The Funds Committee desires to thank the many contributors to the Living Endowment Fund.

The showing already made is remarkably gratifying.

While the Committee asks no one to assume a burden greater than he can afford, we urge all alumni to give according to their means. Please send contributions to Charles N. Brown, treasurer, 821 State Street.

Your Family's Future

Trusts frequently continue for minority or for life.

It is only by making a proper will that one can leave legacies, create trusts for widow, children, or others.

In short, this is the only way that a man can project his own knowledge of his family and affairs—his own foresight—into his family's future.

A will may name one or more executors and trustees. The law of this State recognizes the modern practice of appointing trust companies for that work by specifically including in their charters the power to act in those capacities. If for any reason you desire to appoint a personal executor, you do not need to give up entirely the benefits of having a corporate executor, because you can appoint this company as a co-executor.

Ask for particulars of this method.

A PATRIOT OF VISION

(1864)

“You do not seem to know that he must fail who appeals to the cowardice of the American people. Step out of the way of the nation that marches with firm step and a proud heart after the martial drum-beat of her destiny. She feels that the struggle of ages compresses itself into the portentous crisis of this hour. It is for coming centuries she fights; and already she sees before her what was once a patriotic dream rise into magnificent, sunlit reality!”

Volume XVIII

Madison, Wis., July, 1917

Number 9

A communication to the editor of the ALUMNI MAGAZINE: "Your note on the first page of the March issue, in which the public is informed that the Michigan Agricultural College Record, 'after presenting statistics from Kansas, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Colorado, S. Dakota, N. Dakota, and Wisconsin, showing that of 1866 graduates of courses in home economics 532 were married and only two divorced,' concludes that 'the fact that almost without exception there are no divorces. . . . shows these courses have a strong tendency to make happier homes,' found me appreciative. Had your note proceeded no farther, I should merely have read with joy and gone my way with heartfelt gratitude (as we have been taught to say) for the upraising of this new and invincible ally of the forces making for the happy home life of our beloved land, and with my faith in the potential beneficence of statistics greatly strengthened. The note, however, exclaimatively invites other departments 'to furnish competitive statistics!'; in consequence of which, being at once a representative of one of the said other departments and sensitive to challenge to the point of irritability, I have felt obliged to act. I have therefore been at pains during the past two months to gather data regarding graduates of courses in Pediguese Philology. I am able to present statistics from Oklahoma, New Mexico, Idaho, Alaska, Panama, Guam, and Wisconsin, showing that of twenty-three graduates of courses in Pediguese Philology twenty-three are married, undivorced, and not dead. I draw from these statistics the conclusion that the fact that there are absolutely without exception no cases of celibacy, no divorces, and no deaths shows that this course insures marriage, a happy home, and immortality. The home economics departments are invited to beat it?"—PP. D.

"Wisconsin Forward Forever" is the title of the latest march by the "march king," John Philip Sousa, dedicated to the University of Wisconsin, its students, faculty, and alumni. Berton Braley, '05, the well-known poet, has written the words for the new March of Triumph march of triumph, and Howard Chandler Christy, the nationally famous artist, has drawn the title cover. The march was conceived by Maxson F. Judell, '17, and the whole produced under his suggestions.

Whenever matters of vital importance to the welfare and character of the University of Wisconsin arise, the approval or disapproval of her alumni ought to be the deciding factor in determining the issue. They are the sons and daughters of the state who best understand her position, her problems, and her interests. Voice of Alumni To be sure, so long as those interests are not endangered, the alumni may not be heard from; they may occupy the position of a well-organized and well-trained public which passively lets matters proceed, but not without constant eager and discerning attention. But when the vital life and character of the University are endangered by placing the machinery of control into the hands of a few politicians, the alumni should rise as one man and demand that the fundamental principle of democracy upon which the institution is founded, shall not be violated. When such issues arise, let those who forget principle and loyalty learn that in the alumni there is a voice and a power to be reckoned with when politicians tamper with the foundations of our institutions.—A. T. MERTZKE, '16.

It would appeal to me, as an alumnus of the University of Wisconsin, that the attitude of the Governor is best mirrored by his acts. No governor of the state has selected as many University men to positions of confidence and trust as has Governor Philipp. I am probably as close to the Governor as any other one individual and know his sentiments toward the University. There is nothing that he would not do to make the University of Wisconsin the greatest institution of learning in the land. He believes that reasonable economy should be exercised in the expenditure of public funds and feels that the University authorities are cooperating with him to the very fullest extent. The Governor has said to me many times that no economy program shall mean a crippling of the University because of a lack of funds. So far as the Governor is concerned, he is in hearty accord with the University. Any suggestion that he has any thought to do other than that which is for the best interest and welfare of the institution is untrue. The University has no better friend than Governor Philipp and, as I stated before, his attitude toward the graduates should at least be an indicator of his own personal feeling.—L. C. WHITTET, '93.

