CHRISTIAN SCIENCE REPORT PLANNED

Recognized Student Groups Have Always Had Building Use, Claim

That a full report of the meeting of the Christian Science students Thursday evening in Music hall has been ordered and that the university has, since the regime of President Van Hise, permitted the use of its buildings by recognized student groups were the statements made yesterday from the office of the president.

President Frank has not yet taken the matter under personal consideration, but he will receive all available facts on the matter sometime today.

"I allow student organizations, if they have a sanctioning slip from the office of the dean of men to use this building," Dr. Charles H. Mills, head of the School of Music explained yesterday. "This matter is now being handled entirely through the office of the president."

Miss J. M. Wilkinson, secretary to the president, said yesterday that she had never heard of any abuse of the privilege extended to organized student groups. She added that she had seldom heard of such meetings being thrown open to the public.

The Christian Science students have been meeting in university buildings for approximately the last 10 years without drawing adverse criticism, according to officials at the School of Music.

The Christian Science group first moved into the School of Music because of need of a piano for its meetings. Previously the students had met in another university building, and for a decade it has been customary to allow their meetings to continue.

Day By Day With The News

By C. O. S.

Congress closed shop at noon yesterday. The senate session ended with the filibusters in control and some erstwhile senators weary after a 37-hour session, dozing away in army blankets provided by the war department.

Nine ships, caught in a gale off Atlantic coast, attempt to reach port.

British House of Commons votes to break with Russia unless the "Red" propaganda ceases.

Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin's junior senator, plans to go to Pinehurst, N. C., for a rest. He is confined to bed with grippe at the present.

Dying With Its Boots On

Brabantio—Thou art a villain.

Iago—You are—a senator.

—Shakespear, "Othello."

The tumult and the shouting dies and the United States senate adjourns along with the house of representatives. Filibustering senators held the floor until the end. The United States senate has been called the greatest deliberative body in the world but who would have thought it in these last days of heated clashes between political personalities?

We Disagree With Ejvje!

We have been reading an editorial by Crusader Bill Ejvje of the Capital Times entitled "League of Nations Fails to Function in China" and must disagree with the conclusion that Editor Ejvje draws. In fact, we think that he is prone to discuss international relations with epithets and catchwords instead of interpreting the facts.

"Every student of world events knows that the Chinese question is international rather than internal," states Editor Ejvje and flays the League for not functioning. That is where we disagree. The Chinese problem is primarily internal, with the international side secondary until the internal warfare is settled. Two warring powers are battling in China, the one a Nationalist party fighting for freedom in government, and the other the warlord Peking party trying to cram autocracy down the Chinese maw. How could the League of Nations settle this internal affair rightfully any more than the United States government should decide which government must control Nicaragua?

The Peking government is represented in the League of Nations but not the Cantonese. Would the League of Nations be dealing with China by dealing with the Peking government, Mr. Ejvje? China is torn by revolution; it has no authoritative government. How can the League of Nations negotiate?

Critics too often demand of the League what no conceivable international system could under any circumstance give—absolute security from war. We cannot expect that the League will eliminate all clashes between nations and we cannot expect that League will bring order out of turmoil in China until the smoke of internal conflict clears away.

Yes, the League of Nations is imperfect, Editor Ejvje. But, it is the best system for getting around the good old solid oak council table that exists in the world today.

The Situation In Nicaragua

The statistician of Time (the magazine) has estimated that there is now one United States marine for every 200 Nicaraguans in that country; one soldier for every 1000 United States citizens. More than 3,000 marines patrol Nicaragua to impose conditions under which the Diaz government cannot be overthrown.

Student's Vocabularies

Professor T. B. Beyer of Hamline university has conducted tests to discover the vocabularies of students. They range from 41,760 to 67,000 he finds (we do not agree personally). The students were completely baffled by such words as crinoid, coadunate, baboo, ankh, and eureptic.

BAR EXAM FOR LAW STUDENTS VOTE OF SENATE

Would Not Go Into Effect Until 1930, if Passed Now

If opinion of the assembly and governor is concurrent, Sen. Irving Mehigan's bill, passed by the Wisconsin senate, will require graduates of the Law school to pass a bar examination before they can be admitted to practice in the state.

No student now attending the university law school will be affected by the law, however, because it will not take effect until 1930.

May Repeal Present Law

The bill calls for a repeal of the present statute which admits law students here to the practice of law automatically upon the receipt of a diploma from the Law school.

The fact that Marquette university, which has the only other law school in the state, must of necessity take the bar examination, served as the basis for argument of friends of the bill. That the present system is conferring a special privilege upon Wisconsin students, and denying it to others, and declaring such a law as class legislation, was the plea of the ayes that carried the day.

