In the past, Swiss citizens have usually placed themselves under French or German protection. Until the entry of Turkey into the present war, Swiss citizens under French protection enjoyed all the rights possessed by French citizens, except that they occasionally had difficulties with the Ottoman authorities over the question of their right to own as Swiss citizens real estate in Turkey, or in the matter of obtaining mining rights, the Swiss Government never having adhered to the Protocol of 1869. The same rule holds good for Swiss citizens under German protection, as this Embassy has been informed that, at the present time, such citizens enjoy all the privileges of German subjects, except in regard to the ownership of real estate.

Since the entry of Turkey into the general war, practically all of the Swiss citizens in Constantinople who were formerly under the protection of the French consular authorities have been temporarily registered as under American protection. It is also possible that the course of events here might lead those Swiss citizens who are now under German protection to dissociate themselves from this in order to be considered under the protection of American consular officers.

It is possible that the principle proposed in the Porte's note of March 22 may not be construed by the Ottoman authorities as having a wider bearing than upon the disputed question of the right of Swiss citizens to hold real property in Turkey. The Political Department of the Swiss Government recently informed this Embassy that it did not desire to press for a solution of this question at the present time. The Embassy has therefore replied to this note of the Porte, as per copy herewith enclosed, stating that without consulting the Swiss Republic it does not feel competent to discuss the proposed reservations with respect to the treatment to be accorded to Swiss citizens, and that it can consequently adhere only provisionally to this principle, pending the approval of the Swiss Government, and on the supposition that the Ottoman Government does not desire to accord to Swiss citizens under American protection a less favorable régime than that which they have enjoyed while under the protection of other embassies.

The Department is respectfully requested to submit copies of the correspondence conducted with the Sublime Porte on this question to the Swiss Government. In provisionally accepting the proposal of the Ottoman Ministry of Foreign Affairs, it has been the desire of the Embassy in order to avoid delay to secure temporary recognition of American diplomatic and consular officers as in charge of Swiss interests, so that whatever assistance should be necessary may be extended during the present emergency, without committing either the Embassy or the Swiss Government to any definite future attitude.

The Embassy of the United States of America has the honor to inform the Imperial Ministry of Foreign Affairs that, at the request of the Government of Switzerland, it has been instructed by the Department of State to temporarily assume charge of the protection of Swiss interests in Turkey. This Embassy requests, therefore, that the Imperial authorities of the capital and the provinces be instructed to recognize American diplomatic and consular officers in that capacity.

NOTE VERBALE.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has had the honor of receiving the note verbale which the Embassy of the United States of America addressed to it on March 9, 1915, No. 209, to communicate that its Government had, upon the express desire of Switzerland, charged it with the temporary protection of Swiss interests in Turkey.

The Imperial Government would be disposed to consent to have Swiss citizens protected by the Embassy and the Consulates of the Republic under its jurisdiction, provided that these citizens enjoy the treatment of the nationals of the states which have concluded no treaty or convention whatever with the Sublime Porte.

The Imperial Ministry will not fail to recommend to the Sublime Porte to issue appropriate instructions to the Imperial Authorities of the capital and the provinces, when the Embassy of the United States will kindly adhere to the aforementioned principle.

NOTE VERBALE.

The Embassy of the United States of America has had the honor of receiving the note verbale of the Imperial Ministry of Foreign Affairs of March 22, 1915, No. 62803/59, formulating certain reservations with respect to the treatment to be accorded to citizens of Switzerland who may place themselves under the protection of the American diplomatic and consular officers in the Ottoman Empire. While the Embassy does not feel competent to discuss any reservations without first consulting the Helvetic Republic, it supposes that the Sublime Porte has no intention of causing Swiss citizens to suffer in any way by the transfer of their protection from the embassies which previously have been, or which are still, watching over their interests to the American Embassy, and on this understanding will provisionally adhere to this principle pending the Swiss Government's approval.

NOTE VERBALE.

In reply to the note verbale of the Embassy of the United States of America dated April 3, 1915, No. 242, in regard to the protection of the interests of Swiss citizens in the Empire, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has the honor to point out that the present situation, in which the said Embassy desires to assume such protection, is totally different from that of the time when the diplomatic mission and the consulates of France undertook to exercise it.

For this reason, the conditions laid down in the ministerial note verbale of March 22, 1915, No. 62803/59, had to be formulated for accepting this protection; and, moreover, every State to which a proposition of the nature of that of the Embassy of the Republic is made, has the right to determine the conditions to which it subjects its adherence.