My dear Professor ———: I do not know what your attitude may be on the evident discouragement of students from other states to the University of Wisconsin but in my opinion it is a display of such short-sighted provincialism that every one who can should do all possible to change the policy. In these stirring times of clearly growing national spirit, why should Wisconsin, hitherto a leader in the United States, deliberately cut off one of her sources of power? The fact that I am in a position to help your son in a small way is only a minute example of the great webbing of advantages from encouraging enrollment from as many sources as possible. I need not point out to you the large direct economic advantages to the state from the million or more dollars spent annually by the "foreign" students. Nor, probably, can I contribute anything new to your appreciation of the manifold indirect advantages. I can, however, give you an illustration. I attended the University as you know for five years, building up a vast appreciation and loyalty for the state and the University in myself, as well as spending a little over seven thousand dollars. The money, through the merchants, went to the farmers and manufacturers of the state in a large measure. I intend, when I am able, to establish a summer home in Sturgeon Bay. The history of summer resorts will show that most of the industrial development as well as the mercantile development of many small towns is due to the summer visitor with capital to supply local entrepreneurs. I have been able to help two furniture factories in Wisconsin. I am now helping to develop the birch market for Wisconsin lumbermen. Neither of these things are necessary, but I do it because of my interest in the state. A nursery owes one large contract in St. Paul to my efforts, and since have obtained other commissions due to this first one. I gained nothing by the transaction, but helped a Wisconsin man. These things are not large, but good heavens, I have been out of school only three years! Wisconsin men are playing a large part in national affairs because of Joseph Davies '98, just now. There are thousands of men and thousands of incidents which are helping Wisconsin every day, due to the education our University had the privilege (I mean just that) to give men from other states. I am told that the discouraging policy is a matter of politics. It gravels me to think that certain petty-visioned, selfish politicians can subvert a state's advantage by pandering to a class of narrowed voters, when with a little more patriotism and ability in them, they could sway these limited people to a proper viewpoint. Tell me, is anyone attempting to correct this thing? If it were only the question of foreign students at stake, it might not be so bad. But it necessarily leads to other ingrowing troubles which should be stopped before they start—if they have not already started. If I were in the state, I believe I would start something, insignificant as my effort might be. It is high time that a group of strong, clear minded men grabbed Wisconsin by the shoulders and shook her. There is too much mush-mouthing and complacency in Wisconsin and not enough prophetic scolding. What was progressive-thinking yesterday becomes the formalized convention of today, and the hindrance of tomorrow. Wisconsin was progressive—once. What are your editors and public spirited people doing? Just harvesting the work of the past and shushing over their garnered grain? I fear Wisconsin is getting fat and lazy, needing considerable training to get into condition.—C. F. WERNICKE, '13.

OUR RIGHTS

By GEORGE I. HAIGHT, '99

At this time, when we are engaged in preparations for war, we think and talk much of defending ourselves. We say much about defending American ideals and American institutions. Do we think enough, concretely, about what those institutions are, and why they are worth preserving? One of those institutions—the Supreme Court—we will briefly discuss. The thought that I have to offer is old. Most of the expressions of it which I shall use are not new nor original.

It is well for Americans to remember that ours is by no means the first republic in the world's history. We have existed under our Constitution one hundred and twenty-eight years. The Venetian Republic endured for eleven hundred years; the Roman Republic for five hundred years; the Athenian Republic, with a few interruptions, for nine hundred years; and the Carthaginian Republic for seven hundred years. Other republics, such as those of Genoa and Florence, lived long lives. All of these failed primarily on account of the tendency of men granted great power, even in republics, to arrogate unto themselves more power. To illustrate: You will remember that Caesar, who undertook to gain for the Roman people their rights against the Roman Senate, himself became the master both of the Roman people and of the Roman Senate. Cromwell, who espoused the cause of popular rights in England, himself became the Dictator of England; and Napoleon, who undertook to spread the liberty won by the French Revolution, himself became the Emperor of France and sought to become the Emperor of all Europe. As the Roman Republic fell before the ambitions of one man, the Venetian democracy finally fell before the Doges; Carthage became a victim to the ambitions of military men; the Republic of Genoa fell before an autocracy; the Republic of Florence succumbed to the ambitions of the Medicis, and all the republics of the past ultimately became despotisms or monarchies.

It is interesting for us to inquire what institutions in our Republican form of government differ from the institutions of other Republican governments that have existed in the past, to determine, if we can, if there be any that promise perpetuity for the government of the United States. There are many such institutions, but it is our purpose in this discussion to call attention only to one—our Supreme Court.

Before pointing out the unique position of that court among institutions, we wish to analyze briefly the meaning and origin of some of those human rights that our Supreme Court is designed to protect. In the Magna Charta, which the barons wrested from King John of England, appear three Latin words, coined by whom we do not know, written by whom we do not know—three words that expressed for the first time a thought that was pregnant with meaning for governments upon this earth. Those words are "per legem terrae"—by the law of the land,—not meaning the law established by and getting its power from government, but that law which runs with the land, meaning the source of those rights that are the foundation, and not the grant of government—that law which recognizes rights in the individual that are higher than government and higher than any act of government—natural rights, or rights that are possessed by men from the very fact of birth,—rights coming from a far higher source than legislatures or courts.

