

The daily cardinal. Vol. XXXIX, No. 188 June 8, 1930

Madison, Wisconsin: University of Wisconsin, June 8, 1930

<https://digital.library.wisc.edu/1711.dl/YSX6ORO7MD6K38E>

<http://rightsstatements.org/vocab/InC/1.0/>

The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

The Daily Cardinal

"Complete Campus Coverage"

VOL. XXXIX, NO. 188

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN, MADISON, SUNDAY, JUNE 8, 1930

PRICE 5 CENTS

Judges Select Jerome Zibell As Drum Major

Golf Darbo Places Second in Contest to Choose Leader

Jerome W. Zibell '31 won first place in the drum major contest held Saturday morning in Music hall before a judging committee consisting of Maj. E. W. Murphy, director of the university concert band, Capt. George A. Miller, Prof. Margaret N. H'Doubler, of the physical education department, Carl P. Olson '30, retiring president of the combined bands, Russell Moberly, director of the second band, and Leroy Klose, director of the R.O.T.C. band.

Rolf E. Darbo '31 won second place in the contest. Eight men, seven of them students in the university and one a prospective freshman, tried out for the position.

Zibell who will assume the official baton for the 1930-31 season is a member of the second band at the present time. He is over six feet tall, and has had previous experience as a drum major. Darbo was formerly a cymbal player in the second band.

Candidates were judged for their appearance, their agility, their grace, and their sense of rhythm.

Dorm Builders Endow Award

Ann Emery Latin Scholarship for Freshman Women Gives $250

A Latin scholarship of $250, open to competition to freshman women who intend to take up residence in Ann Emery hall, new dormitory for university women, in September, 1930, has been donated by the builders and executives of Ann Emery hall, it was announced Saturday.

Bascom hall has been selected for the place of the examination, which will be conducted at 9 a. m., September 17, 1930. The examination for this first award will be based on the fourth year's work in Latin, translations from Virgil, easy prose composition based on the vocabulary of Caesar and Cicero, and easy sight translations.

The following requirements must be met by each young woman competing in the examination in order to be eligible:

1. She must be accredited for admission to the University of Wisconsin.

2. She must have offered four acceptable entrance credits in Latin.

3. She must be entering as a freshman without previous college study in Latin and with no more than six credits of college study in any other subjects.

4. She must have made application to be admitted to the examination by September 1, 1930.

Kearney Attacks Expensive Notions Originating Here

Thomas M. Kearney sounded the keynote for the state Democratic convention in Milwaukee Saturday when he launched a violent attack on the results of 30 years of Republican supremacy in Wisconsin.

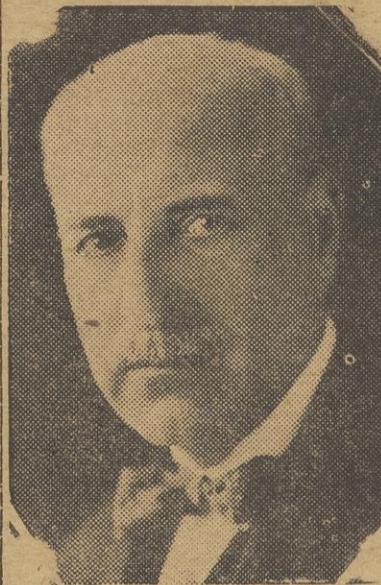

Rapping the university, Kearney stated: "It ought not to be transformed into a sort of hot-bed where all sorts of expensive notions are started. It was designed to supplement and complete a public school system for the people of this state. It is not desirable that we enter into a sort of world competition with the purpose of attracting students."

The Kohler trial, chain stores, chain banking, and high administration expenditures all received their share of oratorical fire. "The full dinner-pail," farm relief, and the tariff were all branded as cheap ballyhoo.

NOTICE

This paper marks the final edition of The Daily Cardinal for the 1929-1930 school year. The first edition of the Summer Session Cardinal will appear June 21.

Julius E. Olson Retires After 46 Years' Service

JULIUS E. OLSON

After 46 continuous years of teaching and activity in university functions, Prof. Julius Emil Olson, of the department of Scandinavian literature, taught his last class Saturday morning.

At the age of 71 Prof. Olson is not anxious to cease teaching, he said Saturday, but other work demands his attention, and academic duties have left insufficient time for research in his chosen field of ancient Norse writings.

Whether or not Prof. Olson will continue his administrative duties as chairman of the committee on loans and scholarships, and as head of the committee on public functions, will be decided at a meeting of the board of regents June 20, when Prof. Olson's successor will be appointed. Recommendations for the position will be made at a meeting Monday morning.

Julius Olson entered the university as a freshman in 1876, left for a time to make expenses by teaching school at Cambridge, and returned with in-

(Continued on page 2)

Five Badger Track Stars Place in Meet

(Special to The Daily Cardinal)
Stagg Field, Chicago, June 7—Five Wisconsin track stars garnered honors in the national track and field championships held at Stagg field of the University of Chicago, Saturday.

The Trojans of the University of Southern California won the national meet with a total of 55 27-70 th points. Washington university was second with 40 points and Iowa of the Big Ten took third with 30 1-6 th points.

Art Frisch and Otto Sell of the Badger team placed third and sixth respectively in the hammer throw. Ted Shaw tied for second place in the high jump with seven others leaping 6 feet 2 inches.

Sammy Behr placed fifth in the shot put with a heave of 48 feet 6 1/2 inches. Bill Henke, captain of next year's Wisconsin track team, ran on the winning central states one-mile relay.

The summaries of the meet are as follows:

100-yard dash—Won by Wykoff, Southern California; Simpson, Ohio State, second; Toppino, Loyola of Louisiana, third; Tolan, Michigan, fourth; Bracey, Rice Institute, fifth; (Continued on page 2)

Summer Session Schedules To Be Distributed Next Week

Time tables for the summer session will be given out beginning next week, according to an announcement made Saturday by Dean Goodnight. No bulletins will be given out, as the time tables will replace them.

Dean of Women Will Be Replaced By Board--Rumor

It has been rumored that the board of regents, at its regular commencement meeting, June 20, is to consider the appointment of a new dean of women to replace the present dean, F. Louise Nardin, who may leave the university.

The board will also consider the successors for Dean Harry R. Richards, of the law school, who died last May; Dean Harry Russell, of the college of agriculture who recently presented his resignation; and Julius E. Olson, professor of Scandinavian languages and litera-

(Continued on page 2)

Leather Bound Octies Go to 14; Contest Planned

Bound red leather volumes of the 1929-30 Octopus will be ready Wednesday for the following persons, according to Gordon Swarthout '31, editor of the magazine: Ralph Parkin '31, Irv Tressler '31, Franklin Clark '31, and Gordon Swarthout.

Less elaborately bound copies will be given to Paul Cassidy '31, Holley Smith '31, James Watrous '31, Carl Buss '30, Frank Unger '32, Samuel Steinman '32, Ed Sinaiko '32, (Continued on page 2)

Ben Duggar

"Darling, Love Me" Heard Nightly in Amorous Scenes

"Darling, tell me you love me." Every night at 10:35 p. m. these words are heard by residents of Sterling court, leaning eagerly out of their windows to hear every whispered syllable of the window-courtship which takes place at 426 Sterling court.

A young lady residing at that address, when herded in by the housemother at 10:30, appears immediately thereafter every night in the window of her room, outside of which her loyal swain awaits her.

"Darling," the girl began Monday, Tuesday and Friday nights, varying the other nights with "dearest," "darling, tell me you love me."

"I love you," he answers, not too enthusiastically.

"I love you too," from the window, with a talkie-sigh. "Say again that you love me."

A slightly self-conscious re-avowal. "But you don't speak with conviction

"the lady in the window complains, and it begins all over again.

Friday night, the balcony scene was interrupted for some unknown reason when the young lady with a hissing "shhh" drew down her window and disappeared, the young man departing soon after.

When the young man failed to appear until 11 p. m. one evening, residents of the court were in spasms of fear he had been fatally injured, but his late appearance was greeted with sighs of relief from all the neighboring windows.

The young lady's voice according to witnesses, is of such emotional strength, that her conversations with her cavalier preclude studying for people in the surrounding four houses and make eavesdropping, if listening to a shouted avowal may be so called not only a pleasure but a duty.

Frank Outlines Five Department Combine For Animal Research

Named Chairman

EINAR R. DANIELS

Daniels Heads 1930 Christmas Festival Group

Einar R. Daniels '31 has been named chairman of the 1930 Christmas festival by Franklin T. Mathias, it was made known Saturday afternoon when the 1930-31 Y. M. C. A. cabinet was announced. The Christmas festival is an annual event in which the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. cooperate.

Freshman work is to be directed by Lorrie Douglas '30. An extensive program of freshman work will be carried out in the fall of 1930.

The system of getting freshmen together in discussion groups and social gatherings has been worked out and will be under the direction of Douglas and John Parks '30, freshman secretary.

The entire cabinet for the year of 1930-1931 consists of Lorrie Douglas '30, freshman work; Einar R. Daniels '31, Christmas festival; James Johnson '32, public relations; Justus Roberts '31, personnel; and Allan Willson '32 and Stephen Brouwer '32.

There are several positions on the cabinet which have not yet been filled. Men who are interested in working with the cabinet are invited to get in touch with C. V. Hibbard or Mathias. There are still opportunities to be of service in the working out of the Y. M. C. A. plans for the coming year, according to Mathias.

Badgers Arrive at Annex; Will Be Distributed Soon

The first group of 1931 Badgers with names on the covers have arrived at the Union annex, where they will be distributed during the remainder of the week. Those belonging to students whose names are included in the letters "B" to "H" have already arrived, and the rest of the alphabet will arrive today in readiness for distribution tomorrow from the Union annex porch. The annex office will be open every day from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Prof. Knaplund to Remain; Paxson Silences Rumors

Refuting rumors that Prof. Paul A. Knaplund, of the history department, contemplates leaving the university for another college, Prof. F. L. Paxson, head of the department of history, stated Saturday that Prof. Knaplund will be here next year to conduct his regular courses. The courses given by Prof. Knaplund include three English history courses, English history 5, "England Under the Tudors," and "The British Empire Since 1815."

Wisconsin Institute to Include Five Agricultural College Divisions

Plans for a Wisconsin Institute of Animal Research, comprised of the departments of animal husbandry, veterinary science, poultry, genetics, and agricultural chemistry, were described by Pres. Glenn Frank before 500 delegates to the Farmers' Field day Saturday afternoon.

"The administration of the university," he said, "will sit down with these five departments—and maybe other related interests—to consider problems of staff and equipment, not in terms of five different departments, but in terms of what Wisconsin farmers need to have done in the field of animal research."

"A Turn in the Road"

"That is to say," he continued, "we shall think in terms of a single program of animal research, rather than in terms of five departmental programs. This, I think, is something more than a mere shuffling of budgetary cards, more than a change of labels, more than a paper reorganization. It is a turn in the road as far as animal research at the University of Wisconsin is concerned."

The institute, according to Pres. Frank, will seek to focus its resources on the study of these problems of live stock breeding, feeding and disease control that are related to the prosperity of the live stock farmers of the state. It will serve, he said, as a genuine service agency to the live stock interests of Wisconsin.

Praises Russell

"We shall not, of course, lessen our energies in the exploration of those deeper and more fundamental forms of animal research which come under the heading of pure science," Pres. Frank continued.

Lauding Harry Russell, recently re-signed dean of the college of agriculture, he stated, "In the 23 years of (Continued on page 2)

Graduate Group Names Officers

Shands, Leahy, Templin, Beyer, Covert Direct Club Next Year

The appointment of Hazel Shands, Alfred Leahy, Vera Templin, Gertrude Beyer, and Lloyd Covert to the Graduate council was announced Saturday by the outgoing officers.

The Graduate council is the governing board of the Graduate club and its members are ex-officio members of the graduate house committee of the Memorial Union.

The retiring members of the council are: Earl Hildebrand, Elizabeth Lynn, Philippa Gilchrist, Marie Love, Gertrude Beyer, Carl Johnson, and Dale Chapman.

The council was instituted last year to take the place of executive officers. With the construction of the Memorial Union building, officers assumed the duties of a graduate house committee to maintain and regulate graduate activities in the Union and in the specially designated Graduate room.

Seniors Establish Fund to Provide Art Exhibit Prizes

The establishment of a fund for an annual prize for student work in art, painting, modeling, and the graphic arts, will be the memorial project of the class of 1930. Walter Ela, chairman of the committee, announced Saturday.

The prize will be known as the Class of 1930 award, and will offer in the field of student activity in art work what the annual Lewis prize and other awards have offered in literary fields.

The prize is to be given in conjunction with the annual exhibit of student art work, such as is now on display in the Reception room. At each annual exhibit a jury will select the best work displayed.

Five Card Track Stars Take Places

(Continued from page 1)
Leland, Texas Christian, sixth. Time, 108.4.

Frisch Third

Hammer throw — Won by Campbell, Michigan; Gilchrist, Iowa, second; Frisch, Wisconsin, third; Youngerman, Iowa, fourth; Hart, Iowa, fifth; Sell, Wisconsin, sixth. Distance, 162 feet 8 1/4 inches.

220-yard dash — Won by Simpson, Ohio State; Leland, Texas Christian, second; Tolan, Michigan, third; Farmer, North Carolina, fourth; Chicago, fifth; Root, Chicago, sixth. Time: 20.7.

Behr Is Fifth

Shot put — Won by Rother, Stanford; Krenz, Stanford, second; Rhea, Nebraska, third; Jessup, Washington, fourth; Behr, Wisconsin, fifth; Bausch, Kansas, sixth. Distance, 51 feet 1 1/4 inches.

Shaw Tied for Second

Running high jump — Won by Stewart, Southern California; 10 men tied for second place as follows: Jones, Ball State Teachers'; Ehrlich, Kansas State Agricultural; Dows, Mississippi A. and M.; Felbinger, Ohio State; Strong, Southwestern State Teachers'; Brady, Louisville; Shelby, Oklahoma; Vanosdel, Southern California; Shaw, Wisconsin; Miller, Illinois. Height, 6 feet 3 1/4 inches.

Animal Research Group Planned

(Continued from Page 1)

Dean Russell's administration of the college of agriculture, the emphasis has been placed on men rather than on brick and mortar. As a result today Wisconsin has an unprecedently able group of scientists in charge of its laboratories.

Hart Also Speaks

Approximately 500 Wisconsin farmers attended the field day. Prof. Edwin B. Hart, of the agricultural chemistry department, addressed a group in the dairy barn pavilion on "Mineral Food for Livestock." Prof. Hart has done original research in this field. H. G. Wilson, of the Chicago stock exchange spoke to another group in the stock pavilion on "Contracting for the Future Sale of Hogs."

Programs for the wives of the assembled farmers were given in the home economics building under the auspices of the department. Subjects discussed included landscape, gardening, interior decoration and dietetics.

Octopus Awards Volumes to Staff

(Continued from Page 1)
Nils Hansell '32, Ben Druggar '32, and Maxwell Krasno '32.

A series of short short stories will be run next year. Writers of stories which must be from 700 to 900 words in length, may send them to Swarthout, at the Octopus office during the summer. The competition is open to all students in the university. The stories may be upon any subject, not necessarily funny, but must "pack a punch," Swarthout stated Saturday.

Strand Manager Invites

Civil War Veterans Free

Because he believes that the pleasures of the remaining Civil war veterans are at best short-lived, Doc Miller, manager of the Strand, extends a standing invitation to all veterans of this war to attend any performance at his theater free of charge. Although Mr. Miller is a native Mississippian, whose ancestors fought with the south during Civil war, he has retained no feeling of antagonism and is interested in bringing pleasure into the lives of the old vets. Members of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war recently passed resolutions of thanks to Mr. Miller, according to H. Sigelko.

THETA CHI

Will Open Its House to MEN During the Summer Session

Situated just off Lake Mendota with ample pier facilities

Limited Number of Rooms Available

Room and Board
Together or Separately

For further information or application call
R. Sullivan F. 2247 144 Langdon

Call B-6586

Radder or Ackman

Board Considers New Appointments

(Continued from page 1)

turc, who Saturday announced his resignation from the faculty.

The report of the curriculum committee, recently approved by the faculty, is to be brought before the board meeting, and it will have to be approved by the members before it goes into effect. The recommendations of the committee on loans and scholarships for the recipients of the legislative scholarships will also be presented to the board of regents for consideration.

Is your PEN ready for
Exams?
Have it repaired in 24 hours or less at
Rider's Pen Shop
656 STATE ST.

Contract for 50,000 Scenic Booklets Is Set

Mineral Point — A contract for printing 50,000 booklets advertising the beauty and historic sites of Southwestern Wisconsin was let by the Southwestern Wisconsin Scenic association to the Prairie du Chien Courier, managed by H. E. Lowe, recently. Following were the members of the association present at the meeting: Pres. D. E. Doolittle, Lancaster; E. F. Conley, Darlington; Ben Marcus. Muscoda; and A. F. Bishop and D. M. Morgan, Mineral Point.

