Taliesin is not an art colony, it is a way of life.

SWEETNESS AND

One of the lifelong concerns of the late Frank Lloyd Wright was education, as readers of his many publications can attest. He came by this interest quite naturally. His mother's family, as he tells us in his autobiography, "was imbued with the idea of education as salvation. Education it was that made man out of the brute and saved him from the beast. Education it was too. . . that unlocked the stores of Beauty to let it come crowding in on every side at every gate."<sup>1</sup>

As the mother had become a teacher, so too the son. In 1932 he established his Taliesin Fellowship, and within a short time a select group of apprentices from all parts of the world had joined him in the ancestral valley near Spring Green. They assisted in constructing and remodeling buildings. They cut timber, sawed lumber, fired kilns to make lime for mortar, and wielded hammers. And of course they toiled in field and barn. The enterprise, like many of the nineteenth century experiments in communitarian living, was conceived as a self-sustaining operation.<sup>2</sup>

In less than two years the Fellowship was firmly rooted, or at least sufficiently so to be a source of pride to the founder. Never one to hide his light under a bushel (he often said that he preferred an "honest arrogance" to a "hypocritical humility"), he wanted the world to know about the adventure in education unfolding on the brow of the hill. One can only guess at his motives, but avowedly one of them was his conviction--shared by many people in the grim days of the Great Depression--that the modern university had somehow failed of its appointed rôle.<sup>3</sup> For the potential artist, at least, Taliesin offered something better.

True, Taliesin spurned conventional methods: there were "no courses, no credits, no examinations, no teaching"; there were not even textbooks beyond "the one book of creation itself." The apprentice, with an eye to the example of the master, learned by doing. This sounds like good Deweyite doctrine, but doubtless it derives less from Dewey than from the indigenous tradition of empirical self-reliance to which Wright had been bred. To this was conjoined an overlay of idealism inspired perhaps by the Unitarianism of his mother's family, but deriving ultimately from Emerson and other nineteenth century yea-sayers whom he read.

Thus the purpose of Taliesin was vastly different, as Wright always insisted, from the usual run-of-the-mill art school. Teaching a neophyte to design and build was almost incidental to its larger goal of nurturing the whole man, leading him to a respect for the "eternal verities" and to a "new realization of human values in everything." Architecture (or any form of creative endeavor) became in effect a by-product of right-living. That is what Wright meant when he said that Taliesin is not an art colony, it is "a way of life."<sup>4</sup>

What was this way of life like? Wright promised in the Taliesin prospectus that it would be "SIMPLE."

Meals in common. Fixed hours for work, recreation and sleep. Each worker will have his or her own room for study and rest. . . . Entertainment will be a feature of the home life: plays, musical evenings, the cinema and evening conferences to which musicians, literary men, artists and scientists will be invited and sometimes the public. The beautiful region is, in itself, a never failing source of recreation.<sup>5</sup>

LIGHT

by ROBERT SPENCE

Apparently he made good on his promise. Cogent evidence of this fact may be found in a series of articles written by apprentices and published in the Daily Cardinal, student newspaper of the University of Wisconsin, in the winter and spring of 1934.

No doubt the idea of the articles was Wright's own, and he made the arrangements for publication (with an irony that he must have relished--to use a university organ to present a case against universities). Intermediary was James Watrous, now a distinguished artist and art historian, and at that time a graduate student at Madison, active in student publications, a young acquaintance of Wright and a friend of some of the early apprentices.<sup>6</sup> The editor of the Cardinal was Robert M. Dillett, now president of a Philadelphia advertising agency. Dillett recalls that ... the Daily Cardinal carried a series of articles under the heading "Taliesin" during my editorship in 1933-34. Someone at the university--and it would appear to have been Jim Watrous--had been asked to find out if the Cardinal would be interested in the series. The only stipulation was that the articles would be printed without change.

I expressed interest and the articles began to arrive. I had no contact with Frank Lloyd Wright or his apprentices at Taliesin. We did not pay for the articles.

I felt certain that a number of students and faculty members would be interested in the series, and it was offered to the Cardinal as an exclusive. I do not believe that the Capital

Times carried the articles. There was no disaffection to my knowledge. The articles simply stopped arriving.<sup>7</sup>

It should be interjected that this testimony is not quite accurate on one point: the Madison daily Capital Times did indeed carry a parallel series of dispatches from Spring Green.<sup>8</sup> They were not identical with those published in the Cardinal (with one exception to be noted presently), but they were substantively the same, with some overlapping of authorship. In each newspaper they were printed under stock heads--"Taliesin" in the Cardinal, "At Taliesin" in the Capital Times. Publication dates, respectively, were February 16, 27, March 2, 29, April 10, 21; and February 2, 9, 16, March 2, 9, 30, April 6, 13.

The Cardinal series, introduced without formal editorial announcement, was initiated "By Nicholas Ray: A Student of Frank Lloyd Wright." His essay under that by-line was given a two-column spread on the editorial page of the February 16 issue, and it deserves quoting at length because in content and to some extent in style it sounded the keynote for the whole series.

At Taliesin--under the ever present counsel and guidance of Mr. Wright--one apprentice and two apprentice aides have complete charge of the Fellowship. Each term for a fortnight and rotating through the group, so we may grasp the significance of the entity and grow with our individual experiences. To realize more clearly the relation of the farm unit to the entertainments; of the kitchens to the drafting jobs; of hauling and cutting wood to the Saturday and Sunday evening dinners; of the digging of trenches and laying of pipe lines to rehearsals of plays and Sundays at the Playhouse; it is all tied together, even our filling of silos has its relation to our afternoon teas in the studio. But above all--Youth is trusted.

Taliesin is not an institution. Taliesin is not an art colony. We all aspire to be artists --and who shouldn't--we fledglings, apprentices, hope to become someday, by at present and forever doing "whatever becometh the man."

When living, working, in and for the present, and in anticipation of the future, it is difficult to recall past labors that might share a light on the weekly day as it is lived. Even the results of those labors are not long contemplated when growth is necessary, and we are growing.

At 4 o'clock each day our work day ends. But after a time for tea and conversation in the studio, work begins. Design of the Willey house in Minneapolis; the building of models for exhibition in spring; design of the set for the play; making of posters; weaving; drawing; concentrated Fellowship activity until dinner at seven. After dinner, music, or work for a change or a change of work.

It might be of mutual favor to us to choose the stately Romeo and Juliet for a vista of the week end activities. Romeo and Juliet is our faithful windmill that continues to whir us the water and chuckle with the wind at the fallen scoffers, who, odd years ago proclaimed its doom with the first storm and who went down while this animate structure still lives and works.

A group comes sprinting down the incline from Taliesin--boy and girl apprentices--some vaulting the barbed fence, some climbing through. The group that this fortnight's "chief," Paul Beidler, or the next, Phil Holliday, has chosen to clean the dishes for this Saturday's tea and music concert, or to help with the steam-fitting, or to work in the carpentry shop. In a few minutes the rip saw will be buzzing. Before long the dishes will be washed and the fireplace be given its nourishment, for wood is already being unloaded near the entrance. And we may be sure that at sometime this morning, Scotty, our steamfitter supreme, will admonish one of the newer apprentices in such a fashion, "You might well be handling that bloody pick as if you we-r-re a Ch-a-r-ristian. You-r-re not thinking it a golf club, ar-re you?" Scotty "did" two years at Oxford and outside of that has lived for about 40 years.

And so the activity will go on, until . . . the clank of the traditional dinner bell summons them to give way to their complementary appetites of food and drink.

After lunch another group will cover the same tracks from Taliesin unit number one, to Hillside, unit number two. A group indistinguishable by its actions; but for a different purpose--to rehearse the play that is apprentice-written, apprentice-directed, apprentice-acted, and the music, apprentice-composed. Our first attempt at the so-called "legitimate" to establish the drama as architecture, where it belongs, and do it indigenously as possible. We believe that although the play be apprentice-produced it could still be a foreigner unless we treat the locale we know the best and the subject we have recognized as the center line of our becoming, architecture. This gives us for our field, the universe. For architecture is the basis of all arts--all arts being architecture, and parts of the whole.

Rehearsals, steam fitting and ditch digging continue until time for tea, and then, at 4 o'clock is the hejira to the play house. Tea and cakes, a fire in the fireplace and in the boiler, and a concert through our channels of integral sound, of Brahms' First Symphony, and Franck's "Variations." Then an apprentice-made supper in the theater that preludes our preview of the Sunday playbill. Our way back across the fields is lighted by the moon, or its handy and unpretentious substitute, the flashlight, unless we've all become too accustomed to the moon and the flashlight has been left where we are going--Taliesin.

Sunday afternoon at the Fellowship. From Romeo and Juliet one gapes in wonder at the variety of scenes from which he might choose. Focus is difficult until cars begin to drive up to the theater for the public performance of the playbill that is chosen from the products of the world. By 3 o'clock the bulk of the audience is at ease. In the theater focus is not difficult, it is naturally on the stage, a time for the usual orientation to the quality and environment; to the departures from stiff and antiquated architecture, the ease, the sun pressing through the shades and glowing on the walls, the lighting, the thing as a whole, then, naturally to the stage. The center of interest. The product of movement. The medium of the celluloid strip and the sound track is given full vent in a kind of release as the audience, in comfort, sipping coffee and eating cakes and smoking, witnesses one of the world's finest picture plays.