That same conception of human rights is found again in our Declaration of Independence, where it is said that men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and further, that to secure, that is, to make safe, these rights, governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. The thought is that the right to life includes the right to the security of one's person, of health, of the right to obtain a livelihood and of the security to character. The right to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness means the right to go, or to stay, unmolested—the right to enjoy family relations, the right to work, the right to engage in honest business, the right to innocent recreation, the right to freedom of opinion, to freely speak and write the truth, to freedom of worship, and the right of property. In short, liberty means the enjoyment of these fundamental rights to their fullest extent, and government does not give these rights, and is designed not to grant them, but is merely an instrument to secure and to protect them. This thought is quite the opposite of the theory of the divine right of kings. It is the theory of democracy where the highest law is not to be found in the grace or will of a monarch or in the will of any man.

Any democratic form of government to adequately secure these rights must necessarily be somewhat complicated. The simplest form of government is an absolute despotism. In a democratic government, simple forms will not suffice, for a democratic government, in order to endure, should provide some means for guarding the fundamental rights of people against invasion, not only by individuals but against invasion by the government itself. The primary complaint of our Revolutionary forefathers against the mother country was a complaint against the usurpation of our rights by the British Parliament. The Crown had granted to the colonies charters, some of which recognized and some of which created popular assemblies, and the Americans denied the right of the English Parliament to legislate for them or to invade any of their fundamental rights. So, in the Declaration of Independence no address was made to Parliament, but the address and the complaints were made directly to the Crown.

As we have just said, democratic government must be more complicated than a despotism or an absolute monarchy, and so in our form of government, to protect against hasty action on the part of our governmental agencies, even in those fields that were given to governmental control, we introduced a system of checks and balances. For instance, the President, who is the head of the Executive Department, is the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, but in order that he may not arrogate unto himself monarchical powers, the right to declare war is put in Congress. In order that he may not become a despot as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, all power to raise revenue is placed in Congress, and in that Congress such measures must originate in the more popular branch thereof—the House of Representatives. Neither branch of Congress can pass a law without the concurrence of the other and of the President, in whom a veto power is placed; but in order that the veto power may not be abused, power by a larger majority is given Congress to pass a bill over the President's veto. Then came our unique Judicial Department headed by the Supreme Court—the only court in the world today, or in the world's history, that is in fact "supreme,"—the only court that has the power to declare null and void an act of the Executive Department or an act of the Legislative Department, a power that it, itself, must exercise in accordance with the fundamental law of the land, as found in the Federal Constitution.

It is not our purpose to discuss the various powers of the Supreme Court. We will not detail the methods of enforcing the limitation of powers placed upon political government or in settling the conflicting claims of states. We will not discuss its great appellate jurisdiction, nor will we enter into an analysis of its very important original jurisdiction. The point to which we wish to direct your attention is generally to its function as the Defender of the Constitution. Its position in this regard, and in regulating the dual sovereignty over the same territory of Federal and of State governments, are the two most unusual features in American political institutions.

Our Constitution fixes and limits the powers of the Federal government. Subservient to our fundamental law in certain spheres the Federal government is supreme, and in other fields the state governments are supreme. The Constitution provides for certain forms of government, but in addition to this it guarantees to individuals their fundamental rights and makes the Supreme Court the arbiter and protector of those rights, whether they are invaded by other individuals, by a class of individuals, by a state government, by a federal congress, by the President of the United States, or by anybody or any power. Those fundamental rights, briefly expressed in our Declaration of Independence as the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, form the bulwarks of our liberty, and if an American should be asked to give one sound reason why the boasted liberty of the United States is superior to that claimed for any other government, he can very confidently answer that it is because the guarantee of fundamental individual rights is found in a written instrument whose basis is popular sovereignty—an instrument that secures those rights against all violation, even against violation by government itself, and that the power to guard and interpret those rights is placed in a court that is in fact supreme—a court that controls the conduct of all other branches of government and that is designed forever zealously and impartially to protect the security of those rights against any aggression whatsoever.

Now, how does it come about that the Supreme Court is the guardian of the fundamental rights of individuals? Does the Constitution anywhere say that the Supreme Court shall guard the rights of individuals to life, to liberty, to the pursuit of happiness, and all that this means? It does not; but the Constitution first guarantees certain fundamental rights. For instance, it provides that Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. It guarantees freedom of speech. It guarantees the right of people peaceably to assemble and the right to petition the government for redress of grievances, and the right of people to keep and bear arms, and the security of people in their persons, in their houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable search and seizure. It guarantees trial by jury; also that no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, that no person shall in a criminal case be compelled to be a witness against himself, that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation. It guarantees these and many other rights specifically in the Bill of Rights and by implication originally and now guarantees these and all of the fundamental rights. Then by Article Six it makes the Constitution the supreme law of the land, and it is the law of the land as far as inherent rights are concerned in the same sense in which that term was used in the Magna Charta. By Article Three of the Constitution the judicial power of the United States is vested in the Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as Congress may establish, and so the Supreme Court in administering the law must interpret it in the light of the Constitution, which places the fundamental rights of individuals above the power of the Legislative Department to take away, above the power of the Executive Department to invade, and above all power except that of the people themselves, who can limit or abandon their rights only through amending the Constitution.