In view of the attitude of the Turkish Government on this matter, the Department will be pleased to be informed of the views of the Swiss Government relative thereto.

LEGATION OF SWITZERLAND,
Washington, May 29, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to express to your excellency my best thanks for the verbal note of your Department of May 25, concerning the protection of Swiss citizens in Turkey, whose protection the Government of the United States was kind enough to take over.

I immediately informed my Government of the standpoint taken by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Constantinople, i. e. to consent to the protection of Swiss citizens by the American Embassy provided that they enjoy the treatment of the nationals of the States having concluded no treaty or convention whatever with the Sublime Porte.

My Government has now instructed me "to strongly insist with your excellency that the Swiss citizens under American protection in Turkey be assimilated with the citizens of the United States as the Swiss protected by Germany and France have always been assimilated with the nationals of those countries."

I should therefore be much obliged to you for forwarding by cable the foregoing reply of the Swiss Government to the American Embassy in Constantinople, so that it may be in a position to insist that Swiss citizens under its protection enjoy the same treatment as citizens of the United States.

Personally I beg to add the following explanations:

According to the views of the Swiss Federal Council, a Swiss citizen in the Ottoman Empire enjoys the protection provided for in the treaties in force between Turkey and the Power under whose protection he has placed himself (Salis, Schweizerisches Bundesrecht Vol. II, No. 513). This rule is founded on customary right and was specifically confirmed to the United States by the Swiss Federal Council (note of Federal Councillor Droz to American Minister Washburn in Berne, of January 28, 1891, mentioned in "Moore, Digest of International Law," Vol. II, page 755).

The fact that Turkey itself has shared this view is evidenced in numerous cases, part of which are mentioned in "Salis, Schweiz. Bundesrecht" and, with reference to Swiss under American protection, in Moore's Digest, Vol. II, page 733 and paragraphs 288 and 290.

The American protection would undoubtedly be of no practical effect if our countrymen were to be treated as citizens of countries having concluded no treaties with the Porte.

I beg to avail myself of this opportunity to express to your excellency my appreciation for the valuable defense of the interests of our citizens by the American Embassy in Constantinople.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 2, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of May 29, referring to the status of the Swiss citizens in Turkey whose protection the Government of the United States has taken over, and informing the Department that your Government has instructed you "to strongly insist that the Swiss citizens under American protection in Turkey be assimilated with the citizens of the United States as the Swiss protected by Germany and France have always been assimilated with the nationals of those countries."

I regret that it is impossible for the Department to take the position that the Swiss citizens under American protection in Turkey can be assimilated with the citizens of the United States. The position on a matter of this kind which the Department is compelled to assume in accordance with the Constitution and laws of the United States is clearly shown by those pages of Moore's International Law Digest to which you refer in your note. The Department's circulars of June 16, 1871, and December 15, 1871, relative to this matter, there referred to, were as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 16, 1871.

To the Diplomatic and Consular Officers of the United States.

GENTLEMEN: His Excellency the President of the Swiss Confederation has expressed to this Department, through the Minister of the United States accredited to that Government, a wish that you would severally extend your protection to Swiss citizens who may desire it and who may be sojourning at places where there are no diplomatic or consular representatives of that Republic.

This Government has, on more than one occasion, upon the request of friendly powers, given to its diplomatic and consular representatives permission to take upon themselves, with the consent of the government within whose jurisdiction they reside, the function of representing those powers at places where the latter had no such officers. It has understood this to amount simply to the granting of the services of our agents, with their own consent, to meet what has ordinarily been a fortuitous and temporary exigency of the friendly government. When this function is accepted, the diplomatic or consular officer becomes the agent of the foreign government as to the duties he may perform for its citizens or subjects; he becomes responsible to it for his discharge of those duties; and that government is alone responsible for his acts in relation thereto.

With this understanding of the obligations, you are authorized, with the consent of the authorities of the country or place where you officially reside, to extend such protection to Swiss citizens whenever it may be required or needed. It is expected, however, that, in complying with this authority, you will exercise due discretion, and will be careful not to give just cause of offense in any quarter.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

To the Diplomatic and Consular Officers of the United States.

