SIGMA PI OWLS GET BADGER NO. 1 FOR THIRD TIME

Parking out on the door step all night has its advantages.

So Herbert Lloyd '25 and Lloyd Rooney '26 say, for two nights of this activity made them possessors of the first two 1924 Badgers given away Friday morning.

With two other men, Donald West '26 and Daniel McGuire '26, they took turns guarding the entrance of Music hall from noon Wednesday until 7 o'clock Friday morning. Friends relieved them so they could go to classes and meals.

"We didn't sleep very much," McGuire admitted yesterday, "and we have the night janitor to thank for what sleep we did get. He let us inside the building sometime after midnight, so that we could sleep for a while, and then sent us back to the steps before he went off duty at 4 o'clock in the morning."

All four of the men are members of Sigma Pi fraternity. Sigma Pi men have received the first Badger for the past two years.

Piers and Floats Gaily Decorated

By J. C.

Under perfect weather conditions, swarming with canoes illuminated by lighted piers and decorated floats, Lake Mendota thrilled last night in its finest Venetian fete of history, while judges picked the best piers, orchestras and floats.

Of the piers, first prize was taken by the Chi Psi's, whose display was conceded by the judges to have been the best ever shown on the lake. The pier represented the entrance to King Tut's tomb. Second prize was taken by the Sigma Chi pier, which was decorated like a flower garden. The Beta and Phi Delta piers were awarded honorable mention.

Orchestras Play

Phi Sigma Delta playing from the A. T. O. pier, won the music prize. Of the display of floats, A. O. Pi took first place in a barge representing springtime. The Phi Delta display, showing Joan of Arc, won second prize. The decision for second place was hard to make, due to the excellency of all the floats.

At least 4,000 persons watched the fireworks display which lasted throughout the evening, from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock from the shore and canoes. The combined bands of 100 pieces furnished music all through the evening.

The only hitch of the float parade came when the lights on the Sigma Nu dragon float became disconnected.

Fete is Success

"The spectacle tonight was one of the most beautiful water scenes that I have ever seen," Gordon B. Wanzer '24, general chairman, said. "I am glad that the visiting high school students had an opportunity to see Wisconsin's premier tradition as a climax to their weekend. LOWMAN'S MEN HAND SHUTOUT TO GOPHER NINE

Johnson Heaves Air-tight Game

(Special to The Cardinal)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 26. —Before more than 2,000 fans, the Badgers handed the Gophers the second defeat of the 1923 baseball year. The game ruined the day for the Minnesotans for earlier in the afternoon the Hawkeye track team had defeated the Gophers 76 1-2 to 58 1-8.

Johnson had the Gophers well in hand throughout. They were in position to score only in the first inning, when with two men on the paths, poor base running robbed them of their opportunity.

Errors Help Scoring

Wisconsin's two counters in the fourth came as a result of three errors. Tebell led the inning with a short pop fly that Christian dropped. Holm knocked a slow grounder to Friedl who could not get the ball to second in time to catch Tebell. Combacker sacrificed advancing both runners. Pollock was safe on Moskovich's error, Tebell scoring. Johnson sacrificed to left field with Holm scoring. Williams was out Myrum to Anderson.

Double Play Costly

A snappy double play by the Gophers cut off another chance for a Badger score. In the third Williams led off by whiffing. Ellingson drew a walk and Servatius singled over third Aschenbrenner hit into a double play, Moskovich to Foote to Anderson, for the last two outs.

DEMETRAL SET FOR MAT TITLE

Last Chance For Demetral to Beat Meyers For Middle- weight Title

A world's wrestling title hangs in the balance today when Johnny Meyers, middleweight champion, clashes with Jimmy Demetral, Madison contender, at 3 o'clock in the Monona park auditorium.

Both men are in the best of condition and will wrestle under Police Gazette rules, the best two out of three falls. Larney Lichenstein of Chicago will be the third man in the ring.

Meyers and Demetral met last fall, the champ retaining his title when Jimmy forfeited after suffering a fractured ankle. Since that time the Madison Greek has won every match. He is confident that he can upset the title-holder and realizes that this is his last opportunity to capture the belt.