The thought found in these institutions goes far beyond that embodied in any other government on earth. The English government never went so far. Under the English system of government the Parliament or legislature is supreme—The Judicial Department is only a subservient branch of government—it has no power to declare any law unconstitutional—no matter how seriously it may invade the fundamental rights of individuals. Parliament is the supreme power. It can repeal any law. It can repeal Magna Charta itself, or the Act of Settlement, or any of the governmental acts designed to secure to English citizens their fundamental rights. Under our government no such power resides in the Legislature nor in the executives nor in the courts. We have rights above government—rights that run with the land—rights that exist because people are born with them.

The experience of our Revolutionary forefathers taught them that representative government as then existing in the world could not always be depended upon to secure to human beings their fundamental rights, so in founding our government they not only devised a system of checks and balances to prevent the lodgement of too great power in one man or in any one group of men, but they placed our fundamental rights in theory and in fact above the power of government to invade. To interpret and secure those rights they established a court that is in fact supreme. Having thus created for the first time in the world's history a really popular government where the source of rights is in the people themselves, and in them because they are born with those rights, and are retained by them as against the government which they established, we took another step and protected ourselves against hasty or ill-considered action by making it impossible to curtail any of these fundamental rights even in exercising our power as sovereigns over ourselves, except it be done through the machinery that the Constitution provides for amending the fundamental law. So, of the unique and beneficial American institutions designed to give to men the full enjoyment of those rights which are theirs by reason of their birth, our Supreme Court stands as a powerful instrument designed to protect them through its function as the Defender of the Constitution. It is the keystone in the arch of our liberties. It is also through this Constitution that the people are saved from themselves and are permitted to perpetuate on this continent that idea of popular sovereignty from which this and all our other institutions came.

ATHLETICS

By W. D. RICHARDSON

After a cessation of intercollegiate athletic activities since the declaration of war, the University authorities, following the unanimous action of the conference representatives at Chicago at the time of the intercollegiate, decided to continue athletics next Fall. This means that there will be intercollegiate football as well as other forms of athletics.

This action would seem to vindicate the position of those who opposed the original action which cancelled the Spring schedules—baseball and track—and which lost for the Badgers their opportunity to win the Spalding trophy which might now be nestling at the gymnasium.

There is no denying the fact that the calling off of Spring athletic activities was hasty; it was not given the deliberation that should have been accorded such a step.

The only argument was "public interest" and it is entirely questionable whether or not Wisconsin's stand accomplished its purpose.

Wisconsin's stand was taken even before the government's wishes were known and in the face of considerable evidence indicating that intercollegiate athletics should not only be kept up but emphasized.

The question was further entangled by the fact that Illinois and Chicago, our biggest rivals in athletics of all form, decided to continue both their baseball and track schedules.

Wisconsin had "two legs" on the Spalding trophy which becomes the permanent possession of the university, winning it three times in succession and, with the nucleus of a strong team, was barred from the opportunity by the action of the athletic council.

As it is, Chicago won the meet and the work of the Badger track team for the past two seasons has gone practically for naught.

The calling off of athletics has done more, however. It has put Wisconsin back and brought Illinois and Chicago to the front in the eyes of those who do not look through patriotic spectacles. The average high school boy will not consider the motive behind the act; he will look at those schools which are continuing their normal courses in athletics as well as other things and it is expected that Wisconsin will suffer as a result thereof.

With the opening of athletics in the Fall comes the announcement that Dr. Paul Withington, the football coach, will not return. He is going into the government service and this has again reopened the question of a coaching staff. As yet it is not known just what disposition the council will make of the affair.

AMES

By MRS. A. R. LAMB, '12

Thirty of the U. W. alumni of Ames and their families had a very enjoyable picnic Thursday, May 10. While a victrola furnished music for all, baseball, tennis, and quoits were played by the more energetic members. A huge bonfire was built, "wieners" were roasted, and all did justice to a delicious supper. A shower of rain soon after supper failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the picnickers, who retreated to the shelter of a near-by bridge and sang college songs. When the shower was over, marshmallows were toasted and the following new officers were elected: Fredrica Shattuck, president; Orren Lloyd-Jones, vice president; J. W. Parry, secretary-treasurer. The following members were present:

J. E. Brindley, '02, and Mrs. Brindley; L. H. Pammel, '85, and Mrs. Pammel; B. W. Hammer, '08, and Mrs. Hammer; G. A. Chaney, '12, and Mrs. Chaney; A. R. Lamb, '13, and Mrs. Lamb (Nellie Schwartz), '12; Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Fish (Anne Caulkins) '01; Orren Lloyd-Jones, '08, and Mrs. Lloyd-Jones (Lucina Carr) '08; L. B. Schmidt, ex '93, and Mrs. Schmidt; C. A. Mann, '09, and Mrs. Mann; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Parry; Mrs. C. C. Smith, '76; Gus Bohstedt, '15; J. Rovner, '16; F. F. Householder, '13; Fredrica Shattuck, '05; Ruth Safford, '03; Juanita Scott, ex '16; and two guests: E. D. Ball, state etomologist of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Carr, formerly of Madison.