The trick is to find your pipe and tobacco

YOU will discover the full pleasure of pipe-smoking when you hit on the tobacco that really suits you in the pipe that really fits you. Then you can light up and lean back and cross your feet on the mantel or wherever, and purr and smoke — how you can smoke!

The trick is to find your pipe and your tobacco. Nobody can find them for you, and until you find them you must go on groping in outer darkness — but have you tried Edgeworth?

Edgeworth may be just the tobacco you're looking for. It has a certain distinctive flavor that men like; it is slow-burning, cool — it will not bite your tongue; and it is rich with the savor, fragrant with the aroma, of fine old burley blended exactly right.

Check us up — try Edgeworth in a good pipe. We'll send you some helpful hints on pipes, and we'll even send you some Edgeworth, a generous free packet of it to try, for nothing but the coupon. That's meeting you more than halfway, isn't it? We know our Edgeworth!

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO

LARUS & BRO. CO.
100 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.
I'll try your Edgeworth. And I'll try it in a good pipe.
Name _____
Street _____
Town and State _____
Now let the Edgeworth come! V30

THE SIGMA NU HOUSE

Open to MEN

for the . . .

SUMMER SESSION

An exceptionally attractive summer location for a reasonable charge. The house is open by appointment for your inspection. An early reservation will allow a choice of rooms.

B. 7528

625 N. Henry

Fair Prices . Friendly Service

Cash in

at BROWN'S on your

USED TEXTS

Drawing Sets and Supplies

"The longer you keep a text-book the less
it's worth"

We will buy ALL of your books, for CASH, or a Liberal Trade Allowance

BROWN'S

BOOK SHOP

CORNER STATE and LAKE STREETS

Convenient Rooms For Men

One-half Block from Lake

In Center of Student Section

Large Automobile Parking Space

$18 for SUMMER SCHOOL SESSION

... at ...

DELTA SIGMA PHI HOUSE

210 LANGDON

Call B-6586

Good Luck and Good Bye!

Your Room Mate

Must not be neglected.

An article selected from our stock of Collegiate Gifts will surely please.

Graduation
Presents

for FRIEND GRADUATE

are easily selected from our stocks of

Collegiate Gifts

Graduation
Cards—
Thank You
Cards

It has been a pleasure to serve you during the past year . . . and here's hoping we will have the pleasure of serving you again, often and soon.

Sincere wishes from all of us . . .

W. S. Gatewood

Gerald W. Bratlie

Milo Hansen

Walter M. Gibson

Cleo Drinkhouse

EXAM
SUPPLIES

*Everything
You Need*

Rent a good book to read—pass the time away between terms . . . 3c a day.

Special
on Fountain Pens

98c

Obsolete stock—All first class new pens formerly sold from $1.75

to

$3.50

SAVE MONEY . . .

ORDER USED BOOKS

for your

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES

We ship books to correspondence students every day; let us supply your needs in used books. We pay postage . . . and ship C. O. D. if desired.

All . Orders : Shipped : Same . Day : Received

The Daily Cardinal

"Complete Campus Coverage"

Founded April 4, 1892, as official daily newspaper of the University of Wisconsin, owned and controlled by the student body. Published every morning except Monday by The Daily Cardinal company. Printed by Cardinal Publishing company.

Entered as second class matter at the post-office, Madison, Wis.

SUBSCRIPTIONS—By carrier, $3 per year, $1.75 per semester. By mail, $3.50 per year, $2 per semester.

OFFICES—Business office, open 9-12, 1:30-5, B. 6606, and day Editorial office, B. 250, 3rd floor Memorial Union. Night editorial office, 740 Langdon street, B. 250. Publishing plant, G. W. Tanner, manager, 740 Langdon street, B. 1137.

BOARD OF CONTROL: C. David Connolly, pres.; Orrin Evans, vice-pres.; Margaret Murphy, sec.; Steve Brouwer, treas.; Harriet Beach; Herbert O. Tschudy, George Wesendonk, ex-officio; faculty advisory board: Grant M. Hyde, chairman, Don R. Fellows, J. C. Gibson.

EDITORIAL STAFF

EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Herbert O. Tschudy
Managing Editor	Adriana Cribeske
Contributing Editor	E. Forrest Allen
Night Manager	Casimir Scheer
Personnel Director	Elizabeth Maier

NEWS—James Johnston, Samuel Steinman, associate editors; Assistants, Ruth Biehausen, Marcia Todd; Special Writers, G. Weiswasser, A. B. Watson, F. Noer, E. Thompson, M. Fagen, N. Mayer; Reporters, A. R. Meyer, F. Strenge, R. Wilson, M. Williams, P. Sutton, D. Jennings, J. L. Jones, M. Henshaw, J. Greverus; General News Staff, I. Russakov, G. L. Hall, M. Webb, H. Hockett, B. Kline, C. Irwin, T. Winston, E. Jacobs, K. C. Flory, B. Kohn, R. Douglass, N. Watrous, E. Chuse, M. A. Ripslinger.

DESK—Editors: Ed. C. Marsh, J. Parr Godfrey, Warren Hyde, William Bradford, Jerry Michel, Seymour Stowe, Oliver Wynn; Assistants, H. Harding, R. Padock, E. Vining, S. Alschuler, J. Reynolds, L. Marston, B. Larson, P. Goeltz, H. Erlanger, R. Martin, V. Loomis, E. Louard, H. Ploetz, O. Zahn, R. Homberger, J. Roethe, M. Fineberg.

EDITORIALS—Hoyt Trowbridge, chairman; G. James Fleming, Martin T. Keaveny.

SPORTS—Morris Zenoff, editor; Intramurals, Eugene Schiomeitz; Henry Schowalter, George Kroncke; Women's, Bernice Horton; Ben Malkin, desk.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT—Catherine Pegg, editor; news editors, Lorna Douglass, Charlotte Berenson; reporters, D. Webster, E. Geffert, B. Berenson, L. Bragnick, F. Cavanaugh, M. Johnson, R. Steinmetz; women's features, Winifred Arnold; assistants, E. Thomas, F. McCay, O. Steenis, F. Wright, C. Lockwood; Marjorie Swaford.

MAGAZINE—J. Gunnar Back, editor; Joseph Edelstein, associate editor; assistants, Harry Wood, Dorothea Joy Griesbach, Lyman Moore; theaters, Don Kline.

RADIO—Harrison Roddick, director; Don Kline, publicity.

MORGUE—Frederic Cramer.

BUSINESS STAFF

BUSINESS MANAGER	George Wesendonk
Associate Managers	Jerome Bernstein, Dan B. Riley
Local Advertising Manager	Fred J. Wagner
Collection Manager	Warren Goldman
Circulation Manager	Ralph Lemmer
National Advertising Manager	David S. Brown
Promotion Manager	Ruth E. Smith
Associate Advertising Manager	Roger Minahan
Associate Collection Managers	Marion Worthing, William Trukenbord
Associate Promotion Managers	Richard Krieg, Jane Robinson
Assistant Promotion Editor	Margaret Pennington
Advertising Feature Writer	Lea Rosenblatt
Collection Assistants	Margaret Meek, Elmira Brown
Advertising Assistants	Carl Kaplan, Phyllis Mostov, Hilton Simon, William Tobin, Bill Kirk, Joseph Bernstein, Charles Platz, James Cowan
Circulation Assistants	Jessie Loomans, Roy Tulane, Walter Baird
Office Assistants	Mary Slightam, Dorothy Fox, Babette Levitt, Bernice Geffert, Barbara Kohn, Adaline Lee

DESK EDITOR WARREN C. HYDE

SUNDAY, JUNE 8, 1930.

Three Farewells

THE NEW STAFF'S apprenticeship of the last six weeks is still so close to us that it is difficult adequately to appraise it. It is because of this that the summer vacation is especially valuable. We shall be able to use that interval for considering the work we have done, for seeking to discover our faults and their remedies.

Except for a few high spots our training period has been rather uneventful. One staff member was threatened with a beating for printing what he felt certain was the truth; E.F.A. has helpfully continued to shed light on faculty maneuverings; we have been told that our editorial attitude on war reflects neither university nor state opinion.

Among things we have approved were the revision of W. S. G. A. house rules, the permission given the university peace council to use Music hall on Memorial day, the moves made to retain the beauty of Langdon street. We have been displeased by the railroading of the alumni investigating committee's senior class report, by Hesperia's suggestions for curricular reform, and by efforts to commercialize fraternity row.

If, during these last six weeks, we have made mistakes or assumed unfortunate attitudes, we can perhaps blame our youth. And, though that is a convenient excuse, it is none the less a true one. It is possible, of course, that when we write life's swan song some two score or more years hence we shall accuse a variant of youthfulness—childishness—for our errors. Even then we may be right. For after all we can but take the stand that what our reason tells us is the best. We hope that we have followed and shall continue to follow our convictions.

To our temporary successors, the staff of the summer Cardinal, we leave the task of carrying on the paper in the manner they feel is appropriate. They will have a chance to present their viewpoints while we are refreshing our own in preparation for our longer term of work.

In thus taking leave, even for a short time, of the Cardinal and the university, we need not become sentimental or maudlin. It is true that we have enjoyed our work, and that sometimes we have thought our Cardinal activities of more personal value than many courses on the hill. Although we are, therefore, sorry to leave, we are at the same time fretting to get away, to enjoy a change, perhaps to encounter some new adventure. Setting out for somewhere else—wherever that may be—inevitably raises our spirits.

So now to examinations, and then the open road!

—M. K.

* * *

THE TIME FOR making up the balance sheet is at hand. Just a few more days of reviewing, examinations, and packing, and the trains and motor cars will be carrying off their cargoes of visionary youth. This is the period when we are always inclined to reflect. What has the year been worth? What benefits have we received? What are the hopes for the morrow?

Success may be measured in different ways, of course. The constant devotees of the social whirl may regard the year as successful because it meant half-a-dozen formals, several motorized rendezvous to Sunset Point, and election to Crystal Cross or Yellow Spades; for George Little's boys success may mean a baseball championship, a winning track team, a not-to-be-bellittled basketball quintet, and an ever-rising field house; and to the Phi Beta Kappas, the Phi Kappa Phis, and the Phi Eta Sigmas, success may be spelled with A's, B-plusses, and B's.

We have no particular grudge against the social devotees, the athletes, or the Phi Beta Kappas. There is room for all of us, but we wonder if we do not become so entangled in the meshes of the means to the end and the inessentials that we totally lose sight of the real goal. Education becomes a process to which we expose ourselves partially, rather than a well-rounded growth into the finer and larger use of all the faculties—physical, mental, and social. Our extra-interests pull the wool over our eyes and we fail to see the compelling issues and to tackle the big problems; because, to us, they do not exist. We are just living in our own little worlds of self-complacency, while outside questions of state and of human relations loom, questions that before long must get their answers from people even like the students of the University of Wisconsin.

Beyond the shadows of Lincoln terrace lark undue poverty, disease, class and racial animosities, international unrest, and more. In the judicious handling of these the best thinking and doing will be needed.

If the gods would listen to mere words, we could say a prayer, alike for those who leave with their sheepskins and for those who will return. The prayer would be something like this:

"Help us to think straight, O great spirits, and deliver us from our own loose thinking . . . Help us to live aright and make us brave to go among our fellows and live in such wise as will make for a better world where men and nations can live together in peace."

—G. J. F.

HOW STUPID we all are about farewells; We wave a handkerchief, with tears running down our cheeks; we send off flowers and bon voyage letters and boxes of indigestible creams; we weep and we write sad letters and we wonder pathetically if we shall ever meet again.

It is all so silly. Even with those who matter, why shouldn't we say, simply, "So long"; and grin and wave a hand and be off our separate ways? Or perhaps that too would be sentimental in its own way; perhaps the most rational parting is no parting at all, but simply a meeting like any other meeting, in which one talks of the things one has always talked about, laughs at the same old private jokes, sings snatches of the old songs, whispers behind a hand as one has always done, executes a few ridiculous dance-steps across the floor, puts on the usual tie, preens oneself before the mirror, and smokes as usual much too many cigarettes.

And how much more ridiculous it is to bid a sad and lingering farewell to an institution, to an abstraction. How puerile it would be for us to end this year with a gesture of adieu, as if something really tremendous had happened, and that almost anything might happen before we came together again!

And so, to those who have read what we have had to say in these columns—and we know there are not a few of you—, and to those who have not read us—and we know there are not a few of you—, may we say: in a few days we shall go off to our summering, and all of you off to yours; we shall not miss you, you will not miss us; perhaps on very sleepy afternoons you too may think of some of those things; next fall, we shall be back, and you; and we shall write again, and you shall read again, or you shall once more fail to read; but we shall go on, and you, and all of us, and the summer will be as if it had not happened, and our return as if it were simply another meeting on a Thursday preceded by a Wednesday and followed by a Friday, and there will be classes and parties and bull-sessions and editorials; and we shall be a little older, all of us, but the lake will still be here, and Bascom hall, and Observatory hill, and the piers; and perhaps we shall be wearing suits with only two buttons, or skirts perhaps an inch longer: but everything will be as it has always been between us. So: until Thursday! —H. T.

* * *

"Long dresses are intended for teas, formal dinners, and balls. Never, never have I intended them for the masses. I have never before been so upset."—M. Jean Patou.

* * *

"There is no physiological basis for spring fever. It's a tradition that went out with hoop skirts."—Dr. M. E. Winchester.

* * *

"I would rather have all the risks from free discussion of sex than the greater risks run by a conspiracy of silence."—Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang.

The World's Window

By Graysen Kirk

GERMANY SEEMS to be somewhat alarmed over the decline in the birthrate during the past year. The 1929 figures show that only 1,147,000 children were born in the Reich during the 12-months period. This is proportionately the smallest annual increase in population at any time since 1841 when vital statistics were first recorded.

In view of the gravity of the situation a Federal committee composed of reputable scientists has been assigned to prepare a report, showing some positive governmental program for the remedying of the decline. The committee, headed by Professor Grotjahn, sociologist of the University of Berlin, has decided to recommend that the government pay a bonus for children. This will take the form of an annuity to the parents extending over the entire period of infancy. The committee has been convinced that the cost of living and of rearing children has been the chief cause for the slump in the birth rate. By the system of governmental aid to parents the former ratio can, they believe, be restored.

Germany, in common with several continental countries, has long possessed a system of social insurance which provides payments of medical charges attending child birth and supplementary payments for milk and such special foods as the child may need. The new program will extend this benefit over the entire period of childhood.

The vital aspect of such a program is, of course, that of securing funds for such a gigantic enterprise. The recommendations of the committee are based on a policy of heavy taxation of bachelors and childless married couples. They feel rather sure that in this way an adequate sum can be raised. In any event they feel that a large sacrifice is justifiable if by means of it the number of births can be increased by a hundred thousand a year—the increase necessary to preserve intact the present population of 64,000,000.

SOME OBSERVERS of the press are of the opinion that America is about to enter the lists in an endeavor to capture the supremacy of the world in nitrogen production. These predictions are based on the meager reports which have come out of the building of the Hopewell, Va., plant of the Allied Chemical and Dye corporation. This plant, which is to be completed some time during the present year, is supposed to be capable of producing 400,000 tons of nitrogen a year.

This is, in itself, by no means enough to capture world supremacy for America. In 1928 we produced 184,000 tons. The Hopewell plant will increase our production to nearly 600,000. But in 1928 Germany produced 740,000 tons and is reported to be planning large production increases. Hence the American plant is supposed to be a first step in our bid for supremacy. Its method of fixation is a closely guarded secret and, if it proves successful, will undoubtedly be extended to additional production units.

Meanwhile Chile, the third source of nitrogen, is reported to be planning a drastic cut in the heavy export tax on nitrates which has, up to now, been such a source of profit to the treasury of the country.

PRIME MINISTER MacDONALD has won his victory over the Moseley left-wing critics but he is evidently quite concerned lest this rift within the ranks of labor be widened enough to afford the Conservatives a valuable point of attack. Such, at least, are the conclusions of most publicists over the latest cabinet change, i. e., the creation of a new department for the Dominions, and the appointment of J. H. Thomas to this post.

Until last week the Dominions and Colonies have been administered by a single department. Mr. Thomas has been Lord Privy Seal, appointed to that post largely in order to leave his hands free to cope with the unemployment situation. His failure to take measures proposed by the left-wing Laborites has led to such violent criticism that the creation of a new department and his shift to it undoubtedly represents the decision of the government to remove him from all connection with unemployment control.

