PRESIDENT SPEAKS

IMMENSE AUDIENCE LISTENS TO HIS ANNUAL ADDRESS.

Straightforward Advice Given to Students New and Old—Concentration of Purpose Urged.

About a thousand students assembled at noon today to listen to President Adams' annual address.

The exercises began with the singing of the "Toast to Wisconsin," followed by the Wisconsin hymn. President Adams then rose to speak and was greeted with the Wisconsin yell. He said in part: "College life determines the success or failure of the career of most students. Every year it has been customary for the president to deliver an opening address to the students and I have always spoken not on any profound subject but have attempted to affect the work of the students attending the University. I shall speak today on the subject of 'University learning and University life.'

A University is a place where all learning in regard to one particular branch of knowledge is taught. This is done in different ways in different colleges. In Oxford the students live in dormitories and are comparatively free to do as they please. Their rooms compare very favorably with the rooms of students in American Universities. Every student has a case of from two to five hundred volumes of well bound books relating to classic historical or scientific subjects. The walls are decorated with boxing gloves and foils rather than signs and trophies found in the rooms of students here. A student has more freedom in regard to studies and liabilities than is permitted in American institutions.

In German universities the student has no restrictions whatever but can do as he pleases, attend lectures or not but at the end of his course he must pass a rigid examination before his degree is granted. This is possible because the preparation of students is generally better than that which they obtain in American preparatory schools.

You came here to acquire learning. In order to do this you must acquire habits of concentration. I learned this in my college life and it has always been of value to me since. Some study too hard, but that is not a common fault. I wish to impress upon you the absolute necessity of learning to concentrate your minds upon the task at hand. If you learn to do this you will have leisure to do more than is required of you and it will be helpful to you throughout your life.

Talent is developed in solitude while character is developed in the stream of life. When a man says the University is no place to send a boy I would say to him that there are probably more temptations in his own town than in this great University. There are temptations everywhere but you must learn to face the evil and resist it. Many I have seen go wrong at the University, but many more have begun with a severe struggle with poverty and risen step by step to positions of trust and responsibility. There are good and bad influences in fraternities and sororities but the greatest evil is that of idling away precious time in useless loafing.

All students should identify themselves with some religious organization and should support the Y. M. C. A. in its work here.

In closing I would say that I have had pleasure in feeling that my words have had a good effect upon some of the students at least. I have addressed men mostly, because I better understand their needs, and because the women do not need the advice so much.

In going away on my leave of absence, hoping to return in a year or less, I wish to thank the students for doing their part in keeping things going smoothly during my previous absence. I feel confident you will give the acting president the hearty support you have always given to me.

Football Practice.

The football squad practiced behind closed gates again last night. After considerable time spent in hard signal practice the first and second elevens were lined up for scrimmage. Most of the cripples were back in the game. Lerum and Driver were both in the game and will be in Saturday's contest. Marshall and Larson were both put through signal practice but were kept out of the rough work. Cochems and Juneau alternated with Daum and Abbott at end. Cochems will doubtless start the game at left end and will be kept in as long as possible. In the absence of Captain Chamberlain left tackle was again filled by Hummerson who doubtless will play the entire game Saturday. Ex-Capt. Riordan will act as field captain.

The practice was this afternoon open to all and was held on the lower campus.

Local and Personal.

—Sadie McGilvra, '00, is teaching in the High School at De Pere.

—Joint meeting of Christian Association at 4:00 instead of 4:30 Sunday.

—Norman Hendrickson, '03, is spending a few days at his home in Albion.

—Robert Dowd, '04, left for his home in Plymouth this morning on account of the serious illness of his sister.

—Henry Lindsay, who has been an active candidate for the football team has retired from the University. He has been ill at his home in Fox Lake for the last few days and is unable to continue his studies.

—The enrollment in the School of Music this year is about the same as last but some of the music classes show a marked increase in attendance being larger than ever before. The staff of instruction will be the same, except the addition of Mr. Albert C. Ehlm, '03, as instructor on the violin cello.

The School of Music has entirely outgrown the temporary quarters assigned to it five years ago and a movement has been started to give the School the old Library building. The matter has been brought up before the board of regents and referred to the executive committee who will probably take action in a few days. If the movement is successful the alterations necessary will be made to house the School of Music in new quarters before the second semester.

The Cardinal will tomorrow afternoon publish a detailed report of the Beloit-Wisconsin game.

INTERESTING WORK

IS BEING CARRIED ON AT WASH-BURN OBSERVATORY.

Discovery of New Planet Aids in Determination of Distance From Earth to Sun.

The course of study in astronomy this year as mapped out by Professor George C. Comstock promises to be a most interesting one. Besides the prescribed course in the University catalogue, observatory work of a simple character will be carried on. The department will also make research in regard to the calculation of the sun's distance from the earth. These calculations will be based on observations made on the newly discovered planet, Eros.

In the summer of 1898 a new planet was discovered by a German astronomer. This planet is a very remarkable body, since it comes closer to the earth than any other heavenly body, with the exception of the moon. The close proximity of this planet makes it available for the calculation of the fundamental problem of astronomy. The precise determination of the distance from the sun to the earth is a problem which has long vexed the minds of astronomers. At the present time there is a lamentable lack of agreement, each method having brought about a slightly different result. The news of the discovery of a planet, which would throw light on the problem, was therefore hailed with great delight.

The delight however was mingled with chagrin, when it was found that the best opportunity for observation that the planet can present had occurred four years prior to the discovery. An equally good one will not occur within the next thirty years. The next most favorable opportunity however occurs during the present fall and winter.