Cashman Explains Vote

Sen. John E. Cashman, Denmark explained his vote for the measure as a member of the board of regents, saying the regents desired to show University of Wisconsin students no favors.

FOREIGN STUDENT CLUB TO EXPAND

George Sakamaki, Grad, Elected New President of International Club

A membership campaign for the International club is announced for next week by the executive committee of the organization.

Augustine Rodolfo, grad, chairman of the membership committee, announces that since the club is organized primarily to sponsor cordial fellowship among the various people of the world represented on the campus, the membership of the International club will be open to all who are enrolled in the university and who are interested in foreign students.

At a meeting of the International club last weekend, the following new officers were elected:

George Sakamaki, grad, president; Francis Gore '27, vice-president; and Mary Hoebel '30, secretary.

An initiation party is planned for next Friday evening to welcome all new students.

Kreisler Shows His True Genius In Union Concert

By M. E.

The enthusiastic ovation accorded Fritz Kreisler last evening by the audience which packed the stock pavilion should demonstrate conclusively to the Union Board, under whose sponsorship he appeared, that concerts by artists of international repute are both appreciated and patronized.

Mr. Kreisler's program last evening was well chosen. Beethoven's famous "Kreutzer Sonata" was the opening selection. The rendition of the second movement of the sonata by Mr. Kreisler and his accompanist, Mr. Carl Lamson, impressed one with the way in which the piano accompaniment added to the beauty of the violin.

"Adagio and Fugue in G Minor" by Bach, for violin alone, was played in a manner which left no doubt in any audience's mind as to why Kreisler is hailed by critics as the world's greatest violinist. In Tchaikovsky's "Andante Cantabile" and "Lotusland" by Cyril Scott and Kreisler the beauty of the tonal variations produced on the violin by the artist held the entire audience spellbound.

HOSPITAL WORKER SHOT WHILE EXAMINING GUN

While examining a gun with several of his friends yesterday evening, Lyle Johnson, 20, was accidentally shot through the right thigh. His condition last night was reported as serious, but not dangerous, according to authorities at the Wisconsin General hospital. Johnson has charge of the store room at the hospital.

The nominees for president, as announced by the cabinet are Laura C. Barrett '28, and Elise M. Roberts '28, Phyllis Edkins '28, and Elizabeth O. Lursig '28 were nominated by the cabinet. Josephine Barker '28 was nominated from the floor for vice-president.

BADGERS, ILLINOIS CLASH TONIGHT IN LAST HOME GAME

Defeated at Urbana, Cardinal Five Will Try to Avenge Themselves

LINEUPS

Wis.	Ill.
Andrews rf.	Daugherty
Behr lf.	Olson
Miller c.	Lindsay
Kowalezyk rg.	Reynolds
Barnum 1g.	McKay

Although Coach Meanwell's cagers are now resting in sixth place in the conference standings as a result of their recent trip into Indiana and Illinois, they have the opportunity to climb back a few notches by avenging the Illini defeat in the return engagement with Coach Ruby's team here this evening. Tonight's game will be the last for the Badgers on the home floor this season and it will be Captain Barnum's last game in the historic gymnasium.

Even Chance

Judging from the tight run given the Illini five on their own floor last Saturday, Wisconsin should stand slightly better than an even chance to even the score tonight. Tenhopen has recovered from his injuries and will be ready to be inserted in the lineup if Coach Meanwell sees fit to use him.

It is expected that Meanwell will start the regular five that he has used in the past three games which includes Behr and Andrews, forward, Miller, center, and Barnum and Kowalezyk, guards. It is said that Hotchkiss has been displaying some outstanding basketball all week in practice, and Coach Meanwell will undoubtedly call upon him for a good share of tonight's work.

Daugherty Illinois Star Illinois will appear with their regular five, including Daugherty, their high scoring forward. At the previous game at Urbana, this flash was stopped with a single basket but in the meantime his running-mate Olson, sank the baskets for the Suckers and it is the task of the Badger guards to stop both of these men here tonight.

NEW ORGANIZATION FOR THE PLAYERS

Bascom Hall Addition Brings Need for More Complete Group

A complete reorganization of the Wisconsin Players, made necessary by the enlarged activities that the club will undertake when the theater in the new Bascom hall addition is ready for use, was announced Friday by Harold Konnak '28, president of the Players.

"The work of the Players has heretofore been limited because of the lack of stage and theater facilities," said Konnak. "Now that we are to have a theater of our own, however, we are going to present a great many more plays than we have been able to do in the past.