Sunday night--our night with our guests. Ernest Meyer [a Capital Times columnist] caught the spirit of our Sunday nights when he was here with his wife and the Evjues last Sunday. He transferred it to the Tuesday Capital Times. And if tomorrow is Monday, as no doubt one tomorrow will be, it begins at orthodox 5:30, with breakfast at orthodox 6, and work after 7--willingly adding tired to tired and adding it again, for tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. . . .<sup>9</sup>

This, then, was life at Taliesin as described by an ardent young member of the Fellowship. It was a difficult and demanding yet seemingly idyllic existence, superior in every way to the humdrum and ill-conceived regimen of the average university undergraduate. It may be safely assumed that not all students on the Madison campus were willing to accept the implications of Ray's rather romantic presentation; and one who was not, as it turned out, was James Watrous. He thought the article much to dithyrambic, and he said so. In a note to Philip Holliday, one of the Taliesin apprentices, he decried the excess of "sweetness and light" in Ray's dispatch. Holliday evidently conveyed this sentiment to

Wright, for the master himself precipitously penned the next essay. It was his only contribution to the series and the only article to appear in identical form in both the Cardinal and the Capital Times. Pointedly titled "Sweetness And Light," it was conceived patently as a rebuttal to Watrous's stricture. Witness the Editor's Note which introduced it to readers of the Capital Times: "In a communication following one of his articles, Lloyd Wright was accused of spreading too much 'sweetness and light' among his apprentices at Taliesin. Mr. Wright has written the following article in reply to the charge."<sup>10</sup>

Notwithstanding what is implied every time the phrase is applied by modern USAism: we are for both [sweetness and light]. We don't care much for the tough guy or the hardboiled business big-boy nor for the prological pragma as a philosopher.

The system called capitalistic for short is tough enough and the rugged individuals who ran it into the ground for profit are hardboiled enough. Both so damned tough and hardboiled that the little boys who turned down the brims of their fedoras over a cigarette stuck in the thin lips of a hard mouth--sophisticated eyes shooting the low-down on life from under the brim are merely lightweight--for any purpose except journalistic, wisecracking as a job or sentimental--that is to say "campus" communism.

Radicals have usually the gentleness of bravery and "love music, flowers and little children," as the poor bromide lady said she did. Harmony and gentleness become them as truth seekers. Few have the inferiority complex. They can afford therefore to be kind and sweet--Oh yes, wholesomely sweet. Our sophisticated fans of the sophisticate are city-made for city life and gangdom--good on the end of a gun if they get the drop on some one--but rotten with an axe in the hand in the woods. They can kick a prostitute down stairs but wouldn't carry up anything worth having because they couldn't.

And this philosophical son of the "Decline of the West"--Spenglerite and ism, chronic istic and utter ite? what about him? To say truly he is useful. Any antiseptic is. He can cauterize a wound but he can't heal it. He can take life but he can't give it. He might clean up a sentimental mess but leave a poison spot and the poison spot would be him.

How many smart little modern boys in our Unions and universities and by slum-aesthetics have been taken for a ride and put on that spot? Almost all we have of them have been put there, or are going.

Sweetness? Well, not nauseate. Let's say wholesome fruit sweet or hard candies.

Light? Well, not electric glitter nor metallic lightning. Let's say sunlight and all the color there is because of it. Taliesin is for the sweetness and light of life to set it up as integral to manhood against the putrid, the sour, the dry that rancid sophistication and mean money-mindedness have let us down to.

Taliesin is strong enough to fight "hell and all" for the light that comes from within and like sun shine becomes color when it comingles with spirit: the spirited man in a spirited life--Spiritual! Why be afraid of the word just because it became a catchword in prevailing lip-service to the dead god of a dying church: a come-on for the lackadaisical philosophy of paid professional professors. A god dies that god may live!

Why drop the words "Love and Beauty" because the advertising agents of a dry-as-dust society have oversold it both noble words in every known kind of swindle. Love dies that love may live!

Why be afraid to say "the beautiful" just because women's clubs lip-stick and rouge it and minor poets have made the word a prostitute? Let's not kick that prostitute downstairs. There is more good in her yet than in the "pretty lady."

It is just as good to be sweet and just as sweet to be good now as it ever was provided it is wholesome sweet.

Light is as exciting a necessity to the spirit as it ever was to the seed in the ground intending and intended to grow. A thirst for both Taliesin.

And if we are ever tough and hardboiled out here it will be in defense of their defense.

Here in the country we have a better use for both sweetness and light, we suspect, than can be found anywhere in the dirty city--it is a slum now. And, say, youse hard minded guys--with your calisthenic thinking--say, c'mon up 'n see us sometime?

N.B. Taliesin has one hate, and one hate only. Taliesin hates insincerity.<sup>11</sup>

The shrill tone of Wright's remarks suggests that Watrous had touched a tender spot. He had intended merely to pose a caveat to the apprentice-correspondents who, fired by excess of zeal, described an existence rather too Arcadian in a language rather too flowery. Wright evidently interpreted his criticism as something more sinister, as an attack upon the rationale of Taliesin itself. At the least he took it as symptomatic of an attitude in the universities that he was endeavoring to controvert--the very attitude, in fact, that the whole series of articles was designed to counteract.<sup>12</sup>

Wright's dispatch, then, was the key statement. Oracular, ungrammatical, fervent, it was a reaffirmation of a dictum often voiced in the nineteenth century, but less frequently heard in the twentieth: sweetness and light denote love--love of Beauty and love of Truth. Taliesin, as Wright proudly proclaimed, was "for both." Stripped of sentiment, poetic diction, and transcendental rhetoric, this is the message of all the articles. Possibly Watrous's demurrer did have some effect, however; subsequent dispatches were less florid and more forthright in exposition than Ray's. They continued into April in both the Cardinal and the Capital Times. Then they "simply stopped arriving." □

ROBERT SPENCE is Assistant Professor at Mount Mercy College, Pittsburgh (Pa.); his teaching includes literature as well as art history.

A native of Maryland, Prof. Spence received his baccalaureate degree at the University of Maryland after World War II and his M.A. (American literature) and Ph.D. (art history) at The University of Wisconsin.

Prof. Spence has previously published studies in the publications of the Academy: "Daniel H. Burnham and the 'Renaissance' in American Architecture" (TRANS., XLIX, p. 296, 1960) and "Frank Lloyd Wright at the University of Wisconsin" (Wis. Acad. Rev., V. 9, No. 1, p. 19, 1962). His current research involves a study of the educational philosophy of Frank Lloyd Wright.

MILWAUKEE: THE HISTORY OF A CITY by Bayrd Still. Madison, State Historical Society of Wisconsin, 1948, Second Printing, 1965, pp. xiii, 638, $8.50.

When Allan Nevins reviewed this book in the Saturday Review in 1949 he wrote "This is a good deal more than another history of a hustling city." A quarter century later this statement still rings true and Milwaukee: The History of a City well deserves a second printing. While the population of Milwaukee has increased appreciably since 1940 the patterns that characterize the community were set by that time. In a period of increasing interest in and concern for our urban society this is a timely and remarkably contemporary book. This exciting and readable story begins with the first white settlers and continues to 1940, omitting no major aspect of Milwaukee's life and growth. Most city histories concentrate on the political scene. However, the patterns of Milwaukee's culture and the basis for its economic development are the prime areas of concentration in this study. The municipal services, the life-blood of any city, are discussed in detail along with the power structure in terms of political parties, labor organizations, and citizens' associations. A quarter century after its first printing it is still the most accurate and comprehensive study of Milwaukee.

Professor Still, who taught at the old Milwaukee State Teachers College from 1932 to 1938, is now Professor of History at New York University. The reprinting of his Milwaukee has made it possible for this meticulous historian to correct a few errors that appeared in the original printing. A note on recent publications concerning Milwaukee has been appended to the original bibliographical essay. The illustrations are all new and vastly improved over the first printing

THE DEVELOPMENT OF MODERN CHEMISTRY by Aaron J. Ihde. Harper & Row, New York, 1964, pp. xii - 851, $13.50.

It is unfortunately only rather rarely that a reviewer can honestly say a new book meets a clear need. Happily that is the case with Aaron J. Ihde's The Development of Modern Chemistry. Ihde's stated intention (p. xi) was "to portray the flow of events which brought chemistry from its primitive unspectacular state in 1750 to its dramatic vigor in the present day," and he fulfills that objective remarkably well. For he devotes fully a third of the book to the twentieth century, where most histories of chemistry break off or falter noticeably, and for the rest deals in depth and breadth with many topical strands that traditional histories have passed over lightly or submerged in indigestible detail.

The book is divided into four parts: 1) "The Foundations of Chemistry" (pages 3-54), a succinct yet wholly adequate introduction covering the period from ancient times to the end of the eighteenth century; 2) "The Period of Fundamental Theories" (pages 57-258), and 3) "The Growth of Specialization," which deal mainly with the nineteenth century; and 4) "The Century of the Electron" (pages 475-745), the twentieth century. While significant facts are footnoted, most of the sources for each chapter are discussed in a series of valuable bibliographic essays that will serve the interested reader who wishes to pursue a particular strand further much better than the more traditional bibliography. The name and subject indices appear detailed enough for most purposes, and the appendices bring together some pertinent facts that will increase the book's reference value, especially for the non-chemist reader, including tables of the discovery of the elements (Appendix I, pages 747-749), the discovery of the radioactive isotopes (Appendix II, page 750), and Nobel Prize winners in chemistry, physics, and medicine (Appendix IV, pages 755-757).

In this reviewer's opinion perhaps the most valuable chapters of the book are those devoted to organic chemistry (7, 8, 12, 13, 23) and biochemistry (16, 24), along with those that deal with the development of physical chemistry (15, 20) and the chemical industry (17, 25, 26). This information was previously available only by searching out numerous scattered sources, many of them out-of-print or otherwise difficult to find, and much of the more recent information of course never previously synthesized or analyzed in this way. The decision to treat areas of specialization topically seems a particularly sound one, that should need no further comment by way of justification, and one the author has carried through with notable success.

