And shall I fly my childhood's home, The home of hap - - py sun - ny p

hours, Where youth fore - told no grief to come, And life's whole path seem'd strewn with flow'rs: And can I, dare I trust in One, Whose heart must all my Guerdon prove, When home and kin — and youth be gone, That still un.chang'd will be his love, That still chang'd will be his love.

Then may not that once prized flow'r, Torn from her calm, and sun-ny spot, Droop day by day in some lone bow'r, Neg-lect-ed or, a-las for-

- got ! But no, a voice my glad heart hears, Soft whisp'ring as from heav'n a - bove, Through weal, through woe, through smiles thro' tears Still still un - chang'd will be his love Still still un - chang'd will be his love.