Two preliminaries will be held before the big bout. Young Gotch will wrestle in one of the opening matches. A full house is expected for the championship card.

DULUTH, SAINT JOHN'S DEFEAT VARSITY CREWS

Agrics Win Inter-col- lege Race

Finishing with a spurt which cent them ahead by leaps, the crew representing the Duluth Boat club again displayed its superiority over the varsity crew, when they crossed the finish line two and one half lengths ahead of the Badger shell, in the first race of the season yesterday noon.

The winning crew covered the mile and a quarter course in six minutes 55 1-5 seconds. They led the varsity shell for the entire distance, leading at the end of the first quarter mile by a half length. At the end of the first half-mile the northerners had increased their lead to a full length, and as the crews approached the finish line it was apparent that Coach Vail's men were gradually dropping behind.

Duluth Wins By Two Lengths
The Duluth shell crossed the three-quarter-mile mark a full two length ahead of the Badger crew, and by a beautiful spurt at the end of the mile, they increased their lead to two and a half lengths at the finish.

This is the second consecutive defeat which the Boat club has administered to the varsity crew. Two years ago the northerners led Badgers by a length and a half at the finish, in a race held at Duluth.

Badgers Weak at Finish
Having had only about three weeks of actual practice on the water, Coach Vail's men did exceptionally well. They never lagged far behind the leaders, and it was only at the finish that they seemed to lose their power.

The Duluth crew started the race at a fast clip, using 38 strokes per minute. After they had assumed the lead, they settled down to a steady grind, and decreased their cadence to 32 strokes per minute. As the finish line neared, they again increased their rate, and crossed the line doing 40 strokes to the minute. The condition of the men enabled them to withstand the fast finish with apparent ease.

St. John Beats Juniors
The junior crew suffered a fate similar to that of the seniors, as they lost their race with St. John's Military academy by three quarters of a length. This race was the closest of the day, and at one time it appeared as though the juniors would win.

They were leading the cadets by a full length at the end of the third quarter mile mark, but the cadets gradually decreased the distance between the two shells, and as the first mile was reached it was seen that the juniors were behind by a length. They were unable to overcome the lead again, and at the end of the race found the cadets leading by three quarters of a length. The winning team went the distance in 7 minutes 5 seconds.

Agrics Win Their Race
In the inter-college race the Agrics showed their heels to the rest of the field, winning the mile race 5 minutes 37 seconds. The L. and S. crew placed second, followed by the commerce shell. The engineers were completely outclassed, being several lengths behind the winners of third place.

HAIL TO ORPHEUS

An institution thrives on traditions. They are the very sustenance, the pulse, the heart which keeps alive the spirit of being. Traditions have not only spiritual value; they have great intrinsic worth.

Such is the "Fraternity sing" destined to be. It was more than gratifying to see the response which was made to the suggestion that fraternities hold a competitive sing and witness the interest which the event attracted.

It is evident that this affair will be one of the main features of Varsity nights to come. With the institution of the Varsity night, the fraternity sing has proved itself. If as many as 10 organizations enter the year that the custom is started, if space is scarcely plentiful to accommodate the audience to what bounds will the tradition not develop?

UTILITARIAN ART

It has been promised that, when we return to the campus for another school year, the construction on "The Home For Wisconsin Spirit" will have commenced. That promise is one of the most important announcements which has ever come to the ears of Wisconsin students.

As the time for commencement of construction draws near, however, a few skeptical hearts, especially those of the alumni, beat feverishly. So many buildings on this campus have been artistically mangled that there are fears that this building, even such an important one as it will be, may undergo that same fate.

The library is virtually the only building on the campus which can be called handsome. The artistic quality of the library will be greatly affected by that of the new Memorial union because of the proximity of the two. If time or trouble is spared in securing a beautiful as well as practical building, the library will be marred, and critics, alumni, students, every one concerned with art in connection with education, will throw up his hands in grief at the crime.