To such observations, however, the MacDonald government has a ready denial. The separation of the departments has long been needed. Thomas is well prepared for his new task, since he was at the Colonial post during the 1924 Labor ministry. And, finally, he retains his position on the Unemployment committee.

Despite the governmental evasions the change undoubtedly does represent the conviction of the cabinet leaders that the unemployment situation has in no way been solved and that it should be attempted by other means and under other direction. It will be interesting to notice the extent to which the new policy will represent that of the Moseley faction.

Merchant ships are all potential auxiliary cruisers: were all regular men-o'-war abolished, there would still be naval power.—Captain N. H. Gross, U. S. N.

By measuring a man by outward standards, by flattering for ulterior ends, by an insolent and contemptuous indifference toward "common people" we are dishonoring man and insulting God.—Dr. James Moffat.

* * *

"I've never killed anybody in my life, but I've often read obituary notices with great satisfaction."—Clarence Darrow.

SKYROCKETIC

The room stops spinning and I can make out a chair, a dresser and a sign beginning "Out of respect for the 18th Amendment—". Another Sunday in a hotel room. But Sunday's not such a bad day—there's breakfast—Grapefruit for an eye opener, then dilemmas stewed in their own juice.

School is over and there's all summer to decide whether to be a Rocketeer or a gentleman. And I won't have to watch the Theta in French 21 trying to appear intelligent, or the Tri Delt junior in Econ quiz shocking the only other girl in the room, a Tri Delt pledge, by flirting—and very poorly, too—with all of the boys except me. And there'll be no more of Bob Calkins pulling neckties, or Bill Kieckhofer's haircut, or Chi Omegas in bathing suits.

But I must be up and find where I am. Maybe in the TKE hotel—or the Fess.

* * *

At last I've discovered what's the matter with the Kappas—They're just pretty girls trying to conceal it, but they can't make up their minds no matter how hard they try.

And don't be too hard on the Thetas either. They really lead a hand to mouth existence, and they have to get up early in the yawning to do that. And they don't all come from rich families—why, one of them was brought up by a Coleman.

* * *

By this time everyone must have heard the Farmer's Love Call—"There's manger in your eyes, Cherie—" Hay, Hay.

* * *

And the shoemaker's motto is well known, too. You remember it—"Awl for one and one for awl."

* * *

Here we have a bit of poesy, dedicated to a certain history prof.

POME

Years ago in far off Riga
I adored the Countess Vega.
Then the Revolution came;
Now she's just another dame.

* * *

Throw out the anchovy, Ivan, we're passing the bar.

* * *

As my eyes stray over the headlines of last week's Deet, I see:

"All Americans Down A. Chi O's."—and very nasty medicine it is.

Then what at first glace seems to be a fashion note:

"Century Enters Combination With Forum."

And on the sport page:

"Bobby Jones Defeats British Champion On Nineteenth Hole"—they had been playing golf up to this time.

* * *

Don't be conceited if your name happens to be Smart. Names don't mean much. There are exceptions like Professor Hatch of the Ag school, but consider the case of Prexy; or Dean Sellery—you don't see him stalking around.

* * *

You might like this bit that the K. A. T. just dragged in.
Gaze upon the Delta Zetas
Who never date the lowly Betas
But Theta Chi's and other guys;
Socially, they're bound to rise.

* * *

The world does progress. Only last week the Tri Delt house mother objected to girls returning from Roxbury leaving their beer bottles in the hallways.

* * *

But what we have been aiming at all semester is at last about to be concluded . . . The year is almost ended; and yet our hero had not been harmed. He shrugged his shoulders, and turned to glare at an innocent looking object in the clear, beautiful sky. It was

The RAMBLER

Complete
Campus
Coverage

This is a farewell column. You, who read on, remember that you have been forewarned.

Farewell . . . 'Tis a hard word to say . . . there is something terrifying about leaving Wisconsin . . . It's hard to leave for a summer interlude; it must be worse to leave forever . . . Back in our high school days, we closed our four years in print with the following: "You brace up. You hold back a tear. You whisper a harsche goodbye. A hearty handshake takes the place of words. You turn away. It is over. Farewell forever." . . . We still feel the same way about farewells.

1929-30 . . . The football crowds of the year before were missing . . . The field house was not started until basketball time . . . The statement on the last page of the coupon books was the standing joke of the year . . . The rah-rah age disappeared . . . We began to broadcast . . . William Ellery Leonard and Scott Holland Goodnight proved that they knew the art of letter-writing . . . Madison's usual icy winter . . . There was no spring . . . A parade of memories . . . Homecoming . . . The abolition of St. Pat's parade . . . Prom . . . Military ball . . . Venetian night and cur cup . . . The Haresfoot trip . . . All are memories.

People and incidents . . . Bill Steven '30, the editor who made the entire collegiate world doff its hat to The Daily Cardinal . . . Van Johnson '30, an election committee chairman, who was the apex of incorruptibility . . . The speech that came too late to win the Red Derby at the Gridiron banquet . . . The floats that spilled in the Venetian night parade . . . Walter Bubbert '30, who finally became president of Tripp hall . . . Bull Purnell's speech at The Daily Cardinal banquet . . . That party at Brandy's cottage . . . Bob Godley '30, who taught all of Madison how to write a zippy theater column . . . Scooping Iron Cross at midnight while the rain came down in torrents . . . Harry Thoma '28, the man who made the Wisconsin Alumni magazine a publication worth reading . . . Sally Owen '30, whose activities record made the campus gasp (She'll be a hostess at the Memunion next year . . . "The Button-Button Bugle," the most uncensored publication in the world . . . The Tree Surgeons, Dick Abert '30, Bob DeHaven '29, and Dave Wilcock '30, who created a sparkling radio skit . . . A student announcer, who makes the grade at par, Harrison Roddick '30 . . . A gentleman whose pranks could fill a column daily, "Sir" Robert Calkins '31 . . . A popular student and a popular coach, Frank Orth '28, who made Iron Cross and became a proud father . . . Messrs. Miller, Wood, Owens, Jones, and Horne of the Memunion staff, who helped us in lots of ways . . . The three Georges of the athletic department, Little, Levis, and Downer, who made a good many things possible for us . . . And we apologize to all the others for omitting them.

THE RAMBLER . . . celebrated its first birthday on Feb. 24 . . . gained mention in many a campus classroom and lecture . . . won a prize in the Venetian night parade . . . expanded to twice its size of last year . . . perfected an "It's News To Us" idea that was copied . . . coined the word, "Memunion," which is accepted as correct in many university circles . . . was imitated and burlesqued in other campus publications . . . inspired similar columns in other college dailies . . . prepared sidelights on all the football games of the 1929 season . . . received more letters than any other department of the paper . . . hopes to be at it again next year.

We promise . . . to expose every step contrary to student interests, wherever the facts are obtainable . . . to promote a revision of one line in "On Wisconsin" . . . to refrain from

14 Journalism Grads Hold Jobs

Work on Milwaukee Publications, School Announces

Saturday

Graduates of the journalism school who are employed in newspaper work in Milwaukee number 14 this year, according to an announcement from the journalism school Saturday.

The graduates are: Waldo R. Arnold, Milwaukee Journal; John G. Baker, Milwaukee Journal; Oliver T. Banton, Milwaukee Sentinel; Louise O. Cattol, Milwaukee Journal; Harriett N. Pettibone, Milwaukee Leader; Courtland R. Conlee, Milwaukee Journal.

Laurence C. Eklund, Milwaukee Journal; Ambrose D. Gannon, Milwaukee Journal; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd D. Gladfelter, Milwaukee Journal; J. Gordon Hecker, Milwaukee Journal; Florence J. Higgins, Milwaukee Journal; Paul A. Holmes, Milwaukee Sentinel; Mrs. Ralph B. Wackman (Suzanne M. Husting), Milwaukee Journal.

Journalism appointments and placements for next year have not been completed, Prof. Willard C. Bleyer said
Saturday.

malicious statements . . . to play no favorites . . . to bring the cream of campus incidents to light in the same spirit of fun "with charity toward all and malice toward none."

Thanks . . . Contributors, you've helped us a lot . . . Readers, you've inspired us a lot . . . Everybody . . .
Gosh, how we hate to say farewell . . .
Afterthought: We'll remember tomorrow, when it is too late, all the things we forgot today.

READ CARDINAL ADS

READ CARDINAL ADS

Actual classes may be over

but it is never too late to have your topics done by us —

COLLEGE TYPING COMPANY

B-3747 515 Campus Arcade

Chi Phi
Announces the Opening of Its Home for a Selected Group of Summer Session
Men &

This well-appointed new house, the utmost in club privileges, spacious lounging facilities, and an excellent cuisine, are available to you.

Charles Rehwald

James Bolton

Badger 5974

-- Offering room and board or board only --

Named Badgers

Here

Obtain yours at the Union
Annex Porch MONDAY
.... Opening at 9:00 a. m.

1931 Badger Open Sale Closing

BUY YOUR COPY NOW to take home with you. Let your folks see the beautiful side of your college life.

Daily Cardinal-WHA Listeners' Survey Shows Classical Demand

Roddick Promises to Satisfy Requests; Rambler, Tree Surgeons Popular

A request for more classical music is the outstanding result of The Daily Cardinal-WHA survey instituted to obtain the listeners' reactions to the student broadcast every Friday from 4 to 6 p. m.

A surprisingly high percentage of those quizzed displayed a desire for more classical music. Eud Roddick, radio chairman, promises to present more of this type of music in next year's programs, to comply with student requests.

Other results showed that the Rambler and Tree Surgeons were popular features during the last year. It is planned to continue these features next year. Variety will be the student hour keynote in the future.

Many students evinced a desire for more orchestras. This type of entertainment is probably the most difficult to arrange because the radio committee does not have sufficient funds at its disposal to hire bands. During the last few programs bands thought that the publicity they could get from the programs would be useless, according to Roddick.

A few adverse criticisms without definite suggestions for improvements were received in the survey but criticism on the whole was detailed and constructive, Roddick said.

SIGMA CHI

The following will hold offices at the Sigma Chi house next year: Edmund Chimelewski '31, president; John Tufts '32, vice-president; Thomas Desmond '31, secretary; Holley Smith '31, chapter editor; Henry Mulberger '32, chapter tribune; Douglas Simmons '32, historian; and Randell Copeland '31, house manager.

Contagious Diseases

Decline, Records Show
A decrease in the number of communicable diseases over previous months of this year is shown for May by the records in the city health department. There were reported 23 cases of scarlet fever, three diphtheria, 58 whooping cough, 100 measles and 23 chickenpox. In May, 1929, there were also reported 23 cases of scarlet fever but only 12 whooping cough and 98 measles. Forty-eight cases of chickenpox were reported as compared to 23 this year.

Fishing License Sale

Shows Lake Popularity
Popularity of Wisconsin lakes was proved recently with announcement by the state conservation commission that 34,000 non-resident fishing licenses have been sold since Jan. 1.

11 Women Will Go to Geneva

Y.W.C.A. Sends Delegation to Annual Conference

June 21-30

Eleven women have registered to attend the annual Y. W. C. A. conference to be held at Lake Geneva from June 21 to 30. They are: Alice Bolton '31, president of the university Y. W. C. A., Catherine Roddis '32, Dorothy Swendson '33, Margaret Pennington '33, Virginia Hovey '33, Kathleen Knipper '32, Merry Maud Wallace '32, Jean Sutherland '30, Janet Botts '32, Anne Kendall '31, and Theodora Peck '33.

Miss Elizabeth Tucker, who has just been appointed secretary for the Y. W. C. A. for the coming year, will also attend the conference. She has been doing Y. W. C. A. secretarial work in Nacogoches, Texas, during the past year.

About 600 girls from isocoleges of the nine states of the Geneva region attend the conference. The program includes addresses, forums, discussions, work shop hours, appreciation hours, and recreation. Nationally known educational leaders lead the discussions. One of the speakers will be Rev. George Collins of the Baptist Student house.

A cost picnic of 25 cents for the girls who have registered for the conference and for any other girls who are interested in going to Lake Geneva will be held today from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m. They will meet in the Y. W. C. A. office in the Union annex. Those who wish to go should call Anne Kendall at Fairchild 1003 before 5:30 p. m.

"Henry Ford's autobiography sold more than a million copies in Russia, and there were many instances where whole villages met to hear chapters of the book read."—W. C. White.

STUDENTS MAKE ME PROVE
I can make a ballroom dancer of you.
EVA MARIE KEHL
School of Dancing
The Short Cut to the Ballroom
Private lessons by appointment
Ballroom Classes Mon. and Thurs.
8 to 10 p. m.
SPECIAL SUMMER PRICE
$1.00 per lesson
F-8112 26 W. Mifflin
Over Union Trust Co.

SOCIETY

SAILS FROM QUEBEC

Gladys C. Bauer '30, the only woman student to be graduated from the course in pharmacy this semester, will sail July 9, from Quebec on the S. S. Empress of Scotland, for a tour of central and southern Europe.

PHI KAPPA TAU

Recently elected officers of Phi Kappa Tau are: Richard Orton, president; Harry Speich, vice-president;

Thomas Klien, secretary; William Elsman, treasurer; Robert Born, social chairman.

PHI DELTA THETA

The officers for the coming year at the Phi Delta Theta house are: Edward Taylor '31, president; Albert Martin Pre-Med 2, secretary; Walter Stringfellow '32, treasurer; and Mark Catlin '32, warden and rushing chairman.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Robert Dix '31 has been elected president of Phi Gamma Delta for next year. Stanley Heilin '31 will be the new secretary. Other officers are as follows: Fred Crawshaw '31, treasurer; Paul Wright '31, corresponding secretary; Neil McBeath '31, historian; William C. Powell '31, rushing chairman; and Whedon Slater '32, social chairman.

PHI CHI THETA

Esther Krug '31 was recently elected president of Phi Chi Theta, professional commerce sorority. Other officers are vice-president, Amy Gessner '31; secretary, Viola Miller '31; and treasurer, Anna Gessner '31.

We Extend Our Best Wishes for a Successful Completion of Your Examination

MEN'S Suits, Topcoats

1.00

CLEANED and PRESSED

LADIES'
Coats and Dresses

1.00 UP

FORD CLEANERS, Inc.

648 STATE

Right now we are having a summer sale which presents an opportunity for a substantial saving to you. Clothing, sweaters, ties--nearly everything is greatly reduced. Come in...

Pete E. J. Burns.

608 State St.

We Hope

You have enjoyed the past year, and we extend our best wishes for a happy vacation

Men's Suits and Topcoats $1.00

Cleaned and Pressed

Ladies' Coats and Dresses $1.00

Cleaned and Pressed

IT'S . NEW . WHEN . WE'RE . THRU

CASH and CARRY ONLY

College Cleaners

OPEN 7:30 a. m. — 6:30 p. m.

526 STATE

526 STATE

FEATURES

Daily Cardinal

SUNDAY MAGAZINE

COMMENT

Editor by J. GUNNAR BACK

Joseph Edelstein, Associate Editor

RUSSELL H. BAUGH

—DeLonge Photo

learning vicariously. The advantages on the other hand, which our experiment has seemed to contain arise out of the peculiar conditions under which our course is conducted.

One of the most enjoyable features of our experience has been the natural informality of our meetings. There does not exist among the members of a group who are intimately acquainted with each other the restraint which ordinarily constrains the spontaneity of a class. No hesitancy, sometimes not even courtesy, mars the vigor of attack with which unaccepted ideas are challenged. My opinions are torn asunder as relentlessly as are those of any other member of the group. Since no reason at all exists for bluffing, unvarying sincerity has characterized the discussions.

No one has felt that once having taken a certain position he is duty bound to defend it in spite of the cogency of arguments refuting it. A very encouraging open-mindedness has existed; prejudices with regard to economic questions have come to be recognized as such, and treated with the disrespect which prejudices deserve. An honest attempt has been made by the members of the group to consider the controversial questions examined, in objective manner. Out of such study have developed very definite attitudes with regard to the problems considered, but they are based more upon reason rather than upon prejudice.

In the ordinary hill course when the period is over there is usually little opportunity to continue the discussion of a subject which has aroused the interest of a class. It must await the reconvening of the class two or more days later, during which interval the enthusiasm may have died away. The members of a course rarely know each other, except casually, and living as they do widely scattered it is not easily possible for them to renew such discussions in little informal groups outside the class room. But when at 8:30 on Tuesday and Thursday evening, our hour and a half period is over, it isn't necessary to dash headlong to another class. Unfinished discussions can continue as long as any one desires, or can, and are, readily reopened at almost any hour of the day or night.

One of the accomplishments most desired of the plan was that it might provide a common intellectual experience for pre-medics, engineers, pre-lawyers, and Letters and Science students. It was hoped that this would serve to give greater substance to the conversation about the house. To what extent that has resulted I am not in a position to judge. But that the subject we have been considering in class has often proved the basis of discussion at the table or in the lounge is true. Nor have our extra-class discussions been confined to the particular topic at the moment before the class.