SIR: Information has reached this Department that the purpose of its Circular No. 11, of the 16th of June last, relative to the protection of citizens of Switzerland, may, in some instances, have been misunderstood. You are consequently informed that you were not, for that purpose, expected to become a diplomatic or consular officer of that Republic, which is prohibited by the Constitution to officers of the United States who are citizens. The intention was that you should merely use your good offices in behalf of any Swiss in your vicinity who might request them in the absence of a diplomatic or consular representative of Switzerland, and with the consent of the authorities where you reside.

I am [etc.]

HAMILTON FISH.

In an instruction dated December 18, 1873, to the American Consul at Smyrna, the Department stated:

In authorizing the Diplomatic and Consular officers of the United States, by the circulars No. 11, of the 16th of June and No. 15 of the 15th of December, 1871, to extend protection to Swiss citizens in certain cases, it was not contemplated that those citizens were to be registered as entitled to the same protection as citizens of the United States. The purpose was to allow the good offices of the Ministers or Consuls to be employed in any particular case in which the Swiss citizen might suppose himself to have been aggrieved when such good offices should be solicited with a view to redress.

Even the employment of good offices on such occasions, however, was made conditional upon the consent of the local authorities.

The Department has already instructed the American Ambassador at Constantinople to use his good offices to afford Swiss citizens in Turkey ample protection, and cannot see its way clear to send any more explicit instructions relative to this matter.

Since October 1, 1914, the former methods of procedure concerning claims of this sort should cease to be repeated, and whenever foreign subjects shall desire to maintain their rights, they shall address themselves directly to the said Imperial authorities, basing their action to this effect upon the laws, regulations and instructions in force; in case they should not obtain favorable action they shall have recourse, according to the case, to the Imperial Departments from which these authorities depend, to the Council of State if there is occasion, through the channel of the Grand Vizierate, or to judicial proceedings if that course is open to them.

In case their representations should remain fruitless and clauses of treaties or conventions, other than those which are abrogated, should be misinterpreted with regard to them, diplomatic procedure for securing redress of their wrongs could be chosen.

The Imperial Ministry will therefore be obliged, to its great regret, to take no action with regard to private claims which may be communicated to it by the said diplomatic channel when administrative and judicial recourse shall not have been exhausted, and it will be unable to take into consideration those which are not based upon infractions of the precise provisions of treaties in force.

Strictly speaking, it will only be able to receive, by notice, recommendations concerning certain private affairs, and to transmit them, as a matter of simple courtesy, to the Departments concerned, provided that this method of procedure is followed in exceptional cases.

SUBLIME PORTE,
MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Constantinople, December 5, 1914.

MR. AMBASSADOR: I have taken note of the note which your excellency was pleased to address to me on September 18, 1914, in regard to the abrogation of the Capitulations.

The Imperial Ministry does not desire to enter into this question, into considerations upon the treaties which have been concluded in this connection, nor upon the extensive interpretations which have been given to clauses making exceptions to the rights of territorial sovereignty, clauses which, by the very juridical nature of things, should have been restrictively interpreted.

Nor does it try to point out that the part of the agreements and arrangements concluded in favor of the Imperial Government was reduced to the point of making them lose their chief interest. It limits itself to setting forth that the Sublime Porte has, like every state, the right to denounce, at any time, international acts concluded without stipulations of duration.

In effect, no treaty can contain provisions which should perpetuate themselves to eternity, when they deal with matters of commerce, of organization, and of judicial procedure or administration, which should evidently be submitted to the evolution of time.

The Imperial Government has all the more undeniably the right to avail itself of the faculty of denouncing which belongs to it, since the régime of the Capitulations, obsolete and no longer responding to modern needs, even when it is confined within its true contractual limits, threatens its own existence, and renders very difficult the conduct of Ottoman public affairs.

For all of these reasons, the Sublime Porte now feels that it must maintain its point of view as set forth in its note of September 9, 1914, No. 53699/89.

NOTE VERBALE.

No. 285.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, May 7, 1915.

The Embassy of the United States of America has the honor to inform the Imperial Ministry of Foreign Affairs that it is in receipt of reports from its consuls in various parts of the Empire, notably Bagdad, Aleppo, and Harput (Maamouret-ul-Aziz), in which they state that the provincial authorities have informed them that their direct intervention in matters affecting Americans can no longer be allowed, and that these latter must address their complaints or petitions directly to the said authorities.

