The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Happy Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is already past, and the new year here, but at Addison-Wesley we're still in a thankful mood. Thanks to you we've come a tremendous distance since we began to publish nursing texts just five years ago. Your enthusiastic acceptance of our books has made us a leader in nursing education. We will continue to publish works that live up to and exceed the demanding criteria of nurse educators and practitioners, and that's something you can be thankful for.

Laboratory Tests: Implications for Nurses and Allied Health Professionals

by Claire Judith Byrne, M.T., M.S.; Dolores F. Saxton, Ph.D.; Phyllis K. Pelikan, R.N.; Patricia Nugent, R.N.

The goal of this practical text is to impart an understanding of the purposes, necessary patient preparations, and the significances of findings for any of a wide variety of laboratory tests now in use. Its emphasis on the nurse's role and its organization by test rather than by disease are only two of the features that make this book outstanding. An entire chapter on Immunohematology and Blood Banking is included. By focusing on the rationales for tests, this text answers important whys about laboratory testing. It is suitable for all undergraduate nursing programs or in-service staff development programs, as well as allied health professionals.

Transcultural Health Care

Edited by George Henderson, Ph.D., and Martha Primeaux, R.N., M.S.N.

This valuable new book first tests the reader's transcultural awareness, then expands it. This is an excellent text for courses in community health nursing, anthropology of health care, and transcultural aspects of nursing. It will serve as an important supplement in core undergraduate courses like maternity nursing, medical-surgical nursing or communications. This work combines important published articles and original contributions solicited exclusively for the book, with the majority of articles written by health care practitioners who represent various ethnic and minority groups.

The Nurse's Quest for a Professional Identity

by Helen A. Cohen, Ph.D.

Anger . . . discouragement . . . attrition. As the Cook County School of Nursing's Director of Psychological Services, Helen A. Cohen has a unique insight into the causes of anger, discouragement, and attrition within the nursing profession. This work represents an authoritative, responsible and in-depth examination of important issues facing the nursing community. This book will provide important insights, including an up-to-date review of the literature on the professional socialization of nurses.

P.S.R.O.: The Promise, Perspective, and Potential

by John W. Bussman, M.D., Former National President P.S.R.O. and Sharon V. Davidson, R.N., M.Ed.

This text, in one easily readable volume, presents a broad and up-to-date view of Professional Standard Review Organizations by bringing together the ideas of numerous outstanding contributors. Intended to assist the evolutionary process of P.S.R.O.'s in a forward, positive, direction, this book will be a valuable addition to nursing administrative courses in baccalaureate programs and continuing education courses in community colleges that offer nursing administration to postgraduates.

Hardbound/432 pp (tent)/00790/1981.