(Continued on Col. 9, Page 9)

TABLE OF CONTENTS

"One Year of the Fraternity Resident Instructor Plan"
By Russell H. Baugh

"Modern American Education Reflected in a German Mirror"
By Erich Thiele

"Week-end; The Lewis Prize Theme"
By K. C. Flory

The Allied Arts Department Exhibit
Reviewed by J. Gunnar Back

"Hollywood—Where Work Defeats Romance"
By Nick Grinde

"Let America Look to Indian, Philippine Prison Conduct"
By John F. Gillin

"The Last Paradise" by Hickman Powell
Reviewed by Harold Clegg

"Social Psychology" by Kimball Young
Reviewed by William H. Sheldon

Modern American Education Reflected in a German Mirror

By ERICH THIELE

HAVING no leisure to write a short letter I am forced to send you a long one!—this paradox used by the first Prussian minister of education a hundred years ago has to serve—with some variation—as an excuse for myself. Since I have no time to write a short comprehensive study (as the Daily Cardinal honored me in announcing), I'll have to present a longer affair—at the risk of it being no more than an after-dinner talk, picking out at random what might be of interest to Sunday readers. It will be in line with the somewhat unofficial character of this essay to make it in a dialogue between an innocent German, who has come over to this country with out much knowledge of its conditions, and myself acting as a guide. (Well, aren't those foreigners arrogant?) After visiting a few schools in Denver, Madison, Winnetka, and perusing literature about some more, after seeing a few universities from the outside, and only one in operation—Hush! Don't we expect our students to know a lot about German 'Kultatkunde' which they have had not even the slightest chance of studying on the spot?) Now let us assume this guide has shown the innocent abroad whatever he saw (or read of) himself, and now, that the self-imposed ban of silence to prevent premature generalizations has been lifted, the green one bursts out:

I (innocent): So this was American education—

G (guide): No hasty conclusions, please; they lead to (aside: and come from) hazy conceptions.

I. Whatever you may say, there is something very different about the atmosphere of this country, which also bears on education.

G. True; the soil colors its people, otherwise shaped by their stock and story. But you are mistaken if you think you can get hold of it by coining simple formulae such as matter v. spirit, civilization v. culture, quantity-minded v. quality-minded, carefree v. careful, work for the pleasure after it v. work for the pleasure of it, and by placing America on the one side and Germany on the other. Are you so sure of 'your' values? Are you none of what they condemn? The closer you face it, the more you will find the truth of this: Differences that really matter are not those of nationalities—as little as of families. What actually counts are distinctions of type such as the born ruler and the born subject, the man of action and the man of thought, the hard worker and the p— you'll find them well-portioned over all the world.

I. Anyway, there are lots of differences as to

G. You've been wise to notice it! Now we found most striking and let us try to ad Let's first talk about high schools and then a— ones—colleges and universities. Since you seem to be a—brow idealist rather than a materialist, I guess, you're not going to discuss the buildings—

I. But certainly, I will! They're palaces up there in Denver, some of them, such as no German state or municipality could afford to build at present. And there is one school building (even though corridors might be dark and seats old-fashioned) that in cleanliness, general equipment, and certain practical devices (such as lockers, for instances) could be equalled by a similar choice of German schools. This shows the importance of being rich. The hopelessness of the German situation in this particular is illustrated by the fact that the city of Berlin was compelled to cut down school expenditures in various items on an average of 30 per cent (10 to 60) and to raise school fees by 20 per cent at the time time. (Prussia raised it by even 25 per cent). People don't know how lucky they are here in being offered every kind of education up to a university career free of charge! What's the use of all our school reforms in Germany if they are handicapped by a lack of funds—quite apart from the distressing fact that this means obstruction to any attempt at true democracy, which even our special schools for those leaving the elementary school with a high I. Q., cannot completely establish.

G. So you are not entering cleanliness on the materialistic side of the ledger?

I. By no means! how can you develop fresh open hearts in prison-cells never meant to be windows that if broken, have to be replaced with stove-heating, gas lighting, and as in my school!

G. But what do you think about these 'palaces'?

I. The answer is not so simple. First of all, I don't think teacher being a feminine word.

G. Neither do I; but is it really better to make it an exclusively masculine word, as at the usual German high school for boys? I would not think a simple 50-50 proportion would solve the problem, but I do think the various ages of children, as also the question whether boys and girls are taught together or separately should influence the ratio between men and women teachers. But to come back to the more vital questions, what do you think about the methods used here?

I. The classes we saw showed a surprisingly wide range of methodical variety, even within one and the same school. There may be stiff collective drillwork in one period and free individual assignments in another. How are the students to know what's

(Continued on page 9)

An Alumnus Finds Island Paradise

A Review of Hickman Powell's "Lost Paradise," New Jonathan Cape Publication

THE LAST PARADISE. By Hickman Powell. Illustrated by Alexander King. Foreword and photographs by Andre Roosevelt. 324 pp. New York: Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith.

HICKMAN Powell, author of "The Last Paradise," writes of himself as follows: "I am 29 and unmarried, was born on a cold morning at Duluth, Minn., and reared amidst blizzards that gave me an early yearning for the tropics. Schooled by Quakers at Swarthmore, I was taught a trade (catching a few ideas by the way from William Ellery Leonard and Karl Young) at the University of Wisconsin, and was given a diploma in 1923. In my freshman year, putting aside all boyhood determination to become a mandolin virtuoso, a heart-swaying orator, and a supreme court justice, and letting lapse all affiliation with the Y. M. C. A., I became addicted to late hours and journalism. Since then I have foreseen all exercises save to observe and record the diverting performances of my fellow-men—from music and miracles to murder. I came to New York in 1924 and joined The World. In 1927 and 1928, on leave of absence, I found Bali, where people neither read nor write books, and began to get a little education."

By HAROLD H. CLEGG

WHEN Harbeson Hickman Powell visited the island of Bali in the Dutch East Indies, he discovered himself to be in what is perhaps a "last paradise" for the man who seeks escape from machine age culture. Mr. Powell, fascinated with the world outside and seeking to avoid the realization of "Babbitt will inherit the earth," carries one away to a delightful Arcadia in his description of the Balinese civilization. He glorifies the picturesque Bali from this approach in the first English record of its culture.

The "Last Paradise" is set down in five sections. The first, "Brink of Wisdom," a description of Bali, its people, his impressions and experiences, ends with:

"The peace of Bali is for brown men. And this I know is the white man's burden: that he shall dream dreams, and they shall mock him, that he shall seek what he shall not find, that in him is lusty turbulence, and for him there is no Nirvana."

The second is a short division, "Demi-Monde," beginning with a discussion of Balinese morals and ending with a series of hunting trips on the

"Jungle of Pleasure," the third section, while the substance of the fourth is concerned with sessions, and After

The last section is 32 pages of photographs by Andre Roosevelt. Some of these pictures illustrate Powell's text, and all corroborate the claim that Bali is a remarkable island. Upon reflection, "Last Paradise" is unique among travel books: it is without photographs of the author standing beside a native, front and side views; nor does the author use Balinese temples as the background for his classic profile as has come to be the wont of travel book writers.

It is a country where the farmers make music at communal gatherings; the field hands fashion gorgeous temples, and the coolie girls dance in gold cloth. Everyone is artist, and with an abundance of food there is ample time for expression and creativeness. His religion is the incentive to create, and he performs his ritual not for the diversion of the tourist, but for the gods.

"Last Paradise" has an atmosphere which would appeal to that which would attract Francis Brett Harte, Haliburton to the wild-hair adventures of F. B. Young. More than any other book, "Last Paradise" resembles Caraveth Wells' "Six Years in the Malay Jungle."

WESCOTT IN PARIS

Glenway Wescott has settled in Paris where he intends to stay until he has finished his novel of New York life which is to follow "The Grandmothers." He writes Harpers: "I feel that I deserve only to be laughed at, it is taking so long."

Hollywood—Where Work Defeats Romance

By NICK GRINDE

R. Young, Carroll Nye, Leila Hyams

NICK GRINDE '15 success as a director has been one of the most interesting developments of the picture business. He was born in Madison, Wis., and attended the University of Wisconsin, graduating in 1915. He gained his early theatrical experience as manager and actor of a long series of successful vaudeville acts. Coming to California he entered the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization as assistant director. His splendid work in this subordinate capacity soon led to his promotion. As a director he has made "The Equal Chance," the famous Shrine picture; "Riders of the Dark," "Beyond the Sierras," "Morgan's Last Raid," and "The Desert Rider." His latest directorial efforts have been in collaboration with David Burton on "The Bishop Murder Case."

THE Magazine editor's request for a note on the movies as a field of endeavor for the graduating senior at the University of Wisconsin was a very definite reminder of the distance between me and the old Cardinal days when I wrote the Skyrocket column in its infancy and lived as a part of that group of student newspapermen whose eyes watched and whose hands sought to record the passing events in the lives of people who have already learned the insignificance of the general advice which I am about to give.

I can remember seeing the parading class reunions in June and feeling a pitying tolerance toward them. I somehow thought they were upstarts bringing an insolent familiarity to the intimacies of my campus, when God knows, no one who amounted to anything, had ever heard of them. Imagine being out 15 years and not having the good taste to give up.

All this round about talk is just my way of mentally stalling before I plunge into my first public advice-to-the-young-man-at-Wisconsin. Because once I do, there will be no turning back. I'll never dare return to the campus—I'll be too venerable in my own years.

For the past year or two the motion picture industry has been in a great state of chaos due to its change into the talkies. Whereas originally its most characteristic phase was silence, overnight it has changed to a point where now its very essence is sound.

This, with color, third dimension, the enlarged screen, and television just around the corner, is making the field more attractive to the seriously trained academic mind. Where it was once a hit-and-run racket, it is rapidly approaching a more dignified and tangible field of work. A greater division-of-labor, necessitated by the new talkies, has placed a greater value on more specific knowledge, such as music, the languages, dancing, dialogue, writing, publicity, sound and acoustic theory, and so forth.

I get quite a few letters asking me in more or less round about ways just how to get into the movies, which train to take to Hollywood, etc.

In spite of the fact that there is no definite answer, I reply to most of these because I know what anxiety, and sometimes, what courage went into the writing of them. If there were a real answer, the man who had the solution could make a comfortable living in a big office with thick rugs by just dispensing it. There are that many customers.

The theatrical business is one which I would sincerely advise everyone against, as only those who can't take discouragement will succeed in it anyway. It has a way of breaking your heart before breakfast, and laughing at you the rest of the day.

One attitude which I have noted in a great percentage of applicants is that in trying to get into the show business they spend most of their energy telling how badly they want to get in, or that they have always loved it in a sort of unexplainable way, or feel a peculiar gnawing sensation when approaching a theater.

Now it never would occur to these same individuals to put their own emotions first in approaching any other line of work. Banking, newspaper work, trading. In their approach to these they tell the head "guy" how good they are and how they will help him in making his enterprise a success.

viewp

appro

our p

ered t

not se

I ca

want advan

house

Ther

there between any o

are a busin

but af

mon se

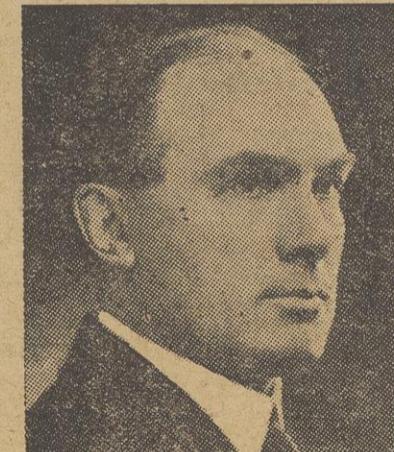

Let America Look to Indian, Philippine F

By Prof. J. F. Gillin

NOTHING startles an American more than to find in the Philippines and in India adventures on entirely new lines in the treatment of the criminal. The Philippines have worked out a system of taking care of the criminals of those islands unique in its nature. On conviction a man is first sent to Bilibid prison in Manila, or to the San Ramon on the Island of Mindinao. After he has served a part of his sentence at one of these institutions, if his conduct warrants it, he is permitted to go to the great penal colony at Iwahig on the Island of Palawan. Here there is an area of about 105,000 acres on which the colonists work. There are no walls or barbed wire fences. After the colonist is there six months he must support himself on the half of what he produces on the land or in the shop, the other half being taken by the government to apply toward the expenses of the institutions—thus the economic motive is kept alive because he is on the same basis for self-support as on the outside.

These colonists are not kept in one village but are scattered in some 30 villages or stations over the 105,000 acres. Two stations which I visited raise sugar cane exclusively. Three or four others cultivate and harvest and then prepare for shipment cocoanuts. They have two copra driers which prepare the cocoanut for commercial purposes. Another division is devoted to live stock where they raise thousands of hogs and hundreds of cattle. Two stations are devoted to fishing. They have motor boats and are out at sea often a week at a time. There is a good hospital at the central station, a cooperative store at which the colonists sell their surplus products and from which they buy needed supplies.

There are about 2,000 men on the plantation and 28 guards; about half of the guards when I was there were ex-convicts. There is one gun on the plantation which is in the hands of the superintendent. The prisoners have their own police force and their own courts for the trial of offenses. One of the stations is up in the mountains 25 miles distant from the central station. They have never had a successful escape and very few attempts. They have never had a man who has been in this institution and regularly discharged committed for a second offense.

JOHN L. GILLIN

—Courtesy Capital Times

Ninety of the convicts have been awarded the privilege of bringing their families and living with them on pieces of ground given them by the government near the central station, so that their children may attend school. These children play with the children of the officers and go to school with them. It is a unique experience and well worthy of careful study.

Another interesting experiment I discovered was the criminal tribes settlement in India. It is estimated that there are about a million and a half of these criminal tribes who make their living chiefly by crime. After failing to reform these people by the ordinary jail and prison procedure the government of India devised these settlements. The whole family of the criminal is sent to one of these settlements. There are many of them scattered over India. In the settlement each person is given a piece of land on which he builds a hut and must

Aimless Creation Is Exhibit Note

Allied Arts Department Students Display Work Settled in Conventional Confusion

Exhibit of the work of students in the university Applied Arts department. The Assemblies contain

"WEEK-END": The Lewis Prize Paper

By K. C. FLORY

Editor's Note: The author wishes it to be understood that this sketch is not autobiographical and that the characters in it are imaginatively treated.

THE BOY was tired. He was going home, and sleep for the week end, and write the essay that was Monday. Next to him in the train sat a slovenly boy. He talked with him. The boy was a pre-med freshman, and was going home. The pre-med asked interminable questions. Didn't he think the chem. was too darn hard? He liked to go home week-ends? Did he live in Milwaukee? Whom did he have for English? Oh, that guy. How were his grades? The boy, feeling more red than ever, took another seat and tried to sleep. No go, too much bolting. He wished he had a drink.

Home town. The boy phoned his house. No answer. He suddenly remembered that his father was away and that his mother was probably in Chicago. He walked the half mile to his house and went in. Dirty dishes a week old were piled in the sink. A little sour milk in the ice box. He felt tired. He sat down in the dirty kitchen. He wondered idly if his T. B. was coming back and making him so tired. He remembered that he had to try and write an essay for English. He went to the next room and sat down at the desk.

At twelve his mother came in. She was tired by the long trip home, and was annoyed at his being there. Why hadn't he let her know he was coming? Hadn't he any consideration for her? Why did he have to always be nagging home? Couldn't she ever get rest? She continued her tirade from where she was mixing a said she was a wreck, and as though it were the boy's fault. After a time her tone became more and more maudlin and self-pitying.

At about one she complainingly went upstairs. She screamed down the stairs for him to go to bed. Why must he always worry her? Did he want to die on her hands? Why didn't he look pink and healthy? Why — ? The boy shut his ears. He tried to think. His exhausted body sagged onto the desk. His aching eyes burned when he shut them. Ready to scream, he went out and poured himself half a tumbler of whiskey, and drank it down in three gulps. His head buzzed, and his face felt flushed. Stupified with the drink he stumbled upstairs and crawled into bed.

He got up at noon the next day. The maid, back on the job, wanted to set the bed made. At dinner he felt fuzzy and as tired as though he had never slept. His mother started in about his grades. Why hadn't he studied? Why did he think his poor father and mother were slaving day after day to send him to school? Why didn't he get grades instead of loafing and probably running around with women and drinking? Had he left little dago bootlegger's daughter had mentioned? He had better not go dragging any wop into HER family.

He had to drive her out to a friend's place on Green Lake that afternoon—"Well, hurry up and get the car out—don't go so fast—look out! don't bump so much—. Hurry up! are you going to take all day—. You'll make me late to this—." They got back about eight; he was very very tired; she was quite happy. Her friends had been rather liberal with cocktails. She patted him awkwardly and laughed. He was a good little boy—she loved him all right—his good old mother loved him all right, all right. Her eyes dimmed with drunken tears as she sobbed to herself about her great love. She gave him dollars and went off to bed.