At the time when the buildings of the American Schools at Harput were occupied by the military authorities (see this Embassy's note verbale of April 9, 1915, No. 252) the Governor General even informed the American Consul at that place that the latter's protest could not be taken into consideration, as his consular position was no longer recognized. To cite another example, the Kaimakam of Alexandretta refused, and was upheld by the Governor General at Aleppo, to receive a petition from a local American firm through the American Consular Agent at Alexandretta; while at Bagdad the Governor General has notified the American Consul and his various colleagues that hereafter their intercourse with him and with the other local officials must be restricted within certain limits.

Reserving its views in regard to the long-established rights of American consular officers and American citizens in the Ottoman Empire, guaranteed by treaties and usage, the Embassy desires to remind the Imperial Ministry that it is a universally recognized duty, as well as the right, of consular officers in every country to endeavor to assist and to uphold the rights of their nationals when the latter have need of protection, and that no possible interpretation of the general usages of international law can deprive American consular officers of the right of exercising this duty.

While reiterating the attitude of the American Government in the general question, as set forth in this Embassy's note verbale of September 18, 1914, the Embassy finds itself obliged to ask the Sublime Porte to issue without further delay appropriate instructions to the provincial authorities to maintain the correct relations which have always existed between them and the American consular officers in the past.

NOTE VERBALE.

No. 66421/107.]

SUBLIME PORTE,
MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Constantinople, May 31, 1915.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has had the honor to receive the note verbale which the Embassy of the United States of America was pleased to address to it on May 7, 1915, No. 285, concerning the refusal by certain local authorities in the provinces to admit the intervention of the American consuls in matters which concern their nationals.

It is evident that, in spite of the abrogation of the Capitulations, there is a possibility to admit, under all reserve, that the American consulates continue to be recognized in localities where they have already been formerly recognized; but their functions are reduced to proportions incomparable with the past, within the limits of general public international law and, accordingly, these agents can no longer, as formerly, act as intermediary between one of their nationals and the Imperial authorities, whether for the receipt, or for the transmission of petitions, judicial acts, or other papers.

Whenever an American citizen shall have need of addressing himself for his affairs to the Imperial Ottoman authorities, he shall do it directly as, moreover, these things are done in every country.

The Imperial Ministry has deemed it proper to set forth its point of view in this connection in its note verbale of November 26, 1914, No. 57803/133, and thinks that the same principles are to be followed in the Empire, where all official recourse of consuls for prejudicial acts of which their nationals make complaint may not be accepted by the Imperial Authorities.

The Valis and Mutessarifs might only receive unofficial requests for certain affairs of a private nature, and send recommendations to the competent imperial authorities provided that this mode of procedure be followed as an exception.

NOTE VERBALE.

No. 79748/183.]

SUBLIME PORTE,
MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Constantinople, September 4, 1915.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has from time to time had the honor to receive communications in which it is alleged that the Capitulations are to remain in force, as also notes verbales in which claims are based upon these international documents, or in which are invoked articles of old treaties and principles of a régime now abolished.

The Imperial Ministry in its note of September 9, 1914, No. 53699/89,³ has already informed the Embassy of the United States of America of the decision of the Sublime Porte to abrogate the Capitulations and has at the same time made known its reasons for it.

It has affirmed and insisted upon this point of view in many subsequent communications, among others in the one of December 5, 1914, No. 58181/137.⁴

As it thinks that it has sufficiently enlarged upon it, it considers all discussion of this point as exhausted, that the above decision of the Imperial Government is irrevocable and that since October 1, 1914, the European international public law must govern the relations of the states and foreign subjects with the Imperial authorities and Ottoman subjects.

Therefore it has the honor to notify the Embassy of the United States that if it receives any communication of the nature above indicated it will, to its regret, find itself in the painful necessity not to give it any effect and to pay no attention to the matter to which it refers.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 4, 1915.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch No. 488, dated September 22, 1915, enclosing a copy and translation of a note verbale from the Sublime Porte, dated September 4, 1915, in which the Embassy is informed that henceforth all communications to the Sublime Porte in which the Capitulations are considered to be still in force will be disregarded.

You are instructed to notify the Ottoman Government that the Department cannot agree with the position taken by it in this matter; but on the contrary holds that a convention by which one country gives the rights of sovereignty within its territory to another country is absolute in its nature, and the grantor, having parted with the rights unconditionally, cannot resume their exercise except by a reconveyance or a formal consent on the part of the grantee who is entitled to exercise them.