In spite of the book's erudition, it is eminently readable, and the author has been successful in incorporating the most minute details and considerable biographical information without sacrificing the gentle flow of the narrative. Those who still believe that history must have a chronological approach will find it in a broad sense in the book's four major parts and within chapters, yet the more sophisticated reader and scholar will gain satisfaction from the primarily topical approach by chapters. For this reason, Ihde's Development of Modern Chemistry is a book that may be read with profit and pleasure by the trained historian, the scientist with a casual interest in the evolution of his specialty, and the educated layman or student with an interest in science. It is unquestionably the best one-volume history of chemistry now in print and likely to be available for some time. For all these reasons this volume should find a place aside from its natural one in history of science collections, in every library of chemistry and related sciences (including medicine, pharmacy, physics, agriculture, etc.), as well as in high-school and public libraries.

MINUTES

October 29, 1965

Present: Jack R. Arndt, George C. Becker, David J. Behling, Goodwin F. Berquist, Jr., Eunice R. Bonow, Harry Hayden Clark, Leslie H. Fischel, Jr., Charles D. Goff, Aaron J. Ihde, Henry A. Meyer, Katherine G. Nelson, Norman C. Olson, Walter E. Scott and Adolph Suppan.

Also present was Mrs. Patricia K. Behling, the Administrative Assistant.

The meeting was called to order at 7:00 p.m. at Wing-spread (the Johnson Foundation) in Racine, President Clark presiding.

Council Meeting

1. The Minutes of the Council Meeting of May 7, 1965 were approved as published in the Wisconsin Academy Review, Vol. 12, No. 3, Summer 1965.

2. Mr. Olson discussed the Treasurer's Report (April 21, 1965 to September 30, 1965), copies of which were distributed. The report was approved.

3. Mr. Scott mentioned that he had visited Dr. Steenbock.

4. Mrs. Patricia Behling reported that 281 new members were added to the Academy roles and 146 were delinquent in payment of dues. Mr. Scott and Mr. Goff will contact these members. In addition, they are to receive a letter from the President requesting that they continue their membership. The total membership is 1279, including 1087 members, 88 student members and 104 library members. All applications for new memberships were approved. The names will be listed in the Review.

5. Mr. Berquist, Editor of the TRANSACTIONS for the past three years, presented his final report. Special monographs of the last three annual meetings were published. In view of the increasing body of published material, a new editorial policy should be formulated.

6. In the absence of Mr. Jack Clark, Librarian, Mr. Scott presented his report stating that Miss Margaret Monroe, Director of U. W. Library School is willing to set up the project of preparing an index to the TRANSACTIONS. The council approved that an ad hoc advisory committee be appointed to prepare the proposal.

7. Mr. Arndt, Editor of the Academy Review reported that the November issue will include the membership directory. The Junior Academy Review will be ready for distribution in December.

8. The advancement of funds ($350) for the purchase of pins or insignia for the Junior Academy was authorized.

9. The appropriation of funds ($500) from either the Steenbock fund or Academy funds for Junior Academy Scholarships was authorized. It was voted that this appropriation be reviewed each year.

10. The Visiting Scientists Program (Secondary Schools) of the National Science Foundation was reviewed. All states have this program except Wisconsin. Support of the proposal was approved and a committee will be appointed to write, present and implement the proposal if granted. Mr. Richard Netzel will be asked to serve as chairman and Mr. Arndt and Mr. Ihde as members.

11. Mr. Behling reviewed the plans for the 1966 annual meeting to be held May 6-8 at Lawrence University, Appleton. The program will be similar to those of previous meeting with the exception of a Friday afternoon tour (for early arrivers) of the Kimberly Clark Paper Mill. Mr. Darling is chairman of the local arrangements.

12. Mr. Scott distributed "We Like It Here" buttons, advertising Wisconsin and then introduced Mr. Paul Hayes of the Milwaukee Journal.

13. Mrs. Nelson reported that the Long Range Planning Committee suggests the following themes for the future annual meetings.

1967 - Wisconsin Resources - Natural Sciences - Wisconsin State University, Oshkosh.

1968 - Population Growth and Education - Wisconsin State University, Eau Claire.

1969 - Regional Planning in South eastern Wisconsin - Wisconsin State University, Whitewater.

1970 - Centennial celebration - University of Wisconsin-Madison.

1971 - Milwaukee Public Museum.

Carthage College (Kenosha) wishes to invite the Academy to hold a meeting on their campus. A suggestion has been received that the Junior Academy sponsor a day long program during the Christmas vacation. The report was approved, however the findings are not binding. It was suggested that Carthage College campus would be ideal for the 1966 fall meeting using the theme "Wisconsin's Resources in Arts."

14. The Membership Committee report was read by Mr. Goff, who distributed the attractive new membership brochure, prepared at a cost of $1750, a gift to the Academy from several companies. Letters of appreciation to be sent to the companies who contributed.

15. The Nominating Committee reported "No report."

16. A new appointment to the Resolutions Committee was approved as Mr. Lamers is no longer a member of the Council.

17. Mr. Scott reviewed preliminary plans for the Centennial Program. The Kansas Academy founded in 1868 will petition to the Post Office Department for a commemorative stamp. All academies were canvassed regarding their plans for centennial programs. Very few academies are older than the Wisconsin Academy. Mr. Ihde and Miss Alice Smith will be added to last year's committee to continue the plans.

18. The report of Mr. Berquist of the Committee

1965-66 Directory

This Directory is a supplement to the Winter, 1966 issue of the Wisconsin Academy Review, the quarterly publication of the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters. Composition and layout were done by Jack R. Arndt and Jeanne L. Evert. Mrs. Patricia K. Behling (4421 N. Cramer St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53211), Administrative Assistant to the Academy, maintains the mailing list; we acknowledge her assistance in making this supplement possible.

It should be noted that this listing of members is current to December 31, 1965. Any corrections or changes not already requested should be brought to the attention of the Administrative Assistant.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE WISCONSIN ACADEMY OF SCIENCES, ARTS AND LETTERS.

The people of the State of Wisconsin, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Lucius Fairchild, Nelson Dewey, John W. Hoyt, Increase A. Lapham, Alexander Mitchell, Wm. Pitt Lynde, Joseph Hobbins, E. B. Wolcott, Solon Marks, R. Z. Mason, G. M. Steele, T. C. Chamberlin, James H. Eaton, A. L. Chapin, Samuel Fellows, Charles Preusser, Wm. E. Smith, J. C. Foye, Wm. Dudley, P. Engelmann, A. S. McDill, John Murrish, Geo. P. Delaplaine, J. G. Knapp, S. V. Shipman, Edward D. Holton, P. R. Hoy, Thaddeus C. Pound, Charles E. Bross, Lyman C. Draper, John A. Byrne, O. B. Smith, J. M. Bingham, Henry Baetz, L. Breese, Thos. S. Allen, S. S. Barlow, Chas. R. Gill, C. L. Harris, J. C. Squires, George Reed, J. G. Thorp, William Wilson, Samuel D. Hastings, and D. A. Baldwin, at present being members and officers of an association known as "The Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts, and Letters," located at the city of Madison, together with their future associates and successors forever, are hereby created a body corporate by the name and style of the "Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters," and by that name shall have perpetual succession; shall be capable in law of contracting and being contracted with, of suing and being sued, of pleading and being impleaded in all courts of competent jurisdiction; and may do and perform such acts as are usually performed by like corporate bodies.

SECTION 2. The general objects of the Academy shall be to encourage investigation and disseminate correct views in the various departments of science, literature and the arts. Among the specific objects of the Academy shall be embraced the following:

1. Researches and investigations in the various departments of the material, metaphysical, ethical, ethnological, and social sciences.
2. A progressive and thorough scientific survey of the State with a view of determining its mineral, agricultural, and other resources.
3. The advancement of the usual arts, through the applications of science, and by the encouragement of original invention.
4. The encouragement of the fine arts, by means of honors and prizes awarded to artists for original works of superior merit.
5. The formation of scientific, economic, and art museums.
6. The encouragement of philological and historical research, the collection and preservation of historic records, and the formation of a general library.
7. The diffusion of knowledge by the publication of original contribution to science, literature, and the arts.

SECTION 3. Said Academy may have a common seal and alter the same at pleasure; may ordain and enforce such constitution, regulations, and by-laws as may be necessary, and alter the same at pleasure; may receive and hold real and personal property, and may use and dispose of the same at pleasure; provided, that it shall not divert any donation or bequest from the uses and objects proposed by the donor, and that none of the property acquired by it shall, in any manner, be alienated other than in the way of exchange of duplicate specimens, books, and other effects, with similar insitutions and in the manner specified in the next section of this act, without the consent of the legislature.

SECTION 4. It shall be the duty of the said Academy, so far as the same may be done without detriment to its own collections, to furnish, at the discretion of its officers, duplicate typical specimens of objects in natural history to the University of Wisconsin, and to the other schools and colleges of the State.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of said Academy to keep a careful record of all its financial and other transactions, and, at the close of each fiscal year, the President thereof shall report the same to the Governor of the State, to be by him laid before the Legislature.

SECTION 6. The constitution and by-laws of said Academy now in force shall govern the corporation hereby created, until regularly altered or repealed; and the present officers of said Academy shall be officers of the corporation hereby created, until their respective terms of office shall regularly expire, or until their places shall be otherwise vacated.

SECTION 7. Any existing society or institution having like objects embraced by said Academy, may be constituted a department thereof, or be otherwise connected therewith, on terms mutually satisfactory to the governing bodies of the said Academy and such other society or institution.

SECTION 8. For the proper preservation of such specimens, books and other collections as said Academy may make, the Governor shall prepare such apartment or apartments in the Capitol as may be so occupied without inconvenience to the State.