The boy stuck the money in his pocket and tried to get down to work. He felt an aching exhaustion in his sole body. He thought about how had to have the essay in. He tried to find an idea. He was tired, so tired he needed just one shot to brace him of polishing the surface crev-

The metal work of Ruth E. Danielson and Bernice Ruttent are by the most faithful to a scheme. They have given them something of a sturdy beauty. This is especially seen in Bernice Ruttent's silver chain and pendant which maintains a unity of squares, even in the pendant. Jean William has contributed a pewter sugar and cream set and Sue Olbrich a silver rink which stand out as excellently fashioned.

One has a feeling that this group of students in the allied arts department has for the most part an eagerness to see about the business of expression through their chosen media, that they have been often led by a lack of comprehension of why they were actually setting out to publish.

up. He went out and got a good one—felt better now. He picked up a book of poems that he had brought with him, and started to read. Strange how nice and warm and rested and awake a drink made one feel—and the poetry always hit you so much more.

He put down the book and turned on the radio—some cracker company was giving a classical program. He listened in rapture. At ten-thirty the station signed off.

He tried to get back to his work. To his disgust he found he could not think. He was angry with himself; he had always taken great pride in his brain. He remembered his prep-school days—he had never been any good at sports, but he had always topped his class.

He tried to grip his mind and get down to his task, and again he sat in a daze while his brain wandered along devious paths. He thought about the wasted year he had just spent and of the promises he had not kept, and of the things he had not found. He thought about the money he had thrown away, and he wondered how he could make his proposed trip without it. He thought about how he was soon going to hit the long dusty roads and wander in green hills far away from everything, where the thought of all his wasted opportunities would not follow. He calculated with disgust and almost horror the number of weary days left at the university. His mind revolted at the thought of work work, work, and exams, grades, dead lectures and staring stupid classmates. He longed for greenness and quiet. He remembered how he had been nagged about his money going so fast. He thought of his father's objections to his proposed trip, and thought about how much he had said he would worry —poor Dad.

The boy awoke when his head hit the desk. The drink had worn off and he felt tired and sick again. His mind reeling with the realization that another night and another day had been wasted, he dragged off to bed. He had to get up early—had to drive his mother to Illinois to see the boys at prep school. His mother made breakfast an ordeal—Why didn't he work?—Look at his father!—She was rather cross, and looked shot-wrinkles; dirty dressing gown—She went out and got a pick-me-up, and went up to dress.

The boy went out for a walk. His head was a bit cob-webby. He came back to the house, washed, and backed the car out. He felt almost fresh. The prospect of a long cool drive was nice.

His mother slept most of the seventy miles. He took advantage of the fact and threw the big car through the heavy traffic and out into the country. Once on the open road he gave her the gun. He forgot his tiredness and reveled in the thrill of the wheels roaring over the gravel. He laughed to himself as he shot by the slower cars; for a little while he was completely happy.

His mother woke up as he jolted down the rough hill into the school.

She hastily dabbed at her face and pushed at her hat and hair. They pulled into a parking space and went in. Up trotted the principal. How were the boys doing? Well, wasn't that nice. No, Jimmie didn't like the university. He was a little lazy, maybe?

No, the principal didn't think so. Well, here comes the commandant.

How do you do, colonel? How is your wife? Well, isn't that nice—.

The boy escaped and walked up to his old room. He threw himself down on the hard bed. He suddenly felt old; the tension of the hour of speed left him, and an exhaustion took its place. He thought with amusement that the commandant was fatter than ever.

A few of the boy's old friends came to talk to him. There weren't many that remembered him, now. His brothers were downstairs, being petted and praised by the principal for his mother's benefit. He felt too tired to talk much; and the old bunch just sat around awkwardly and seemed glad when mess call blew and they could say goodbye.

He drove his mother and his brothers to a nearby town, where they ate dinner. His mother scolded the kids for spending too much. They screamed back at her. The younger one had a fit of temper, and refused to eat; an angry, tearful, snarling pair, the boy drove them back to the school and dropped them.

His mother told him with variations all the way home what excellent work they were doing. Why didn't he work like they? Why wasn't he as good as they? The boy felt too tired to argue. He wanted to close his eyes, hold his ears and scream. He felt insatiate—he drove madly, gritting his teeth and feeling a satisfaction at his mother's ranting and nagging at him as he hurled the heavy car into the dust ahead, and watched the needle climb past the sixty, sixty-five and seventy marks. He slued down a hill and narrowly missed rolling into the ditch as he swung out to pass two cars abreast. He hit ruts and jerked the car down to lower speeds with stiff, angry jabs at the brake-pedal. His mother was almost in tears with self-pity. Did he want to kill her? Why hadn't he some consideration for his own mother? Didn't he know her heart was weak? Finally he pulled up behind the house he knew as home, and walked up the path from the garage.

The maid had some cold meat for dinner. He couldn't eat. He worried down a few pieces and left the table. He threw his clothes into his bag, and fairly ran out of the house followed by his mother's recriminations that rose into a crescendo as he got farther away.

He fell asleep in the dirty smoker and was awakened by the fat conductor. Madison. Dirty, yelling cabbies. Rain. Dark. He was tired. He tossed his bag at the nearest driver, crawled into the cab and tried to sleep. Why in hell didn't the guy let him alone? Oh, here is the house. He put a handful of change into the fellow's palm, waved aside his stereotyped thanks, went into the house and walked down to his room. It was full of smoke and laughing boys. He dropped his bag on the floor and went into the next room—no one there except a friend of his, working.

The brothers in the next room were yelling. The boy felt tired—he wanted to crawl between those cool sheets and just sleep and sleep—sleep until the ache and the dullness left his mind—sleep until the exhaustion left his flesh. He tried to write the essay that must be in the next morning. He could not think of a subject. His head felt stupid. His eyes trayed to a "Popular Mechanics" on the desk. He picked it up and wandered in it almost unconsciously for half an hour. He finally threw it down, realizing that he had been wandering again from his work. He bit his lip. He felt hysteria coming over him; he wanted to cry at his inability to concentrate. He felt tired, so tired. His friend rose to go out.

The boy begged a ride with him down to the "Bush". He was lonely. He felt he was going mad. He wanted someone to talk to. He entered the familiar old room with a sigh of relief—already his cares seemed to be going. He asked for a shot and sat down. Across from him were two red-faced drunks, arguing about the individual versus the mass. The boy threw down his drink, motioned for another. He entered the argument, grew heated over the debate. He no longer felt so tired. Another shot—what did he care what everybody said or did? Gee, but it felt swell not to be tired. More drinks. The boy threw himself upon his bed at two o'clock. Someone had taken him home and undressed him—.

Monday morning. The kid was sick shaking, despondent. Another week-end shot—another vow to work broken—another grade pulled lower. He went back to bed after breakfast, and slept until almost supper. He awoke. He felt fresh. He tried his math—his mind wandered again. Presently he got dressed and went to supper. He felt good. He went to a show. Back at ten, very sleepy. He made a half-hearted attempt at his math. He felt again like crying, but this time it was more of a relaxed feeling—the racked nerves had been quieted by his long sleep. He undressed slowly and went to bed; and fell into an instant slumber.

Another week-end. The boy was tired. He looked despondently upon the same dreary prospect. He would go home tomorrow, and be nagged again. He knew he would never work. He sat up late Friday night, reading poetry. It rested him, relaxed him, made him forget—.

Midnight struck from several distant bells. The boy looked white and tired, and he sank hopelessly into his chair while the blues gradually sifted down on his mind. He was tired—what did he care—he could never concentrate—never please anyone—what did he matter? Oh, if he could only sleep, but always a tomorrow, always a nagging tongue, always a whining, complaining voice, always the leaden despair of unfinished, unfinishable work. He was tired—if he could only sleep without a tomorrow. Quite easily, naturally the idea of suicide came into his mind. He took out his .38 and calmly loaded it. He shoved the cold, hard ring of its muzzle against his forehead. Only to sleep. The cool steel felt good. His mind wandered off to his mother. He thought of his mother. He thought how her plaintive, nasty voice would keep saying. Why did he do it? Why didn't he think of me? What will everyone say? Is this the way he repaid me for all my work? Is this all the consideration he had

"Social Psychology": A Review

By Prof. Wm. F. Sheldon

"Social Psychology," by Kimball Young. Knopf, 1930. 674 pp. $4.00.

A Year of the Chi Phi Course

THIS book, like its perpetrator, is stimulating, enjoyable, profusely instructive, and full of good health. It is far more the narrative than the text-book, yet manages to cover almost every important sociological problem and most of the problems of social science in general. Mr. Young has a happy gift. A heartily entertaining teller of stories himself, his shrewd eye for the enlivening has enriched the theme with a truly astonishing sweep of readable illustrative material. To read the book is to listen to a man who reads much and talks well—a combination far too rare.

Being a man of good education and wide experience, the author shows a decidedly behavioristic leaning. He has grasped and adopted the essential behavioristic thesis, namely modifiability and social determination of human nature, yet he manages to avoid the frequently embarrassing vocabulary limitation which sometimes characterizes the meticulous behaviorist. This he accomplishes by pointing out at the outset, probably rightly, that the so-called "covert" or "mental" activities have not yet been described in sufficiently complete naturalistic terminology to completely justify its rigid adoption in a somewhat popular treatise.

If there is any gross sin in the book, it grows like most sins from a virtue. The author's recourse to a vast array of descriptive and illustrative material has perforce created a massive tome, so massive indeed that many a tired co-ed, oppressed by the relentless responsibility of heavy social obligation, will shy off in horror at the ponderous aspect of this 674 page book. When a man writes a book of such length as that, he takes upon himself a solemn obligation. He must say a lot between its covers. And Mr. Young carries the obligation pretty well. Reading his book seemed for all the world like eating a large bowl of excellent Irish stew. First you turn up a piece of meat, then a carrot, now an onion, a couple more pieces of meat—in fact, about anything. But you have eaten pretty well.

One point of somewhat technical importance deserves much more elaborate discussion than it can receive here. The author shares with the present reviewer the prejudice that psychology is essentially a social study, since most of an organism's stimulating environment is social, and all of his responses are conditioned upon social experience of the past. This means of course that all distinctions between psychology and the so-called social studies are arbitrary and will grow less distinct as knowledge and control increase. Yet Professor Young feels that because traditional psychologists have rather generally slighted this field of human motives, social psychology should take a position rather independent of general psychology. "Strict psychology," he states (p. 10), "deals with the forms, with the mechanisms of mental processes and action, without regard to what it is in the way of concrete or abstract content which goes through the human machine. Social behavior is not understandable in these terms alone. If we are to describe and analyze the behavior of individuals in groups, we must know also what kinds of ideas, attitudes and habits they have. In other words we are concerned with the content of mind and behavior."

Now it is just this "content of mind and behavior" that has always been the golden fleece of the psychologist, nor has he yet admitted its complete unavailability. By far the most significant work now going on in psychology deals with the field of human motives. A motive is simply what lies between the stimulus and the response. True, there has been much talk about the forms and mechanisms, and perhaps too little about the motives, but there is a very healthy drift in the field of psychology itself, toward a comprehension of human motives. I personally feel that the future path of social psychology must converge rather than diverge from the basic biological sciences, that the explanation of human motives lies far closer to physiology than to the descriptive case study in its social science. Now it is just this "content of mind and behavior" that has always been the golden fleece of the psychologist, nor has he yet admitted its complete unavailability. By far the most significant work now going on in psychology deals with the field of human motives. A motive is simply what lies between the stimulus and the response. True, there has been much talk about the forms and mechanisms, and perhaps too little about the motives, but there is a very healthy drift in the field of psychology itself, toward a comprehension of human motives. I personally feel that the future path of social psychology must converge rather than diverge from the basic biological sciences, that the explanation of human motives lies far closer to physiology than to the descriptive case study in its social science. Marjorie Bartholomew Paradis, mother of two children and author of two recent novels, won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French and company and the Theater Arts Monthly cup in the first annual National Long Play tournament held last week at the Waldorf theater, New York, with her three-act comedy, "The New Freedom," presented by the Morningside Players of Columbia University. Mrs. Paradis' two novels, "The Caddie" and "A Dinner of Herbs," both deal with aspects of woman's freedom in modern family life.

FINDS $10,000 STAMP

Natalie Sumner Lincoln, the author of

of the new Appleton mystery story,

"Marked 'Cancelled,'" will be remembered as the discoverer of a James M.

Buchanan postage stamp which brought her $10,000 a few weeks ago.

As a result of her accidentally finding the stamp on an old family letter,

Miss Lincoln reports that correspondence has been pouring in steadily asking for old stamps, old costumes, etc. One letter came in addressed to

"Stamp Finder, Washington, D. C."

for me? He always was so selfish. Why did he do it?

The boy shivered violently. A raw wind blew in from the open casement across his sweating body. Chills convolved him. He thought of how warm

he would be in bed. He made a move to rise, and hit his cheek with the gun.

With a start he remembered what he had gotten it out for. He dropped it into the drawer, undressed wearily and crawled away to his bed — tired

— so tired.

University Society

Faculty Members Planning Varied Summer Vacations

Various plans are being made by university professors for their summer vacations.

Prof. C. M. Jansky of the electrical engineering school will drive through the east, visiting his three sons in Washington, New Jersey, and Boston. Accompanying him will be his wife and their daughter Helen '30, who has accepted a position with the Walter Reed hospital in Washington.

Prof. J. R. Price, also of the electrical engineering school, will spend part of his vacation with his family at their cottage at Pine lake, Wis. Later he will go on a fishing trip to Ontario, Canada.

Prof. J. W. Watson of the electrical engineering department will spend a great deal of his summer attending various conventions, the Teachers' conference at the General Electric company in Schenectady, being one of the most important.

Mr. L. E. A. Kelso, assistant professor in the electrical engineering school, will spend the greater part of his summer teaching summer school.

Mr. G. Koehler, assistant professor of the electrical engineering school, will spend the summer vacation at his home.

C. F. Tracy, assistant professor of the electrical engineering department, will drive to Toronto, Canada, to attend a conference of the American Institution of Electrical Engineers the week of June 23. He will spend July and August in Milwaukee.

Prof. F. M. Dawson of the hydraulic and sanitary engineering school, will spend his vacation attending conventions and working.

L. H. Kessler, assistant professor of the hydraulic and sanitary engineering department, will teach summer school the first part of the summer. After that he will go to Williams Bay, Wis., where he is consulting engineer for the construction of a sewerage system.

F. H. Hyland, associate professor of the machine design department, will teach in summer school and will then spend the rest of the summer at his home.

Mr. D. Oeth, associate professor of drawing and descriptive geometry, will attend the Pittsburgh conference for drawing teachers, June 12 to 21 inclusive.

Mr. K. Watson, assistant professor in chemical engineering, plans to spend the summer in Chicago in the employ of the Universal Oil Products company.

Mr. O. P. Watts, associate professor in chemical engineering, will take a trip with his family to several places in Canada.

These who will teach in summer school are: Miss Mary K. Reely, associate professor in the library school;

Alpha Omicron Pi District Convention To Be Held June 18

June 18-21 has been announced as the dates of the convention of the Great Lakes district of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority to be held at the chapter house in Madison.

Members of the Eta chapter of Wisconsin and Madison alumnae will be hostesses. Mrs. Silas Spangler of Menasha is district supervisor in charge of the convention. A buffet supper and a dancing party are included in the tentative plans for entertainment of the delegates expected from the Universities of Michigan, and Minnesota and Northwestern University.

Marion Bain '31, president, of Eta chapter, is general chairman of arrangements, and Mrs. Don Anderson, alumnae advisor, is in charge of arrangements for the alumnae. Other airmen are as follows:

Eleanor Parkinson '30 and Jeanette Barth '32, reception; Zelia Mae Spangler '32, transportation; Betty Mathewson '30, arrangements; Irma Corr '31, entertainment.

KAPPA EPSILON

Recently elected officers of Kappa Epsilon are Marian Steingoetter '32, president; Dorothy King '32, vice-president; Minnie Meyer '32, secretary and treasurer.

KULLMAN-ALLEN

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Kullmann, Milwaukee, announce the engagement of their daughter, Ethel Delia, to Mr. O. Nelson Allen of Ennis, Texas. Miss Kullmann has been a research assistant in the department of agricultural bacteriology for the past year, and will receive the master of science degree this June. Mr. Allen has been instructing in the same department, and will receive the Ph.D. in June. After the wedding in July the couple will leave for Texas to spend a few weeks in the home of Mr. Allen's parents. They will sail in August from Los Angeles for Honolulu, Hawaii, where Mr. Allen has a position as assistant professor in the department of pathology and bacteriology in the University of Hawaii.