The builders of Madison have been damned enough for their disregarding the opportunities offered to them by nature to make the city a Washington or Paris or Vienna in beauty.

Will architects and those others who are responsible for the outward appearance of Union building allow another artistic shame to spring up on our campus? Will the one handsome structure on the east end of the campus be marred? Will an institution of learning paradoxically disregard art?

The Greeks reckoned beauty with learning and with religion. Beauty was the very keynote of their existence. Their art has lasted with their teachings and their traditions. The Greek civilization often has been called the greatest that the world has ever seen. It does not necessarily follow that to be great, a civilization must realize the value of art. But surely artistic values go hand in hand with greatness.

Perhaps if some committee, chosen from the alumni and faculty, were to endorse the plans, the Union building would never be an eye-sore to the habitues of the campus. Such a group might be unwieldy, might not work practically, but it would at least be a check on utilitarian architects who are more concerned with saving money than they are with creating a work of real art.

GET RICH, BUT DON'T PLAY BASEBALL

Somehow or other men will play baseball in the summer time,—and when they can get money for indulging in their sport, the inclination to take it is high unto irresistible. Badger batters are no exception.

Whether one subscribes to the creed of unadulterated amateurism or not, it is an incontrovertible fact that professionalism, practically considered, does damage. Wisconsin's experience in losing the mainstays of its nine this year is too vividly sad to need re-emphasizing for illustrating the point. Men who play baseball in the summer for money simply don't play baseball for Wisconsin the next spring.

That's hard on Wisconsin and hard on the man. There's one way out; get rich making cheese and play baseball in the neighborhood lot. Above all, keep away from the professional diamond. All Wisconsin expects that of her "Great American Sport" men.

Sunday Sermonette

WHO'S RIGHT

A man set his watch with the city hall clock one day. He missed his train. How's your watch? Right—of course! So are all the time pieces of a group, and yet they're all different. Who's right? Sit down before your radio at noon; and when the operator's voice comes in, "that signal was 12 o'clock, Standard Central time, correct within one half second," you know.

People differ on questions of right and wrong as watches differ on time. Who's right?

It's more than a matter of individual judgment. Might as well glance up at the sun, set your watch, and expect to make a train on your guess. Because people are content to trust their own personal judgment we have the bolshevik morals so common today.

Community sanction brings us no nearer dependable judgment on right and wrong. Yesterday men thought they were right in abandoning the crippled, insane and aged to be devoured in forests. That was a community-wide and community-approved practice.

"Everybody's doing it" sets many standards even on a university campus. Hunt those down and see if you don't come to something like the major is said to have found in an inspection trip to an outlying fort. His time didn't agree with the gunner's who fired the noon gun. But the gunner said he'd set his watch at the village jeweler's. Next day, before taking the stage from the village the major stopped near noon at the same jeweler's. "Just a moment," the man said on being asked the time, and stood listening. "There," he said, as the gun at the fort boomed, "just twelve o'clock!" Of course you've heard the story, but it tells how some of our own moral standards echo and re-echo through a community till we get to believe they are absolute.

Who's right? A great many centuries ago a man lived and taught what we call ethics, and altruism—the common term is love. And in that word is the answer to our question, "Who's Right?" It doesn't give us a complicated code of precepts. It doesn't answer in detail every hairsplitting argument in casuistry. It does give us, however, a broad principle to which, if we're true, we shall not be going very far afield in our living.

When love dominates every family not only will divorce become ancient history, every home will be a bit of paradise. When regard for others' welfare as truly as a man's own comes to have a determining place in the world of commerce and industry, the wheels will all run smoothly. When love has sway in national and international life, not only will wars cease, the whole world will become heaven.

There is truth and there is right. We are searching for truth and squaring our thinking with our findings. Thus may we time our living with eternal right. We'll find it translated into terms of human life in the words and career of the Man of Galilee.

WHEN IS A FAMILY?

The final exam in statistical method last semester included this question: "Give a definition of the family which could be used by a census enumerator." Among the answers were the following:

"The family may be defined as a man or woman living together in marital relations."

"A family is a father and mother and their off-spring, although the latter is not necessary."