SECTION 9. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Approved March 16, 1870

Constitution and By-Laws

(WITH ALL AMENDMENTS TO DECEMBER 31, 1965)

CONSTITUTION

Preamble

Whereas the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin passed an Act to incorporate the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters, approved March 16, 1870; therefore be it resolved, that we the members of said non-profit educational association accept and adopt the following constitution for the government of our Academy, hereby repealing all former acts or laws that may have been in force.

ARTICLE I

Name and Location

This association shall be known as the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters, and shall be located at the City of Madison.

ARTICLE II

Purpose

The purpose of the Academy shall be the promotion of sciences, arts and letters in the State of Wisconsin. The specific functions of the Academy shall be those listed in Section 2 of the statutory charter of the association as follows:

- "1. Researches and investigations in the various departments of the material, metaphysical, ethical, ethnological, and social sciences.
2. A progressive and thorough scientific survey of the state with a view of determining its mineral, agricultural, and other resources.
3. The advancement of the usual arts, through the application of science, and by the encouragement of original invention.
4. The encouragement of the fine arts, by means of honors and prizes awarded to artists for original works of superior merit.
5. The formation of scientific, economic, and art museums.
6. The encouragement of philological and historical research, the collection and preservation of historic records, and the formation of a general library.
7. The diffusion of knowledge by the publication of original contribution to science, literature, and the arts."

ARTICLE III

Membership

The by-laws of the Academy shall determine the qualifications, rights and privileges, and payment of annual dues of the various classes of members. Unless otherwise provided therein, applicants shall be elected to membership by vote of the Council upon nomination by a voting member of the Academy.

ARTICLE IV

Officers

Section 1. The officers of the Academy shall be a president, president-elect, vice-president for each of the three departments (sciences, arts and letters), secretary, treasurer, and librarian. These officers shall be elected, on recommendation of the committee on nominations, by the members of the Academy at the annual business meeting, and shall hold office until the close of the following annual business meeting of members or until their successors assume office.

Section 2. The Council shall fill, for the remainder of the unexpired term, any vacancy occurring in any office.

Section 3. The officers shall have such powers and duties as usually pertain to their respective offices, as well as such powers and duties as may from time to time be conferred by the Council, and those powers and duties specified in the by-laws.

ARTICLE V

Council

The Council of the Academy shall be entrusted with the management of its affairs during the intervals between regular meetings, and shall consist of the officers, editor of the TRANSACTIONS, editor of the Wisconsin Academy Review, chairman of the Junior Academy Committee, past presidents who retain their residence in Wisconsin, and such other officers as subsequently may be designated. In addition, the Council may at its pleasure invite such other editorial assistants, representatives of committees, or other members of the Academy to participate in meetings of the Council, but without vote. Five members of the Council shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at regularly called meetings, provided the secretary and one of the presiding officers be included in the number. The Council shall be empowered to adopt standing rules for the conduct of business and government of the Academy, provided such rules do not conflict with Statutes of the State of Wisconsin, this constitution and by-laws of the Academy.

ARTICLE VI

Committees

Section 1. The standing committees of the Academy shall be those listed and described in the by-laws; shall be appointed annually by the president with the advice and consent of the Council; and shall make annual reports to the members and such periodic reports to the Council as may be directed by the Council.

Section 2. The Council shall be empowered to create such special committees with such purpose, membership, tenure, and mode of appointment as may be deemed necessary for the conduct of the affairs of the Academy.

ARTICLE VII

Meetings

The annual meetings of the Academy for programs corresponding with its purposes and for business shall be convened at such time and place as the Council may designate. Special meetings may be called by the Council. The number of voting members present at any business meeting shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, provided notice of the meeting has been sent to all members at least one month before the meeting.

ARTICLE VIII

Publications

The Council shall be authorized to publish such regular publications in the name of the Academy as may be named and described in the by-laws to carry out the objects of the Academy. The Council shall be authorized to issue special publications.

ARTICLE IX

Amendments

Amendments to this constitution may be adopted by the members of the Academy at any annual business meeting by an affirmative vote of three-fourths of all members present and voting; provided, that the amendment has been proposed by five members or by a majority vote of the Council, and that notice has been sent to all members at least one month before the meeting.

BY-LAWS

I. Classes of Membership

Section 1. Life members shall be elected either on account of special services rendered to the Academy or upon payment of one hundred dollars or more. They shall have the same rights and privileges as active members.

Section 2. Sustaining members shall be so elected or designated and shall pay annual dues of ten dollars. They shall have the same rights and privileges as active members and shall be specially listed in the membership roll in recognition of their support of the work of the Academy.

Section 3. Patron members shall be so elected or designated annually upon payment of fifty dollars or more each year. They shall have the same rights and privileges as active members while designated as patrons.

Section 4. Student members shall be regularly enrolled students and shall pay annual dues of one dollar. They may attend meetings of the Academy but shall not be allowed to vote and to hold office.

Section 5. Institutional members shall be elected in recognition of an annual membership fee of one hundred dollars. One duly designated representative of every such institution shall have the rights and privileges of active members on account of such payment.

Section 6. Library members shall be elected in recognition of an annual membership fee of four dollars. One duly designated representative of every such library shall have the rights and privileges of active members on account of such payment.

Section 7. Active members shall be elected upon application and shall pay annual dues of five dollars. They shall have the rights and privileges of voting and holding office.

Section 8. Family members shall be elected on account of being the spouse of life, sustaining, patron, or active members and shall pay annual dues of one dollar added to the spouse's membership dues in any of the foregoing classes. Family members shall have the same rights and privileges as active members.

II. Membership lists

The secretary shall be responsible for the maintenance of a current list of members according to the various classes of membership. The Council may direct that lists of members be published from time to time.

III. Payment of Dues

Section 1. As soon as possible after January first of each year, the treasurer shall send to members statements of dues payable, and in case of non-payment shall, within the succeeding four months, send a second and, if necessary, a third notice.

Section 2. The treasurer and secretary shall strike from the list of members the names of those who are one year or more in arrears in the payment of their dues, and the treasurer shall notify such members of this action offering at the same time to reinstate them upon receipt of the dues in arrears for the preceding year plus the dues for the current year.

Section 3. In consideration of the payment of dues or upon election as a life member, a copy of each publication of the Academy shall be sent to every member; provided, that only one copy of each publication shall be sent to each family membership. Student members shall be sent only the Wisconsin Academy Review.

IV. Duties of Officers

Section 1. The president shall be the principal executive officer of the Academy; shall in general supervise and control the business and affairs of the Academy, subject to the control of the Council; shall when present, preside at all meetings of the members and of the Council; shall have the authority to execute such documents as are necessary or proper to be executed in the course of the Academy's business; and shall prepare an address which shall be delivered before the annual meeting of members of the Academy at which his term of office expires.

Section 2. The vice-presidents shall be responsible in their respective areas of specialty for the selection of research reports or other papers submitted by members for presentation in general sectional sessions of the annual meeting, subject to the direction of the other members of such program committee. In the absence of the president or in the event of his inability to act, a vice-president (in the order of sciences, arts and letters) shall perform the duties of president.

Section 3. The president-elect shall assume the office of president at the end of the annual business meeting one year from his election and shall supervise the preparation and planning of the program for the annual meeting at which he shall assume the office of president.

Section 4. The secretary shall keep a full and complete record of all rules, regulations and changes in laws governing the Academy; shall see that all notices are duly given; shall keep complete minutes of the meetings of the Council and of the members; shall be custodian of the seal of the Academy and of its records; shall prepare membership lists as directed by the Council; shall with the respective vice-presidents, president-elect and other designated persons prepare the program of research reports and other general papers for the annual meeting of members; and shall supervise the mailing of publications of the Academy to the members.

Section 5. The treasurer shall have charge and custody of and be responsible for all funds and securities of the Academy; receive moneys due to the Academy from any source; deposit all such moneys in the name of the Academy; disburse funds of the Academy in payment of legitimate expenses incurred by the Academy; and shall keep accurate records of all receipts and disbursements and present a written account thereof at each annual meeting of members, such account to segregate clearly the major classifications of income and expenses.

Section 6. The librarian shall have charge and custody of the library of the Academy and shall supervise the exchange publication program with other learned societies, subject to the direction of the Council.

V. Official Allowances

The Council is authorized to fix and pay an annual allowance for expenses and services rendered to the secretary, treasurer, editors and such other officers and assistants of the Academy as may be deemed necessary.

VI. Publications

Section 1. A regular publication of the Academy shall be known as its TRANSACTIONS, and shall include suitable research reports and other appropriate matter.

Section 2. An editor of the TRANSACTIONS shall be appointed by the Council and he shall be charged with the special duty of editing and overseeing the publication of the TRANSACTIONS. The editor may appoint such assistants as he may need.

Section 3. Materials to be published in the TRANSACTIONS must represent genuine original contributions to the knowledge of the subject discussed. Preference shall be given to papers of special interest to the State of Wisconsin and to papers presented at a regular meeting of the Academy. The privilege of submitting manuscripts for publication in the TRANSACTIONS shall be reserved for the members of the Academy.

Section 4. A regular publication of the Academy shall be known as the Wisconsin Academy Review and shall include proceedings of the Academy, news regarding Academy members and activities, brief articles by members and other material of interest.

Section 5. An editor of the Wisconsin Academy Review shall be appointed by the Council and he shall be charged with the special duty of editing and overseeing its publication. The editor may appoint assistants as needed.

VII. Standing Committees

Section 1. A committee on membership shall consist of five members, one of whom shall be the secretary of the Academy.

Section 2. A committee on nominations shall consist of three members and shall nominate members to fill the positions of officers listed in Article IV of the constitution for election at the annual meeting of members. This committee shall be appointed at least three months prior to the date of the annual business meeting.