Permanent Waves of Distinction

BY MRS. HICKS

A wide wave, marcel effect! White and dyed hair done without discoloring.

ROSEMARY BEAUTY SHOP

521 State St.—Badger 6211

Open Tues. and Thurs. Evenings

It Won't Be Long Now--

Before all the rush and dash and what-not is over but there's just time before the final splash to tell you about a couple of the perfectly intriguing things that have just come in . . . My dear, you must take a minute off—between exams—to take a peek at the new pajamas—made of coy dimity prints with wide swagger trousers, clever bow trims, and—shades of grandmother's day—frills of lace to adorn the most delicate of all. $2.95.

And while we're down to such serious subjects, let's do talk about the new illusion shorts—in in the most presentable Van Raalte sheer, fine web-like jersey—a n d bandeaux to match. The shorts are $1.95 and the bandeaux is $1.50, or if you must have regular panties, these match the set, and are $2.50. Extra long ones are $2.95.

For sporting moments you'll need a little tricot turban, $10.95. There are also little hats of shantung and stitched taffetas and crepes, and are in all colors at $5.95 up to $10.95.

And, my dear, these last breath-taking moments of formality must be respected—what about gloves? A pair of the new long six-button length ones of suede, washable, in the new eggshell tones may be had at $5.

And you simply must—wear a pair of Deauville sandals, which are absolutely the last word in practicability, comfort and all these well-known virtues. In white, and black and colors.

Do give me a ring and let me help you get yourself a garb or two. Just ask for

Marjorie

Harry S.
Manchester
Inc.

ANN EMERY HALL

Latin Scholarship Offered

The Emery Hall Building Corporation has donated a Latin scholarship of $250, open to competition to freshmen women who intend to make Ann Emery Hall their University residence in 1930.

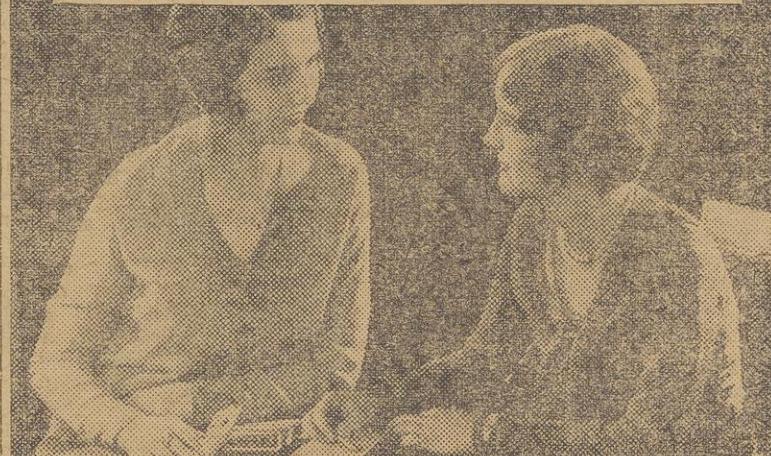

Based on the fourth year's work in Latin . . . translations from Virgil . . . prose of Caesar and Cicero . . . and sight translations, the examination for the first award will be given by a committee from the classical department of the University of Wisconsin under the chairmanship of Professor Winspear.

For further information in regard to the requirements necessary for eligibility to competition, place and time of the examination, write or call the Emery Hall Building Corporation, 257 Langdon street, Madison, Wisconsin.

Emery Hall Building Corporation

257 Langdon St.
MADISON . . . WISCONSIN

You need not fear awkward lines . . . Kotex is fashioned to fit

YOU can't imagine what a relief it is to know that your sanitary protection is inconspicuous, that it is fashioned to fit correctly, leaving no revealing outlines. That is just one of the many reasons why smart women prefer Kotex.

Because it is so wonderfully absorbent 85% of the leading hospitals are now using the same material of which Kotex is made.

This wonderful material is Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding . . . a cellulose substance which, for sanitary purposes, performs the same function as the softest of cotton, but with 5 times the absorbency.

You should try this new method of sanitary protection.

Kotex Company, Chicago, Ill.

KOTEX IS SOFT . . .

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.

2—Kotexfiller is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

3—Disposable, instantly, completely.

Regular Kotex—45c for 12
Kotex Super-Size—65c for 12

Ask to see the KOTEX BELT and KOTEX SANITARY APRON at any drug, dry goods or department store.

KOTEX

The New Sanitary Pad which deodorizes

SOCIETY

Mildred Eggert,
Hilmar Krueger
Will Marry Soon

The wedding of Mildred Clara Eggert '30 and Mr. Hilmar C. Krueger will be held at 6 p. m., Saturday, June 28, at Trinity Lutheran church, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The bridal party will include Irene Eggert, sister of the bride, maid of honor; Elda Krueger, sister of the bride; Alice Voelker, bridesmaids; Herbert Klingmann, best man; Ernst H. Eggert Jr., and Walter Seefeldt, ushers. The Rev. Henry Grueter will officiate.

Following the ceremony a dinner and reception for relatives and friends will be held at the Hotel Astor. University friends invited to the dinner include: Messrs and Mesdames Wilbur Glover, David Evans; Misses La Vone Patrick, Nina Grace Smith, Janet Luchsinger, Ellen Jacobson, Irene Snavely, Kathryn Jane Robertson, Elizabeth Wood; and Horace Goodell.

Miss Eggert is receiving her B. A. in sociology this June. She is a member of Charterhouse, and was elected to Sigma Epsilon Sigma and Alpha Kappa Delta, honorary freshman and sociological fraternities. Mr. Krueger, a former instructor in history here is receiving his Ph.D. in 1931. He is now instructor in history at the University Extension division, Milwaukee.

Lanzer-Kircher
Nuptials Held in Sheboygan, June 14

Geitruude Frances Lanzer '28, daughter of Mrs. Louise Lanzer of Bloomer, Wis., and Everett J. Kircher, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Kircher '31, of Sheboygan, will be married Saturday, June 14, at the Sheboygan Methodist church by Rev. Leonard.

After the wedding the couple will tour the New England coast after which they will return to do graduate work in philosophy and education at Ohio State university, Columbus, O. They will return to Madison in the fall where Mr. Kircher will complete his majors in philosophy and English. Miss Lanzer received her Master's degree in German literature here two years ago.

Mr. Kircher is the son of Mr. H. W. Kircher who is the city superintendent of the schools of Sheboygan and is also a member of the visitors' board for the university.

Alpha Gamma Delta
Plans Anniversary

The Beta chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will observe its silver anniversary during the university reunion week-end, June 20 to 22.

The anniversary events will be opened on Friday evening with open house.

Initiation of pledges into the active chapter and initiation of seniors into the alumnae chapter are scheduled for Saturday morning, followed by an initiation breakfast, and the business meeting. The afternoon is left open for participation in university events. The Silver Birthday banquet will be held on Saturday evening to observe the founding in 1925.

On Sunday morning class breakfasts will be held.

The week-end is in charge of Sally Loomans '30, and Mrs. Floyd Merrill Linderman, president of the alumnae chapter of Madison.

Mrs. Harrison A. Smith, Jr., is chairman of finance and registration; Mrs. H. L. Brownfield, hospitality; Mrs. Darrell Foster of Indianapolis, publicity; Mrs. E. C. Giessel, reception; Miss Dorothea Levi, class breakfasts; open house in charge of the reception committee; Sally Loomans, initiation of pledges; Lorraine Lee, initiation breakfast; Helen Lee '30 and Ruthy Strauss, grad, initiation of seniors; alumnae meetings, Mrs. F. M. Linderman; house association meeting, Mrs. W. H. Pagenkopf, Oak Park, Ill.; Silver Birthday banquet, Mrs. John A. James.

SCHNECK-BULLEY

Persia Schneck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Schneck, Wauwatosa, and Mr. Kenneth G. Bulley '29, Oshkosh, were married Tuesday, June 2. The bride is a graduate of Lawrence college and has since taught at the Northwestern Conservatory of Music. Dr. Bulley is a member of Phi Kappa Tau and Phi Chi fraternities. Dr. and Mrs. Bulley are now living in Milwaukee, the former being an interne at the Columbia hospital.

IN HOUSE PARTY

Coranto sorority is planning a house party to be held at the W. A. A. cottage on June 17 to 19. Bernice Geffert '32 is in charge of arrangements.

Last Minute Thoughts of a Co-Ed Shopper

CASH FOR BOOKS!

How those words caress my soul! 'Twere sufficient to just get the things out of one's sight, but to think of being compensated for the doing of something one was all set to do anyhow. And as long as you're being compensated, you might as well be compensated in full . . . and that's why my motto at this time of year as well as other times of year is GATE-WOOD'S—in capital letters.

They'll size up your books in a moment, and thoughtfully take into consideration the fact that same books have been scarcely opened throughout the year. Then you'll sign in their book and walk out of the place, a smile on your face and a bulge in your purse.

GIFTS FOR MEN!

Seems sort of contrary to the laws of human nature to be giving little trinkets and things to men, but there's one time during a man's life when he actually merits recognition of his ability . . . and that's at graduation. That's why graduation gifts should be lovely and lasting . . . as a reminder to the previous mentioned chap that he actually did graduate from college in the days of yore.

THE MOUSE AROUND GIFT SHOP (upstairs at 416 State street) has just such things that men will rave about . . . and really keep . . . and really enjoy. For instance, masculine yet handsome book-ends, Dashing pirates that flurish their swords in the air, wise-looking owls that show the type of literature their master is displaying to advantage, a pair of scudding parrots or graceful horses or strolling dogs.

Then the hammered leather Italian boxes, gold tooled utility boxes to be used for most everything a man generally hurls all over the place. Or a favorite brand cigarette choice box, with four or six compartments for the various brands to suit various moods and guests.

You'll almost wish you were a man when you see the things at THE MOUSE AROUND GIFT SHOP.

GIFTS FOR GIRLS!

If your graduating friend is a smartly dressed co-ed who insists upon color ensembles and style ensembles and refuses to be all meddled on the subject of sports and dress when it comes to dressing for either . . . you will do well to match one of her favorite gowns with jewelry from THE NOVELTY NOOK.

For this little nook is an absolute authority on whether jewelry is sporty or dressy or formal and will show you without a lot of waiting around and looking around just what you came in for. Sports things of bone, white and colorfully carved, to set off a summer's gown like the sun sets off a summer's day—to advantage.

Bracelets to match, and rings to match . . . and even ear-rings. And then for a billowy chiffon frock you would never think of wearing heavy bone jewelry . . . and so the NOVELTY NOOK has all sorts of dainty, simulated precious stones in necklaces, chokers, rings, bracelets, and ear-rings.

And then formal jewelry simply abounds in the place . . . crystal Chanel and baguette, pearls and drops . . . drop into THE NOVELTY NOOK if it's jewelry you seek and remember that jewelry makes a mighty practical and endearing little graduation thought.

A GIFT FOR YOURSELF!

And what a treat! For who should be better treated than your own little abused self? I'm asking! And then I'm answering that the very best of all good gifts to one's self is a pair of Peacock shoes . . . to have and hold from BURDICK AND MURRAY'S (on the Square).

You'll be much more able to trot up to your exams on nimble feet if you're Peacock shod. And for the first time in recorded history you'll be glad to have a place to walk to, even if it's only an exam, just to show off and win envions but flattering looks for a pair of good looking and wonder working shoes.

Wonder working! My dear, Peacocks do more for a pair of ungainly appearing feet than you can shake a stick at. I'm not fooling. Even if your claim to fame is a pair of 8½'s they can still look like size 4 double A's.

Now that you've had a taste of just how warm a summer's afternoon may be, you realize the urgent and perspiring need for a pair of light weight and light colored summer shoes. Linen is crashing through . . . and I don't mean crash linen either. I mean a smooth, fine yet durable linen . . . and seem like this in Peacock shoes.

A pair of natural linen with tiny colored floral embroidery around the vamp and quarters . . . just for a bit of color, you know. A pair of black linen with appliqued bits of real snake, lightly contrasted to the deep black in a most sophisticated and snakey way.

Or white kids . . . pumps with colored square appliques, green and rose. Any number of graceful and delightfully cool white kids. A trip to BURDICK AND MURRAY'S will not be without far famed results for you . . . and your cunning little clop-hoppers will clop no longer. More Gifts for Girls!

And lingerie, lots of it and coolishly made, will make any co-ed want to just loll around in it in her own little room . . . if it comes from SIMPSON'S AT THE CO-OP. The thing about lingerie is that no matter who you are or what you wear you still have to have it. That's why every co-ed shrieks in delight with it.

But the further thing about it if it comes from SIMPSON'S AT THE CO-OP is that you need have no worries about its laundrying, its wearing or its brevity of style. For Trillium, in radium or crepe, washes easily and beautifully, wears lengthily, and is composed of no superfluous material like the yards of 1886.

For instance cunning sets of ban-in Grove City college for the past four years. Mr. Armstrong is assistant cashier for the Grove City National bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong will be at home in Grove City, after a trip through the east.

UBBINK-GILSON

The announcement has been made of the engagement of Alice Ubbink '30, daughter of Mrs. J. Ubbink of Port Washington to George Gilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gilson, Port Washington.

Miss Ubbink is a member of Beta Phi Alpha sorority.

Mr. Gilson is employed at the J. E. Gilson company.

WARD-BELMONT ASSOCIATION

The Wisconsin Ward-Belmont association held its second annual meeting and luncheon, Saturday, June 6, at 12:30 p. m. in the Loraine hotel with Miss Virginia Smith, the Ward-Belmont alumnae secretary as the guest of honor. Among those who attended are: Eleanor Marling '32, Frances Burgess '32, Janet Lawton '32, Mary Jane Pulver '31, Clara Grace Wray '33, Na-deau and step-in at only $3.95! Or little bandeau topped teddies for the same small amount.

Cunning flat banded step-ins of flowered silk wide enough to eliminate slip for $2.95. And the three-piece combinations . . . simply a thought from a genius.

The combination of bandeau topped step-in with half-slip is all one piece and is suspended from one set of straps rather than the numerous sundry ones that light summer things demand . . . unless you're wearing a combination like this. It's your whole lingerie ensemble in a single word so to speak.

Pajamas and gowns of Trillium too for cooler and smarter sleeping. At SIMPSON'S AT THE CO-OP.

Thank heavens exams give me one consolation! School may be closed for the year, but LOHMAIR'S is still open ready for tired and forlorn students who expect the worst in exams but always get the best of food at LOHMAIR'S anyway!

What an added thrill to come down the hill, sometimes knowing that I hit the exam, sometimes fearful, but at any rate, glad that it is over, and there is the old faithful place, ready to refresh me from the weary strain.

And those hot hot mornings before the exam, when I'm burning up inside and out, and can stop before my feeble cerebellum sets in vibrating. That cool drink! Little does the Prof know where I get my vitality. Little does he suspect how my last spark of intelligence has been aroused!

LOHMAIR'S have everything cool from brain workers to brain relievers. Make your grades with the help of LOHMAIR'S

—exam week is the time! You can't miss it on the way down the hill and you won't want to miss it! Such a simple device for making the grade. Keep fit and hit LOHMAIR'S on your way up and down the hill this week. Results guaranteed!

When I landed in WEHRMANN'S on the corner of State and Gilman today, I couldn't get out, the display of luggage held me completely spellbound—and I mean spellbound. Those week-end bags, fitted, gorgeous, and just the right thing for the house party that comes in a week! You men who want your best girl to go to a party looking as if she came from Madison and not the dumps, here's the gift.

Even the door-man at the Ritz talie Hurd '32, and Carol Schmidt '32.

GIVES LUNCHEON

Miss Susan B. Davis, assistant to the dean of women, gave a luncheon in honor of Virginia Gordon '30 at the College Women's club Saturday June 7, at 12:30. The guests, members of the wedding party, were Mrs. Edgar Gordon, Mrs. Henry Eubank, Dean Zoe Bayliss, Marion Palmer, Kathryn Willard, Helen Willard, Margaret Modie, Mary Darling, and Katherine Vea.

Miss Ubbink is a member of Beta Phi Alpha sorority.

Mr. Gilson is employed at the J. E. Gilson company.

RESEARCH WORKERS

Andrew Leith and Richard Lund, both graduates of the geology department, left for Europe Saturday, June 7, to pursue their geological research in view of obtaining doctor's degrees.

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

Next year officers at the Alpha Gamma Rho house will be: president, Gilbert Abbott '31; vice-president, Anthony Bakken '31; secretary, John Lilly '31; social chairman, Herbert Krah '31; rushing chairman, Alfred Wojta '31.

would gasp at such outfits! Girl from Madison, luggage from WEHRMANN'S. And if you long to come home with that prosperous collegiate air, give yourself a treat and shop for a wardrobe trunk! Such luggage would inspire Columbus himself to take more trips!