"A family is any group of people living together under the same roof, although it would be better if they were married."

IT IS EVIDENT from the last answer that, despite the attempts of various professors to fill the students' heads with new-fangled notions the good old Puritan spirit is still to be found among us.

WHICH IS, by the way, more than can be said about most of the good old fashioned spirits.

The week-end has been almost overwhelming. What with the new tradition, which people say has been firmly established for ever and aye, what with that roasting fire, the fraternity sing and everything which took place yesterday morning, afternoon and evening, we have almost forgotten about all that will take place week after next. And that is worth any sacrifice.

It is amazing how inexhaustible the subject of university life seems to be. By and large, undergraduate life does not differ greatly the country over. Yet writers seem able to rake up more stuff about it of late that one can shake a stick at.

We think that the fact is that undergraduate life does not differ very much. East and West is supported by the fact that the tremendous amount of literature—or rather writing—upon the subject does not differ noticeably. It is simply the same stuff reshaped over and over again. We drink it all down, if we do, because it pertains to us. But after all, it is mighty dry stuff.

The books and articles which have appeared lately on undergraduate life remind us of a discussion which was carried on in the Atlantic Monthly five years ago on the subject of the modern generation. This is merely a revival of that old subject under another title.

As the editors of the Atlantic Monthly finally decided not to print anything more about the modern generation, not to give it any more free publicity, as it were, so it would be well if the publishers organized themselves and declared a boycott on undergraduate life. It's getting altogether more notorious than it deserves.

Lord Robert Cecil recently paid a high tribute to President Wilson. In an article in the New York Times Lord Robert observes: "It

Down beside the rippling stream

Leave me lay and let me dream.

Through flower-haunted neighborhoods

Leave me hoof it to the woods;

Or let me by the willows stray,

Take, oh take, high-brows away,

Underneath the greenwood tree,

There, by gum, I'd like to be.

Stern and lofty intellect

I can do without, by heck!

Of toil and trial, enough, I vow;

I'd rather be a placid cow.

Stately duty's decorous tread,—

Gimme silly lambs instead.

Leave me lay and let me dream.

is true that President Wilson did not achieve all that he went to Paris to obtain; but his position there was one of prodigious difficulty. Most people in this country now agree that his ideas of permanent peace were right, and perhaps, if he had received the support which he had every reason to expect from the British negotiators, we might have all been spared a great deal of difficulty and unrest.... Left in the lurch by the British, and, faced with the inevitable hostility of French, he had to abandon a great many of the objects which he sought. But he did achieve, as nobody else could have achieved, the adopting of the League of Nations in a form which experience has so far shown to be sound and workable. That was a diplomatic victory of no mean kind, and it is probable that... President Wilson will be remembered as the man who amid almost overwhelming difficulties carried through a project of the biggest moment to mankind.

We see that eggs are again going up; that is, going up as protest against radical speakers. A shower of them directed at Will Z. Foster, who was addressing a society of Columbia students on some subject of a radical nature actually struck the backs of the members of the audience. It was said that the action was a protest against radicalism, but we think it that it was a radical step to take in protest against radicalism; it can't have scored very many counts for conservatism.

Refer Appropriation Bill To Finance Body, Pay Investigator

An appropriation of $4,000 to begin preliminary work on the University ave. extension and one of $450 for a special investigator to operate under the Dane County district attorney's office were considered by the city council at its meeting Friday night.

Ald. Roy H. Proctor, chairman of the special committee, asked that a resolution be passed setting aside a sum sufficient to start the avenue extension. The resolution was referred to the finance committee.

Only $450, half of the city's share of a special investigator's salary, was appropriated, as the appointment will not be made until July. This sum will cover the last half of 1923. The recommendation passed through Ald. J. H. Brown, chairman of the committee, was carried.

Recommendation of the city property committee that 12 redflex signs be purchased from the Thompson Bros. Co. was held up pending further investigation. The matter was referred back to the city property committee upon information that a cheaper danger signal could be procured. The signs considered cost $25 each.