BUTTE

"The 'grads of old Wisconsin,' known officially as the University of Wisconsin Alumni Association of Montana, met last night in a little different sort of session than is their usual custom, for the dining hall of the Silver Bow club following a delightful banquet, which was interspersed with music and dancing between courses, in fact a sociable gathering rang with the cheers that followed every remark that bespoke the loyalty not only of the alumni, but of the whole United States at this time.

From the time that J. H. Warner, who presided, sounded the keynote of the evening, which bespoke patriotism, until the final yell, the final salute to the flag and "America" resounded throughout the hall, Wisconsin from its Montana representation paid its part in spirit to her country.

Chancellor E. C. Elliott of the University of Montana was the speaker of the evening and his subject was "The War." Dr. Elliott resounded the glories of Wisconsin in the past in all lines of endeavor; predicted that her sons would do their part in every way in the future and made an appeal to American citizenship that brought out repeated cheers.

Dr. M. M. Dean of Helena spoke on the subject of women's part in the war; how the womanhood of the country not only should but had already come to the front to give her sons, daughters and services to the cause of world's freedom. She made an appeal to the women of the country never to falter in support of its sons and was warmly applauded.

The illustrated talk on the north-western country by Oscar Rohn proved another feature of the evening that was greatly enjoyed, while all the speakers called on responded amid constant interruptions of cheers on topics appropriate to the occasion.

Among those who attended the dinner were: A. B. Melzner and wife; L. P. Donovan and wife; Edgar Wild and wife; Oscar Rohn; J. H. Warner; Walter Nickel; C. J. Hansen; John Russell; Mr. and Mrs. Young;

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. James, Miss Partridge, Mr. Clark of Anaconda; Mr. and Mrs. Tolrud of Belmont; Dr. M. M. Dean of Helena; Chancellor Elliott, Mrs. Bolton, of Warm Springs, and Mr. Rusch of Deer Lodge.—From Butte Miner, 6.3.17.

CHICAGO

By FELIX BOLDENWECK, '02

On Friday, April 20, we had the pleasure of listening to Count Alexander Lochwitzky, LL. D. The Count was formerly Lieutenant-Colonel in the Imperial Russian Army, and now, as political Russian exile, he lectures on the martyrdom of the Russian people. Of the 180,000,000 inhabitants of Russia there are over 150,000,000 people, too poor to even call their futures their own, and only two per cent of all the people can read or write. His talk to us was gripping and with intense feeling related to us the story of his persecution and martyrdom, and his flight to the United States where, in due time, he renounced all allegiance to any prince or potentate and became a citizen of our country under the flag of the Stars and Stripes.

On the following Friday, without a set program, the ways and means of beginning the collection of a fund among the alumni were discussed—this fund to be used as an endowment fund and used for purposes to be decided by a joint committee of leading alumni and faculty representatives. John S. Lord, '04, Israel Shrimski, ex '88, and Geo. Haight, '99, each offered suggestions, among which was one relating to the use of such a fund for supplying those, who, because of the entry of the United States into the world conflict, will leave behind them needy and helpless dependents.

On the evening of May 4, Clarence Darrow addressed our luncheon guests on the vitally interesting subject, "Defectives and Delinquents." Mr. Darrow pointed out that everyone is a defective in so far as his individual approach toward perfection is concerned. The standard of perfection, however, changes with the degree of civilization and education.

To improve or correct the defectives of to-day and of the future, we must look to the causes; we must start with biology. Human life begins with a cell; when that is fertilized the job is over—there is nothing to change it. The potentiality resting in the cell or egg is born there; nothing can materially change it. Of heredity we know but little. Whereas much has been said of its influence on human life, we lack proof on each and every theory that has been advanced. The power of being is inherent with every seed. The life and development of that seed depend, however, upon the soil and the elements. The same is true for animal life and human life; each and all are dependent for results upon heredity and environment.

Although the brain is never fully developed during life, the character of the child has been formed by the time it is ten years of age. Nature may have been kind or niggardly; the responsibility of leadership may have been taken seriously or otherwise; nothing can change or undo what has been done up to the tenth year of the child's life.

Mr. Darrow stated that it was a mistake to assume that criminals or defectives shall be judged upon the standards of morality. A crime is based upon two factors—opportunity and action—but the desire to perform this action is dependent upon the individual's education or environment and not to any great extent upon an inborn power for good or evil. Society should get over the idea of judging a person good or bad; it must eliminate hatred and consider, in their proper relationship to the individual, his heritage and the environment in which he was brought up.