"The present organization of the Players will not be able to take over this enlarged program; the personnel of the club must be increased and workers in every department of the theater included in its membership."

A committee consisting of Perry Thomas '28, chairman, Lyda Kennedy '27, Arthur Adams '28, David Lindstrom, grad, Jane Gaston '27, Aline Ziebell '27, and Sam Myers '28, has been appointed by the president to work out the plan of reorganization and to draft a new constitution.

One of the features of the new plan will be to include all workers in the theater—playwrights, scene designers, business staff, advertising, publicity, electricians, and stage managers—into full membership in the organization, a privilege that has formerly been accorded only to actors. Provision will also be made to increase the number of actors in the club.

No Petty Bickerings Exist at Rockets Prom Tonight - Acon

BY PAPA ACON

Religious bickerings will not be indulged in at the Rocketeer's Prom tonight! I wish to make that fact clear to the public. John '30 is laboring under the vicissitudes of misapprehension in accusing us of being "pawns in the dastardly game of Secretary Hibbard of the Y. M. C. A." His readers' say-so indicates that he fails to remember our statement that the Warner system will not be used.

Proselytizing, whatever that may mean, will not be in evidence, and furthermore, to show the spirit is non-sectarian, we have invited all the members of the Illinois basketball team. In all fairness, should we be accused? (Of course not.) The Grand March this evening will be detained until the guests who attend the game will arrive. No forged tickets will be accepted.

Red ties and ribbons if not on, will result in coercion at the front door. Exactly $2 will let one in if one failed to get a date until the last minute and if one wants to go at the last minute. The number will be limited, however. Roundy will speak about the kind of mortar used by the eskimos in putting igloos together. (see slide announcement). Jonah and Gordy will surprise you as well as themselves. Florez, Davison, and Schumacher will interpret the Swedish polka in honor of Mr. Eklund. Macpherson will imitate a Roman gladiator in the colliseum. . . Wait 'till you seeum! Acon will prove via the whistle that love is far from blind. And Zopelka is racing around town telling everyone his girl Betty is the prom queen super-abundant or words to that effect.

Greek Fives Finish Play, Start Title Round Monday

Sixteen Teams, Two from Each Division, to Enter Championship Series

By TY DAHLGREN

Following the completion of divisional basketball play in the intramural league Friday, the leading teams in each division are preparing for the final rounds which will start Monday.

Phi Sigma Kappa and Alpha Kappa Kappa won their way into the finals Friday by eliminating Sigma Phi and Sigma Nu respectively. The Phi Sigs ran away with the Sig Phis, 20-9, and Alpha Kaps slightly outscored Sigma Nu for a 14-9 victory.

Two Teams Play

The two leading teams in each division are now eligible to compete in the championship finals which will decide the intramural basketball title-holder and will also have an important bearing on the race for possession of the Badger Bowl.

This means that sixteen teams still have a chance to win the championship. In every division save one, however, one team has established its superiority pretty strongly, and it is pretty likely that one of the seven teams which finished their divisional play without a loss will come through the finals in the same way.

The Winners

The seven thousand per centers are Beta Theta Pi, division 1, Phi Gamma Delta, division 2, Alpha Chi Rho, division 3, Sigma Chi, division 5, Phi Beta Delta, division 6, Alpha Chi Sigma division 7, and Pi Kappa Alpha, division 8.

Farm House Wins Wrestling Title by 11 to 6 Victory

Farm House fraternity won the intramural wrestling championship Thursday night by defeating Alpha Gamma Rho, 11 to 6, in a meet at the gym.

Several former varsity men were grappling on each team and the meet took on an intercollegiate aspect in several matches.

Hayward, heavyweight, accounted for the only Alpha Gamma Rho victory when he threw Taylor, Farm House, in the last few seconds of the second overtime period. Taylor had a slight time advantage and would have won the bout had he not been pinned.

Don Cameron, former varsity 175-pounder, and Dick Brackett, present varsity man who was permitted to wrestle because the meet had been postponed, went round and round in their match and it was finally declared a draw.

The fastest bout of the meet was the 145-pounder in which Ray Farm House, won an overtime fall from Erdman, Alpha Gamma Rho. Both men were clever grapplers and it was only by a terrific effort that Ray succeeded in winning.

Summary of the meet follows:

135 pound—Fish, Farm House, won decision over Bridgman, Alpha Gamma Rho.

145 pound—Ray, Farm House threw Erdman, Alpha Gamma Rho.

175 pound—Cameron, Farm House, and Brackett, Alpha Gamma Rho, wrestled to a draw.