Section 3. Committees on program, local arrangements, and publicity shall be appointed for each annual meeting of members. The president-elect shall serve as chairman of the committee on program and the secretary shall be an ex-officio member.

Section 4. A committee on budget shall recommend an annual budget for adoption by the Council and shall be composed of the president, president-elect, secretary, chairman of the long-range financial planning committee, and treasurer as chairman.

Section 5. A committee on long-range financial planning shall study and recommend to the Council suggestions for the improvement of the long-range financial stability of the Academy and shall be composed of the treasurer and four other members.

Section 6. A committee on long-range program planning shall study and recommend to the Council suggestions concerning the time, place and program format for future annual meetings of members and shall be composed of five members.

Section 7. A committee on the Junior Academy of Science shall supervise the activities of the Junior Academy of Science. The chairman of this committee shall be designated by the Council.

Section 8. The president of the Academy shall be an ex-officio member of all standing committees.

VIII. Constitution and By-laws

The secretary shall be responsible for the maintenance of currently revised and correct copies of the constitution and by-laws. He shall supply copies of these documents to members upon request. The Council may authorize the publication of the constitution and by-laws from time to time.

IX. Parliamentary Authority

The parliamentary authority of this organization shall be the latest revision of Robert's Rules of Order.

X. Amendments

Amendments to these by-laws may be adopted by the members of the Academy at any annual business meeting by a two-thirds affirmative vote of all members present and voting; provided, that the amendment has been proposed by five members or by the majority vote of the Council, and that notice has been sent to all members at least one month before the meeting.

Part 2 - Alphabetic Listing

The following list of members is arranged alphabetically by last name. The state designation of all Wisconsin cities (Wis.) has been omitted. All other states are indicated. The number and letter(s) after each name indicates the year of first membership and the current membership class as follows:

H - Honorary; HL - Honorary Life; L - Life; P - Patron; S - Sustaining;
A - Active; AS - Active Student; I - Institutional; Lib - Library; F - Family.

The names of Honorary, Honorary Life and Life members are in capital letters. An asterisk (*) denotes members deceased during 1965.

for the Recognition of Research in Humanities was approved. Copies of the announcement regarding awards for research in the humanities were distributed.

19. The report of the Wild Rivers Planning and Steering Committee was endorsed. This study will require five years for completion and will be ready for the Centennial program.

20. The appointment of Mr. Karl Kroeber, Associate Dean of the UW Graduate School, as chairman of the committee to establish a Humanities Foundation was approved. The establishment of a Humanities Foundation was proposed by the 1965 Committee on Research in Humanities (Mr. Walker Wyman, Chairman).

21. It was approved that letters be sent to Governor Knowles and Mr. Bruno Bitker suggesting the Mr. Ihde be appointed to the Commission on the United Nations.

22. The delegate to the AAAS meeting will be appointed.

23. An invitation will be extended to the Wisconsin Phenological Society (an affiliate member) to meet with the Academy at their annual meeting.

24. Mr. Fishel was authorized to respond to the request from the Governor's office concerning the appointment of a Poet Laureate in Wisconsin.

The meeting adjourned at 10:25 p.m.

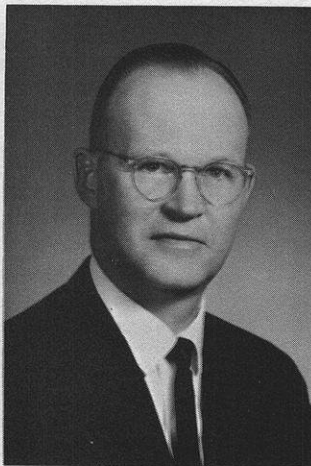

Respectfully submitted

Eunice R. Bonow,
Secretary

Introducing

WALTER F. PETERSON assumes the editorship of the Wisconsin Academy TRANSACTIONS beginning with the preparation of the 1966 volume. He is currently Professor of History at Lawrence University, Appleton. After receiving his Ph. D. from the State University of Iowa in 1951 Prof. Peterson taught at Milwaukee-Downer College where he was Chairman of the Social Science Division until the Downer-Lawrence merger in 1964. During 1964-65 he took sabbatical leave to complete a history of Allis Chalmers.

He has published articles in the Wisconsin Academy TRANSACTIONS as well as American West, Inland Seas, Annals of Iowa, Marquette Business Review, Northwest Ohio Quarterly and other periodicals. Peterson has been a member of the Wisconsin Academy since 1954.

In Memoriam

WILLIAM N. STEIL, Professor of Botany at Marquette University for many years, died in Milwaukee on October 12, 1965 at the age of 89. He was a native of Highland (Iowa Co.) and attended the Platteville State Teachers College from which he graduated in 1897. He taught in several high schools around the state until 1910 when he went to The University of Wisconsin to teach and do research. He was awarded a doctorate degree in 1916 from UW and six years later moved to Milwaukee to head the biology department at Marquette. Although Prof. Steil officially retired in 1952 he continued teaching at Marquette until about 1957.

Prof. Steil joined the Wisconsin Academy in 1919 and was made an Honorary Life member in 1959. Other professional organizations with which he was associated included: American Association for the Advancement of Science (Fellow), Sigma Xi, Phi Sigma, Botanical Society of America, American Institute of Biological Sciences, and National Association of Biology Teachers.

In addition to devoting more than 50 years to teaching, Prof. Steil contributed more than 40 articles to scientific journals with main emphasis on heredity and the function and structure of cells.

EDGAR G. BRUDER, who practiced dentistry in Milwaukee for 42 years, died in July 1965 near North Lake, Wis. He was born in Mayville (Dodge Co.) in 1894 and attended both The University of Wisconsin and Marquette University, where he received his D.D.S. degree. He was also professionally interested in soil regeneration, and devoted much time to his hobby of archeology. For some years he was President of the Wisconsin Archeological Society and following its Golden Anniversary year of 1953 wrote an historical sketch (See Wis. Acad. Rev., V. I, No. 2, p. 12). Dr. Bruder was a serious student of Indian mound culture and had a fine collection of artifacts. Many of his discoveries were described in the Wisconsin Archeologist. During World War I he served in the Navy, and later joined the American Legion and Military Order of the World Wars. He was a member of the American Dental Association, a past president of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin and a 32nd degree Mason. Dr. Bruder joined the Academy in 1954.

MINUTES

December 17, 1965

Wild Rivers Planning and Steering Committee
Hill Farm State Office Building
Madison

The meeting was called to order by Chairman George Becker at 10:15. Acting Secretary - Walter Scott.

Present: Wm. Dickinson, Robert Gard, Lee Holt, Hugh Ittis, Robert McCabe, Arthur Oehmcke, Perry Olcott, Lewis Posekany, Hans Rosendal, Edward Schneberger, Walter Scott, Robert Salzer, C. W. Threinen, James Zimmerman, James Anthony, Lyle Christensen.

In view of the $2,500 sum given by the Wisconsin Society of Ornithology for the study of birds, McCabe moved the following:

I move that this committee on Wild Rivers extend its thanks to the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology for supplying funds to investigate the role birds play in the recreational values of wild rivers. Seconded by Schneberger and passed unanimously.

The above motion was amended: that the Wisconsin Academy Council be alerted of this grant so that it too can express its appreciation. Passed.

Oehmcke disclosed that extensive files in the WCD Headquarters at Woodruff contained material on the upper Pine River. The data include fish stocking, width and depth of stream, water clarity, beaver dams, and animals seen while making those surveys. Much of the material was gathered over several years under a cooperative agreement with the U. S. Forest Service.

Christensen discussed briefly the Brule River report from the mid-40's. He indicated that some thought had been given to reprinting it.

Holt discussed the U. S. Geological Survey study currently undertaken. Detailed studies will be made on the movement of water for recharge. The USGS is interested in other values beside the water: immediate environment of the stream, fish present, wildlife, agricultural development, recreational values. The intent is to finish a report within two years.

Olcott is engaged in an intensive study of the water system of the Wolf and Fox rivers. This study is in the process of being written up and is scheduled to be finished by June, 1966.

Holt, in being questioned about stream flow measurement, indicated that a permanent flow gauge has been in operation on the Pine for 30 years and another has been recording flow on the Popple over the past 3 years.

Scott handed out the second rough draft of CONSERVATION COMMISSION POLICY ON WILD RIVERS PRESERVATION. The deadline, he announced, for the final draft is December 29.

Ittis felt that more attention should be given to setting aside virgin timber left in the area. His contact with individuals in Florence County indicated an apathy to his concern. The Calumet-Hecla (old Goodman Holdings) were mentioned and it was suggested that these should be included in the wild rivers acquisition. Ittis pointed out that we need more data on aquatic plants: that such plants are sensitive indicators of water quality (Bordner reports).

It was pointed out that Purdue University had a staff and 100 students doing work in the vicinity of Lost Lake, Florence County. This group may be the source of valuable information and possible help.

Oehmcke said the Forest Service has all of the watersheds timbertyped already.

Anthony reported that he will try for a National Science Foundation grant and that he also has an application in for a WARF grant. His interest is in the parasites of fishes. The other invertebrates will be handled largely by Dicke.

Oehmcke under questioning by Ittis indicated that there is considerable spraying for walking sticks on oaks in Marinette County. Stan Banish at Antigo has information on this. The Forest Service has sprayed parts of the Pine and Popple for spittlebug. Don Renlund has information on this spraying.

Zimmerman suggested that an inventory of the vascular plants be made the first summer. The herbarium sheets then can be used as reference by the ecologists. He indicated that maps are needed of the plant communities in the area. Some work, he felt, could be done in the spring.

Posekany mentioned the spring break-up as making the entire area a difficult place in which to work. Cars and trucks on roads and trails often have to be hauled out.

Becker reported that the fish survey on the Pine and Popple is already well along. These can be completed within a few weeks next summer. He will then turn to the Pike and Wolf basins.

