Many people and institutions have contributed to the creation of "Down Home Dairyland." Some of the interviews by Jim Leary were conducted under the auspices of the Michigan Traditional Arts Program, the Minnesota Historical Society, UP North Films at Northern Michigan University, and the State Historical Society of Wisconsin. The Folklore Program at the University of Wisconsin–Madison donated supplies and the use of field recording equipment. The Wisconsin Music Archives and curator Steve Sundell made available many rare 78 rpm recordings for airplay. The Department of Liberal Studies gave funds to develop noncredit continuing education courses and produce this Listener's Guide. The Wisconsin Arts Board contributed Rick March's time and funds for production. The Wisconsin Folk Museum likewise gave much of Jim Leary's time and equipment, production expenses, and access to archival materials. The Folk and Traditional Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts and the Wisconsin Humanities Council also supported "Down Home Dairyland."

In spite of being the coproducers, we would have been lost in the studio without the sage advice and technical know-how of Tom Martin-Erickson and Judy Rose of "Simply Folk," and without the nimble talents of Wisconsin Public Radio engineers: particularly Dusty Thompto and Rick "Rocket" Kirkpatrick, but also Tom Blaine, Steve Colón, Rich Grote, Buzz Kemper, and Marv Nonn.

In addition, we relied on other researchers in the Upper Midwest who generously shared sound recordings and documentation that were otherwise inaccessible. These colleagues include Bob Andresen, Phil Bohlman, John Berquist, Matt Gallmann, Paul Gifford, Marina Herman, Anne Lederman, Michael Loukinen, Phil Martin, Phil Nusbaum, Andy Roll, Mary Agnes Starr, and Tom Vennum.

Beyond the radio programs, this Listener's Guide, produced by the University of Wisconsin–Extension, profited from the cheerful professional oversight of Outreach Program Manager Nancy Gaines, the able designs of Jim Renguette, and, especially, the committed editing of Linda LaMacchia. Cartoonist Mike Konopacki likewise inspired us with his ability to transform a few rough ideas into our bull with a concertina logo.

Nor would we have been able to pursue our radio obsession without the ongoing support of our spouses and children: Mary Bruce, Nikola March, and Maria March; Janet Gilmore, Isabella Leary, and Finn Leary. They good-naturedly suffered our many fieldwork forays, our sudden disappearances into respective music rooms to plan a show, our bouts of "intelepsy" as some new "Down Home Dairyland" idea struck us amidst family doings, and our habitual acquisition of recordings. They even had the commendable sense to restrain us periodically.

The greatest contribution, of course, came from the musicians themselves. They fielded questions with patience, graciousness, and eloquence. They gave copies of their studio recordings and many performed cheerfully "in the field." Without their talent and dedication, there would be no "Down Home Dairyland," no Listener's Guide. Indeed there would be no traditional music in the Upper Midwest.