158 pound—Williams, Farm House, won decision over Carmichael, Alpha Gamma Rho.

Heavyweight—Hayward, Alpha Gamma Rho, threw Taylor, Farm House. Dave Minkow refereed the matches.

Track Team to Test Irish Speed in Annex Today

Meet With Notre Dame Only Home Event of Indoor Season

By HAROLD LAMBOLEY

Notre Dame and Wisconsin, friendly rivals of long-standing, will clash once again this afternoon in an indoor track meet that promises to be hard fought from the first event to the last. The meet will start at 2 p. m. in the gymnasium annex.

Notre Dame has lost dual meets to Northwestern and Illinois, but handed Marquette a severe trimming some time later and it is evident that the Irish are improving fast. The Badgers on the other hand, have dropped one meet to Iowa but redeemed that the following week by coming second at the quadrangular meet at Evanston.

Four Sprinters

The Irish look best in the dashes and distance runs. In the 440 yard dash they have four outstanding performers in Della Maria, Joe Riley, Harry Riley and Elder. Last season as a freshman, Elder was hailed as the "wonder man" in the freshman track world and at one time was timed under the world's record in the 60 yard dash.

Wisconsin's best hope against this array of talent in the dashes is Gil Smith, winner of second place in the 40 yard dash at the quadrangular meet. Smith is in excellent shape and Coach Jones has firm belief that the Milwaukee star will cause the Irish sprinters more trouble than they look for.

McGinnis in Hurdles

The hurdle race looks like it will be an interesting one with Captain McGinnis opposing Barron and Griffith for the Hoosiers. If McGinnis is in his ideal form, he ought to be able to break the tape ahead of the Irish hurdlers. Eisle and Pahlmeyer are other Badger entries in the hurdles.

McGinnis is picked to win both the high jump and pole vault though he will find the competition interesting in the latter event. The Irish have a stellar vaulter in Bov who has cleared 12 feet on previous occasions. Weeks and Lahey are their best bets in the high jump. McGinnis will attempt to break the annex record in the pole vault and if he can reach the same form he displayed in the Illinois relays he ought to be capable of doing so.

Two Mile to Zola

Zola looks like the winner in the two mile run, having traveled the distance much faster than the Brown brothers, the Notre Dame entries. Young in the mile looks good for the Irish with a mile of 4:31 to his credit this early in the season. Payne and Bullamore will be the Badger entries in this event.

The half mile run should be the most interesting of the numerous races this afternoon. In Erickson, the Badgers have one of the outstanding half-milers in the conference with a record of 1:59.5 to his pose. Judge, intercollegiate half record up to this time. He will be the mile champion of 1926. Judge has been in poor condition all season and made his first appearance at the Marquette meet in Milwaukee in which he finished fourth, but re- that he has been going at a better ports from South Bend indicate rate of speed in the past two weeks and ought to be in fair shape to oppose Erickson today.

Tight Quarter

The quarter mile event looks to be a toss-up, both teams having outstanding men in this event. Stowe, Dugan, and possibly Smith will run for the Badgers while McDonough and Lahey will be the entries for Notre Dame. The relay race is expected to be another close event as both quartets have raced the mile in about the same time in earlier meets.

Unlike past teams from the South Bend school, there are few football stars on the Irish squad this season. The only gridiron hero is Joe Riley who was quarterback and captain of the Irish second team this fall. Riley gained fame in the game with Southern Cali-

HOCKEY TEAM ON WAY TO WINDSOR

Badger Pucksters Will Oppose Michigan in Three Games, Starting Monday

Canada, where hockey is the sport, today will welcome a Badger hockey squad from the land where hockey is a sport.

The Wisconsin team left Friday for Windsor, Ontario, to play a series of three games, March 7, 8, and 9, with a Michigan sextet.

Two of the games to be played in Windsor are the ones originally scheduled to be played at Michigan. The third game is the postponed second game of the local series with the Wolverines.

Michigan, true to form, has a strong hockey team. Their ability was demonstrated last week when they overcame the Badger sextet 1-0, on the lower campus. This game, won by an accident shot, was a revelation of the Badger ability. The Wisconsin sextet outclassed the Wolverines throughout the entire game.

Although the Badger group is not accustomed to artificial ice, the change should not seriously effect them. Michigan, practiced on a rink of this kind very little, is under the same handicap.

Of the ten men that went on the trip only three are veteran players. Capt. Bill Lidicker leads the list. In his position at left wing he has been the most consistent player on the offense. His shots are dangerously accurate and swift. He is a skater of no mean ability.