Threinen discussed briefly the extensive surface water reports by counties which have been released and the timetable of counties to be reported on. The priority is for the counties in the Wolf River basin. It may be possible to push up the schedule on Marinette and Florence counties.

Dickinson passed out to project directors a list of the records of "Amphibians and Reptiles Recorded to Date for Pine-Popple River Areas." He requested assistance wherever possible to augment the list.

McCabe reported that he and Howard Young were planning an investigatory trip to the study areas. Young will handle the bird study phase of the program and McCabe will concern himself with the mammals. Very little has been done to date on small mammals.

Becker reported that under the suggestion of Joe Mills the John Muir Chapter of the Sierra Club will survey the rivers for their recreational potential. The program is outlined in the Sierra Club communication of December 1965, "Big Notes on Wild Rivers."

Oehmcke pointed out that the maps of the area should be brought up to date--that the last aerial maps of the region had been made some years ago. Moved by Ilitis that the state mapping committee take some action in bringing the maps for northeastern Wisconsin up to date. Passed unanimously. (In a letter from Scott, dated December 21, 1965, I learned that the last flight photos of Florence and Forest counties were made in 1951. The Wisconsin Conservation Department, the Wisconsin State Office of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation, and the Wisconsin Academy are presently taking steps to have these counties surveyed as soon as possible.)

Salzer reported that he is studying the prehistoric aspects of Northern Wisconsin just west of the study watersheds. His operations, he expects, will eventually move into our study areas. Pollen analysis is involved. Approximately 15 to 20 students will be working on known sites or seeking new sites. Present vegetation is an important cue to such prehistoric sites. Circular openings in heavily forested areas may be such sites. Oehmcke mentioned the bones of woodland bison which had been dredged out of spring holes recently. More of this work is being planned.

Gard has approached the Wisconsin Regional Writers and they will help to produce a report by mid-spring.

Dickinson passed around pictures of the Popple River which are in the files of the Milwaukee Public Museum.

Scott showed copies of maps of the area--documents of considerable interest to the Committee. Many of these go back to maps constructed by stories of travellers and showing streams running in the wrong direction.

Rosendal reported that there were weather stations at Crivitz, Townsend, Wabeno and Breed. One problem in getting weather stations established in the area is the low population, making it difficult to get observers.

Annual ## Meeting

The 96th Annual Meeting of the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters will be held May 6, 7, and 8 at Lawrence University in Appleton. The theme of the meeting will be WISCONSIN'S MANUFACTURING and POTENTIAL FOR INDUSTRIAL GROWTH.

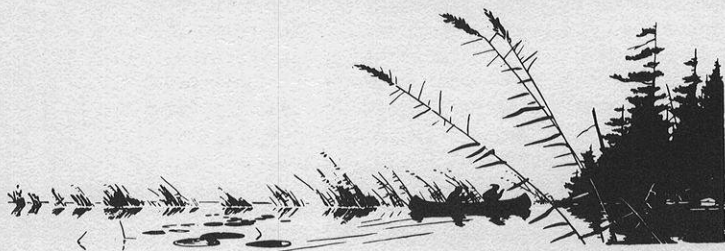

The symposium on Saturday morning will feature Dr. Curtis W. Tarr, President of Lawrence University; Dr. Fred Harvey Harrington, President of The University of Wisconsin; John D. Hogan, Director of Markets Research and staff economist of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company and Paul A. Pratt, Director of the Department of Resource Development of Wisconsin. The Saturday afternoon will be devoted to three sectional meetings for the presentation of scholarly papers.

All members of the Wisconsin Academy have been invited to submit papers for consideration by the Program Committee, and for possible future publication by the Academy.

The program of the Annual Meeting will include a tour of the Kimberly Clark Paper Mill on Friday afternoon for early registrants, a reception on Friday evening, the Annual Banquet on Saturday evening and a bus tour of the Fox River Valley, terminating at the Institute of Paper Chemistry on Sunday. This promises to be an interesting meeting.

We hope that you will include attendance at this meeting on your 1966 schedule. Your family and friends are invited to attend this meeting with you. Additional details will be mailed later and will include the registration forms.

Symposium

FRED H. HARRINGTON, historian and educator, is in his fourth year as President of The University of Wisconsin.

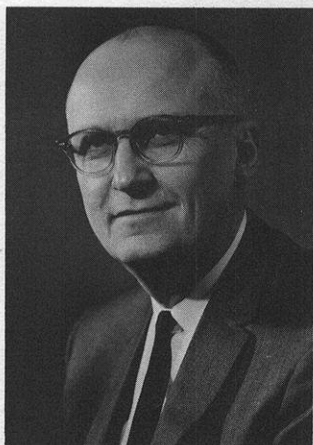

When he was named the University's fourteenth president in 1962, Dr. Harrington had served the University for nearly a quarter of a century. He had taught history to 7,000 undergraduates and graduate students, had been chairman of the history department, had served as special assistant to UW Pres. Edwin B. Fred, and as vice-president under Pres. Conrad A. Elvehjem.

As a historian, Prof. Harrington specialized in American foreign relations, particularly American policy in the Far East. He has travelled and studied in Europe and Asia, has been an advisor to the State Department, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Foreign Policy Association. His publications include a book on American relations with Korea. Before he became President he was working on the China policy of the United States; and he may yet publish in this field.

In his ten years in administration at The University of Wisconsin, Pres. Harrington has seen the institution grow in size and complexity. The University will soon have fifteen campuses--and degrees will be offered on four of these, in Madison, in Milwaukee, and at the new campuses in Northeast and Southeast Wisconsin. Total enrollment on all campuses will soon exceed 50,000.

Born in New York in 1912, Fred Harrington was educated at Cornell and at New York University, where he obtained his doctorate in 1937 (as a student of Henry Steele Commager). He has honorary doctoral degrees from New York University and the University of California.

Dr. Harrington has taught at Arkansas; as a visiting professor at West Virginia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Oxford in England and Kyoto in Japan; and of course had twenty years in Wisconsin classrooms. (Photo: Harold N. Hone.)

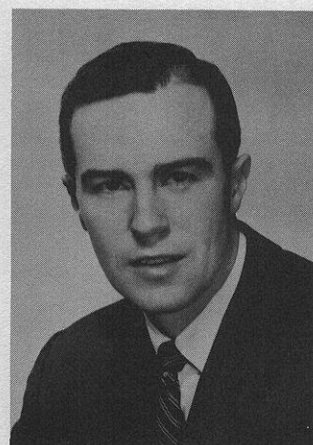

JOHN D. HOGAN, Director of Markets Research and staff economist of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., Milwaukee, joined NML in 1960.

A native of Binghamton, N. Y., Dr. Hogan graduated from Syracuse University in 1949 with an A. B. in economics and history. He received an M.A. in economics and statistics at Syracuse in 1950, and a doctor of social sciences in economics and social psychology from Harvard in 1952.

Hogan, who served in the OSS in World War II, and as a member of the War Department Mission to Germany, was associate professor of economics at Bates College prior to joining NML. He has acted as a consultant to the State of New York, the U. S. Department of Defense, the Maine Department of Economic Development, the Boston Metropolitan Commission and City of Milwaukee Tax Commissioner's Office.

Among his civic and community activities are memberships in the American Economic Association, the National Tax Association, the Association for Computing Machinery, the National Association of Business Economics, the State of Wisconsin Tax Committee, the United Fund, and a fellowship in the American Statistical Association. He is also a lecturer in economics at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and Marquette University.

Hogan's published works include the textbooks American Social Legislation (1956), Economic Analysis (1961), School Revenue Studies (1959), Economics, Principles and Analysis (in press 1964) and numerous scholarly and technical articles.

Lawrence University

Lawrence University, a non-sectarian institution chartered in 1847 and historically related to the Methodist Church, is named for Amos Adams Lawrence, a Boston merchant whose generosity led to its foundation.

After 64 years of life as a university, Lawrence chose to be known as a college from 1914 to 1964. A merger with Milwaukee-Downer College for Women on July 1, 1964, occasioned the return to university status. It is made up of three coordinate units: Lawrence College for Men, Downer College for Women, and the Conservatory of Music. Graduate work is offered at the affiliated Institute of Paper Chemistry, founded in 1929 as a private professional school for men seeking the M.S. and Ph.D. in pulp and paper technology. The university offers undergraduate courses in the human-