Ald. Thomas J. Ross was appointed member of the special University ave. extension committee to succeed Asa B. Groves.

An appropriation of $250 will be given to the Memorial Day committee.

Installation of the T. G. Cretney traffic guide at street intersections was referred to the street superintendent to be placed on trial officially at S. Webster and E. Main sts. and at Gilman and Wisconsin ave. The signs will be investigated by the council and street committee before the next meeting.

Mr. Cretney states that previous to the installation of a traffic guide at Webster and Main sts., 42 per cent of the cars were not driving to the right. Since the signs were installed at this corner only 40 violations were reported of a total of 410 autos using the corner during a specified time. Only two were dangerous violations.

Addition of another fire station to protect the Fair Oaks district of the city was proposed in a resolution by Ald. R. F. Elver in a resolution asking that provision for the addition be made in the 1924 budget.

ENGLISH PROF WRITES BOOKS

Zona Gale Praises Red Bird as Contribution to Literature of Indians

Within the past month Prof. William Leonard of the English department has presented to the public two notable books. One of them is a translation of "Beowulf" into modern English verse. This translation, the result of much careful study, gives promise of being used in educational institutions throughout the country.

"Red Bird", the second book, is a play dealing with an episode in the history of the Indians of southern Wisconsin; The scene is laid in the region about Portage. All of that versatility of expression and feeling that is Professor Leonard's is most exquisitely portrayed in this piece.

Zona Gale, celebrated authoress and native of Wisconsin, gives the following criticism of the book: "The whole play has a pathos and a fundamental import wider than that of Red Bird's race. It is a that race no more than to the literature of the human being at his best. By this play Professor Leonard's versatility is again expressed. Poet, dramatist, translator, essayist and scholar, this professor adds his distinction to letters and to life."

EDITORS MAKE PLANS FOR 1923-24 SCORPION

The Scorpion, although discontinued for the present, will probably appear again next fall.

Three of the five members of this year's staff will graduate but a reorganization, possibly involving a reduction in price to five cents and the sale of advertising space is being planned.

According to L. H. Branks '23, one of the editors, the publication was not a financial loss in spite of the fact that the last issue did not sell very well.

A 30 cent refund will be mailed to all subscribers of the Scorpion as the full number of issues will not be published.

Badger Horses Decrease In 1922, Report

Indications Are That Downhill Movement Is Ending

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Although though the number of horses in Wisconsin has been steadily decreasing and the number of stallions registered for service in that state has been on the decline for several years, there are indications that this downhill movement is coming to a halt, according to an analysis made by the federal department of agriculture.

In 1922 Wisconsin recorded a decline of 13.1 per cent, in registered stallions, the heavier loss being noted on pure bred stock. The situation, however, is not as bad as these figures imply, for the survey just made discloses that 76.4 per cent of the 1,232 registered stallions in Wisconsin are pure bred and are rapidly improving the quality of Badger horses.

While production has not kept pace with the death rate, the demand has been increasing. Last year there was an increase of approximately 40 per cent, in the number of horses received on the nation's markets, compared with the previous year. During the first three months of this year there was an increase of horses on the market of 1 per cent over the same months in 1922. Market prices for good big horses have been better this spring and there is a strong demand for good breeding stock, government officials say.

A different situation is shown to exist as respects mules, the number having increased in the country 39,000 last year. At the same time the number of jacks standing for public service decreased more than the preceding year. Wisconsin, with a jack enrollment of 1,251, recorded a loss of 32.1 per cent during last year.

These clubs have been doing a very important work along economic as well as social lines, and the federal government believes their development will bring about more ideal farming conditions.

NEWPORT, R. I. — Warning that the navy must be kept ready for defense in a "world full of menace" was given by Secty. Denby in an address today to the graduating class of the naval war college. "There need be no demand for excessive armament," he declared. "There will be none for a great increase of our present establishment made by the navy department at the coming session of congress. We shall ask for additional cruisers, allowed under the treaty for the limitation of armament. We shall ask for additional light draft gun boats, the vital need of which is being demonstrated every day, and we shall ask for certain submarines and airplanes."