Carl Jansky also has played remarkably this season. This is the little fellow's third season on the varsity squad. His regular position to chase all about the rink is right wing, although he has little heed to his position. His ability as a skater outclasses his shooting ability.

Brandow has been considerably troubled with the task of getting a center. Silverthorne and Drummond, likely candidates for that position, have been declared ineligible.

In the series of games in Canada, Brandow intends to utilize Moelke in the troublesome position. This lad has been improving and is, moreover, larger and heavier than Rahr.

Since the ineligibility of Mason and Moorehead the squad has been suffering from lack of defense material. Mike Murphy, veteran defense man, will play left defense. Ruff, a former goalie, will be in the other defense position.

The Badger goal will be ably defended by Mitchell. This is probably the most important position on the sextet. It will suffice to say that the most capable man on the sextet guards it.

Kynaston, recently declared ineligible, has been taken along as an offensive substitute. Rahr will be the substitute for the center position. Cahoon will act as spare for defense, and Boyer as spare for goal.

The team will practice at Windsor today and tomorrow. The first game will be held on Monday. Tuesday and Wednesday the remainder of the games will be off.

HOOSIER SWIMMERS AT PURDUE

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Indiana University's swimming team was bound for Lafayette today where tonight Purdue will be met. A triumph for the Crimson will put Indiana in the lead for state championship honors.

Indiana has a victory over Illinois which in turn defeated Purdue.

A Frenchman has invented an umbrella handle in which a fountain pen may be carried by women who feel the lack of pockets.

TRAINING TABLE TIPS

Three Events

Still Hockey

Vague rumors of great athletic activity have reached us by various roundabout channels. After investigating, we find them totally untrue. There is positively nothing doing today, unless—yes, there is a track meet, and of course, a wrestling match, and let's see a basketball game—but really there's Enthusiastic persons will doubtless crowd the rails in the gym annex this afternoon to see "Chuck" McGinnis, newly crowned all-around indoor champion, doing his several tricks. When one watches Chuck, one can be sure of three things always, that he will clear the high jump bar at 6 feet 2 or thereabouts, that he will get over the high hurdles faster than anyone else, and that he will sail skyward at least 12 feet 6 on the end of his nice long jumping stick, technically referred to as a vaulting pole.

Other enthusiastic persons, in whose blood the thrill of physical combat is always present, will ramble into the armory proper for a glimpse of the Wisconsin-Purdue wrestling match, upon which depends fifth place in the Western conference wrestling scale and a pair of cauliflower ears. Though the Badger wrestlers, loaded down by ineligibility, inconsistency and other what-nots, have turned in rather an erratic season, they stand an excellent chance of pinning Purdue to the rosin. If you appreciate half-Nelsons, scissors, and other genteel wrestling holds, you should make yourself present at

IOWA PLAYS OHIO, MICHIGAN ON ROAD

IOWA CITY, Ia.—Awaiting the first of two games which will make or break their hopes for a championship share, University of Iowa basketball players are at Columbus ready for the tilt with Ohio State's improved team this evening.

The Hawkeye squad of ten players stops at the eastern rim of the conference circuit for the initial game then doubles back to Ann Arbor, playing Michigan's quintet Monday. A tie for third place with Purdue is Iowa's standing in the conference. Six games have been won; three lost.

this meet for it is the last of the season here.

One can hardly avoid mentioning the basketball game which will be played tonight before a necessarily select group of onlookers, the great majority of whom will be pulling heart and soul for a Wisconsin victory. One could also say that Illinois will be the other team. One might even add that Illinois is good. Make your own translation.

We cannot imagine a closer game than the one tonight promises to be. Four points separated the two teams at Urbana and four points can always be attributed to some such uncertain asset as the "home floor advantage" or the "home crowd psychology." Anyway, if we had money to bet, and approved of betting, and could find someone to bet with, we'd bet on Wisconsin. Don't crowd.

Monday night the Wisconsin hockey team plays the first of its three game series with Michigan at Windsor, Ontario, just across the river from Detroit. They will play on the artificial rink used by the Detroit Cougars, professional hockey six, and are therefore assured of

PURDUE MATMEN HERE FOR FINAL MEET OF SEASON

Grapple Wisconsin in Armory at 4 O'Clock; Fifth Place at Stake

A determined Wisconsin mat team will make its last effort to win a home wrestling meet against Purdue in the armory at 4 p. m. today. The wrestling meet which will follow the track meet with Notre Dame will bring together two teams that have never met before in a dual meet.

Though the strength of the Badgers is known, the calibre of the Hoosiers is not, because they have used different lineups in almost each meet. All that is known of them is that they have beaten Northwestern, a rather weak team, and have lost to Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio State.

