A decorative border with intricate scrollwork and floral patterns surrounds the text.

The experience of printing, marbling the cover papers and binding this piece has only increased my admiration for the craftsmen depicted in the book. I have derived much pleasure in its preparation and now hope it may bring some enjoyment to you.

INTRODUCTION

Jost Ammann's "Detailed Description of All Guilds," published in 1568 by renowned Frankfort publisher Sigmund Feyerabend, depicts "all arts, crafts and trades from the highest to the lowest." The book is a collection of one hundred and fourteen woodcuts with rhymes by Hans Sachs and presents an excellent introduction to many old crafts. The picture of the woodcutter is the oldest description of its kind, and it is possible that the cut of the draughtsman is Ammann himself. All in all, these cuts present us a wealth of detail of the sixteenth century. The cuts of Ammann's that are related to the printing crafts appear on the following pages, along with English verses.