Then of course, every fair co-ed has in mind a handsome grad and whom she will surely get if she shops for him at WEHRMANN'S. For the male eye is not only attracted but immediately won by the handsome leather cigarette cases, the desk lighters, tie racks, and handkerchief and collar boxes in stunning leather. No matter how weak, how tough, or what kind of a soul he has, the male friend will crash through when you congratulate him with a WEHRMANN'S leather gift.

If you are a co-ed, and don't get your B. S. (Degree in sewing) a good looking sewing kit will come in handy—a stitch in time, will save nine, and a purchase at WEHRMAN'S will save you loads of time.

Hail and welcome! "The Man from Blankley's" is here to visit us at last! Of course, you know that he is stopping at the PARKWAY. He and his gang of old curiosities present an amusing comedy, that will make you lose all thoughts of oncoming exams.

Our old friend John plays in his first modern high hat comedy as the Lord Strathpeffer, who stumbles into a dinner party of old fossils, and is mistaken for the hired guest, insulted by his hostess, and ends by finding his former sweetheart. But the Lord behaves admirably with such a funny collection of almost mummified guests, and we are relieved when he and the former girl friend finally elope.

Barrymore affords a great treat from these terribly overdone and modern rah-rah collegiate pictures. I advise that during exam week you lie yourself down to the PARKWAY to see John and the beautiful Loretta Young. And in case you have never been to the zoo or the old antique shop, you will, incidentally improve your education.

Remember, the PARKWAY is open during exam week; and it will give you several good laughs and a stock-up on amusement during this driving time. "The Man from Blankley's" at the PARKWAY invites you in an exam-tension lessening sort of way.

Do examine these excellent places, Exam-iningly yours,

CO-EDNA.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Officers of Lambda Chi Alpha for the coming year are: Roland Johnson '31, president; Ralph Czerwonky '31, vice-president; John Seales '33, secretary; Jack Kuehlthau '30, treasurer; Robert Leahy '32, steward; William McMillan '32, rushing chairman; and Robert Jenks '32, social chairman.

MORTAR BOARD CONVENTION

The national Mortar Board convention will be held in Madison from June 24 to 27. About 75 delegates are expected to be present and will represent 45 chapters throughout the country.

PHI DELTA EPSILON

Harry Mannis, Med 2, was elected president of Phi Delta Upsilon fraternity. Other officers are: Joseph Ansfield, Med 2, vice-president; Arno Leshin, Med 1, secretary; Herman Shapiro, Med 2, marshall.

Is your PEN ready for
Exams?
Have it repaired in 24
hours or less at
Rider's Pen Shop
656 STATE ST.

American Pedagogy vs. German

(Continued from first magazine page) what? The official outlines of the Prussian board of education advocate the one method considered best by our outstanding educational theorists, the so-called 'Arbeitsunterricht,' which means the pupils have no longer to learn facts as given and tested by teachers, but they are made to work them out themselves from various sources and to present to their classes what they find. This is the general line which all teachers have to follow, though all details are left to their discretion.

G. And you are sure that all the teachers are willing and capable to live up to this ideal?

I. NO; but they should not be kept ignorant as to what they are lacking. Unless you see an aim above you nothing can lift you up. Self-complacency means death to self-development.

G. Do you really think the percentage of ideal teachers is higher in Germany than in America?

I. If you include all educational experiments, and exclude the man-woman question in the teaching field, I should say no.

G. Very well, and even with no exemptions taken into consideration, the most ideal educational system couldn't be a 100 per cent success for the simple reason that among 1,000 teachers required there can only be a fraction of those really elect and fit, in any country.

I. And the situation—it seems to me—is not improved by the fact that the active school service of women teachers does not surmount six years on an average. This leaves a rather narrow margin for experienced teaching.

G. Better than too wide a margin for antiquated teaching. Now when talking about methods, you expressed some surprise as to the wide range between extremes tolerated. Don't you think this policy of non-interference on the part of the authorities would encourage desirable experiments?

I. There's no denying that. But there is no such thing as non-interference I believe. While methods may not be uniform, while invaluable experiments are being made all over this country, certain municipalities have worked out schemes and outlines for all courses offered, up to the minutest detail imaginable so that I would not be surprised to find pupils of different schools practising the same French words on the same day

(Continued from first magazine page) of the week at a given time of the year—an excellent aid for the newcomer in the field who happily feels he cannot go wrong, but somehow stifling the free play of personality.

G. Didn't you say, among a thousand teachers there were only a small fraction deserving your 'free play of personality'?

I. Yes, but I also indicated that no man knows how far he can reach without some aim above him and a certain freedom of movement.

G. But please, don't forget, these are mere trifles in view of the remarkable freedom of choice as to subjects that can be taken. Remember, in Germany we have free choice only as far as a particular type of school is concerned. But once you have chosen—either a 'classical' or a 'modern language,' or a 'mathematics and science,' or a 'German culture' school, your child's curriculum is fixed and electives admitted only as extra-curricular activities. This provides a very welcome uniform standard for future university students, but does not tend to develop initiative on the side of the pupil.

G. Remember also, self-government, another field of self-expression, had been an integral part of American school-life before any German school thought of it.

G. The Machine Age is our fate; we have to face it. Besides, your experiences will have shown you emphatically that creative individual work has found its due place in schools wherever the big-mindedness of modern educators was given a chance. And isn't it a satisfaction to see how every individual child is watched in its physical and mental progress, how every experience is utilized for the following generations?

I. I agree and am glad to tell you in this connection that my own principal, after his American visit, has introduced the individual report card system—though without providing for an almost microscopic grading and examination schedule, which again might divert the pupil's eye from the true values of his work, and the teacher's mind from the pupil as a human unit. There are no exams during school time save the one great

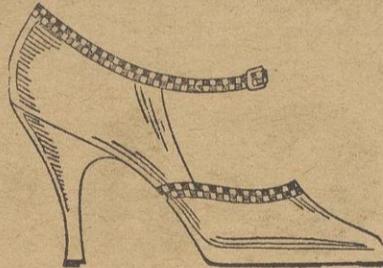

(Continued on page 13)

TRAVERSITY

Not a floating or a drifting but a travel university for United group. Around the world, leaving New York September 27, 1930. Trip assured. Men and women, 17 to 30. Visit 27 countries, 80 days at sea, 150 on shore. Traveled faculty. References required. Write

THE TRAVERSITY, INC.
Woodstock Tower, 320 East 42nd St., N. Y.

Special
On All
Blonde Shoes

In two groups

(This includes Linens)

Values

to $11.50

$6.95

Values

to $8.00

$4.95

College Slipper Shop
At the CO-OP... State and Lake
Madison, Wis.

PHI KAPPA PSI

811 STATE STREET

will be open to MEN during the Summer Session

Closest to the Campus

Board and Room $75 for Six Weeks

Call Wm. MUELLER -:- Fairchild 3447

The College Typing Co.

... wishes to express its heartiest thanks to the entire student body for the thesis and topic business that we have done for you this year, and we hope that you enjoy a happy and prosperous summer.

Badger 3747

515 Campus Arcade

C-A-S-H

For Your

USED BOOKS

— Also —

DRAWING INSTRUMENTS, SLIDE RULES and DISSECTING INSTRUMENTS

We pay cash for all your USED TEXTS and will buy all books whether used here or not

The UNIVERSITY CO-OP
E. J. GRADY, Manager
STATE at LAKE

American Pedagogy vs. German

(Continued from page 12)
final at the end of it. Their place is taken by decisions on promotion or non-promotion at the end of each school year.

G. Would you think what you said about grading and exams could also be applied to colleges and universities?

I. Speaking generally, yes, considering that the first years of American university life correspond to the advanced classes of the German secondary school system. The whole atmosphere of undergraduate classes is like that of German schools in their upper grades. And whereas the average American high school grants considerably more freedom (as to subjects) than its German equivalent, I find it's just the other way around when it comes to colleges. German universities are graduate institutions rather than schools. So there's no need for dorms and deans, there are no restrictions either to conduct or to selection of subjects but those dictated by common sense, personal taste, and the civic code valid for all citizens.

As to subjects, nobody is forced to take any that are outside the scope of his profession. A student may attend his lectures or he may not; no one cares, provided he passes the state exam—the only one he has to face—at the end of his university career. This system may be fatal in some cases, but not unfair.

G. Depends on how many your 'some cases' amount to.

I. Still I like devices favoring the fit and developing responsibility.

G. But what would you say about methods?

I. As far as American undergraduate courses are concerned I would repeat they have much in common with advanced high school grades. But I feel those very rigorous contracts providing definite assignments from day to day throughout the semester make work more mechanical and routine-like leaving no room for the teacher to try out new methods, and the credit and grade point system—entirely unknown in Germany—may tend to mar the student's viewpoint.

G. Did you read the recently published Curriculum Report?

I. I did; this is a remarkable step in the right direction—towards liberty and 'elimination of waste.'

G. And graduate work?

I. Is much like our university work in general. But here I've a bone to pick with conditions at home! I've no patience with lectures being the predominant 'pedagogical' feature. They are an antediluvian device dating back to times when books were treasures and out of reach of the common mortal. Lectures have still to serve their purpose either as a current supply of bibliography or as artistic performances or in other special cases, but it is the seminar method (in both countries) and the combination of theory and practice (which is now to a much greater degree prevalent in America than in our conservative universities) that seems to me the mature way of education—provided always that care is taken to activate the student's interests and powers. And as to examinations I wish our German professors in the letters and science departments would follow their American colleagues, who, when questioning their candidates, would realize, that the latter are going to be pedagogues in 90 per cent of the cases and not theorists or dictionaries.

G. I am glad you saw this. There is much that may strike a German as strange on the campus. Football, basket and baseball games with all their pro-and-con excitements are no official university concern with us. Great occasions and events might seem a bit frequent, sometimes, commercial, though certain fraternity features would be rivalled by those in some German student associations whether for good or evil. But you will like the liberal atmosphere of this university where the student press may freely vent its opinions and an able student body directs its affairs efficiently enough. I feel indebted to the place and its spirit for confirming my old belief. There are a thousand ways in which the secret force driving us may manifest itself, and more than one road leading up to our unknown goal. But if there's some good fellow-American or non-American—willing to show us a nice short cut to save breath or a shaded path on solid ground to avoid sandy or swampy spots, we should not make any fuss, but go along with him, and be glad to have him by our side.

Prof. Margaret Pryor Speaks

At Wayland Club Tonight

"Do Tariffs Destroy International Goodwill" will be the subject of Prof Margaret Pryor, of the economics department, when she speaks before the Wayland club, Baptist student organization, tonight at 7 p. m. Supper will be served at 6:30 p. m. and the Roger Williams and Balboa club will have its last meeting at 9:30 a. m., when Rev George Collins will speak on "Adequate Philosophy of Life."

Silence Will Prevail in Union During Examination Period

Silence will be observed in the Great hall, Tripp commons and the library of the Memorial Union today and throughout the examination period to allow students to study for examinations. Other rooms will be operated as usual.

Apartments

Modern Near Square

Furnished or Unfurnished

By the Week or Month

Call . . . F-8380

CLASSIFIED Advertising

FOR RENT

MEN—Clean, cool rooms available for summer school at Spooner apartments, 621 N. Henry. Near bathing pier. Call Mrs. Hersey, F. 5535.

3x6

TO LET—For summer, attractive furnished apartment, 2 rooms, sleeping porch and bath. The Irving F. 7333. 3xF-S-S

LOST

BLACK loose-leaf note book containing semester physiology and psychology notes left in room 181 Bascom. Call Amelia Thomas, B. 7437 $5 reward. 2x7

2 RINGS in Bascom Thursday noon Will finder please call Viola Berlin B. 3013. Reward. 1x8

NOTICE

TO NEW YORK—Driving east after exams, young man with new coach will take party of 3 or 4. Rates reasonable. Call F. 677. 1x8

REWARD

FOR information and return of white pearl opera glasses, Fabre lens; 2a Eastman camera, double lens. Call Paula Neumann, Badger 3469, 1022 West Johnson street. 1x8

TYPING

THESES, theses neatly and reasonably typed. Call B. 6606.

THESES and topics typed reasonably Badger 4557. 26x9

THESES and topics neatly and reasonably typed. Work guaranteed. Call Clara Beyer, B. 3337. 2x7

Is your PEN ready for

Exams?

Have it repaired in 24 hours or less at Rider's Pen Shop 656 STATE ST.

Square Club

will be open to Men during the Summer Session

Room and Board
Together or Separately

Early reservations will allow choice of rooms.

Fairchild 677 Summer Manager, 614 Langdon

Summer School

June 17 to Aug. 15

at

Madison College

MADISON, WIS.

Stenography, Secretarial, Machine Bookkeeping, and Office Training Courses offered. Students who desire to do Post Graduate Work, for the purpose of accepting OFFICE EMPLOYMENT at the close of this session, as well as beginners in Stenographic subjects, will be admitted.

For DETAILED INFORMATION write for copy of SPECIAL SUMMER SESSION announcement. Address the Registrar.

PSI UPSILON

announces—

The opening of its house during the Summer Session for MEN . . .

Situated directly on Lake Mendota Pier and canoe facilities

Limited number of rooms is yet available.

For further information or application call

Chas. Winding F-138 222 Lakelawn Pl.

WANTED!

College Women

— for —

Profitable Summer Employment
PART-TIME WORK

Write to Box 400, care of Daily Cardinal

Fair Prices . Friendly Service

Brown Buys Books

DRAWING SETS, ENGINEERS' EQUIPMENT, DISSECTING SETS, Etc . . .

C-A-S-H

—OR—

LIBERAL TRADE ALLOWANCE for ALL of your

Used Books and SUPPLIES

"The longer you keep a text-book the less
it's worth"

BROWN'S BOOK SHOP

CORNER STATE and LAKE STREETS

Cards Lack Experience -- Murphy

A. E. Pi's Win Greek Title Race

Sig Chi's Win Third Place In I-F Battle

Final Game Played Saturday, Due to Inclement Weather

Alpha Epsilon Pi won the interfraternity diamond ball championship for the second consecutive year when they garnered a clean cut 9 to 4 victory over Delta Upsilon Saturday afternoon on the lower campus.

The game was witnessed by one of the biggest crowds of spectators that attended a fraternity tilt this year. Sparkling plays by both infielders and brilliant catches in the outfield featured the game.

Rothman Checks D. U.
Rothman, A. E. Pi pitcher, held the D. U. slingers in check. Six hits were all that the D. U. batsmen could garner off Rothman's fast ball pitching, while the victors managed to garner nine runs.

The victors started the game by tallying three runs in the first frame on three hits, coupled with one error in the D. U. infield. The losers came back in their half by putting two runs across the plate after two were out on a walk to Gentry and doubles by Hayes and Dingee.

A. E. Pi's Score in Third
After going out one, two, three in the second, the A. E. Pi's scored again in the third, leaving three men stranded on the paths. The victors sacred the winning tallies when they stretched their total of runs to six in the fifth frame by tallying twice on singles by Nashban and Feld, a walk to Beller, and Fox's double.

The D. U. narrowed the margin when Dingee singled in the fifth with two of his mates on base. Two walks to his opponents by Rothman proved costly for both turned into runs. This ended the scoring for the D. U. S.

Lineups: Alpha Epsilon Pi—Turner, Nashban, Feld, Beller, Rothman, Fox, Perlson, Weller, Zubatsky, Chechik, Delta Upsilon—L. Dingee, Neuenfeldt, Gentry, Hayes, J. Dingee, O'Neill, Flint, Ramsey, Gage, North.

Sigma Chi, 5

Phi Epsilon Pi 2

In a listless game, Sigma Chi annexed the third place cup in the interfraternity diamond ball division by defeating Phi Epsilon Pi by a score of 5 to 2 on the lower campus Saturday afternoon.

The game, although one of the fastest this year, did not draw many spectators, who were all attracted by the championship struggle on the next diamond. Ganenbein, for the victors, hurled a steady game especially good with men on bases. Miller, Phi Epsilon Pi hurler, outside of a hectic second inning, also hurled a good game, fooling the Sig Chi slingers with a tantalizing slow ball.

Walks to the first two men in the first inning proved costly to the Phi Eps when the Sig Chis managed to turn one of them into a run. The Sig Chis cinched the victory in the second frame when they tallied four times, assisted by some loose fielding on the part of the Phi Epsilon Pi outfield.

Lineups: Sigma Chi—Castle, Bach, Ganenbein, Chmielewski, C. Young, G. Young, Dunaway, Vilas, Whitney. Phi Epsilon Pi—Brodsky, Brill, Miller, Goldenburg, Phillips, Catlin, Heilprin, Schliomovitz, Solinger, Masor.