Capt. Latimer, Purdue, is a former conference champion, having won the title in the 175 pound division two years back. He was not in very good condition last year and was beaten by Wally Cole, the Badger flash in one of the preliminary bouts at the conference held at Lafayette.

Dick Brackett, whom Latimer meets today is still bothered with a dislocated ankle, and will not be able to give the former champ as hard a battle as he might have given him otherwise. The outcome of the meet may hinge on this bout.

Another tussle that should be a thriller is the one between Capt. Fortney and Johnson of Purdue. These two giants are very evenly matched, and a break one way or the other will decide the bout.

Sectionalism and Economics

With the veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill by President Coolidge there has been a hue and cry from out the West against sectionalism which defeats the legislation desired by the corn, wheat, cotton, rice and swine interests. The student of economy will say without much hesitation that Coolidge acted wisely in this case by tackling the problem which Congress had been afraid to face.

It is not necessary to go into the merits and demerits of the bill here other than to say it was economically unsound in that it attempted to regulate supply and surplus without regulating production. Indirectly it amounted to price fixing, which has always proven to be poor business both from an economic and governmental standpoint. We have seen too much "government" and we are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of that early American saying "that government is governed best which governs least." Foreign governments have started enough of centralized control without having the United States start a cutthroat game of economic competition. England gave us a scare with her rubber control; France and Germany have been able to dictate prices on potash; and Brazil has taken advantage of her monopoly of the coffee business and has made us foot the bill. Under the McNary-Haugen bill we would begin dumping our surpluses on other countries who could retaliate either by tariffs checking the whole system or by further control of their own monopolies.

Coolidge, then, acted wisely in vetoing the bill. Whether he did so for political reasons or because he felt that it would do more harm than good is a question which we should like to be able to answer but cannot. There are so many aspects of this particular bill that it is hard to make generalizations without a complete knowledge of the facts. It looks a little as though Cal had decided to cast his lot in the next elections with the support of the East. On the other hand he would have been rather up against it if certain members of his Cabinet had kept their threat of resigning should he place his signature on the bill. And Coolidge without Mellon, Jardine and Hoover would be like a man suddenly become paralyzed. He was caught between the two evils and he chose the lesser one, retaining at the same time his support in the East.

But the student will sing him praises for having done, accidentally or deliberately, the right thing. Wisconsin farmers at least have no cause to complain because of the defeat of the bill. We in this state have discovered the wisdom of stock farms and proportionate production of different types of agricultural necessities. So while the Iowa legislature is loudly bemoaning the treachery of the East, the farmers of this state can watch the spectacle with dispassionate interest, realizing only one thing, that the East has again triumphed over the West.

A Few Guesses

We have spoken in the preceding editorial of the various attitudes towards the McNary-Haugen bill and its defeat at the hands of President Coolidge. To those of us who live west of the Ohio the defeat of the bill has one other aspect which colors the political situation of the 1928 election. Immediately following the defeat of the bill the Chicago Tribune and other Middle Western papers announced the candidacy of ex-Gov. Lowden of Illinois for president. At the same time, Mr. McAdoo, of California and Democratic fame, threw some lances in the direction of Gov. Smith of New York, and within the past week there has been talk of Jim Reed of Missouri, the La Follette of today, for president of these United States.

Without in any way advocating the cause of a particular candidate, it is at least worth while today to sum up the chances of the above-mentioned men. This paper has at times praised and rapped Coolidge; it has sung hymns to Democracy on one day for one move and it has denounced the Jeffersonians on another day for their constant quibbling. President Butler of Columbia said of Harding and Cox in the campaign of 1920 that he would vote for neither man because he did not feel that either the Republican nor the Democrat merited the post. Perhaps our position is somewhat of the same disinterest.

Now as for Lowden. The chief difficulty with this man "from out the West" lies in the fact that he will have to overcome the Coolidge forces in the Republican convention. Lowden has a great following in the Middle West but as soon as he gets in the direction of New York he finds that the scent of agricultural interests is displeasing to Eastern nostrils. As Governor of Illinois he proved himself to be a capable executive and was called the "father of administrative reform" in that state. He was above the petty intra-state sectionalism which has permeated that state since the advent of Len Small and since that time has shown himself to be above the national sectionalism which has been the bone of contention in this country since the "Virginia dynasty." But the Republican party will probably realize that its one chance of success lies in the candidacy of Coolidge and any other aspirants to the throne will suffer from the effects of the "steam-roller."