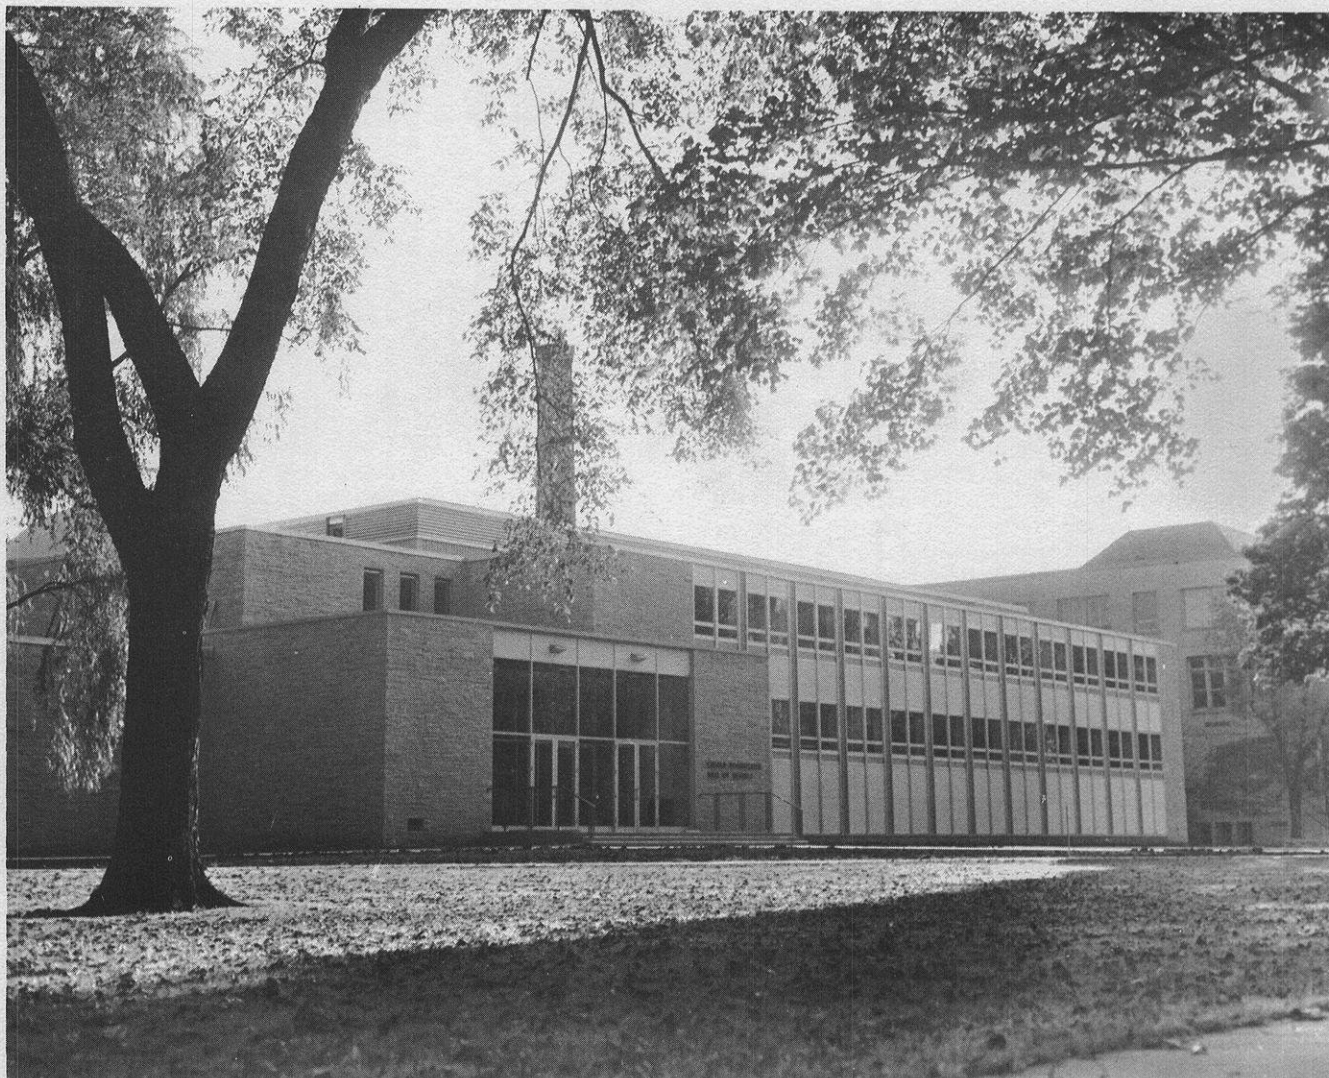

PAUL A. PRATT was appointed as Director of the Wisconsin Department of Resource Development in May, 1965, by Governor Warren P. Knowles.

A native of Illinois, he is a graduate of Beloit College, served for some years as a Trustee, and prior to joining the Department, was Vice President of Public Relations and Development.

Mr. Pratt has had wide experience in business, principally in the dairy industry. He operated his own firm in Wisconsin Rapids, later was Vice President, Gridley Division, The Borden Co. in Milwaukee. He was general manager of the eastern division of Dairy-Pak, Inc., with headquarters in New York.

He is a former president of the Milwaukee Association of Commerce and active in many civic activities in Milwaukee.

Sessions will be held in Lawrence University's Casper Youngchild Hall of Science. This building was made possible by an initial gift of $1 million, the largest single benefaction in the history of the institution. Youngchild was a consultant in the paper industry in Appleton, and received a posthumous citation from Who's Who in America for exceptional educational philanthropy.

ities, social sciences, natural sciences, fine arts, education and occupational therapy.

Lawrence occupies a 50-acre campus, with more than two dozen major buildings and another dozen smaller dwellings. On the north bank of the Fox River are grouped the instruction buildings, dormitories, administrative offices, the student union and public meeting places like the chapel and music-drama center. The south campus, of over thirty acres, contains the athletic facilities, including Lawrence's 5,400-seat athletic bowl.

With the merger with Milwaukee-Downer, and a successful fund campaign connected with a Ford Foundation Challenge grant, Lawrence increased its total institutional worth from $16 million in 1962 to $35 million in 1965. During the 1955-65 decade, the institution's total worth increased four-fold.

In 1965-66, Lawrence's enrollment was 1259 regular students and 49 special students. The institution has managed, in spite of enrollment pressures, to maintain a faculty-student ratio of 1:10, the lowest in the Associated Colleges of the Midwest, with which Lawrence is affiliated. Lawrence is one of 60 colleges and universities with a United States Air Force Officer Training Unit.

Lawrence has a long tradition as a mother of college presidents. It has provided presidents for Brown, Harvard, Duke and more than a dozen other institutions.

Lawrence, a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, grants degrees approved by the American Association of University Women, The University of Wisconsin, and the Department of Public Instruction of the State of Wisconsin, and has had a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa since 1914. It has been on the list of associated colleges of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching since that organization's inception in 1906, and is among the colleges approved by the American Chemical Society. The Lawrence Conservatory of Music is a member of the National Association of Schools of Music.

Lawrence offers the B.A. and the B. Mus. degrees at the undergraduate level.

Wingspread Meeting

● WELCOME

We welcome you here as does the weather this morning. You are here in late fall for some of the most delectable greetings that we know. Comparable perhaps only to one of the early spring days that we have that we wait so long for and in a sense we wait long and patiently for this kind of day. I recall that during the days when I was trying to put things into verse, I sat one day in New England and summed up for myself what a fall day was by saying "fall or autumn is warm where the sun strikes." So I hope you will not miss the sun if you can get out into it today and into the nature trails to observe the variety of nuances of uses and of reflections that is Wingspread. Wingspread is very many things because it has that touch of genius that Frank Lloyd Wright gave to it that it can, if you will make it, mean something to you that it can mean to no one else.

The best welcome I know is that you should make use of what you find here. The staff is completely at your disposal; really the place is yours. If the fountain doesn't please you, we will turn it off or put a log on the fire. The grapes are ripe, if you want to pick them, the flowers too, because frost will come any night and we won't have them in any case. So do make yourselves completely at home.

What we hope may one day be the mission of Wingspread as a tool of The Johnson Foundation is that it may prove to be a seedbed of ideas which is consistent with the pursuits of the Academy. Ideas which, modest at first, may find fertile soil and transplant not only all over the state but throughout the country and even the world and thus enrich the lives of people. We believe that in time, given a young institution as we are, this will happen and we move every day with that faith. Now and then we see a glimmer of production, of result, of effect. For example you will find in our library with the periodicals a current issue of the Saturday Review which contains a sixteen page report of a conference on Southeast Asia held at Wingspread last month. It's probably the most comprehensive and balanced dialogue on Southeast Asia (including, of course, Viet Nam) that the country has as yet witnessed, and we are happy that the Saturday Review has made it available nationally. Perhaps this will be a seed to provoke balanced debate on a critical subject.

There are other seeds that we hope will be planted in the arts. Broadly speaking, evidence abounds of individuals who have done this in the sciences and letters. I scanned the few books that I keep in my office and this is what I ran across: Proof Positive by Abraham Flexner--his autobiography. The great man of the foundation field. Medical education and therefore our lives were changed because of the insistent look he took years ago at medical education. In Princeton, New Jersey, is the Institute which he founded, where scholars including those in the humanities and the natural sciences and letters may pursue at will, really at will, freely unfettered in their own fields. Then I ran across in this quick scanning the biography of the life of Bertha Von Suttner who gave Nobel the idea of the Peace Prize. I also noticed this book which I haven't looked into lately by Walter J. C. Murray, A Sanctuary Planted. A man just had an idea that he ought to begin to plant trees and a sanctuary developed. One can say the same of a place like restored Williamsburg or so many other places, some of them here. I also ran across this book by Karl Menniger. It is those who follow the really exciting developments in perhaps that most obscure of all human sciences, mental health or psychiatry. We know the contribution that those two brothers have made.

Well, what remains for us? This is really just a case of having thrown a few grains of sand out. It remains conspicuously for us in Wisconsin with the spirit of freedom of inquiry of imagination to see what other grains of sand we can find and hold up to the sunlight to see what they reflect. It does remain for us, I think, in an uninhibited way to do it in spite of the lack of what may seem to us an audience.

And here again I turned to my bookshelf to this very fine book--the dialogues of Mac Leish and Van Doren which you may recall came out of one of the finest television documentaries that I think we have ever been able to view in this country. I ran across this part of the dialogue between these two men which I would like to share with you in closing.

Van Doren: "It's pitiful I think when poets write. I don't think they really do this but sometimes say they write for themselves or for their friends or for other poets. It's pitiful to have them talk that way. They really write for people, unknown people, strangers. An artist is a man writing for strangers, persons he will never know, but nevertheless persons whom he has faith in as being, after all, like himself."