Nature Society Will Meet Twice
Over Weekend

The Friends of Our Native Landscape will hold two meetings over the week-end, it was announced Friday.

Prof. C. F. Gillen of the French department will read "The Beauty of the Wild" at the meeting tonight, which will be held at Rock bridge, seven miles north of Richland Center on Highway 80. The feature of the program will be Indian songs and dances by Oliver LeMere and his family.

Sunday's meeting will be held at Castle Rock, south of Muscoda. Members who cannot attend the Saturday meeting may meet the party at Castle Rock Sunday, it was announced.

Daily Cardinal All-Greek Nines

FIRST TEAM

Name	Fraternity
L. Rothman, Alpha Epsilon Pi	p
M. Ganenbein, Sigma Chi	p
P. Fox, Alpha Epsilon Pi	e
E. Chmielewski, Sigma Chi	1b
B. Gage, Delta Upsilon	2b
B. Campbell, Delta Kappa Epsilon	3b
M. Bach, Sigma Chi	ls3
N. Hayes, Delta Upsilon	rss
S. Nashban, Alpha Epsilon Pi	lf
L. Masor, Phi Epsilon Pi	cf
M. Holt, Alpha Chi Sigma	rf

Honorable Mention: J. Dingee, B. O'Neill, Delta Upsilon; N. Beller, S. Feld, Alpha Epsilon Pi; J. Castle, Sigma Chi; D. Phillips, S. Brodsky, Phi Epsilon Pi; T. McDermaid, D. Leibensouin, Zeta Beta Tau; E. Ziese, Theta Chi; R. Leahy, H. Johnson, Phi Pi Phi; E. Lattimer, Delta Sigma Pi; J. Lange, Kappa Sigma; R. Forster, Alpha Tau Omega; D. Hackner, Phi Sigma Delta.

42 Women's Groups Clash

Chads Rate First in Intramural Athletic Race

By BERNICE HORTON

Forty-two groups on the campus have participated in women's intramural tournaments this year, according to statistics recently compiled states Louise Zinn '22, chairman of the intramural committee of W. A. A.

Of this number, 20 were sororities while the remainder included the four women's dormitories, Langdon, Chabourne, and Barnard halls and the Nurses dormitory, 16 co-operative and rooming houses, one professional group the Medics, and one heterogeneous group called the All-Americans.

20 Groups Play

Two of the groups entered each of the 11 contests held during the year and 20 played in six or more tournaments. Figures on the total number of players and the percentage from each house are not yet available.

In the recently completed spring season, 30 teams from 29 groups were enrolled in the four tournaments held. Tennis was most popular with 28 entries, with baseball and golf about equal, the former drawing 19 and the latter 18 teams. Track was not far behind with 15 competitors.

Baseball Attracts 150

The number of players on a squad varied, however, and baseball, with from seven to nine on a team, drew the greatest number, approximately 150 people. Golf, demanding only a single entry, included only 18, doubles teams in tennis attracted about 56 while track, with its six-man teams drew 90 contestants.

The 10 teams that rated the highest in the race for the all-year intramural championship were: Chabourne hall, Medics, All-Americans, Tri-Delta, Langdon hall, Barnard hall, Phi Mu, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Phi Omega Pi.

Oxford Student Radios Goodnight For Information

As eloquent proof that the University of Wisconsin holds place among the great world institutes of learning, the following radiogram was received Friday by Dean Goodnight:

"The registrar, Wisconsin University, Madison, Wis. May I take introductory organic chemistry, physics concurrently at summer session. Cable collect, Oxford. Albert Cornsweet."

Since the local cable office would not accept a return message collect Dean Goodnight replied cryptically, "Courses offered but lectures conflict, S. H. G." The rate was 28 cents a word.

Pres. Frank Closes Speech Season at Milwaukee June 9

Pres. Glenn Frank will make his last outside talk this semester when he speaks June 9 at the National Nurses' Organizations meeting in Milwaukee, on "The Durable Satisfaction of the Nurse's Career."

POSITION

Position	Fraternity
p	Delta Upsilon, F. Neuenfeldt
p	Phi Epsilon Pi, H. Miller
e	Sigma Chi, G. Young
1b	Delta Upsilon, P. Gentry
2b	Phi Epsilon Pi, M. Brill
3b	Phi Sigma Delta, B. Pollock
ls3	Delta Kappa Epsilon, J. Dorr
rss	Alpha Epsilon Pi, A. Turner
lf	Delta Theta Sigma, B. Kline
cf	Phi Kappa Psi, E. Forkin
rf	Delta Theta Sigma, Hall

SECOND TEAM

Fraternity	Name
Delta Upsilon	F. Neuenfeldt
Phi Epsilon Pi	H. Miller
Sigma Chi	G. Young
Delta Upsilon	P. Gentry
Phi Epsilon Pi	M. Brill
Phi Sigma Delta	B. Pollock
Delta Kappa Epsilon	J. Dorr
Alpha Epsilon Pi	A. Turner
Delta Theta Sigma	B. Kline
Phi Kappa Psi	E. Forkin
Delta Theta Sigma	Hall

Badger Crew
Should Force
Husky Eight

Coach Discusses Card Oars men Individually

Editor's Note: Today Mike Murphy writes his final article on the crews to enter Poughkeepsie by discussing his own Cardinal crew. Listen to what the coach has to say.

By MIKE MURPHY
(Wisconsin Crew Coach)

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin crew of this year undoubtedly much faster than last year's crew, but like last year's crew it is sadly in need of experience. Two of the veterans of the 1929 eight graduated and two more of them found other activities so pressing that they could not find the time to row. Consequently, we have four green oarsmen sitting in the stern of the boat.

They did get a lot of good experience in the Penn race and this ought to be a great help. With the Washington race a little more than a week away the men are becoming anxious over the weather. The lakes have been so rough for the past three weeks that there has been no opportunity in the necessary mileage for a real contender at Poughkeepsie.

What the results of the race with Washington will be is another question. There is no reason why Wisconsin should win it because where she has 20 or 30 men out for varsity crew, Washington has over 150.

Has Two Frosh Crews

This year Washington had two freshman crews that were battling it out to see which would make the trip east. They both were capable of giving the varsity a good race. The junior varsity defeated California badly that California is not taking them east. There is probably not more than three lengths difference in any of the four boats over a two-mile course.

To have a good team, it is necessary to have it built upon a good, solid foundation. Washington has that foundation and we have not. This is in measure due to lack of shells in which to row. Wisconsin at the present time has three serviceable shells.

Thirty other freshmen and men have to sit on the shore each night and watch the other crews out.

Weber at Stroke

Weber, who is stroking the boat, having his first varsity experience that position and is doing a fair good job. His main difficulty is blade work. He does not seem to be able to get the knack of feathering. This would come with mileage, but as the lake has made that impossible there is not much that can be done.

Zabel, 7, is also in his first year of varsity competition. He lacks experience and rhythm that come with years. The same thing can be said for Woodward and Smedal.

Marple Has Power

Marple, 4, is one of the veterans and should do good work. He has tremendous power. Keenan at 3 is another veteran of last year. He rowed 6, but was shifted over to starboard this year in the hopes that he would develop into a number 7, but a short boat swing and slow hands forced him back to the 3 position.

Oberdick at No. 2 rowed there last year and can be depended upon to do a good piece of work. Sperling is a very steady man, and he has not the strong back and weal mind which the uninitiated believe oarsmen have, he spreads his strength over a measured distance better than any other member of the crew.

Captain Is Inspiration

Gene Goodman, our captain, who is not able to quite make his way in the varsity shell, has proven to be one of the best captains the writer had under him. His indomitable spirit has been a great source of inspiration to all members of the crew as well as to the coach.

Miller, the coxswain, is one of the best on the water. He has had experience coxing at the Navy before he transferred here. A good knowledge of rowing and absolute control over his men is necessary before a coxswain adequately handle his boat.

Victors Place 3 on Honorary Cardinal Team

By RODNEY STEWART
and Intramural Sports Staff

Alpha Epsilon Pi, winners of the interfraternity diamond ball crown, placed three men on The Daily Cardinal's first all-interfraternity diamond ball team and two more on the second team while Delta Upsilon, runners-up, received two places on both the first and second teams.

Sigma Chi, winners of third place, also placed three men on the first mythical team and one on the second. Phi Epsilon Pi, fourth place winners, received one position on the first team and two more on the second; the other fraternity to place a man on the honor team was Alpha Chi Sigma.

42 in Competition

The selection of the honor teams is the last crowning act to formally close the interfraternity diamond ball race, in which the actual playing was brought to an end Saturday afternoon when Alpha Epsilon Pi won the crown for the second consecutive year.

Forty-two fraternities were in the race for the crown while the games extended over a period of two months of constant elimination.

Due to the number of teams entered and the number of outstanding players, it was difficult to select the best men for each position since the members of the teams that advanced to the final rounds had more of a chance to show their wares, whereas men on teams that were eliminated in the preliminary round, had little chance of gaining a reputation.

Infields Good

Rothman, Alpha Epsilon Pi hurler who has two no-hit, no-run games to his credit this season, and Ganenbein, Sigma Chi, won the coveted position of pitchers on the first team. Fox, Rothman's battery mate, was by far the most outstanding catcher in the league to win the first honors.

Neuenfeldt, D. U., and Miller, Phi Epsilon Pi, received the pitching posts on the second team with Young, Sigma Chi, as catcher.

Practically every team abounded with good fielders making the selections for the infield posts extremely hard. Chmielewski's all-around play at the first sack won him the position on the first team while Gentry was just a step behind him. Gage won the position at the keystone bag while Brill was given the same position on the second team. Although he played shortstop, Brill was placed at second because of his steady defensive play.

Shortstops Abundant

There were at least 10 good shortstops in the league this season with Bach, Hayes, Brill, Dorr, and Feld leading the list. In the final choice for positions, Bach and Hayes were given the two shortstop positions on the first team because of their heavy work with the stick, while Dorr and Turner won the posts on the second squad.

At the "hot" corner, three men, Campbell, Pollock, and Beller all showed quality worthy of winning all-interfraternity positions. Campbell was given first choice by a slight edge over Pollock, both of whom had a slight hitting advantage over Beller.

The outfield posts were won by Nashban, Masor, and Holt, on the first mythical team, and Kline, Forkin, and Hall on the second. Nashban played part of the season in the field and ended up at first base but showed

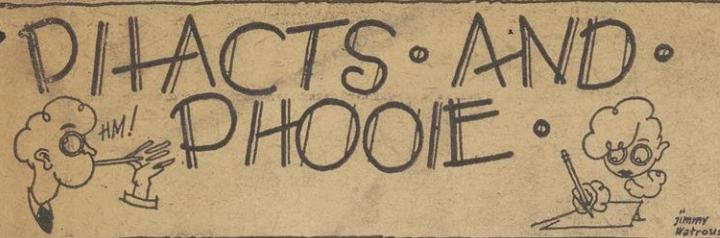

Bruni Garners Championship

Defeats Kreig in Daily Cardinal Horseshoe Pitching Contest

A new champion is strolling around on the Wisconsin campus in the person of Edwin Bruni, who defeated Kreig in the final round of The Daily Cardinal's horseshoe pitching tournament Saturday, by the score of 11-21, 21-7, and 21-14.

Bruni took three games straight after he dropped the first to Kreig. Kreig made a desperate attempt to take the third game but finally dropped it by a four-point margin.

Bruni won his semifinal round of the tournament Saturday morning when he defeated Dassaw by a score of 21-7, and 21-5. Dassaw was not able to even threaten his superior rival.

no sobs heard as the last column of the year goes to press . . . rather a sigh of relief

by tommy

by tommy

INUTE REVIEWS OF SUNDAY'S ATTRACTIONS . . . for those who need mental relief from the strain of final exams . . . we submit here a detailed review of the smashie "Journey's End" now playing at . . . followed by rehashes of other current cinema efforts.

s a magnificent spectacle . . . as a powerful play . . . as a character study men under the greatest stress . . . as a preaching against war and a for peace . . . "Journey's End" is one of the finest contributions of the screen to the film-going public.

C. Sherriff, the author, found words "Journey's End" scrawled on the wall of a dugout in France, with that dugout as a background, he has traced the wanderings of the men who found it at the road. They are all ordinary men, who proved their mettle in the face of danger. There is Stanhope, portrayed by Colin Clive, a man worn to the greatest tension, bucking up his courage by drinking, surviving all his comrades, and living on hopelessly bitterly. Clive played this part on the London stage, and has produced a keen, strong character that will not soon be forgotten.

There is Stanhope, and there is Raleigh, who hero-worshipped him at school, who was delighted to be assigned to his battalion, and who sought, in this silent, high-strung, irritable man, the old Dennis who had been his idol back in the days when they had played rugger together. David Manners plays Raleigh in a sympathetic manner, and is a fine example of the type of young boy, just out of school, that was sacrificed in the war.

Ian Maclaren, as Osborne, the schoolmaster, is splendid, and Warren Klinger contributes a good bit as a German prisoner of war.

There are some poignant and some laughable scenes in this picture—the unimaginative Trotter, who tells how "we smelt that funny sweet smell, you know, phosgene, and clapped on our masks, and as we rounded the corner, what should it be, but a blinkin' May tree in full bloom"—Osborne and Raleigh reciting "The Walrus and the Carpenter" as they waited for the moment of their raid—the pitiful boyish German prisoner, who carries in his pockets string, and lemon drops, and the worn stub of a pencil—Hibbard, the coward, who gets brave and boastful and obscene when he is drunk—Osborne drying a damp sock over a candle . . .

FOX STRAND
NOW Thru WEDNESDAY

Just Lean Back
and Enjoy Her

CAUGHT SHORT

It's FUNNIER Than
"THE SPECIALIST"

These two hours of Joy and Laughter will help you pass those exams.

A Reminder

.. call ..

Varsity Hand Laundry
Mending, Darning and Buttons Sewed
On FREE

F-7117

527 State St.

Madison's Only Stage and Screen Program

ORPHEUM
ALWAYS REFRESHINGLY COOL

TODAY—Adults, 50c

Vaudeville at 2:30-4:45-7:15-9:30

—STARTING TODAY—

BRADLEY KINCAID IN PERSON

The World's Most Popular Radio Artist

The Mountain Boy, WLS, Chicago, with His

"HOUN' DOG GUITAR"

The Idol of Millions of Radio Fans

—A Sparkling Revue—
MIRROR OF PERSONALITIES
Featuring Willard Singley

The Finest of Its Kind
THE AURORAS
European Bicycle Novelty

ALL TALKING THRILLER

PRINCE

OF DIAMONDS

with
AILEEN PRINGLE — IAN KEITH
ROMANCE, DARING ADVENTURE, STIRRING ACTION

—STARTING WEDNESDAY—

NANCY CARROLL

—in—

"The Devil's Holiday"

The Charming Comedienne Is Now the Great Emotional Actress

John BARRYMORE
PARKWAY
NOW PLAYING

IN
The MAN from BLANKLEY'S
with LORETTA YOUNG
ALL TALKING!
America's Foremost Actor
in
The Screen's
SMARTEST COMEDY.

CASH
FOR YOUR USED TEXTS

Also Drawing Instruments, Slide
Rules and Dissecting Instruments . . .

We pay CASH for all your used texts and will buy all books whether used here again or not . . .

The University Co-Op
E. J. Grady, Mgr.
STATE AT LAKE ST.

Now! RKO
CAPITOL
R.C.SHERIFF'S JOURNEY'S END
Directed by JAMES WHALE

Is Man Weakest in His Strongest Moments or Strongest When He Is Weak?

A drama—not of Heroes or Cowards—but of Men who were given a dark, damp dug-out in exchange for their home—Who were taught to kill—and then paid for it—Who were taken from safety and sent into physical danger and mental terror and torment! Stark Drama of Life and Death—the Gamble of Existence—The Weakness of Man Under Stress—the Strength of Man Under Strain.

As a play
48 companies are carrying it to the ends of the earth and performing it in 22 languages. As a picture the critics have acclaimed it infinitely greater than the play and it is breaking the box office records of the world.

Something New!

CO-OP BOOK EXCHANGE

There has been some demand by students for a Book Exchange and your Co-Op is glad to furnish this service.

HERE IS THE PLAN

¶ Bring all your used books to us. If you wish to sell them, we will buy them from you for cash. You will find the price we offer very liberal. If you do not wish to sell them outright, leave them in the Book Exchange. If they are going to be used here, we will sell them for you; taking a small commission for our service.

¶ You decide on the price you wish to receive. When listing books with us, they must be at least 25% less than the price new. Use the book exchange when you are selling or buying. In other schools where there are exchanges, they have been very profitable for the students. Try it.

*We also buy
Drawing Sets, Slide Rules, Dissecting Sets, etc.*

UNIVERSITY CO-OP

STATE and LAKE STS.