Society has brought upon itself the conditions which it seeks to remedy. Labor, arranged as it is on a competitive basis, cannot now receive more than a certain return for its efforts. To properly proportion the reward of labor would mean a reconstruction of our whole industrial system, which must sooner or later, but perhaps cannot now, be accomplished.

The great majority of those who break down in this industrial strife, and by their fellow men are adjudged defectives, come from the poorer classes. Only once in a great while will a wealthy man get the money-making disease and overstep our man-made laws. The potentiality for crime is in every one—real character in only a few. To describe the process of meeting out justice, Mr. Darrow used the following illustration:

If a man is sick with typhoid fever, a doctor will effect not only his cure but he will investigate the sanitary conditions of the house and the quality of drinking water, the milk, and food supply. If a lawyer were to take charge of the case he would give the patient thirty days in jail to let him think the matter over. The lawyer applies only a general cure; the doctor looks for and eliminates the cause.

We have been proceeding on a wrong theory, but we have learned a few things. Fear, caused by punishment of crime, has not helped to reform the offender. The lawyer has not shown himself a scholar of psychology sufficiently to understand the causes of acts of crime. It was not until recently that a Chicago court instituted a psychological laboratory and by a study of the elemental instincts of hunger, love, hate, fear, it is hoped that a reformation of our reformatory system may be accomplished. The present method of punishment is a sign of vengeance, and as such cannot hope to succeed.

The cure for the defective is a rational change of his mode of life and of his surroundings. Build hospitals for the delinquents, not prisons, and let us ask in the future, "Is John Doe a defective? What training will cure him? Will he get better?"

MINNEAPOLIS

By HAROLD K. WELD, '05

Thirty-three enthusiastic Wisconsin alumni of Minneapolis met for luncheon May 3, and listened to a very interesting talk by C. L. Bartholomew, cartoonist, who told many amusing anecdotes in connection with some of the best known cartoonists of the country. A student from the University at the present time, who happened to be in the city, told of the most patriotic response by the men at the University to their country's need in all of the various fields of service and this information was received with gratification.

The June luncheon was held on the 7th, and the address was given by C. S. Reed, warden of the Minnesota State Penitentiary, who gave a most interesting and enlightening account of the life at the prison and the productive work done by the inmates in the manufacture of binder twine and agricultural machinery, the total business in these lines done by the prison during 1916 amounting to nearly $4,000,000. Attendance at this meeting was thirty-five.

Minneapolis alumni are planning an outing for June 23, to which St. Paul alumni will be invited and the Wisconsin men in the Officers' Reserve Training Camp at Fort Snelling will be guests of honor. All the old campus sports will be revived, together with those of boyhood, including trout fishing and a splash in the old swimming hole a la Claire Briggs.

Guy A. Meeker, '96, has been put in charge of the programs for our monthly luncheons and his efforts have been well rewarded.

WEST BEND

By CORA J. ROHN, '10

Troubles were forgotten for the brief evening of May 3, when the Wisconsin Club again rallied to the Cardinal at its second annual banquet at the School Hall. Our most distinguished alumnus, Judge Patrick O'Meara, '70, as toastmaster, recalled very interestingly some of the scenes and personages of the Law School of 1870. During the banquet toasts were responded to by Mrs. Mabelle Bredette Pick, '11; D. J. Kinny; W. C. Schroeder, '08; Frank Bucklin, '02; and Orlando Harlamus, '18. Judge Charles B. Rogers, '93, from Fort Atkinson, the guest of the evening, outlined for us, with his well-known enthusiasm, the work and needs of the General Alumni Association and indicated ways of cooperation for local clubs. Dr. A. H. Heidner, '11, was reelected president, L. P. Rosenheimer, '02, of Kewaskum, vice president, and Cora Rohn, '10, secretary-treasurer. The club authorized the appointment of a committee whose duty it shall be to furnish to prospective students, or to others, information regarding entrance and registration at the University, opportunities for employment while there, as well as details of the far-reaching work of the Extension Division.

Our supply of 5,000 May and June Alumni Magazines is exhausted. Readers who are not keeping files will confer a favor by mailing May and June numbers to Alumni Headquarters, 821 State Street, Madison, Wis.

DEATHS

NEWCOMB KIMBALL, a short course graduate of 1906, and his fiancée, Miss Margaret Bell of Lima Center, were killed in an auto accident near Edgerton, May 20. They were speeding home from Madison before an approaching storm, when their car turned turtle at a sharp curve in the road. Two companions sustained minor injuries. Kimball and Miss Bell were to have been married in June.

MRS. C. L. McCANTS (EDITH FUHRMAN, '10) died at Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, Ga., on October 22 last.

C. D. LIVINGSTON, assistant professor of agricultural engineering, died May 24 at the General hospital, after four weeks illness with typhoid fever. He did notable work along forestry research lines, and his devices for clearing stump lands were gaining him great prominence at the time of his demise. He was thirty years of age.