Mac Leish: "I think the important thing is to make the distinction you are making now and that you have made in your teaching between these two kinds of knowing. I know that I don't really know the difference is really enormous. A man knows death. He knows, in other words, that we all die but he doesn't know death. He doesn't know what death is until the poignancy of death is driven into his heart as deeply as death itself goes. The only way that any of us have ever known about death, short of dying oneself or having what one most loves in the world die, is through those profound perceptions of art which drive the nail in so deeply you can't shake it loose. So there are really two kinds of knowing. There ought to be different words for them. One is knowing and the other is awareness. Or one is knowing and the other is something else that is keen and sharp and active and the deepest conviction I have about poetry [and I really think he means life here and not just poetry] is that poetry is the only means by which, short of the experience itself, one possesses the experience." Don't you think that is true? I hope meetings like this and meetings with forms that we haven't yet discovered in Wisconsin that the members of the Academy will really be asking constantly "don't you think that that is so?" I hope that Wingspread today will help you ask that.

In behalf of the Academy, I find it difficult to adequately express our gratitude to The Johnson Foundation for making Wingspread available for this weekend meeting. I think that very frequently, in our busy lives and the close attention we pay to day to day housekeeping duties, we tend to forget the larger values which face us and which are responsible for giving us the civilization in which we live. I therefore feel that a weekend like this is particularly important. To meet together in a place like this with the lofty ideas which The Johnson Foundation is seeking to encourage, is to me, a weekend of inspiration and of renewal. I'm certain, Dr. Paffrath, that this feeling is in the hearts of all of us as we meet here. These beautiful surroundings, this beautiful building, the opportunity to commune with nature, to see great books everywhere one looks, to see great architecture and great art at every turn, can't help but cause one to be humble and to want to go away to do a little better than he has done in the immediate past. Therefore I think this weekend is extremely important to us.

In reflecting on the purposes of The Johnson Foundation, I can't help but feel that the Foundation should be a deep inspiration for us in the Academy. When we look at the Charter, the purposes, the activities, and the objectives of the Academy in its 95 years of existence; it seems they are exactly the objectives of The Johnson Foundation. The Academy has never been able to do this job as well as its Founders and its devoted members have wished through the years. Thus, it's a particular inspiration to us in the Academy to associate with an organization such as this, and to look at the kind of job that it is doing. It causes us to feel that our small efforts are worth the expenditures of time and energy, and that we need to work harder to achieve the objectives which the Founders of the Academy had in mind 95 years ago when this organization was created.

I am impressed that The Johnson Foundation is interested in grappling with all of the important problems which face the world and that the Foundation is so active in bringing together persons from all over the world who can contribute, at least in a small way, in shedding light on the problems of the mid-twentieth century. When I look at the Academy, I am proud that our Academy is one of the three in the United States that is not an Academy of Science but is an Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters and seeks to bring together the best in all of the learned disciplines and at the same time to promote activities for social and public betterment. I feel that our Founders planned very wisely in deciding not to restrict the Academy to a scientific academy as was done in so many states but to design it as an instrument which could bring together persons working in all fields of learning, just as The Johnson Foundation is seeking to bring together the best thought in all fields.

I think, Dr. Paffrath, that we shall leave here this weekend with a renewed enthusiasm to attack the jobs which we see facing us. As I view it, the Academy should be the most important instrument for examining the potential problem areas that face us in this state. But our attention should be broader than simply a state problem. We should look at these problems from the standpoint of what we can do to make Wisconsin a better State, and thereby set an example for the other 49 states of the Union. I think, in retrospect, that Wisconsin has been a model in many areas throughout its history and particularly in the early part of the twentieth century. But I feel there is even more that can be done; that we as the Academy of the State of Wisconsin have an obligation to search for problems and seek solutions before these problems become important ones. That is, problems must be recognized before they become so serious that it is virtually impossible to find a really decent solution. One area where I feel the Academy can be of particular significance is in the area which deals with the impact of modern science and the technology which it has created on public policy. We as an Academy can contribute a great deal toward understanding the problems which are being created by the scientific explosion taking place around us. We must anticipate the actions which are necessary to make science truly a servant of mankind rather than a master as it can well become, as it has frequently become in certain areas. Besides being an academy for all fields of learning, it should also be an academy for all fields of action. I feel very strongly that this is our role. We must make the Academy an organization to which every one in the state can turn for assistance in anticipating problems and taking action to keep them from becoming serious problems.

● THE SIGNIFICANCE OF WINGSPREAD TO CULTURE IN WISCONSIN

Adolph A. Suppan

Wingspread, as you know, is the creation of The Johnson Foundation and its founder, Herbert F. Johnson. Mr. Johnson, luckily for us, has given personal support to arts contributions made by the Foundation both to Wisconsin and the nation. Mr. Johnson is not present with us today; I wish he were. He is recovering from an illness and I'm certain I speak for the entire Academy when I say that all of us wish him a very speedy recovery and give him, in absentia, our admiration for what he has done with The Johnson Foundation.

In a talk which is about eight or ten minutes long one has no time for rhetoric; one has time only for a few facts. I'm sure that all of the speakers this morning are very happy about this because it relieves the audience and, for that matter, relieves the speaker too. In talking about the influence of Wingspread on Wisconsin culture, I'm going to give one example, in depth, of a very significant contribution, and for the rest of the six or seven minutes I'm going to merely list other outstanding examples of contributions to Wisconsin culture by The Johnson Foundation.

The example I want to talk about in some detail is the Art USA, Now exhibition which was created by the Foundation in 1962. I recommend that you view a reproduction of the exhibit, in the cloakroom here at Wingspread, if you have not already done so. It consists of 102 paintings by 102 living American painters. The planners of the exhibit specified that the paintings had to have been created between 1959 and 1962; this imperative was, I think, important to the arts. The exhibition has been shown in eighteen major cities of the world (in fifteen countries) and it has had tremendous impact all over the world. The premiere took place at the Milwaukee Art Center and I understand that it's coming back to the Midwest now and will be shown in various other parts of the state. It made a significant impression upon other nations because, as you know, for one reason and another, Europe (especially in the past) took a rather patronizing attitude toward American works of art--not only in music but also in drama, literature, painting and sculpture. There was, I would say, an even more patronizing attitude toward American painting than toward literature, especially around the turn of the century. Recently, however, things have changed; for example, the so-called New York school of painting, the abstract expressionists, have gained both admiration--and imitation--from painters in Paris, London, and other parts of the world.

The Art USA, Now exhibition includes, of course, the paintings of the above school as well as examples of other American schools of painting. Reviews of the exhibition from many capitals of the world proved that it has made an impression not only on art critics but on painters and sculptors in many other countries, an impression of the significant contribution that American painting and sculpture is making in the middle of the Twentieth Century. Another aspect of Art USA, Now is the inclusion of the word now in the very title of the exhibition. This confirms what some of us in the arts today have been saying over and over--that the living artist must be given his due and our homage; that for educational institutions as well as professional arts organizations, exhibitions and performances by living artists must receive a proper place.

Though there is a general impression abroad that the artist is doing much better today than he did ten to twenty years ago, this is not quite true. For example, the average symphony musician in our country still makes an annual living wage which is less than that of an average public school teacher, and the Lord knows the latter's pay is low enough. Agnes DeMille recently wrote in the New York Times "and yet we dancers starve"; that one sentence gives you an idea of the situation in the world of the dance. Poets-in-residence at the UWM Summer Arts Festival have told me year after year that one can still count on the fingers of his one hand the distinguished American poets who are making a living with their poetry alone. So, anything The Johnson Foundation has done for the painter with Art USA, Now might be repeated, I suggest, in the same fashion for the worlds of music, literature, dance, and theatre.

The recent Arts and Humanities bill, signed by the President some weeks ago, will certainly alleviate some problems for the arts in our society. As you know, this bill created an overall federal council on the arts and humanities with two subsidiary councils and endowments. The bill provides $20,000,000 a year for the arts and humanities, an event of major importance in the history of the arts in the United States. Nothing this massive for the arts has ever been done by the federal government. Even though the $20,000,000 annual appropriation is small when we compare it with the appropriation for the National Science Foundation, the latter began in a smaller way too; I have hopes that years from now the arts and humanities will reach, to some extent, the affluence of the National Science Foundation.

Returning again to the Art USA, Now exhibit, isn't it interesting that though we read occasionally in the newspapers of the many products being exported to many areas of the world by Wisconsin corporations, this is the first time that we have an art exhibition of international stature being exported by a Wisconsin institution--a significant event for the arts in our state!

And now, finally, a very brief listing of the many other ways The Johnson Foundation has influenced the cultural climate of Wisconsin. The Foundation has brought world-famous arts personalities to the state, often to conferences at Wingspread: Sir Tyrone Guthrie; Anton Dolin, internationally-known choreographer; Sir Basil Spence, the architect for the new Coventry Cathedral in Britain; such leading sculptors as Ibram Lassaw, Berto Lardera, and Milton Hebal, and such prominent literary figures as Glenway Wescott and Kenneth Burke. And here is just a sampling of the conferences which have been held at Wingspread and which have given national attention to Wisconsin and the arts: in 1962, a national conference, Problems in the Arts in the United States; in 1964, two conferences: The Path of the Contemporary Sculptor and The Sights and Sounds of Contemporary Art; in 1965, The Problems and Potentials of the Midwest Artist. At UWM, my own university, The Johnson Foundation has supported our Summer Evenings of Music series and in the summer of 1964, sponsored An Evening of Opera.

The above listing is, of course, not complete but it does give you a general idea of the important contribution made by Wingspread and The Johnson Foundation to culture in Wisconsin. The impression I hope I have given, in this short talk, is that here we have a generous beginning for assistance to the arts in our state.

There is a new America every morning when we wake up. It is upon us whether we like it or not. This new America is the sum of the many small changes--a new subdivision here, a new school there, a new industry where yesterday there had been vacant swamp land--changes that add up to a broad transformation of our lives. Our task is to guide these changes for, though change is inevitable, change for the better is a full-time job.