Jim Reed, the only Senator who is being boomed for the presidency, is termed "venerable" by his opponents but he insists that his 65 years needs not be the cause of worry for anyone. He is a proud exponent of Jeffersonian democracy and finds his chief foes in the Anti-Saloon League and the League of Nations. He is referred to as a destructive rather than a politician, as a satirist rather than a reformer. Reed is utterly fearless and has made of the 69th session a great climax to his political career. His investigations of slush-funds have been called "government paid publicity campaigns for a presidential candidate" but it cannot be denied that he brought to light much that was rotten in our political system. While he had insisted that he would retire when his Senate term expires in 1929, recent utterance which he has made against Lowden and Coolidge indicate that he may have had a change of heart.

To some the Democratic party seems the salvation of the nation and to others it appears to be a party steeped in senility and a house divided against itself. MacAdoo and Smith have been warring with each other for some time and without much tangible results. The former, the son-in-law of the man who vetoed the prohibition act, has insisted that the wet and dry issue shall not split the Democratic party. He wants, of course, to try for the presidency on a strictly dry platform and to cast Smith's doctrines to the wind.

The gentleman from New York, on the other hand, feels that the drink issue is of major importance and that the Democrats must take the stand as opposed to the present Volstead act. Smith is unquestionably the strongest wet in the country but he has many things which will hinder his hopes. Chief among these, probably, is his religion. As a Democrat, he will have to rely upon the "solid south" for a great share of his votes. On the other hand it is a well recognized fact that the South is strongly anti-Catholic and that he would get little support from that direction. Many in the Democratic party feel that the nomination of Smith would mean death to Democratic hopes for a president in 1928.

At the present writing it is hard to say what the chances are for the re-election of Coolidge. Whether another term would amount to a violation of tradition seems to be of slight importance. If Coolidge is the best in the field he should be elected regardless of quibbling over the precedent established by Washington. But his attitude toward our foreign relations, his changing ideas on naval development, and his silence on several important questions might lead one to suspect that the Coolidge boom is suffering a decided let-down.

Who will it be? Toss your names into a basket, shake well, look over your left shoulder, make a wish and draw a name and your guess is as good as the next man's.

Readers' Say So

A SCIENTIST DISCUSSES

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

There is no intention to pick any disputation on the theistic theology of Dr. Coffin, for we take cognizance of the fact that fundamentally nobody could prove or disprove the reality of the reverend gentleman's belief. We all believe as we are constituted and as we are biased. Some of us take for a guide the cardinal principle of science which makes it no less than criminal the drawing of conclusions that outstrip evidence. An overwhelming majority of us, unable to get rid of the training of infancy, believe because they "will to believe,"—only, instead of being honest about it, they kid themselves (perhaps, unwittingly) by a subtle process of "rationalization."

It is hardly necessary to point out the danger in the "will to believe;" for, if we do not misconstrue it, it is really an effort willfully to impose upon things, rather than an effort to understand things, and understanding them, to make use of their attributes for building the edifice of our dreams. To impose upon things—you might as well stand on the top of a high tower and then try to disobey gravitational force! Says Coffin's Ability Misplaced.

The thing that makes us sorry most is the displacement of Dr. Coffin's ability. He puts all his energy and emphasis on trying—and rather futilely—to convince us of the existence of a deity. And our reason for being rather sorry is, to be sure, a matter of view point.

We believe that if religion is to be of any worth to mankind at all, it must be vitally interested in the foundation of human living. To live is not a matter of mere believing—that is almost too platitudinous to state; but it must be stated because if its truth is admitted it is not practiced! In order to live a sane and rich life, one must know a great many things—natural laws, human nature, and a host of things too numerous to tabulate. Know thyself! is a dictum as profound in its wisdom today as when it was first enunciated. The things of our environment, things that we can never hope of transcending, could very well have been the object of the searching scrutiny of Dr. Coffin's. No, but our religious leader does not seem to be able to see anything alluringly interesting in worldly things; rather, he was pleased to choose as the subject of his inquiry transcendental things that can concern only our belief, perhaps because these are the only ones that are worthy of a divine's gaze.

Where is God in Wartime?

The surprising thing to us is this: that in spite of centuries of rhapsodying about these heavenly beings that are supposed to make everybody that believe in them sanctimonious, religion, as Dr. Coffin would have us know it, does not, for some mysterious reason, suffice to cure the baser part of man, especially so when that baser part is excited to violent reactions by a mob. Where is God, Love, and all that sort of so-called idealism in time of war, in industrial warfare, and in a thousand and one other anomalous situations that cramp human society all the time? If religion cannot cope with the vital things that affect the very foundation of life itself, there must be something radically wrong with its technique.