THE CLASSES

Bishop Samuel Fallows, president of the U. W. Club of Chicago, addressed the Mystic Athletic Club on "Peace and War." He advocated "sowing and saving" as the part for every person, young, and old, to take in furthering the interests of the United States in the war. E. A. Krueger, '14, introduced the speaker.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

CAMPUS NOTES

July issue in type June 15. See August issue for Commencement Activities.

The Cadet corps, handicapped by the loss of officers and men who had gone into intensive drill, made a valiant effort to win their third "distinguished," with an entire day of maneuvers before Col. J. A. Penn of the U. S. army.

Dr. Paul Withington, football coach in 1916, resigned because he expected a call to the front with the Boston City Hosp. unit.

Emergency classes in French were organized to teach the rudiments of the language to students going to France in the service.

Major Crain, commandant, was ordered to rejoin the 37th Inf. at Laredo, Tex., and Captain Fitzmaurice, his assistant, to the 36th Inf. at Ft. Snelling.

Drs. W. S. Middleton and K. Drane were called to Washington to hold themselves in readiness to go to France with the Medical R. C.

Twenty-six co-eds took part in the intensive cultivation of garden plots west of the Horticulture building.

Florence King and Margaret Schultz, sophomores, both of Milwaukee, are reported to have applied for positions as motormen or conductors with the Madison St. Ry. Co.

The freshmen burned their caps June 2, and although they did not raid the "Orph" because of the vigilance of student and city police, two of their number went to the city lockup for getting their classmates out of dances at the Candy Shop, and Kappa Kappa Gamma, and Delta Gamma lodges.

Pres. Van Hise's request that seniors at Ft. Sheridan be given two days' leave of absence to graduate was not granted.

Ammon Hennacy, ex '18, was one of the three men arrested at Columbus (O.) May 31 for distributing antimilitary literature.

A draft wheel used in the Civil war is a relic that has attracted considerable attention at the Hist. museum the last month.

Prof. S. H. Clark of the U. of Chicago read "The Melting Pot" at Music Hall May 25, for the benefit of forensic activities.

H. F. Weiss resigned as head of the Forest Products Lab. to become associated with the Burgess laboratories.

Alice Van Hise, '19, and Anna Ely, '20, have announced their intention of working in a New York canning factory at $6 a week, this summer.

Over 4,000 students registered for war service, with a view to taking summer jobs.

Officers of Co. G, Ft. Sheridan, have written Major Crain of their complete satisfaction with the Wis. delegation at the Fort.

Norman Klein, '19, has left his position with the Des Moines Tribune to go to France as an ambulance driver.

F. A. Ogg will lecture in political science at Columbia this summer.

H. G. Houghton, assistant professor of public speaking, delivered commencement addresses in various northern Wis. cities in June.

The emergency course in "The Classification of Army and Navy Stores" will be repeated in the summer session by the commerce faculty.

Dean E. A. Birge attended the senate session at Washington, D. C., in May, when Arthur J. Balfour was given an honorary membership in Phi Beta Kappa, of which Dean Birge is vice president.

John McGinley, ex '19, United Press bureau manager at Dallas, is now at Camp Funston, Tex.

H. A. Smith, professor of romance languages, attended the convention of teachers of French at Chicago late in May.

During the last month of the semester it was estimated that 1,000 students and faculty members were engaged in national war service of various kinds, either full or half-time.

W. H. Kiekhofer, assistant professor of political economy, spoke at commencement exercises at Fond du Lac June 8.

P. W. Dykema, professor of music, will instruct in the Montana U. during the summer.

The athletic department has refunded a dollar on coupon books, on account of the cancellation of spring schedules.

University Extension, by virtue of its organization for carrying the University to the people, has in the conduct of its regular work developed an organization and facilities that may be effectually utilized in the present war emergency.

C. F. Mendenhall, professor of physics, obtained leave of absence and went to Washington to participate in defense council and national munitions board work.

Prof. M. W. Wallace of the U. of Toronto spoke May 11 on "The Canadian Universities and the Training of Officers," at 165 U. H.

A. L. P. Dennis, professor of history, is a member of the national defense council and vice president of the state council.

J. R. Commons, professor of political economy, is one of the collaborators of the newly reorganized Board of Research Associates in American Economic History.

D. H. Otis, professor of farm management, has taken up supervisory work in farming in Waukesha and Jefferson counties.

Five University chemists, J. H. Walton, Richard Fisher, V. Lenher, Louis Kahlenberg, '92, and O. L. Barneby, '12, attended the meeting of the American Chemical Society at Kansas City April 10-14. The two first named are counsellors of the society. Messrs. Walton and Barneby took part in the program.

"The Rheims Cathedral" was the subject of an address of Clarence Ward, director of the Oberlin Art Museum, on April 18.

The Madison Art Association listened to Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, president of Armour Institute of Chicago, who spoke on "Persian Pottery" April 24.

Prof. F. L. Paxson spoke on "The Citizen's Duty at the Present Time" at noon convocation April 18.

Three lectures on Hellenic history were delivered by Prof. W. S. Ferguson of Harvard U. April 19, 20, and 24.

Dean Lois K. Mathews spoke on "The Relation of the College Graduate to the Home" before the Twentieth Century Club of Oshkosh May 12.