At a conference held at Paris during the past summer, it was decided to make a concerted effort to obtain a result by observation of the planet during the latter months of this year and the first of next. Washburn Observatory will take part in this campaign and observations have been commenced and will be carried on every clear night. This is being done at six other American observatories and at an equal number in Europe. Probably later in the season, some of the observations in South Africa and South America may co-operate with the others. Each night the position with respect to the small stars will be measured, thus determining the position as seen from this observatory. Similar observations and measurements are made at the European observatories. By comparing them, it is found that the two have a slightly different direction from the different observations. This difference of direction will suffice to determine its distance from the earth; this distance in turn will serve to measure the distance of the sun by certain mathematical equations which exist between them. The observations will be carried on certainly to the middle of January and perhaps longer, but the calculations will be a laborious process and the definite results cannot be expected before a year or two.

The observatory will be open to the students at large on the evenings of the first and third Wednesdays of each month from seven-thirty to nine o'clock. The telescope will be pointed in the direction of the most interesting body to be seen on those evenings. Prof. Comstock will gladly welcome any of the students who may wish to avail themselves of this opportunity.

Watch the Cardinal for a full report of tomorrow's game.

Gymnasium Enrollment.

The gymnasium enrollment, to date, shows the same steady increase that has been exhibited ever since its founding. The following table is a comparison of the present registration and that a year back:

Sr.	Jun.	Soph.	Fr.	others
1899	48	58	165	301 90
1900	53	81	195	352 97

The present total is seen to be 778, that of a year ago only 662. On Oct. 12, 1898 the total was 556.

And yet, six years ago, the remark was made, right and left, that the new building was ever so much too large and that it was a scandalous waste of the state's good money. As a matter of fact the handling of the various classes has already become somewhat of a problem as the room and facilities are now no more than is absolutely required. Attendance at gymnastics will of course be strictly enforced this coming year. It is hoped that no student will consider lightly a matter of such tremendous importance as that of doing good honest work in the gym.

Student Body to Participate in Street Carnival.

The committee of the great Street Fair next week are very desirous of having the University represented in some manner, and it has been pleased that a bicycle parade is to be organized, composed altogether of students—to act in conjunction with the floral parade on Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The floral parade will be the most beautiful feature of the Carnival and a student bicycle parade would add much of lustre and attraction to it, and be of especial interest to visitors from all parts of the state. The matter has been placed before Dr. Elsom, who has agreed to interest himself, will call for volunteers, and requests every student who is willing to join to register his name at his office in the gymnasium. Flowers for decoration of wheels will be furnished by floral committee. It is hoped the matter will be taken up with enthusiasm by students, an organization perfected, and brilliant success assured. Further information can be secured of F. W. Karstens at "The Hub."

Recital at Library Hall.

A large audience attended the mandolin recital given last night at Library hall by Hjalmer O. Anderson, of the University school of music. Prof. Anderson was assisted by Mr. James S. Smith, accompanist. The class of music played was far beyond that generally attempted on a mandolin. Selections from Mendelssohn, Ole Bull, and Moszkowski were interpreted in a remarkably artistic manner.

—About one hundred twenty-five students attended the reception given by the Epworth League at the M. E. church last night.

—Miss Bessie Morrison, ex-'02, is visiting at the Kappa house.

The Cardinal will tomorrow afternoon publish a detailed report of the Beloit-Wisconsin game.

Telephone over

Points.Unreasoning Attacks.

For many years our University has been subjected to the petty attacks of those who from jealousy or ignorance have sought to belittle it, but seldom has such an outburst appeared as took place yesterday in Waukesha and has since been circulated in the daily papers. Charges of disorderliness and worse were freely made and the circumstances of the opera-house disturbance two years ago were again dragged to light in support of the extravagant statements made by the several gentlemen who attacked the University. One of the most violent opponents of the University was the president of a rival college. Wisconsin is to be congratulated on the staunchness and loyalty of her alumni, several of whom were present at this meeting and vigorously defended their alma mater. Men of their moral and social standing who will rise up to justify their college when exposed to attack are the completest proofs of her worthiness to nurture the youth of the state.

In the first place, the University is not the hot-bed of corruption that its defamers claim it to be. There is as large or larger a proportion of church-going, law-abiding students in the University of Wisconsin than in any college in the land. There are two active Christian Associations doing an ever-increasing work among the students, in addition to the numberless churches of the city, which, each and every one, have a large student membership. Seldom is a student seen intoxicated, much less frequently, indeed, than in the younger circles of our average town or city. Every college, whatever be its size or standing, has an unrestrainable element. We can truthfully say that this proposition at Wisconsin is less than that at almost any college or university in the United States. The size and publicity of the University effectually prohibit the hushing-up processes which are so prevalent at other institutions. It seems incredible that any thinking man should declare that "the State University is an outrage upon a republican form of government." Where would thousands of our bright young people be obtaining an education if they were denied the privileges and opportunities of our free state universities!

Further, no student old enough to attend college should be allowed to do so until he has acquired sufficient moral power and self-control to resist the temptations that will inevitably be thrown in his path, either in college or afterwards. We would be loth to think that these attacks are made from personal motives but the animus is hard to imagine unless it is due to mistaken information or to selfish interests. Not only are the wholesale denunciations unfounded but they betray a most deplorable lack of public spirit and public loyalty. It is to be hoped that the gentlemen preferring these charges will see fit to set themselves right and put themselves on record as regretting their ill-timed utterances.

—Dr. Grant Showerman gave the second of his lectures on Rome yesterday afternoon in the lecture room, University Hall. He gave a rapid summary of Rome's growth in the imperial period then told of the material of which Rome was made and at the close showed how these materials were used.

The Cardinal will tomorrow afternoon publish a detailed report of the Beloit-Wisconsin game.