Why most so-called religious leaders seem to be absolutely unable to see that idealism that is not refined and thoroughly lighted by reason and strengthened by experience may very easily transmute itself into the most sloppy type of sentimentalism, we are at a loss to explain. That claim made that we know because we know is too naive to make in the face of the tremendous amount of so-called truths that have been branded as superstition by the unflinching and disinterested efforts of science.

Our Undirected Efforts Wasted

Besides, we must recognize that this outside authority, this deity whom we so sedulously impose upon

Readers' Say-So

(Continued from Page Four) on ourselves, break up our world and lives into air-tight compartments—here the wordly and there the spiritual, so-called. Our ideals become not dreams to be realized here on earth by our own intelligent strivings but only futile dreams of non-worldly things to be enjoyed as reward to pious believers. The result is that the greater part of our efforts is utterly wasted, being without any direction.

And lastly, if we were asked to make a suggestion as to what we take to be our ideal of religion, we would tell, with hardly any hesitation at all, of a religion that makes Human Living its very heart, the spring of its life, the scientific method and spirit its servant, and beauty in its multifarious forms its garb. That means the relegation of matters of belief to a position of secondary importance, as it should be. Of course, to be creative is not so easy as all that, for though the pen may be facile, the facts that go to build the super-structure may be difficult to obtain and all the more reason for our utter inability to over emphasize the putting of more of our energy to the study of man himself in his manifoldness and of his environment so that he might be enabled to live a harmonious and beautiful life.

Double-headed and Double-bodied Pigs Subjects of Theses

A double-headed pig is the latest object of interest in the Zoology department. Miss Sylvia Orth '27, is working on this phenomenon as a subject for her thesis.

The pig, which may be called a double monster, has one body and two heads. The latter, coming off of a single neck are grown together as far as the corner of the mouths. There is one eye on the outer side of each head, and a single eye at the junction of the two. The jaw bones are connected, so that if one mouth is opened, the other opens with it.

Miss Orth has not gone far with her dissection as yet; but she is seeking to determine how the two skulls are joined together. She will also determine if the middle eye is developed like the other two, and if it possessed the faculties of sight.

Another double monster, a pig with two bodies, is being dissected by Miss Louisa J. Neitge '27, as a subject for her thesis also. This pig has only one head, but two bodies which are grown together from the head back.

Both of these pigs were given to the university by Wisconsin farmers. The one with the two bodies was born dead, but the other lived for several days after birth. The causes of the interesting phenomenon are known, but the explanation requires highly technical terms.

Service Records Gathered and Filed for Union by Alumni Office

Nearly one-fifth of the 60,000 alumni of the University of Wisconsin have served in the armed forces or the auxiliaries to the armed forces of the United States during the three wars which the United States has fought since the university was established.

John Bergstresser, alumni recorder, announced today that some 10,000 service records of Badger alumni have been compiled by his office for the War Service Records committee of the university, and that when the work is completed probably 12,000 individuals' war services will be written in the university archives.

Last year the recorder's office discovered 25 additional Wisconsin men who died in military services. Their names will be added to the list of 1285 previously compiled.

Style, there's no denying. First of all, the coat is a bit shorter than last year. Then the collar is most conservatively notched, the pockets even with the lower button of the three. The trousers 20 inches, or wider if you say so. The vest long enough to cover the belt. This in brief distinguishes the 1927 model. At all prices, with a very fine selection at $40, $45 and $50. '26 Prom Queen Pays Union Late; Excuse Perfect

29, Chiang T'sa Hutung
Peking, China.

My dear Union:
Enclosed is a draft in payment of my pledge. This would have been sent sooner but for the high rate of exchange which urged me to wait until it was lower so I wouldn't have to pay almost $3 in our money here for $1 in gold. I am anxious to see the new building when it is done. Best wishes for continued success.

Martha Walker '26

Martha Walker, prom queen of a year ago, and now living at her home in China, has written to the Union headquarters presenting what Union officers say is a watertight excuse for postponing the payment of a Union pledge—and about the only water-tight one.

Because of the recent Chinese money exchange rate, Miss Walker's pledge, if paid on schedule, would have cost her $150 and the Union would have received only $50.

The Union announces that it will extend the time of payment to any other student subscriber who can make the same case as Miss Walker.

The luncheons are attended by members of the faculty and students in the Commerce club.

OPEN HOUSE TOMORROW BY RELIGIOUS GROUPS

Open house for members of the faculty will be held by campus religious groups from 3 to 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The St. Francis House, Wesley Foundation, Calvary Lutheran Presbyterian Student headquarters, Baptist student headquarters, Hiller Foundation, and Luther Memorial will act as hosts.