"Music in Education" was the subject of an address by Prof. H. D. Sleeper of Smith College, at Music Hall April 25.

S. A. Barrett, curator of anthropology at the public museum of Milwaukee, spoke recently on "The Indians of South America."

The Order of the Coif, honorary law fraternity, chose I. A. White, '14, H. S. Gleick, Law '17, and R. T. Jackson, '15, and Irving Breakstone, '17, to membership. The announcement was made at a banquet at the Capitol Café April 26, when the law students banqueted the law faculty, justices of the supreme court, a number of legislators, and F. E. McGovern, '90, W. C. Owen, '91, and Burr W. Jones, '70.

BOOK NOTES

Heine's The North Sea (Open Court Pub. Co.) translated by Howard Mumford Jones, '14. "The book is valuable for lovers of German literature as well as for students. No other version approaches it in its thorough attention to detail and, now and then, in its grasp of the vaguer essentials of the original. Besides this, there is an introduction that is, in itself, a fine creative piece of writing." Louis Untermeyer, in The New Republic.

A Laboratory Manual of Soil Bacteriology (W. B. Saunders Co., Phila., cloth, $1.25 net) by Edwin B. Fred, associate professor of agricultural bacteriology. The exercises are arranged primarily for students of soil bacteriology, soil chemistry and physics, and plant pathology. As far as possible the experiments are planned to give quantitative results.

Deutscher Lehrgang Erstes Jahr (Henry Holt & Co., N. Y.) by E. Prokosch, formerly assistant professor of German, and C. M. Purin, '07. Mr. Prokosch, who is now at the U. of Texas, says by way of preface: "Since 1909, when I wrote my Introduction to German, I have grown considerably more optimistic in my hopes for the ultimate general acceptance of the direct method in America. The present book endeavors to be entirely consistent in the carrying out of the principles of the Reformmethode as I have interpreted and adapted them."

A History of Elementary Mathematics (The Macmillan Co., N. Y., $1.75) by Florian Cajori, '83. In this enlarged and revised edition, the history has been brought down to date, with numerous alterations and additions to the edition of 1896. Recent movements in teaching are reviewed under the heads of "The Perry Movement," "International Commission," "American Associations," and "Attacks upon the Study of Mathematics as a Training of the Mind."

Retail Store Management (La Salle Extension Univ., Chicago) by P. H. Nystrom, '09, formerly assistant professor of political economy. The book is one volume of a library of standard practice in important divisions of business management. In it are discussed the development of retailing science, retail store location, buying a business, store organization, buying, the store accounting system, the inventory, buying system, sales system, efficiency in the receiving department, pricing the goods, retail store policies, the art of finding good employes, the remuneration of salespeople, education for salespeople, welfare work, and democracy in the store.

Economic History of Wisconsin during the Civil War Decade by Frederick Merk, '11. The value of an intensive study of this kind cannot be judged merely by the title of the book. An examination must be made to show the unique and original character of its contents, and the unusual nature of its contribution to the history of the Commonwealth. Not only is the author's contribution unusual, but the means by which he accomplished his results show remarkable acumen and thoroughness. Almost none of the material lay at hand; not only were there no previous monographs nor collections of material on which to rely, but the sources had to be sought up and down the length and breadth of the state and in the memories of men still living. They were collected piecemeal from so great a variety of authorities that the accumulation of matter alone is a worthy achievement for a young writer. Mr. Merk has, however, done more than mass his facts. In clear and simple fashion he has both analyzed and synthesized his sources, and the result is a clear-cut, convincing chapter of history, constituting an achievement of unusual merit in the recent history of the Northwest.

The volume opens with a discussion of agricultural methods and changes during the period under consideration. Two chapters outline the immense lumbering industry, and one the development of mining. The growth of manufactures and the organization of labor are followed by a discussion of banking methods, and the magnitude and importance of trade interests. Transportation, especially as concerned with railroads, and the methods by which they were promoted, occupies a considerable portion of the volume, which closes with chapters on the commerce of the Mississippi River and the Great Lakes.

Although it would be invidious to praise one portion of a work of such uniform excellence, it may be permitted to notice the value of the studies of labor organization and of trade movements during the Civil War decade; while the revolutions attending the methods of railway building and manipulation, together with the chapters on Railroad Farm Mortgages and the Anti-Monopoly Revolt bring to light the causes and significance of much of the political agitation and discontent of later years.

We venture to predict that when the complete history of Wisconsin comes to be written Mr. Merk's work will stand as an important part of the edifice, that its solid proportions will be recognized, and its just conclusions will be accepted. We hope it will also serve as a model for other workers in similar fields, both within our own state and elsewhere, and by its achievement set up new standards for the presentation of future economic history.

The especial significance of the appearance of this work at the time when all the nation's economic forces are being mobilized for the present crisis could not have been anticipated when the author planned his book. None the less will the publication aid the councils of defense in showing what pitfalls to avoid, and what progress to expect from a people in a state of war.—L. P. K. '97.