Extraterritoriality holds much the same relation to sovereignty over persons that international servitudes hold to sovereignty over territory. In both cases the unconditional grant of sovereign rights cannot be abrogated without the assent of the grantee, the owner.

The chief reason for obtaining the right of extraterritoriality is to insure protection for the life, liberty and interests of the nationals of one state while within the territory of the state granting the right. If the surrender of extraterritorial rights lessens such protection, a government cannot relinquish the right without violating its manifest duty. As to whether the surrender of the right will lessen the safety of its nationals within the foreign territory, their government alone is in a position to decide. Following the practice in similar cases with other countries in which the United States exercised extraterritorial rights under treaty, this Government will, upon the establishment of judicial and administrative reforms in Turkey, consider whether they are of such a character as to warrant the surrender of the extraterritorial rights of American citizens in the Ottoman Empire.

You are instructed to notify the Ottoman Government in conclusion that the United States will hold it responsible for any injury which may be occasioned to the United States or to its citizens, through any interference on the part of Ottoman authorities with the extraterritorial rights possessed by the United States and its citizens in the Ottoman Empire.

TREATY FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF GENERAL PEACE, CONCLUDED BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND URUGUAY.

Signed at Washington, July 20, 1914; ratification advised by the Senate, August 13, 1914; ratified by the President, February 19, 1915; ratified by Uruguay, November 25, 1914; ratifications exchanged at Washington, February 24, 1915; proclaimed, February 26, 1915.

Treaty Series No. 611.]

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Uruguay looking to the advancement of the cause of general peace was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Washington on the twentieth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, the original of which Treaty, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

The United States of America and the Oriental Republic of Uruguay, being desirous to strengthen the bonds of amity that bind them together and also to advance the cause of general peace, have resolved to enter into a treaty for that purpose, and to that end have appointed as their plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States, the Honorable William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State; and

The President of Uruguay, his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States, Señor Dr. Don Carlos Maria de Pena;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

The High Contracting Parties agree that all disputes between them, of every nature whatsoever, to the settlement of which previous arbitration treaties or agreements do not apply in their terms or are not applied in fact, shall, when diplomatic methods of adjustment have failed, be referred for investigation and report to a permanent International Commission, to be constituted in the manner prescribed in the next succeeding article; and they agree not to declare war or begin hostilities during such investigation and before the report is submitted.

ARTICLE II.

The International Commission shall be composed of five members, to be appointed as follows: One member shall be chosen from each country, by the Government thereof; one member shall be chosen by each Government from some third country; the fifth member shall be chosen by common agreement between the two Governments, it being understood that he shall not be a citizen of either country. Each of the High Contracting Parties shall have the right to remove, at any time before investigation begins, any Commissioner selected by it and to name his successor, and under the same conditions shall also have the right to withdraw its approval of the fifth Commissioner selected jointly; in which case a new Commissioner shall be selected jointly as in the original selection. The Commissioners shall, when actually employed in the investigation of a dispute, receive such compensation as shall be agreed upon by the High Contracting Parties. The expenses of the Commission shall be paid by the two Governments in equal proportion.

The International Commission shall be appointed as soon as possible after the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty; and vacancies shall be filled according to the manner of the original appointment.

ARTICLE III.

In case the High Contracting Parties shall have failed to adjust a dispute by diplomatic methods, they shall at once refer it to the International Commission for investigation and report. The International Commission may, however, by unanimous agreement spontaneously offer its services to that effect, and in such case it shall notify both Governments and request their cooperation in the investigation.

The High Contracting Parties agree to furnish the permanent International Commission with all the means and facilities required for its investigation and report.

The report of the International Commission shall be completed within one year after the date on which it shall declare its investigation to have begun, unless the High Contracting Parties shall limit or extend the time by mutual agreement. The report shall be prepared in triplicate; one copy shall be presented to each Government, and the third retained by the Commission for its files.

The High Contracting Parties reserve the right to act independently on the subject matter of the dispute after the report of the Commission shall have been submitted.

ARTICLE IV.

The present treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof; and by the President of Uruguay, in accordance with the Constitution and laws thereof; and the ratifications shall be exchanged as soon as possible. It shall take effect immediately after the exchange of ratifications, and shall continue in force for a period of five years; and it shall thereafter remain in force until twelve months after one of the High Contracting Parties have given notice to the other of an intention to terminate it.

In witness whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty and have affixed thereunto their seals.

Done in Washington on the 20th day of July, in the year nineteen hundred and fourteen.
